Six-year-old Dennis Douglas and his aunt Royanna White of Kalamazoo, Mich. leave the funeral of Eric's mother Camille Douglas with a flower from her casket March 8 at Oakland Cemetery in Carbondale. Douglas died of complications while giving birth to her seventh child at Carbondale Memorial Hospital.

George Sisk (right), owner of Hickory Hill, and Jon Musgrave, former reporter of the Harrisburg News Journal, discuss the history of slavery in Illinois on the third floor of the Old Slave House at Hickory Hill near Equality. The ball and chain in the picture is the only one that remains of many balls and chains found by Sisk's grandfather when he bought the house in 1935.

Police officers examine the site of a fatal single car accident on East Walnut Avenue in Carbondale. Felix Jackson of Carbondale died in the early morning accident when he lost control on a curve, struck a light pole and flipped his car. Flowers were placed at the site as a memorial to Jackson by friends and family.

Adam Campbell, a graduate student in equine reproductive physiology from Quincy, takes Rusty and her new filly, Faith, out to run. The young horse, whose full name is Saluki Fulfillment of Faith, is being trained by Campbell and other SIU graduate students.

Don Simpson of Mid America Services secures an old drainage pipe to a flatbed trailer near the current construction of the Mill Street underpass in downtown Carbondale.

Prospective team members try out for the SIUC roller hockey club on the asphalt courts on South Wall Street. John Doogan, a junior in aviation at SIUC, adjusts his equipment. "A lot of people don't know we play teams like Michigan State and U of I," Doogan said.

Farrah rests in the basement of her home while her owner, John Saunders looks on. Saunders owns two other Salukis and has been raising and showing dogs since he graduated from SIU.
Four drummers with the St. Louis Osuwa Taiko of Washington University demonstrate Asian drumming at the Free Forum Area. The drum session marked the last event of Asian American Awareness Month 2000.

A full moon rises over Pulliam Hall. A few hours later, the moon began moving into the Earth's shadow. The total lunar eclipse lasted until 11:22 p.m. and the full moon was visible again by 12:25 a.m.

Four-year-old Laura Alarcon, daughter of Claudia and Cesar Alarcon from Columbia, leans against her mother's back and rubs her eyes after serenading a few Morris Library patrons who happened to be nearby.

William Fenton of A & S. Companies watches as a crane operator lowers part of the old wooden cooling tower from the James W. Hedges Building into a dumpster. The 30-year-old tower, constructed of rot-resistant cypress wood, had been deteriorating due to constant exposure to water.
Louise Miller, control board operator at the Southern Illinois Radio Information Service on the SIUC campus, stores tapes of magazine articles and books played the previous day; “We’ll play them again next month. But we record and play the newspapers from Carbondale, Murphysboro and Marion every day,” Miller said.

SIUC students Maricela Gamboa, right, and Tricia Snider were hailed as heroes after alerting several New Orleans residents of a fire at their apartments while they were on spring break.

Chris Ciliberto, a senior from Elizabethtown, KY, competes in the 400 yd Individual Medley during the MVC Championship at the Recreation Center. The SIU men's team got second place in the tournament losing to Southwest Missouri State by 26.5 points.

Kim Holloway, left, Molly McDowell and Katie Berwanger sit dejectedly on the bench during the waning moments of a home loss to Creighton. This last season was tough for the Lady Salukis as they finished the year 8-21, and fell in the first round of the MVC tournament.

SIU head coach Bruce Weber offers Brandon Melo a suggestion before he takes a break on the bench.
The Dawg Pound hits a frenzy during a home game this year at the arena. SIU Arena is known throughout the MVC as one of the hardest places to play, mainly because of The Pound. The men’s basketball team had a 20 win, National Invitational Tournament season.

SIUC women’s golf coach Dianne Daugherty shares a laugh with Allison Miller during the Saluki Invitational. This year’s Women’s golf team won the Missouri Valley Conference tournament.

Saluki second baseman Joe Meeks gets airborne diving into home plate against the University of Tennessee-Martin at Abe Martin Field. Although Meeks was called out on this play, SIU was able to safely cross the plate 12 times winning 12-6.
