By Katie Kastnelson

Black and white must escape their complex middle-class existence and begin the civil rights fight again if they don’t want to be trampled by conservative politicians and Reaganomics, Rep. Shirley Chisholm warned Saturday.

Chisholm, a Democrat representing Brooklyn in Congress since 1968, urged action from more than 400 listeners at the 6th annual NAACP Banquet. She told them they’d be disappointed if they hadn’t expected less from a few years and leave them with a message that is as relevant today as it was when she was elected.

She seared the NAACP’s theme: “The Vote Is Still Great,” and ran with it for 25 minutes, her remarks punctuated with more than a dozen bursts of applause, two standing ovations and continual shouts of “yes,” “right on sister,” “you’re right,” and “and thank you.”

She spoke with pride of progress made by blacks and the poor during the 1960s and ’70s but warned that the gains may have been lost.

“Have we had it? Yes, we have had hope. We had great expectations then ... I’m worried now. Are we now marching in a conservative quicksand that is beginning to engulf our freedom come to mean just standing idly on street corners?”

She warned that great gains were being made by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., and his followers, the conservative element prevalent in politics today planned and worked to regain control of blacks and the poor.

“And now if we’re going to get back to the semiparalysis, we got over the mountains and we forgot from whence we came. Have we forgotten what it took to make it into the reelected?”

She noted the resurgence of the Ku Klux Klan and neo-Nazi groups, saying that they as well as some conservative politicians are using “the same tactics we used to recapture and keep the government away from blacks and the poor.”

The women’s movement with it making more progress for a women’s group to high national office but emphasized that more work is needed before women and blacks get serious consideration at the polls.

Amusement tax, bikeway plans to be discussed

By Bob Bondurant

New Carbondale City Council member Neil Dillard, surprised by the suddenness of an appointment took place, may undergo a baptism of fire when the Council meets Monday.

At the informal meeting, a controversy is due to arise over an amusement tax to help finance the proposed 644-space downtown Carbondale parking garage will be discussed, as well as a number of other issues, including a Municipal Solar Utility, and plans for a new administration building of the city’s bikeway network.

The amusement tax proposal was introduced to the city by Mayor John Moreno, director of economic development and Carbondale Regional, finance director for the city.

The Council could choose to tax two personal income tax brackets, $10,000 to $50,000 and $50,000 and higher, under a proposal for a Municipal Solar Utility, and plans for a new administration building of the city’s bikeway network.

Washington, D.C.—New Right strategists, determined to force broader changes in national policy on housing, abortion and school prayer, are joining congressional conservatives in a campaign to curb the power of federal judges.

The conservative activists describe their impending campaign as a result of various legal rulings on these emotional social issues, which they contend Congress designed to give judges wide discretion in deciding cases, regardless of their political leanings.

The social issues have been divided even conservatives, but the economic conservative groups, the electoral conservatives, the defense conservatives, the pro-life conservatives, the pro-life forces, the pro-life social conservatives, and the pro-life religious conservatives, are all working to blur the line between the state and the local level.

The right to life of the unborn child and the right of a woman to a legal abortion are issues on which many federal judges, who serve for life, are liberals who disregard the Constitution. The right to local control of education and the right of the states to regulate farm prices are other issues on which the states have been divided.

Close contact seen as aid to foreign students

Professors and international students should form close relationships to make understanding and learning more effective, according to a panel of international students.

Eleven students from six countries told SIU-C faculty members at an intercultural communications seminar Friday in the Student Center some of the cultural problems they have had with their professors.

Communication problems can occur "when members of slightly to entirely different cultures interact," K.S. Idris, radio and television professor who organized the seminar, said before the panel discussion.

Most of the foreign students agreed that most communication problems could be reduced if professors and students knew each other better.

Sagan Taludathar, an engineering student from Nepal, said he and his friends and foreign students have to be close in order to solve communication problems that are different throughout the world.

For example, he said that because Japanese students are trained to respect authority, they are more willing to accept what their professors tell them without question.

Chris Okwudishu, a student in educational media from Nigeria, said most foreign students can't look their professors in the eye, call them by their first name or sit down in their presence because to do so would convey a lack of respect.

"What a student thinks is a show of respect is perceived as playing games by the professor," Okwudishu said. 'This misinterpretation can easily lead a student to fail grade, a student gets out of a course.'

