SIUC to assist South African media

Changing the system: University to help new government alter rules for press, broadcasting

By Rebecca Hutchings Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC is helping the Independent Broadcasting Authority of South Africa develop from a national broadcaster controlled by the government into several commercial and non-commercial broadcasters on a local and regional level.

In South Africa's recent past the government controlled what went on the airways, limiting South Africans' knowledge on controversial issues, according to Larry Schwartz, the South Africa desk officer for the United States Information Agency in Washington, D.C.

Schwartz said the new government in South Africa wants to make sure South Africans are kept aware of what is going on and are able to get involved in the media.

"Now we're hoping that the IBA will promote opportunities of freedom of speech and freedom of the press by opening up the airwaves," Schwartz said. "It's called democracy of the dial."

Inability to localize issues limited the South Africa Broadcasting Corporation (SABC) in its cultural and ethnic diversity, according to Joe Foote, dean of the College of Mass Communications and Media Arts.

Foote said localization of the broadcasting system will give native South Africans improved access to the media, bringing greater cultural diversity to the new democracy.

South Africa expanded the SABC by adding the IBA, which was patterned after America's Federal Communications Commission (FCC). Now South Africa is deciding how far to take the change, determining the limitations of broadcasting.

Michael Starr, chairman of the radio and television department, said SIUC, along with law firms, public interest groups and private communications, will be helping South Africa make these decisions by exposing them to American experiences.

"We're going to educate them [IBA] about the American system and how it works," Starr said.

Structure of lake project may change

By Alan Schnepf Daily Egyptian Reporter

The management of Lake Kinkaid, site of a controversial proposed resort and housing development, may see a change in its structure if a bill on the desk of Gov. Jim Edgar is signed.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin, and Rep. Mike Bost R-Murphysboro, increases the Kinkaid-Reed's Creek Conservancy District board membership from five to seven members. The bill has passed the Illinois House and Senate, and only needs the governor's signature to become law.

Bost said the bill requires the board to be politically balanced. No party can have more than four members on the board.

The bill was drafted following several local demonstrations against the proposed development at Lake Kinkaid, which local environmental groups said would damage surrounding ecosystems.

The board voted to dismiss Bob Chapman, the board's manager, and James Lawder, the board's attorney, at a meeting June 8. Chapman was also fired from his position as the water plant manager. The dismissals were effective immediately.

The physical plant construction workers celebrated having no injuries upon the completion of the new steam plant's foundation with the planting of a cedar tree on top of the structure.

Up on the roof: Tree tops off safe project

By Kristi Delaney Daily Egyptian Reporter

A beautiful tree stands atop a structure, symbolizing the end of the SIUC flag — and a new chapter in the history of the university.

Brad Dillard, manager of the physical plant, said the tree is a symbol of the university's commitment to environmental stewardship and safety.

"It's not just about the tree," Dillard said. "It's about the safety of the workers and the community. We want to ensure that every project we undertake is done with the highest standards of safety."

The SIUC Physical Plant and the Local Union 32 held a ceremony to mark the completion of the "topping-out" ceremony, which marks the safe work on the new steam plant.

The Illinois Capital Development Board was also in attendance. Dillard said that the ceremony site, members of the Physical Plant and the ICDB personally signed a white steel beam, hoisted the beam into position and placed the seven-foot cedar tree and flags on top.

The tree stands on the new addition of the Steam Plant and is positioned toward Highway 51 North, next to McAndrew Stadium.

Richard Pengress, job steward for Local 782, said the ironworkers' tradition of "topping out" has been around for about a century.

Pengress said being on jobs where no one has been hurt leaves him with a sense of pride in his work.

"This has been a real good job. It's safe, no injuries and

Chechen terrorists release 139 hostages

Los Angeles Times

MOSCOW—Chechen gunmen released the last captives of their odyssey of terror late Tuesday after piloting the 139 Russian-held territory to a mountain stronghold of their flagging rebellion.

The harrowing ordeal ended for the captives on a darkened road near the village of Zandak, where the Chechens reportedly asked forgiveness from the hostages they had taken back to their war-ravaged homeland as protection against Russian retaliation along the way.

Guerrilla leader Shamil Basayev, who masterminded the killing spree that left about 100 dead in the southern Russian town of Budennovsk, was given a hero's welcome upon arrival in Zandak, reporter Alexei Samoletov told state-run Russian Television in its final Tuesday night broadcast.

The released captives left in the same buses that brought them to Zandak for neighboring Dagestan, where they were taken to the village of Novolaksyoye for food and rest. Samoletov reported. "That is what they need most of all now, as some of them haven't had any food for five days," Samoletov, who was among the hostages, told the Moscow anchorman by phone.

He said Basayev "was greeted by the local people like a national hero. They hugged and kissed him and shouted 'Long live Allah!'"

"When Basayev came up to the journalists and asked them to forgive him, they said: 'God will forgive you. As for us, we wish never to see you again,'" the young journalist reported breathlessly from the scene.

Basayev ordered the ragged convoy of seven buses through cordons of Russian soldiers and armor despite refusal of the Russian military commander in the region to endorse assurances by Prime Minister Viktor S. Chernomyrdin that the captors and hostages would be granted safe passage.

Military defiance notwithstanding, Russian and Chechen negotiators agreed at internationally mediated peace talks in the devastated city of Grozny to extend a temporary cease-fire through Friday. But the talks were otherwise overshadowed by the drama surrounding the hostage convoy.

The deadly terrorist act that has shaken Russia from the presidency on down came to a chaotic conclusion after nightfall, when Basayev and the 72 surviving Chechen fighters who took the rebel cause to the Russian heartland reached the relative safety of what is left of their separatist republic.

It was not immediately clear whether Russian forces that stalked the bus convoy throughout its more than 24-hour journey from Budennovsk allowed the hostage-takers to escape unfettered or if they unleashed a threatened fresh offensive to punish them for the campaign of terror that has shattered what little sense of security remained for the troubled people of Russia.

