Color barriers nonexistent in city schools

By Carl Flowers
and
John Russell
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

"There's no color barrier on the playground."

The Carbondale Plan for school integration has been extremely successful so far, according to Everett Todd, principal of Springmore School for the past eight years.

Under the Carbondale Plan, initiated in 1969, some students in the elementary school district were bused away from their neighborhood schools and into schools in different parts of the district. The plan also divided the schools into primary, intermediate and junior high school buildings.

Mary Swindell, Larry Drake and Larry Jacober—principals of Carbondale elementary schools in 1969 who are still principals today—echoed Todd's feeling on the plan.

Jacober, principal of Parrish School in 1969 and currently the principal of Lincoln Junior High School, said the plan worked well from the beginning because the community was kept informed about it.

The Carbondale Advisory Committee and the elementary school board, co-designers of the plan, made sure the community knew of the plans for integration and were involved in the integration decision, Jacober said.

The principals stressed that the integration move did more than break the color barriers of the classroom. They said teachers, as well as students, benefitted from integrated classrooms.

Class sizes fell after the change in 1969, as the number of students in each building evened out with the initiation of busing.

Drake, Winkler School principal for eight years, said the smaller class sizes enabled teachers to give more individual attention to students. There are also rooms available in the buildings now for teachers to work with students who have reading and other learning disability problems, he said.

The elementary schools, with the change from kindergarten through third, and fourth through sixth grades, also have separate rooms for libraries.

"Before the change," Todd said, "our library was in a closet."

Mrs. Swindell, principal of Brush School for 15 years, said the teachers benefitted from the move to integration because they are working with children from all socio-economic backgrounds.

Integration has presented a new challenge to the teachers, she said, because they are now involved with a number of different students who present a number of different problems.

Team-teaching also was instituted in the district as a result of the integration move, Jacober said. He said teachers of the same grade levels now confer with others in the same building. Before the change there was only one teacher for each grade in most buildings, he said.

It is also easier for the schools to receive government funding because of the reorganization of the district, Drake said. He said with black students in schools throughout the district, federal funding can be obtained for supplies and materials that was not available for all-white schools.

The Carbondale Plan hasn't been unreservedly accepted by the community.

Some residents moved out of the district rather than have their children bused to integrated schools outside their neighborhoods.

Todd said he felt the persons who moved away helped the district to move more easily into integration. He said those who moved were the persons who would have caused problems for integration.

Integration and busing in the elementary schools may be the reason Carbondale has not developed a unit school district, Drake said.

Boundary lines for the district's busing routes have presented a problem in themselves for the district schools.

"The administration of busing is a kind of headache," Drake said. But he pointed out that it is a headache for every district where students are bused.

Todd said the problem with busing comes from parents, not students. Some parents don't like the idea of having

Prison without walls works to build bridges

By Brenda Penland
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

An inmate of the Vienna Correctional Center paused to survey the modern buildings and college-like campus of the Southern Illinois prison.

"No doubt about it," the inmate said somewhat proudly. "If you got to be in a prison, this is the place to be."

This seems to be the opinion of most of the residents of Vienna, a prison without walls.

Inmates, who are called residents, are free to move around the Center. No high walls or barred windows are to be found. The only keys are the residents' keys to lock their own rooms.

The prison seems to follow the philosophy which is expressed on a sign in a chapel of the center. "People are lonely because they build walls instead of bridges," the sign reads.

Vienna has recently added one more bridge to its wallless prison. Ten women inmates now reside at the facility.

"We're trying to create a normal environment at Vienna," Warden Vernon Housewright said. "That's one reason the women came."

The prevalent attitude toward the women seems to be one of caution. While the men are allowed to move freely around the prison, the women are accompanied by a guard when they leave their building.

The women's building stands isolated from the main part of the prison. The building and the road in front of it are off limits to male residents.

The men and women residents eat separately but this schedule is to change. Prison programs provide the most contact for the men and women residents.

"It's been all right except for the tight confinements," a woman resident said. "Once they get used to us, things will probably get better."

She said she likes Vienna "a lot better" than the maximum security prison from which she was transferred.

"It was like the living dead there," she said, her voice trailing off to a whisper. "They seem to care more here. I really think I can make it."

Bill Stacey, a resident and editor of the center's newspaper, said some women seem to resent the fact that they aren't being treated the same as the men.

"It's the old story of 'treat us the same as everyone else' and justifiably so," Stacey said. "At the moment the women are being gradually phased in."

He said one rule which is being strictly enforced is that there is no physical contact between the men and women residents.

"This has got to work like—I hate to use the word—a prison," Stacey said. "If it turns into a place where we can get together with the women, we've lost everything we've gained. It's a question of priorities."

He said everyone seems glad that the women residents have come. The addition of the women has made Vienna closer to a real society, Stacey said.

Johnny Melton, another resident of the center, said the integration of women into Vienna is going to have to be a gradual process.

He said he has already noticed a change in the men's attitudes when the women are around.

"The language has changed," Melton said. "The men show a certain amount of respect when the ladies are around."

He said he thinks a team effort, on the part of both the men and the women residents, is an important factor in the success or failure of women residing at the center.

"It's not going to be easy," Melton said. "But if we work together, I think it will work out."

Warden Housewright said the women residents have had a "softening effect on the culture" at Vienna.

He said he is very positive toward the prison going coed because of the responsive attitude of the men and women residents.

"They want it to work and I think they will see that it does work," Housewright said.

He said if everything works out as planned, the 10 women residents should eventually be increased to a maximum of 58. The number of men residents is currently 450.

The women, like the men, learn skills at Vienna which can be used when they get out of prison. Five of the women are learning to cut hair in barber school, two are in a drafting program, one is in food service and one is in the horticultural program.

"We're trying to help them return to society as better men or women than when they came in," Housewright said.

So far, none of the women has taken classes at nearby Shawnee College. The prison buses men residents to the college where they attend classes with students. Bryan Kerley, educational administrators at Vienna, said 125 residents are taking Shawnee College classes.

He said he thinks the program has been successful. Kerley points to the fact that percentage wise the center has more persons on the dean's and president's lists than any town in Illinois.

Stacey said he thinks the college classes, like the women, add realism to the prison setting.

"The important thing is to learn to grow in a setting as real as possible," he said. Stacey said many men come out of prison worse than when they entered because of the unreal environment they are forced into.

He said he thinks most residents will leave Vienna better able to meet society than when they entered the center.

Maybe Vienna gives the appearance of being a controlled college campus. But as Warden Housewright said, "The residents might not think of themselves as convicts or prisoners but their prison sentence is always in the background."

'Constraints' forced firings, says Beyler

By Diane Mizialko
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

In an attempt to clear confusion over criteria for joining the 104, Roger Beyler, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, explained some term appointees were terminated in December because of "budgetary constraints," but not because of "financial exigency."

The letters terminating faculty on the basis of budgetary constraints were sent from deans' offices, Beyler said. Letters to the 104 citing financial exigency were sent from the office of Keith Leasure, vice president for academic affairs and provost, he said.

