Guyon approves Halloween break

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

University President John C. Guyon has officially put an end to the annual Halloween party by installing a fall semester break in 1990.

The break will begin Friday, Oct. 26 and will go through Tuesday, Oct. 30. During this time, students will be forced to leave the residence halls, but University offices will remain open. Thanksgiving break will be shortened to Thursday through Sunday, Nov. 22 to 25.

Guyon said getting rid of the Halloween party was not the only reason for setting up a fall break. The break enables students to take some time off from the academic pressures that build up through the semester, he said.

"We have discussed a mid-semester break for years, but the Halloween situation hurried our decision," Guyon said in a press release.

Last April in a survey given during the Undergraduate Student Government elections, students voted 2-1 against the fall break.

Not only did the student oppose the end of the Halloween party, but many undergraduates who lived in residence halls did not want the expense of returning home twice in one semester.

Guyon said the majority of the students who do not live in residence halls probably are looking forward to an extra break.

Guyon says the only problems he sees in the near future is keeping this year's Halloween party under control.

Last May, the City Council voted to ban public consumption of alcohol at the celebration.

Bill targets minors' driving privileges

By John Walblay
Staff Writer

The state Senate's amendment to a House bill, which would take driving privileges away from minors involved, but not convicted, of a violation of the cannabis or controlled substances laws, could be the difference between driving and not driving for some teenagers.

Under the House's proposal, minors under the age of 18 who have been involved "in any manner" in a violation dealing with cannabis or a controlled substance will not be issued a drivers license. The bill, which would amend the Illinois Vehicle Code, would take the drivers license away from any minor who is at the scene of an arrest or judged to be associated with the crime.

Rep. Ralph Barger, R-Wheaton, who initiated the bill in the House, said he designed the bill to discourage teenagers from associating with drugs or others who use drugs.

"It discourages drug parties and keeps young people from being involved with drugs," Barger said.

The Senate amendment on the bill, which passed Monday, provides that an applicant can be denied a driver's license only if the minor is convicted of a violation of a drug law.

The bill's sponsor in the Senate, Sen. Beverly Fawell, R-Glen Ellyn, claims the proposal in the House is not defined well enough. She said the wording, "involved in any manner," is too vague and that innocent minors may become caught in the legislation.

Fawell said that under the Senate amendment, if a teenager is convicted of possession of cannabis or of substance abuse, they will not be able to get a drivers license until they are 18. If they already have a drivers license, then they will lose it until they turn 18.

If the teenager is already 18 at the time of conviction, their license will be suspended for a year.

"I've had four teenagers and I don't think anything was

Sanctions on China toughen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush, responding to "violence and reprisals by the Chinese authorities," ordered new sanctions Tuesday, including a ban on high-level contacts and blocking loans from international aid agencies.

Bush's action was announced in a statement at the White House, where a formal denunciation of the death sentences meted out to protesters in China was made earlier in the day.

Secretary of State James Baker had told Congress only hours earlier that the tougher sanctions were being considered.

Announcing that Bush had ordered the suspension of "all high-level exchanges of government officials" of China, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said, "This action is being taken in response to the wave of violence and reprisals by the Chinese authorities against those who have called for democracy."

"The United States has supported the legitimate democratic aspirations for freedom of peoples throughout the world. The United States will continue to voice its concern and its support for these as aspirations," the spokesman said.

In addition to the ban on exchanges, the White House said the United States would also seek to postpone consideration of new loans to China by international financial institutions. At most such organizations, U.S. opposition is sufficient to loans.

City addresses illegal drinking issue

By John Walblay
Staff Writer

Carbondale liquor establishments with a high number of incidents involving underage drinking came under scrutiny from the Carbondale Liquor Commission Tuesday night.

Three local establishments were singled out by the commission as having too exorbitant amount of violations to be considered for renewal of liquor licenses with other businesses.

The American Tap, Gatsby's and T-Birds have had 41, 53 and 61 violations of underage drinking incidents of drinking respectively.

After discussing several proposed options, the council agreed to approve renewal of the three businesses by a 3-2 vote.

All establishments received approval for renewal pending circumstances, including the compliance with a city ordinance ordering liquor establishments to view a videotape on how to check for false identification cards.

"I have a problem with this underage drinking," Councilman John Yow said. "We're going to have to start somewhere."

The council discussed several measures to cut back the number of incidents of underage drinking in Carbondale establishments. The general feeling of the council and some individuals present was that the statistics on the amount of arrests was a small percentage of the amount that actually occur.

"I think it's the tip of the iceberg," Police Chief Ed Hogan said. He said, given the man-hours and the manpower available, the police department has only been able to make arrests on a small percentage of the violators.

New system could clean up physical plant's act

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

The University's physical plant could get a system that would remove more sulfur from coal, making the coal cleaner and better for the environment.

Some of the funding for the $48 million project to expand and improve the physical plant would come from Gov. James R. Thompson's proposed 18-cent-a-pack cigarette tax.

The entire University is heated and cooled by coal, David Arrey, assistant director of the coal research center, said. When coal is burned, sulfur dioxide is produced.

Illinois is one of the leading coal producers in the country and Southern Illinois provides 85 percent of Illinois' coal, Arrey said. Coal from Southern Illinois is very high in sulfur.

Arrey said the installation of the $25 million coal-fired fluidized-bed combustion system would remove a large amount of sulfur from the coal.

The cleaner coal would reduce some of the acid precipitation in the area, Mead said.

Acid precipitation primarily is caused by emissions of sulfur dioxide into the atmosphere. The acid, emitted in factory smoke, rises to the clouds and comes down with rain or snow.

Acid precipitation can corrode buildings and pollute streams and lakes and the animal life in them.

The current system, which uses stoker boilers to trap some of the sulfur, is getting older and does not clean the coal as well as the new system performed at this week's Sunset Concert at Turley Park (weather and transportation gods permitting, that is).

The group is fronted by Wilder, who is perhaps best known for his film noir role in the movie short, "Webb Wilder, Private Eye, the Saucers Reign," which has attracted a cult following during its two-year reign on USA Network's Night Flight.

Wilder, 35, originally from Mississippi, describes himself as a para-psychic who "knows what's on youth's minds." He has disputed many views of music, including arguing that Elvis isn't the father of rock 'n' roll because "he really came from the country."

Wilder has been described as a "six-foot-four hillbilly zombie who dresses like a 1930s detective and talks with the megaphone force of a highway patrolman." Likewise, the Beatnecks have been described as "hillbilly gothic on amphetamines" and "sci-fi psycho-rockabilly."

The group mixes their own musical concoction, which is part rockabilly and part rhythm and blues.

The band has tunes such as "Horror Hayride" and "How Long Can She Last (Going That Fast)," (the tale of a seventeen-year old debutant rebel who roars around the countryside in her "baby blue duster.")

Letters to senators defend tax increase

By Micki Delhaute McGowan and Theresa Livingston
Staff Writers

University students staged a letter-writing campaign throughout last week in a show of support to increase dwindling Illinois state educational funds, Jack Dyer, director of University Relations, said.

"It was a chance for students to show their representatives how they felt," Dyer said.

More than 500 form letters addressed to "Dear Senator" were signed at a table in the Student Center, which was sponsored by the University Student Government.

The letters stated that University students across the state had suffered due to insufficient educational funding. The campaign cited tuition increases, loss of top-notch faculty, loss or elimination of quality in some academic programs and neglected building and equipment maintenance as the result of the low funding.

Once signed and addressed, the letters then were sent to Illinois senators within the students' voting district to encourage them to vote for a state tax increase, USG President Tim Hildebrand said.

Hildebrand called for a tax increase as a solution to these "specific problems."

He said if a tax increase was put into effect, "I'm positive that we won't have any tuition hikes for a couple of years."

Hildebrand, who lobbied Tuesday on behalf of USG in Springfield against a tuition increase, said a stabilization in current tuition rates would benefit many students who have been severely affected by the recent state-wide tuition increases.

