Daily Egyptian photographers bring home awards

DAILY EGYPTIAN photographers took home a number of awards this year at various competitions. The DE photo staff recieved 15 awards at the Illinois Proffesional Photogaphers Association Student Contest, which is open to any students attending Illinois schools and any students who are from Illinois but attending school out of state. The staff won seven awards at the 1999 Illinois Collegiate Press Association contest. The DAILY EGYPTIAN was also recently awarded second place in the nation for Best Overall Use of Photography by the Six-year-old Dennis Douglas and his aunt Royanna White of Kalamazoo, Mich. leave the funeral of Eric's mother Camille Douglas with a flower from her casket March 8 at Oakland Cemetary in Carbondale. Douglas died of complications while giving birth to her seventh child at Carbondale Memorial Hospital.

George Sisk(right), owner of Hickory Hill, and Jon Musgrave, former reporter of the Harrisburg News Journal, discuss the history of slavery in Illinois on the third floor of the Old Slave House at Hickory Hill near Equality. The ball and chain in the picture is the only one that remains of many balls and chains found by Sisk's grandfather when he bought the house in 1913.

Police officers examine the site of a fatal single car accident on East Walnut Avenue in Carbondale. Felix Jackson of Carbondale died in the early morning accident when he lost control on a curve, struck a light pole and flipped his car. Flowers were placed at the site as a memorial to Jackson by friends and family.