Leasure agreed, saying the 104 were only those faculty members who received letters sent from his office the morning of Dec. 13. The 104 letters all carried his signature, or the signature of another vice president, Leasure said.

Beyler explained that his college began making budget cuts in November, before the Illinois Board of Higher Education handed down SIU's severely slashed recommended 1974-75 budget in December.

Those term appointees fired for "budgetary constraints" were eliminated, but not informed, before the IBHE announcement that prompted the SIU Board of Trustees to declare a financial exigency and to authorize the administration to terminate the 104, Beyler said.

The "budgetary constraint" letters were dated Dec. 12, the day before the 104 letters were sent.

Beyler's and Leasure's explanations apply to the firings of term appointees who received dismissal notices and who were verbally informed they had been fired for financial reasons but were not counted in the 104.

Beyler said his explanation applies to Robert Vangorder, instructor of foreign languages, who said Thursday he plans to get a court order to determine why he was fired. Vangorder, Beyler said, was "in general terms" fired for fiscal reasons, but the decision to either cut back or eliminate his position was made before the 104 cuts began.

Vangorder said he never received a clear explanation for his firing. In December, he said, he filed a complaint with Leasure's office, but never received a response.

Examiners deny student handicapped driver test

Tim Flannigan, the SIU handicapped student who wrote letters to Rep. Norbert Springer (R-Chester) to secure a $20,000 grant from Illinois Division of Vocational Rehabilitation was refused the opportunity to take his driver's examination Thursday.

Springer said that Flannigan's letters were instrumental in securing the grant to continue a driver's education program for the handicapped at SIU.

Driving examination officials refused to test Flannigan Thursday because he could not use the turn signal without a special attachment.

Flannigan said Friday that he understood he could take the test by having the examiner operate the signal. He said he would then expect to have a restriction placed on his license specifying the car he drives must have the attachment.

But when Flannigan went to be tested

Thursday, authorities refused to test him.

"We even went so far as to call Springfield and they backed them (examiners) up," Flannigan said.

Flannigan said the driver's education car could be fitted with the attachment, allowing him to take the test either Saturday or Monday before he graduates.

Retired faculty to be feted

A dinner to honor two retiring members of the SIU government department will be held June 21 in the Student Center.

The professors, Marion Ridgeway and Max Sappenfield, are to retire at the end of summer session.

Ms. Ridgeway, a Ph.D. recipient from the University of Illinois, came to SIU in 1952 after serving as a government instructor at State College of Washington and the University of Kansas.

Ms. Ridgeway, who received her M.A. degree from the University of Missouri, was honored by that school in 1968 as a Distinguished Women Alumna.

A member of the American Association of University Women Professors, Ms. Ridgeway is former president of the Carbondale chapter of the League of Women Voters.

Ms. Ridgeway is the author of "Interstate Compacts: A Question of Federalism" (1972), and "Missouri Basin's Pick-Sloan" (1955).

Sappenfield, SIU director of personnel from 1952 to 1962, received his Ph.D. from the University of Illinois.

Before coming to SIU, Sappenfield was assistant to the president at Washington State University, assistant to the dean of men at Indiana University and director of personnel of the Indiana University Medical Center.

Sappenfield is a member of the State University Retirement Board and a member of the board of directors of the Southern Illinois Hospital Corporation.

Reservations for the dinner may be made by calling William Garner at the government department office at 536-2371.

Kleindienst gets short probation

WASHINGTON (AP)—Former Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst was sentenced Friday to one month of unsupervised probation for failing to tell a Senate committee about President Nixon's intervention in the ITT case.

Kleindienst, who on May 16 became the second Cabinet member in history to be convicted of a crime, wept in gratitude as Chief U.S. District Judge George L. Hart pronounced the lightest sentence allowed, one month in prison and a $100 fine, both suspended.

He told reporters later he was "very humbled and very flattered" by Hart's leniency.

Kleindienst pleaded guilty May 16 to a misdemeanor leveled by the special prosecutor's office that he "did refuse and fail to answer accurately and fully" when the Senate Judiciary Committee questioned him about White House pressure to halt antitrust action against the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp.

Shortly after Kleindienst's plea, assistant special prosecutor Joseph J. Connolly and two other staff lawyers resigned, reportedly in protest over the light treatment accorded Kleindienst.

Trailer tax hearing docketed

By Randy McCarthy
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A preliminary hearing on a class action lawsuit challenging provisions of the Illinois privilege tax on trailers will be held Thursday in the Jackson County Circuit Court in Murphysboro.

The suit was brought by Glenn and Margaret Gill, two members of the Land of Lincoln Mobile Home Owners Association, against Raymond Dillinger, Jackson County treasurer, on behalf of themselves and all Jackson County trailer owners.

Kenneth Brandon, attorney for the Gills, said the suit challenges the constitutionality of the tax because no provisions are made for the age or condition of the trailer when assessed. The trailer tax is 15 cents per square foot of trailer space, regardless of age or condition.

The suit challenges constitutionality of a provision allowing an 80-per cent reduction in the tax for persons 65 or older. Brandon said the suit contends there is no legal basis for the discount.

The suit also objects to the tax because it's a retroactive tax covering 1973, even though the tax was passed in August, 73, he said.

Brandon said he will submit a motion to enjoin Dillinger from distributing funds gathered by the tax until he receives further orders from the court.

"This is to make sure the money doesn't get out of the courthouse until it's been decided if it should be collected or not," he said.

If the motion is denied the suit will continue, but the county would be free to use the tax money as it wishes, Brandon said.

If the court rules against the plaintiffs, there will be a direct appeal to the Illinois Supreme Court for a ruling on the constitutionality of the tax, Brandon said. "We want the constitutionality issue to go to the Supreme Court and not through the Court of Appeals," he said.

"We're trying to make it clear to the court that we're challenging the constitutionality of the tax. This is the best way to handle cases dealing with taxes."

Brandon said settling the suit may be delayed if the judge first hears arguments from both sides and then asks for written briefs to take under advisement.

He said mobile home owners in St. Clair and other counties also are filing suits contesting the legality of the privilege tax.

The Illinois General Assembly passed the tax last summer to take the place of the personal property tax which was dropped by the 1970 Illinois Constitution.

SIU group loses share of city's windfall

The SIU Foundation, allocated $25,000 Monday night by the Carbondale City Council, learned Thursday night that federal regulations made it ineligible to receive the money.

The council met Thursday to finalize allocations; it made Monday of windfall profits the city will receive from refinancing $8 million water and sewer bonds. More than $200,000 in profits will come from the deal.

City Attorney John Womick told the council that the SIU Foundation could not receive the money because SIU is a tax-supported institution and therefore not eligible to receive part of the windfall profits.

The SIU Foundation had planned to use the money to boost Carbondale enrollment by providing more scholarships and encouraging women, minorities and disabled persons to expand into more fields.

Curt Simic, who requested the money for the Foundation Monday, was out of town Friday and unavailable for comment.

Finalized allocations approved Thursday give $100,000 to Green Earth, Inc., $100,000 to the Jackson County YMCA and $15,326 to the local Boy Scouts.

