Increase in alcohol taxes, automotive fees to pay for better roads, education

ANNE BETH TRAYNOR
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Alcohol aficionados beware. Alcohol prices, among other things, will rise as of July 1 due to tax increases that are part of a new state program.

In May, Governor George H. Ryan's $12 billion Illinois FIRST program was approved by the General Assembly as a means "to promote improvements in education, roads and other areas throughout the state."

Increased fees and $48 million annually from the state's general funds will combine to total $621 million in revenue for the program.

However, taxes and fees will be raised from other sources from within the state to compensate for the rest of the money needed for the program.

For example, vehicle registration will increase from $48 to $78 annually, large truck and trailer registrations will increase by 25 percent and title transfer fees will increase from $13 to $65 as of January 1.

Taxes also will increase in the sale of alcohol.

According to the state of Illinois, the alcohol tax will increase as much as 6 cents per six-pack of beer, 10 cents per bottle of low-alcohol-content wine, and 3 cents per bottle of high-alcohol-content wine as of July 1.

The alcohol tax increases are slightly above the national average, according to Jackie Price, a spokesperson for the state.

Although some may sour on the idea of paying more for alcohol, some SIUC students may be singing a sweet tune by spring 2000.

Representative Mike Bost said the long-term benefits of the program will help SIUC acquire at least three projects in five years that originally would have taken 15 to 20 years.

What Illinois FIRST means to you

- Increased fees and the support of $48 million annually from the state's general funds will generate a total of $621 million in revenue to pay for the program.
- Vehicle registration fees increase from $48 to $78 annually with corresponding increases for all vehicle registration, generating $249 million.
- Large truck and trailer registrations increase 25 percent, raising these fees moderately above the national average generating $78 million annually.
- Title transfer fees increase from $13 to $65 generating $166 million annually.
- Alcohol tax increases will generate $80 million annually. The taxes increase by six cents on a six-pack of beer, 10 cents a bottle on low-alcohol content wine, and 3 cents a bottle on high-alcohol content wine. The state tax on a bottle of distilled spirits increased 50 cents.

Garden provides peaceful hideout on campus

KARL LANGNER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Kumakura Japanese garden near the northwest end of Faner offers a quiet sanctuary with an international flavor for anything from diligent studying to relaxing conversation.

"It's a good place to come and study," Adam Orsolini, a senior in aviation flight and management from Richmond, said, while noting the relaxing effects of the waterfall and pond as "peaceful."

Kathy Bury, a committee member of the Kumakura task force, said the purpose of the garden, which is handicap accessible, is "to bring a taste of Japan" to SIUC. She hopes the garden advances international understanding among international students, faculty and friends.

Police Blotter

• A 17-year-old SIUC student told University police Monday his credit card checks were forged on his account April 15. Police said the student suspects the checks were taken from the mail without his permission. Loss in the incident was estimated at $350.50. Police said a suspect has been identified but no arrests have been made. The incident is under investigation.

• A man entered Wareco System Inc., 511 E. Walnut, Monday night with a large stick and demanded money from the register, Carbondale police said. The suspect fled after receiving the money. The suspect is described as a black male, 5-foot 4-inches to 5-foot 6-inches. The suspect was last seen wearing a McDonald's uniform.

Corrections

• Tuesday's article "Purpose of 'Four Horsemen's' house undecided" should have stated the SIU School of Law is 25 years old.

• Tuesday's story "Resolutions underway" incorrectly identified Joan Friedenberg as the Faculty Senate president in the headline. Friedenberg's name also was misspelled.

The DAILY EGYPTIAN regrets the errors.

Almanac

THIS WEEK IN 1988:

- Movies playing in Carbondale were "Big," "Rambo III," "Moonstruck," "Crocodile Dundee II," "Beebeeljuice," "Poltergeist III," "Good Morning Vietnam," "Funny Farm" and "Willow."
- The summer sunset concert line-up included Mr. Myers, Joe Camel and The Caucasians, Kool Roy, Boys From Indiana, Mandala, Michael Mason, West Side Heat and The Heartland Consort.
- Children were being put on a waiting list to participate in a free summer sports camp for economically disadvantaged children in a 30-mile radius of Carbondale. The camp offered a chance for children to swim, play soccer, basketball and other sports on a daily basis, as well as attend classes on health, drug abuse, career objectives and nutrition.
- Syndicated columnist Carl Rowan shot and wounded a youth who was among a group of intruders drinking beer and smoking marijuana while using his backyard pool and Jacuzzi at 2 a.m. Rowan said that the young man was attempting to force his way in the house when he fired at the teen. The wounded teen denied any allegation that he was attempting to enter Rowan's home.

Darkness engulfs science center

EXHIBIT: Travelling display simulates aquatic environment.

RHONDA SCIARRA
STUDENT AFFAIRS EDITOR

Donna Williams and her 6-year-old granddaughter Corrie spent Tuesday afternoon learning about animals and conditions in some of the darkest regions of the world.

As Corrie wandered into an exhibit of large rock openings with the sounds of dripping water in the background, her eyes lit up at the imposing surroundings.

"That is what a cave looks like," Williams explains to Corrie. "It is deep and dark inside."

Williams and her granddaughter, who were visiting Southern Illinois from Jonesboro, Tenn., decided to visit the "In the Dark" exhibit at the Science Center in University Mall after a friend recommended it.

The $2 million exhibit — on display until Sept. 14 — highlights intriguing and unexplored habitats that receive little or no light from the sun.

"It is really nice, there's a lot of information and it is well worth the money," Williams said.

Jim Mueller, executive director of the Science Center, said the display has given more than 4,000 visitors a chance to experience life in the dark.

"It's the touchy-feely way to see what's out there and to see all kinds of creatures who live in dark environments," Mueller said. "It's about those animals and the adaptations they have to live with in those environments."

The exhibit incorporates computer games, mechanical displays, fiberglass models and life-size environmental re-creations including a mountainous forest, a section of a Kentucky limestone solution and an underground look at a Midwestern backyard.

Mueller said response to the exhibit has been positive from people of all ages and backgrounds since its opening May 14.