"They are dropping out of school because they can't afford tuition hikes," he said.

Hildebrand also said he had met with Sen. James "Paie" Philip, R-Wood Dale, to discuss the prevention of further tuition increases.

"Senator Philip understands something has to be done to help education," he said.

Hildebrand said he believes Philip's influence in the Senate will help to get a tax increase.

Researcher named chairperson of botany department

By Irene Oplih
Staff Writer

Lawrence C. Matten, a biology instructor who discovered and named the Shawnee Petrified Forest in Southern Illinois, has been appointed chairman of the University's Department of Botany.

The forest, located about 40 miles from Carbondale, is one of several local discoveries Matten has made.

Matten, who has collected specimens in 28 states and 15 countries, said Southern Illinois has been a treasure-trove for his research.

In October, Matten will replace botany instructor John W. Voigt, who has headed the department since 1987.

Voigt, who came to the University in 1950 as its first and only plant ecologist, is retiring this September.

Voigt came to Southern Illinois when it was virtually unexplored botanically, and his contributions include a total of 131 articles, books and poems about nature.

Matten specializes in Paleozoic paleobotany.

Matten has also done research in Europe, where he uncovered some of the world's oldest specimens of seed-bearing plants.

Restricting specials not the best solution

LEGISLATION CURRENTLY in the Illinois House which, if passed, would restrict "happy hours" at establishments owning a liquor license, is not a fair way to deal with the problem of drunk driving.

The legislation, already passed by the Senate, is an effort to restrict free drinks and regulate the way patrons of establishments are served alcohol. Some happy hour practices include drink specials, large-sized and discounted drinks.

We appreciate legislators attempts to decrease the amount of drunk drivers on our roads but continued research needs to be conducted.

DRUNK DRIVING is a problem that cannot be solved simply by restricting the times and sizes of containers associated with happy hours. People who drink in the afternoons will continue to do so, either at bars or someplace else, and some will inevitably drive under the influence.

What is needed are stricter laws against drunk drivers. Laws that remove the privilege of driving on public roadways until responsibility can be proven by offenders.

Under current Illinois law a person may be arrested for drunk driving after blowing .10 or more on a breathalyzer test. The offender's license is then suspended for a period of three months.

DURING THE first 30 days of this period, known as hard suspension, the offender cannot drive but may petition for a judicial driving permit. The permit, if granted, allows the person to drive to work or substance abuse counseling and may go into effect as soon as the hard suspension ends.

With good legal counsel the misdemeanor, which carries the penalty of up to a year in jail or up to $1,000 in fines, is seldom enforced to the maximum.

We propose that anyone arrested for driving while intoxicated be held at least until they are able to pass a sobriety test. The person should be required to attend counseling sessions dealing with problems associated with alcohol.

THIS, COUPLED with existing DUI laws, would be a better way to deter drunk driving than restricting happy hours.

Businesses also need to be considered. The state should not be able to restrict sales practices employed by bar owners.

Individual businesses should be able to sell their products at a price which they determine and for as long as they please during already regulated business hours.

If a department store wanted to sell items at a reduced price it's called a sale but when alcohol is the sale item it takes the blame for society's problems.

IF ALCOHOL is the cause of so many problems then bring back prohibition. But that didn't work before and it won't work again.

Those in favor of this legislation say about half of all motor vehicle accidents involve alcohol and a large percentage occur between the hours of 4 and 8 p.m. or that time associated with happy hours.

But can the statistics clearly show that bars having happy hours are the cause? Is this not the period when most accidents would be expected to occur since people are off work?

Can it not be assumed that people may be drinking at other places besides bars?

ONE PIECE of the legislation that is welcomed, prohibits the sale of multiple drinks to an individual. It would allow only a single drink to be sold to an individual at a time. This seems to be a reasonable way to reduce the likelihood of underage drinkers obtaining alcohol.

Looking at the legislation as a whole, it seems that strict laws against those who drink and drive, better social programs for repeat offenders and continuing education about the effects of alcohol are better methods to take drunk drivers off the road.

Don't miss latest Washington scandal

The HUD scandal has gotten lost in the shuffle of the momentous events of recent weeks and it's too bad because, as Washington scandals go, it is a beaut.

It hasn't had any sexual revelations yet — and that has hurt its supermarket tabloid shelf life — but it's had everything else: greed, sloth, ineptitude, nepotism, religiosity and hypocrisy of Olympic gold medal caliber. And, mainly, it's had a wonderful cast of characters, worthy of a Broadway musical.

This, in case you haven't been paying real close attention, is the plot so far: The Reagan administration used the Department of Housing and Urban Development as a dumping ground for the political hacks for whom they could find no useful employment. Within eight years these eightballs had so screwed things up that they couldn't even keep track of how much money they were stealing, most of it from low-income housing. Estimates of the loot taken are running at $20 million right now, but could go higher.

And here are the players in the farce:

Samuel (Silent Sam) Pierce Jr. — The Secretary of HUD, he was the only African-American in the Reagan Cabinet and perhaps its quietest member. President Reagan once mistook him for a member of a delegation of black mayors visiting the White House. He had been HUD secretary for three years at the time. He has armed himself with the classic Reagan-Bush defense against the current scandal: He didn't know what was going on.

Marilyn (Robin HUD) Harrell — She is the escort

Donald Kaul

Tribune Media Services

agent who embezzled an estimated $6 million from HUD in less than two years, then gave the money to the poor. That's her story, anyway. "I justified my actions inwardly only by reminding myself that I followed a higher law in an attempt to ease suffering," she told investigators, adding that she had "sinned."

Deborah Dean (The Blonde Bombshell) Gore — This 34-year-old step-daughter of John Mitchell, Richard Nixon's attorney general and political bagman, was Pierce's executive assistant and by all accounts virtually ran the multimillion department. Her background for the work consisted of a short stint running a small Georgetown magazine and being manager of several restaurants. She proved a step-child off the old step-block, however, when she appeared before Congress and took the Fifth Amendment.

James ("Let Reagan Be Reagan") Watt — After serving as the Reagan hit man on the environment, Mr. Watt went into private business. The business was calling up old friends in HUD to put in the fix for housing contractors who were paying him huge sums, $300,000 in 1986 alone. Watt, who had become famous for railing against liberals ("I never use the words Democrats and Republicans; it's liberals and Americans") warned against the welfare state, saying that Americans were being "lured by the crumbs of subsidies and entitlements and giveaways — lured deep into a forest of government controls and regulations." How like a conservative: always ready to protect the poor against the corrosive influence of public subsidy, yet will to face that same danger himself, with a smile on his face, when the price is right.

The HUD investigations have thrown up other hoodlums and sleazeballs of varying size — Donald Hovde, the undersecretary who defended his visits to Italy, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and Las Vegas at the expense of the housing industry; Emanuel Savas, the assistant secretary who had HUD employees proofread and type up his book, "Privatizing the Public Sector," at government expense; James Baugh, HUD's deputy assistant secretary for public housing who has been charged with steering a $399,000 award to a contractor who allegedly paid thousands of dollars to Mrs. Baugh — but there is one obvious name among the missing.

Ronald Reagan. It was Mr. Reagan, after all, who was president while all of this was going on or who was pretending to be. Shouldn't he perhaps be made to shoulder just a little of the burden of corruption?

Of course not. Alone among mortal men he is not to be blamed for anything.

HOW TO SUBMIT A LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

Solidarity triumphs again in runoff parliamentary election

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — The Solidarity union won another triumph Sunday in runoff parliamentary elections, dealing the communist leadership a humiliating defeat, officials results showed Tuesday.

According to the results Solidarity has won 95 seats in the 100-person Senate — 52 in the first round of elections June 4 and seven in the runoff elections Sunday — and 161 seats in the 460-seat Sejm.