When the council made the allocations Monday, it was believed that the profits totaled about $228,000. Thursday night, Womick informed the council that the actual figure was $215,326.

The Carbondale Foundation for a Better Environment (CFBE), the local council of Girl Scouts and the Women's Center asked the council for a part of the profits but they were turned down because they did not qualify.

Federal regulations stipulate that the profits cannot go to the city, tax-supported institutions, another governmental body or organization funded by the city.

The CFBE was turned down because of a section in its by-laws says the group will help enforce city ordinances.

The Girl Scouts groups did not qualify because it is governed by Indiana law. Womick said he could not approve the group because he was unacquainted with Indiana law.

The Women's Center receives county tax money and therefore was told that it could not receive any of the money.

The council debate over the final allocations centered around deciding how much to give Green Earth, Inc., a corporation recently formed to own land throughout the city and preserve it in a natural state.

After defeating a number of motions specifying different ratios for the allocation, the council finally unanimously approved a motion by Helen Westberg.

Councilmen Archie Jones and Hans Fischer were against giving a major share of the profits to the group. Westberg, Mayor Neal Eckert and Councilman Clark Vineyard were for it.

Firm may end work on unit in mid-July

Work on the five-story housing complex for the elderly on Old West Main, Carbondale, is moving "kind of slow" but is expected to be completed by mid-July, says Reid Troutman, executive director. Jackson County Housing Authority.

Buckley Construction Co. of Fenton, Mo. is contractor for the project.

Troutman said representatives of Buckley have told the housing authority that work has been delayed by an inability to get construction supplies, labor disputes and other problems.

"Now, he is being hindered somewhat by the truck drivers' strike," Troutman said.

When originally contracted the building was scheduled to be completed on October 29, 1973.

"We, as the Housing Authority," Troutman said, "feel that when the contractor had the opportunity to work, he didn't pursue it with enough people." Troutman said that although the work delays are costing Buckley more money, the authority has a firm contract hold the cost to taxpayers at $1,417,475.

The sluggish construction is, however, delaying the housing authority in renting the units to the elderly. Troutman noted that money received from rent could have been used for paying off bonds originally sold to finance the project.

The contract with Buckley calls for about $3,750 per month in liquidating damages which is "about what we would take in for rent," Troutman said.

The five-story structure will have 100 housing units and a community room when finished.

SIU team to help map energy plan

By Diane Mizialko
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Four members of the SIU Department of Economics have been invited to Washington, D.C. to help the House of Representatives map out a national strategy to cope with the energy crisis.

Milton Russell, professor of economics, and Douglas Bohi, associate professor of economics, will head the SIU team. Nancy Snyder, an economics graduate fellow, and Terri Bartlett, research assistant, round out the quartet.

The four will investigate "the implications of the rising energy crisis on the international scene, in underdeveloped countries and on the poor," Russell said.

They will carry out their study at the invitation of an ad hoc energy subcommittee of the House Banking and Currency Committee. The subcommittee is chaired by Rep. Thomas M. Reese of California.

The SIU economists will spend the summer in Washington studying "the issues involved in formulating a policy for national energy self-sufficiency," Bohi said.

Their analysis may show, Russell said, that "perhaps total self-sufficiency is not an appropriate goal. "It may be possible, but not palatable," he added.

To become nationally self-sufficient, Russell said, the U.S. standard of living and rate of energy consumption may have to be cut to a level unacceptable to consumers.

The impact of a policy of national energy self-sufficiency would extend outside the U.S., Russell explained. There would be implications for foreign policy that must be analyzed, he said.

While in Washington, Russell, Bohi, Ms. Snyder and Ms. Bartlett will conduct hearings for the ad hoc subcommittee and prepare published testimony as part of a background monograph the group is preparing.

The four have been "hired by the government" for the summer, but Russell said he plans to stay on in Washington for a year to continue the project.

The government-funded project will accrue benefits to the University, Bohi said. The experience and material gathered will contribute to a new course planned for fall semester. The course, Economics 300, will be called Energy Economics: Resources, Environment and Human Needs. It will consider the interaction between technology, economics and politics.

their children bused to a school outside of their neighborhood.

"But most of the kids enjoy the bus ride," he said. Some students who live just within the boundary busing line and have to walk to school would probably rather ride the bus, he said.

Jacobson said complaints have been made about the artificial boundary lines that determine whether or not students will be bused out of their neighborhoods. He said the boundaries are needed to maintain the racial balance in the schools, and must adjust to the population changes of the city, even if people don't want them to change.

The changes in boundaries cause people to be suspicious of the busing program, Drake said. Busing also cuts down on extra-curricular activities of the students, Mrs. Swindell said.

The principals agreed, however, that problems with the children themselves have been few.

Todd said integration has been a good experience for the students because it enables them to learn about the backgrounds of others. He said the children started to play together from the first day the schools were integrated.

At first, there was a bit of apprehension among the children, Mrs. Swindell said, but it didn't take long for them to get to know one another.

Academically, she said, the students are moving up because they are stimulated by homogenous classrooms.

Drake said the short-term effects of the Carbondale Plan are being seen now. He said the effects of integration would seem to be favorable if the children are able to get along in junior high.

Junior high principal Jacobson said he sees students coming into the school with a better understanding of one another. He said the students have worked together to develop a school identity.

The students work and play together and are able to work out their problems together, he said.

"We have an insignificant amount of racial problems," he said. "The problems we do have are 'kid' problems."

Gunmen rob Alto Pass bank

Jackson County Sheriff's police personnel and State Police were searching Friday in the Lake Chautauqua area for two bank robbers who took about $20,000 from the Farmer's State Bank in Alto Pass.

Law enforcement officers were searching in an area between Carbondale and Murphysboro after finding the getaway car Friday afternoon.

The stolen money was recovered with the car.

Bank Vice President Norman Heckler, said the robbers entered the bank at about 1:20 p.m. "with a gun, locked our teller in the vault and took in the neighborhood of $20,000."

The bank teller, Dorris Gee, was uninjured.

Sheriff John Hoffman said, "We have the car in custody and the subjects are on foot in the area."

The robbers were described as male Negroes about 20 years old.

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you hear a wolf call in the Shoshone National Forest east of Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming, you may just be tuning in on a tape recording intended to flush any real wolves out of the woods.

Wrong culprit

To the Daily Egyptian:

In his "Morris Library stolen, piece by piece," student writer Bill Jarchow (who is one of the library's student assistants) falls into the error of lashing out at the wrong culprit. He'd have been more "on target" to have directed his fire at the misusers of the library—those who mutilate and steal.

The administration and staff are not oblivious of the problems; and money has been provided by the university to install an electronic detections system to curtail thievery. This will not completely eliminate the evil, any more than providing photocopiers all over the building has had that effect on mutilation. The real culprit is the attitude among some that any means are justified by ends. Policing or closed stacks (which are impossible in this building) are not the answer.

Jarchow's complaint about the size of the professional staff on weekends and their habit of going to lunch is captious. He should have timed his term-paper work better. As one of our student attendants, he should know the professional staff is reduced on Saturdays and Sundays.

We are sorry about Bill's understandable frustration; but he ought to be careful not to shoot from the hip.