"We have seen grandmothers and grandfathers get as much fun out of it as their 4-year-old granddaughter," he said. "We've also seen couples in their twenties come here on dates; they have a good time in the dark."

Argersinger address scheduled for Monday

Gus Bode

SIU H.O.P.E.: Group arranges event, invites president, interim to speak.

KELLEY HERTLEIN
A & E EDITOR

Former SIUC Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger will address the public at 6 p.m. Monday, stating her visions and goals for the future of SIU.

SIU H.O.P.E., a group of individuals disturbed by the University's alterations in administration, has scheduled the address as an addition to an evening event in support of Argersinger.

Faculty, staff, students and community members dedicated to seeing the return of Argersinger to the office of chancellor will gather in the Carbondale Civic Center, 200 S. Illinois Ave., with intents to publicly bring forth Argersinger's ideals.

Jane Adams, an executive board member for SIU H.O.P.E., said Argersinger has an uplifting image and positive link to SIU.

"During the major address she will speak on what the University can be," said Adams, an associate professor in anthropology and history.

"Chancellor Argersinger has brought an enlightening sense to the University and proved that the University could and can be revitalized."

The event will be the first formal public statement Argersinger has made since the press conferences following her termination.

“During the major address she will speak on what the University can be.”

— JANE ADAMS
ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR, ANTHROPOLOGY

Adams' said she and others challenge interim Chancellor John Jackson and Sanders to state their visions and goals for SIU and compare them to Argersinger's visions.

"We invite the interim chancellor or the president to speak in public at a forum about where the University could be going," she said. "And then people may discern the true difference in those visions. We would challenge them to it."

Jackson said he will not be attending the event and is moved to withhold comment on the situation at this time because of current litigation involving the termination of Argersinger.

"I think the best thing to do is allow the legal system to handle the situation," he said. "This is in the form of a series of lawsuits; there is nothing left to do but work things out legally."

Constituencies represented by SIU H.O.P.E. include the Graduate Council, the Faculty Senate, the Graduate and Professional Student Council president, and the local president of the NAACP. Adams said the group voices concern for more than 1,490 people in affiliation with these groups.

The group's targeted goals are to reinstate Argersinger as chancellor, remove SIU President Ted Sanders from his position and alter the current policies upheld by the SIU Board of Trustees.

Adams said SIU H.O.P.E. gains funding for its cause through personal donations and anonymous sources. A portion of the money will be used to fund Monday's events.

Performances by the Best Singers, Carter and Connelley, the Rock Hill Baptist Church Choir, Bethel A.M.E. Choir and the Chautauqua String Ensemble begin at 5 p.m. Adams said each band will play in support of Argersinger and her goals.

Gus says: I have a vision and it includes Chancellor Jennifer McCarthy.

Search for alleged serial killer continues

DEVIN MILLER
MANAGING EDITOR

As an intense nationwide search continues for suspected serial killer Rafael Resendez-Ramirez, Jackson County Sheriff William J. Kilquist believes Resendez-Ramirez is no longer in the Southern Illinois area.

Resendez-Ramirez is wanted for the killings of seven people, including the June 15 Gorham double murder of father and daughter George Morber and Carolyn Frederick. Due to the concentrated search

RAFAEL RESENDEZ-RAMIREZ
Age: 38 or 39
(DOB: 8-1-60 or 8-1-59)
Sex: Male
Race: Hispanic
Height: 5'8" or 5'7"
Weight: 150 lbs.
Eye Color: Brown
Hair Color: Black

efforts made by law enforcement officials in Southern Illinois, Kilquist believes Resendez-Ramirez has left the area.

"This guy is smart, he almost got caught when he took Morber's truck down to Cairo and has probably left the area," Kilquist said.

Born in Puebla, Mexico, Resendez-Ramirez is a Hispanic male, about 39 years old, 5 feet seven inches tall and weighing 150 pounds. Bearing scars on his right ring finger, left wrist and forehead, Resendez-Ramirez also has a snake tattoo on his left arm.

The last reported possible sighting of Resendez-Ramirez in the area occurred on June 16 in Dongola.

Resendez-Ramirez is known to ride railroad cars for transportation. The seven murders for which Resendez-Ramirez is suspected all occurred near railways.

CARBONDALE

Knife-wielding bar patron sought after near-stabbing

Carbondale police are searching for a suspect who pulled a knife on another patron in PK's bar, 308 S. Illinois Ave., at 12:30 a.m. Friday.

The attempted stabbing occurred while the victim was playing pool with the suspect. The suspect pulled a knife and placed it on the victim's stomach.

The victim then attempted to push the knife away from his body, and in doing so, suffered a cut on his finger.

The suspect fled from the scene after the incident. He is described as a white male, 35 to 40 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall, 175 pounds, gray hair, wearing a tie-dyed T-shirt, blue jeans and carrying a buck knife in a sheath.

Anyone with information about this incident should call the Carbondale Police Department at 549-2677.

LIAONING, CHINA

New species of primitive bird discovered in China

U.S. and Chinese paleontologists have discovered the fossil remains of a previously unknown species of primitive bird dating back 130 million years, providing new clues to the evolution of early birds.

The nearly complete skeleton, unearthed near the edge of a lake in northeastern China's Liaoning Province, is smaller but similar to Confuciusornis sanctus, another crow-like bird of the same era discovered in 1995.

However, the newly discovered species, dubbed Confuciusornis dui, has the oldest known horny beak, a relatively advanced feature, ever found, the researchers from the Chinese Academy of Sciences, the University of Kansas and the University of North Carolina report in the June 17 issue of the journal Nature. But the back of the skull also has two openings usually found in reptiles.

The discovery illustrates the divergence of birds and reptiles and shows birds diversified much earlier than previously thought, the researchers say.

"One of the really interesting things about these discoveries is that they unexpectedly and vividly show that birds had already diversified by the late Jurassic-early Cretaceous period," says UNC's Alan Feduccia.

Our Word

Apathetic campus has no right to complain

For nearly a month now, people all over campus and the Carbondale area have been slinging the terms "consultation" and "shared governance" around like dirty rags in a mechanic's garage.