The commander of Russian forces in Chechnya, Gen. Anatoly S. Kulikov, had refused to say he would honor Chernomyrdin's order that the hostage caravan be allowed to proceed to a rebel haven without hindrance—a concession granted in

SNIPERS MAKE BOSNIAN TRAVEL DANGEROUS —
SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina—The driver accelerated each time Serbian snipers fired on our armored car as we careened down Mount Igman, the only route into besieged Sarajevo, the capital of chaos and Bosnia. Bouncing past the burned-out and rusted shells of vehicles that hadn't made it, we maneuvered the curves and banks of the goat trail that passes for a road. Then, at its foot, on the southwest edge of the capital, we dashed to the relative safety of government-held territory. Getting in and out of Sarajevo has been complicated and usually dangerous ever since Serbian separatists surrounded and isolated the city in April, 1992.

JAPAN DEALS WITH MENTAL ASPECTS OF QUAKE —
KOBE, Japan—In the aftermath of January's devastating quake, Shigeo Tatsuki wondered whether Western trauma counseling would work in a society where emotions and pain tend to be repressed and psychological treatment itself is still shunned. But when an Israeli trauma psychologist took him and others through a drawing exercise during a recent seminar on healing techniques, Tatsuki found himself in tears as he sketched his own desire for hope in a picture of a blue sky peeking through a thorny rose bush.

HAITIANS DEMAND JOBS AT POLITICAL RALLY —
PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti—Evans Paul, the mayor of this capital and one of its most popular figures, fired "em up at a rally of 200 supporters last week. He told jokes—and they laughed. He chanted—and they joined in. But when he was done and tried to leave, some of the crowd ran up, waved their voter registration cards to remind him of their power and demanded jobs and money. Paul's security detail had to whisk the mayor away, chased by two dozen pleading men and women who pursued him almost to his private office. Guards had to push the supplicants away.

CLINTON CAMP SILENTLY KICKS OFF CAMPAIGN —
WASHINGTON—White House press secretary Michael McCurry was telling reporters with almost a straight face that President Clinton was not in his campaign mode yet. But down the street at the Madison Hotel on Monday, a lot of key White House players were in the mode, winning and dining 200 out-of-town Democrats who will form the Clinton-Gore finance committee. The money-raising half of the campaign is publicly kicking off big time this week, with Monday night's meeting of the finance group at the Madison and a reception for them at the White House earlier in the day.

CHANGING PENSION RULES MAY HIT WORKERS —
WASHINGTON—Nail-biting season is here for federal workers. Many say they will retire this year if Congress changes pension rules effective in 1996. Others say changing retirement rules could force them to work several years longer than they planned to get the annuities they are promised under current law. House Republicans want to raise employee contributions to the retirement plan by 2.5 percent of salary and reduce benefits by basing them on a worker's highest five-year average salary, instead of the high-three system. The retirement threat has produced a go-now-or-work-longer dilemma for tens of thousands of retirement-age feds.

CLINTON TRADE IDEALS COULD SEE PROBLEMS —
WASHINGTON—If Japanese automakers come forward soon with a proposal to boost their purchases of American-made auto parts in hopes of defusing U.S.-Japanese trade tensions, President Clinton may face a dilemma. At issue: how firmly to apply his oft-stated doctrine that the only meaningful trade agreements with Japan are ones that can be specifically measured and enforced. If Clinton shows more flexibility, he increases the likelihood that U.S. and Japanese negotiators—who are scheduled to resume auto talks Thursday in Geneva—can finally settle their two-year feud over access to Japan's autos and auto parts market.

Police plan extra force at annual auto show

By Arey Jane Atherton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Illinois State Police will bring extra state troopers into the area this weekend to keep the action from getting out of hand at the 1995 Street Machine Nationals in DuQuoin.

State Trooper Roger Webb estimated that over 100,000 people attended last year's Street Machine Nationals and thinks a similar crowd will gather around the event this year.

"There will be lots of officers and lots of people," Webb said.

Webb said extra troopers will be brought into the Du Quoin area to help traffic flow smoothly and to provide security around the perimeter of the fairgrounds.

Webb said there were 36 accidents and 294 traffic citations during the three-day Street Machine Nationals last year, and most problems with fair-goers occurred outside the fairgrounds.

Although alcohol was sold inside the fairgrounds last year, Webb said more problems were caused by people drinking alcohol outside fairgrounds than by those at the event. There were 15 people arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol last year during the Nationals.

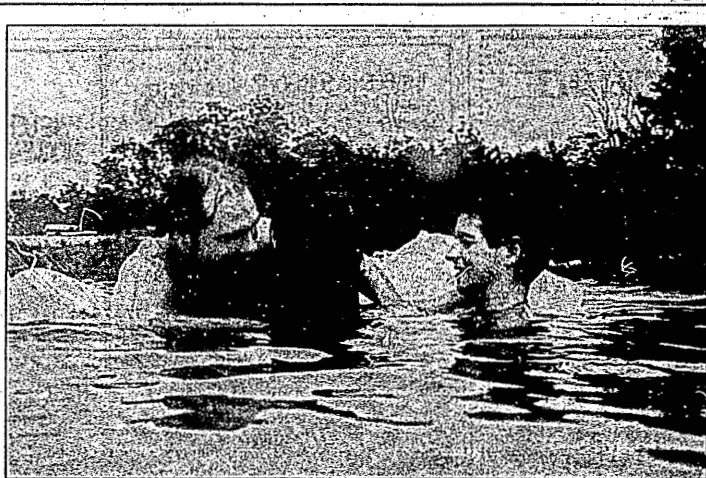

Webb said while the Illinois State Police have and will be conducting roadside safety checks throughout June, he did not think they would be conducting roadside safety checks during the Street Machine Nationals due to a shortage of officers.

"It would surprise me if they did them (roadside safety checks) during the Street Machines," Webb said.