Many communication problems are caused because professors and American students should get along better, according to Jack Endley, a biology professor from Cameroon.

"Professors should just learn to deal with every one a human being," Endley said.

Public accounting from Cody urged

CHICAGO (AP) - The Rev. Hans Kung, a theologian often at odds with the Vatican, is urging liberal Roman Catholics to press Cardinal John Cody for a public accounting in response to allegations that he misused church funds.

Kung on Saturday endorsed an "open letter" to Cody from a group of 27 prominent Catholic activists on Chicago. The letter calls for Cody to respond honestly, promptly and publicly to questions about his handling of church money.

Ex-HUD chief blasts Reaganomics

NORTH PLATTE, Neb. (AP) - Former U.S. Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Moon Landrieu, hinting at a possible presidential bid in 1984, says President Reagan's economic policy is putting a burden in the wrong place.

Landrieu, D-I., secretary in former President Carter's cabinet, said at a Democratic fund-raising dinner that Reaganomics "is a program that it has taken 30 years to put into effect with nothing to replace them."

"President Reagan is taking the bud of a new plant and shifting the burden to those least able to carry it," Landrieu said. "The Republican economic program is not going to work. I wish it would work but the evidence is fairly clear."
Students can fight winter costs by attending energy workshops

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

It’s an unfortunate fact of fall that as temperatures drop, utility bills rise—but SIU-C students can fight the costs that Old Man Winter brings.

The Save Energy Project is sponsoring on-campus energy workshops this month and students who participate in the 14-hour sessions can take home a variety of energy conservation devices.

The giveaway items, which are limited supply, include: cork gun, weather stripping, electric door atau, water-flow restrictors and insulated blankets for hot-water heaters.

Darlene McCray, in charge of the workshops, said students need to learn what “no-cost,” “low-cost,” weatherization measures exist.

“Because of projected continued increases in energy prices it’s important for students to learn how to conserve energy now,” she said. McCray said that many student dwellings are extremely energy inefficient, the purchase of some expensive weatherization devices can greatly reduce energy bills.

“Saving energy doesn’t have to be expensive or time consuming,” she said. “You don’t need a toolbox to use low-cost, no-cost methods.”

The workshops will be held from noon to 1:30 p.m. and from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Wednesdays and Fridays in Activity Room B of the Student Center.

A Carbonale man was being held Sunday in Jackson County Jail on an allegedly stolen money, a gun and marijuana at a gastrointestinal from three men Friday at Freeman Hall, 800 W. Freeman.

Abraham Westley Jr., 32, of 701 S. Poplar, was charged with armed robbery and is scheduled to be arraigned Monday in Jackson County Circuit Court.

Carbonale police said that Westley allegedly took over $1,900 in cash, a quantity of marijuana and a 22-caliber Birt pistol from one of the three men Friday, as reported by a woman.

The victims were identified as Bryan A. Piper of Freeman Hall and Paul McGill, also Robert Nightower, both of Chicago.

The victims were allegedly tied up with duct tape in the incident. Westley was arrested at about 5 p.m. Friday. Westley was Carbonale police after he was identified by the victims.

They will feature a slide presentation showing students what can be done to prevent heat-escape from buildings.

McCray said that half of all heat is lost through windows and doors, in fact, as much heat is lost through a quarter-inch gap under a door as would escape through a nine-inch hole in a wall. The slide presentation shows caulk and weather stripping can be used to prevent energy loss.

Samples of materials shown in the presentation are available at the workshops, as well as a list of where they can be purchased and their costs.

McCray will also show how to maintain hot-water heaters, stoves, refrigerators, air-conditioners and furnaces.

SIU-C student allegedly raped

An SIU student was allegedly raped early Friday morning in rural Jackson County, according to the Jackson County Sheriff’s Office.

The woman was reportedly abducted at about 4:13 a.m. in Carbonale and taken to rural Jackson County and raped. An investigation is being conducted by the Jackson County Sheriff’s office and Carbonale police.

Bikers and motorists must learn to coexist

The cartoon that appears on this page may very well reflect the sentiments of many Carbondale bike riders. The Carbondale ban on sidewalks bike riding irks some people who feel that street riding is hazardous. The state of Illinois seems to share the feeling. As of Jan. 1, 1985, the riding of bikes on sidewalks will become legal through Public Act 82-132.