The official news agency PAP said Deputy Prime Minister Ireneusz Sekula, a reform-minded economist, won a seat in the Sejm, or lower house of parliament, along with Marian Orzechowski, an ideologist who has supported political reforms within the party.

Janusz Kubasiewicz, considered the leader of the party's hard-line wing, lost to moderate communist Jan Jozef Wrobel in the Sejm.

Seven Solidarity members won seats along with millionaire Henryk Stoklosa, the only bright spot for the government in the Senate.

Solidarity supported Wrobel as well as communist Marcin Swiecicki, an economist who studied at Harvard and also won a seat in the Sejm.

Under an April 5 Solidarity-government agreement on political and economic reforms, including the legalization of Solidarity, the union was allowed to run for 161 seats in the Sejm — 35 percent of the total.

The elections were considered a triumph for the union and a defeat for the Communist leadership.

Government spokesman Zbyslaw Rykowski said the political opposition's strength in the parliament may result in fruitless discussions and a lack of cooperation in pulling the country from its economic crisis.

"Either the government coalition and the opposition cooperate or there is a train of conflicts and parliamentary impotence ahead of us," Rykowski said at a news conference.

Solidarity's dominance in the Senate will allow the union to reject government bills passed by the Sejm, which will have to muster a two-thirds vote to override the veto. In this way the Solidarity-led political opposition may exercise a small measure of control over the government.

A Solidarity spokesman said involvement of thousands of activists in the campaign had hindered the growth of the union.

CHINA, from Page 1

Administration officials estimated some $1.4 billion in loans to China were expected to be acted upon in the next six months by the World Bank and the International Development Bank.

"The situation in China is of international concern as witnessed by the variety of voices that have spoken up on the issue," Fitzwater declared. "We urge continued international expressions of concern."

Baker revealed earlier that he had recommended the moves to Bush during an appearance before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to discuss relations with the Soviet Union and developments in Europe.

U.S.-Chinese military contacts were halted by sanctions Bush imposed June 5, after the Chinese army's violent suppression of the Tiananmen Square pro-democracy demonstrations. Those sanctions also included cancellation of all government-to-government military sales.

The new ban on official contacts, Baker said, would include any meetings above the assistant secretary level and would mean the cancellation of a planned trip to China by Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher on July 10.

White House officials said the ban would not affect activities of U.S. Ambassador James Lilly.

Baker also told the committee, "We will do what we can to postpone consideration of loan applications in international financial institutions, for the time being, while we review further aspects of our policies, in light of unfolding events."

U.S. officials said that other measures under consideration include cancellation of China's most-favored nation tariff treatment but that was not mentioned in the White House announcement.

At a news conference June 8, Bush expressed reluctance to take sterner measures against China — particularly economic steps — until it became clear who ordered the violent attack on the demonstrators in Beijing and which factions were in control of the government.

Baker had gone to Capitol Hill to report to the Senate committee on the current situation in Europe and the status of arms control and other negotiations with the Soviet Union.

In his prepared remarks, Baker criticized Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's failure to address the Beijing government's brutal treatment of the pro-democracy students.

more important than their drivers license," Falwell said.

"What's more important, drivers license or getting high?" she said.

However, although the new amendment passed in the Senate, the bill now needs to go back to the House for a vote on the addition.

"I don't think I can support it," Barger said of the new amendment.

Barger said the original bill came from the existence of lenient standards within law enforcement and the court system.

"Most juvenile cases get station adjustment or are put under court supervision," Barger said. Station adjustment is a meeting usually between the parents of the offender, the juvenile offender and local police where a warning is given to notify the parents of the conduct, he said.

He said station adjustment may happen several times before the minor is brought before a court.

would, Arey said.

"Such advanced clean-coal technology would make SIU-C a model site and would encourage use of Southern Illinois coal," John Mead, director of the University's coal research center, said.

Thompson had announced in April that he hoped to fund the top 19 science and technology projects from the Illinois Board of Higher Education's list as part of a plan to upgrade and expand science and technology facilities in universities and colleges all over the state.

According to Mead, director of the University's coal research center, the plant needs to be expanded by 70 percent.

That much expansion would ensure the University full power through the year 2005.

In addition to the possibility of funds from the state government, Mead said the University would try to obtain grants to help pay for the system.

The entire renovation and expansion is still in the proposal stages, Arey said.

A final decision probably won't be made until Thompson's cigarette tax is passed or rejected.

Employees from the governor's office said the tax increase is not expected to be voted on this session.

North sentencing suspended to July 5; juror interrogated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Oliver North won a delay Tuesday in his sentencing on Iran-Contra crimes so that the judge in the case can determine if a juror lied about her drug use and her family's brushes with the law.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell put off North's sentencing, scheduled for Friday, until July 5 to consider North's request for a special closed hearing to consider whether the presence of Tara King as a juror tainted the verdict.

After a two-month trial, the ex-White House aide was convicted May 4 for three crimes arising out of the 1986 U.S. arms sales to Iran and a private resupply network he engineered for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

The retired Marine lieutenant colonel faces up to 10 years in prison and $750,000 in fines for aiding and abetting the obstruction of Congress, destroying official documents and accepting the illegal gratuity of a $13,800 home security system.

Since the verdict, North's defense team has been asking Gesell either to throw out the convictions or retry the case. The judge, 79, a veteran of the Watergate trials, has refused those requests.

Gesell had also refused to hold the special closed hearing on the King matter, but Tuesday he agreed to call lawyers to his courtroom June 28 to reconsider that decision.

Gesell apparently was prompted to reconsider his decision by defense papers that charged King never mentioned that she had once used drugs and lied when asked about any brushes with the law that relatives may have had.

Should the judge eventually agree to hold the special closed hearing, he may be asked to determine whether the verdict was tainted by King's presence and, if it was, Gesell could be asked to order a new trial.

At issue is a television interview King, 34, gave the day after the North verdict was returned in which she acknowledged that she had once used drugs — specifically, marijuana and "crack" cocaine. However, King insisted that she had quit using drugs four months before being sworn in as a juror in February and did not use drugs during the trial.

Also at issue are answers to a juror questionnaire King filled out before being seated in the North case. She said then that none of her relatives had been parties in criminal or civil matters. But North's lawyers found that four of her 14 brothers and sisters had been involved in court proceedings.

In the most serious instance, her eldest brother, Samuel, 51 — who had an extensive criminal record — was found guilty in 1987 of armed robbery and sentenced to up to 18 years in prison. Two other brothers had drug cases against them dropped and a sister was involved in a child custody case.

North's lawyer, Brendan Sullivan, said in his request for the hearing, "These apparently intentional misstatements (about her siblings) raise serious questions as to juror bias and impartiality."

But in response, lawyers for independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh asked Gesell not to hold the special hearing because "the involvement of the juror's relatives in prior legal proceedings gives rise to no inference that she harbored a bias against North...."

"There is simply no basis to presume from (North's documents) that juror King was predisposed to bias against him personally, the specific conduct at issue in this trial or criminal defendants generally," the prosecutors said.

Bill OK'd to release jailed mom

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House panel approved a bill Tuesday that could free a doctor jailed for nearly two years because she is hiding her young daughter from her former husband, whom she accuses of abusing the child.

The House District of Columbia Committee passed the measure, sponsored by Rep. Frank Wolf, R-Va., that would limit the jail time for civil contempt in D.C. cases to 18 months. The legislation is to be considered by the House next Tuesday.

The vote came one day after D.C. Superior Judge Herbert Dixon again refused to release plastic surgeon Elizabeth Morgan from jail until she produces her daughter, Hilary, 6, for evaluation by court appointed experts.

Morgan has claimed that her ex-husband, oral surgeon Eric Foretich, sexually abused the girl. Foretich vehemently denies any abuse.

Dixon first jailed Morgan, 42, in August 1987 after she defied his order to allow Foretich a two-week unsupervised visitation with Hilary. Morgan then sent Hilary into hiding and has vowed to stay in jail to defy Dixon.

