East campus victim of outage

By Chris Walka
Staff Writer

A power outage with an undetermined cause at press time, left residents of Neely, Mae Smith, Schneider, Boomer and Allen halls without power Wednesday night. The outage also affected the Recreation Center.

According to Harrel Lerch, building maintenance superintendent, the outage occurred at 4 p.m. It affected the residence halls, but not cafeterias because they are on a separate circuit, Lerch said.

Lerch and several University electricians conducted tests on several of the circuit boxes next to the residence halls and also at the substation across from the Physical Plant.

One of the three fuses removed at the station was burned out, Lerch said. After the fuses were removed, a Hi-Pot test was conducted to see if there were further breaks in the main feed line.

Lerch said a Hi-Pot test is one which forces a large amount of electrical voltage through the system. The amount of voltage going through the line reveals cracks in the feed line's outer shell indicating a fault that may have caused the system to short out.

Emergency lights were on in the halls, and one head resident in Mae Smith, who refused to be identified, said no special plans were being undertaken concerning the residents

Lerch said backup generators were being used until the main power comes back on. These generators would enable the halls to have heat. However, Allen Hall had to have a temporary portable generator installed, Lerch said.

Upon examination of one electrical box, located in a manhole, a phase insulator was pulled out that had burn marks on it. Additionally, some material which one electrician said was copper, was on the insulator. He said the copper on the insulator was a sign of intense heating, which should not have been present.

Bill McMinn, coordinator of intramural recreation, said the Rec Center will be open from dawn until 4 p.m. today unless power is restored, then regular hours will be observed.

Senate approves wage bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate approved and sent to the White House Wednesday legislation to increase the minimum wage to $4.25 an hour over two years, the first boost since 1981, which President Bush has promised to sign.

The increase passed 89-8 despite warnings by Republican conservatives that 227,000 jobs will be lost and that young workers and blacks would suffer the most as businesses face higher wage costs.

The bill worked out by the administration and congressional leaders would raise the minimum wage in two 45-cent installments, with the first boost set for April 1, 1990, and the second a year

Cable failure leaves Physical Plant dark

By Tim Crosby
Staff Writer

The University will spend about $10,000 to replace a power cable that failed Tuesday afternoon at the Physical Plant leaving two buildings there without power, Harrel S. Lerch, superintendent of building maintenance, said.

University electricians continued work all day Wednesday to replace the 600-volt feeder cable which runs directly from the power plant to Service Building 14. Power from the 40-year-old cable was then sub-fed to Service Building 15, which houses the Travel Service and grounds department.

"It was just an old cable and it failed," Lerch said. "That cable was put in when they built that building."

Electricians worked until 2:30 a.m. Wednesday and started again at 8 a.m. to remove the bad cable. Lerch estimated about 45 hours of

USG passes 2 student fee increases

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

The Undergraduate Student Government passed two fee increases at Wednesday's meeting.

The USG supported a Student Recreation Center fee increase of $6, after a presentation by Michael Dunn, director of intramural sports, and some discussion.

Susan Hall, senator from Undergraduate Academic Services, asked Dunn if there was a possibility of getting state funds to pay the increased utility bills, rather than using a fee increase to pay them.

Dunn said the Rec Center has been advised that it already is getting all the money it can expect from the state and that it should not ask for more.

"Does this mean that we are not asking for more money from the state?" Senator Charles Walters from education asked. "Is that why you are asking for the fee increase?"

"I guess not," Dunn said. "We have to go with what the experts at the University say."

Dunn said more than 84 percent of 600 students polled said they

Air Force Gen. Secord says he lied to Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Retired Air Force Gen. Richard V. Secord admitted Wednesday he lied to Congress about the use of money in the Iran-Contra scandal, pleading guilty to a felony that could send him to prison for five years.

Secord, wearing a Navy blue blazer and a red tie, appeared before a stern federal judge who asked him questions about his activities in the Iran-Contra scandal that involved the trading of arms to Iran and the diversion of some of that money to aid the Nicaraguan anti-government Contras.

Secord told Chief U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. that he lied under oath to congressional investigators looking into the worst scandal of the eight-year presidency of Ronald Reagan.

Secord specifically admitted he lied about money from "The Enterprise" going to benefit former White House aide Oliver North. Secord said "no" to congressional investigators when asked about money going to North, but admitted Wednesday he was not telling the truth.

"The Enterprise" was the term used to describe the organization that handled the secret arms deals. Robinson asked Secord why he lied.

"I answered no ... in a misguided effort to prevent further criticism" of North and himself, Secord responded. He said "there has already been a firestorm in the press" about the unraveling Iran-Contra scandal.

The judge allowed Secord to remain free until a pre-sentencing report is prepared and "some confusion" is cleared up over the possible fine Secord could be ordered to pay. It could be as high as $250,000 — in addition to a five-year prison term — Robinson said. Secord had pleaded innocent to

Ortega offers 'last chance' proposal for Contra rebels

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — President Daniel Ortega unveiled what he called a "last chance" proposal Wednesday for dismantling the U.S.-backed Contra rebels before Dec. 5, offering to reinstate a cease-fire and suspend arms imports if the rebels agree to lay down their arms. The proposal calls for rebels currently inside Nicaragua to return to Contra base camps in Honduras and for all Contras to lay down their weapons by Dec. 5 and be resettled according to a plan signed by five Central American presidents last August.

East Germany's Politburo hard-liners resign

BERLIN (UPI) — Elderly hard-line members of the Communist Party Politburo, East Germany's top policy-making body, resigned Wednesday to make way for men considered more open to reforms that leader Egon Krenz hopes will stem an exodus of East Germans. In quick-moving events a day after the East German Cabinet stepped down, Krenz was confirmed by the Communist Central Committee as secretary-general of the party.

Democrats overjoyed at election victories

WASHINGTON (UPI) — National Democrats, overjoyed at their string of election victories, contended Wednesday the tide of mainstream America is turning their way, while bitterly disappointed Republicans sniped at each other over how to avoid a debacle in next year's critical midterm contests. Democrats reveled Wednesday in their successes in the main contests of Tuesday's election, in which Virginian Douglas Wilder apparently became the nation's first elected black governor, Jim Florio romped to victory in the New Jersey gubernatorial race, and David Dinkins was elected New York City's first black mayor.

Ortega's opponent predicts win in election

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nicaragua's opposition candidate, Violeta Chamorro, predicted Wednesday victory in her February election battle with President Daniel Ortega and asked President Bush for money for her country after she wins. After a half-hour meeting with Bush that won a promise the United States would lift a trade embargo should democracy prevail, Chamorro said, "In a clean, fair election, Ortega is not going to win. ... I believe they are going to be clean and fair because that's what the Nicaraguan people want."

Congress still in dark about troop reduction

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mandatory spending cuts could require troop reductions of 229,000 if begun late this year, military leaders warned Congress Wednesday. Uncertainty about the size of the cuts and their effect on the Pentagon will not be resolved until a defense spending bill is enacted and Congress decides if it wants to pass a budget-balancing bill acceptable to President Bush. The president has said he will let the Oct. 16 cuts stay in place until he gets an acceptable bill.

128-year-old bridge needs $250,000 grant for repairs

CARLYLE (UPI) — Believed to be the only bridge of its type in the state, the 128-year-old Gen. Dean Suspension Bridge depends for survival on a $250,000 grant for repairs from the state of Illinois. The $250,000 for the bridge is contained in a supplemental appropriations bill awaiting action by Gov. James R. Thompson. Thompson is expected to act on the bill, which contains about 50 appropriations measures, in the next two or three weeks, said Rep. Kurt Granberg, D-Carlyle.

'Pooh Corner' delightful play

Actors maintain high energy level in performance

"The House at Pooh Corner" will bring back bittersweet memories for adults who gave up imaginary playmates for the dubious joys of growing up, and will delight children with its colorful costumes and energetic portrayals. The children's play, adapted by Bette Knapp from a book by A. A. Milne, will be performed at 7 p.m. tonight and Friday, 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Saturday, and 2 p.m. Sunday in the Communications Building Laboratory Theater. Admission is $3.

Directed by Lynn Steveson, a speech communications lecturer with over 25 years of experience in children's theater, the play maintains a steady, interesting pace and a consistently high energy level. The cast is endearing without being cute or insincere.

Particularly fine performances are given by Saul McClinton as Winnie the Pooh and Elizabeth Howerton as Piglet. McClinton's wonderfully expressive face and engagingly innocent delivery of his lines brings the honey-loving bear to life. Howerton makes the little pig who's scared of everything a highly likable character.

As Christopher Robin, John Molinari's facial expressions and physical gestures sometimes seem more suited to an old man than to a little boy, but he does a good job of depicting Christopher Robin's reluctance to be "sent away to education."

Brian Holtz, as the pivotal character of Tigger, initially lacks the kinetic energy and loud-mouthed obnoxiousness audiences expect from the trouble-making tiger, but builds up comic steam as the play progresses.

The play is full of elements to hold the interest of small children. Make-up by Stephanie Marion, Joy Ferstein and Tiffany Root and costumes by Jan Hiatt imaginatively transform the actors into animals.

The performers often address the audience directly, asking them questions about what they should do next. The actors show great skill in improvising as they deal with the audience.

Gingrich-Philbrook sensitively and sometimes hilariously tells of educational events in his childhood and early adulthood that had a significant impact on him.

In "Dad, Mr. Moose, Fred, and the Spacemen," Gingrich-Philbrook humorously and satirically explains that masculinity is learned from television.