The recent example of -- forgive the expression -- riding in the wrong direction, and the conflict between that law and the Carbondale ban will be one of the topics of discussion at Monday's BIU-U meeting.

Many members of the BIU-U bike club, as well as several city officials, have opposed sidewalk bike riding because they maintain that bikes and cars must learn to coexist. They also maintain that sidewalk bike riding increases the dangers to bikers and pedestrians alike, rather than decreases it.

One need go no farther than our own campus to see that conflict. The second dormitory on market street, for example, is a common point where bikers and pedestrians use the same paths. Every day nimbus-footed students just barely escape onrushing bikers -- one can just picture the scene a moment later when someone tries to cross the sidewalks.

In addition, sidewalk bike riding poses some serious dangers to the bikers themselves. Sidewalk riding decreases the time between the points at which motorists and bikers see each other, because of trees, bushes and signs. It also increases the likelihood of motorists backing out of driveways into bikes. Most motorists have their eyes on the road all the way past the sidewalk before looking in either direction to see if the way is clear.

There are, of course, some problems with a sidewalk riding ban -- namely, little kids who don't ride well enough to be in the street, and who are unfamiliar with traffic laws, safety in cars and the importance of common courtesy.

Another recommendation has suggested that bikes could be classified by size, allowing the kids to terrorize the sidewalks on their Big Wheels. That sounds like a good idea -- the classification system would keep the terrors in line.

The city may also want to allow sidewalk riding in certain areas. The concept of bike corridors -- down-one-way streets and no stopping signs and lights, Motorists would have to yield the right of way and show them the same courtesy they would any other vehicle on the road.

Banning bikers from using sidewalks will probably elicit a lot of moaning and griping, especially if the police start issuing tickets to wayward cyclists. But it will be worth it if it makes everyones' life easier, and is just as much a transportation vehicle as a car is. The state law only reinforces the perception of bikes as toys.

Stand up for the MSU

It has been over a year now since Carbondale first considered decontrol of natural gas. It has been nearly a month since the Chamber of Commerce stepped up in opposition to the ambitious Municipal Solar Utility which was the result of the Energy Facts Conference.

It is time for the people of Carbondale -- citizens, faculty, staff and students -- to stand up for energy conservation. Come to the meeting on Monday night and show your support for solar, and help our elected officials.

The facts are, unfortunately, that the government's energy problems cannot be solved by "the forces of the marketplace," as the Chamber of Commerce suggested. The Arab nations hold control over our oil supplies; the two recessions of 1974 and 1980 were the direct result of that control's increase in 1973 and 1979.

The carton has rendered "free market" rhetoric irrelevant. The oil corporations would have us believe that profits will flow to us if we reduce our demand. We'd like to see the report that shows how ill the fossil fuel industry is doing.

Mr. Burley's letter-to-the-editor of Nov. 2nd, "For my belief that the position of the Chamber of Commerce is a good one," shows a common misconception that the MSU solar proposal is given from several weeks reviewing the MSU executive summary and the outline of the administrative structure of the proposal. It constitutes a clear and complete understanding of the complex issues and questions involved.

The question of the hour here in Carbondale is this: will our city's leadership enact a plan that prepares our city for the future or will we continue to ignore the problems we face?

The Reagan administration's decentralization of natural gas will increase the outflow, due to energy costs, from the community of $30 to $39 million in one only year. That means fewer dollars will be spent to provide the services we need.

That's right -- $30 to $39 million -- and it may well get worse. As a Carbondale Chamber of Commerce says, "You can pay me today, or you can pay me later."

Enactment of a 3 percent utility tax would adequately provide the funds for the proposed solar plan. Enactment of the comprehensive MSU plan will place our city at the national forefront of the battle for energy conservation.

So come to the council meeting at 7 p.m. Monday, 808 E. College. This will be our only opportunity to keep the administration from this important misconception.

Chamber's position on MSU rests on partial information

By Pamala Burley

Chamber's solar plan is a good one, but the MSU solar proposal has never been required to choose their energy sources in a free marketplace. The Chamber represents the state of Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs. The Chamber's adherence to "free market" policies means that they are seeking unique and rational solutions in each and every decision.

