Railway strike threatens U.S.

Negotiations being sought

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Amtrak reached contract agreements with two unions Tuesday, but remained at odds with four others that threatened to begin a nationwide rail strike at 12:01 a.m. EDT Wednesday.

"We're still talking with the others and hope we can reach further agreements," said Sue Martin, a spokeswoman for the government-owned passenger service. "But we're also preparing for the possibility of a strike."

President Bush urged Congress to swiftly pass legislation that would impose contract settlements on management and labor, and thus avert walkouts against Amtrak as well as the nation's major freight lines.

The Senate passed a non-binding resolution urging Congress to act immediately, to impose a settlement or extend a 30-day "cooling off period" that was to expire at midnight.

The Senate Labor Committee scheduled a meeting later in the day to consider what course to take, but its House companion committee put off any action until at least Wednesday.

Amtrak announced it had reached contract agreements with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and the American Train Dispatchers Association.

It remained locked in talks with the International Association of Machinists, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees, and the Joint Council of Camen.

At the same time, the International Association of Machinists were in contract talks

Bush looks for support

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush called on a reluctant Capitol Hill Tuesday to pass emergency legislation to avert a crippling nationwide rail strike set to start at 12:01 a.m. EDT Wednesday.

Saying a walkout would undermine the nation's economic recovery, Bush urged Congress to impose contract terms recommended by a presidential board last month on the rail lines and workers.

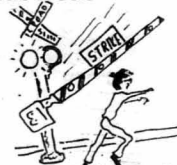

"What is best for the American people is to avoid a strike," Bush told reporters summoned to the Oval Office. "Congress has an obligation to move quickly to protect the American people."

Twice before Congress has passed such legislation to end rail strikes. But many legislators were reluctant to do so again, preferring to let the unions and railroads try to work it out.

Impose stricter sanctions upon Yugoslavia—Baker

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State James Baker, citing continuing "humanitarian nightmares" in Bosnia-Herzegovina, said he would advise President George Bush to unilaterally impose stiffer sanctions on Yugoslavia. Baker said he will recommend that Bush expel the Yugoslav ambassador, close the consulate in Chicago and broaden the administration's efforts to suspend Yugoslavia from international organizations.

"The humanitarian nightmares are continuing," Baker said before delivering testimony to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on ratification of a nuclear treaty with the former Soviet Union. "It is an absolute outrage....It is barbaric and it is inhuman. The time has come for us to do more."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Tuesday that Bush has not "made a final judgment," but the "matter is under discussion."

An early proposal to streamline higher education in Illinois would combine SIUC, SIUE, Illinois State University and Northern Illinois University under the same board of directors.

The task force, co-chaired by lieutenant governor Bob Kustra and chairman of the Illinois Board of Higher Education Art Quern, was appointed by Gov. Jim Edgar to streamline higher education in the state on May 5, 1992 to aid with the ailing budget.

After weeks of reviewing reports, testimonies and recommendations, the task force revealed their report

IAAF waives rule in Reynolds' case

LONDON (UPI) — Track and field's world body Tuesday dropped its threat to suspend any runners who compete against 400-meter world record-holder Butch Reynolds at the U.S. Olympic trials in New Orleans.

The International Amateur Athletic Federation said in a statement from its headquarters that it was waiving its "contamination" rule only for this meet.

But even if Reynolds were to finish among the top three in his event and qualify for the U.S. Olympic team, he would still be banned from the Barcelona Games because his two-year drug suspension expires the week after the Olympics.

The threat of an IAAF suspension — and Olympic ineligibility — prompted 30 of the 32 runners entered in the 400 meters to refuse to take part. Only Reynolds and his brother Jeff planned to run.

"Regardless of the athlete Reynolds' eventual placing in the U.S. Olympic trials, he will, in no way, be eligible to compete in the Olympic Games in Barcelona inasmuch as this event takes place before his suspension period expires," the IAAF statement said.

The IAAF polled its 25-member council before announcing its decision. The world body urged the United States to establish laws barring legal interference by American courts in international amateur sports.

"If such legislation is not achieved, the Olympic Games in Atlanta in 1996 and other major amateur sports events in the United States will risk grave damage to their programs and to the athletes' participation," the IAAF said.

Throughout this dispute the IAAF has contended U.S. courts do not have authority over the world body. However, the IAAF agreed to a compromise in this instance, saying it wanted to "protect the best interests of its athletes and their possibility to qualify for the Games."

The IAAF and The Athletic Congress, the ruling track and field body in the United States, were placed in a difficult position. TAC is an arm of the IAAF and must abide by its decision. However, TAC is also bound to obey U.S. law.

Orlando Magic set sights on No. 1 draft pick O'Neal

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — NBA Commissioner David Stern will be the first to shake Shaquille O'Neal's hand. Maybe Mickey Mouse should be second.

When O'Neal joins Stern on the podium at the NBA draft Wednesday night, smiles at the television camera and says, "I'm going to Disney World," he'll mean it.

Since winning the NBA lottery in May, the Orlando Magic have made it abundantly clear they will make O'Neal the first pick.

Orlando, home to The Magic Kingdom and Epcot Center, will officially welcome its newest attraction — the 7-foot-1 O'Neal. Goofy will have to move to forward.

This year's draft, consisting of two rounds, will be held at the Portland Memorial Coliseum, beginning at 7:30 p.m. EDT. It marks the first time the event has been held outside New York.

Later this week, Portland will also play host to the Tournament of the Americas, a 10-team Olympic qualifying tournament where the heralded U.S. Olympic basketball team will make its debut.

O'Neal, college basketball's dominant player the past two seasons, is the prize of this year's draft, considered the deepest since 1984 when Hakeem Olajuwon, Clyde Drexler and Michael Jordan were selected.

"Ultimately, you win in this league with unique players," Orlando General Manager Pat Williams said after winning the lottery,

"and over the decade there has only been a handful of players of that kind of talent. (Larry) Bird, Magic (Johnson), Michael (Jordan), (Patrick) Ewing, Julius Erving and (Kareem) Abdul Jabbar — not very many."

O'Neal, who left Louisiana State following his junior year, visited Orlando with his family last week and was said to be impressed with the city. Now, all the Magic will have to do is sign O'Neal, whose contract demands may break new ground.

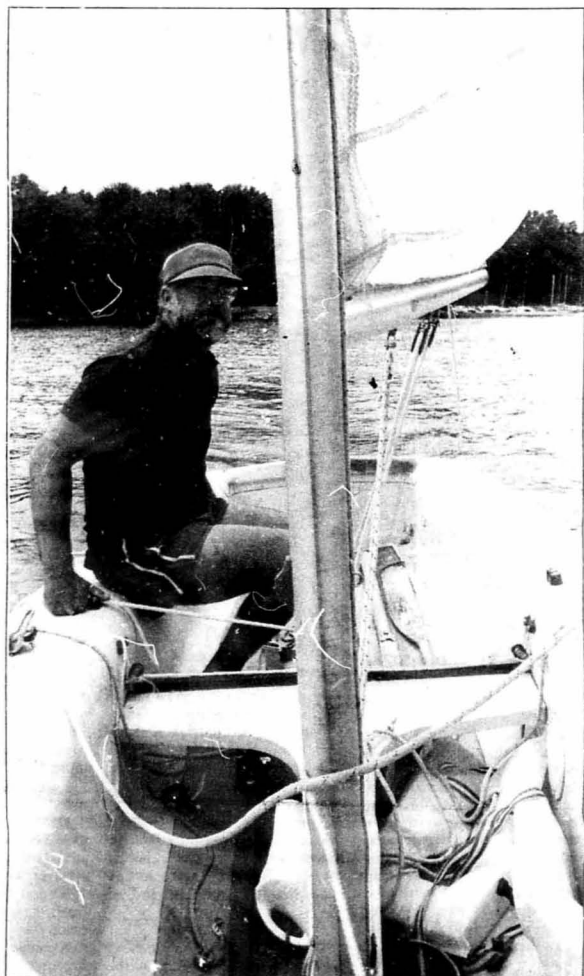

Quality talent will also come by way of All-American guards Jim Jackson of Ohio State and Harold Miner of Southern Cal. Both decided to skip their senior seasons.

"It's a very deep draft," said Ernie Grunfeld, the New York Knicks vice president of player personnel. "I'm sure there might have been deeper ones, but I can't remember when."

The Charlotte Hornets own the second pick and are set to take Georgetown center Alonzo Mourning. Minnesota may follow with Duke forward Christian Laettner, the only college player on the U.S. Olympic team.

Dallas owns the fourth pick and will take Laettner if he's available or the versatile Guss.

Denver, has the fifth pick, followed by Washington, Sacramento, Milwaukee, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Houston, Miami, Denver, Indiana, and the Lakers.

Runners need to take precautions while training

By Jay Reed
Sports Writer

Jogging is a sport which requires endurance, stamina and determination.

It is also a sport which requires safety and common sense.

Safety is not only wearing the right shoes, which cushion the feet for adequate support, and stretching before running, which serves to alleviate muscle strain, it also includes when and where to trek.