Regulations allow discretion

To the Daily Egyptian:

The article appearing in Tuesday's newspaper concerning the statements of Don Carsrud franchise owner of the McDonald's Restaurants in Carbondale with respect to solid waste pollution, leads readers to believe that McDonald's use of cardboard containers and other similar packaging articles is a requirement of the State Health Department.

The State Health regulations regarding food service sanitation states that, "all food, while being stored, prepared, displayed, served, or sold in food service establishments, or transported shall be protected against contamination . . ."

In the particular instance of fast-food service chain restaurants, the use of non-absorbent paper to wrap the sandwiches or contain the french fries etc., is acceptable. However, it is not a requirement of the health department to use boxes, lids or straws. The methods of dispensing food are usually left to the discretion of the establishment, provided health standards are met.

The weird cult of justice

By Arthur Hoppe
Chronicle Features

Herewith another chapter from that distinguished anthropological work, "Strange Native Customs in Washington & Other Savage Lands." This one deals with their "Weird Cult of Justice."

The primitive system of justice practiced by these backward savages depends initially on a large group of natives known as "The Diggers." The Diggers constantly scurry about asking questions, mostly of each other, in order to attain a high mystic state known as being "Well-Informed."

Occasionally, however, they accidentally stumble on evidence of a crime. When this occurs, they promptly indict, try and convict the accused, who does his utmost to lie his way out of it.

Once found guilty, however, the accused is granted a fair trial before an impartial panel of judges—half of whom are impartial for him and half against.

The judges immediately demand the accused present all the evidence he has against himself. This requires a year. Meanwhile, any of the accused's associates who tell the truth about the crime are sent to jail, apparently for violating accepted judicial practices.

At first, the accused denies any crime has been committed. When his associates tell the truth, he then freely admits a crime has been committed and pledges to discover, at all costs, which one of them did it.

He then finally turns over reams of evidence against himself to the judge, noting that in so doing

Editorial

Where are the doomsayers?

It is time for Americans to take stock of their purposes and to look around themselves. Americans have a tendency to see the United States as the center of the universe. If the U.S. is prosperous, "times are good." Yet in the last few weeks a hint of disaster has been spilled in the news columns and on television.

The third-world countries are faced with the most disastrous bout of famine they may have ever known. World food reserves are the lowest they have ever been. And there seems to be no hope of reducing the runaway population explosion in the underdeveloped countries. Yet Americans do not seem to be able to "take the hint."

Where are the housewives, who spend thousands of dollars a year on reducing diets, and who become violently indignant over the showing of pornographic films in their neighborhoods? Evidently, blind to the real obscurities, they continue to bring children into a world, the very survival of which is threatened.

And the perpetration of the potential for disaster goes on. Many people were outraged at the Arabs, first putting an embargo on their oil, then for raising its price so drastically.

The Arabs, by comparison, use little of their oil; they are not sufficiently industrialized. Ecologists say that Arabian oil may only last another 30 years. But, they reassure Americans, in 30 years the U.S. will be sufficiently reliant on some other more advanced form of energy. What kind of reassurance is that against the rage of a country that in 30 years may be industrialized enough to take advantage of its oil, but that will have none? What will be the consequences when that country realized the trick it has been played and returns to the road to poverty?

But the whisper of doom is not confined to the future or to starving peoples far far away, however much it may one day affect the U.S. Much more "dangerous" than people near death by starvation, may be people alive and "only" hungry. Where is the peoples' outrage over the mal-nourished black children in the inner cities? What has happened to the concern-over-Appalachia fad? The children there still sleep under the houses with their dogs to keep warm.

But there is a danger even greater than the potential wrath of all the have-nots in the world. The inevitable decay of a society floundering in its own overweight when others are starving, of a society with people obsessed with the limitation of nude pictures on a screen when others must devote every waking moment to the problem of survival, cannot be denied. Such a duality of existences is likely to be more lethal for those that perpetuate it than for those that merely, struggle to survive in it.

he has clearly proved his innocence because no guilty person would do such a thing.

The judges, however, are suspicious and demand even more evidence from him. He angrily replies that he has already given them enough evidence to prove himself guilty.

This willingness to cooperate on his part definitely shows that if there were further evidence to prove his guilt, he would gladly give it to them. The fact that he won't give them any more clearly indicates, then, that there isn't any more to give.

Therefore, all the evidence he has remaining only proves his innocence. And if he turned that over to them, it would obviously confuse the issue. For after all, he says he is absolutely innocent.

The judges are thus forced to rely on the testimony of his former associates. But as they have been convicted of telling the truth, they have been discredited in the eyes of their fellow natives and are rarely believed. And the accused thus usually maintains his high position in this primitive society.

This incredibly illogical system whereby the accused is solely responsible for proving his own guilt probably explains why these savages have never emerged into the 20th century.

Most anthropologists compare the system unfavorably to the Trial by Ordeal as practiced by the Ugulaps. The Ugulaps simply bury one of their members for 12 months in a pile of bat guano. If he emerges alive, he is hailed as their leader.

"At least the Ugulaps," says one anthropologist, "are rational."

Carbondale claims start of Memorial Day

By Marion W. Mitchell
(Ninth in a series)

Within a month and a half after Ft. Donelson, the 18th Regiment found itself deep in Tennessee near a small log church called "Shiloh". On that terrible first day (April 6, 1862), Brush was twice wounded. The 18th managed to maintain itself as a cohesive unit—which not every regiment in that battle could boast—and carry on reasonably well. Every Union outfit that took part in that day's battle was badly mauled, and the 18th was no exception. It was to see little more serious action until the next year when it was involved in Grant's Vicksburg campaign.

During the battles at Raymond and Champion's Hill, Mississippi, it was Logan racing up and down the line in front of his 31st roaring "remember the blood of your mummies! Give 'em Hell!" that saved the day. And, at Black River, the battle which left the confederate General Pemberton no choice but to fall back into the cul-de-sac which was Vicksburg, it was General Lawler clad in slouch hat and checkered shirt leading the charge of the 18th through a slough, which broke the Rebel line. The badly used Confederate army reeled back into Vicksburg to await the pleasure of General Grant. When Grant called upon Lawler that night to offer his congratulations for the day's performance, he found the fat Irishman from Equality still wearing the same shirt and sitting with a group of his soldiers waiting for the coffee to boil.

One of the more colorful cavalry regiments of the Civil War was the 6th Illinois. It was made up almost entirely of Southern Illinois men. The activities of the 6th Cavalry provided the stuff from which legends are made. During the latter part of April and the first part of May, 1863, the 6th Cavalry, 7th Cavalry (an outfit composed of men of Central, South Central and a smattering from Southern Illinois), and an Iowa outfit made a 17-day raid through the heartland of the Confederacy and escaped unscathed. "Grier-son's Raid", as this exercise came to be called, was the basis for a 1960 John Wayne movie entitled "The Horse Soldiers". The majority of Carbondale and Carbondale-area men who became cavalrymen were in the 6th Illinois.