Morgan's plight has received national attention, and the plastic surgeon has been adopted as a symbol by some groups fighting incest and child abuse.

"The case of Dr. Elizabeth Morgan is responsible for bringing to our attention the deficiencies of the D.C. Code with respect to civil contempt incarceration," said Rep. Stan Parris, R-Va., a co-sponsor of the legislation.

Bush reconsidering stand on U.S. mobile missile plan

Congress to decide feasibility, funding of mobile missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush told congressional leaders Tuesday he would reconsider the U.S. arms control proposal to ban mobile nuclear missiles if Congress decides to build both the railroad MX and truck-borne Midgetman missiles.

Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and John Warner, R-Va., the chairman and senior Republican respectively on the Senate Armed Services Committee, said after a meeting with Bush that the president indicated his willingness to reverse the Reagan administration's mobile missile stand at the Geneva nuclear arms negotiations.

BUSH SUMMONED the leaders to discuss his proposals, giving top priority to verification issues, which are being presented at the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty talks that resumed this week after a seven-month break.

Nunn said that the president, with the acquiescence of Defense Secretary Richard Cheney and Secretary of State James Baker, "took the position that banning of the mobile missile would be re-examined if Congress funds both missile programs."

Nunn noted Moscow has already deployed mobile strategic-range missiles and Warner said "the Soviet Union has both an operational road system and rail system."

"I'VE COME away encouraged by the support of funding for both missiles," he added. "That was the heart of the discussion. I thought it was a very good meeting."

Congress has been divided over building more of the 10-warhead MXs or going ahead with work on the single-warhead Midgetman, which is to be carried around on trucks to make it less vulnerable to attack. Bush has proposed building 50 more MXs, and making them rail mobile — as was first considered in the Carter administration but rejected by President Reagan, who had them put in silos.

Reagan, in seeking a treaty to cut long-range nuclear weapons, proposed that mobile missiles be banned altogether — a stand that is inherently at odds with Bush's plan to build the rail MX or congressional support for the Midgetman.

Warner acknowledged "deep and divided opinion" about the MX and Midgetman, but said Bush was plainly ready to accommodate lawmakers "if Congress can get its act together."

NUNN REJECTED the suggestion that withdrawing the mobile missile ban would be used as a bargaining chip, but made it clear the move would increase U.S. leverage in the negotiations.

Warner stressed that "only the president can make a determination as to whether to withdraw" the U.S. proposal, and said, "We stand with him on funding both systems."

"We're talking about war and peace," Warner said, "and taking the finger off the nuclear trigger."

Warner said that funding for the Midgetman would be continued at $100 million for fiscal 1990; going to $100 million in 1991 and on up another $250 million in 1992 and thereafter.

THE FUNDING, Warner, said would "add the credibility of this administration behind the mobile missile."

On a related matter, Nunn also said he supports Bush's decision to stress verification issues in the renewed Geneva talks, before settling an accord on strategic weapons. The parallel negotiations "will accelerate the discussion," he said.

Warner pointed out that the biggest hang-up in getting the Intermediate Force Nuclear Treaty ratified in the Senate was questions about verification.

Coal strike leaders released after nearly two weeks in jail

ABINGDON, Va. (UPI) — Three prime movers in the United Mine Workers use of civil disobedience in the bitter Pittston coal strike were freed Tuesday after serving almost two weeks in jail for contempt.

Local union president Jackie Stump, picket-line captain Marty Hudson and union international representative Cecil Phillips promised to abide by court orders that limit picketing.

Road-blocking sit-ins organized by the three have resulted in some 2,400 arrests and the union leaders were met by a cheering crowd when they left the court.

Wildcatting coal miners, in the second week of a widening protest against Pittston Coal Group, have spread strikes to a total of 20,000 strikers in eight states. The bitter, 2-month-old dispute began in the coalfields of southwestern Virginia operated by the Greenwich, Conn.-based Pittston company.

"We have willingly paid the price by spending time in jail for a cause in which we believe," the three union leaders said in a statement read by their attorney, James Vergara, to U.S. District Judge Glenn Williams.

Wildcatting coal miners have spread strikes to a total of 20,000 strikers in eight states.

"Our people, our members, our supporters, have repeatedly requested that we rejoin them in their struggle. Many have requested that we return so that we can testify on their behalf in a variety of cases pending in state court.

"To continue our confinement threatens our ability to be available to testify ... on behalf of those who have so faithfully supported the UMWA. We understand and respect the ... order of the court. It is not our intention to ... intentionally or knowingly violate that order; neither do we ask others to do so."

Williams said he was satisfied the statement "purged them of their contempt" and set them free after an eight-minute hearing. They had been released from the Roanoke jail pending the hearing Monday night.

The dispute is more over scheduling, benefits and job security than wages. Pittston withdrew from the national coal miners pact 17 months ago, arguing rules established for coal sellers to domestic utilities hampered the company in spot-market foreign sales.

A key point is establishing a round-the-clock production schedule. Union miners have never worked on Sunday.

A major railroad serving the coalfields, CSX, said Tuesday coal shipments had dropped by 1,000 cars a day since the strike began, resulting in 300 layoffs.

"If the strike continues and spreads, the jobs of as many as 2,500 employees could be affected," said CSX president and chief executive officer John Snow.

Judging from lower shipments and coal tax records, Pittston "production has been cut 60, 65 percent," said union spokesman Joe Corcoran. Has the strike reached the point where it would have been cheaper for Pittston to settle?

"That point could have been reached a year and a half ago," Corcoran replied. "This is not a strike about money. This is just old-fashioned union busting."

Corcoran said little about future protest plans, but said organizers would continue to stress that violence "only benefits Pittston."

Pittston President Michael Odom has denied union busting charges in the past and chided the media for overlooking union violence.

Because the Virginia and West Virginia miners are in an unfair labor practices strike, they cannot be permanently replaced. The 225 Pittston miners who walked out their Kentucky jobs Monday have no such protection, and some 1,700 miners at seven other facilities manned the picket lines Tuesday in support.

"This is not a strike about money. This is just old-fashioned union busting."

—Joe Corcoran

In Illinois and Indiana, owners of the Wabash Coal Mine filed a complaint with the National Labor Relations Board to force 1,200 striking miners back to work.

In Alabama, a walkout by 5,000 miners stopped work at 13 facilities and prompted jitters among utilities worried about coal stockpiles. Sympathy strikes have also been reported in Missouri and Pennsylvania.

Pittston, the nation's largest exporter of metallurgical coal to Japan, provided half of its parent company's profit in 1988. Also under the Pittston umbrella are Burlington Air Freight and the Brink's armored car and home security companies.

Pittston declared an impasse in negotiations last week, which would normally force the union to put the last offer up for a vote.

Worker-management relations deteriorating

BEAUMONT, Texas (UPI) — Worker-management relations in the United States have deteriorated in the past 10 years, and companies must stress employee involvement to repair problems, a top federal labor official said Tuesday.

Deputy Undersecretary of Labor John Stepp told a gathering of management and union leaders that companies must stop "union-bashing" and use employees to help plan for future technological needs.

"The companies that have been most prosperous are the ones that put employees first and stockholders second," said Stepp, who oversees labor-management relations for the Labor Department.

Companies must include more employee involvement, more training and increased compensation in future plans, he said. The federal government must also "recognize and honor peoples' right to representation and meaningful collective bargaining," Stepp said.

Above all else, he said, management must avoid layoffs because they seriously hurt employee morale. Stepp said companies must take the confrontational attitude out of labor-management relations and eliminate the attitude that firms should separate "thinkers and doers."

"We are the only industrialized country other than South Africa whose first response to economic distress is to put it on the backs of the workers," Wages said.

He said hostile takeovers are against the law in nearly every country except the United States.

Oil industry moves to upgrade oil spill response

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The oil industry, acknowledging it is not prepared for a major oil spill, announced a $250 million program Tuesday to set up five regional response centers equipped to react to an accident within five hours.

