Construction on the still unnamed stadium has entered the fined phase, with the installment of artificial turf and seats to begin in the next week, said Jason King, associate athletic director of facilities.

The turf installment should start as early as (Monday), and we're getting the seats on June 28," he said. "We're getting closer to where we need to be in construction."

Saluki Way is the massive overhaul on the east side of campus. The first phase, which includes a new stadium, a renovated arena and an additional wing to the athletic facility carries a price tag of $83 million, with $20 million coming from a tax imposed by the city of Carbondale, $41.5 million coming from student fees and the remaining $21.5 million coming through private donations.

Dorothy Morris dies at age 101

RYANVOYLES Daily Egyptian

Dorothy Mayo Morris, the widof former SIU president Delyie W. Morris, passed away June 15 at her home in Chapel Hill, N.C. She was 101 years old.

SIU president Glenn Poshard said in a release Dorothy Morris and her and helped turn SIU into the university it is known as today.

"Anyone who reads the history of this university will know that Delyte and Dorothy Morris were equally responsible for making SIU a great university," Poshard said, "Mrs. Morris played an active role in helping to shape the future for SIU and we owe her a tremendous debt of gratitude for her contributions. She is still loved by every alumni who has passed through our doors over these many years.

Her husband served as SIU president from 1948 to 1970, and saw enrollment jump from 3,000 students to more than 36,000. Dorothy Morris was an honorary member of the SIU Foundation Board of Directors.

The Morris Library is named after the pair.

said although he did not know her, Morris helped shape the current state of the university.

"She took great steps towards making the university what it was today," Sievers said, "She played a great role in promoting the university. Certainly she was a great figurehead for the university along with her husband. Of course as the wife of Delyte, she shaped what this university is."

Sievers said he did not know if there would be any memorial service held for Morris on campus.

The turf will take around aree weeks to place and put together. King said. He said the process includes bringing turf onto the field in pieces and "stitching and gluing" the segments together while also shaving down the areas for the yard-markers.

Although administrators had expressed fears in the past about rain affecting the process, King said the completion of the on field draining system have settled those concerns.

"We had that downpou the other day, and the field dried off immediately," he said. "Since that is done, all they have to do is place the turf on the ground.

Fieldturf, the company installing the turf, has laid turf at university stadiums such as Vake Forest and Kent State

King said seat installation ould begin when the seats arrive, and should take several weeks to be completed. He said the biggest challenge facing construction now is the completion of the ground site." the area around the stadium.

"From projects I've worked on in the past, that is always the toughest part to plan for," King said. "It is very dependent on the weather outside. We can't pour concrete if the ground is too wcL

Though the stadium still does not have a name, Athletic Director Mario Moccia said the university is close to giving the stadium a "place-holder name for the upcoming season. He said the decision on the name would come after meeting with Chancellor Rita Cheng and other administrators.

"We have to go through all the channels, but we're getting pretty close," he said.

Moccia had said in the past the athletic department was waiting for a donation that meets the $10 million donation criteria to gain naming rights to the stadium, though he had said it was not a set number.

The Salukis host their first me at the new stadium Sept. ·2 against Quincy University. Moccia said the completion of the field looks close enough to host a game.

"I've been really impressed so far with the progress and talking with the construction managers," he said. "It looks like we're getting very close to the ability to finally have a football game there."

Report: Van der Sloot retracts murder confession

TORY STERLING The Associated Press

AMSTERDAM - A Dutch newspaper that interviewed Joran van der Sloot in his prison cell in Lima, Peru, said Monday he has retracted his confession to the killing of a young woman there.

De Telegraaf said the 22-year-old Dutchman claims he only signed papers admitting killing Stephany Flores because he was intimidated by police and had been promised he uld be transferred to the Netherlands if he confessed.

"I was very scared and confused during the interrogations and wanted to get away," the paper quoted him as saying. "In my blind panic, I signed everything, but didn't even what it said.

Van der Sloot is the main suspect in Flores' May 30 killing in a Lima hotel, exactly 5 years after the still unsolved disappearance of U.S. teen Natalee Holloway on Aruba. He met both women in casinos, and both ere last seen alive in his company

Peruvian President Alan Garcia has said Van der Sloot will have to be tried in Flores' death before any extradition request can be considered. In addition to possible involvement in Holloway's disappearance, for which Van der Sloot has not been charged, he is wanted by the FBI on suspicion of attempting to extort oney from the Holloway family.

If convicted of killing Flores, he faces from 15 to 35 years in prison

Prosecutors allege Van der Sloot killed Flores in his hotel roo where her body was found, with "ferocity and great cruelty." According to a transcript of the confess he elbowed the young womin'in the nose, strangled her with both hands, threw her to the floor, took off his bloodied shirt and asphyxi-

"I was tricked," the paper quoted Van der Sloot as saying of Flores' killing. "I'll explain later how it all happened."

He is scheduled to be interviewed by a judge in Lima this week.

A self-avowed compulsive liar. Van der Sloot has several times given and retracted admissions of involvement in Holloway's disappearance.