Carbondale Community Resource Officer Don Priddy said extra Carbondale officers also will be on duty this weekend for foot patrol around East Main Street.

Priddy said officers will be watching for reckless drivers and underage drinkers, and they will provide crowd control if needed.

He said people are allowed to drink alcoholic beverages as long as they are on private property, but people should remember that drinking on public property is illegal.

Historic hall getting new roof, keeping old shingles

By Christi C. Harber
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Anthony Hall, originally built as a female dormitory and converted in the early sixties to an administration office, is getting a new roof while keeping its old shingles.

Allen Haake, university architect, said the Illinois State Legislature classifies any building over 40 years old as a historic site, requiring original materials to be reused as much as possible.

"We want to replace the waterproof membrane that goes on beneath the clay tile shingles," Haake said. "It has been on the building for 82 years so it is old and brittle."

Biological Sciences Building off to good start

By William C. Phillips III
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The new Biological Sciences Building, connected to Life Science II, is operational this semester, and faculty, staff and students are adjusting to a new environment with only a few mishaps.

The building, completed Spring 1995, houses labs for microbiology, zoology, plant biology, vivarium, anatomy and physiology.

Maureen Doran, supervisor of the building's histology center, said the new facility is bigger and better designed — the new equipment allows faculty and students to do work faster and more efficiently than before — but it will take a little while to adjust and adapt to the new building.

"Usually we process tissue, and even the smallest biopsies would take overnight," she said. "Now, with our new equipment, we can do it in about two hours."

Doran said the diagnostics used to take about three hours, but now they can be done in about 40 minutes.

Neil Billington, a professor in zoology, said the new facility allowed him to get organized.

"We now have room enough to set the rooms up any way we want to," Billington said.

But Billington said the building gave the faculty members and others some problems when they first moved in.

"At first we had trouble with the air conditioning, and some of the equipment needed rewiring," he said.

Rex Strange, a graduate student from Evansville, said he believes the new building is better than the older building because the labs are better equipped for research.

"The labs in the older building were set up for basic research and teaching but not for genetic research," Strange said.

However, Strange said he believes a lot of money was wasted and the building has a few redundancies.

Strange said there are too many dark rooms on each floor and there are a large number of gel rig boxes in the building that no one is using.

"There are a lot of places where I see a lot of money wasted and things purchased that were not needed," he said. "If they would have actually looked at how the labs were stocked prior to buying the new equipment, they could have saved money for things we really need."

Bred Statham, a graduate student in physiology from Galesburg, said the expanded facilities provide an atmosphere that allows students and faculty to be more productive in research.

"The older building was cramped and did not provide us with a proper research facility," he said. "We can actually use more of the equipment instead of having it sitting around."

The new building also has better safety equipment, Statham said.

"The safety equipment is more modern and a lot more money has been spent on the protection of both the researcher and animal," he said.

Rhette Michelson, a graduate student in physiology from Utah, said the new building has better computer facilities.

"In almost every lab they have an outlet for a computer which is hooked up to the University's mainframe," he said.

Michelson said while moving in, he noticed the building had a lot of defects.

"There were a lot of unexpected power outages that destroyed some of my precious samples," he said.

Michael J. Desist — The Daily Egyptian

The new Biological Sciences Building, located across from the Communications Building next to the Life Science II Building, is now available for use after being completed in the Spring of 1995.

Congress moving to give speed limiting back to the states

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—Plans to repeal the 55 mph national speed limit for cars and light trucks cleared a major hurdle in the Senate on Tuesday as lawmakers moved to abolish the federal limits, imposed during the energy crises two decades ago, and return that power to the states.

Republican-led efforts to repeal the federal limits are part of a bill now making its way through the Senate. On a 65-35 vote Tuesday, the Senate rejected an attempt to restore the federal limits to the legislation.

The Senate, however, narrowly defeated a GOP proposal to grant states a free rein in deciding whether to require the use of seatbelts and motorcycle helmets. The Senate also narrowly voted to continue the existing federal limit for large trucks and buses.

Arguing for ending the speed limits for cars and light trucks, Sen. Lauch Faircloth, R-N.C., said it was "simple common sense" to turn the matter over to states. The 1974 speed limit law was "the worst example of the 'Washington knows best' mind-set and a federal intrusion that must end," he said.

Opponents warned that repealing the speed limit would lead to more traffic injuries and fatalities.

"We know what the results are going to be" if the law is repealed, said Sen. Mike DeWine, R-Ohio. "More people will die on our highways," DeWine joined Sens. Frank R. Lautenberg, D-N.J., and Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., in the effort to restore federal speed limits to the legislation.

Transportation Secretary Federico Pena said he was disappointed by the Senate vote, saying that "repeal of the national maximum speed limit would result in nearly 5,000 lives lost every year."

Pena said speed-related crashes cost the U.S. economy $24 billion each year, including $2 billion in

"More people will die on our highways."

Sen. Mike DeWine
R-Ohio

health costs.

The debate over speed limits, seatbelts and helmets occurred during Senate consideration of the National Highway System bill, which would provide $13 billion over two years to improve 160,000 miles of heavily used roads across the United States.

Final Senate passage of the legislation could come as early as Wednesday, although the Senate is scheduled to interrupt the debate to take up the controversial nomination of Dr. Henry W. Foster Jr. as U.S. surgeon general. The House has not taken up the highway bill.

Current federal law dictates a 55 mph speed limit on most interstates, and up to 65 mph in rural areas. States that do not comply are denied certain federal highway maintenance and construction funds.

The Senate voted 51-49 to keep the 55/65 speed limit for large freight-hauling trucks that weigh more than 26,000 pounds and for commercial buses that carry more than 16 passengers.

Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., who pressed to continue the speed limit for trucks, said he realized on a recent trip home that "we were doing the wrong thing by lifting the speed limit for all vehicles." Trucks go fast trying to meet deadlines carrying huge loads, he said, and "by slowing these trucks down we're going to have less fatalities."