Tips for a safe jogging experience at night include wearing bright, reflective clothing, jogging single file toward oncoming traffic and using roads with wide shoulders.

Jim Henshaw, owner of Shoes n' Stuff in Carbondale, says that jogging equipment is important, but finding areas without heavy traffic and air pollution is vital.

Henshaw says that he prefers to jog in the morning, but he noted that there is not a magic time that is best for every jogger.

The Student Recreation Center offers several jogging routes on campus for the running enthusiast including a one-fourth mile trail northeast of the Recreation Center and a 2.1 mile course around Campus Lake.

Cathy Kershaw, a member of the SIUC track and cross country team, says joggers, especially women, should be careful about the areas where they jog.

"I would never go out to the Campus Lake trail after dark," Kershaw said.

"If you do jog at night you should always have someone with you and run in a place where other people are around. It is dangerous and it is not worth the risk," she said.

SIUC Police Sgt. Nelson Ferry said that the Campus Lake trail, even with its sparse lighting has a minimal amount of crime.

Ferry said statistics are not kept specifically on crime around Campus Lake.

"Due to the limited amount of night lighting around the trail, people stay away," he said.

The SIUC Roadrunners Club, the Lakeside Joggers and the Sunset Joggers all provide group activities for joggers.

Other activities include the annual Thanksgiving run, the annual Easter run and an end of the year Intramural Track and Field meet.

For an illustration of several of the campus' jogging routes, see page 15.

GUERRILLAS ATTACK SARAJEVO — Serb guerrillas fired artillery barrages Tuesday on Sarajevo and fought street battles against local defense forces as part of a drive to carve out portions of the new republic for their self-declared Serbian state, officials and witnesses said. At least five people were killed and more than 25 wounded in the center of the predominantly Muslim Slav capital, police said. Doctors appealed for blood donors over a local radio station.

RABIN PROJECTED NEW ISRAELI LEADER — Yitzhak Rabin and the opposition Labor Party appeared to have scored a stunning victory in Israel's national elections Tuesday, ousting Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's right-wing Likud Party from power, according to television projections. State-run Israel Television said its exit polls showed the Labor Party should win 47 seats in the Knesset, Israel's parliament, compared with 33 for Likud.

STATE SUES COMPANIES FOR BOTCHED PLANT — The State of Illinois filed a $3.2 million suit Tuesday against five companies involved in a botched power plant conversion project at Eastern Illinois University. In a lawsuit filed in Coles County Circuit Court, Attorney General Roland Burris said developers promised in 1981 to upgrade EIU's power plant so it could burn coal, oil or natural gas. But after 10 years of work and millions of dollars, it must be renovated again.

JUDGE KEEPS BARNICH ON EDISON CASES — A Cook County judge Tuesday refused to remove Illinois Commerce Commission member Terry Barnich from considering rate cases involving Commonwealth Edison. Ten consumer groups Thursday filed suit asking for Barnich's removal, saying the 375 telephone calls the former ICC chairman made to Edison representatives in 1990 and 1991 may have been improper and accused Barnich of bias in favor of the utility.

Unexpected deadline to hinder financial aid

By Chris Davies
General Assignment Writer

The unexpected financial aid deadline imposed by the Illinois Student Assistance Commission is going to hit students where it hurts most—the pocket book.

ISAC announced last week that students who did not file their financial aid forms before June 20 may not receive a Monetary Award Program grant for the fall semester because of a suspension of funds.

Kim Lemons, a nursing major at SIUC, said the deadline is a serious matter for students such as herself.

"ISAC has already cut my award by $500 for the fall," she said. "This new deadline means I cannot get revisions made in my said forms, so I cannot get any more money."

Lemon said she had no knowledge of the early deadline.

"I feel that ISAC, as well as SIUC, needed to do a better job on informing students," she said.

Pamela Britton, SIUC director of financial aid, said the deadline usually is set for November, and the new deadline shift will have a negative effect on SIUC's neediest students.

"Usually the neediest students are hurt most by financial aid deadlines because they don't know, usually until the last minute, whether or not they are going to college due to parents low income," she said.

"ISAC has 17 percent more applicants for aid this year and part of the reason for the increase is the recession," Britton said.

"Since the recession, we see that more people are coming to school and staying in school longer because of limited job opportunities," she said.

Students who did not get their financial aid forms in on time will lose approximately $3,000 this year, Britton said.

"Students losing ISAC benefits are forced to decide whether or not they can live on $2,000 for the entire year," she said.

Yaphet Rogers, a communications major and student employee at SIUC, said the government needs to take a closer look at the students these cuts are affecting.

"The government needs to allocate more money to educational benefits, instead of taking it away," he said. "Blacks are already having a hard time getting into school these days—cuts and suspensions like these just compound the problem."

Britton said the financial aid department will not know exactly how many students are affected until later in the fall.

"Many students don't follow-up on their financial aid until they return for the fall semester," she said. "However, ISAC will be notifying students at home of the deadline situation."

Karen Malone, who will be attending SIUC this fall, said ISAC did not inform her of any deadline.

"I only received one letter from ISAC and it said nothing about a deadline," she said. "Financial aid forms are confusing enough—this deadline just adds to the confusion."

Malone said her decision to attend SIUC partially is based on whether she can get financed.

City to crack down on curfew

By John McCadd
Police Writer

The Carbondale Police Department announced curfew laws will be enforced more strictly this summer.

Carbondale Police Chief Donald Strom said the curfew problem becomes more pronounced in the summer because kids are out of school when parents often remain busy.

"Parents sometimes forget what curfew law is," he said. "The purpose behind this is to remind parents and have them discuss it with their kids."

"We definitely run into a lot more (curfew violation) instances in the summer," Strom said.

SIUC Security Director Robert Harris said curfew violations can be a problem on campus when minors are involved in theft and vandalism.

"There's a big theft problem on campus right now," Harris said. "Sometimes we'll see a half dozen kids come on campus and leave with more bikes than they came with."

Campus police also find minors around Campus Lake and the Student Recreation Center after

Cigarette company should drop cartoon

THE PARTICIPATION OF Surgeon General Antonia Novello in a Chicago demonstration to "ban the hump" opens questions on the government's position on smoking and on a cartoon character detractors say is a merchant of death.

JOE COOL, THE cartoon character used to promote Camel cigarettes by R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., has reached high levels of popularity among young people. According to Novello and the American Medical Association, 90 percent of young people surveyed in March could relate the character to cigarette smoking.

R.J. REYNOLDS CLAIMS the character is not designed to lure youths to the vice.

But the context in which the smooth camel is portrayed and the gifts, such as shirts and jackets with the likeness of the desert ruminant, purchasers of Camels can receive by collecting the tickets offered in the cigarette packs seem to point at a young target audience for the product.

CIGARETTE COMPANIES' advertising tends to present characters their audiences glamorize. There have been cowboys, motorcycle riders, jet pilots and even couples engaged in exciting social situations.

Why would any adult want to glamorize a cartoon whose face is a phallic symbol?

IF JOE CAMEL IS NOT intended to attract young smokers, as R.J. Reynolds maintains, the company should drop the character simply because it is more popular than Mickey Mouse among children.

It is irresponsible for a business selling a product that causes grave physical consequences to use an advertising gimmick that lures children to that product, especially when many other gimmicks can be used to attract adults.

NOVELLO'S PRESENCE at the anti-smoking parade in Chicago raises questions about the position of the federal government on smoking.

As surgeon general, Novello has been openly outspoken against cigarette smoking as a cause of illness and death among American adults and because it does not only harm smokers, but those around them.

The surgeon general actively promotes anti-smoking behavior while the federal government continues to subsidize farmers who grow tobacco.

THE CONTROVERSY OVER cigarettes and tobacco products is going to continue because the smoking business is a profitable one.

As long as advertising glamorizes smoking there are going to be children and adults who will not care that smoking greatly increases chances of contracting lung cancer and emphysema, or that cigarette smoking by pregnant women has been linked to low birth weight.

If they think that lighting up is going to make them look like the cowboy, the biker, or even the camel, they will light up.

Banning crap would ruin entertainment industry

A Chicago cop showed me the protest letter he was sending to some big executive at Warner Bros. Records, which is part of the huge Time Warner company.

It's the same letter that is being sent by thousands of Chicago cops. Variations are being sent by police in other parts of the country.

"We, as members of the Chicago Police Department and members of their families, are appalled and offended that you and your company are willing to promote the Ice-T song called 'Cop Killer.'"

"We are urging you to remove this song from the record stores and the media. Until such time, we intend to boycott any and all products, movies and amusement parks, such as your Six Flags, that are owned and operated by Time Warner."

"With all the turmoil in the world today, this song promotes more civil unrest."

"If you continue to promote this song, rest assured that you will be held liable and accountable for officers that are killed, as a result of subjects using this song as a plea in their defense."

When I finished reading it, he said: "What do you think?"

What do I think? I think that a police boycott will have little impact on Time Warner.