Mr. Burley's letter-to-the-editor of Nov. 2nd, "For my belief that the position of the Chamber of Commerce is a good one," shows a common misconception that the MSU solar proposal is given from several weeks reviewing the MSU executive summary and the outline of the administrative structure of the proposal. The role of the city government in promoting the MSU is crucial, but limited. Most of the activity generated by an effective, comprehensive MSU will occur in the private sector. This role is not "governmental interference," but rather a logical and timely assistance to overcome the market imperfections discussed above. In opposing such a limited government role, the Chamber is perpetrating the myth of a perfect and free energy marketplace -- a myth that will only serve to harm or the community and businesses that it represents.

Attitudes fuel Irish strife, expert says

By Alan Scallay
Staff Writer

Solutions to the violence in Northern Ireland seem unlikely because of attitudes of all political sides, the government and religious leaders involved in the conflict, Richard Peterson, a SIU-C English faculty member, said.

Peterson, an expert in Irish studies, told a crowd of about 500 at the Newman Center Thursday that it will take "modest" to change the attitudes, which have sparked the ongoing Protestant-Catholic, Irish-English conflict that has left 2,100 dead since the early 1960s.

"I'm not here to give the Protestants hell. I'm not here to give the English hell. I'm here to describe hell, and by describing hell, I can show the victims of hell," Peterson said.

Peterson said that possible solutions to the conflict are opposed by different factions involved in the struggle. One would redraw the boundaries between the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland, returning the southernmost three counties to the Republic—the only ones in Northern Ireland with a Catholic majority. He said the Republic of Ireland's border would be a "half-way measure" that would weaken Northern Ireland.

A second solution would establish Ireland as a free state. However, Catholics fear they would be discriminated against by the Protestant majority, and that could lead to civil war, he said.

A third solution would unify Northern Ireland with the Republic. Protestants would then become the minority, and they fear this would subject them to discrimination and reprisals from the Catholics.

Peterson said the only solution which might have credibility would establish some sort of sharing of power in the Irish Parliament guaranteeing Catholics some rights in Northern Ireland.

Peterson said that in order for that to happen, "three moderate minorities" would have to occur to change opposing attitudes Peterson said.

The leaders would have to put the people's interests first and make some unpopular sacrifices needed to settle the crisis, Peterson said.

Secondly, religious leaders need to teach moderation and tolerate differences between Catholic and Protestant philosophies, and third, the people themselves need to stop aiding terrorists by hiding them and supporting them financially, Peterson said.

NAACP's 1981 honoree chosen

Simon and his wife, Jackie, listened as praise was heaped upon them by Shirley Chisholm. But, according to local city proclamation, it was also Elbert Simon Day.

Ruthless, simple-minded, NAACP secretary, told the crowd, "You see him all day long doing something for someone. He even single-handedly paid his mother to the doctor. That's kind of thing that makes Simon, who is the NAACP president for the past seven years, stepping down earlier this year.

U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-9th District, was among the choices of Elbert Simon as a "tireless champion for human rights." He said it was more than their common last name that pleased him.

"He's called and knocked on my door many times seeking help. But once he has ever asked for help himself, it's all over for someone else," Simon said.

Elbert Simon is the vice president, steward and chief negotiator for the local postal workers union and director of human relations for the Illinois postal workers union. He is active in the Mount Olive Baptist District Association. He is an ordained deacon and chairs the building and grounds committee for Camp Turley. He is also a founder and organizer of the Carbondale Employment and Resource Center, now the Job Service.

Funeral set for ex-chairman

Funeral services for George W. Adams, who served as the SIU-C history department and a specialist in Civil War history, will be held at 3 p.m. Monday at the Ford and Son Funeral Home chapel in Cape Girardeau.

Adams died Thursday at age 75. He was a medical center in Cape Girardeau following a fall.

Adams came to SIU-C in 1958 as chairman and professor of history, but left in 1961 for the University of Alabama, Alabaster, where he served as academic vice president and professor of history. He returned to SIU-C in 1964 as a professor and chairman and resigned as chairman in 1967 to return to full-time teaching. He retired in 1973.

Adams was the author of "Doctors in Blue: The Medical History of the Union Army in the Civil War."