On a small knoll just to the east of U.S. 51 about six miles south of Carbondale is a small cluster of grave markers. One of the men buried there is young Joseph Waddington, Company M, 6th Illinois Cavalry. Waddington died in November, 1863. Other members of the 6th Cavalry are buried in Woodlawn Cemetery in Carbondale and in many other cemeteries throughout this area.

Some Carbondale men served in the 60th Illinois Volunteer Infantry, others in the 7th Illinois Cavalry, and some even were in units from other states.

Carbondale suffered heavily during the Civil War. The Prickett brothers, John and William, had been killed on the same day at Fort Donelson. Others died of measles outside Memphis. Some perished of wounds well after the battle in which they were received was long since won or lost. Andersonville Prison took its share. But in April, 1866, these things were but memories.

On a sunny April Sunday, Ambrose Crowell, Russell Winchester and Jonathan Wiseman came to the Crab Orchard Christian Church for Sunday services. While sitting and talking, their eyes were drawn to the activities of a small family in the adjacent cemetery. The family, a young woman with two children, was cleaning and decorating the grave of a young man with whom the veterans had served during the war. This struck the men as an excellent idea, and the next day Crowell and Winchester went to Carbondale to see if any community support could be raised for a general day of remembrance.

Carbondale accepted the idea with enthusiasm. Woodlawn Cemetery on the east side of town was the natural site for such a celebration. The last Sunday in April was selected as the most appropriate day. Plans were laid for a parade and a big dinner. A Grand Marshall (Colonel E.J. Ingersoll) was named, and General John A. Logan agreed to be the speaker.

On the appointed Sunday morning, 219 veterans congregated at the Methodist Church on East Jackson Street. A line of march was formed and the parade, led by Colonel Ingersoll and General Logan on horseback, made its way out to Woodlawn Cemetery. When the party arrived at Woodlawn, the Rev. Lane led those congregated in prayer. General Logan then gave a talk about which little is known except what was apparently his central idea. James Green, the Woodlawn Cemetery Sexton and cousin of General Logan, recorded the following lines from Logan's speech:

"Every man's life belongs to his country, and no man has a right to refuse when his country calls for it."

—Logan

When the ceremonies were over, everyone went to Brush's Grove on West Walnut Street where the Dillinger Brothers had provided barbecued pork and John Borgher the fresh bread for a feast. Barrels of lemonade were on hand. The day came off with few hitches. The occasion obviously made a lasting impression on General Logan, for two years later, as Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, he signed the now famous General Order Number 11 which established May 30, 1868 as a Memorial Day, which it was hoped would be kept from "year to year".

Logan's wishes came true. Within twenty years, Memorial Day was a legal holiday in twelve northern states. Now, although we have a certain amount of difficulty deciding exactly when it will be observed, Memorial Day is a nation-wide day of observance. And to think—it all started in Carbondale.

A letter from home The chifforobe

Pearl Coffey is a black woman who grew up in Chickasha, Oklahoma. She was one of eight children who lived with their mother and daddy in a two-room house.

"Our house sat on a slope," Pearl told me, "so that the floor slanted. Us kids would push each other downhill across the room in our cane-bottomed chairs."

"And our bathroom," she said, "well, it was out of this world." She saw her first indoor bathroom when she was in the sixth grade, and went with her mother to pay their taxes at the courthouse. The flush toilet scared her, she recalls.

"But us kids learned something in that little two-room shack that lots of youngsters miss today," Pearl told me.

Then she went on to describe their old-fashioned, five-drawer chifforobe. I know we don't use that name for a chest of drawers today, but anyway, the meaning's the same.

"Momma assigned each of us a half-drawer for our personal things," Pearl recalls. "She even made a little partition in each drawer. Then she reminded me that anything on my side was mine. But beyond that, I was getting into other people's things. She warned me never to bother what belongs to someone else unless you get permission, including members of your own family."

Everyone deserves something in life that's his very own, even if it's just a half-drawer of a chifforobe! If we could imagine little partitions around what's yours and what's mine, we wouldn't need all the security locks and guards and watchdogs that have grown to be so fashionable. This is called respect. The opposite is called greed.

Chamber takes on 14 members

The Greater Carbondale Chamber of Commerce has signed on 14 new members as a result of a membership drive during the past two weeks, according to Marvin VanMetre, executive vice president. VanMetre said that while the new memberships did not approach their anticipated goal of 75, it was a good start on what is hoped will become a year-round membership effort.

"We hope to organize a year-round membership promotion group," VanMetre said, "so businesses and industries can have an opportunity to join all year round."

YMCA Day earns $747

YMCA Day at the Murdale Shopping Center McDonald's restaurant yielded $747 for YMCA scholarships, according to Mary Ann Stonecipher, program coordinator. The restaurant gave all profits earned from 4 to 7 p.m. Sunday to the Jackson County YMCA. The money will be used to sponsor YMCA memberships for children of families who could not otherwise afford the fee.

"With that (McDonald's fund) and what we got from the City Council we had a very good week," Ms. Stonecipher said.

Bank to host music festival

The First National Bank of Gorham will host a Country Music Festival and celebration beginning at about 1 p.m. Sunday at the bank, according to Neal Patterson, organizer of the event.

Patterson said he wanted to sponsor the event in order to get to know people in the Gorham area and at the same time provide some sort of cohesive event for the town.

He recently came to the bank from Galatia.

"The hope is that the town will take this thing over and it will become an annual event," Patterson said.

So far, three country-western bands are scheduled to play including one country-gospel group.

Also exhibits and activities are planned for the event.

Patterson said three local ladies organizations will be hosting bake sales and country stores along the street in front of the bank and several area merchants and organizations have planned displays.

"I don't really know what all we'll end up having," he said.

YMCA slates programs

The Jackson County YMCA, 2500 W. Sunset Drive, will offer seven new recreation programs this summer including instruction in nature crafts, Spanish, day camp, canoeing, sailing, karate and special swimming for the handicapped, according to Mary Ann Stonecipher, program coordinator. The summer program will be divided this year into two five-week sessions from June 10 through July 13 and July 15 through August 17. Classes will be cancelled on July 4 and 5 for the Fourth of July Holiday.

Open registration for the first session will continue until June 10. Registration for the second session cannot be made until after that date.

Ms. Stonecipher noted that YMCA babysitting service will be cut from a full day to half-day this summer. The service will be offered from 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The Children's Hour program will be started again this summer, she said. Children's Hour includes instructions in gym and swimming activities in art and a storytime.

The YMCA will offer 63 programs this summer to various age groups from pre-school to adult.

Additional information about programs offered can be obtained at the YMCA building.

Simon may establish post

Paul Simon, Democratic candidate for Congress in the 24th District, has announced that if he is elected, he will establish "senior citizen internships" in which he would select a person 62 years old or older from the district to participate in a two-week work-study program in Washington.

Simon noted that almost 18 percent of the Southern Illinois residents are in the 62-years and over age group compared to a statewide average of 12 percent.

"The idea is to add to the student intern program, which presently exists," Simon said, "bringing input from our senior citizens who face special problems."

Simon said he hoped to offer the internship each spring by giving a senior citizen a chance to make some special input in Washington. At the same time, the person would learn how the political processes work and would be able to tell others how they can be most influential on the federal scene.