I doubt if it will persuade many people to cancel plans to go to Six Flags, see the new "Batman" movie or drop their subscription to Time magazine.

Teen-agers, the biggest customers for pop music, won't deprive themselves of their favorite hearing abuse.

And the boycott most definitely won't convince any of the Time Warner executives that putting out the "Cop Killer" record was an error in judgment.

The record is selling. It's making money. That's the only judgment that counts.

On the other hand, why not try a boycott? If I were a cop, I would. In fact, I could support the boycott strictly as a music lover, the rap song is that bad.

I have to admit that I consider all rap to be just about the most brain-dead pop music we've ever had. The same dull thump-thump beat, the same mumble-mouth lyrics. It almost makes the classic "How Much Is That Doggy in the Window?" seem profound.

Mike Royko

Tribune Media Services

And this particular song has to be about as bad as anything ever put on a record or disc.

Here are some of the lyrics, with a few partial deletions of the obscenities:

I got my black shirt on
I got my black gloves on.
I got my ski mask on.
This s--- been too long.
I got my 12-gauge sawed off.
I got my headlights turned off.
I'm about to bust some shots off.
I'm about to dust some cops off.
(Chorus)

Cop killer, it's better you than me.

Cop killer, f--- police brutality.
Cop killer, I know your family's grievin'

F--- 'em!
Cop killer, but tonight we get even.

I got my brain on hype.
Tonight I'll be your night.

I got this long-assed knife, and your neck looks just right.
My adrenaline's pumpin'.

I got my stereo bumpin'.
I'm about to kill me somethin'.
A pig stopped me for nuthin'!

(Chorus)
Die, die, die, pig, die!
F--- the police!

There's more. The last line is repeated about a dozen times. And the ever-popular mother-word is tossed in later. But you get the idea. These rappers really don't like cops.

Naturally, Time Warner and some socially aware critics are defending the song on the grounds that it is a social statement, expressing the despair and frustration of society's abused underclass.

Nah. It's not a social statement. It's crap.

Of course, that doesn't mean it should be banned.

If we banned all crap, our TV sets would be blank about 90 percent of the time, most movie houses would close and our radios would go dead.

The entertainment industry's single biggest product is crap. It's just a question of personal preference as to the form it takes.

So, instead of mealy-mouthed about how the song is a social statement, a cry of dissent, a plea to be understood, and that attempts to ban it are a threat to free speech, free press and free speech for all Americans, Time Warner ought to be truthful.

It could issue a statement saying something like:

"We have received many complaints from policemen, their families and others about the song 'Cop Killer.' We are threatened with a boycott."

"These people don't understand. True, this song is crap. But what do you expect? We are in the crap business."

"When the rap group came to us with this song, we said: 'Boy, is this crap. It should really sell.' And we were right. Hey, if Mozart had written stuff like this, instead of just talking dirty at parties, he wouldn't have died without a penny."

"Naturally, we are sympathetic to the feelings of policemen. If someone put out a record encouraging people to kill executives at Time Warner, I'm sure our wives and children would be alarmed, and I would be hysterical. We'd probably sue. But, then, we are a big, powerful media corporation and you ain't, so tough tootsies, coppers."

"In conclusion, we will resist all efforts to impede free expression and our right to life, liberty, the pursuit of happiness and the marketing of any crap that will sell."

"God bless America."

"Now, call security and tell them not to let any cops in the lobby."

with their recommendations for higher education on June 15 to Edgar, said Mary Barney Reynolds, assistant to the lieutenant governor.

Edgar reviewed the report and feels more review and debate should be done before he issues his views, said Mike Lawrence, press secretary.

The report includes four major issues the task force felt needed to be reorganized, Reynolds said.

The force recommends a merging of the administration body of Sangamon State University and the U of I.

Early reports stated that SFU and SIUC would be joined, though both U of I and SIUC were equally reviewed by the force.

The force stated that based on academic missions, the U of I shares more similar missions with SSU. The force also stated that SSU and SIUC are located several miles apart.

James Brown, SIUC chancellor, said it is important to remember that the governor has not said his final comments on the issue.

The task force will issue another report on January 1, 1993 after further discussions and investigations. Brown said, The Governor will issue his response after reviewing the final reports and his statement will be discussed by the general assembly in the spring of 1993.

"The task force has not finished their task," Brown said, "a lot can happen in the time remaining."

The report issued two options for administration restructuring of all the Universities in Illinois.

The first option reported that all campuses of The U of I in Urbana, Chicago and Springfield will be joined under one administration.

with Conrail, a freight line.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas told reporters he favored intervention by Congress, but added, "We (Republicans) don't run the Congress. If they (Democrats) want a three- or four-day strike, they can do that."

Five unions, involved in three contract disputes, were free to strike at midnight against virtually every major railroad, including Amtrak, Conrail and the rail freight industry.

A union source said more than 100 members of Congress had written letters to the parties involved, saying that they are reluctant to intervene and urging them to reach a settlement of their own.

Amtrak officials said train terminals in New York, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago would be closed by a strike. In New York, only Penn Station would be closed. Grand Central Terminal would stay open.

The Transit Authority was putting in service a special express subway link for Long Island Rail Road passengers and New Jersey Transit was preparing to rent buses and bring retired buses back into service.

Amtrak will operate normally if a last-minute settlement is reached, a spokeswoman said.

Passengers with questions can call Amtrak's toll-free number, 1-800-USA-RAIL.

Rail officials said that within two days of a strike the auto industry could be hurt because all car parts are shipped by rail. Once the auto industry is affected, steel mills and coal mines could begin laying off workers.

The talks have gone on for four years. Two cooling-off periods have been imposed by the Bush administration, and the third was set to expire at midnight.

Jedd Dodd, chief negotiator for the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees, had harsh words for Amtrak and Conrail.

"Amtrak should be working with the commuter lines to allow them to continue operating," he said.

Carbondale Amtrak to close if strike OK'd

By Rebecca Campbell
General Assignment Writer

The Carbondale Amtrak station will close pending a nationwide strike by five unions involved in contract disputes with major railroads, a city Amtrak official said.

The unions were free to strike at 12:01 a.m. today.

Ticket clerk Nelson Miesner said he would watch the morning news for word on whether the strike occurred.

"If there's a strike, I won't come to work," he said.

Train 358, which was scheduled to leave Carbondale yesterday, was cancelled pending a strike by Amtrak employees, Miesner said.

Darrell Smith, Amtrak spokesman, said Amtrak has made arrangements with USAir, Delta Air Lines, United Airlines and several bus companies to provide alternate travel for passengers whose trip already is underway

Some bus companies will honor Amtrak tickets, he said. Passengers can call Amtrak at 1-800-USA-RAIL or local Greyhound or Trailways offices for details.

As the Daily Egyptian went to press, Smith said Amtrak was still negotiating with the railroad unions.

"We're prepared for the strike, but we're still negotiating and prepared to settle," he said. "Amtrak does not want a strike."

Passengers would not be the only people affected if the railroad employees strike.

Ron Greenfield, Peabody Coal Company spokesman, said if freight railroad services are interrupted, the coal industry would be affected.

"In the event of a strike, 'the impact will vary from mine to mine,'" he said.

If a mine cannot stock pile, the only choice is to suspend production, Greenfield said.

with Conrail, a freight line. The Brotherhood of Maintenance of the Way Employees were also talking with freight lines.

Unless contract agreements are reached with all six unions a nationwide strike is likely. Rail unions traditionally do not cross each other's picket lines.

Although the unions were free to begin a walkout at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday, the end of the "cooling off period," bargaining units gave no formal word on when strikes would begin. An announcement was anticipated later Tuesday.

Twice before Congress has passed legislation to end rail strikes.

But many legislators were reluctant to do so again, preferring to let the unions and railroads try to work it out themselves.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, said he believes in "the right of collective bargaining and that the right to strike is, after all, a very fundamental right in this country."

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas said Congress should take some action, even if it is just to keep the two sides talking a few more days.

"I would much prefer a three-day cooling off period than a three-day strike," said Dole.

At train stations coast to coast, passengers were warned that service may likely stop at midnight, and that they should be ready to get to their final destinations by other means.

If a walkout does occur, service to Amtrak and perhaps to all the nation's major freight lines and some commuter lines would come to a screeching halt, sending economic shockwaves across the country.

Administration officials said a walkout would idle about $75,000 rail-related employees, from coal miners to auto workers.

May 30 vote by the U.N. Security Council to impose sweeping sanctions on Yugoslavia, including a trade embargo and a freeze on Yugoslavia's foreign assets.

The administration has also revoked landing rights in the United States for the Yugoslav national airline, recalled its ambassador from Belgrade, closed consulates in New York and San Francisco and expelled military attaches.

The United States, the United Nations and other international bodies have called on Yugoslavia to disarm and to demobilize from Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Nearly 40,000 people have been killed, 25,000 injured and 1.3 million driven from their homes since fighting began three months ago.