The Senate killed, by a 52-45 vote, a proposed amendment by Sen. Robert C. Smith, R-N.H., to stop the federal government from denying highway construction and maintenance funds to states that do not require the use of seatbelts and helmets. Smith called the policy "fiscal blackmail."

He argued that the denial of construction and maintenance funds could actually cost lives by perpetuating unsafe road conditions.

Sen. Ben Nighthorse Campbell, R-Colo., an avid motorcyclist, belittled the seatbelts and helmets requirements. Campbell suggested, apparently in jest, that an extension of such a policy might lead Washington to mandate the use of suntan lotion to protect against cancer-causing ultraviolet rays.

Congress enacted the national speed limits law after the 1973 energy crisis. But critics say the statute has become archaic because cars today are more fuel-efficient and safer, because of airbags, anti-lock brakes and anti-drunk driving laws.

USG trip to probe USSA warranted

USG PRESIDENT DUANE SHERMAN IS GOING to Washington, D.C. to help determine if he should support SIUC students shelling out roughly $18,000 a year to join USSA, a student lobbying group based in the nation's capital. USG Vice President Kim Clemens will also be going and the combined cost of their trip will be roughly $700 to $1,000, to be paid with USG funds.

THE MONEY NEEDED FOR THE TWO TOP USG officers is not a waste of student activity fees and the trip is necessary. Sherman is being cautious before committing the students to USSA, an organization that the previous USG administration had committed itself to and one which may or may not be effective. When the issue of whether to join was put before the students in the last USG elections, they voted to raise student activity fees to join USSA. Even with that vote, Sherman wants to be sure it is the right thing to do, and we support his cautionary efforts. After all, what was known about USSA at that time?

Two USSA officers came to Carbondale late last fall to help USG gear up for the city elections. They claimed to be a group that has a legislative impact on college students across the nation. Sherman's predecessors believed and wanted to join. But this trip shows that Sherman is not going to sit back and accept his predecessors' decisions. As one of his first actions as the new USG president, it is a good sign. It shows he is looking out for the students and their money. It shows a desire to make an informed decision. It shows a skepticism toward big promises. It shows he wants to make up his own mind.

SIUC STUDENTS HAVE BEEN BURNED BEFORE by student lobbying groups and their promises. Fees were collected from students for membership in the Illinois Student Association, a lobbying group in Springfield. Then it ceased to exist. Sherman can make sure this does not happen again. He can see firsthand the USSA facilities and offices. He can speak with members of Congress directly responsible for educational funding needs. He can find out exactly what kind of influence USSA has. But he should talk to USSA's current members, too. They could give him more insight about USSA's effectiveness than all the members of Congress combined.

THE PRICE OF SHERMAN'S TRIP IS PEANUTS compared to the cost of membership in an impotent group that doesn't live up to its claims. USSA is asking for money that could over the next five years total nearly $100,000. If USSA turns out to be as effective as they have claimed, then the trip cost would be a small addition to a well deserved membership fee.

Assistant Vice President for Student Affairs Jean Paratore, who will be approving all of Sherman's expenditures, also feels the price to avoid a possible disaster is small and she encourages Sherman to find out more about USSA.

Sherman has the opportunity to make a difference with this trip and show that he is a strong student leader. We will be waiting for his report. A lot of money is riding on it.

Lame excuses do not justify distractions

I realize the DE has an interest in fairly presenting different sides of an issue, but was it necessary to print the sophomoric, defensive (not to mention BORING) whining of one Misty Biskner regarding the "two minute shuffle?" Miss Biskner, you have no case.

If you carry with you to class so many belongings that you are cramped for time to manage them, and unable to avoid making an auditory public nuisance of yourself to the professor as well as your fellow students, that is no one's fault but your own.

Aren't there enough people making lame excuses for themselves around here, that you have to join in? How big a production do you need to attend class anyway? I get by with a notebook and a pen. I suppose you're also one of those people who needs 3 or 4 seats in the room to pitch your encampment. Have you ever thought of downsizing your roadshow?

Don't get me wrong, you should leave class when you need to. But all the excess noise and show that students like yourself put on in these situations is correctly perceived by Mister Walker as a passive assault on the classroom environment in which there are people trying to learn (imagine that). Who cares about the professor, it's your fellow classmates that you are being rude to — and we don't appreciate it.

If you had addressed the issue of professors who inconsiderately go on with their lecture after the end of the hour because they have failed to organize their presentation, you would have had a point. But that wasn't what Mister Walker was talking about, and I think he was quite charitable to suggest that types such as yourself wait to stage their antics until two minutes before classes end — the "five" or even "ten-minute shuffle" would have been as true to some of what I've seen.

Rant on as you will about how "full of intolerance" the rather well considered editorial was, and show us all what you are full of. You say you'll appreciate a little understanding, so just pipe back up if this is not enough and you need more. Students who cannot comport themselves without disrupting class, all the while protesting that it's not their fault, are a disgrace to this campus. I encourage concerned students to assert themselves. Don't just quietly look annoyed at the Misty's on campus as they go into their tiresome routine. Speak up so everyone can hear, and ask them to please knock off the noise.

As for you Ms. Biskner, if time is such a problem, get a bicycle to get across campus if you need to, like everyone else with half a brain and a normal size mouth would. That is all.

Media has no influence in Simpson trial

By Kevin Phillips
Special to the L.A. Times

It's easy to blame TV for the painfully long O.J. Simpson trial. Why not? It's an easy target. TV bashing is popular among politicians looking for votes, popular among pundits who criticize the proceedings while no doubt wishing they were a part of them, even popular among the public, which says TV coverage of the Simpson case is excessive while secretly watching every minute of it.