Captain Kangaroo demonstrated capitalism while hiding carrots from Bunny Rabbit, according to Gingrich-Philbrook. The Captain never ate carrots, so Gingrich-Philbrook did not understand why he hid them.

Gingrich-Philbrook tells of a day when the two of them were particularly rambunctious. There was an accident which made Gingrich-Philbrook realize that "you don't have to thank him endlessly, that the thanks is understood."

Opinion & Commentary

Arts need definite place in future plan

WHEN THE late Delyte Wesley Morris was University president, he carried the future of the institution in his pocket, literally.

Morris, who transformed SIU-C from a small regional college into a major state university, jotted down his plans for the University's future on the back of an envelope, folded it up and put it in his wallet.

Last week, Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit released plans that take the ideas from that crumpled envelope and expanded them into a 42-page booklet.

ALL THE IDEALS and ambitions the futuristic Morris had in mind for his 10-year plan in the 1950s are there. Pettit's ideas are designed to go through the 1990s into the 21st century.

Much of Morris' scribbles, which he called his "blueprint for the future," are now reality. The University has many of the doctoral programs he envisioned and a student union building.

But one of his more ambitious goals for the region, the "expressways north-south and east-west," is still just a dream on paper.

CARBONDALE IS one of those places that you often "can't get there from here." The University's isolated location relative to Chicago and Springfield ("the nerve centers of the state," according to Pettit) is a disadvantage politically.

The goal for a direct St. Louis-Carbondale interstate and a large, regional airport is worthy, but where will funding for such projects come from?

A more realistic goal is the backbone of the plan, which calls for the University to concentrate on areas that are its strong point — international understanding, the environment, public service and public policy awareness.

GRADUATE STUDIES in these areas are the main point. Pettit's plan calls for the transformation of the Carbondale campus into a research-based institution, while the Edwardsville campus would become the place for undergraduates to get their higher education.

To make researching here more attractive, the plan calls for expansion Morris Library and other research facilities, which would help boost the University to a top rating in the Carnegie Research classification. SIU-C is one rung from the top of the research classification ladder.

Enrollment at SIU-C would be shifted so that graduate students, which make up about 17 percent of the total student body, would be increased to about 25 percent.

THE RATIONALE behind this shift is that the population of adult, or non-traditional students — those over 25 years of age and older — is growing, while the 18 to 25 group is dwindling.

A recent survey conducted by the "College Board News," predicted that by the year 2000 about half of all college students nationwide would be non-traditional students.

While the intent of all this is to make Southern Illinois a richer place to live and learn, we know something will have to give in order to make this technology-based plan work.

PETTIT HAS CALLED for the elimination of "irrevocably outdated and outmoded activities and programs." He said he doesn't "have a specific hit list of programs, but there are going to be some departmental casualties as a result of this."

The University began as a teacher's college, with a strong emphasis on the liberal arts and a tradition of preparing classroom teachers.

Upholding this tradition could prove to be the biggest challenge of the Pettit plan — a challenge bigger than dispelling the University's reputation as a "party school" and bigger than evening the male-female ratio — challenges that are addressed in the report.

ECONOMIC REALITY is that there is more pressure for higher education spending to go toward research to make the nation a more competitive member of the world market.

In the endeavors to make the world a richer place economically, we urge the University to not become so competitive as to forget the fine and liberal arts that have made the human mind a richer place culturally.

End drug war; legalization answer

Pot not harmful

We are writing in response to the misleading information in the Nov. 7 article, "Nation's largest cities incur record drug abuse."

When listing some of the figures in this study, it was reported that there had been "128 marijuana-related deaths in Atlanta."

This would give the reader the impression that these deaths were caused by marijuana alone. Considering that the studies by UCLA, Harvard, Temple and other universities has shown that pot toxicity is non-existent, it would also be quite impossible.

In study after study, many funded by the federal government, marijuana has been found to be safer than many legal drugs, which include nicotine, alcohol, aspirin and caffeine.

In fact, medical history has never recorded a death that could be solely attributed to the use of marijuana.

The clever manipulation of facts by the anti-pot lobby has created the impression that marijuana is as dangerous as heroin or cocaine, something that research has continually proven wrong.

It should have been stated how many of these deaths occurred in combination with other drugs, than to create false facts that serve the purpose of the current administration.

It also should be noted the mature reaction of a Bush Administration spokesman when former Secretary of State Schultz suggested the legalization of some drugs: "Wow, he's been on the West Coast too long."

You would expect more from someone who is not a pot-head—Seth Rodgers, freshman, undecided and Sunni Ali Powell, sophomore, undecided.

End the drug war

I would like to address an issue that evokes fear and visions of a drug-crazed, anarchical society for many people: The legalization/decriminalization of drugs.

I believe the U.S. should take a lesson from the Netherlands and their approach to the drug problem in their country. Through their program of legalization/decriminalization, education and treatment, they have all but eradicated the drug problem in their society.

It has been reported that after legalization, marijuana use actually decreased by 25 percent. It could work here too, if properly implemented.

Our government is currently willing to spend $8.8 billion to fight a war on the drug problem. How much of our money are we going to allow them to waste on a war that not only can't be won, but hasn't really worked since it's inception in the early 1970s.

The drug cartels of Colombia have shown just how determined they are to win this war. They are shooting and bombing people to keep their multi-billion dollar industry alive.

Are you willing to enter actual combat over this? I for one am not! I also am not prepared to allow the fighting to come to this country, as it surely will if this insane and futile "war" is not ended.

I propose in place of this war a peaceful program of controlled legalization/decriminalization coupled with education and treatment. Remove the profit motive and there is no reason to fight.

Admittedly this program would not fall into place and solve all the problems, but it focuses on a possible solution that may work, instead of pouring more money into one that has not.

Let's end the war on drugs, declare war instead on poverty, homelessness and other problems facing millions of innocent Americans everyday. How much could be done domestically with $8.8 billion? Write your congressmen and let them know what you want done—L.R. Ward, senior, psychology.

Australians never lose their accents

In response to Professor Canfield's letter on Nov. 6 indicating that "Austrian children, among others, come to school speaking English without an accent unless he or she is a very recent immigrant."

I can tell you with absolute certainty, unless professor, you yourself have spent any time in Australia observing many children speaking before they begin kindergarten, then you do not know what I know about Australian accents.

I left Australia July 4, 1945, living there since birth. Nowhere else in the British Empire (as it was then) did any British subject from birth, other than an "ustrine" butcher the English language with such colorful slang and a local patois. Ask any Englishman who has lived there.

Only because of the dedicated determination of some teachers, when inclined, along with years of elocution lesson are Aussies, if ever, able to change their accents. Not everyone over there sounds like Paul Hogan. Let's imagine striving to acquire that BBC announcer's accent. You have all heard Big Ben followed by "this is the British Broadcasting system coming to you from London, England."

That's the accent some Australians practice to achieve. That's what they do to overcome that fair dinkum Aussie accent—Sylvia Herron, Carbondale.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board, whose members are the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, the associate editorial page editor, a news staff member, the faculty managing editor and a School of Journalism faculty member.

Letters to the editor must be submitted directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

2nd woman in ROTC history receives pilot, flight allocation

By Tony Mancuso
Staff Writer

"A woman's flight through life is sustained by her knowledge."

These words have been an inspiration for Jennifer Crossman, a University junior who has become one of the few women in the Air Force ROTC program to earn a pilot allocation.

Capt. Mark Douglas, of the SIUC Air Force ROTC Detachment, said Crossman is only the second female in the history of the University's 36-year-old program to receive a pilot allocation. Thirteen males from the University also received spots.

Douglas said a pilot allocation allows the student to go on to flight training after graduation.

"If Jennifer maintains all her qualifications, she will go on to a flight school at one of five locations in the country," he said.

"Jennifer is one of 36 women in the nation to receive a slot this year," Douglas said, adding that approximately 800 men got slots.

Douglas said the reason women receive only a few slots is that a quota allows only a very small percentage of Air Force pilots to be women.

"The government has passed legislation which says women are allowed only to fly non-combat planes, such as cargo planes. Within the next year or two, I expect the legislation to change as well as the quota," Douglas said.

Douglas expects a certain number of pilot slots to be filled in the future based upon a coed competition for the slots.

Crossman said the quota for female pilots gradually has increased over the past few years, but she said she was concerned she would not be selected because of overwhelming odds.

"I didn't realize how small my chance was until I came to SIUC. It's tough for anyone to become a pilot, and especially for women," Crossman said.

She said she retook the Air Force Officer Qualifying Test to improve her score and increase the chance of allocation.

Douglas said the higher score, coupled with her outstanding performance in field training last summer, made Crossman an pilot-to-be.

"Last spring our detachment chose to send Jennifer's records to be considered by ROTC headquarters for a pilot slot. When she performed well last summer, the field training records were also sent to headquarters," Douglas said.

Crossman said she will attend a three-week light aircraft training program this summer, which will give her an orientation into small aircraft. She will fly large aircraft when she begins pilot training.

"When I become a pilot, I will fly C-5 cargo planes or KC-135 refueling aircraft. They are both very large aircraft," Crossman said.

She said her father, a retired Air Force major, also flew C-5s when he was in the service.

"Both of my parents are into flying. My mother is a flight nurse at St. Louis University. They were my inspiration for getting into the Air Force," Crossman said.

Southern Illinois Narcotics officers find drugs in student's dorm room

By Doug Powell
Staff Writer

Two SIUC students living at Stevenson Arms Dormitory, 600 W. Mill St., were arrested and charged Monday in connection with an attempt to deliver cocaine, a Southern Illinois Narcotics Enforcement Group spokesman said.