Although Baker stopped short of advocating the deployment of U.S. troops to Bosnia-Herzegovina, the former Yugoslav republic that Belgrade is attempting to grab, he was asked by several senators whether the administration would support such a move.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., asked Baker whether military force would be required to implement a ceasefire.

Baker revealed for the first time that U.S. military strategists were advising the U.N. Security Council on "how the international community can find a way to" ensure the delivery of assistance to towns.

John Gotti sentenced to life; triggers demonstration, riots

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Gotti, the nation's richest and most powerful Mafia chief, was sentenced to life in prison Tuesday for five murders, including the mob rebut of his Gambino family predecessor.

Word of the sentence triggered a demonstration by up to 1,000 friends and supporters of Gotti who tried to rush the federal courthouse in Brooklyn, screaming "Free John Gotti!"

They overturned a car belonging to a federal marshal and smashed windows on other cars.

They were pushed back by police in riot gear and marshalls and the courthouse was locked.

Seven demonstrators were arrested and eight police officers were injured. As U.S. District Judge Leo Glasser sentenced Gotti, 51, and his former underboss Frank Locascio to life without parole and fined each man $250,000, Gotti played the "Dapper Don" to the end.

Dressed in a dark silk suit and bright yellow tie he smiled broadly and uttered not a word.

Locascio, however, told the judge, "The only thing I'm guilty of is being a friend of John Gotti."

"If there were more men like John Gotti in America, this would be a better country," he added.

Gotti was found guilty April 2 of five murders, including the gangland slaying of Paul Castellano, his predecessor as head of the Gambino organized crime family, and seven racketeering charges.

Locascio was convicted of one of the murders and most of the other charges.

After the sentencing, the demonstrators, brought in by bus, swelled from about 200 to around 1,000 across the street from the courthouse. They waved American flags and banners and demanded a new trial for Gotti.

Some of them broke through police lines and got into the courthouse lobby before they were pushed outside.

"What do we want? A fair trial!" they screamed as others waved placards that read "Equanimity Under the Law," and "Justice for All."

Some women demonstrators wore T-shirts with white and green maps of Italy on them and two black pickup trucks passed along the street with signs saying, "Another Government Conspiracy."

Albert Krieger, Gotti's trial lawyer, commenting on Gotti's cool demeanor, said, "I have to report the extraordinary strength of character of John Gotti in times of extreme adversity. It's rare to find. He is a man of ultimate dignity."

Before the sentencing, Glasser dismissed a motion by civil rights attorney William Kunstler for a new trial on charges the prosecution improperly dismissed a juror and intimidated others on the panel.

As Gotti was being led away, Kunstler gave him a big bear hug.

Middle East Broadcasting Centre obtains UPI for $3.95 million cash

NEW YORK (UPI) — A federal bankruptcy court judge Tuesday accepted Middle East Broadcasting Centre Ltd.'s $3.95 million cash offer for United Press International after a heated bidding contest in U.S. bankruptcy court.

Dennis O'Dea, a lawyer for the creditors committee, told U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Francis Conrad that UPI and the creditors concluded Middle East Broadcasting's bid was "the highest and best offer."

"This court accepts the bid of — what is it? — Middle East Broadcasting Centre," Conrad said.

The wire service and its creditors chose the Middle East Broadcasting bid over New York attorney Leon Charney's offer of $3.75 million in cash plus an equity interest of 10 percent in a reorganized UPI and over a $900,000 bid for the UPI name and several assets from religious broadcaster Pat Robertson.

O'Dea said Middle East Broadcasting, which transmits English and Arabic-language news and entertainment to the Mideast, North Africa and Europe, will close the UPI deal Saturday.

Middle East Broadcasting, privately owned by Saudi Arabian investors, will accept financial responsibility for UPI's outstanding contracts for 30 days while it determines which ones it will assume, O'Dea said.

Charney put up $180,000 to keep UPI operating while he reviewed the wire service's books during a 10-day period that ended Monday at midnight. He said he will appeal Conrad's decision to accept the Middle East Broadcasting bid.

Charney, who produces and moderates a show on Middle Eastern affairs for public television in New York, said he wanted to determine whether the creditors committee violated an agreement he had with UPI by talking to Middle East Broadcasting during his 10-day review period.

Middle East Broadcasting contacted UPI lawyers last week about making a bid but was prevented from talking to UPI directly under a so-called standstill agreement with Charney while he examined the books.

O'Dea said the creditors reviewed the bids from both Charney and Middle East Broadcasting before reaching their decision.

He said Charney's offer would be held as a secondary bid in the unlikely event the Middle East Broadcasting offer turned sour.

Middle East Broadcasting agreed to provide UPI with a letter of credit for the $3.95 million by Thursday, O'Dea said.

As part of its offer, Middle East Broadcasting said it was prepared to invest between $10 million and $12 million to rebuild UPI and make it profitable.

The wire service has been operating under Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection since Aug. 28, 1991. At that time, UPI listed liabilities of some $60 million and assets of around $22 million.

Sandra Reimer, an attorney for Middle East Broadcasting, said representatives of the company would fly to New York from London to meet with UPI management.

"This is a worldwide organization," she said, referring to UPI. "They don't want to walk in and just change things too quickly."

Reimer said Middle East Broadcasting executives wanted a "smooth transition" with the acquisition of UPI.

Five-man, two-woman crew awaits 48th shuttle mission

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Engineers pumped fuel aboard the shuttle Columbia Tuesday to power the ship's electrical generators and ran tests to check out a suspect engine temperature sensor that could delay a launch attempt Thursday.

With forecasters calling for a 70 percent chance of good weather at takeoff time, Columbia and its five-man, two-woman crew are scheduled to take off on the 48th shuttle mission, the fourth of eight planned for 1992, at 12:07 p.m. Thursday.

Engineers spent the day Tuesday troubleshooting problems with the shuttle's navigation gear and apparent trouble with a liquid oxygen temperature sensor in the plumbing of main engine No. 2 that was generating suspect data.

NASA test director Michael Leinbach said two of three electronic navigation aids in the shuttle's crew cabin failed routine tests earlier in the countdown. Both units can be replaced in time for a launch attempt Thursday.

But the second issue was cloudier. Engineers reviewed test data Tuesday to determine if the temperature sensor was broken or if the engine's control computer was acting up. If the sensor is at fault, NASA managers could elect to launch Columbia as is or to replace it, work that could delay liftoff a day or so — or not at all.

But if tests show the engine controller is to blame, the flight could be delayed six days or more. Engineers believe the controller is operating normally and that Columbia's crew has a good chance of taking off on time.

"Right now, we're evaluating the performance on the controller on engine No. 2 and also the sensor that's connected to that engine," said NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone. "We're hopeful that it won't be a problem for our launch on Thursday."

At the controls will be commander Richard Richards, 45, and co-pilot Kenneth Bowersox, 35. Their crewmates are Bonnie Dunbar, 43, Ellen Baker, 38, Carl Meade, 41, and civilian researchers Lawrence DeLucas and Eugene Trinh, both 41.

The goal of the 23rd post-Challenger shuttle mission is to conduct medical and materials science research for 13 days — a shuttle record — using experiments inside a $1 billion Spacelab module mounted in Columbia's cargo bay and connected to the crew cabin by a pressurized tunnel.

The flight marks the first in a planned series of "extended duration orbiter" missions designed to bridge the gap between short up-and-down shuttle flights and around-the-clock work aboard NASA's planned space station later this decade.

Director of SIUC Security has seen crime changing during his career

By Patrick J. Brown
Student Writer

Robert Harris, director of SIUC Security, has witnessed many changes in criminal activity since he came to SIUC in March of 1966.

"The worst thing was the riots, then a shoot-out with the Black Panthers, and the worst problem now is violence," Harris said.

Harris, 55, who will retire at the end of August, said the riots started in May of 1966 and continued through the spring of 1971.

He said most of the police officers agreed with the anti-war protesters, but not their methods of protest.

"Sometimes I think about it today and wonder how we didn't kill anyone," Harris said.

Harris said the most serious problem for his department today is campus violence.

Police are starting to see gangs and crack cocaine, he said.

"It's all over and it's almost like a total lack of feeling about anyone else," Harris said.

Harris said there is a lot of theft on the campus, but reported rape is not very high. In fact, there were only three reported criminal sexual assaults on campus in 1991.

"Most of the violent rape happens off campus," he said.

The majority of date or acquaintance rapes which happen on campus are not reported to SIUC Security, Harris said.

Lisa Hollabaugh, campus safety representative for Women's Services, said the rape statistics are misleading.

"They can only give out information on reported rapes and the fact is, the vast majority of rapes are unreported," she said.

Harris said there is absolutely no reason to hide crime statistics, including rape, although he knows of colleges that do.

"We have reported campus crime since day one," Harris said.

The Student Right-to-Know and Campus Security Act will take effect on Sept. 1, and will require colleges and universities to report campus crime statistics.

Nelson Ferry, police community relations officer for SIUC Security, said he believes alcohol is the greatest problem the police face on campus because it contributes to other crimes.