Members of the SIUC faculty claim they weren't consulted about the termination of Jo Ann Argersinger. The say they want to be consulted in the future when it comes time for administrative evaluations and because they weren't consulted about Argersinger's termination, the Faculty Association has filed a grievance against the SIUC Board of Trustees.

The Administrative and Professional Staff claim they weren't consulted about Argersinger either, so they attempted to form a union to prevent such a lack of consultation from occurring in the future.

SIUC students claim the decision to fire Argersinger took place during intercession because the board didn't want to hear students out on the matter, so some students have united to protest the board's actions and to rally behind Argersinger.

Based on the recent outcry against poor communication and lack of consultation on this campus, the DAILY EGYPTIAN assumes members of each of these groups — faculty, staff and students — want to be consulted, not only about the termination of Argersinger, but also about decisions concerning all academic administrator positions, including the president, the chancellor, vice chancellors, deans, directors and chairs.

It appears we may have assumed wrong. The appallingly sparse attendance at the open forums for Robert D'Augustine Monday leads us to question where priorities on this campus actually lie. If communication is a priority, where was everyone during the open forums?

D'Augustine, a candidate for the position of vice chancellor for Administration, flew from New Jersey to SIUC Sunday to interview for the position Monday and Tuesday.

D'Augustine left his hat in the ring for the position despite the fact that the searches were "ceased" at the end of May just two days before he was to appear on campus for the initial interview.

Based on our observations, an average of six people attended each of the three open forums with D'Augustine Monday. Six people! SIUC employs more than 3,400 full- and part-time faculty, administrative and civil service employees. And though official summer enrollment numbers haven't been released yet, at least 10,000 students are on campus right now.

Each of these groups are represented by various councils and senates. A schedule of D'Augustine's visit should have been distributed by the leaders of these groups to the constituents. The constituents, then, should have attended the appropriate open forums.

In addition, the DAILY EGYPTIAN published on June 15 the dates of D'Augustine's visit to SIUC.

We understand there are many other issues occupying the minds of people on this campus — the Argersinger lawsuits, the Faculty Association grievance and the A/P union vote, just to name a few. Plus it's summertime in Southern Illinois. Who wants to be in the stuffy Faner Museum Auditorium when you could be at home working on your garden or fishing out at Crab Orchard Lake?

The fact is, this campus needs a vice chancellor for Administration, and hiring a person for that position is part of the University's "moving on" process we wrote about in Thursday's "Our Word" — an editorial that apparently fell on deaf ears.

At Monday's open forum, D'Augustine said one of the biggest problems he sees on this campus is a lack of communication and consultation.

"Decisions are being made, and [the people affected by the decisions] don't know why," he said.

We know why: It's because the people affected by those decisions have better things to do with their time than to show up for one hour and listen to what someone who could be a future SIUC administrator has to say about this campus.

D'Augustine came all the way from New Jersey to visit with you and hear what you have to say about the state of affairs at SIUC. You couldn't even walk across campus to talk to him.

It appears the people who want to be "consulted" want to be consulted when it's convenient for them.

Attending forums like this is a simple way for faculty, staff and students to make their voice heard. The DAILY EGYPTIAN encourages better participation at these forums in the future. For the record, former U.S. representative Glenn Poshard will be on campus July 2 to resume his second day of interviews, which was cut short in May.

The board's suspension of the searches was bad enough for SIUC's image. But how does the campus' apathy toward the open forums make us look?

Culture shock: growing up in a small town

I wanted to write this column about the Colorado stand off, about how I'm scared to even step foot out of my house anymore — hell, I'm almost scared to breathe anymore.

I wanted to rail against the stupidity of human beings, rant about how senseless violence is invading the country.

I wanted to, but really can't. I'm a small-town girl from the Midwest, and I've realized that I don't know dick about what the world is really like. Violence already has invaded the country; it just doesn't seem like it from where we stand.

I firmly believe the only way the world's population might regain its sanity is if every person has access to an excellent shrink, or at least the world-wide equivalent of family counseling.

I sometimes wonder how well my upbringing prepared me for life in this world of ours. I wonder about it even more now that I'm a parent. I grew up on a farm, people; I graduated in a high school class that numbered about 40 people, and there was little to no ethnic or religious diversity.

Moving to Carbondale resulted in mild culture shock that dissipated rather quickly because I like it here. I love the fact that there are so many different kinds of people who come in and out of my life.

Going back to my hometown is almost like visiting another planet. Living here has taught me a lot about what life is like in other places (insert laughter from those of you who are from larger cities).

Look What You Did

Mary McGlasson

Look What You Did appears Wednesdays. Mary is a journal in literature and creative writing. Her opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the DAILY EGYPTIAN.

And that's all right. You can laugh; I kind of like to make people laugh. But think, just for a minute, about where I come from, what kinds of obstacles I've had to overcome to live my life the way I want to.

Being different is a challenge when there are limited opportunities to express yourself. I was the freak of my high school because I listened to punk rock and wore green Converse All-Stars. What a rebel! Here, when I walk down the Strip, every other person I see fits that description. My point is, it's not easy being green, or cheery; when the world you live in is neatly divided into sections and has been since before God. Try to break down social conventions, my friends, and see what it gets you. In my case, it got me one mention in the yearbook: Class Clown. Excuse me while I angst quietly to myself.

When I say living here has taught me a lot, I am completely serious. Living here has taught me the difference between isolation and integration; going home has taught me the difference between racism and ignorance.

I've learned, to my shame, that ignorance tends to abound in small towns. I've adapted to Carbondale because I want to, because I love to meet people from anywhere and everywhere, and I love to talk to people who know more than I do about anything and everything.

I have a 2-year-old daughter who is not going to grow up in a place where there is only one way to think, to believe, to live. There are pieces of my childhood I want her to experience, but on the whole, I would rather know she will grow up to be someone who has the chance to live life a different way. I want her to have a choice, but more than that, I want her to know a lot more than I did about people. I want her not to be afraid to be different. And I want to prepare her for life in the real world.

John Mellencamp, formerly known as Cougar, waxes poetic about small towns in a sandpaper voice. That's all right with me. I'm not saying small towns are bad places; how can I? Some of my happiest memories are there.