Daniel J. Hogan, 19, from Glenview, and Matthew J. Kelley, 19, from Willmette, were arrested at their dormitory room by SINEG officers shortly after 9 a.m. Monday, Jan Cunningham, of SINEG, said.

After obtaining a search warrant, officers searched the student's dorm room and found Hogan to be in possession of more than 10 grams of cocaine, Cunningham said. Hogan was charged with possession of cocaine with intent to deliver.

Hogan, a sophomore with an undecided major, was taken to Jackson County Jail, where bond was set at $7,500, a Jackson County Jail spokesman said.

Kelley, a freshman in pre-business, was charged with two counts of delivery of a controlled substance, and after being taken to Jackson County Jail his bond was set at $10,000, a Jackson County Jail spokesman said.

Cunningham would not say if the substance Kelley is charged with delivering was cocaine.

Both students were released from jail Tuesday after posting bond and are to appear in court on Nov. 29.

overtime had already been spent on the job.

"We'll probably have about the same amount again Wednesday night," he said. "We can still do our field work, but right now we can't work on anything in the shop."

Jim Filla, University electrical engineer, said the $10,000 figure did not surprise him.

"The less overtime you do, the longer the buildings are down and that hurts productivity," he said. "I'm reasonably sure they will get it back on by Thursday. I wouldn't be surprised if cost at least that much though."

One of the offices without power is General Stores, located in Service Building 14. Betty Miles, secretary receptionist at General Stores main office, said workers there have made adjustments to cope with the situation.

"We are working with flashlights in the storerooms to fill orders," she said. "We are only filling emergency orders along with our normal deliveries that were already put together. I don't think we are too far behind."

Richard T. Parrish, Central Stores manager, said once they realized the power wasn't coming back on soon, they adapted their operations to use less power.

"Right now, we are running on an extension cord from a building 75 feet away," he said. "We have enough power for one lamp, one computer and one printer—the bare essentials."

Parrish said the main handicap the office faces is the inoperative elevator used to bring up large orders from basement storerooms.

"We've sent drivers who usually work out of the basement storerooms to deliver from the glove factory storerooms," where janitorial and cafeteria supplies are kept. Parrish said because they are getting ahead on those type of deliveries, they will be able to concentrate more on catching up when power is restored.

later. The current wage floor is $3.35 an hour.

The legislation also allows a sub-minimum wage for workers 16 to 19 during the first 90 days of employment, which can be extended another 90 days if the employee is in a job-training program. That wage would be $3.35 an hour until March 31, 1990, and $3.61 the following year, after which it would end.

The House approved the compromise bill last week 382-37.

Earlier this year, Bush vetoed a bill that would have raised the minimum wage to $4.55 an hour over three years and the president said he would accept no figure higher than $4.25.

Bush's adamant stand prompted Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., to declare, "This is a back-door, back-of-the-hand increase."

But Kennedy said, "Those of us who believe in the minimum wage take our victories where and when we can — and we will continue to do so."

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine and Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas joined forces to ward off amendments by GOP conservatives, defeating two on votes and convincing sponsors not to offer others.

Dole said Bush and the leadership "made an agreement" and conservatives should not be "cluttering up the bill."

"We have a negotiated settlement. We acted in good faith. It ought to be adopted without change," Dole said.

Mitchell, after praising Republican and Democrats in Congress, said that "we all owe a debt of gratitude to President Bush for being willing to stand up for an increase ... reversing the policy" of the Reagan administration, which blocked previous efforts to boost the pay floor.

Before passing the bill, the Senate killed an amendment by Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, that would have expanded the sub-minimum "training wage" provision to seasonal and migrant farm workers. The amendment was rejected 64-34.

"Let's put the bottom rung on the ladder," Gramm said. "Let's treat migrant workers and seasonal workers in agriculture just like everyone else."

But Kennedy, chairman of the Labor and Human Resources Committee, said that labor laws

Blood givers unite in the Student Center Ballroom D to share the gift of life Wednesday afternoon by donating blood for the American Red Cross Blood Drive this week.

Red Cross collects 502 pints on fourth day of blood drive

By Diana Mivelli
Staff Writer

The fourth day of the Red Cross Blood Drive in the Student Center Ballroom D brought the University 502 pints closer to its goal of more than 2,849 pints of blood, Rick Mitchell, president of Mobilization of Volunteer Effort, said.

The 502 pints collected Wednesday brings the total to 1,641 pints. SIU-C needs 1,208 pints more to win its challenge against the University of Missouri at Columbia, which collected 2,849 pints in its drive that ended Oct. 20, Mitchell said.

He said he has "no doubt in his mind the SIU-C will meet its goal with the students' and community's support."

Mitchell said Thursday's blood drive will have more than 30 Red Cross staff nurses on duty compared with Wednesday's 25 because of the "anticipated increase in donors."

Mitchell said Robert D. Russell, of Cobden, donated his 128th pint, bringing him to the 16-gallon mark and another person donated his 75th pint.

Air Force ROTC pre-registered more than 500 donors before the drive, he said. They won two six-foot long submarine sandwiches donated by Subway for the organization pre-registering the most donors.

He said people must wait 56 days before donating again. "If you donated blood at the last SIU blood drive, you can donate again."

Vivian Ugent, coordinator of blood drives in Southern Illinois, said the recent natural disasters in the country have increased the need for blood.

She said our area sent 100 pints of blood to each of the Carolinas following Hurricane Hugo.

"We didn't have blood to send to the San Francisco Bay area following the earthquake. We had to maintain our own inventories, but other Red Cross divisions were able to send blood," she said.

She said if an earthquake struck in Southern Illinois, blood divisions in other areas would be called upon to help.

Donors may give blood from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. through Friday at the Student Center Ballroom D. On Friday, people also may donate blood at the Student Recreation Center from 1 to 7 p.m.

Greek council issues blood drive challenge

The Inter-Greek Council is challenging all Registered Student Organizations to see who can donate the most pints of blood during the current Red Cross blood drive, Megan Johnson, public relations chairwoman of IGC, said.

She said about 600 of the 700 Greeks working at the blood drive will probably donate blood. She said most fraternity and sorority members donate blood and work four to eight hours at the blood drives.

"Usually every year we (Greeks) donate time to the blood drive," she said.

When the most distinguished chapter is chosen, the efforts put into the blood drive are looked at, she said.

SIU-C student believes he found glass in candy bar sold on campus

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

A journalism student knew his "Three Musketeers" chocolate bar didn't have any nuts and that's why he was surprised when he bit into the bar and got a crunch.

Nougat does not crunch. Mark F. Barnett, senior in journalism, bit what he believes is a piece of glass.

The glass was about a quarter of an inch long and one-sixteenth thick, and was purchased from a vending machine in the Communications Building Sunday afternoon.

Barnett said he was shocked, but reported no injuries.

The Canteen Company, which is responsible for the campus vending machines, received the complaint and the remaining portion of the candy bar, along with the glass-like material, after Barnett contacted SIU-C Services Enterprises.

"He found a substance that may have been glass and it may have been crystallized caramel sugar," Harry Wirth, director of service enterprises, said.

"I bit into it and heard a crunch,

I took it out and there were little slivers of glass on my tongue," Barnett said.

"I spit out what was in my mouth and saved the main piece of glass," Barnett said.

The Canteen Company forwarded the candy bar and glass-like material to the M&M/Mars Co. in New Jersey.

Kelly Hill, consumer affairs representative from M&M/Mars Co., which produces the candy, said, "Our main concern was to make sure Mark Barnett was safe."

"Once we get the substance we can send it to our in-house lab and it will be tested," Hill said.

She said there was a possibility the shard could be a crystallized sugar. "It has the same consistency as glass and can be as hard as glass."

Hill said once it is determined what the object is, it will be sent back to the manufacturer and an investigation of the plant will be done. "We do believe this is an isolated incident."

Luann Dusch, route supervisor for the Canteen Company said, "We take it from them whether we should pull the bars (with the same code) from the machines. They've told us they think it's an isolated incident so we will not act at this time."

The chocolate bar's origins are traced through the manufacturer's code on the back of the wrapper.

"It tells us the year, week, machine number and plant it was produced at. It was probably our Chicago plant judging from the code (935CP)," Hill said.

Hill said Barnett and the Canteen Corporation will receive a copy of the report on the investigation.

"We're waiting on the packet. They should be sending it today (Nov. 8)," Dusch said.

Wirth said service enterprise's responsibility will be to make sure the contract between the University and the vending company is enforced should problems arise.

"I can realistically say I'm not going to buy their candy bar," Barnett said.

Along with an apology and a packet explaining what happened, Barnett also will receive manufacturers coupons for M&M/Mars products, Hill said.

Lost and found items have own story

Student Center receives gloves, underwear, coats

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

There's a story behind every item that ends up in a lost and found.

Take the classified advertising section of this newspaper for example. Under the "lost" heading you'll find this item: "Leather cowboy hat lost Friday on Strip. A large reward will be given for the return of this irreplaceable hat."

Jim Summers, a sophomore in marketing, was wearing that hat as part of a costume Halloween weekend when someone pulled it off of his head and disappeared into the crowd.

The hat was borrowed from Summers' friend, whose uncle once wore the hat. The uncle was a heroin addict, an addiction that killed him.

"You can see why that hat is so special," Summers said. "It was the coolest cowboy hat I've ever seen.

You can imagine somebody like Clint Eastwood wearing it."