"Alcohol leads to violence, vandalism, theft, attacks on person and sexual assaults," Ferry said.

Harris said students should use basic common sense, walk in lighted areas and report whatever they see to help prevent crime and sexual assaults.

"They need to witness things and be willing to come forth," Harris said.

Brad Cole, Undergraduate Student Government president, said he would like to see an increase in the number of campus call boxes and an extension to the Night Safety Van hour, but the Campus Safety Board is waiting to see if they can secure an increase in the campus safety fee.

Ferry said the University Watch program also helps remove the opportunity for crime.

"When you increase awareness, say about burglary, you increase a person's awareness about a variety of other crimes," he said.

The emphasis of the SIUC Saluki Patrol, which is made up of 40 student officers, is crime prevention and the removal of crime opportunity.

"Crime prevention is not the elimination of crime; crime prevention is strictly the displacement of crime," Ferry said.

BMW building auto facility amidst U.S. plant closings

DEARBORN, Mich. (UPI) — At a time when U.S. automakers are closing auto plants and consolidating operations, German automaker BMW will build an automobile manufacturing plant in South Carolina.

The manufacturing facility, estimated to cost between $250 million and $300 million, will be located at Greenville-Spartanburg, about 70 miles from Charlotte, N.C.

"The U.S. is still the single most important market for us," said Bernd Pischetsrieder, a member of the Board of Management at Bavarian Motor Works AG headquartered in Munich, Germany.

"It's our strong belief that we ought to be here (in the U.S.) in order to succeed."

BMW plans to build a new model at the plant, with production beginning in 1995. BMW officials declined to give any details on the type of vehicle or its price, however.

Half of the vehicles made in South Carolina will be sold in the United States, with the remaining half expected to be exported throughout the world.

"This new plant will strengthen our competitiveness in the global market," said Pischetsrieder. "Europe is the U.S.'s biggest customer and this can do nothing but help the U.S.

trade balance."

The vehicle built in South Carolina will be "unique," said Pischetsrieder, but made for the global market. The car will be designed in the United States and its expected domestic value content will be 50 percent.

Major components, such as the powertrain, will be imported from Germany.

"We plan to target and utilize American suppliers as much as possible," said Helmut Panke, director of corporate planning at BMW AG. "We presently buy $250 million in parts from the U.S. now, so we see this as another step in the right direction."

Panke said he expects many of BMW's present suppliers to relocate from Europe to South Carolina. When BMW built its plant in Regensburg, Germany, nearly 20 suppliers set up auxiliary facilities near that plant.

Pischetsrieder expects more than 2,000 people to be employed at the plant by the end of the decade.

The plant will build an estimated 300 cars per day. BMW will begin site preparation for the 1.9-million square foot facility later next month. The plant will be built on a 900-acre parcel located on Interstate 85 and next to the Greenville-Spartanburg Jetport.

Slaves' freedom celebrated with festival, parade

By Lynelle Marquardt
General Assignment Writer

The people of Carbondale will celebrate the Emancipation Proclamation, the document which freed slaves, with a parade and festival.

Harriet Wilson Barlow, president of the alumni chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha, which is coordinating the event this year, said the first organized Emancipation Day celebration in Carbondale was in 1911.

The group is putting the final touches on the Aug. 8 celebration, Barlow said.

"There will be a parade that morning, then following that will be the opening ceremonies," she said.

"We hope the mayor will speak and Ramon Price, the curator of the DuSable Museum in Chicago, will be the keynote speaker," Barlow said.

After the opening ceremonies, activities will take place at Attucks Park and the Emma Hayes Center.

"We are attempting to bring a carnival to town," Barlow said.

"There will be food vendors, people selling goods and games for children and adults," she said. "A gospel festival will conclude the evening, and there will be fireworks."

Dr. Jean Dorsette-Robinson of the Carbondale Community Club is the general chairwoman for the event.

Rosetta O'Neal, a member of the Carbondale Community Club, helped with the celebration last year. Her group, the African American Historical and Genealogical Society, presented a display of materials and resources used to research African American heritage.

"Our exhibit included research materials and some research we have done," O'Neal said.

Bush vetoes bill to remove fetal tissue experiment ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush vetoed a bill Tuesday that would have lifted the administration's ban on federal funding for research that uses fetal tissue from induced abortions.

In a lengthy written veto message, Bush said the measure "is unacceptable to me on almost every ground: ethical, fiscal, administrative, philosophical, and legal."

Furthermore, he said the bill is "not necessary to assure federal funding continue for biomedical research, or for any research related to any disease, disorder or condition."

Supporters of the authorization bill for the National Institutes of Health hoped to override the veto, but they did not have the needed two-thirds majority when the House passed the final version of the bill last month on a 260-148 vote. The Senate vote was 85-12.

Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, Bush's likely Democratic challenger in November, called the veto "politics — pure and simple. He has turned what would have been a very important step forward in the fight to save the lives of millions of American women into an ugly bow to the far right."

Sen. Brock Adams, D-Wash., called the veto a "national tragedy" and said, "Once again, the president has elevated ideology above scientific reason, common sense and human life."

Anti-abortion groups opposed the NIH bill, claiming that lifting the ban would encourage more women to have voluntary abortions in order to provide fetal tissue for research.

In recent years, doctors have found that transplanting fetal tissue into a diseased or disabled part of a patient's body may aid in the treatment of certain diseases, including Parkinson's disease, diabetes, and Alzheimer's disease.

In 1988, the Reagan administration imposed a ban on federal funding for transplant research involving fetal tissue obtained from induced abortions. The ban did not affect tissue obtained from spontaneous abortions or ectopic pregnancies.

Two NIH advisory committees subsequently recommended that the research be allowed to continue as long as the government imposed safeguards, but Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan continued the ban indefinitely in 1989.

Bush tried to defuse the issue last month when he issued an executive order creating a "fetal tissue bank" to collect tissue for research from miscarriages and ectopic pregnancies, but critics said the plan was inadequate and would not provide enough tissue for researchers.

The bill also was strongly supported by women's groups because of provisions intended to raise the priority of women's health issues.

NIH Director Bernadette Healy said the provisions are unnecessary.

The bill would require that women and minorities be included as subjects in NIH-funded research projects, would make permanent in law the establishment of a women's health research office in NIH, and would establish a national women's health data bank.

In his veto message, Bush said that he had "repeatedly warned" Congress at each stage of the legislative process that the bill's provisions permitting the use of tissue from induced abortions for federally funded transplantation research involving human subjects "are inconsistent with our nation's deeply held beliefs."

"Moreover," he added, "it is clear that this legislation would be counterproductive to the attainment of our nation's health research objectives."

The bill is objectionable, he declared, "because it would lift the current moratorium on the use of federal funds for fetal tissue transplantation research where the tissue can be obtained from spontaneous abortions."

"Let it be clear," Bush said, "this is no moratorium on research. It is only a moratorium on the use of one source of tissue for that research."

He believes it is important to prevent taxpayer funds from being used "for research that many Americans find morally repugnant and because of its potential for promoting and legitimizing abortion."

St. Louis reggae band plays sunset concert

By Ronn Byrd
Entertainment Writer

Cresting the second week of the summer Sunset Concert series is the Murder City Players, named one of St. Louis' best in an informal survey by the Suburban Journal in 1988 of the city's bar owners.

They also earned the titles of Best Reggae Group and Best Band in bar owner polls.

The Murder City Players is a nine-piece band complete with horn section. Consisting of Jeff Schneider on keyboard and vocals; bass guitarist Pete Sikich; Mark Conellire and "Prince" Phillip McKenzie on vocals and percussion; Bryan Coughlan and Brian Stoller on rhythm guitar; and Dale Stevens, Reggie Morrow and Jon Taylor on guitar, they have been laying down reggae rhythms in the St. Louis area for more than seven years.

The name Murder City Players originated because of the high crime rate in the St. Louis, Schneider said.

"At that particular time, about nine years ago, the city was pretty high up in the homicide rate," he said.

"Our name came as a result of that. The Players part comes from a core band we had intended to keep, but we ended up keeping everybody."

Schneider said he and two others had been in a band prior to the Murder City Players and had a serious interest in playing reggae.

"We played around quite a bit before we found a drummer," he said. "Then we started searching for musicians. It was difficult. It requires a whole new approach because it's a different style of music. It bends the music rules."

The reggae that Murder City Players plays is a style that reflects deep roots in Jamaica. They are knowledgeable about obscure Jamaica songs in addition to their own work, so that no set is ever the same.

Schneider said the Player's music is ranged from about 30 years of reggae styles that have evolved, from earlier ska to rock steady.

"Our own music mixes up those elements," he said. "We have kind of a pop edge to it."

The Player's music also has been described as "king music."

"We don't play for kings," said McKenzie. "But we play king music. It is all rhythm and dance. You can feel it moving within."

Taylor said there are no personality conflicts, despite the size of the band.

"It's unusual, especially in a group this size," said Taylor. "But we get along well."

The band released its cassette "Enter the Musical Arena" on the Burning Bush label in 1990.