Sentiment can only go so far, but it goes far enough. And if, when she grows up, Selena wants to live in a small community, even my hometown, I can't blame her. I just want her to know what else is out there, and let me tell you something, whatever she decides to do, wherever she decides to live — it will be her choice, and it won't be from a lack of knowledge.

Dismissive directives of Chancellor firing questioned

Dear Editor,

My family and I have been part of the Carbondale-SIUC community since 1961, and more than any other SIUC chief administrator we have known since Delyte Morris, Jo Ann Argersinger has shown a vision and personal touch and drive, all of which have captured the heart and support of so many here in "SIUC Country." And now she has been fired.

In his press conference June 4, President Sanders said he had a communication problem with Chancellor Argersinger from early in her term of office. He said she was not a "team player" and did not inform him of important staffing decisions that were being made on campus. President Sanders reported that Chancellor Argersinger interfered with his relations with SIUC's faculty. However, isn't keeping in touch with the faculty the chancellor's job? But even so, is any or all of this justification for being fired after only 11 months?

"Communication" and respect must flow on a two-way street. Sanders and VanMeter are individuals with strong egos and opinions. And surely they would want a strong chancellor who had ideas, priorities and goals for his or her campus and who would not simply be a "yes" person to their desires.

All of this is not a put-down for John Jackson, an obviously able and knowledgeable administrator, who was called in to fill the vacuum created by Sanders and the board. But questions remain: Was "the firing" done legally and fairly? And is this a good time to rethink and perhaps modify the structure or at least the staffing of SIUC's governance system? I think it's a good time. Let our legislators and governor know what YOU think!

Student supports Argersinger vision

Dear Editor,

As a former student of Dr. Jo Ann Argersinger when I attended University of Maryland Baltimore County, I am saddened to hear about her dismissal from SIUC. She was my advisor when I was a graduate student in Maryland, and I still remember her brilliance, compassion, and how she rounded out her kit with concern for what was best for the university and its students.

I have not been in touch with her in several years, but kept hearing about her through other students in and faculty, and when I heard that she had become chancellor of SIUC, I was not surprised.

I am surprised, however, at the clumsy manner in which she was terminated, a mere 11 months after she was hired. Dr. Argersinger, and SIUC, deserve much better than such treatment. I am proud to say that she was my graduate advisor, and it is a shame she was not given the chance to show what a wonderful university administrator — but more importantly, a wonderful human being — she is, and that she was denied an opportunity to make the contributions that I am sure would have made the university a better place at which to work and study.

Clinton, Yeltsin plan new talks on nuclear arms

DAVID HOFFMAN
WASHINGTON POST

MOSCOW — After a long impasse, President Clinton and Russian President Boris Yeltsin have agreed to make a fresh attempt to resolve contentious treaties on strategic nuclear weapons and anti-ballistic missile defenses.

In a joint statement reached at their weekend summit in Cologne, Germany, both presidents indicated a new willingness to take small negotiating steps they had eschewed.

Yeltsin said Russia is prepared to listen to American proposals for amending the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, although he told Clinton that Russia remains strongly opposed to any changes, the Interfax news agency reported.

Clinton said the United States is ready to proceed with discussions about a START III arms reduction treaty even though its forerunner, START II, remains unratified by the Russian parliament.

The START II treaty was on the verge of ratification by the lower house of the Russian parliament, the State Duma, when NATO unleashed air strikes against Yugoslavia in March, creating a wave of anti-American sentiment that dashed hopes for approval. Russia's sympathy with the Serbs, and anger at NATO acted without U.N. Security Council authorization, also led the Kremlin to suspend arms control talks with the United States.

The White House now expects Deputy Secretary of State Strobe Talbott to lead a U.S. delegation in two-track negotiations in late summer. One track will be the U.S. desire to modify the ABM treaty to allow for the possible construction of a national missile defense system. In an initial meeting in February, the U.S. side stressed that the missile defense system would be aimed at shooting down a small number of missiles launched by a rogue state and would not be robust enough to counter all of Moscow's missiles.

The other negotiating track would resume dialogue in preparation for a START III treaty. Clinton and Yeltsin set tentative limits on warheads for the prospective treaty at a March 1997 meeting in Helsinki. Those ceilings would reduce the number of warheads on each side to between 2,000 and 2,500, from the 3,000 to 3,500 allowed by START II.

Previously, the Clinton administration had insisted that it would not begin formal negotiations on the next strategic arms treaty until START II was ratified. The joint statement pledges that "discussions" will begin later this summer on START III, while both sides promised to "do everything in their power" to win ratification of START II.

The START II treaty was signed in January 1993 by Yeltsin and President Bush, and was approved by the Senate in 1996. It has languished in the Duma, which is dominated by Communists and nationalists.

Yeltsin repeatedly has promised to win ratification of the treaty but has not followed through. The Duma is scheduled this week to break for the summer and is not planning to take up the treaty before departing.

The garden is named after Nobuo Kumakura, the mayor of Nakajo, Japan, who had a vision for the American-style SIU Niigata campus. Mayor Kumakura was at the ground-breaking ceremony for the Kumakura garden May 9, 1997. The garden was completed as a part of the Dorothy Morris Gardens at a dedication celebration Oct. 16, 1998.

A committee of 12 that first met in December 1996 was charged with studying the concept of a Japanese garden, selecting a location, designing the garden and formulating a timeline: of the construction and fundraising, Bury said.

Students in an advanced landscape design class were responsible for the original designs of the Kumakura project. In the class, taught by Karen Midden, each student created his or her own plan for the design of the garden.

From those, the committee chose what they liked about the designs, and Midden, chief designer and member of the committee, sketched the final plan. But much of the design was manipulated during the on-site construction.

The grounds department employees installed the elements of the garden, and physical plant carpenters built the viewing house. Physical plant iron workers also aided in building the bridge, Bruce Francis, supervisor of the project, said.

Francis said he was pleased with the way it turned out.

The primary source of revenue for the Kumakura project came from donations coordinated by the SIU Foundation. Plants, trees and other adornments also were donated.