But to argue that the TV camera in the courtroom is the cause of the trial's length and expense is absurd. Los Angeles County Supervisor Mike Antonovich, seconded by Supervisor Zev Yaroslavsky, argues that because the trial is being broadcast, the attorneys and the judge all make long and repetitive arguments and speeches in the hope that everyone will see how brilliant, fair and hard-working they are. Consequently, an issue that should be dealt with in a day takes a week, one argument turns into four, and the bills the county pays for court services, juror sequestration, security and so on keep adding up. So, if there is a second trial, the TV camera must be banned to keep things moving along.

Did we miss the board meeting when the supervisors voted that the goal of all trials was not the pursuit of justice but to spend as little as possible while moving as fast as possible?

The fallacy in the anti-TV rhetoric lies in the belief that the attorneys, judges and witnesses perform, if you will, because of the camera's presence. It's my view that they perform in spite of the TV camera, not because of it. These are high stakes.

The supervisors' misguided attack on TV ignores the real reasons this has turned from a trial into a marathon. For example:

Simpson has the money to pay for a "dream team" and other experts; does anyone think that these people would cut corners if the camera wasn't there? Perhaps the supervisors should make a rule that in future trials, each defendant is only allowed one attorney.

Is it TV's fault that the district attorney has assigned a platoon-size group of prosecutors, each of them with a particular area of expertise? Perhaps the supervisors want to tell the D.A. that in the future, they'll pay for only one prosecutor per trial; if he wants more, he'll have to guarantee a win.

The red and white buses carrying the last hostages and their fleeing captors were flanked by Russian armor and buzzed by helicopter gunships throughout the oft-stalled sojourn to Zankad.

The convoy had idled most of the second day of the circuitous journey from Budennovsk in the town of Khasav-Yurt, in Dagestan, after Basayev scouts warned him there might be an ambush ahead.

Basayev demanded fresh assurances from Kulikov that Russian forces would refrain from attacking the convoy but was refused.

Kulikov was quoted by the Itar-Tass news agency as saying he "obeys orders only from his superiors."

His refusal to reiterate Chernomyrdin's promise likely reflected the distaste felt by top officials of the "power ministries" responsible for the army, police and security forces for the government's decision to concede to peace talks with the fighters loyal to Chechen rebel leader Dzhokhar M. Dudayev.

Defense Minister Pavel S. Grachev had vowed to crush the Chechen militants once the hostages were freed, and the back seat President Boris N. Yeltsin has taken to Chernomyrdin in the crisis suggested he, too, might have preferred a resort to brute force to resolve the stand-off.

British press campaigns to unseat Prime Minister

The Baltimore Sun

LONDON—British Prime Minister John Major is in a whole lot of political trouble.

Says who?

Britain's newspapers.

Sunday's News of the World editorialized: "He's finished."

The Sunday Telegraph quoted a "senior ministerial source," that Major is "probably on the slide."

Things are so bleak for Major, on the run for his views on Europe, that bookmakers are taking bets on a possible successor.

In a country without political primaries, this is how the campaign to unseat a ruling Prime Minister begins. Unlike in America, British newspapers are clearly aligned with the political parties. When the normally Conservative newspapers start trumpeting a brawl for the Tory leadership, in power for 16 years, then it's often time to start calling in the moving vans at No. 10 Downing St.

In 1990, it was Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher who was ousted by the Conservatives. The beneficiary of the intraparty fight was Major, who went on to win the 1992 election.

Technically, Major can't be voted out by the Conservative members of Parliament until November. Of course, he could step aside at any time.

Board member Ed Bottom, who voted for the dismissals, said the decision reflects the changing viewpoint of the board.

"I believe the thinking of the board has changed," Bottom said.

The change was a result of increased awareness in the board's constituency, Bottom said. He added that activist groups like Friends of Kinkaid Lake were partly responsible for the increased awareness of the residents.

Lou Strack, spokesperson for Friends of Kinkaid Lake, said the group was indifferent to the dismissals.

Holly Harris, a senior in plant biology, and a member of Friends of Kinkaid Lake, said the group often disagreed with Chapman.

Bottom also said he wanted someone "more professional" than Chapman as the board's manager.

Ken Carr, who also voted for the dismissals, said the board needed to be more responsible to its constituents.

"The public lost trust in what the board was doing," Carr said.

Board member Mike Barone voted against the dismissal of Chapman and said it was unfair.

"He didn't get a chance to reply to the charges against him," Barone said. "I believe in innocent until proven guilty."

Bill Gauch, who voted against both dismissals, would not comment.

Bottom said the board appointed Anna Mae DeRossett as manager until a permanent replacement is chosen. Ed Heller was named the board's attorney and David Greathouse is the interim water plant manager, Bottom said.

The search for a new manager is already underway, but a replacement is not expected soon. Carr said the board is looking for a good replacement rather than a quick fix.

"We're in no hurry," Carr said.

Bottom said the new manager must have a bachelor's degree in conservation, water management or government administration. The position requires at least five years of administration experience. He added that he has spoken with two applicants that he believes fit the criteria.

Bottom said he supports the bill and thinks Gov. Edgar will sign it.

"We feel it will add balance to the board," he said.

He said having more board members will make the board more accessible to constituents.

Barone said he does not think expansion will help the board.

"I think politics has a lot to do with it," he said.

If it passes, the law will be effective on January 1.

Plant

it's on time," he said.

Terry Haas, general superintendent for P. K. DeMars Construction Management, said the Steam Plant is going through a $35 million upgrade and expansion for a new boiler and should be finished in late 1996.

Dillard said the tree was put in position when the steel frame was finished and will remain until the roof and siding for the building is added.

According to Pengress, when the additions are added to the building, the tree will probably be thrown away.

Broadcast

"They will have the opportunity to observe broadcasting in Washington and in the field at stations around the country, including Carbondale."

Starr, who is directing the project, said South African officials will come to observe American broadcasting in Carbondale this fall.

"SIUC students will have an opportunity to meet and interact with South African officials—learn about the new South Africa and its multicultural environment," he said.

Starr said he and Linz Brown, project co-director, will be meeting with IBA officials in South Africa sometime in July or August to plan the program.