It was made up of 10 original songs and engineered by Jamaican artist Merwyn Williams.

The band sold more than 800 copies of the cassette in the St. Louis area through shows alone.

Plans to release a second recording, "Power Struggle" are scheduled for late summer.

Schneider said the second showing is much better than the first.

"It's a lot stronger and it's produced better," he said. "We imported a Jamaican engineer and he really gave us a nice sound."

Two of the band's favorite places to play are nightclubs, such as Blueberry Hill and Mississippi Nights in St. Louis.

One show that sticks out for the band as a highlight was when they worked as a back-up band for a famous Jamaican DJ.

"We played with U Roy and we played with the Itals," Taylor said. "U Roy is a famous Jamaican original DJ who invented rap. We were U Roy's back-up band."

The band spent months learning U Roy's material, and two days before the show was taught all new songs.

"We were working with people we'd heard on recordings," Schneider said. "We were sitting in with them."

Stevens said The Players play a two set format, to create a more concert-like atmosphere, rather than taking breaks within sets.

The band wants people to dance and have fun.

Album label asked to pull song off shelves

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Joining the controversial bandwagon against rapper Ice-T's song "Cop Killer," the City Council on Tuesday formally asked Time Warner to pull the song from record store shelves.

The motion, approved on a 10-4 vote, also asks radio stations not to play the single, which critics say is an open invitation to kill police officers.

The action, which followed a debate on First Amendment rights, came the day after a unanimous U.S. Supreme Court struck down a Minnesota law that made it illegal to engage in bias-motivated speech that might arouse "anger, alarm or resentment in others on the basis of race, color, creed, religion or gender."

"Cop Killer" is one track on the album "Body Count," which is distributed through Time Warner's Warner Bros. Records Division.

Warner Bros. spokesman Bob Merlis said the song has not been released as a single and has not received any air play.

He said Warner Bros. will continue marketing the album despite the City Council's request and similar calls from government officials and law enforcers from around the country.

"The song is a dramatic slice of life, like a movie," Merlis said. "It is not a call to arms."

Flores, who held a press conference prior to the vote with the widow of a police officer killed in a revenge shooting, said the song was divisive and might lead to "some kid, who idolizes Ice-T...to actually follow through and 'dust a cop.'"

"At a time when we are asking role models in the entertainment and sports industries to help us heal our wounds from the Rodney King incident and the recent riots, it is socially irresponsible for record companies to promote a song that turns up the heat in Los Angeles," Flores said.

Student Center, Recreation Center host critical blood drive this week

By Lynelle Marquardt
General Assignment Writer

The American Red Cross is holding a blood drive this week at the SIUC Student Center and Recreation Center.

Vivian Ugent, the regional director of the Red Cross, said this blood drive is important, especially with a holiday weekend coming.

"This blood drive is very, very critical in terms of our being prepared for going into the next week and through the holiday weekend," Ugent said.

"We are very concerned about getting to the weekend in terms of lack of sufficient blood."

The minimum goal for the three days on campus is 450 units, but Ugent said that is not enough.

"We really need to collect more," she said. "We can't end up in a situation where choices have to be made about who can have surgery and who will wait."

Ninety-eight percent of the population will need blood sometime, she said.

Ugent also said people who gave blood in April can give again now.

"The people who gave in April need to give again, but go a step further and bring someone with them, because if we don't have a good turnout we're not going to make it," Ugent said.

The low population in Carbondale during the summer increases the need for people to come out and give blood, she said.

One reason for the low collection amounts in the summer is that many people who want to donate are deferred. More people drink ice tea in the summer, and that interferes with their iron absorption, Ugent said.

The only requirements for giving blood are that the donor be at least 16 years old and weigh at least 110 pounds, she said.

It is safe to be a donor, Ugent said. The needles are never reused and everything is sterilized.

Besides receiving refreshments, the donors will receive mini-physicals and find out their blood types.

The Emeritus Association is providing more than 100 volunteers for the drive at the Student Center. The Jackson County Chapter of the Red Cross is volunteering at the Recreation Center.

Ugent says more volunteers are welcome.

"We always need volunteers who can take blood pressure and help," she said.

Jill Decker, special assistant to the associate vice president for academic affairs, volunteered her time to register people wanting to give blood this week.

"I can't give blood so I'm giving my time instead," Decker said.

For the first time, the Red Cross is adding emergency blood drives. A drive was held at the Street Machine Nationals in Du Quoin Sunday.

Ugent said, "People paid $10 to get in and the first thing they were hit with was, 'Will you give blood?'"

Ugent was pleased with the number of young people who stopped and gave blood in Du Quoin Sunday. People who came from as far as Missouri, Kentucky, Indiana and Florida donated, she said.

"It gives you hope when you see the number of young people who were willing to help us here in Southern Illinois because we were in trouble," she said.

McDonnell Douglas workers to lose jobs, future uncertain

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — McDonnell Douglas Corp. said Tuesday it will lay off 207 employees at its plant in Tulsa, Okla., and more layoffs are possible.

The layoffs are a result of the possible shut down of its F-15 Eagle program and reduced production rates for commercial airliners.

McDonnell spokesman Lee Whitney said the ultimate closure of the F-15 fighter program "depends entirely on receiving an approval from the U. S. government to make F-15s for Saudi Arabia."

Whitney said the last F-15 fighters are now working their way through the production pipeline, and the shut down of the program will be completed over the next two years.

"Then we face what to do with all the people working on the program," he said.

The U.S. air force already placed the last orders they intend to place, Whitney said.

"Consequently there are no orders behind that final batch and we have no other choice but to shut down production," he said.

Whitney said it was hard to tell at this point if the U.S. government would support the production of F-15s for the Saudi government.

"We are certainly doing everything that we can for the administration to declare its support," he said.

McDonnell has been attempting to get approval for the Saudi order since February, and the company hopes to ultimately get Congressional support for the sale, Whitney said.

Beginning in July and into the first quarter of 1993, the shut down of the F-15 program will be accelerated and with that the Tulsa plant will be facing a significant amount of lay offs, Whitney said.

The Tulsa plant has been hit by a double whammy, he said.

The plant, which also produces parts for commercial aircraft, is feeling the effects of a decline in commercial airline production rates.

"Generally speaking, airlines are still feeling the effects of an economic recession and they just came out of a fare war," Whitney said.

"The commercial side of the business is soft and consequently rates are reduced somewhat," he said.

McDonnell said with the layoffs announced Tuesday its total work force at the Tulsa plant will be 1,800 from 2,000.

Since January, 753 employees have been laid off from the plant, the company said.

Of the 207 people affected, 187 are union members who will be notified June 30 according to the terms of the collective bargaining agreements.

The last day of work for those employees will be July 2, but they will receive holiday pay for July 3, the company said.

"We will try to retrain and reassign people, but the environment on the defense side has seen a steady and significant decline in the United States and commercial airline productions is softening," Whitney said.

Compromise to avoid veto allows unpaid time off from job for family

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Millions of Illinois workers would be guaranteed unpaid time off from their jobs for family matters under a compromise reached Tuesday between lawmakers and the Illinois Manufacturers' Association.

Backers of family leave hope the IMA endorsement will provide enough votes to overcome a possible veto of the measure by Gov. Jim Edgar.

Under the plan, all businesses with 100 or more workers would have to give employees up to an eight-week leave without pay to give birth, adopt a child or tend ill family members.

Previous proposals had set the number of workers at 50, but the trade association won agreement for the higher figure in exchange for their support of the long-discussed plan.

The IMA-backed proposal also gives a tax credit to businesses that might have higher unemployment insurance costs from the hiring of temporary replacement workers to fill in for employees on leave.

Another concession to the IMA was the inclusion of a 1998 expiration date of the statute, a "sunset" provision that would make lawmakers vote again to continue the law.

IMA President Gregory Baise said his board of directors had to struggle with the idea of compromise on the issue since their position has frequently been based on opposition to government-forced employee benefits.

"We hope that this issue — now finally resolved — will bring an end to the continuous parade of government mandates against Illinois employers which affects our competitiveness worldwide," he said.

The issue is not resolved, since final action is needed by the Legislature and the governor. Other business groups were also not quick to join in the IMA's compromise.

Representatives of the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce and the Illinois chapter of the National Federation of Independent Business both told UPI their opposition will continue.

Long-time supporters of the idea, which has been discussed and voted on by the state House and Senate since 1986, said they compromised with the IMA to finally get the plan on the books.

"This is a win-win agreement, which should directly improve the daily lives of 2.3 million workers," said state Sen. Penny Severns, D-Decatur.

"They have to juggle their jobs with complicated family issues such as sick children, an ailing spouse, a disabled parent or a newborn child," she said.

The plan has been passed by the Legislature and vetoed three times by Republican governors.

House Democrats have passed previous versions of the bill by veto-proof majorities and sponsors hoped the IMA endorsement would guarantee a similar three-fifths majority vote in the Senate.

"This agreement shows where there is cooperation and a willingness to negotiate, we can strike a compromise," said Rep. Myron Kulas, who sponsored the bill in the House.