He is being held in a segregated ck of the maximum-security Castro Castro prison in eastern Lima. He asked to be separated from the main prison population out of fear for his life

Tracking Joran van der Sloot

The 22-year-old Dutchman has been arrested for the murder of Stephany Flores, a 21-year-Pendian woman, and is the lone suspect in the 2005 disappéarance in Anuba of Natalee Hollowny, an Alubuma tecnager.

Van der Sloot told the Telegraaf that rats crawl into his room through his toilet hole at night.

His mother Anita van der Sloot said in an interview published by the same newspaper over the weekend that Van der Sloot suffers from mental problems. She said she doesn't believe he had killed Holloway, but If he killed Flores "he'll have to pay the price" and she didn't plan to visit him in jail.

Holloway's father Dave has called on Van der Sloot to reveal anything he knows about the location of he body, which has never been found Van der Sloot has said he will only talk about the matter with Aruba

Flores' father Ricardo told the Associated Press in an earlier interview that his daughter had resisted her attacker, who he is certain was Van der Sloot. He said the Dutchman would be linked to the crime by DNA evidence retrieved from under her fingernails

He said he hopes that Van der oot will eventually be punished for the deaths of both women "so that there can be justice."

La. companies ask judge to end drilling moratorium

MICHAEL KUNZELMAN The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS - Companies that ferry peopley and supplies to offshore oil rigs asked a federal judge Monday to lift a six-month ratorium on new deepwater drilling projects imposed in the aftermath of the massive Gulf spill.

U.S. District Judge Martin Feldman heard two hours of arguments Monday and said he will decide by Wednesday whether to overturn the ban imposed by President Barack Obama's administration after the Deepwater Horizon rig

The April 20 disaster killed 11 workers and blew out a well that has gushed anywhere from 68 million to 126 millions of oil into the Gulf.

BP said Monday it has spent $2 billion in two months fighting the spill and compensating victims, with no end in sight. It's likely to be at least August before crews fu relief wells that are the best chance of stopping the flow of oil. The British oil giant released its latest tally of response costs, irichlding $105 million paid out so far to 32,000 claimants. The figure does not include a $20 billion fund that BP PLC last week agreed to set up for Gulf residents and businesses hurt by the spill. Kenneth Feinberg, who has been tapped by President Barack Obama run the fund, said many people are in desperate financial straits and need immediate relief.

Do not underestimate the emo tionalism and the frustration and the anger of people in the Gulf uncertain of their financial future," he said. Feinberg, who ran the claim fund set up for victims of the Sept 11, 200), terrorist attacks, sald he is determined to speed payment

Shares of BP, which have lost about half their value since the rig Deepwater Horizon burned and off the Louisiana coast, fell nearly 3 percent Monday in New York trading to $30.86. The rig was ed by Transocean Ltd. but run

BP chief executive Tony Hayward canceled a scheduled Tuesday appearance at a London oil conferer citing his commitment to the Gulf relief effort. The last-minute pullout followed stinging criticism of Hayward's attendance at a yacht race on the Isle of Wight off the coast of southern England on Saturday.

Obama's administration has also been struggling to show it is responding forcefully to the spill. As part of that effort, the Interior Denent halted the approval of any new permits for deepwater drilling and suspended drilling at 33 existing exploratory wells in the Gulf.

But a lawsuit filed by the Covington-based Hornbeck Offshore Services of Covington, La., claims the government arbitrarily imposed the moratorium without any proof that the operations posed a threat. Hornbeck says the moratorium could cost Louisiana thousands of jobs and millions of dollars in lost wages.

This is an extraordinary time for the Gulf Coast. It calls out for an extraordinary remedy," plaintiffs' attorney Carl Rosenblum said in court Monday.

Government Lawyers said the Interior Department has demonstrated that industry regulators need more time to study the risks of deepwater drilling and identify ways to make it safer.

There is a lot the department does not know, and that's precisely why it's important to conduct these studies and learn more," said Justice Department attorney Guillermo

Feldman asked a government wyer why the Interior Department decided to suspend deepwater drilling after the rig explosion when it didn't bar oil tankers from Alaskan waters after the Exxon Valdez spill in 1989 or take similar actions in the wake of other industrial accidents.

The Deepwater Horizon blowut was a game-changer," Montero said. "It really illustrates the risks that are inherent in deepwater

Kids grow sensical about nature

CHRIS MCGREGOR Daily Egyptian

Nine-year-old Fidelio-luc Reich-ard had no idea mammals had bones in their ears until this week.

Reichard is participating in Eco U. a summer camp at Touch of Nature for children in second to seventh grades. Eco U offers different sessions throughout the month of June and into July.

The camp has four different segments throughout each day aime at the development of the children's confidence, creativity and teamwork abilities and the exploration of nature through a variety of ways, said Kate Hellgren, program coordinator for environmental education at Touch of Nature.

Reichard said he loved to learn and the camp taught him more about nature.

Hellgreen said one session focuses on using all the senses to appreciate

"We want to open up all their senses including hearing," she said. "The birds can sing and the pendent on us to speak for it. It is portant that the kids take the planet into consideration, in as many choices as possible."