Summers said the hat has a straight brim. The reward for the return of the hat is negotiable, he said. Anyone with information about the hat can contact Summers at 457-5588.

Items lost on campus by someone and are found by an honest person usually end up at the Student Center Information Desk, where the lost and found center for the entire campus is located. Articles that are found unclaimed in the Recreation Center are sent to this desk.

"We have four cabinets full of lost stuff," a spokeswoman at the Information Desk, said. All the items are recorded in a log and then stored away.

The items are the usual things: coats, hats, gloves and umbrellas. Books, calculators, jewelry and wallets also end up at the Student Center.

"Underwear. You name it. We get it all," she said.

The items are kept in locked cabinets to ensure security, the spokeswoman said. To obtain a lost item, a person must be able to describe the article as thoroughly as possible.

"We don't just give stuff away," she said.

When the University loses or misplaces something, the property control division of the general accounting office is notified.

Most items lost on campus usually end up at the Student Center Information Desk.

Property control keeps track of the University's belongings by assigning each item a number. The number is usually on a steel tag, which is attached to most University property.

Joe Elliot, supervisor of property control, said when a department notices that an item is missing, the department must report the loss to his office and University Security Police.

When all the reports have been filed, property control begins the procedure to have the item removed from the University inventory list. The procedure takes about two months, Elliot said.

"We tell people that if they find the item within two months they should notify us immediately so we can stop the procedure," Elliot said.

Sometimes a missing item will turn up as much as a year later, after it has been removed from the inventory list. In those cases, property control "reissues those back to their old number," Elliot said.

Recently a memo to all departments was issued from the Department of English. The memo reads: "Missing from the Department of English, Faner 2370; SIU #292125 Chair Exec Side Arm."

A department spokeswoman said the department believes the chair is just misplaced somewhere in Faner and eventually will be found. Anyone with information about the missing chair can contact that department at 453-6854.

Elliot said that sending a memo to all departments was once standard procedure about 10 years ago.

"We found that was becoming ineffectual."

Banquet honors black churches, celebrates local branch of NAACP

By Dale Walker
Staff Writer

The 13th Annual Freedom Fund Banquet, which honored black churches of Carbondale, marked the 50th anniversary Sunday of the Carbondale Branch of the NAACP.

"Even before the NAACP was founded (1909), black churches had always been supportive and we thought it was time to honor them," Carl Flowers, third vice president of the Illinois chapter and vice president of the Carbondale chapter of the NAACP, said.

The theme of the banquet, which was attended by more than 200 people, was "Eighty Years Later - The Struggle Continues."

Among those in attendance were Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard and U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carbondale.

The banquet opened with a message from Nathaniel L. Felder, president of the Carbondale Branch of the NAACP.

The guest speaker was the Rev. Walter Wendell Matthews of Hopewell Missionary Baptist Church.

He said the church has a profound impact on the economical and political structure in American Society and when blacks could not meet to discuss their welfare, the church would provide them with a place to meet.

The churches honored were Bethel A.M.E., Church of Christ, Faith Temple Church of God in Christ, Gillespie Temple Church of God in Christ, Green Street Church of God, Hopewell Baptist Church, House of Prayer Apostolic Church, Monument of Hope Deliverance Church, New Zion Baptist Church, Olivet Freewill Baptist Church and Rock Hill Baptist Church.

Illinois ends fiscal year 1989 in the black, surplus in 1990

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer
and United Press International

Illinois ended fiscal year 1989 with a positive balance for only the third time in 14 years, entering the first quarter of this fiscal year with a budget surplus of $149 million.

Comptroller Roland Burris announced Tuesday in his monthly budget report that 1989 joins 1979 and 1985 as fiscal years when Illinois finished in the black.

However, Burris' press secretary said the budget surplus "wouldn't have much of an effect on day-to-day life" in Illinois.

"The state budget is a little healthier than it has been, but it's really not as huge a surplus as it sounds like on paper," press secretary

Jerry Owens said. Owens said since the money was in the general fund, no specific area of the budget was targeted for a substantial increase, but "everybody would get a little bit."

"It's up to the assembly to allocate those funds as they see fit at a later time," Owens said.

Owens said the surplus was a reflection of higher economic activity in the state and a ceiling on legislative spending.

"This indicates more sales taxes, income taxes and other taxes coming into the state of Illinois than before, as well as the General Assembly coming through on a promise to hold the line on spending," Owens said.

The amount is the second-highest recorded year-end budget surplus in the history of the state's general revenue fund and is surpassed only by 1974, when the state ended the fiscal year with a $290 million surplus.

The state ended the first quarter of fiscal 1990 with a general funds balance of $360 million, nearly four times more than the $94 million that was in the general fund at the end of fiscal year 1988 last October.

University Vice Chancellor for Affairs Donald Wilson said he didn't know yet how the extra funds would benefit the University.

"The legislature just finished a session last week and I'm sure they have a lot of demands on those funds, so it's hard telling who will get what," Wilson said.

Carbondale considering joint suit against Marion in mall litigation

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Carbondale could join forces with two other plaintiffs to keep the city of Marion from building the proposed Illinois Center Mall through tax increment financing.

Carbondale's lawsuit, recently filed in the Williamson County Circuit Court, contends that Marion is illegally using the TIF subsidies to establish a mall in an area that is not blighted and to lure other businesses away from Carbondale.

The TIF Act exists to permit cities to redevelop blighted areas that are deteriorating and will not come back economically without tax incentives, Don Prosser, counsel representing Carbondale, said.

The first lawsuit against Marion was filed by Marion businessman J.D. Castellano and was joined by Marion resident Ron Emery.

Prosser said Carbondale and the other plaintiffs have some similar complaints about the TIF program, but each focuses on different aspects of the program.

Carbondale's main complaint is that Marion is using the TIF program to entice businesses from one community to another, Prosser said. And the fact that Marion is developing on an area that is not blighted is another key concern.

The Broeking Property, where Marion proposes to build the mall, is prime development area near Interstate 57 that has experienced a significant growth and development over the last 15 years, Prosser said.

The Castellano/Emery lawsuit is principally challenging the legality of the adoption of the TIF ordinances. The lawsuit contends the TIF program does not comply with state guidelines.

Prosser said combining the lawsuits would "save everybody a lot of time."

Engineers warn U.S. cities facing threat of earthquakes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American cities from Boston to Seattle face the threat of a killer earthquake like the tremor that hit California, and are full of bridges and buildings that could come tumbling down, engineers warned Tuesday.

In a presentation to congressional staff members, engineers from the University of California at Berkeley said the remedy is finding ways to shore up everything from high-rises to modest homes. But money for research is lacking. "This earthquake serves as a warning to all of us, not just those in California," said Stephen Mahin, a professor of civil engineering at the university, which was rattled by the Oct. 17 quake.

Over the years quakes rocked Charleston, S.C., in 1886, Cape Anne, Mass., in 1775, and New Madrid, Mo., in 1811 and 1812.

"We know we can put a Band-Aid on something but we don't know if it's going to work," Mahin said, echoing concerns of the U.S. Geological Survey and Federal Emergency Management Agency.

For engineers, problems run from "effective and economical" ways to "retrofit" existing structures, improving aging foundations, proper supports in new buildings and making water mains earthquake proof, the engineers said.

Many of the buildings and airport runways damaged by the California quake were built on sand and poor soil, Raymond Seed, a geotechnical engineer at the university, said.

While San Francisco's Marina district suffered spectacular fires and toppled apartment houses, many buildings in the business district suffered similar but less obvious damage. They, too, were built on sand and poor soil, Seed said.

Nationwide, "we stand at a considerable risk" in Boston,

Washington, Seattle and other major population centers, all within striking distance of earthquake fault zones, Seed said.

Bridges posed another problem. Many of America's most heavily traveled spans and overpasses were built before development of now generally accepted construction techniques intended to protect against quakes.

Among these is the Nimitz Freeway that collapsed in Oakland, Calif., at the height of the evening rush hour on Oct. 19 with a great loss of life.

From coast to coast, "we have an aging infrastructure," structural engineer Jack Moehele said.

Gil Hegemier, director of the Powell Structures Laboratory at the University of California at San Diego, said his research center is among the few in the world studying ways to protect bridges against earthquakes.

Aquino calls for more investment in Philippines by the United States

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Corazon C. Aquino of the Philippines, striking the principal theme of her four-day visit to the United States, called Wednesday for more U.S. investment in her Southeast Asian nation.

Aquino said at a New York Chamber of Commerce luncheon on the first day of her U.S. tour that the Philippine economy has been revived since she assumed power in February 1986. She also assured potential investors that her government has turned the tide against communist insurgents.

Aquino said that chief among the economic accomplishments of her three and a half years in office has been reinvigorating the shrinking economy she inherited from ousted President Ferdinand Marcos to a 1988 gross national product expansion of 6.7 percent.

"These figures are modest by the standards of the Asian tigers," she said, referring to South Korea, Taiwan, Singapore and other economic stars of the region, "but not when seen against the backdrop of 14 years of a government that concentrated on stealing rather than building the Philippine economy."

She said the latest economic statistics "revealed the new life and unexpected strength of the Philippine economy."

Boosting investment and obtaining more advantageous trade terms are the main objectives of this visit, Aquino's second to the United States since gaining power.

She was scheduled later Wednesday to travel to Washington, where she will meet with President Bush, Secretary of State James Baker and other political leaders. She also will make stops in Dallas and Los Angeles before returning to the Philippines Saturday.

Aquino chided U.S. companies for not following the lead of Asian businessmen who are placing increasingly heavy investments in her country.