The program, drawn up by an industry task force following the Exxon Valdez disaster in Alaska, calls for the creation of a Petroleum Industry Response Organization to be headquartered in Washington, with field offices in the New York City area, New Orleans, Norfolk, Va., Long Beach, Calif., and Seattle. Several equipment stockpiles also would be placed in each region.

Each field office would respond to requests for assistance from the Coast Guard and would be capable of handling spills up to 200,000 barrels — about the size of the March 24 spill in Alaska's Prince William Sound.

IN ITS report recommending the response organization, the task force said the industry's lack of readiness for an Exxon Valdez-size spill was not confined to Alaska.

"The industry is not prepared anywhere along the coastal United States to deal with a spill of this size," the report said.

Even with the new effort, industry officials said that, given the poor state of current cleanup technology, they could not guarantee all spills will be contained.

"Nothing can be promised to government or the public except a best effort to respond at sea," the task force said.

Among other items, every regional center would have two 65-foot vessels, 60,000 feet of oil-containing boom, 22,000 gallons of oil dispersant chemicals and 12 oil skimmers and four skimming barriers capable of sucking up 7,400 barrels of oil per hour.

OVER THE next five years, the entire industry spill response organization is projected to have a staff of 218, an minimum annual budget of $30 million and start-up equipment purchase costs ranging from $70 million to $100 million.

In addition, the industry task force outlined a $30 million to $35 million research program to develop better technology to clean up spills and minimize adverse effects to wildlife and shorelines.

The task force also recommended several steps to prevent spills, including:

—Mandatory participation by all oil tankers in federal vessel traffic systems under which the Coast Guard guides ships through harbors and other dangerous waters. Systems are now in place in Puget Sound, Prince William Sound, Houston, San Francisco and Morgan City, La., among other areas, but participation is not required for all.

Even with the new effort, industry officials said that, given the poor state of current cleanup technology, they could not guarantee all spills will be contained.

—FEDERAL LEGISLATION to toughen drug and alcohol testing for tanker personnel and tighten standards for pilots operating tankers in near-shore waters.

—An alarm system to alert tanker operators when a ship is on automatic pilot. There has been speculation the Exxon Valdez crashed on a reef because operators did not know it was on automatic pilot and thus their efforts to steer the ship clear were futile.

—More research on possible design changes for tankers, including double hulls. However, the task force said most experts believe double bottoms could increase the risk of bigger spills because once the outer hull is pierced, water rushes into the ship's bottom, pulling it down.

THE TASK force also recommended against requiring oil tankers to carry booms and other cleanup equipment on board, saying if an accident occurred, the crew would have their hands full just trying to save their ship.

The regional response centers will be financed through a surcharge on crude and heavy fuel oil shipped by sea and received by U.S. oil companies at domestic ports.

Industry officials said the surcharge would have a negligible impact on gasoline prices at the pump — perhaps one-twentieth of a cent per gallon.

ALLEN MURRAY, chairman of Mobil Corp. and head of the American Petroleum Institute task force, refused to speculate on whether the industry response organization would have made a difference in the botched effort to contain the Alaska spill, saying only, "It would have been helpful to have the equipment."

Murray denied the industry organization would lessen the responsibility of any oil company to clean up its own mess.

Mississippi town honors slain civil rights workers

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (UPI) — Civil rights activists traveled to the small town of Philadelphia Tuesday to mark the 25th anniversary of the slayings of three civil rights workers during what became known as "Freedom Summer 1964."

Secretary of State Dick Moulpus said the event will honor the memory of James Chaney, Andrew Goodman and Michael Schwerner, but that town officials hope outsiders will see changes made in the past 25 years.

"Philadelphia and Neshoba County will honor their memory," said Moulpus, a Philadelphia native. "But we also want to celebrate the progress our community and state have made over the last 25 years."

"We intend to send a message to the nation that the only thing burning in Mississippi today is a desire for a better life for our people."

The three civil rights workers were among thousands who flocked to Mississippi in 1964 to register blacks to vote. Goodman and Schwerner, both of New York, joined black teenager James Chaney of Meridian, Miss.

The trio disappeared after inspecting a black Neshoba County church that had been burned. Their bodies were discovered 44 days later in an earthen dam several miles outside Philadelphia.

The events are the basis for the recent movie, "Mississippi Burning."

Moulpus said the day's activities include an ecumenical service at Mount Zion Methodist Church — the church the three had inspected — the lighting of a flame at Chaney's grave in nearby Meridian, dedication of a monument to the men and a picnic hosted by the town of Philadelphia.

Speakers include Gov. Ray Mabus, Moulpus, Pennsylvania Gov. Robert P. Casey, Mayor W. Wilson Goode of Philadelphia, Pa., Mayor-elect Harlan Majure of Philadelphia, Miss., and relatives of the slain men.

Moulpus said the event is billed as part of a "Philadelphia" caravan sponsored by The Chaney Goodman Schwerner Memorial Coalition. It is sort of a reverse freedom ride that will leave Thursday from Philadelphia and head north to conclude in New York City this weekend.

State Rep. Aaron Henry, president of the Mississippi NAACP, said the caravan "will be a chance to show the nation that the state portrayed in 'Mississippi Burning' is now a leader in race relations."

Moulpus said the 33-member steering committee that put together the event comes from every walk of life, public and private, black and white.

"If you had told me 25 years later that I would have seen the board of aldermen, the chamber of commerce and the head of the (local) NAACP working together on a project, I would have told you that you had lost your mind," he said.

Blacks charge Northwest Airlines with discriminatory job practices

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Three black employees have sued Northwest Airlines, charging the company with racial discrimination in its employment practices.

The complaint filed in U.S. District Court alleges that Northwest has engaged in a general practice of discriminating against blacks in denying them equal opportunities in employment. It said hiring decisions are made almost exclusively by white supervisors using "highly subjective selection criteria or none at all."

Northwest declined comment Tuesday on the lawsuit.

The complaint was filed Monday by Christopher Aburime, a systems analyst in Minneapolis; Bobby Lucas, a former payroll clerk in Minneapolis; and Blanche Clay, a reservation sales agent in Tampa, Fla.

Paul Sprenger, lawyer for the employees, said only 5 percent of Northwest's estimated 35,000 employees are black.

"If you look at where they are concentrated, even within departments they are at the lower end of the scales," he said.

In the lawsuit, Sprenger said the company has restricted black people's access to employment through "cronyism, word-of-mouth recruitment, nepotism, and insistence on excessive qualifications for blacks."

He acknowledged that Northwest does have a policy that forbids nepotism but said, "It has been breached on occasion for white employees and family."

Sprenger said the complaint and the timing of its filing were unrelated to Northwest Airlines' announcement Monday that it agreed to be acquired by an investment group.

Checchi proposed $700 million in equity and $3.35 billion in borrowed funds for the $121-a-share offer totaling more than $4 billion for NWA Inc., parent of Northwest.

Sprenger said his office has investigated the case for more than a year. Sprenger is a employment discrimination lawyer who has participated in a number of class-action discrimination complaints against the University of Minnesota, Burlington Northern and 3M.

Media lawyers challenge PTL hearing decision

Attorneys pleased with delay; expect court verdict soon

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — News media lawyers said Tuesday there is no legal precedent for a federal judge's decision to close a hearing on a motion to move the fraud trial of former PTL leaders Jim Bakker and Richard Dortch from Charlotte to another jurisdiction.

Attorneys for The Charlotte Observer and Charlotte television stations WBTB and WSOC said they were pleased that the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., agreed Tuesday to delay the venue proceeding, pending a hearing on the merits of their appeal.

Appeals Judge James Phillips delayed the hearing scheduled for Tuesday before U.S. Magistrate Paul Taylor but did not set a date for a hearing on the appeal. News media lawyers said they hoped it would be as soon as possible and expect the court to make a decision this week.