Parks set new programs

The Murphysboro Park District will offer four new recreation programs never before offered this summer, according to Mike Manley, director of parks and recreation.

The programs, beginning on June 17, include instructions in soccer, volleyball, golf and karate. Each of the four new programs are limited to boys and girls under 18 years old.

In addition to the new programs, the park district will offer a day camp for children who have attended kindergarten but are not yet 13 years old, and tennis instruction for all ages.

In day camp, children will spend mornings under supervision in arts and crafts, singing, games, hikes and swimming instruction.

The other five programs offer instruction from qualified instructors which includes involving participants in actual games and practice.

Volleyball instruction is offered free of charge, but participants must sign up in advance.

Information about location, time and fees for the programs may be secured by contacting Manley at the Recreation Center, 17 N. 14th, Murphysboro, 684-3333. Persons may register from 3 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday at the Recreation Center.

Ensemble concert offers intimate parlor atmosphere

By Dave Stearns
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Gertrude Stein would have felt at home in the intimate parlor atmosphere of the Graduate Laboratory Ensemble concert Thursday night in the European-styled second floor lounge of Shryock Auditorium.

The audience sat in chairs or lounged on the carpeted floor and some of the musicians even took off their shoes to play various compositions by Mozart, Prokofiev and Stravinsky. All that was needed was cocktails.

finest moments in the performance were in the thin-textured passages when one or two musicians were carrying solo duties.

Violinist John Stubbs, who has been giving exceptionally facile performances all quarter, was perhaps at his best during the waltz section of the "Three Dances." He gave his solo the wide variety of timbre and accurate execution of the complex rhythms that the score demands, making the section equally witty and musically fascinating.

Trumpeter John Rankin and clarinetist Tom Lee also came through the flood of staccato notes, of accents and hints of bi-tonality with capable virtuosity.

As for the ensemble as a whole, to nit-pick at their technical shortcomings would perhaps be unfair—since they are a college ensemble. But the musicians were not comfortable with their parts, and thus the jaunty flamboyance of "L'Histoire" was not present. In other words, most of the musicians were struggling with their parts.

Three SIU-composed pieces were also on the program, most notably "Two from Eight for Buckwheat"—which was one of Bryce Robbley's most accessible compositions. The first section featured a motif traveling across the orchestra to busy, irregular rhythms providing a colorful backdrop; and the second explored and dissected two tone clusters.

Riddles' "Small Celebration and Dance" heard recently at the Faculty Composition Concert as well as Thursday night, is a charming little piece with shades of impressionism—cohesively executed by Riddles on bassoon, Stroud on cello and Stubbs on violin.

Although Thursday's performances varied in quality, the idea of informal performances of pieces Stroud calls "not common fare" is a splendid one. I hope such concerts become a regular event.

A Review

But there was a maraschino cherry—Mozart's Sonata for Bassoon and Cello performed by the Ensemble's co-directors, David Riddles (on bassoon) and James Stroud (on cello). The performance was one of the evening's best, which is to be expected since they are both faculty members.

And the sonata is a minor masterpiece of interaction for two rarely wedded instruments. Bassoon lines in the piece generally lead the cello, with the latter complementing the former with similar thematic material and supportive legato tones. Stroud's phrasing was smoothly shaped dynamically to his musical lines, while Riddles' performance was featured much agility and near flawless accuracy.

Also a masterpiece is Stravinsky's "L'Histoire du Soldat"—a ballet score of charming rhythmic and melodic irregularity whose inner musical workings are fascinating to explore. Written for a virtuoso sextet, the Ensemble played "L'Histoire" with varying competency under the direction of student conductor Randy Blue. The

Cambodian liaison speaks

The May 1970 invasion of Cambodia by United States troops, which prompted the Kent State massacre and bloody confrontations between students and police in college towns throughout the U.S., was welcomed by the people of Cambodia, the Cambodian ambassador to the U.S. said Friday afternoon.

Speaking to about 30 persons in Activity Room B of the Student Center, ambassador Um Sim said North Vietnam forced the U.S. to move into Cambodia. He said U.S. troops entered the country to regain control of supply bases and to defend the Cambodian people against the attacks of North Vietnamese troops.

Sim said the U.S. has never violated the sovereignty of Cambodia. The North Vietnamese, he said, have been continuously violating the Cambodian sovereignty since 1965.

He said there are currently 25,000 North Vietnamese troops in Cambodia, in direct violation of the 1973 Paris peace agreement. Peace can only be obtained in Cambodia, he said, if both the North and South Vietnamese governments live up to the conditions of the Paris agreement.

The resignation of President Lon Nol, Cambodian chief of state, will not solve the problems of the state-torn nation, the ambassador said.

Sim said Cambodia is working to become a self-sufficient nation. But this cannot be done, he said, without first receiving "assistance from our friends," specifically the U.S.

The Office of International Education sponsored Sim's visit to SIU.

Alumni Day set Saturday

Alumni Day will kick off at 11 a.m. Saturday with registration in the Student Center. Between 250 and 350 alumni are expected to be on campus during Saturday's activities.

Board of Trustees Chairman Ivan Elliot spoke to the Alumni Association Board of Directors Friday at the Ramada Inn.

Elliot explained recent Board of Trustee policy and discussed possible improvements in administrative lines of communication.

Alumni Office staff member Jay King said Elliot was "asking alumni for their support, but they have to know what's going on first."

King said the $1,000 Great Teacher Award presented by the alumni each year will be awarded during a banquet at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in the Student Center Ballrooms.

Four famous alumni will also be recognized, including basketball star Walt Frasier, biochemist Fred Basola, retired professor Clarence W. Stephens and Walter B. Young, who has served 12 years on the Alumni Board. Admission to the banquet is $4.50.

The Class of 1973 and all classes ending in the number "4" or "9" will hold reunions and elect officers from 3 to 5 p.m. Saturday in the Student Center, King said.

Gray gets funds for 18 projects

Rep. Ken Gray, D-Ill., said Friday the Congressional Committee on Appropriations has approved his request for $42 million for 18 flood control and construction projects in Southern Illinois.

The money will be used for construction, flood control, navigation and water supply and recreation projects in the area.

Funds will be used for:

—$15,000-project flood control in the Kaskaskia Island Levee District.

—$4.7 million navigation project on the Kaskaskia River.

—$870,000 for operation and maintenance of Kaskaskia River Navigation.

—$3.2 million-construction project for flood control on Rend Lake.

—$950,000 for operation and maintenance of flood control project on Rend Lake.

Gray said the water projects will cost more than $950 million when completed.

SIU police arrest three men for unlawful gun possession

By David Kornblith
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU police Friday said they arrested three persons, two of them students, Thursday night, for unlawful possession of weapons and other weapons related charges.

The two students, Harry L. Lane, 20, of 107 Boomer III, and Steven Richards, 20, 408 Boomer II, and Arno Tolbert, 18, a non-student living with Richards, were arrested shortly before 11 p.m. in front of Pearce Hall at Thompson Point, police reported.