"We regret the current diffidence of American enterprise that once played an important and, we believe, necessary balancing role in Philippine economic development," she said.

She acknowledged certain drawbacks to investment in the Philippines, such as limitations on foreign equity holdings, and promised to address them. But she added, "May we say that these limitations don't seem to bother Asian investors as much or at all."

Aquino assured the several hundred business executives and Philippine-American community leaders at the luncheon that investments in the Philippines will be safe from any threat from the New People's Army, the leftist rebels.

"We have prided the insurgents from their strongholds in remote areas," she said.

Philippine experts say the fighting strength of the communist insurgents has declined recently and many key leaders have been captured. But the communist forces still control large areas of the countryside and have carried out political assassinations in Manila.

Aquino expressed optimism about her country's ability to service its $28 billion external debt, whose reduction should be finalized this month through negotiations with commercial lenders.

She asked patience of bank lenders, saying, "We must grow to pay the debt."

But foreign investment is essential, she said, even though multilateral foreign aid totaling $3.5 billion has been pledged by Japan, the United States, the European Community and the World Bank.

Aquino threw in a plug for the First Philippine Fund, a single-country investment vehicle that began trading on the New York Stock Exchange Wednesday after she rang the opening bell. She urged investors to take advantage of impending government privatization of key industries and the growing Philippine economy.

Kitty Dukakis treated in hospital for ingestion of rubbing alcohol

BOSTON (UPI) — Kitty Dukakis, the wife of Gov. Michael Dukakis, is suffering from a severe reaction to ingesting "a small amount of rubbing alcohol" in conjunction with flu-like symptoms, exhaustion and a state of depression, her doctor said Wednesday. It was not known if the fluid was taken intentionally.

Dukakis family physician Dr. Gerald Plotkin issued a statement saying the Massachusetts first lady "is completely out of danger" while she, her family and physicians weigh the proper treatment.

"Kitty has suffered from chemical dependency and struggled with depression for many years. These two problems are often related," Plotkin's statement said, noting that she has taken anti-depressants prescribed by a psychiatrist, "including the period immediately prior to her hospitalization Monday.

The problems came to a head during the weekend after a grueling speaking tour through Indiana in which Dukakis, 52, was "exhausted and with symptoms associated with the flu," the statement said.

"In this state of exhaustion, with flu symptoms and depression, she ingested a very small amount of rubbing alcohol and had a severe reaction. It is clear from tests that no drugs, medication or alcoholic beverages were involved."

The statement did not say whether the substance was taken intentionally or by mistake and was not more precise about the amount taken. Spokesmen for the governor said they would in no way elaborate on Plotkin's statement.

Rubbing alcohol is a disinfectant intended for external use only. It contains about 70 percent denatured ethyl alcohol or isopropyl alcohol, which is poisonous. Drinking 8 ounces or more may cause breathing or heart failure.

Political observers believe Kitty Dukakis' current problems stem from the steady stream of intense criticism directed at her husband, who has maintained his icy reserve in the face of his loss to George Bush in the 1988 presidential election and the state's worsening economic condition.

Plotkin, who initially refused to disclose any details of Kitty Dukakis' hospitalization Monday night when she was suffering severe nausea and dizziness, said, "It is essential that she be given the space and the privacy she needs to continue her recovery."

Feud between Illinois senators not to affect decision on Illiniwek

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — A reported feud between Illinois' two U.S. Senators over the University of Illinois' popular mascot Chief Illiniwek will have little effect on the school's decision whether to keep the mascot, a university official said Wednesday.

Sen. Paul Simon and Sen. Alan Dixon, both Democrats, are at odds over whether the University should abolish the buckskin-clad chief, who dances at Illini sporting events.

Simon signed a petition Sunday sponsored by a Native American group calling for the elimination of Chief Illiniwek and other mascots some say are insulting to Indians. Dixon, a U of I graduate, responded that he was "filled with pride" by the chief's portrayal.

The move to oust the chief — a 63-year tradition at the U of I — has gained little momentum so far. Leaders of the uprising had hoped Simon's position might give added weight to their claim that Chief Illiniwek's dancing is a mockery of sacred Indian religious rituals.

U of I spokesman Terry Shepard said the school's affirmative action office is still studying how the chief is portrayed and is willing to hear Simon's suggestions on how to improve the mascot. But Shepard said the symbol revered by thousands of students and alumni will probably dance on.

"We'll listen to him, just like we'll listen to anyone else, but I still see little or no chance of the chief being eliminated," Shepard said. "There may be slight adjustments, but the chief will remain."

Simon spokeswoman Pam Huey said the senator's office has received phone calls from angry university alumni who denounced his stand.

South Africa lifts 13-year ban on political and labor groups

Independent black homeland of Transkei affected by legalization

JOHANNESBURG. South Africa (UPI) — The ruling military council in the nominally independent black homeland of Transkei lifted a 13-year-old state of emergency Wednesday and legalized more than a dozen political organizations restricted elsewhere in South Africa.

The council, headed by army commander Gen. Banu Holomisa, 33, said the action was taken to demonstrate the homeland's commitment to "promoting dialogue aimed at the creation of climate of change in South Africa."

"In pursuance of this policy, the government reviews, on a continual basis, the laws which stand in the way of the achievement of this noble ideal," a statement released in the Transkei capital of Umtata said.

"The government also realizes that without a commitment to the promotion of the freedom of speech, association and movement, the attainment of this objective will be impossible," it said.

The announcement came on the eve of a meeting in Umtata between Holomisa and South African Foreign Affairs Minister Roelof "Pik" Botha amid considerable uncertainty about the extent of Pretoria's blessing of Transkei's recent controversial pronouncements. Holomisa has moved in the past month to demonstrate support for President Frederik de Klerk's proposed power-sharing talks with the black majority. But whether Pretoria supports Holomisa's initiatives remains unclear.

Transkei, a constellation of three isolated pieces of land on the Indian Ocean coast, was granted independence from Pretoria on Oct. 26, 1976, as part of the white government's policy that denied blacks South African citizenship and relocated them to the homelands.

The birthplace of jailed-for-life ANC leader Nelson Mandela, Transkei has a population of about 2.4 million and remains largely dependent on financial assistance from South Africa and on earnings from migrant mineworkers.

It is regarded by Pretoria as sovereign, but no other government has recognized its independence.

Holomisa, who seized power in a bloodless coup on Dec. 30, 1987, last month, in an open challenge to the South African homelands policy, raised the possibility of calling a referendum to determine whether the territory wished to remain independent from South Africa.

Two weeks ago, the homeland's paramount chief said the government also was considering lifting a ban on the African National Congress, which has been outlawed in South Africa since 1960.

The ANC was not among the political and labor organizations legalized in the Transkei Wednesday, and none that were legalized was regarded as having had a significant following in the territory.

Nonetheless, most of the 15 organizations legalized Wednesday, including the anti-apartheid umbrella group United Democratic Front, remain heavily restricted in the rest of South Africa.

The Transkei state of emergency, imposed in 1976 in response to the uprising of students in the black township of Soweto outside Johannesburg, was largely intended to regulate the movement and association of students between the hours of 6 p.m. and 6 a.m.

Regulations similar to those of a 3-year-old state of emergency in South Africa remain still largely in effect under the Public Security Act, including the power of indefinite detention without charge.

Observers in Umtata said they were waiting to see whether Holomisa also would act on those regulations without taking a cue from Pretoria.

the charges, filed by independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh. His trial had been scheduled to begin Monday, but his lawyers worked out a deal with Walsh.

Secord pleaded guilty to the ninth count in the indictment and the government agreed to dismiss all the other charges. In accepting the deal, Robinson said he found Secord guilty.

The former Air Force general admitted to lying in sworn testimony to congressional investigators on June 10, 1987, when asked about money going from "The Enterprise" to benefit North and his family.

Robinson pressed Secord, asking him if he knew he was lying when he answered "no" when questioned about the money.

"No, your honor, the answer was not candid," Secord said in court.

Robinson then asked Secord if he meant the term "candid" as a synonym for the word "untruthful."

"Yes," Secord said. Robinson pressed Secord harder — insisting on knowing if he had uttered a lie under oath.

"That's correct," Secord said.

In a statement after the court proceeding ended, Walsh said: "General Secord has pleaded guilty to a felony for lying to Congress regarding the Iran-Contra matter. This is important because it enforces congressional oversight and because it brings within an adequate range of punishment one of the principal participants in the Iran-Contra diversion."

Secord, 57, was indicted on 12 criminal charges — all felonies.

Walsh's chief prosecutor in the Secord trial would have been Reid Weingarten, who told the judge the government was prepared to prove that Secord provided North with a home security system costing almost $14,000 and there was a "coverup" in an effort to obscure the transaction.

Earlier this year, North was convicted of receiving an illegal gratuity — the security system that Secord paid for.

Weingarten also said the government would prove that Secord established a secret Swiss bank account for North and his family containing $260,000 and funded by arms profits reaped by "The Enterprise."

Weingarten also said the evidence would have shown that Secord received more than $1.5 million in profits from the sale of weapons to Iran and the Contras.

"These profits were generated largely as a result of business supplied to Secord and his partner, Albert Hakim, through North," Weingarten said.

As part of his guilty plea, Secord promised to cooperate with the special prosecutor in future trials related to the Iran-Contra scandal. Hakim also has been charged but no trial date has been set.

Secord's agreement to cooperate could result in his testimony against his friend Hakim — putting strong pressure on Hakim also to reach a deal with Walsh.