"We expect it to take place right away, but at this point we don't know when or where or before whom," said Attorney E. Osborne Ayscove Jr., who represents The Charlotte Observer.

"We are not aware that a court has ever been closed for this purpose before it," Ayscove said. "It is to that extent a case of first impression. There are plenty of precedents in this area for keeping it open. The principles are well established. This is just the first time we know of a court has closed a hearing on a motion for a change of venue."

Ayscove noted that the federal magistrate, who concluded pre-trial publicity was "adverse and sensational" as well as prejudicial, decided to close the hearing without motions from lawyers for Bakker, Dortch or the government.

John Hasty, a lawyer for WSOC, agreed the magistrate acted without precedent. "There have been no cases in our knowledge anywhere in the country where a court has attempted or has closed a venue hearing," the lawyer said.

"This station is very much opposed to closing of any public business, including and especially the courts. We feel that strongly enough to insist on it."

"The principle involved here as far as the media is concerned is that not only the public basically has a right to know what is going on in the court," Ayscove said, "but it also has the right to know what is going on in public."

"It's a question of maintaining public confidence in the judicial system."

Phillips ordered the stay until he can refer the motion to a panel "for expeditious determination."

The Observer, the North Carolina Press Association and Jefferson-Pilot Communications, which owns WBTB and radio stations WBT and WBCY, filed motions with the federal court in Charlotte, N.C., asking that the hearing be open.

In a 10-page ruling released Monday, Taylor denied those motions, saying the publicity surrounding Bakker and Dortch was unprecedented.

"Examining the evidence of publicity now in the record, the court is compelled to find, as a preliminary matter, that the publicity in the national and local press regarding these defendants has been pervasive, sensational, inflammatory and, as a matter of law, prejudicial," Taylor said in his ruling.

Bakker and Dortch are to stand trial Aug. 28 on a 24-count mail and wire fraud indictment on charges they diverted more than $4 million from the television ministry for their personal use.

Taylor's decision was appealed to U.S. District Judge Robert Potter, who refused to open the hearing.

"This court has no quarrel with the right to access by the public to court proceedings..." Potter said in his order. "However, this court also has to be cognizant of the superior right of the accused to a fair trial."

"No defendant has received the national publicity that these defendants have received," he said. "The hearing ... is to be closed precisely because of the media frenzy which has surrounded the defendants."

Bakker resigned from the television ministry in 1987 following the disclosure of a sexual encounter with former church secretary Jessica Hahn. Bakker now lives near Orlando, Fla.

Murderer faces death with calm composure

POTOSI, Mo. (UPI) — Convicted murderer Leonard Laws, a Vietnam veteran condemned to die Wednesday for serving as a lookout during the murders of an elderly couple, listened calmly Tuesday as execution procedures were explained to him, a state prison official said.

Dale Riley, assistant director of the Division of Adult Institutions, said members of the Missouri Department of Corrections visited with Laws for about 30 minutes at the state prison in Potosi. Laws has requested no appeals to stop the execution by lethal injection be filed on his behalf.

"The procedures of the execution were explained to him and he shook his head in acknowledgment," said Riley. "He didn't really have any particular comment on what will occur. He's very calm and seems very controlled."

Riley said Laws told prison attendants how he wanted a few articles of personal property distributed.

"He had some of it assembled in his cell," said Riley.

The doomed killer was to be moved from his cell at about 1:45 p.m. to a room where he will be given a lethal injection at 1:01 a.m. EDT Wednesday.

Laws, who is from Cadet, Mo., was a member of a gang that robbed and murdered elderly and handicapped people in rural areas of east-central Missouri. Laws will be executed only 5 miles from the town where he grew up.

he is to be executed for the 1980 murders of Charles Williams, 83, and his wife, Lottie, 72. They were robbed and shot to death in their home in Glencoe in St. Louis County.

Laws did not commit the murders but stood as a lookout outside the home while an accomplice killed the couple. However, Laws was convicted of two other murders and is being held under life sentences in those slayings. He has been on death row since Sept. 21, 1982.

The killer slept comfortably Monday night. He has spent most of his waking hours the last few days talking with family visitors and playing television games, Riley said.

Jones writes what he feels with 'Transparent Gestures'

By Carrie Pomeroy
Staff Writer

Does poetry have a place in a world dominated by the mass media, in which high illiteracy rates are fast becoming the norm?

University English professor and published poet Rodney Jones thinks so.

"Poetry is the most human art," he said. "Poetry shows the inner life better than other art forms... (It) is more accurate and interesting."

The author of a volume of poetry, "Transparent Gestures," published last spring by Houghton-Mifflin, Jones said he did not always feel such passion for the art of verse. He said that as a child, he aspired to be an important person, such as a "detective, lawyer, or writer."

But, he said, "I never liked or read much poetry before I was 18 years old."

It was at that age when he was introduced to the poetry of such luminaries as William Butler Yeats, James Dickey, T.S. Eliot and Sylvia Plath by a teacher at the University of Alabama, where Jones was a student.

JONES SAID his experimentation with drugs led to an interest in the hallucinogenic imagery of surrealism.

Jones's experimentation with drugs led to an interest in the hallucinogenic imagery of surrealism.

According to Jones, "Poetry always followed what kind of weird eccentricity I was going through. Poetry was my education."

Jones said he has both negative and positive attitudes about the relationship between education and poetry. On the negative side, he said he feels that academia hampers poets because it limits poetry's audience to the university environment. He said he regrets that poetry, with its erudite references and increasingly difficult language, has become inaccessible to uneducated readers.

But he said he also views the university environment as a supportive, creative one for poets.

"I LIKE working with students because they're the only ones who care about poetry," he said.

Jones, who is preparing to begin his fifth year here, praised the University as being very supportive of his outside work. He said the University generally seemed to support faculty research and publication more strongly than other comparable institutions.

Jones said publishing "Transparent Gestures" was a long-term struggle. He said the field of poetry is highly competitive, with "upwards of a thousand books entered in first book contests" annually.

After an author is accepted once, it becomes even more competitive, as he or she is placed in contention with increasingly experienced, well-known writers, he said.

JONES SAID this book was especially hard for him to write because "it was the first book where I was trying to write poems that had never been written before."

Editorial difficulties also contributed to the problems in publishing "Transparent Gestures." The Atlantic Monthly Press, which published Jones' first book, "The Unborn," was sold, and Jones' editor Peter Davison left for another publishing house.

According to Jones, this caused confusion as to where the manuscript of "Transparent Gestures" would end up.

I didn't know until last year that I was under contract for "Transparent Gestures," when Davison called asking about the manuscript, Jones said.

Over a period of several months, Davison and Jones conferred about revisions to the manuscript for the book, originally titled "Judgment of Heroes." The process of revision was so complex and drawn-out that Jones had time to read on the Ohio Poetry Tour and to start a new book, "the free-floating book...I've wanted to write."

Jones feels that academia hampers poets because it limits poetry's audience to the university environment.

JONES EXPRESSED pleasure about how "Transparent Gestures" turned out, saying that it comes from a period when he wrote what he felt instead of writing to be loved. The poet said he felt the book will probably offend some readers, because it makes fun of "people seen as darlings to liberals."

The book, which is divided into four sections combined in a cyclical structure, includes parodies of beloved academic subjects and an attack on the manipulation of emotion. One of the poems depicts a conference of educators talking about the problems of the poor. Another poem, "Pussy," is "meant to bait dumb feminists," Jones said.

"It was a book where I wanted to catch the crowd," Jones explained.

Overall, the book's unifying theme is language's weakness as a means of expressing "the animal truth" of life. This is certainly a risky subject for a man who lives by words, but Jones is a poet who tries to avoid "cheating in the craft."

Save trees, money by using metal bats — expert

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — In a time when baseball traditionalists can border on the reactionary, Ben Hines speaks out for the metal bat.