Starr and Brown also will be establishing linkages with a South African university to assist in developing an electronic media program to train South Africans in their new broadcasting industry.

31,300 square foot building in 1913.

James Tweedy, vice president for administration, said there are several buildings on campus with roof problems, but Anthony Hall is probably the worst.

"There were a series of leaks on the third floor above the legal council office," Tweedy said.

Lee Ellen Starkweather, associate University legal counsel, said her working conditions were altered by the leaks.

"Ceiling tile was on my desk and furniture, and water was dripping — I had buckets placed all over my office," Starkweather said. "I always had to remember to cover my computer before I left so it would not get damaged."

Scott Miller, construction project coordinator, said the roof has never been replaced.

"We have only made temporary repairs to the roof — the chimney

"Ceiling tile was on my desk and furniture, and water was dripping — I had buckets placed all over my office."

Lee Ellen Starkweather, associate University legal counsel was struck by lightning once and nails come loose occasionally," Miller said. "This time we are replacing the roof framing, wood decking, rotten material at the roof head, the over-hang and some other structures."

Boyd Anderson, roofer for Vaughn's Roofing, said the clay shingles do not wear out, so it is not feasible to throw them away.

"If we had to replace a tile because it was damaged, the color would be hard to match because the color faded on the old ones," Anderson said.

Shane Lipe, office systems specialist, said the construction has caused the office some inconvenience.

"It is difficult trying to get people in the building and explain to them how to get to our office," Lipe said.

The main and south entrances are blocked off because of the construction. The lower level door on the courtyard side and the entrance to the president's office remain open.

The cost of replacing the roof is $1,780,534, to be paid for through a capital renewal bond from the Illinois Board of Higher Education. Each tile is estimated at $9 to $10.

The construction of the new roof, contracted currently to Vaughn's Roofing of Marion, began May 22 and is scheduled for completion Aug. 25.

War crime hunter begins searching before war's end

The Baltimore Sun

THE HAGUE, Netherlands—As prosecutors go, Richard Goldstone may have the world's toughest case.

In his search for evidence of crimes in high places, his most incriminating document turned out to be a forgery. In his efforts to round up smaller fry to put on trial, all but one has remained beyond reach.

Then there's the matter of Goldstone's employers. They keep going to his top suspects to ask for help, understanding and favors.

Such are the facts of the life for the chief prosecutor of the U. N. war crimes tribunal for the former Yugoslavia. Not since the post-World War II trials at Nuremberg and Tokyo has there been such a proceeding, although this one has little in common with its predecessors.

The earlier tribunals chose suspects from the vantage point of victors culling the vanquished and were aided by some of the most voluminous records ever kept by killers.

Goldstone's team of investigators, by comparison, must account for a war's most horrible actions before the fighting has even stopped. There is virtually no paper trail leading to the top, and no guarantee that his most important suspects won't end up dictating the terms of peace—terms that might even guarantee the suspects' immunity from prosecution.

SATISFACTORY PROGRESS POLICY FOR UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS AT SOUTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY AT CARBONDALE

The Federal Government, the States, and Southern Illinois University at Carbondale have invested large sums of money in order to provide financially needy students the opportunity to obtain a post-secondary education. Financial aid recipients are responsible for using the funds provided in an acceptable manner. Therefore, a student who wishes to benefit from the receipt of financial aid funds must maintain "satisfactory progress" as defined in this policy.

AUTHORITY

The Higher Education Act of 1965 as amended and the final regulations set forth by the Department of Education in 34 CFR 668 require that institutions of higher education establish reasonable standards of "satisfactory progress". A student who does not meet these standards is not eligible to receive federally funded financial aid. Southern Illinois University at Carbondale shall make these standards applicable to all state and institutional aid programs for the purpose of maintaining a consistent and reasonable financial aid policy.

SATISFACTORY PROGRESS STANDARDS

Southern Illinois University at Carbondale requires that a student be making "satisfactory progress" toward a degree if he or she wishes to receive financial aid funds. A student is making "satisfactory progress" toward a degree if successfully meeting two basic academic standards. First, a student must complete a reasonable number of credit hours toward a degree each academic year. Second, a student must maintain a scholastic standing, derived from grades, that allows for continued enrollment at the University under current academic guidelines. The following parameters will be used to define these two basic academic standards:

1) Maximum time to graduate: A full-time, eligible student is expected to complete a degree in six academic years (12 semesters). A half-time, eligible student is expected to complete a degree in twelve academic years (24 semesters). In order to be sure that a student is progressing toward that goal, each student's progress will be measured annually after Spring Semester to determine the progress made for the last academic year of attendance. Each term of at least half-time attendance shall be included in the annual review whether or not the student received financial aid for the term. The following chart will serve as a model to determine if each student is meeting this requirement of "satisfactory progress".

2) Grades: A student must remain in compliance with the University's policy concerning scholastic standing, grades, and grade point average as defined under the topic "Grading, Scholastic Regulations, and Credit" in the current Undergraduate Catalog Bulletin. A student who is on Scholastic Suspension is not maintaining "satisfactory progress". A student who is scholastically suspended may be readmitted under Scholastic Probation status by the appropriate academic dean and remain eligible for financial aid. Each student's scholastic standing will be monitored after each semester or term of attendance.

A student who does not meet both of the standards set forth above and who cannot show "mitigating circumstances" is not maintaining "satisfactory progress" toward a degree and is no longer eligible to receive financial aid funds. (See Appeals)

Nothing in this policy shall be construed as a reduction of external requirements by other federal, state, public, or private agencies when they award or control financial aid. Examples of such agencies are: Veterans Administration, Vocational Rehabilitation, and the NCAA.

DEFINITIONS

Credit hours completed shall be defined as the total number of academic credit hours for which a student receives any grade other than a failing grade. Incompletes, withdrawals, audits, and remedial courses which do not count toward a degree shall not be considered as credit hours completed. Credit hours received for repeated courses shall be counted only once.