Burial will be in Memorial Park Cemetery in Cape Girardeau following the funeral.

Adams is survived by his wife, Mabel, and three children, Pamela Adams Myers of Denver, Colo., a sister and two grandchildren.
Rogers’ voice good, energy low

By Pam Petrov Staff Writer

He’s had a string of number one hits and has sold more than $170 million worth of records from 1978 to 1980. Country singer Kenny Rogers must be doing something right.

When Rogers performed in the round Friday night at the SIU Arena, it was to a full crowd of about 10,000 people. His singing voice was excellent. But for the high price of his tickets, he could have put a little more energy into his performance and sung a few more of his hits.

Gallagher, a comedian who has been touring with Rogers and Dottie West during their “Together Again 1981 Tour,” opened the show. He has a very sarcastic style and began by telling the late-coming “idiots” to hurry and sit down.

Dottie West, popular country singer, performed several of her songs like “A Lesson in Leavin’,” “Are You Happy Baby”, and “Put You Back on the Rack.”

West, her voice husky and strengthened by many years, showed many songs from the audience, but she lacked that certain spark that makes a performer shine. Of course, anyone who can squeeze into the skin tight, pink and silver cowboy outfit she wore, and still be able to move much less sing—can’t be all that bad. Gallagher kept the audience occupied during the band switches between West and Rogers’ performances. People who had camped out for front row tickets may have regretted it after getting splattered with Gallagher took a sledge hammer to an apple. beer and watermelon.

When Rogers finally appeared, the crowd was ready for him. He stopped several times during his first few minutes on stage to accept flowers from the audience—something most performers wouldn’t do. At one point, he even jumped into the audience, much to the surprise of everyone, to settle an argument over one of the tambourines he had thrown to the crowd.

Although he sang many of his hits such as “So I Love With You,” “Love the World Away,” and “Reuben James,” he didn’t pull as much emotion into them as the crowd waited for and deserved.

Scenes were used during the “Gamblin’” to show film from Rogers’ television special of the same name, and during “Maman, Don’t Let Your Babies Grow Up To Be Cowboys” to show films of boys doing cowboy-type chores.

Rogers called West back on stage and they sang together “All I Ever Need Is You,” “What Are We Doing In Love?, “Anyone Who Isn’t Me Tonight?” and “Blaze of Glory.” Near the end of the show, Rogers sang four of his most popular songs, “Cowboy,” “Lucille,” “Lady” and “Baby Don’t Take Your Love to Town.” But he didn’t sing “We Believed In Me,” “You Decorated My Life,” and “Don’t Fall In Love With A Dreamer.”

No fault can be found with Rogers’ smooth mellow voice. And his teddy bear-like appearance is hard not to like. He gave an acceptably good performance. However, for $12.50 and $15 a ticket, Rogers’ 90-minute show could have been better if the motivation for his songs had come more from the heart and not from a signed contract.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — John Roveto drilled a 22-yard field goal with 1:53 left in overtime Sunday, boosting the Chicago Bears to a 18-13 National Football League upset of the mistake-plagued Kansas City Chiefs.

Roveto's kick, his third of the day, clinched the win after he had missed a 37-yarder but had gotten a reprieve when Kansas City's Gary Green was penalized for jumping onto a teammate's back while trying to block the kick, giving the Bears a first down at the Chiefs 10.

The winning drive came after Kansas City's Steve Fuller, whose 18-yard touchdown pass to Henry Marshall with 44 left in regulation forged a 13-13 tie, fumbled a snap and Roveto recovered on the Chicago 36.

All four Chicago scores followed Kansas City turnovers on the windy, rain-slicked field as the Bears, 3-7, noticed their second upset in three weeks and dropped the Chiefs to 4-4.

The Bears' only touchdown came after Jim Osborne blocked up a Bill Kenney fumble in the opening minutes and returned it seven yards to the Kansas City 7. After an illegal motion penalty against the Bears made it third-and-goal from the 12, Evans passed to Rocky Watta for a 7-0 lead.

It looks like Shellen will be riding to a conference championship—Drake's first since 1931. The Salukis have never won the MVC title.

"For the first time since I've been here, the first time in six years, you could feel electricity in the air," Dempsey said. "You could feel it at 11:30. People were already cheering. We told our kids before the game to put blinders on—to block out everything except what they're supposed to do."