Gov. Edgar said he continues to support the concept of family leave, but he has followed fellow Republican Gov. James Thompson in vetoing the plan when it reached his desk. Edgar said family leave should not be forced on business by government.

"The concern with family leave is the impact on small businesses," Edgar said. "The IMA is really not made up of a lot of small businesses. I'm just not sure what the ramifications would be."

Baise said more than 60 percent of the IMA's 5,000 members are businesses with less than 100 employees, but conceded the group represents many larger employers that might already have a family leave plan in place.

New list gives Congress' best and worst

WASHINGTON (UPI/States) — There's good news and bad news for U.S. Rep. James A. Traficant, D-17th. In The Washingtonian's "Best and Worst of Congress," which hit the newsstands Monday.

Traficant, whose fiery one-minute speeches on the House floor often earn a chuckle and a shake of the head from listeners, was rated the second funniest member of the House of Representatives.

Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., was tops on the funny list in the "inside-the-Beltway magazine's annual polling of Capitol Hill offices, appearing in the publication's July issue.

Traficant didn't make the list of the House's most dapper members, instead placing first in the "fashion victim" competition.

Traficant also ranked number two in another category—"worst follower"—likely a tribute to his renegade ways. Minority Whip Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., at times the Bush administration's staunchest supporter, at times its loudest critic, led the category.

On the Senate side, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., led the list for "worst follower."

Retiring Rep. Dennis Eckart, D-

11th, hasn't said what he'll be doing after he leaves the House, but he tied for second place in the "brightest future" category.

Rep. Fred Grandy, R-Iowa, who acted in "The Love Boat" television series and now sits on the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, was voted the member with the brightest future.

"Things don't look so good for Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-20th. She placed second, behind House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., and tied with House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., in the "fading star" listing.

money I can get. I don't know if I can go to school here," she said. "ISAC definitely needs to get on the ball, when it comes to confusing situations such as these."

Huong Nguyen, who also is entering SIUC in the fall, said she did not get any notification of a deadline.

"I got a letter from ISAC, but it just explained the type of award I can receive. The deadline was never mentioned."

Nguyen said she feels it is the University's responsibility, as well as ISAC's, to keep students informed.

"I wish the school would take a bigger part in letting students know about any updates in financial situations," she said. "I'm sure some students won't be able to make it to school this fall because of this new deadline."

Bob Clement, spokesman for ISAC, said this will hinder a great number of students.

"Last year ISAC issued monetary awards to 6,405 students for the amount of $1,032,726," he said.

ISAC will not be able to lift the suspension until the next Illinois General Assembly on June 30.

dark, Harris said.

"When we find kids, it's standard for us to take them to the station and call mom and dad," Harris said. "But sometimes the problem is a lot deeper with the parents. Some don't know what their kids are doing, and some don't care."

Strom said the curfew law was designed to protect kids from becoming victims, as well as to hinder their chances of getting into trouble.

"Kids out after curfew tend to run with a group where peer pressure may be involved and they'll end up getting into trouble," Strom said. "It's also designed to keep them from becoming victims of crime."

Curfew law states it is unlawful for persons under 17 to be present at any public building, place, or street at the following times unless accompanied and supervised by a parent or legal guardian:

- Between 12:01 a.m. and 6:00 a.m. on Saturday;

- Between 12:01 a.m. and 6:00 a.m. on Sunday; and

- Between 11:00 p.m. and 6:00 a.m. Sunday through Thursday.

It also is unlawful for a parent or guardian to knowingly permit a person in his or her custody to violate the curfew laws.

Strom said the drivers license of any person under 17 is invalid during curfew hours, meaning anyone driving will receive a ticket for a moving violation, as well as violating curfew.

Illinois Senate gives approval to youth AIDS bill

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Parents would be able to find out if their minor children had tested positive for the AIDS virus under a bill headed for Gov. Jim Edgar's desk.

The Illinois Senate gave final approval to the bill (H4056) Tuesday. It gives physicians and other medical providers the power to waive a child's confidentiality rights if the physician feels parental notification is in the child's best interest.

In lengthy debate, senators argued whether teenagers under age 18 who are tested for AIDS have the same right to privacy as underage girls who receive abortions.

"I have to react as a mother, and it's not a pro-life or a pro-choice position," said Sen. Judy Baar Topinka, R-Riverside. "If my kid has a splinter I want to know about it, and if my kid has AIDS, I sure as heck want to know about it."

Some Democratic senators argued parental notification would only discourage children from seeking tests for the HIV virus.

"When you had bad grades in school, did you even want to go home and tell (your parents?)" asked Sen. Ted Leverenz, D-Maywood.

"If it ever happened to me, I hope my children would tell me; but it's much more important that they get the test," said Sen. John Cullerton, D-Chicago. "This bill is going to discourage people from getting the test, and that's the whole point of taking the test."

But supporters said teenagers are unable to make complex decisions about medical care and how to deal with a life-threatening illness like AIDS.

"Should (parents) find out when their child is on its deathbed? Should they find out when the child is beyond recovery? Will they find out that the child got the wrong kind of treatment, made the wrong judgment? Who are we concerned about here?" asked Sen. Marty Butler, R-Des Plaines.

The measure exempts health care providers from civil or criminal lawsuits if they refuse to make AIDS results public, and requires them to encourage the minor to tell his or her parents before the doctor or nurse can take such action.

Edgar spokesman Mike Lawrence said the governor would review the language in the measure before deciding whether he'll sign it into law. Edgar has said he favors parental notification in abortion cases but has not had to act on such a bill.

In other legislative action Tuesday:

AIDS

Persons convicted of patronizing juvenile prostitutes could be forced to undergo AIDS tests under legislation (S1615) headed back to the Senate for a final vote. The measure would also allow prosecutors and judges to release test results if they were relevant to charges filed against the prostitute.

Gun control

House members will consider Senate amendments to a bill (H2694) that creates the new offense of "aggravated discharge of a firearm." The measure makes it a felony to fire guns at buildings or vehicles when the shooter knows people are inside.

The House will also give final consideration to a so-called "triggerlock" bill that requires gun owners to keep loaded firearms away from small children or face criminal penalties.

Baby selling

Adoptive parents might find it harder to encourage pregnant women to give up their babies under a bill awaiting a final vote in the House. The measure (H4168) would require a judge's approval before adoptive parents could pay biological parents' living expenses. It would also mandate criminal background checks for adoptive parents.

Domestic violence

Boyfriends, girlfriends and fiancés would have the same domestic violence protection as spouses under legislation (S400) approved in the House. The Senate must approve House amendments to the bill, which also orders an accused abuser to pay a violence victim's living costs if the abuse forces the victim out of his or her home.

A concurrence vote is scheduled in the House on a proposal to allow crime victims to sue their attackers in civil court.

Sequel shatters industry records

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The Capet Crusader burst onto movie screens throughout the country, shattering industry records with $47.7 million in ticket sales at 2,644 theaters over the Friday-through-Sunday weekend.

Warner Bros. "Batman Returns" had Bat fans lined up in the streets to buy tickets to the sequel of the 1989 mega-hit "Batman."

The opening weekend figures gave Warner the distinction of having the three biggest three-day opening weekends in film history.

The No. 2 position is held by "Batman," which grossed $43 million its first weekend, and last month's "Lethal Weapon 3," which opened with $33 million, said D. Barry Reardon, president of domestic theatrical distribution.

Seats were sold out at many theaters for opening day of "Batman Returns," including Mann's Chinese Theater in Hollywood, where the film, starring Michael Keaton, Michelle Pfeiffer and Danny DeVito, had its world premiere Wednesday.

Expectations for "Batman Returns" were high among studio executives, who withheld releases of competing films in anticipation of its blockbuster opening.

Meanwhile, Disney's nun comedy "Sister Act" maintained its firm hold on the No. 2 spot, earning $7.76 million over the weekend.

The film starts its fourth week with a cumulative gross of $55.3 million.

Paramount's "Patriot Games," a political thriller that topped the list last week, slid to third place, earning $7.72 million over the three days at 2,396 screens.

It took in $11.2 million on the weekend of June 12-14.

The film, now in its third week, has grossed a total of $49.1 million and is expected to continue making a strong stand in the line-up because it is the only adult-oriented film in the marketplace.

Steve Martin's zany comedy "Housesitter" finished fourth, grossing $7 million at 1,764 screens. The Universal film, which also stars Goldie Hawn, has taken in a total of $20.5 million in three weeks.

Warner's other summer smash, "Lethal Weapon 3," ranked No. 5 in the weekend listing with an estimated $4.7 million.

The film lost approximately 200 screens to Batmania, but is proving its box office muscle with an estimated cumulative gross of $122 million.

Universal's "Far and Away," the Tom Cruise drama about an Irish immigrant, moved from fifth to sixth, earning $3 million at 1,746 screens.

In seventh position was Disney's low-budget comedy, "Encino Man," which plunged in weekend earnings from $2.9 million last week to $1.6 million over the weekend.