Midden said she spent time reading about Japanese gardens and worked hard to incorporate Japanese character, although the final work is not completely authentic to Japanese style.

Midden said the rocks and their placement are important to Japanese gardens. She and Francis spent a lot of time determining the exact spots on which to set the boulders and rocks.

Midden explained how different facets of the garden represent various geographical areas. The waterfall flows down from an elevated, boulder-lined area, which represents a mountainous region, to the lower-level pond, representing a marsh and beach-like area.

The winding walkway, Midden said, is designed to invite the visitor and create an element of surprise as the visitor turns corners.

"A lot of Japanese gardens utilize all the senses," Midden said. She described how the Kumakura garden allows a person to hear the waterfall, singing birds, to smell and feel the plants, see the surrounding beauty and indulge in the coolness provided by the water and the shade of the viewing house.

In a real Japanese garden, much attention is paid to the character of the plants, Midden said, pointing to the drooping trees, which she noted looked weathered and tired, displaying certain human conditions.

"Once (people) walk into the garden they forget something that is on their mind and focus on the garden," Midden said. "They may not even be conscious that they are relating to nature."

Bury said people visit the garden at various times throughout the year because of the different blooming times of the plants.

"It's tranquil," Craig Darland, a senior in history from New Lenox, said. "At night it has a nice atmosphere to have a conversation."

Garrett Deakin, executive assistant for government relations, said the program would help finance the renovations of Altgeld Hall with $6.1 million, the Old Baptist Foundation with $4.075 million and the Communications Building with $1.55 million. Deakin said SIUE will receive a $3.04 million for a project possibly dealing with heating and air conditioning.

Deakin said the time schedule for the project will be up to the governor and the General Assembly.

Bost galled the move on Ryan's part "bold" and "necessary."

Bost, however, said he did not vote for the license fee increase or the alcohol tax.

He said he did not want to lose alcohol business to surrounding border states.

The money from the program will be used to benefit transportation, transit, schools and the environment in Illinois.

There may be grumbling about increased taxes and state fees.

But, as Paul Simon, current Director of the Public Policy Institute and former senator, said, "You can't have a program like that without paying for it."

Taking a trip down memory lane

AMERICAN ADVENTURE: The popularity of historic Route 66 is now long gone, but its memory lives strong

LOS ANGELES TIMES

Even before the wheel there were tracks that begat highways that became arteries of human movement for all purposes. From strategic access and metropolitan evacuations to diaper deliveries.

The Appian Way. Paved before Christ and the conduit of Roman legions headed for Brindisi.

The Burma Road. World War II's backdoor to China, and a 1,000-mile supply line that praised the Lord, passed the ammunition, climbed mountains and crossed jungles until the enemy was defeated.

The San Diego Freeway. Asphalt atherosclerosis and boulevard of a million curses that could bring blasphemy to the lips of a bishop.

And Route 66, a 2,448-mile reach from Chicago to Los Angeles, from 1926 until the last marker shield of its final yardage clattered down in 1984.

A transcontinental diagonal that in life was an ordeal that often killed but was also a lifeline aiding and betting on America's flight west through depressed times and wartimes. Route 66 meant new hopes, new homes and third chances.

Now, like Tombstone, Ariz., Route 66 represents a place and an era too tough to die, its harshness and privations forgotten because authors and balladeers prefer the romance and adventure of meandering, not its perils.

Besides, claim preservationists of John Steinbeck's mother road that grew "The Grapes of Wrath;" you can't kill America.

Nor should our nation be in a hurry to forget those supposedly softer years when people gave everyone the time of day and you didn't need a key to get into a service station washroom.

Contemporary saviors of Route 66 include those who rode it, those who wished they had, tourists by the millions, thousands who still live alongside it, museums that immortalize it and the House Resources Committee that recently approved legislation to provide $10 million to preserve its old diners and motor courts and Angel Delgadillo's barbershop in Seligman, Ariz. Angel's remains a shrine to the $6 haircut, straight-razor shaves and a scalp massage with Pinaud Eau de Quinine hair tonic.

Delgadillo, 72, is semiretired. But he'll still shave and cut the hair of anyone making the pilgrimage and pausing in Seligman to meet with one of Route 66's principals: the barbershop and the barber.

Of the highway's original miles, almost 2,000 survive as frontage roads, business loops and redesignated local highways.

The longest continuous remaining stretch of Route 66 is a 157-mile arc through northwest Arizona, from Topock on the Colorado River through gold mine country to Kingman, Hackberry, Peach Springs and dusty little Seligman.

It is raw and beautifully restored, and most wisely decreed an Arizona historical monument.

Across California, Route 66 stretched 320 miles, from the Santa Monica Pier to Needles. Much now lies broken, buried or bypassed by the Pasadena Freeway.

Interstate 40 from Needles and Interstate 15 from Barstow to San Bernardino. But the state remains rich in Route 66 lore and remnants.

At Victorville, service stations stand rotted to their girders with rusted pumps showing gas prices of 23 cents a gallon. The main street through Oro Grande is a lonely lineup of long-dead stores. And a junkyard at Essex is stuffed with carcasses, some cars dating to the '20s that limped their last miles on Route 66 and rolled no farther.

Endless information routes exist for starting new odysseys or remembering old journeys along America's Main Street.

WIRE PHOTO

"The Route 66 Traveler's Guide and Roadside Companion," by Tom Snyder (St. Martin's Press, 1995), addicted roadie and recovering psychologist, is the primary printed reference available from bookstores and Route 66 societies. It is in its third printing and in deference to the route's global clientele has been translated into several languages.

The National Historic Route 66 Federation (P.O. Box 423, Tujunga, CA 91043) has its own Internet site: <http://www.national66.com>.

So does the California Historic Route 66 Association: <http://www.wemweb.com/chr66a/index.html>. For maps showing what still exists of the length of Route 66, send $17.95 to Ghost Town Press, 13100 E. Old Highway 66, Arcadia, OK 73007.

And should you be in their neighborhoods, there are Route 66 museums in Victorville, Calif.; Clinton, Okla.; and Williams and Hackberry, both in Arizona.