The game dropped SIU-C to 3-2 in the Valley and raised the Bulldogs to 4-1. The Salukis travel to New Mexico State Saturday to play their last game of the season.

The Bulldogs were blown away 56-6 by Tulsa's Golden Hurricane last week.

"Tulsa was real good. We have no excuses there. They beat us," Shellen said.

Juniors Rosa Mitchell and Kim Pefian qualify and probably be chosen to compete in the national championships. Although our freshmen runners let the prestige of the meet get to them," Blackman said. "Although they were ready physically, I don't think we were ready mentally. They didn't run as well as they could, but I think the meet gave them the experience of running under pressure."

The Salukis totaled 225 to finish last in the eight-team Midwest Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women meet Saturday in Columbia, Ohio.

Wisconsin-Madison won the meet with a 40 and was followed by last year's champ Purdue, 56; Ohio State, 105; Illinois, 126; Western Illinois, 146; and Illinois State, 165.

Wisconsin-Madison and Purdue automatically earned invitations to the AIAW national championship by finishing first and second. Illinois and Michigan will also probably be invited, according to Blackman.

Cleveland State ran a few hours a day in order to qualify for team competition. Though originally entered, Ball State, Iowa State and Northwestern Illinois were not represented in the fifth annual meet.

"I think those teams probably thought they didn't have a chance or that their teams couldn't learn much from the meet," Blackman said.

Detering said she hopes the weekend will be a "wake-up" for the Salukis. "It was a very tough season and I think a midseason boredom set in," Detering said, "They've been injured and lackluster and consequently the practices have been very wrong."

"This weekend has been a bombshell for them because they were embarrassed by the way they played," she added. "They knew how badly they played. Maybe this will wake them out of their midseason blues."

Eagles crush Cards, 52-10

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles roiled to a 52-10 blowout over the St. Louis Cardinals Sunday in the National Football League.

Trailing only 17-10 at halftime, St. Louis came apart in the closing two periods.

A "relatively flat course," best itself to several outstanding performances. Western Illinois' Kari Thompson won the individual title for the third year in a row, setting a new course record with a 1:48.8. All of the first five runners broke the 17 minute barrier. "The course had rolling hills, but none that were inanimate," Blackman said. "They had one hill which they called 'tailspin.' The hills in my back yard are more challenging."

For the 10th time in as many meets, senior Patty Pymire-Houseworth led the Saluki harriers, finishing third with an 18:22. Pymire-Houseworth finished but five places from qualifying for the AIAW national championship meet. "At the two-mile mark, Patty was in the position where she could have placed for the nationals," Blackman said.

"She may have had second thoughts later in the race regarding how well she could do."

Freshman Pat Eletto ran the best time of her Saluki career, finishing 44th with a 19:16. However, the rest of the team did not fare as well. One of the goals Blackman has been striving for all year is pack running, that is having team members finish closely to one another. The Salukis accomplished that just, but could have chosen a higher place to finish.

Juniors Rosa Mitchell and Dyane Donley finished 50th and 51st with times of 19:47 and 20:01, respectively. The freshman complexion of Laura Falc, Odette James, and Teresa Kent closely followed the up- perclassmen. Falc was 52nd with a 20:22. James was 53rd with a 21:20 and Kent was 56th with a 22:26.

We know he’ll bounce back for us

Like the rest of the Salukis, Johnson was quiet after the game. The only sound in the SIU-C locker room was the shouting from the players in the shower. In the locker room the showers were loud and boisterous. There was no cheering of the Bulldogs. The win probably warranted the Missouri Valley Conference championship.

"I can only guess what—I said the other day that this game would have been a chance for us to show how good we were," said Draper Coach Chuck Shelton. "Before the game I tried to sell the kids on the rest of the game. Poole’s regular backup, Jeff Williams, was one of the six players who didn’t make a mistake he made in the final seconds of the game.

On their last drive of the game, they had the ball on their 47-yard line. On the first play, quarterback Rick Johnson completed a pass to Jules Borer for 12 yards. On the next play, Johnson tossed the ball out of bounds and stopped the clock. He thought it was third down. It was fourth and one. "I say to my hogs to Rick, telling him if he didn’t throw the ball fourth down Everybody on our sideline was yelling, ‘Throw the ball’ said. ‘That’s one of those things in football you have to bounce back from. Rick is hanging his head now. He should be assisted, because he’s being held as bad as running the wrong way with the ball, but it’s real close.