All three have been charged with unlawful possession and storage of a weapon on state property and no firearms identification, police said. Richards and Tolbert also were charged with unlawful use of weapons.

Lane was charged with possession of burglary tools. Security police said the three have been under investigation for some time for burglary. They would not elaborate on the investigation until it has been completed, they added.

Police said they first observed the three examining bicycles in front of Pearce Hall. When officers approached they started to walk away, dropping handguns at their feet.

The three were taken to Jackson County Jail.

Airline revenues jump

WASHINGTON (AP)—The nation's scheduled airline industry had a net profit of nearly $223 million in 1973 despite fourth-quarter problems caused by the fuel shortage and by the resultant juggling of airline schedules, the Air Transport Association said Friday.

Passenger revenues jumped from $9.3 billion in 1972 to $10.3 billion in 1973—a 10.8 percent increase.

from a delivery at Neely Hall. Roger Dean Crews, No. 231 Carbondale Mobile Homes, was threatened and robbed of $46 after four suspects jumped into the delivery car and forced him to drive to the 600 block of east Oak Street, police said.

One of the suspects told Crews to get out of the car and warned him not to look at him, Crews told police. The suspects robbed and struck Crews police said.

Crews told police the four fled on foot.

Earlier Thursday night an SIU student was accosted by several persons and beaten, Carbondale police said.

John Miller, 20, 320 E. Hester, was on his way home from Pullium Hall Pool when several suspects pulled his coat over his head and beat and kicked him, he told police.

Before the suspects left they robbed Miller of $5, he told police. They fled on foot, police said.

The incident occurred at approximately 11:30 p.m. at a parking lot at 625 S. Washington St.

Pike to present annual lecture

James E. Pike, C.S., Chicago, will deliver the annual Christian Science lecture at 8 p.m. June 18 at the First Church of Christ Scientist, 1819 Walnut, Murphysboro.

His topic will be "Rise and Shine" and will concern Christian Science practice.

Pike earned his B.A. Degree from DePauw University. He has done graduate work in France, the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago and at Northwestern University.

He was decorated with the Bronze Star medal for gallantry in action during his military service with the U.S. Armed Forces.

Prior to entering the public practice of Christian Science in 1956, Pike worked as administrative assistant to the president of Wabash College, Crawfordsville, Ind.

The lecture is free and guests are welcome.

Pipe organ fund drive set

Naomi Patheal, Church Trustee, First Christian Church, Carbondale, has announced that congregation members are attempting to raise $9,000 for renovation of the sanctuary pipe organ.

Congregation members have been asked to contribute to the fund by offering services and items to other church members and giving proceeds to the pipe organ fund.

The renovation proposal being finalized will replace the organ's present pneumatic wind chests with new ones which provide for direct electric action.

It will be the first time the 70-year-old instrument has been entirely electrified and should according to the Rev. Charles Watkins, make "the instrument more reliable, less difficult to maintain, and more easily preserved."

James E. Pike

Children's bible school set

Vacation Bible School for children from age three through sixth graders will be held 9 to 11:30 a.m. June 17 through 26 at Lakeland Baptist Church, R.R. 3, Carbondale.

James May will direct the school under the theme "Learning About Jesus."

The children enrolled will present an hour program on the final evening.

Classes plan pizza party

The fifth and sixth-grade class of the First Christian Church, Carbondale, has planned a bowling and pizza party for 3:45 p.m. Monday.

They will meet at the church, bring $1 for expenses and will return to the church at about 6:30 p.m.

Leasure opposes new post

By Gary Houy
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Keith Leasure, vice president for academic affairs and provost, told the Graduate Council Friday he is "not supportive" of the proposed position of vice president for research, and that no significant input has been made by a committee appointed to define that position.

The Graduate Deanship Search Committee was appointed to clarify and define the positions of vice president for research and dean of the graduate school, and to undertake the search for a dean, Leasure said.

Howard Webb, English, said it seemed that the committee came back with the same charge it was given. Its recommendations for clearly defined positions and for a search for a graduate school dean were the actions it was directed to do, Webb said.

Leasure said he had hoped for some input on the roles, but so far there hasn't been any.

The committee intends to recommend to Interim SIU President Hiram Lesar that a search committee for a graduate school dean be set up no later than this fall and that it would have one year to complete its search, Leasure said.

Webb said he was disturbed by the fact that the Graduate Council was not informed of the membership of the deanship committee.

"It was an oversight on my part in not telling the council how we made up the committee," Leasure explained. "We did not contact the deans either. We got lost at the end of winter quarter."

"We may be further from a decision on a vice-president for research in the fall than we are right now," Leasure said. He attributed the possible delay to the tentative status of the System Council plan.

"The trustees' system plan is unclear. Ratification of the plan has been delayed several times, and I doubt if the Board will act on it next Thursday," Leasure said.

The comments made by the council members and the lack of "contrary comments" were interpreted as a "go ahead" signal to the search for a graduate school dean and a vice-president for research, "whatever happens with the presidential situation," Leasure said.

The council approved the report of the ad hoc committee on the System Council plan by a vote of 12 to 7 with 2 abstentions.

The committee recommended that SIU adopt a central administrative structure which provides for a president of the SIU System. It also recommended that chancellors responsible for each "autonomous" unit, be established in a position directly responsible to the System President.

Addison Hickman, economics, said the committee is "moving in the wrong direction" with its recommendation. A strong system president would take away power from the campus president and would "effectively diminish the power of input from campus constituencies," Hickman said.

Past experience has shown that a strong campus president can also impede input from campus constituencies, said Bob Davis, Cinema and Photography.

Gola Waters, business, said he feels the Board Staff is at an even greater distance from the constituencies than the board of trustees has been.

Jon Booker, chairman of the ad hoc committee, said that the system president would not prevent the autonomy of the campuses.

Acting Dean of the Graduate School Thomas Mitchell said that individual boards may be "done away with" in the future. The council should consider whether the University would be in a stronger position if it were "yoked with Edwardsville" or autonomous if the board were eliminated, he said.

The council approved two proposals from T. Richard Mager, vice president for development and services. One proposal includes the combining of bicycle and traffic registration funds "for the possible use for bicycle lanes as well as parking lots," Mager told the council. A hearing officer for ticket appeals would also be paid out of this fund, Mager said.

Mager also proposed that a system of contracting repair work to outside contractors be set up. It is not the intent of the plan to save money, Mager said, but to provide a "quicker response to things that need to be done." He said most jobs of this type would ordinarily be referred to the Physical Plant, but the plant does not have the time to do many of the things that should be done.

CCHS graduation set for Monday

The Carbondale Community High School graduation exercises are set for Monday at 8 p.m. on Bleyer Field or in Bowen gymnasium in case of rain.

Brad Goss, one of the ten top students, was elected to deliver the commencement address.

Other top students to be honored for high grade-point averages are Martha Crowner, Tracey Dillard, Ellen Gardner, Gwen Geyer, Jane Hillegas, Lawrence Ladd, Cynthia T. M. H. Nguyen and Angela Schmutzback, William Livesay.

The Board of Education members will give out diplomas to the 225 students in the class.