I have twice driven Route 66. Once for real, grinding from Chicago to the West Coast in 1963, with all my worldly and a cat crammed into a Volvo B-18.

The other was in 1992, to remember when and research what remains. Driving, of course, a daffodil-yellow Corvette, the only car that fit the republic because it followed in the tire tracks of Corvette pilgrims Tod and Buz, those two drifters of television's "Route 66."

Again, so much is not there.

Red's Giant Hamburg — the sign painter ran out of room for the "ers" — in Springfield, Mo., where condiments included chili powder in Copenhagen tins. Gone. Two towns, Bagdad and Siberia, Calif. Disappeared. The Roller Rink Restaurant in Rancho Cucamonga. Demolished.

Yet so much clings on.

You can still eat buffalo burgers in Newberry Springs at the Bagdad Cafe, although that wasn't the original name, just a title that stuck when the 1988 cult movie of the same name was filmed there. Arizona's Oatman Hotel has survived, where Clark Gable and Carole Lombard spent their 1939 honeymoon.

Stucco tepees with un-native air conditioning are still available at the Wigwam Motel in Holbrook, Ariz.

And it seems there will always be Angel Delgadillo and his barbershop. He has seen the road filled by Dust Bowl refugees and young soldiers, railroaders and the big bands that hired his two brothers.

Then it all stopped. Something essential died. Delgadillo says it was just like the day John F. Kennedy was killed.

"Seligman was bypassed by Interstate 40 on Sept. 22, 1978, at 3 p.m. in the afternoon," he remembers. "About 75 percent of the economy disappeared."

We lost four filling stations, two motels, two restaurants. I was angry, disillusioned, sad: I stayed disgusted for years."

Then it all came back.

Tourists returned to Route 66 and Seligman. They had questions about the road. They wanted to hear Delgadillo's memories, sit in the barber chair, see his photographs, forage his gift shop of Route 66 T-shirts and shards of asphalt in plastic bags for anyone who might want to own a piece of the road.

"They (tourists) were looking for America," he says. "I decided then that if we could preserve Route 66 and promote its history, we could preserve Seligman and other bypassed towns."

He founded the Historic Route 66 Association of Arizona and became guru and keeper of the route.

Two years ago Delgadillo wanted to retire, but the tourist traffic wouldn't let him. Souvenir sales are up 25 percent a year, visitors increase 15 percent a year, and Delgadillo is keeping count of his major media interviews. Two hundred to date.

He easily recognizes the lure of Route 66.

It has to do with days when any traveler could stop and ask for a glass of water without buying gas. A piece of homemade apple pie was usually a quarter of the pie. Hot? Sit on Delgadillo's porch and have a 16-cent root beer from the icebox while your car cooled off.

Delgadillo's gospel: "That's what was lost when Route 66 went away. That's why people are coming back. To find out what it's like to be treated right."

Documents turned over by Russia include Oswald letter

DAVID HOFFMAN
WASHINGTON POST

MOSCOW — The documents that President Boris Yeltsin turned over to President Clinton on the assassination of President Kennedy include the handwritten letter Lee Harvey Oswald wrote to Soviet authorities seeking asylum in 1959.

The documents also include material gathered about Oswald by the Soviet authorities while he lived in Minsk and records of high-level reaction to the Kennedy assassination in which Soviet officials expressed fears that Moscow would be blamed, experts said.

At the summit in Cologne, Germany, on Sunday, Yeltsin unexpectedly turned over to Clinton about 80 pages of material from Russian archives concerning the assassination.

Historians have expressed hope that the documents could shed light on whether Oswald schemed to kill Kennedy when he lived in the Soviet Union from 1959 to 1962.

The White House has promised the documents will be made public eventually. A group of researchers tried to obtain the documents in 1996 but they were refused.

Maxim Zhukov, a reporter for the newspaper Kommersant, obtained three of the documents and published them Tuesday. They were Oswald's letter; a Foreign Ministry document discussing the Soviet reaction to the assassination; and a document describing plans for attendance at the Kennedy funeral.

Vladimir Sokolov, a Russian Foreign Ministry archivist familiar with the documents, said in a television interview that they include secret cables, among them the first one sent by Anatoly Dobrynin, the longtime Soviet ambassador to Washington, at the time of the assassination. Sokolov said all the materials went directly to Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev.

"The 80 pages can be divided into two parts," Zhukov said. "One about the time Oswald spent here, the other, Soviet documents about official reaction to the killing of Kennedy." He said the documents might also include "stenoforms (transcripts) of meetings with Oswald."

Oswald, a former Marine, defected to the Soviet Union in 1959 and renounced his American citizenship. Sokolov said the documents show Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko was reluctant to grant Soviet citizenship to Oswald, "giving the argument that judging by the first acquaintance with him, so to speak, he is an unbalanced man, and so on. After he got a rejection, he cut his wrists."

"To the Suprem (sic) Soviet of the USSR," Oswald wrote in the single-page handwritten letter on Oct. 16, 1959, while on a visit to Moscow. "I Lee Harvey Oswald, request that I be granted citizenship in the Soviet Union . . .

"I want citizenship because I am a Communist and a worker. I have lived in a decadent capitalist society where the workers are slaves. I am 20 years old. I have completed three years in the United States Marine Corps. I served (sic) with the occupation forces in Japan, I have seen American military imperialism in all its forms."

Oswald said he did not want to return to "any country outside of the Soviet Union" and was willing to relinquish his American citizenship. He said he saved up his money to come to Moscow but did not have enough for a return. The envelope was marked, "Moscow, Hotel Berlin, Room 320, Lee Harvey Oswald."

Oswald later lived in the Belarus capital city, Minsk, where he was under KGB surveillance. In 1962, disenchanted, Oswald and his wife Marina returned to the United States and settled in Dallas.

Oswald was slain by Dallas nightclub owner Jack Ruby two days after the Kennedy assassination. The Warren Commission later concluded Oswald acted alone, a conclusion that has long been disputed.

A second document made public Tuesday is dated Nov. 26, 1963, just after the assassination. Gromyko proposed issuing instructions to the Soviet press to denounce reports in the United States that Oswald was somehow linked to the Soviet Union.