Spikers lose three of four, but manage to defeat Illinois

The volleyball team lost three of their matches played at the Western Michigan Invitational in KalamaRoo over the weekend, but the girls feel losing may have done some good for the team.

"The tournament was to instill a high sense of fivesome throughout, but that idea was scrapped because of the affect it might have had on the level of play in the final match, according to Assistant Coach Robin Detering. "I think they changed the tournament because too many people complained that the play in the finals would be pretty rotten if they didn’t change it," she added.

Despite a reprieve from the grueling best-of-five format, Pittsburgh edged the Salukis 14-14-15 in the first match. The match had shades of last week’s to Oral Roberts in the championship finals, Detering said.

"We played well in the first game against Pitt, but it was another one like Oral Roberts,” Detering said. “We were winning and then we let it get away. Anytime you play real hard and you lose, you lose your confidence. Our problem was one of our key people, lost their confidence.

Northwestern dumped the Salukis 15-4, 15-7 at SIU-C played ‘just awful’ against the Wildcats, Detering said. "We were lucky to get the points we got, she added. "The Salukis was the next match, beating Illinois 15-4, 13-15, 15-3. It was the third time SIU-C had beaten the Illini season, but the win wasn’t exactly a prime example of good volleyball.

"We played pretty badly, but U of l played worse than U,” Detering said.

Tennessee’s Lady Volunteers, the defending tournament champions, defeated the Salukis 15-4, 15-10, 15-4 to put an abrupt end to SIU-C’s weekend.

Detering said the entire team played pretty badly for the bulk of the weekend, but added that sophomore Mary Marshall had “an okay game” against Tennessee.

SIU-C’s record dropped to 22-14-1. The Salukis will play in the Chicago Classic tournament in Chicago this weekend. That tournament is important because the results help determine the seeding for the regional tournament to be held

Two Saluki divers qualify for nationals

The swimming and diving team won all but one event at the Western Illinois 93-89 Saturday at the Recreation Center pool. The opener was highlighted by the diving performances of senior All American Tracey Terrell and freshman Sandra Bollinger. Both Terrell and Bollinger are members of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. Terrell won with first and second-place three meter scores of 207.50 and 206.40.

Terrell, a two-time All American, has won seven Illinois MYCA championships this year. Bollinger took first in the one-meter competition with a 220.80. Terrell finished third, behind Illinois native and All American Tracey Terrell, with a 170.70.

At the swimming end of the pool, freshman Brian Martin proved why she is considered one of the best swimmers in the country this year. Martin’s impressive 2:22.50 in the 200-meter freestyle, broke the old record of 2:33.20.

Martin, from Marline, N.J., brings her to SIU-C a highly successful set of individuals. Martin’s personal bests in the 100 and 200 breaststrokes are better than current Salukis records.

Martin did not compete in the 100-meter freestyle, but sophomore All-American Pam Ratcliffe did. The Carbondale native first place with a 1:07.13, missing the AAIW qualifying time by only a half second. Ratcliffe’s 1:07.13 is the record.

Ratcliffe also placed first in the 100 butterfly with a 59.39 and the 100 freestyle with a 1:50.44. She also swam with Ratcliffe, Jane Coonts and Maureen McMahan on the 200 freestyle relay team and with the winning 200 medley relay team of Martin, McMahn and Paula Janssen.

Coonts, a highly-regarded freshman from Newfield, N.J., won the 200 individual medley with a 2:16.50 and the 50 freestyle with a 25.54. Coonts is primarily a distance freestyler.

A sophomore from Montreal, won the 100 backstroke with her 1:04.41. She holds the school record of 1:00.20 in that event.

The only event that went in Western Illinois’ favor was the 200 butterfly, as the Western Stars’ Gayle Geaner finished first.

Barb Larsen holds the school record in that event, but because of Coach Tim Hill’s plan to scramble the lineup Saturday she was not entered in that race.

The Salukis will be put to the test next weekend, as they host Texas and personal Big Ten power Indiana.