Salukis to open World Series against Seton Hall tonight

By Mark Tupper
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The 1974 Saluki baseball team, which opens play in the College World Series at 8 p.m. Saturday in Omaha, Neb. against Seton Hall, has set, tied or threatened no less than 21 marks in the lofty SIU record books this year.

While compiling a regular season and District IV tournament record of 47-10, the Salukis set records for most wins in a season (the old record of 43 having been set in 1971) and the school's longest winning streak, 24.

As a team, SIU surpassed the old team mark for doubles (80) with 92 and most RBI's, with 319.

Individually, senior pitcher Scott Waltemate now holds the record for most career wins as a Saluki with 26, moving ahead of Gene Vincent's (1963-66) mark of 24. Shortstop Stan Mann, recently acquired by the Cleveland Indians in the professional baseball free agent draft, has set a record for most walks in a season with 41.

When SIU centerfielder John

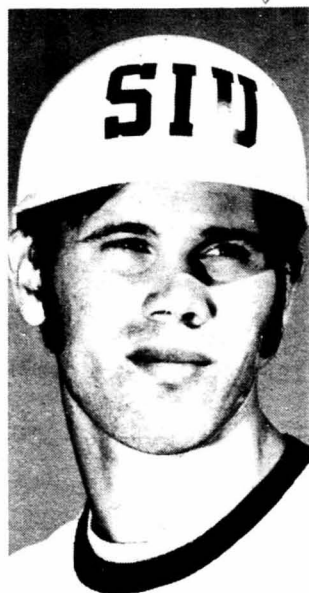

Hoscheidt slammed out five hits and scored five runs April 19 against Indiana State, he tied records for most hits in a game and most runs scored in a game. The record for most runs is shared with Hoscheidt's coach, Itchy Jones (1959) and Bill Clark (1969).

Mike Wilbins, named in the draft by the San Francisco Giants, two triples May 5 against Murray State tied him with four others for the most triples in a game mark. Wayne Rueger, Steve Shartzler and Claude Crockett tied the record for most stolen bases in a game with three each against St. Louis on April 28.

Hoscheidt needs only one more triple to move him past ex-Saluki Jim Dwyer, who set the record for most three-basers in a season with 12 in 1971. The two are also tied for most hits in a season with 83, although it seems certain Hoscheidt will break that record in Omaha.

The Salukis are also threatening marks for highest team batting average and most team hits, runs and triples in a season.

But when the Salukis take the field in the 1974 College World Series, they will have only one record in mind—the new record for most NCAA Baseball Championships won by SIU—one.

Terry Erickson reaches the finals.

In NCAA track meet

Erickson qualifies for finals

AUSTIN, Texas—Terry Erickson qualified for the finals of the NCAA 440 dash, Friday, as he finished third in his heat.

Erickson, who ran a 46.7 Thursday to qualify for Friday's semi-finals, will go after the quarter mile title, Saturday night, as the NCAA track and field championships come to a close.

Erickson ran against Lawrence Jones of Northeast Missouri Thursday. Jones recently signed a pro football contract with the New York Giants. Controversy arose in Austin since the AAU may rule that any athlete competing against Jones will be ineligible.

Under a new NCAA rule, a professional in one sport may compete in another collegiate sport. Jones ran a 46.5 to win his heat.

Erickson commented on the Jones case saying, "Yeah, I thought about the consequences of running against Larry and the consequences are that I might break 45 seconds in the 440. I never considered not running. Larry's the best in the world and I've been waiting all year to run against him. The rule where they make everyone ineligible for the

Guidolin takes job as Kansas City coach

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Bep Guidolin, former coach of the Boston Bruins, was officially installed Friday as coach of the National Hockey League expansion Kansas City Scouts.

Guidolin, who resigned May 27 after coaching the Boston Bruins to the Stanley Cup finals, brushed aside reports that Bruins managing director Harry Sinden plans to file charges with the NHL accusing the Scouts of talking to Guidolin while Boston had him under contract.

"There was no tampering," said the 49-year-old Canadian native.

Guidolin spent almost 20 years in the Bruin organization as player, scout and coach.

AAU meet is a (eplette deleted) rule.

Lonnie Brown went 25-1/4 feet in the long jump for his second best jump of his life, but he failed to qualify for the finals. Brown finished in 14th place, while the top 12 go to the finals.

Anthony Carter of Austin Peay led the qualifying in the long jump with a 25-11 jump. Brown defeated Carter two weeks ago at the Southern Cup Championships in Memphis.

The Saluki 440 relay team ran a 40.6 Thursday night, but failed to qualify for the semi-finals. SIU, who has had trouble passing the baton, had two average passes as they finished fifth in their heat. Kansas turned in the fastest time of the day, with a 39.4.

Saluki miler Dave Hill ran against a class field, which saw 14 runners go under four minutes. Hill ran a 4:06, failing to qualify for the finals.

Bill Hancock, who finished eighth in the decathlon, was scheduled to compete in the high jump Thursday, but he withdrew due to exhaustion.

Little Current favored to win Belmont Stakes

NEW YORK (AP)—Lou Rondinello, trainer of Belmont Stakes favorite Little Current, said Friday the horse he fears is the one who shows steady improvement, is training well and then "has it on that certain day."

Such a horse in the Belmont Saturday could be Shady Character.

"He wasn't very promising as a 2-year-old," said John Russell, who trains Shady Character for Ogden Mills Phipps. "He was big and awkward and had swollen shins."

But the son of Graustark won his first two starts as a 3-year-old and then, after being sidelined by an ankle injury suffered in the Flamingo March 30, he finished second in a 1 1/8-mile turf race at Belmont Park May 25.

"He's now absolutely sound and racing well," said Russell.

In a Belmont development Friday, trainer Las Barrera declared El Espanoleto out of the race, meaning from nine to 11 3-year-olds will go to the post at 5:40 p.m. EDT, for the final leg of the Triple Crown. Barrera said El Espanoleto will start in another race on the Belmont card.

Two others who could be scratched from the Belmont were Accipiter and Covered Portage.

Listed as definite starters along with Shady Character and Preakness winner Little Current, a stablemate of Covered Portage, were Kentucky Derby champion Cannonade; Rube The Great, an entymate of Accipiter; Hudson County; Bold and Fancy, who had been coupled with El Espanoleto; Jolly Johu; Kin Run, and Sea Songster.

With 11 starters, each carrying 120 pounds, the 106th Belmont will be worth $171,950, with a winner's share of $103,170.

Gabrielson wins golf finals berth

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP)—Jimmy Gabrielson, U.S. Walker Cup player from Atlanta, charged into the final of the British Amateur Golf Championship with two outstanding victories Friday.

Gabrielson completely outclassed two English rivals over Muirfield's windy, 6,862-yard, par-71 links where he will meet England's Trevor Homer, the 1972 winner, in Saturday's 36-hole final.

In the semifinals, Gabrielson, 32 and an insurance broker, shattered the hopes of 19-year-old Martin Poxon with an astonishing 45-foot putt and cruised to a 5 and 4 triumph.

Earlier, the American scored another 5 and 4 victory over quarter-final opponent Peter Davidson.