EXHIBIT

found the exhibit to be a lot of fun and a different educational experience.

"There is lots of hands-on stuff to do," she said. "It's different than other museums that say, 'Oooh, look at all the pretty stuff, but don't touch.'"

More than three million people have seen the exhibit at 20 different museums across the country. Mueller said the amount of support received by local businesses enabled the Science Center to bring the national exhibit to Carbondale.

"It is the kind of exhibit you wouldn't expect to see in Carbondale," Mueller said. "You would expect to see it in the bigger museums in St. Louis or Chicago; it is a once-in-a-Southern-Illinoisian opportunity."

"The 'In the Dark' exhibit will be on display at the Science Center in University Mall from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturdays and from noon to 5:30 p.m. Sundays. Admission is $3 per person or $2 per person in groups.

Middlebury college argues student responsible for own death

COLLEGE PRESS EXCHANGE

MIDDLEBURY, Vt. — Middlebury College is trying to fend off a federal lawsuit insisting that the school be held liable for the death of a 22-year-old student who died in an alcohol related car crash.

The suit was filed by the father of Ryan Waldron, a Middlebury senior killed in 1997 after driving drunk from a campus party at the social house Zeta Theta Phi. It charges that both the college and social house have "at least as much responsibility (if not more) ... for Ryan's death as did the acts committed by Ryan Waldron himself."

Karen Andrews, an attorney for the college, likened the suit to holding the state of Vermont liable when a state-licensed bar serves a minor. She filed a motion asking that the suit be dismissed, denying most of its allegations and stating that even if Middlebury were negligent, the college's fault would be "lesser in degree than Ryan Waldron's own fault."

Waldron lived off campus after his social house was shut down for alcohol-related violations. His father's lawsuit alleges that he got drunk on "blackout punch," a mixture of beer and vodka, and died later that night when the car he was driving home struck a tree. The lawsuit claims that the punch Waldron drank was prepared in an unauthorized container using unregistered quantities of alcohol that had been sneaked into the house.

All student parties at Middlebury at which alcohol will be served must be registered with the college's student activities office. The director of student activities determines the amount of alcohol that can be served based on the anticipated number of guests.

Houston rescues Knicks

KEVIN DING
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSPAPERS

NEW YORK — Allan Houston threw on a ratty T-shirt to stay warm for all the postgame interviews he knew were coming after such an individual starring role. And across the back of his shirt was this: "Teamwork makes the dream work."

It might seem an inappropriate slogan to be behind the Knicks' 89-81 victory that cut San Antonio's NBA Finals lead to 2-1 Monday night. But this wasn't just Houston's 34 points shooting down the Spurs.

All the Knicks came out with emotion heretofore unseen in the series, fired up by their Madison Square Garden crowd. They took a 2-0 lead on a basket by slumping Larry Johnson and kept it coming, never losing that lead.

Johnson became the third scorer that the Knicks have been desperately seeking, scoring 16 points, and Latrell Sprewell added 24.

Sprewell and Houston took plenty of shots, as they have been doing, but they also passed the ball when that was a better option, combining for nine assists.

The Knicks' 17 assists Monday was a vast improvement from their 12 in Game 1 and eight in Game 2.

Throw in fabulous defense that held San Antonio to 35 second-half points, and the Spurs' NBA-record 12-game postseason winning streak is over. The Knicks' unlikely hope of stealing an NBA title remains alive.

"Any team starts with belief and trust," Knicks coach Jeff Van Gundy said afterward. "Belief in themselves as individuals, belief in their teammates, belief in their coaching staff and then trust in those same areas."

Houston — whose understanding for working together is at the forefront at home, too, because his wife just had a baby — made most of the key shots for New York. But he pointed out how often some little thing a teammate did helped shift the spotlight to him.

Knicks forward Kurt Thomas, who had merely one basket all night, was the prime example. Thomas, passed over in favor of Marcus Camby when Van Gundy shuffled his lineup for the game, was instrumental in limiting Tim Duncan to 20 points.

Thomas also grabbed 10 rebounds — twice as many as any other Knicks.

One play told the story: San Antonio had gone on an 8-0 run late in the third quarter to tie the score, 58-58. That's when Johnson threw up an air ball, the ball squirted across the floor, and Thomas went diving for it near the sideline.

He got control and spotted Houston nearby. The pass was on the money, Houston easily got in rhythm, and he drilled a three-pointer just as the shot clock expired.

The Knicks led again and lived happily ever after.

"Kurt had a series of plays where he had off rebounds and hustle plays, and that's just the nature of this team," Houston said. "Kurt does his job and gets a great offensive rebound and hustle play and kicks it to me for a three. That's what happens sometimes when you keep digging in there and continue to work."

And as it has powered San Antonio's two victories, team defense drove the Knicks on Monday night.

"The Knick defense," Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said, "set the tone."

The Spurs turned the ball over 20 times; New York gave it up only 10 times. And that's why even though the Spurs shot a higher percentage, the Knicks led all the way.

Furthermore, Duncan was 0 for 4 with three turnovers in the fourth quarter. The bulk of that defense was played by Johnson, who has struggled staying with the taller Duncan all series.

"Between him, Kurt Thomas and Chris Dudley, they did a great job," Duncan said. "They kept a body on me and didn't give me the shots I usually can turn and make."

That defense allowed Houston to become the series' star of the moment, replacing Duncan.

"Allan feels, and I feel the same way, that there's nobody out there who can check him," said teammate Chris Childs.

And Houston, who resorted to one-on-one play at times in the first two games, was glad to have Child and Dudley with him.

"You just get a better contribution from everybody when you move the ball and when you play together," he said. "We did a much better job of playing together."

DUKE

Of Duke's 10 scholarship players for the 1999-2000 season, six will be freshmen. Krzyzewski cited two as needing to have an especially significant impact: point guard Jason Williams and power forward Carlos Boozer.

"Jason has the talent... The expectation level on him will be high," Krzyzewski said. "Probably (also for) Boozer because we'll need some type of an inside presence."