"Alien 3," 20th Century Fox's big-budget sequel, slipped in at No. 8 with $1.5 million in ticket sales after the film dropped off 475 screens.

Non-surgical method helps to reduce nearsightedness

MONTREAL (UPI) — A non-surgical way to reduce nearsightedness and eliminate the need to wear glasses or contact lenses at least some of the time looks promising, according to optometric researchers at Indiana University.

The procedure, called orthokeratology (Ortho-K), involves using a series of contact lenses to change the cornea, the eye's clear front surface, says Sarita Soni, O.D., professor of optometry at IU.

Soni spoke on the benefits of and research on Ortho-K during the annual meeting of the 29,000-member American Optometric Association in Montreal.

Optometrists developed Ortho-K during the 1960s using lenses similar to standard hard contact lenses. Studies from that time found that nearsightedness could be safely and significantly modified over six to 12 months.

However, the standard lenses sometimes also induced the refractive error astigmatism because they tended to move away from the center of the cornea, Soni says.

The rigid gas permeable lenses Soni and colleague Douglas Horner, O.D., use today allow a reservoir of tears to build in the eye, keeping it more moist and comfortable than the standard lenses. They also center better on the cornea, flattening it without inducing astigmatism, Soni says.

Radial-K attempts the same results through surgery.

But when comparing corneas treated by both methods, Soni says she and her colleagues found the Ortho-K cornea displayed fewer irregularities and much crisper vision.

Soni and Horner have been working with these newer lenses for two years in clinical investigations.

"We see small changes in the cornea within an hour and considerable changes within four hours," Soni says.

"After those first four hours of lens wear, we often find that we need to switch to even flatter lenses. The patient is re-examined after two days and lenses are changed again if necessary."

"We follow these patients frequently in the early stages of adaptation and may change as many as four sets of lenses in the first month. It appears to us that the majority of change occurs within the first four weeks."

Some patients have seen a notable reduction in their nearsightedness.

"For example, one patient went from 20/200 to 20/40 in both eyes after three weeks of lens wear.

Wimbledon good remedy for Becker's game — coach

Wimbledon Notes

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Wimbledon may be the best remedy for Boris Becker's struggling game, according to his coach.

Becker has struggled at times this year but appears ready to make a run at his fourth Wimbledon title. "Boris comes to life at Wimbledon," says Ion Tiriac, Becker's coach. "And if he can get through the first week he will be a real threat. This is the one event that really sparks him off."

"He's had a few injuries this year but now he's fit he can go all the way again."

Becker reached the coveted No. 1 spot in the world rankings last year but has since slipped to No. 5. Recently he fired his coach, Tomas Smid, and has grown a reddish beard.

Becker, 24, was only 17 when he became Wimbledon's youngest champion in 1985. He has been in six of the 11 seven Wimbledon finals, winning three times.

He opened these championships with a 7-5, 6-3, 7-5 first-round victory over big-serving Italian Omar Camporese.

TICKET SCALPERS are coming under a two-pronged attack to force them away from Wimbledon.

The All England Club has vowed to treat the scalpers as trespassers if they try to trade from private parking lots near the ground while police have threatened to charge them with "trading without a licence" if they move out on to the streets.

Chief Inspector Des Wyke, in charge of policing Wimbledon, said the scalpers would receive only one warning before being issued a summons.

DEFENDING CHAMPION Michael Stich had his serve

McEnroe still poses threat after 15 years of hard tennis

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — His great days are behind him, and his hair is now tightly cropped and flecked with grey, the wild curly mop of his youth long gone. But make no mistake: John McEnroe is still capable of stirring tennis.

McEnroe, 33, who first appeared at Wimbledon 15 years ago and reached the semifinals as an unseeded 18-year-old, made a successful start to his 14th Wimbledon. Tuesday — a 5-7, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3 victory over Brazil's Luiz Mattar.

By his own admission, McEnroe is no longer a serious threat for the title he won three times in four years during the 1980s.

Still, he was far too sharp for Mattar, out-served and out-witted by the New Yorker.

Moreover, the man who was fined $7,500 at Wimbledon last year and has a long history of on-court tantrums, behaved impeccably during his 2-hour, 21-minute match.

"I don't feel like a legitimate title contender anymore," McEnroe said afterward, "but you can't discount me totally."

If two or three guys break their legs or get hit by lightning or something, then I could be in with a chance.

"In the dark corners of my mind there is a little person telling me I still have a chance, but although I feel I have been playing well this year, I am not playing consistently well to win the tournaments."

But in an age when power serves dominate and rallies have almost become a museum exhibit, McEnroe displayed many of the deft touches and running passes that typified his game when he battled the likes of Bjorn Borg and Jimmy Connors.

But it was Mattar, a clay-court player ranked 76th in the world and never to have gotten beyond round two at Wimbledon, who began the stronger player.

clocked by radar at 130 miles per hour, the fastest serve so far during the championships. Omar Camporese and Patrick Kuhnert each recorded serves of 124 mph, followed by Boris Becker and Ivan Lendl, both timed at 123 mph. Stefano Pescosolido was next at 117 mph.

Stich's serve equalled Marc Rosset's serve as the second fastest of 1992. Richard Krajicek was recorded at 132 mph at Indian Wells.

DAN MASKELL has seen 62 Wimbledons. And as far as the "Voice of British Tennis" is concerned, Rod Laver and Martina Navratilova are the tournament's greatest champions.

"Rod was a great man as well as being a great champion," said Maskell. "And I think that Martina, at her peak, was, without question, the greatest woman player of all time."

Maskell, 84, said champions should be a credit to the game both on and off the court.

Laver won the Grand Slam in 1962 and 1969, the only man in history to win all four events twice.

Navratilova, who is appearing in her 20th Wimbledon, has won the women's singles title a record nine times.

Paths offer joggers view, different lengths of routes

SIUC offers runners many diverse routes of different lengths.

Two of the more popular trails circle Campus Lake. These trails are 2.1 miles and 3.9 miles respectively.

Another route, for the beginning runner, is shorter, totaling 1/4 of a mile. This route runs northeast of the Student Recreation Center.

Running clubs open to the community include the SIUC Roadrunners Club, the Lakeside Club and the Sunset Joggers.

Some precautions runners should take are:

- jog in pairs or groups
- wear bright, reflective clothing
- jog in single file toward oncoming-traffic
- jog in areas of light traffic

U.S. vows peaceful World Cup in '94

GOTHENBURG, Sweden (UPI) — Organizers for the 1994 World Cup, getting a first-hand look at fan violence, say they can run a peaceful tournament when soccer's premier event comes to the United States in two years.

The organizing group, World Cup USA 1994, is attending the European Championships to examine all security arrangements entailed in staging a major soccer tournament.

"When that task force returns from Sweden to the United States we will consult to make sure this great event is not marred by unsavory incidents," Alan Rothenberg, president of the organizers, said at a news conference Tuesday. "I don't think that any misbehavior of any kind would be tolerated. I think (the American fans) will trust our security measures and flock to the games."

There have been fears that excessive reports of soccer violence would hinder the organizers' efforts to make the game attractive to an American audience. But Rothenberg said he was confident the Americans' ability to be "tough on law and order" would be sufficient to cope with any problems.

Most of the trouble at the European Championships has occurred away from the stadiums in the cities holding the games.

English, German and Swedish fans were involved in the three worst incidents.

Nine U.S. cities will serve as hosts in 1994. Announcement of which games will be played in which cities will come June 29 in Zurich, Switzerland.

FIFA spokesman Guido Tognoni said the soccer's governing body was satisfied with the preparations for 1994.

"I think the skepticism of the media is decreasing ... and I am betting with you that all 52 games will be sold out," he said.

The United States qualified for the 1990 World Cup in Italy, its first World Cup appearance since 1950.

Based on his sailing experiences, Hicks said, "You'll never learn how to sail and have access to this many boats for such a low cost," Hicks said.

Hicks said club members usually sail on the weekends, but some sailors go out during the week.

"The season is longer down here. We can normally sail until Thanksgiving," Hicks said.

The cost to join the club is $25 for the summer and $25 again in the fall.

The Sailing Club, which has been in existence since 1966, offered free sailing lessons last weekend as a part of a membership drive.

The lessons will again be offered Saturday and Sunday from 12 to 4 p.m. at Crab Orchard Lake next to the Playport Marina.

Lynn Bosek, club treasurer, said once you pass a written and practical exam you become a skipper and can sail any of the club's 12 boats.

"It takes some people a week and others the whole semester to become a skipper, but once you do it's a really good deal," Bosek said.

Colette Gallagher, a sophomore from Dublin, Ireland, said she tries to go out as often as possible.

"I make it out about once a week," Gallagher said. "It's great to relax and get away from everything and go sailing."

The cost and maintenance for the club's boats comes directly from the $25 membership fee.

The club also offers windsurfing instruction on one of four windsurfers.

Bosek said the immediate hands-on experience is a great incentive to learn how to sail on your own.

"Once you start you'll get hooked," Bosek said.