Secord also could be forced to testify as a prosecution witness in the trial of former national security adviser John Poindexter, scheduled for Jan. 22.

have always treated farm workers differently than industrial workers. "Agriculture is different and that's the way it's been for 50 years," Kennedy said.

The Senate also rejected 64-34 an amendment under which the government, through tax credits, would have absorbed costs incurred by small businesses due to legislation that might still pass in the 101st Congress.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said small business will suffer monetary losses due to both the minimum wage law and legislation requiring equal opportunity for the disabled in jobs and access to public accommodations passed earlier this year.

But the conservatives never made the all-out assault on the bill, as they had threatened at one point, limiting themselves to verbal attacks. "An increase in the minimum wage will hurt primarily the working poor and black teenagers," Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said. "An increase will cause a substantial loss of jobs for young people and non-white."

Helms said estimates by the Labor Department showed that 227,000 jobs would be eliminated even with the training wage.

use the Rec Center regularly.

The USG also passed a resolution in support of an increase in the campus safety fee by $1.15.

There also was a resolution on the agenda for the USG to support a student referendum about the Halloween street party to determine the will of the students.

The resolution, written and submitted by senator Gregg Flake from the east side, was defeated after discussion.

"If the majority of students do vote that they would like Halloween, what can we do about it?" Walters said.

Blake said he wrote the amendment because he was concerned that the USG was being portrayed as neutral on the Halloween celebration and he wanted a stand taken.

Scholar says United States a communicator, bad listener

By Dale Walker
Staff Writer

African American scholar Ali A. Mazrui said the United States, the best communicator in history, is a bad listener.

Mazrui lectured on the "Dialogue of the Deaf" Tuesday night at the Student Center Auditorium.

In his lecture, which touched on a wide range of modern day and historical examples of the oppressed and oppressing governments, Mazrui, an Albert Schweitzer professor of humanities at the State University of New York, attempted to clarify what he thought were underlying reasons for many problems in Third World countries.

Mazrui said the east-west divide between the superpowers in the early 1960s, when "the two sides armed themselves to the teeth, ready to risk annihilation," was basically ideological. The north-south divide between the superpowers and most Third World countries is an economic and technological one, he said.

Using South Africa as an example, he said it is the white population's technology and skill that enables it to keep power over the black population, which is more than 80 percent of the population.

To show the relationship between Third World countries and the two superpowers, Mazrui quipped, "When two elephants fight, it is the grass that suffers. And, when two elephants make love, it is also the grass that suffers."

He explained that now that the United States and the Soviet Union are becoming friendlier, they might forget about Africa and Third World countries because they no longer need to sway those countries with resources to gain their support against the other.

On the subject of African countries, Mazrui said, "We (the African countries) have urbanization, but not industrialization." He said African countries have developed American tastes, but not American technology.

Africa must rely on western technology to extract its own rich resources, he said.

In 1986, Mazrui wrote and hosted the nine-part BBC/PBS television series "The Africans."

Mazrui chose the Japanese, who he said were once considered racially inferior, as an example of how "it is not genes that make power. It is a mixture of compatibility between culture and science."

He also said the Turks went culturally and economically western to become advanced and failed. Africa culturally westernized without western technology or skills, he said.

Turning to racial discrimination, Mazrui said that Jews, per capita, are more successful in America than the gentile whites. He said, however, that Jews have not sought the presidency in America out of careful calculation because of the possibility a Jewish presidential candidate could bring anti-semitism. He said a black presidential candidate could, likewise, bring about racism.

On the subject of journalism, Mazrui said he feels less cut off from his native country of Kenya when he is in England than when he is in the United States. He said while he was in Kenya, he had to depend on western news sources for news of a neighboring African country and often that news was incorrect.

Mazrui received his master's degree from Columbia University in New York and his doctorate from Oxford University. He taught in Uganda for 10 years and in 1949 in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Agriculture project in Zambia successful, says SIU-C prof

Three universities help government improve research

By Dale Walker
Staff Writer

SIU-C's participation in the Zambia Agricultural Research and Extension project with two other universities has been fruitful, Oval Myers Jr., director of international agriculture, said.

The University of Illinois led the six-year project, which began in 1982. SIU-C and the University of Maryland-Eastern Shore collaborated on the project, Myers said.

ZAMARE "was designed to help the Ministry of Agriculture of Zambia to improve its research in corn, sunflower and soybean with the aim of increasing their level of self-sufficiency," Myers said.

Through a $10 million grant, ZAMARE was funded by United States Agency for International Development, he said.

"In addition to the research activities, a major component of the project was the training of 47 graduate students, and 75 students received short-course training in the United States or outside of Zambia," he said. Among the graduate degree recipients, 12 received their training from SIU-C, Myers said.

According to a pamphlet published by the three participating universities, the government of the Republic of Zambia described ZAMARE as an "example of success by which to measure other technical assistance activities."

ZAMARE's objectives were:

- to strengthen the cereal grains commodity research team in maize and the oilseeds commodity research team in soybeans and sunflowers;

- establish an effective adaptive research planning team in the Central Province of Zambia;

- enhance the capacity of the extension service to communicate appropriate technology to small-scale farmers;

- establish a facility to produce soybean inoculant.

Although the field portion of the project ended in 1988, the three participating universities and the U.S. Ministry of Agriculture are in a continuing linkage project called ZAMLINK, Myers said.

The linkage activities in 1989 consist of a research station management workshop that began in Zambia in August, he said. George Kapusta, faculty member of plant and soil science, was an instructor in the workshop in September and October, Myers said.

Two Zambian researchers in agronomy and plant breeding collaborated with Farrel Olsen, Paul Gibson and Myers of the Department of Plant and Soil Science at SIU-C. These professors will participate in complementary exchange with Zambia in 1990. James Legacy, of the Department of Agricultural Education and Mechanization, also will participate in the exchange, Myers said.

Young Soviets fair better on test about geography than Americans

Scrrips Howard News Service

Young Soviets are much smarter about geography than young Americans, according to the first survey ever conducted of geographic knowledge in the Soviet Union.

The survey found that the United States is the only major industrial nation in which people over 55 know more than young adults 18 to 24 about geographic locations.

Young adults in the United States ranked dead last in geographic knowledge when compared to 18-to-24-year-olds in nine other countries.

"If you don't know where you are, you're nowhere. And, clearly, a lot of our people are nowhere," said Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, which paid for the survey.

Results released Wednesday by the Gallup Organization show that the Soviets ranked at the bottom with Mexicans and Italians in locating 16 places on a world map. But young Soviets 16 to 24 ranked near the top.

Despite the good showing by his younger generation, Vladimir Andreyenkov, who supervised the Gallup survey in the Soviet Union, told reporters he was not pleased with the results.

Andreyenkov said the poor showing among older people in the Soviet Union may be partly attributable to education lost during World War II.

Jury selection for Kentucky drunken driving case begins

Man accused of killing 27 people on church bus with his truck

CARROLLTON, Ky. (UPI) — Jury selection began Wednesday in the trial of chemical worker Larry Mahoney, charged with killing 27 people when his pickup truck slammed into a church bus in the worst drunken driving case in U.S. history.

Carroll County Circuit Judge Charles Satterwhite warned potential jurors from a pool of 300 people that the case involving the May 14, 1988, accident has drawn national attention and that they should not discuss it with anyone.

"We only want to do this once," Satterwhite said. The selection process is expected to take up to two weeks.

Satterwhite assigned the jurors numbers to shield them from the public and said they will be called for individual interviews by number instead of by name.

Mahoney, casually dressed and somber, arrived at the courthouse amid tight security. He was indicted on 85 charges, including 27 counts of murder, in the collision between his pickup truck and a bus carrying 67 members of the First Assembly of God Church in Radcliff.

Investigators said a blood alcohol test on Mahoney shortly after the accident showed him with a count of 0.24 percent — nearly 2 1/2 times the 0.10 percent for legal intoxication in Kentucky.

Mahoney, 36, was traveling north on Interstate 71 when his vehicle crossed the median into a southbound lane and hit the right side of the 1977 Ford school bus that was returning from a day at an amusement park near Cincinnati.

The impact ruptured the bus' gas tank, blocking its front exit and spewing gasoline throughout the bus. Fire and smoke spread rapidly as 40 passengers escaped through the rear exit, but 24 occupants, aged 10 to 19, and three adults remained trapped inside.

Special prosecutor Paul Richwalsky Jr., an assistant state attorney general, said he plans to call more than 100 witnesses, including survivors and relatives of the victims.

He said his contention will be that Mahoney alone caused the accident and is responsible for the deaths.

The defense said it will attempt to show that Ford Motor Co. and the Sheller-Globe Corp. are partly responsible and should share in any liability. Sheller-Globe manufactured the bus and Ford made the chassis.

Richwalsky said there was nothing wrong with the vehicle until the accident.

All of the victims withstood the initial impact, according to state medical examiner George Nichols. He said the deaths were caused by smoke inhalation.

Mahoney, a chemical worker who faces life imprisonment, has been free on $540,000 bail pending the trial.

City worker: D.C. mayor used cocaine

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An associate of Mayor Marion Barry has told a judge that a city employee gave him money to buy drugs and was present at a hotel when he and the mayor smoked crack cocaine.

Charles Lewis told U.S. District Judge Stanley Sporkin on Tuesday that James McWilliams, an official of the Public Works Department, provided money for drug transactions.

Lewis, a former associate of the mayor, pleaded guilty Monday to conspiring to buy and distribute cocaine.

Daniel Masur, McWilliams' lawyer, called the allegations "absolutely false. There is no truth to any suggestion that McWilliams is involved in drugs."