Krzyzewski conceded that another 37-2 record, including 16-0 in the ACC, wasn't a realistic goal. "But we're going to have a lot of fun with this team," he said. "None of those (departing) players is bigger than the program. We have visions of being really good."

Duke could have been so much more than that.

As Krzyzewski suggested, the Blue Devils could have been better in 1999-2000 than last season's national runner-up, had so many underclassmen not left.

He said he "probably will never know" why Burgess, who likely would have started at center next season, decided to transfer. Burgess told The Observer last month he left because he had been misled about how much playing time he would receive the past two seasons.

Krzyzewski also pleaded ignorance on the set of circumstances that led Maggette, who started three games as a freshman, to enter the NBA draft.

"I wouldn't call it a 'process,'" Krzyzewski said of Maggette's route to his decision. "'Process' suggests structure. I don't think there was any of that."

"I don't agree with (Maggette's) cause of action," he said. "But I'm supportive of Corey; I think Corey would be a lot better in every way if he stayed another few years. That doesn't mean there's a conflict."

Other topics Krzyzewski addressed: In his opinion, a return to freshman ineligibility, which is being considered, would send more high school players directly to the NBA — and probably won't be adopted by the NCAA.

"It's just so complex," he said. "The people studying it are really good people, but they don't have the time to study all that would occur. I think it's too big a thing (to be passed)."

The exodus of three potential underclass lottery picks from Duke, which had never had a player leave early for the NBA, ought to trigger change around the country.

"It would be negligent of the people looking over our sport not to see this as a clear sign something has to be done," he said. "You just can't keep losing players early and it not have an effect on where they left and where they're going."

Duke has tried to avoid recruiting early candidates for the NBA for the past six or seven years.

"None of those kids (Brand, Avery, Maggette) at that time said, 'I'm staying one year, two years, then I'm gone,'" Krzyzewski said. "I get letters from people saying we shouldn't recruit anybody (who intends to leave early)... Well, of course we wouldn't."

"We started looking a little bit closer six, seven years ago. We looked at their personalities, their family situations, how they've done in school."

The ACC probably should avoid expansion, Krzyzewski said.

"I don't see where that helps the conference," he said. "To me, if you go to 10 teams that's 18 conference games and the (ACC) tournament. That's 19 of your 27 (regular-season) games. That's a lot. It hurts your ability to play intersectional games that are so good for college basketball."

Upcoming: SIUC Track and Field assistant coach set to compete for a spot on the U.S. national team

Mingszu Yu/Daily Egyptian

Jayperselas Burred (center) from Makanda eagerly awaits his turn to bat while he and his friends practice exercises they learned at the SIUC baseball camp Tuesday.

Fundamentally-sounded camp

The 27th Annual Saluki Youth Baseball Camp emphasizes fun while teaching basic skills to kids

PAUL WLEKLINSKI
SPORTS EDITOR

Long before athletic shoe endorsements, multimillion-dollar contracts and performance-enhancing drugs, Mark McGwire had a dream. But that dream was not without proper guidance.

The SIUC baseball program is offering its resources to give the Mark McGwires of tomorrow their first opportunity to learn the game and, more importantly, to have fun.

Before any Major League Baseball dreams are born, baseball has to be fun, which is exactly what the SIUC baseball program, in association with local high school and junior college coaches, are trying to do at the 1999 27th Annual Saluki Youth Baseball Camp.

"To me, the most important thing is that they have fun," SIUC baseball coach Dan Callahan said. "Because if they're not having fun, they're not going to enjoy the camp."

Having fun and playing baseball go hand-in-hand for many of the kids, who are between the ages of 7 and 12 years old, but learning the fundamentals can become a bore for those who just want to play.

The camp teaches the children the skills of base running, catching fly balls, chasing down ground balls and other skills needed to play at any level. Callahan said his toughest job is to give the parents their money's worth by teaching those skills.

"A lot of [the kids] don't like the bunting," Callahan said. "It seems like everybody likes the hitting."

"We can probably have a camp that all the kids did was hit off the machine and play games and they'd probably like it, but I don't know if we would be doing our job as a coaching staff."

This is Tyler Finnie's third year at the camp. Finnie, a 10-year-old Saluki camper from Elizabethtown who will be a fifth grader in Marion in the fall, hopes to someday play for the Salukis.

A long day underneath the blistering sun leaves him speechless.

"He comes here every year, and he loves it," said Angie Finnie, Tyler's mother. "Every coach that he has ever had in all three years has been great. It's always really hot out here, and no one ever complains. The coaches, I think, are just excellent."

The SIUC athletic program caters to children like Finnie, whose interests are diverse. Finnie also frequents the basketball camps instructed by the SIUC basketball program. The Athletic Department also offers swimming, track and field, volleyball and softball, among others.

"If they leave camp at the end of the day you know they are going to be tired because the heat and humidity," Callahan said.

"But if they leave camp at the end of the day with a smile on their face, you at least hope that they had a little bit of fun and they learned something in the process."

Healthy Coach 'K' picks up pieces of Duke program

GREGG DOYEL
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSPAPERS

DURHAM, N.C. — He still doesn't know why Chris Burgess transferred, or how Corey Maggette decided to leave for the NBA, but Duke men's basketball coach Mike Krzyzewski has emerged from a turbulent off-season sure of one thing: He feels great.

"I feel better than I have in at least five years, since my back (force him out in 1994)," Krzyzewski said Monday in his first news conference since the Final Four. "I feel terrific. I'm really excited about it. I could not be any better."

His secret? A new hip, which corrected a 11/2-inch difference between his left and right legs - easing pain that, for two years, had prevented him from tying his shoes without a grimace. Eleven weeks into his rehabilitation, Krzyzewski is walking without a cane.

And still feeling a bit blind-sided by what happened to his program in April and May.

"I don't think anybody could have foreseen that," Krzyzewski said, referring to the premature losses of four key players: sophomores Elton Brand and William Avery and freshman Maggette to the NBA draft, and sophomore Burgess via transfer to Utah. Brand's departure was predictable, "but the other three, no way I forecasted that. We're awfully fortunate we recruited such a big class."