The purist can lump aluminum bats with white shoes, synthetic grass and the shorts the late Bill Veck issued to his Chicago White Sox, but the world is not all virgin white ash. And Hines, hitting coach for the Los Angeles Dodgers, is not shy about stressing practicality.

"I really don't think professional baseball will ever go to the aluminum bat," Hines said during a recent visit to San Diego. "One of the things I like about baseball is its traditions. Wood is something traditional that has stood for years. But for amateur baseball, however, it's the only

"My wood bat budget would have to be 16 to 18 dozen for a season .... all the sudden I could replace it with six bats a year."

Hines has taken to the stump on behalf of Easton Sports, a maker of aluminum bats, to answer calls that crop up on occasion concerning a return to wooden bats in college and amateur baseball.

The reason for such proposals, Hines said, is a belief by some scouts that players do not swing wooden and metal bats the same and a prospect could be better judged if he were using a wooden stick.

Hines does not go along with the contention that performance is altered enough to warrant the writing off of the metal bat.

He'll tell you that players who supposedly have trouble making the transition from metal to wood would probably have trouble even if they used nothing but wood, and scouts should be evaluating players' eyesight and reflexes.

The deciding factor in Hines' strong belief in the aluminum bat is money. His eye on the bottom line was honed while coach at the University of La Verne for 20 years and manager in the minor and amateur leagues.

Struggling with modest allowances allows him to identify with colleagues who see metal bats as a budgetary blessing.

"My wood bat budget (at La Verne) would have to be 16 to 18 dozen for a season," Hines said. "All of a sudden, I could replace it with six bats a year."

Tight-fisted owners, from Connie Mack to George Argyros, are part of baseball history. But Hines is not without more altruistic reasons for keeping the metal bat in the lower ranks of the game.

The quality of the metal bats, he said, is more consistent because of the machines that make them. He said limited supplies of prime white ash mean wooden bats delivered to schools and youth leagues are mediocre at best.

"I think the aluminum bat, to me, was a real boon to amateur kids," Hines said.

Speaking as a true aficionado of hitting, Hines sees something almost tragic about a rookie battling off an inside pitch on a cold spring day with a cheap piece of lumber that has been cracked and taped together.

Metal bats don't produce the cracking sound that baseball memories are made of, but the feel of a solid base hit will make up for it.

"You give the kids a more consistent medium," Hines said, "and you don't get the bees in your hands."

contract with the Reds, plus legal fees.

The suit said Giamatti "prejudged" the case and cannot serve as an "impartial decision-maker." The commissioner's conduct was deemed "unfair and outrageous."

Rose's suit says the case was sparked by statements by Paul Janszen, a former body-building friend of Rose, and his girlfriend, Danita Marcum. The pair told baseball investigators about Ronald Peters, identified as a "bookie with whom Janszen placed bets."

"Janszen is a convicted felon who had unsuccessfully tried to extort money from Pete Rose," the suit says.

The suit states Dowd's investigation is based almost exclusively on information from Janszen, Marcum and Peters, while ignoring numerous witnesses who testified Rose did not bet on baseball.

Peters told investigators Rose bet with him on major-league baseball games, including the Reds, and claims to have tape-recorded conversations in which Rose placed bets. However, the suit says, he has been unable to produce them.

The suit said Giamatti's investigation violates rules of "natural justice and fair play" and asks the matter be settled in court. It also says Rose has denied betting on baseball games, although a bookie says Rose bet up to $17,500 a day during a four-year period.

"He always bet on his team," Peters told CBS News. "He's never bet against his team. If he called, he bet on the Reds every time that I can remember."

Peters displayed what he said was one of Rose's daily betting sheets for July 7, 1987. He said it showed Rose bet $17,500 on major-league games that day.

Opening arguments heard in Winfield palimony case

HOUSTON (UPI) — The trial in a suit filed against New York Yankees outfielder Dave Winfield by his former live-in girlfriend began Tuesday with jury selection, opening statements and testimony from one witness.

Sandra Renfro claims in her suit, filed Jan 13, 1985, that she is Winfield's common-law wife and he is the father of her 7-year-old daughter, Lauren Shanel. Renfro, 34, is seeking a divorce, child support and unspecified damages for emotional distress suffered when Winfield married Tonya Turner in February 1988.

A jury panel of nine men and three women were seated Tuesday afternoon to hear the trial before state District Judge Allen Daggett. The trial resumes Thursday.

"He's a baseball hero of sorts," Renfro's attorney, Earle Lilly, said in his opening statement to the jury. "But all that glitters is not gold. Here's an awesome baseball player who failed in the responsibilities of a man who agreed to something and then walked off. Dave Winfield does what Dave Winfield wants to do."

"The only thing we don't have here is a marriage license. This is not a palimony case. This is a family, or it was a family until Dave Winfield decided to do it his way."

Winfield, who will earn roughly $2 million with the Yankees this season, was in the courtroom with his wife. He has acknowledged he is the father of Lauren Shanel and said he has provided a $110,000 home for Renfro and his daughter, as well as $1,400-a-month in child support.

Under Texas law, a common-law marriage exists when a couple agrees to be married, represent themselves as married and live together.

"There is not and never has been a marriage in this case," said Winfield's attorney, Tom Alexander. "Miss Renfro is a pawn and this whole matter is four years after the fact. She is Sandra Renfro, a single woman who listed herself that way in her records, including her doctor's records."

The first day of the trial was not without courtroom theatrics. Winfield and his wife have countersued to establish visitation rights and seek a declaratory judgment against Renfro to stop her from claiming to be Winfield's common-law wife.

"I am responsible for the program at the University of Oklahoma," Gibbs added. "I am responsible for every member of that program. They (players) are representatives of the University of Oklahoma at all times. But...I'm not going to stand here and tell you that we're not going to have any problems down the road. As those of you who have teenagers know..."

Gibbs said he hopes to "remove that cloud, that uncertainty, that question of who's in control" of Oklahoma football.

David Swank, the university's interim president, said the school did not have time to conduct a national search for Switzer's successor and decided to promote from within.

Gibbs, a graduate of Spring

Branch High School in Houston and a linebacker on Switzer's first two teams at Oklahoma, has been an assistant coach with the Sooners since 1975.

He became defensive coordinator in 1981, and the Sooners, who traditionally have ranked near the top of NCAA statistics in total defense, led the Big Eight Conference in total defense in 1984. Led by All-Americans Brian Bosworth and Tony Casillas, Oklahoma led the nation in 1985 in total defense and pass defense.

Gibbs said Switzer played an "integral part" in Oklahoma's success but expressed confidence it would continue.

"I ask now for everyone who is a Sooner to rally behind me in this program so that we may start a new and refreshing era," he added.

Gibbs leapfrogs assistant head coach Merv Johnson to become the Sooners' head coach. Johnson, 53, had been an assistant to Switzer since 1979.

Switzer announced his resignation Monday, citing what he described as restrictive rules by the NCAA as one reason for his departure from the program he built into the nation's most successful in 16 years.

In 16 seasons at Oklahoma, Switzer compiled a 157-29-4 record and captured two national championships. The Sooners won 12 Big Eight titles and eight of 12 bowl games during his tenure.

The Sooners were placed on three years' probation Dec. 19 and Switzer came under fire as drug charges, assaults in the athletic dorm and other incidents plagued the team.

a sense of wonder. "They're like 'Wow, they have three McDonalds here. We don't have one within 60 miles.'"

Saluki Swim Club coach Jeff Scholton, who helped run the swim meet added: "The turnout is a killer, we had three girls and five guys." He said he understood why the turnout was small. "It wasn't announced till late. Lots of kids are competing in summer meets this weekend."

There were a total of 56 possible spots to be vied for representing the Southern Illinois area in the Prairie State finals, which will be held at the University of Illinois in July.

Scholton said he feels the swim meet could blossom into a major event. "Our region is huge. There are at least 1500 (swimmers) available." The Southern region encompasses 37 counties, mostly south of Interstate 64.