McWilliams has become the focus of investigators trying to back Lewis' claim that he smoked crack cocaine with the mayor at a downtown Ramada Inn last Dec. 19. Lewis said McWilliams did not smoke any crack.

McWilliams is believed to be the only other person present in the room, for at least part of the time, although Lewis has named at least three other people he said could testify that Barry used drugs during trips to the Virgin Islands.

Published reports this week said investigators have not found anyone to corroborate Lewis' allegations.

Barry, who has denied ever using drugs with anyone, has said he and Lewis watched a televised football game in the Ramada Inn room that night and that he left when the game ended, shortly after midnight.

The Washington Post quoted a retired policeman working as a room clerk that night as saying Barry did not arrive at the Ramada Inn until 11:30 p.m. and left shortly before 3 a.m.

Lewis said he purchased crack cocaine for Barry while he was staying at the Ramada Inn. District police have said they were about to make an undercover drug buy from Lewis that night but were warned away because the mayor was in the room with him.

McWilliams, who was subpoenaed by a grand jury earlier this year but did not testify, repeatedly has declined comment about his visit to the Ramada Inn.

Senate rejects bill repealing catastrophic health care law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate rejected Wednesday a House bill repealing the 1988 catastrophic illness insurance law, and passed instead a less drastic measure that retained some benefits but killed the law's controversial surtax.

The Senate bill was passed on a voice vote and sent back to the House, which was certain to reject it before joining the Senate in appointing a conference committee to work out differences.

Those talks were expected to begin by Thursday. Congressional leaders have said they want to adjourn for the year by Thanksgiving and have promised a resolution of the thorny catastrophic issue before they go home.

The landmark catastrophic illness insurance law was the largest expansion of Medicare benefits for senior citizens since Medicare was enacted in 1965 and was hailed last year as a legislative highlight of Ronald Reagan's presidency.

The Senate version of the bill, sponsored by Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., originally passed the Senate last month on a 99-0 vote after the House voted overwhelmingly to repeal the law.

The Senate's version retains catastrophic benefits now in place, including protections against long-term hospitalization and spousal impoverishment. But it kills other new benefits, such as the prescription drug benefit.

And it repeals the law's controversial surtax. That surtax, which kicked in last Jan. 1, helped fund the law's wide array of new insurance benefits. But its cost prompted howls of protest from wealthier senior citizens and from some advocacy groups.

The House voted earlier this year to repeal the catastrophic illness law but included the issue as part of a huge deficit reduction bill.

The Senate version of catastrophic reform was handled as a separate bill.

The Bush administration and congressional leaders agreed last week to include catastrophic reform as part of a critically needed bill extending the government's borrowing authority. That authority expired Nov. 1 but the government borrowed enough cash beforehand to avoid default until Nov. 8.

But when negotiators failed Tuesday to reach a compromise between the House and Senate positions on the catastrophic bill, it was decided by congressional leaders to handle the issue as a separate bill, uncoupled from both the debt ceiling bill and the still-stalled deficit reduction bill. That agreement allowed the debt ceiling bill to clear Congress just a day before the government would have defaulted. President Bush signed the bill Wednesday.

White House supports creation of rural development organization

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Bush administration gave its support "in concept" Wednesday to many of the provisions in a bill to create a Rural Development Administration and greatly change the way money is channeled into rural projects.

The bill would allow the Agriculture Department to shift money among its rural development programs so funds would be available for the most important projects in a region. Local leaders would develop long-range development plans and assign priorities to projects.

Congress has devoted attention to rural economic development because of the welter of problems facing rural America: Low incomes, high jobless rates and problems in obtaining health care and schooling. A quarter of the U.S. population lives in rural areas.

"The status quo is not doing a sufficient job," said Rep. Tom Coleman, R-Mo., who joined Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., in writing the bill being considered by English's subcommittee.

Agriculture Undersecretary Roland Vautour told the panel "the administration supports in concept the majority of the rural development-related provisions contained in the proposed legislation."

"We endorse the establishment of a Rural Development Administration within the Department of Agriculture," Vautour said, and he said the administration has been working on the idea of restructuring rural programs.

Vautour said President Bush was likely soon to announce an initiative aimed at rural economic progress. Many of the ideas already have been incorporated into the English-Coleman bill.

By comparison, Vautour said when asked by Rep. Larry Combest, R-Texas, a Senate-passed rural development bill "is a fragmented approach, something for everyone, with no focus."

Star 'lost' without basketball

MILLINGTON, Tenn. (UPI) — Basketball star Chris Peoples, forced off his college team by failing grades, committed suicide because "he was lost" without the sport, his friends say.

"My baby loved basketball," said his mother, Erma Peoples, who raised five children by herself after her husband died when Chris was 7. "There are so many unanswered questions floating around in my head that I'll never get out. But I do know my baby loved me."

Chris Peoples, 20, died at Regional Medical Center in Memphis on Oct. 19, eight days after swallowing four bottles of pills, including painkillers, at his home.

Friends said Peoples, a 6-foot-5 star guard for Millington High School, had been depressed because he had been declared academically ineligible to play this season at Shelby State Community College.

Several major colleges recruited Peoples, who scored 1,852 points in three seasons at Millington, but he failed to academically qualify for any of them. At Shelby State in one season, he averaged 17.9 points a game and hit 40 against Northwest Mississippi, including 10 of 13 from three-point range.

The Rev. Bill Adkins, who delivered the eulogy at Peoples' funeral Oct. 25, said he tried to talk to him about his troubles.

"When I called Chris, it was almost a non-response," Adkins said. "I could sense much of his hope was fading away. He started distancing himself from everybody. It was just a case of severe depression."

"All Chris wanted to do was play basketball. When it got to the point that was not a part of his life, he thought that didn't leave anything in his life. When you take away the only thing he'd ever known that gave him the admiration of his friends, he was lost."

Erma Peoples remembers her son as someone who "always had a smile on his face," but in the days before his death, he began watching videotapes of himself playing high school basketball.

"He'd sit and look at them for a long time," his mother said. "About the only other thing I noticed was a week before it happened was that Chris got out of his bed, got in my bed, hugged me and said, 'I love you.' I thought that was kind of strange. Maybe he was trying to tell me all along."

At the funeral, mourners packed the tiny Little John Missionary Baptist Church in the countryside outside Millington, and Erma Peoples blinked back tears. She said she hopes to help others by telling her son's story.

West Virginia's Harris alludes to pro career

Scrapps Howard News Service

Twelve West Virginia football players will play their final game at Mountaineer Field on Saturday. That number could grow to 13 if quarterback Major Harris elects not to return next year. Tuesday he hinted he may not return.

Speaking at his weekly teleconference, Harris was asked what he would like to tell Mountaineers fans regarding his decision on the National Football League draft.

"Football is fun. If you get paid for it, it's funner ... If they're going to pay you some money for doing it, you're going to be crazy not to take it." Harris, a redshirt junior, is not expected to announce his decision until after the season. He said he has not talked to NFL scouts about his future as a pro.

"I haven't talked to anybody. Do they want me? It's a lot of things that go into that. It would be stupid to leave if nobody wants you."

Draft expert Mel Kiper Jr., in his book "The 1990 Draft Preview," rates Harris tenth among quarterbacks behind, in order, Scott Mitchell, fourth-year junior (Utah), Jeff George, fourth-year junior, (Illinois), John Friesz (Idaho), Cary Conklin (Washington), Mike Buck (Maine), Michael Procter (Murray State), Frank Bauer (Lafayette), Peter Tom Willis (Florida State) and Todd Ellis (South Carolina), who recently injured his knee.

Kiper said if Harris, Mitchell and George return for their seniors years, the 1991 draft could rival 1983 when John Elway, Todd Blackledge, Jim Kelly, Tony Eason, Ken O'Brien and Dan Marino were taken in the first round.

Harris was asked what he could gain by sticking around another year. "Try to gain a national championship."

The Heisman Trophy could be another reason. He finished fifth last year and should be invited to the Downtown Athletic Club next month. However, it's too early to say how he will finish. He didn't help his cause by fumbling four times, three of which he lost, on national television in a 19-9 defeat to Penn State Saturday.

Coach Don Nehlen doesn't think Harris' fumbles should affect his Heisman hopes.

"Major's kind of proven himself through the test of time. He's put a lot of W's on the board for us. He continually makes as many plays as any college quarterback in the country. I grant you last week he dropped the ball more times than he's ever dropped it, but there were some circumstances on that."

"You take away those dropped balls and he had the greatest game, I think, he ever played. He was intense. He ran harder. He was going after it, brother. He was trying to stretch a 30-yard gain into a 33. That trophy should go to the guy who has done the most for his team."

Chang advances in French Open

LONDON (UPI) — French Open champion Michael Chang cruised into the second round of the $517,500 Silk Cut tennis tournament Wednesday, crushing fellow American Dan Goldie 6-1, 6-1.

Chang, the second seed, said he hoped to meet No. 1 John McEnroe in Sunday's final. Goldie, ranked 79th in the world, beat the 17-year-old Chang earlier this year in Philadelphia, but he never looked remotely capable of duplicating that.

In other first-round matches, title-holder and No. 5 seed Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland lost to Czechoslovak Martin Strelba, 6-0, 2-6, 6-3; Eric Jelen, West Germany, defeated Warren Green, South Africa, 7-5, 6-1; and Leif Shiras, Milwaukee, downed Chris Bailey, Britain, 7-6 (7-5), 7-5.

In second-round play, seventh-seeded Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union topped Michael Stich, West Germany, 7-5, 6-2.