Eligible students shall be defined as those students who are admitted to the University in a degree-seeking classification. All other students are not eligible for financial aid.

Full-time attendance for undergraduates shall be defined as enrollment in twelve (12) hours or more per semester.

Half-time attendance for undergraduates shall be defined as enrollment in six (6) or more hours, but less than twelve (12) hours per semester.

Undergraduate shall be defined as a student who is a freshman, sophomore, junior, senior or a senior with a bachelor's degree seeking a second bachelor's.

NOTIFICATION OF TERMINATION

It shall be the responsibility of the Financial Aid Office to publish this policy and to notify by letter any student who is no longer eligible to receive financial aid funds. Said notice shall be addressed to the student's most current permanent address on file with the University. IT SHALL BE THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE STUDENT TO INFORM THE UNIVERSITY OF A CORRECT PERMANENT ADDRESS AT ALL TIMES.

REINSTATEMENT

Students will have their eligibility to receive financial aid reinstated when they have reached the level of satisfactory progress required of them by this policy. They may achieve this status by the completion of incomplete grades, correction of incorrect grades, and by earning sufficiently more than the required number of completed hours for a term or terms of attendance without the benefit of financial aid.

APPEALS

Any student who cannot meet the grades requirement, or the cumulative credit hours completion requirement shall have an opportunity to appeal in writing to explain "mitigating circumstances". The appeal should be sent to the Financial Aid Office within 15 days of the notice of termination. The Financial Aid Office will review the "mitigating circumstances" documented in the appeal and provide a written decision within 20 days after receipt of the appeal.

Handling of hoopster's sex offense is offensive

By Tony Kornheiser
The Washington Post

George Washington University should be thoroughly embarrassed by the noxious sideshow the recruitment of Richie Parker has become. The university should be particularly ashamed of its self-serving offer of a scholarship to the young woman who was the victim of a sexual attack by Parker, a New York City basketball star. GW's transparent strategy is an insult to the intelligence of each student on campus, and to all of us who see it for the sham it is.

How dare GW recruit both Parker and his victim?

Doesn't anyone cringe at this? Doesn't this remind anyone at GW of the time Phyllis George exhorted a rape victim to hug her attacker on national TV a few years back?

What is GW looking for down the road—that Parker and the young woman should kiss and make up somewhere on campus? If GW was at all sensitive to the emotional health of both Parker and the young woman, it would not attempt to place them in such proximity. There are thousands of colleges and universities throughout the country. How could anybody think it's a good idea to put both these young people on the same one?

Clearly, GW has become so obsessed with the idea of growing itself into a basketball power that it has lost all sense of taste and decorum. What happened to GW's moral compass? Did it get waterlogged when graduation was rained out?

According to prosecutors, almost a year and a half ago—when the young woman was 15 years old—Parker and a schoolmate lured her into a stairwell at school and sexually abused her. (In her own high school!) They were charged with first-degree sodomy. Parker pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of felony sexual abuse and was sentenced to five years' probation.

In ensuing months Parker was recruited by Seton Hall (Parker actually signed a letter-of-intent to go there) and Utah. However, both schools backed away after negative reaction on campus and in the media. For a while it appeared Parker might not be recruited further. But GW has been interested in Parker for at least a month. And now, in the last few days, GW has offered his victim a scholarship.

"Back in high school I wanted to run with the guys, play hooky and stuff," he said. "The hardest thing for me was to leave the guys on the streets and go back into the classroom."

"The drugs, money and fast cars were all there — sure I wanted all that but going through school, seeing kids you know getting gunned down was hard."

My mother just sat me down and said it was up to me whether I wanted to be something other than a man on the street, he said.

"I turned my life around with the help of my grandmother, mother, brothers and my sisters Debbie, LaShon and Cheree," Hendricks said.

Murray gets ready for entry in record books

Los Angeles Times

CLEVELAND—He is about to become the 19th player with 3,000 hits. A year from now he might become the 15th with 500 home runs.

At 39, a long way from the Los Angeles sandlots where he learned to hit a curveball by trying to time the unpredictable movements of Crisco can lids thrown by one of his four brothers, Eddie Murray continues to pile up credentials that should make him an automatic selection for the Hall of Fame, providing the voting writers overlook his seldom talking to them.

Even now, only 11 hits shy of 3,000 before Monday's game, the Cleveland Indians' first baseman and designated hitter has rejected most recent interview requests.

He will help rebuild baseball's bridges with his bat, not his words.

"It's really sad that he's reaching this plateau and there's still so much negative being written about an outstanding person and player who's been so good for the game," said Baltimore Oriole Coach Elrod Hendricks, a former teammate and longtime friend.

Sad, indeed, that Murray's almost pathological distrust of sportswriters—he generally makes an exception for reporters covering the Indians—now spans almost two decades and tends to cloud stories of his accomplishments and the respect of his teammates.

"Eddie is fantastic, one of the best teammates I've ever played with, a true professional," said Orel Hersheiser, a teammate with the Los Angeles Dodgers and now the Indians. "From what I know and what I've seen, he has the pulse of every club he's been on. He's a day-to-day force who knows how to pick his spots and put people in their place—generally with humor, not an iron fist."

In this summer that Cal Ripken Jr. seems destined to break Lou Gehrig's record for consecutive games, the Oriole shortstop said he still misses having Murray "to lean on" when he's struggling. They were teammates with the Orioles from 1981-88.

"Even before the streak was born, it was Eddie who influenced my approach to the game and taught me the importance of being there every day for the team," Ripken said.

Saluki athletes earn academic honor

By Cynthia Sheets
DE Sports Editor

Brains and brawn are quite a combination for Saluki softball player Christine Knotts and hammer Heather Greeling.

Knotts, with a 3.94 grade point average, is one of 12 in the nation selected to the 3rd team GTE Academic All-American squad, while Greeling, with a 4.0 GPA, was one of 80 selected for GTE Academic All-District honors.