The Prairie State Games is an annual amateur sports festival and has 17 sports divided into two divisions, high school and younger, and an open division for all others.

Basketball gets new assistant coach

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

Sam Weaver, an assistant basketball coach at Missouri Southern, has accepted a similar position at SIU-C, replacing Bobby McCullum who announced his resignation early Tuesday.

McCullum's resignation will become effective June 30 with Bobby McCullum Weaver's appointment beginning July 1. McCullum has accepted an assistant basketball position at Kansas State University in the Big Eight conference.

Bobby McCullum leaves SIU for Kansas State

The 30-year-old Weaver's basketball experience includes being a member of Southeast Missouri State's coaching staff for six seasons. He also spent a year at Drake under Gary Garner in 1967-68. Weaver then moved to Missouri Southern where he was an assistant coach last season.

"I can't tell you how excited I am about joining SIU's coaching staff," Weaver said. "I like this area, my family is happy about the move and I can't wait to get started with Coach Herrin and the Salukis."

Herrin, who is getting ready for his fifth season as head coach at SIU-C, said: "We're extremely fortunate to find someone with Sam's experience as quickly as we have. 'The recruiting season starts July 10, we need that much time to plan a strategy and coordinate teamwork for the recruiting schedule.'"

Weaver's primary responsibilities on the Saluki coaching staff will be working with inside players and developing defensive skills.

"Our full time assistants, Sam and Ron Smith, will share equal recruiting responsibilities, at least for the time being," Herrin said. "We'll divide up many of the other things, but we all will be involved with recruiting."

McCullum, a member of Herrin's staff for the last two years, was instrumental in the signings of Freddie McSwain, a member of the Missouri Valley Conference's All-Newcomer Team, and Tony Harvey, MVC Freshman of the Year.

"It's a move up and chance for professional growth," McCullum said. "I have a great appreciation for the tradition of Kansas State basketball and for the job Lon Kruger has done."

Herrin said: "Naturally, we hate losing Bobby, but at the same time realize that he's, taking a step forward in the coaching profession."

"I wish him the best of luck there," Herrin said. "Bobby has been very fair and has kept me up to date with his status at Kansas State."

Herrin credits Athletics Director Jim Hart, Seymour Bryson, the assistant to President John C. Guyon for affirmative action, and Ernest Lewis, associate vice president for academic affairs, for giving him the "opportunity for making a speedy selection at a critical time in the recruiting process."

Prairie State meets lacking participants

By Sean Hannigan
and Greg Scott
Staff Writers

The Prairie State Games regional track and field meet, which will be held at 6 tonight at McAndrew Stadium, looks to have more participants than the recently held regional swimming and diving meet.

"The coaches know some of the kids and have been out there getting them to participate," said Mike Curtis, site coordinator for the games. "The numbers will not be massive but there should be a better turnout than what we had for the swimming."

The regional swim and diving meet, which was held Saturday in the Rec Center, made a small splash with just eight participants. Curtis took partial blame for the small turnout, saying he got a late start on publicizing the event.

"I had to find a coach, find a place to hold it, and it took a while," said Curtis. "I hope to start earlier next year and more people will take interest."

Curtis started at his position in May while most of the other staff members had been at it since the early part of the year.

According to Curtis there used to be a regional director for each of the eight regionals. Now, under the Games' recently reorganized administration, each region has three site coordinators.

"When it was restructured like that Gary Carney (one of SIU-C's assistant athletic directors) had no interest in coordinating it anymore and I was notified," said Curtis.

"I really don't see how Gary did it by himself. With the three of us, it is still hard to manage in a big area like this."

Curtis said he was disappointed with the small turnout for the swim regional because he felt it was a great opportunity for many of the young athletes from the area.

"People are going to get a chance to see SIU" by participating in the regionals, Curtis said.

Noting that many of the athletes are from rural areas, they come to Carbondale with

Football adds three recruits

SIU-C's football squad, which already includes 51 returning lettermen and 20 highly-regarded newcomers, has added three more players to its roster.

Jamie Hayes, a recent Harrisburg High School graduate and one of the area's most honored prep athletes, has announced his intentions to enroll at SIU-C. Also signing up is Allen Brewer, a Florida all-star, and John Roots, a standout for the last two seasons at Mesa Junior College in San Diego, Calif.

Hayes completed his prep career Saturday evening by playing in the Southern Illinois Football Coaches Association's all-star game at McAndrew Stadium. The 6-foot-1-inch, 195-pounder was Most Valuable Player on Harrisburg's football team, which advanced to the state playoffs last fall.

He also received recognition as an area all-star in basketball and baseball.

Hayes earned first-team honors for all three of his sports in the South Seven Conference.

Brewer, a recent graduate of Nease High School in St. Augustine, Fla., was the second leading pass receiver in the state. In addition, Brewer was a double place-winner in the state track meet as he placed fourth in the 400 meter dash and sixth in the 800 meter run.

Roots lettered in two sports at the junior college level, but will restrict his activities to football when he becomes a Saluki. He was his school's MVP for the past two seasons and gained all-conference honors as well.

Bob Smith, SIU-C head coach, described Roots as a "tremendous receiver and big play man."

The Salukis open the 1989 season Sept. 2 at Nevada-Reno, with the first home game set for Sept. 9 against Western Illinois.

Judge wants copy of Rose report

Daily Egyptian wire services

CINCINNATI — Major League Baseball must release to a Common Pleas Court judge a copy of its special report linking Cincinnati Reds Manager Pete Rose to a sports gambling ring.

Judge Norbert Nadel said Tuesday he wants a copy of the 225-page report before deciding whether to delay Rose's June 26 hearing with baseball commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti.

Nadel said he will hear arguments at 9 a.m. Thursday on requests by Rose, who alleges bias by the commissioner, that his case be tried in his hometown of Cincinnati by a Hamilton County jury rather than in a hearing in Giamatti's New York office.

After a half-hour conference with lawyers for Rose and Major League Baseball, Nadel ordered a copy of the report given to him.

The judge said lawyers for Giamatti and his office agreed not take any action against Rose until Sunday night and that both parties have agreed to notify each other of possible witnesses by this afternoon.

Giamatti has said Rose is seeking to "undermine" the hearing, which was originally scheduled for May 25 but postponed at Rose's request. The commissioner contends Rose's suit is "wholly without merit." Giamatti said in a statement from New York Tuesday he was "gratified" by Nadel's decision.

The investigation of Rose surfaced during spring training. If he is found to have gambled on baseball games he could be suspended for one year. If he bet on his own team, he could be suspended for life.

Rose came out swinging Monday to counter: what his lawyers term "a hatchet job" against him by ex-friends, baseball's special investigator and Giamatti over allegations he gambled on baseball.

The suit asks for unspecified damages for the "destruction of his reputation as one of baseball's foremost living participants," and the loss of the right to be employed in baseball, as well as any salary and bonuses due him under his

Oklahoma names Gibbs to succeed Switzer

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — Gar. Gibbs, who built Oklahoma's defense into a statistical juggernaut to rival the Sooners' wishbone offense, was named Tuesday morning to succeed Barry Switzer as the Sooners' head coach and said he will be in "complete control" of the troubled program.

The appointment of Gibbs, 36, the Sooners' defensive coordinator, came less than 24 hours after Switzer resigned to end his career as the winningest active coach in college football. Gibbs, however, said he had no qualms about following Switzer.

"I hadn't thought about it. I'm not concerned about it," he said. "I'm Gary Gibbs. We're going to be successful at Oklahoma."

Gibbs said he will run a clean program at Oklahoma, which currently is on NCAA probation and has been hit by a series of criminal acts involving football players, while trying to continue the success Switzer enjoyed in 16 years as the Sooners' head coach.

"You do what's right. You don't do what's wrong," he said. "They (players) know the difference between right and wrong and that's what we expect."