The camp is designed to bring environmental awareness to the campers, said Kate Hellgren, program coordinator for environmental education at Touch of Nature.

"With awareness comes appreciation," she said. "With appreciation comes stewardship and ultimately we want the kids to be stronger more informed citizens of our plane."

Environmental awareness is built through immersing campers in nature, said Hellgren. She said the campers are encouraged to use all their senses to investigate the Campers are encouraged to do more than just write in their journals, said Heligren. She said they could draw, make rubbings of leaves or anything that helps them illustrate their experiences with nature.

"I like all the art stuff we do," said Zamora Vacek, a 12-year-old from Giant City.

Vacek said the campers made birdfeeders out of recycled materials, and she learned an extensive amount about recycling because of the camp.

The children's experience at the camp will ultimately help them make better decisions in regards to the planet's well-being, Vacek said.

Sara Kolpek, a counselor for Eco U, said children could learn many skills from the camp. She said the kids learn to work in large groups that are diverse in age.

The summit showed just much power James and Wade command in the league In reality, it is Wade and James telling the others where they might go. Then the others argue who should go with who to try to win a championship, because none of the other players will win a championship on the abovementioned teams without Wade or James.

In a few works, the madness begins and each one of the free agents' destinies will unfold. James will most likely go to Chicago, although Bosh would be a better fit. James is arguably the best player in the game, but Bosh plays more to the needs of the Bulis.

Wade will stay in Miami. He loves the city and the city loves him back. The only obistacle in that relationship is the lack of talented players surrounding him. This past season it was Wade-on-five because his team offered virtually no support.

The possibilities with next year's rosters are endless. The impatient waiting game to where these great players will go is almost over.

We want to take one and two in the hammer and she wants to win the discus throw," Berry said. "Just because it's worldwide doesn't mean that we can't go and do our thing again. We are always going to compete at our best, we are not afraid to go one and two."

McCall said she hopes the event will be tightly contested as there have been many events where they are the leaders by a considerable distance and become bored with the lack of a challenge.

"We compete better when there is better competition; we go after it more and it is more exciting. Mc-Call said. "It is natural to go at a higher level with better competition, because it's part of a growing experience.

McCall and Berry will compete at the 2010 USA-Outdoor Track and Field of Championship June 25 to 27. They said it would give them an opportunity to work on their game against collegiate and professional American athletes before they participate at NACAC.

her," Spann said. "I know that every decision I make and everything I do now affects not just me, but her and how I support her later in life."

Spann said his daughter reninds him of when he was young.

"It was so funny that on Father's Day she woke me up and gave me a card that she had made," Spann said. "She is so smart and she understands what I have to do for us."

. Fellow teammate and senior cornerback Korey Lindsey has a 2-year-old daughter, Kennedi Lindsey, who lives in Lindsey's hometown Baton Rouge, La. He said time management has become the No. 1 priority since be coming a father

"She helps me put everything into perspective." Lindsey said. "Being a father definitely numbles your manners and you learn that it is not just about you arrymore."

Lindsey said he goes home to see her as much as he can on breaks and makes sure to talk to her as often as he can on the telephone.

Before every football game I call her and she wishes me good luck and tells me how much she loves me," Lindsey said. "By doing that she gives me that motivation and extra boost that always pushes me to do my best."

Free-agent market set to open

mers NBA free accrecy analyzod with a magnifying class for the because of the number

On July 1, the market is officially open. The term free agent is ironic with amount of money sure to be sport. Lebron lames, Chris Bosh, Dwanne Wade, Amure Stoudemire, loe Johnson and Dirk Nowitzki are looking for maximum contracts. This means they want contracts for five to seven years worth $70 million to $100 inilian

James will probably become the highest paid player in NRA history or dose to both on and off the court. The Boston Celtics Kevin Garnett was at the top of the money scale for the 2009-10 season at $24.7 million while Michael Jordan remains the highest-paid player for one season at $30 million.

The big question backetball fans are asking is not how much money the players will carn, but from where they will receive their paycheds?

Each of the 30 teams in the league ants to make a push for James or Wade. They are two players talented and young enough to build a team around and the true franchise players in the freeagest class. The rest of the players are oreat, but based on leadership skills, statistics or number of miles on their legs, they are considered No. 2 guys.
The question NBA executives are ask.

ing is, who can afford which player! The NBA's salary cap for the 2010-11 season is projected at $56.1 million. The cap will give the New Jersey Nets, Miami Heat, New York Knikks, Washington Wizards, Chicago Bulls, Los Angeles Cirpors and the Minnesota Timberwolves the financall advantage. But the free agents are concerned with more than money as Wade's unprecedented "summit" showed.

Wade and the other top free agents met in a "summit" to discuss where they vere going and options of playing with each other. Multiple package deals have been linked to James, Bosh, Wade and Stoudenire. One put Lebron and Wade together, while another puckage put Wade, Bosh and Stoudernire together. The summit showed these players would take a pay cut if it meant a better chance at holding the Larry O'Drien trophy at the