"Christine has demonstrated discipline on the field and in the classroom," said SIUC softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer. "She always brings her books with her when we go on away trips—if she needs a place to study, she makes a place to study."

Knotts has racked up a .349 batting average her sophomore season, as well as a .981 fielding percentage and started 90 of 91 games that season.

This year's academic selections marks the third time for the mechanical engineering major from Edwardsville, Ill.

Greeling put together a No. 2 time in the 55-yard dash; earned 3256 points for SIUC's best pentathlon score, and raced to season best times in the 4X100 and 4X200 relays.

"I think the major component of success for me is time management," Greeling said. "My class schedule runs until two o'clock, then I have practice right afterwards. After practice, I go home to spend time with my friends and boyfriend, then settle down to study."

"You have to be sure you're not wasting time, and that your priorities are straight."

The College Sports Information Directors of America vote on athletes in eight different sports departments. In the fall, football and volleyball athletes are selected, in the winter, men's and women's basketball, and in the spring, both baseball and softball players are chosen.

Other sports, such as men's/women's tennis and men's/women's swimming, are grouped into an all-around category which is also voted on in the spring.

An athlete must keep a 3.20 cumulative GPA while being a starter or significant reserve to be nominated for the distinction.

Hendricks looks toward pros

By Jason E. Coyne
Daily Egyptian Reporter

For someone who had never intended on playing football as boy, Darnell Hendricks, a 22-year-old, fifth-year senior strong safety out of South Central Los Angeles, has got his sights set on the big time.

"I expect to go to the next level," Hendricks said. "If not the NFL then the CFL."

"Every day, every drop of sweat, is a drop into the deposit box."

Defensive coordinator for the Saluki football program, Linwood Ferguson, said he expects Hendricks, a tri-captain this upcoming season, to take his game to the next level this season if the program is to be a success.

"He's a gladiator style player: very physical with a lot of heart," Ferguson said. "He's one of the people who are going to take this defense from an exceptional defense to a championship one."

Hendricks is up to the challenge and has set his goals for this season.

"I plan to be the best player in the Gateway Conference this year, he said. "I go out and give everything I've got."

"He's a gladiator style player, very physical with a lot of heart."

SIUC defensive coordinator

If the team follows that trend, we'll be successful."

"No one is above this team—I've seen where the staff wants to take this team and I want to show them I'm devoted."

Hendricks always had to look up to his older brothers, Lenny and Randy as they excelled in football at Jefferson High School in L.A.

"All their old teammates would tell me how good they were and just because I was the baby brother I wasn't about to finish last," he said. "I wanted to be better and have always strived to be the best and number one."

Hendricks brothers were not the only influence on his football career. His personal hero, his mother and grandmother Zenola always told him he could be anything he dreamed of if he put in the hard work.

"My family, especially my fiancée have been the biggest overall influence in the way I've conducted my life and in helping me keep my focus," Hendricks said. "I'm content with life, where I'm headed and I'm confident about this year's football program."

Hendricks said there is no downtime where he can become unfocused. Even though he was drafted 15th by the Atlanta Braves coming out of Taft High School, Hendricks chose to forego the money and fulfill his dream of playing college football.

"If I went to baseball and made money I'd have never gone to school but this way I get my degree and get to play both sports," he said. "Even though I could have gotten the go ahead to play Saluki baseball I wanted to show my teammates and coaches that I'm devoted to this program."

Hendricks said he did not always have the discipline he has today.

Baseball camp offers challenges for kids, coaches

By Eric Helbig
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Despite NCAA regulations, SIUC head baseball coach Dan Callahan has been running baseball players ragged the last two weeks.

While the NCAA prohibits out of season practice by intercollegiate athletes, Callahan, along with assistant coach Ken Henderson and area high school coaches, have been practicing with kids ranging in age from the high school level down to 8-year-olds in this year's version of the Saluki Baseball Youth Camp.

Not all coaches like to run camps for the public, but there are bright spots, Callahan said.

"Some coaches see camps as a glorified baby-sitting service," Callahan said.

The most enjoyable part is working with the kid that wants to be here and wants to learn."

One parent, Tom Hill, said his son, Adam, has been to other camps before but he liked what he saw in SIUC's camp last year.

"I liked the way they ran things,"

Hill said. They have more instructors, unlike other places that try to run the camp with just one or two coaches."

Fellow parent Nolan Shook echoed Hill's comments, adding that the extra opportunity for his son, Jonas, to practice the sport he enjoys is also beneficial.

"He loves to play ball and this just gives him another chance," Shook said.

Callahan estimated 90 campers came to camp last week with 60 staying overnight in Carbondale at Thompson Point and another 30 commuting.

Around 80 campers are expected during this week's camp for 8-12 year-olds.

Most of these campers are commuters, but some come from towns that are not in the immediate area.

Hill and Shook have made the hour-and-a-half trip each day from Freeburg, Ill. this week to bring their sons to the camp.

Shook said commuting from Freeburg is the hardest part of the camp for himself and his son.

"The hardest part is the drive, along with getting Jonas out of bed in the morning," Shook said.

Colin Ferraro, camper, disagreed, saying the breaks are the hardest part of the day.

"The hardest part is walking to lunch because it's the length of five football fields to where we have to eat in the Student Center," Ferraro said.

While the camp is run through the hottest part of the day, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., water breaks are offered throughout the day to ensure the safety of the campers.

"You have to be careful because the kids can get dehydrated," Callahan said.

SIUC's baseball camp is not new as camp has been offered the last 15-20 years, according to Callahan.

This is Callahan's first year running SIUC's camp, but he said that he has been working in camps for the last 15 years, as a high school coach and helping at other college camps.

SHIRLEY GIOIA — The Daily Egyptian

Chris McClelland, 10, from Cobden, fields a ground ball Tuesday afternoon during the 1995 Saluki Youth Baseball Camp at Abe Martin Field. The camp is for children 8-12 and will run until Thursday. The children are taught the basics of hitting and fielding.