Guy Forget, France, beat sixth-seeded Kevin Curren of Austin, Texas, 7-6 (7-5), 6-4.

Chang, of Placentia, Calif., broke his opponent's serve in the second game and, after Goldie held serve in the fourth, won the next five games.

Goldie, of McLean, Va., held serve in the third game of the second set, but from then it was all Chang. He displayed his famous mobility around court and inch-perfect passing shots. Chang said he had not been looking forward to meeting Goldie after the earlier defeat.

"Dan is a very dangerous player. He likes to beat top players," the world No. 6 said. "When I played him earlier this year I was 6-2, 4-1-up and the match just got away from me," he said.

Chang said he was still working on improving his game.

Owner vows to move Giants from aging Candlestick Park

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Mayor Art Agnos predicted Wednesday that cities across the country would line up to woo the San Francisco Giants after voters rejected a proposal to build a stadium for the team.

Agnos, who strongly supported a new waterfront ballpark, said he has run out of options to keep the team in the city.

"We're going to have to face the reality that as we sit here today we are going to lose the Giants," Agnos said.

Giants owner Bob Lurie reiterated his campaign vow early Wednesday to move the club out of San Francisco's windy and aging Candlestick Park.

"I know the people who were running the campaign against the ballpark think I'm bluffing, but I'm not," he said. "I'm not going to stay at Candlestick."

Proposition P, which would have authorized the city to build a ballpark on the downtown waterfront, was rejected by a margin of 50.6 percent to 49.4 percent in Tuesday's election.

After the election, Lurie said he would try to keep the team in the San Francisco Bay Area. A coalition of South Bay business and civic leaders submitted a proposal last year to bring the club to Santa Clara, about 45 miles south of its current home.

Agnos said he expects cities from across the country to line up, "waving blank checks," to attract the club. Such a competition could doom attempts to keep the team in the Bay Area, the leader of the South Bay stadium task force said Wednesday.

"The next move I think is Bob Lurie's," Sunnyvale Mayor Larry Stone said. "I know he can make a more lucrative deal for himself and his team by going outside the Bay Area."

Several cities have been mentioned as candidates for the Giants, including St. Petersburg, Fla., where a stadium will be completed early next year, Sacramento, Calif., where a group is planning to build a stadium; Vancouver, Canada; and Denver.

If the team moves, it will be the first major league club to do so since the Washington Senators moved to the Texas Rangers in 1971.

Officials in St. Petersburg and Sacramento said they didn't expect the Giants' stadium defeat to open up immediate opportunities for them to attract the team.

"We've followed Mr. Lurie for a long time and everything he has said, both publicly and privately, has been that he wants to keep the team in the Bay Area," said Rick Dodge, assistant city manager of St. Petersburg. "I don't think that has changed."

The day before the election, Agnos accused Sacramento sports promoter Gregg Lukenbill of financing a campaign mailer against the stadium so he could attract the club to the state capital.

But a spokesman for Lukenbill said his main priority is attracting the National Football League's Raiders to a 72,000-seat stadium he wants to build 5 miles north of Sacramento.

"We're not really focused on baseball here in spite of all the assertions that have been made," spokesman Maurice Read said.

Lurie pledged after the election that the Giants would play one more season in Candlestick Park. During the campaign, he worked out a deal with the city which puts him on a year-to-year lease that would allow him to leave at any time after next season. The team's prior lease had extended until 1994.

Decertification a bargaining tool for NFLPA in midst of labor scrap

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The NFL Players Association, in seeking its own decertification as a union, is taking the same kind of dramatic gamble that led the NBA players to a contract with that league's owners that would make any NFL player envious.

No American labor union representing players in a professional sports league has ever followed through on a threat to decertify itself — relinquishing its standing as the exclusive bargaining representative of players for wages, hours and working conditions.

Decertification, however, remains a powerful tool because without the existence of a union certified with the National Labor Relations Board and the Labor Department, management loses a valuable shield from federal antitrust laws.

In 1987, the NBA Players Association began the process of decertification, holding an authorization vote of its members and filing the necessary government papers before that league's owners, apparently frightened at the prospect of new-found antitrust scrutiny, made a series of stunning contract concessions. The collective bargaining agreement that resulted included a landmark free agency system (unrestricted free movement of players from team to team based on years of service) and a shortening of the amateur draft down to two rounds.

The circumstances in the NBA in 1987 and the NFL in 1989 are similar. In both cases, the owners and players reached bargaining impasse and in both cases the union lost a key legal battle before opting for decertification.

Charles Grantham, the executive director of the NBAPA, said Wednesday decertification was a useful tool for the basketball players.

"From management's perspective, it was not a business arrangement that they wanted to deal with," Grantham said. "If you follow decertification through, it would have been chaotic (in the league) and they didn't need chaos."

Grantham said the NBA players were willing to follow through on decertification before management blinked in the labor stare-down.

'Majik' QB leads new Pack attack

By Scripps Howard News Service

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Along Lombardi Avenue, they are calling it the Majkowski Miracle. Others are saying it was simply Majik.

But for Don Majkowski, the Green Bay Packers' third-year quarterback, it is all part of the approach that has made him the fastest-rising star in the National Football League.

"I'm not a guy who gets down when something goes bad in a game," Majkowski said. "I like to redeem myself and get an opportunity to make up for it if something doesn't go exactly the way I want it to go. If the quarterback's confidence gets down, his teammates will see that and everybody might not be as confident."

Flash-back to Sunday:

Fourth down. Ball at the Chicago Bears' 14. Packers trail, 13-7. One drive has been killed by a Majkowski fumble, another by a Majkowski interception. Each inside the Bears' 27. What would happen this time?

"Maybe somebody would have jumped off a bridge after what happened," Packers offensive assistant Joe Clark said. "But you know Don. He never, ever quits."

All Majkowski did was roll right to escape pressure from defensive end Trace Armstrong, hold the ball until the last possible moment and calmly find wide receiver Sterling Sharpe among three defenders in the end zone with 32 seconds remaining.

Another comeback. Another Majik-al moment.

"If they hadn't before, the players can certainly sense he's got the ability to bring us from behind if it does rest on his shoulders," said Lindy Infante, the Packers' second-year coach.

have helped us early."

Harmke said he has been physically prepared for the last few games but has not felt comfortable on the field.

"Right now, I feel like I'm in pretty good shape," Harmke said. "But sometimes I don't feel comfortable on the field, because last year I had a lot of practice time and this year I haven't gotten that."

Harmke missed the first five games with the injury he sustained while training with a friend at home in Rolling Meadows.

"I can remember, it was Aug. 4 at 6:15 p.m.," Harmke said.

Harmke had been training on a 400 meter track, sprinting the 100-meter straightaways and jogging the curves.

"It was the last workout before camp opened and the last sprint of the day," Harmke said. "We were neck-and-neck at 50 meters and I didn't want to let him (his friend) beat me, so I really kicked it in and that's when it snapped. And the rest is history."

History probably won't be repeated in getting another GTE award because of his low statistics this season. But Harmke is satisfied with the award received last year.

"To be honored because you are a good athlete and a good student is probably the biggest thrill of my life," Harmke said. "It's not easy to have good grades, in a hard major, and play football. That's probably one of the best awards that can reward a guy who works hard in the classroom and who works hard on the field."

Cubs' Walton top NL rookie

Teammate Smith next in balloting

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jerome Walton, the fleet center fielder who helped carry the Chicago Cubs to a startling division title, Wednesday was named National League Rookie of the Year by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

He captured 22 of 24 first-place votes for 116 points to beat out Cubs outfielder Dwight Smith by 48 points. The last time teammates finished 1-2 in NL Rookie of the Year voting was in 1957 when pitcher Jack Sanford of Philadelphia finished ahead of first baseman Ed Bouchee.

Walton, who made the jump from Double A to the big leagues, enjoyed a 30-game hitting streak this year, the longest in baseball. His speed and defensive poise helped make the Cubs a sensation after they finished in fourth place in 1988.

The 24-year-old from Newnan, Ga., hit .293 in 116 games, with five home runs, 46 RBI and 24 stolen bases. He posed a threat at the top of the order with 30 infield hits and 18 bunt hits.

His first major-league hit was on Opening Day April 4 — an RBI triple off Floyd Youmans.

Smith, who with Walton gave the Cubs one of the best young outfielders in baseball, earned the other two first-place votes and finished with 68 points. Walton was the only player named on all 24 ballots. Two votes came from each of the league's 12 cities. Votes were tabulated on a 5-3-1 basis.

Walton is the second Cub to claim a postseason honor this year, with Zimmerman being named NL Manager of the Year. Walton becomes the first Cub since Ken Hubbs (1962) to win NL rookie honors.

Others receiving support in the voting were: Gregg Jefferies of the Mets (18 points), Derek Lilliquist of Atlanta (6), Andy Benes of San Diego (3), Charlie Hayes of Philadelphia (3) and Greg Harris of San Diego (2).

Region Five Tourney a first for men's tennis

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

For the first time the Saluki men's tennis team will compete in the Region Five Tournament in Wichita, Kan.

The Salukis, who received a wildcard position in the tournament, will oppose top-ranked Kansas at 6 p.m. Friday.

Kansas was the only team to receive a bye into the tourney. The Jayhawks are ranked No. 1 in Region Five. Colorado and Nebraska round out the four-team field.

"We don't think Kansas is unbeatable," Saluki coach Dick LeFevre said. "But they have to be considered the favorite."

The Jayhawks have two nationally ranked players in Jeff Gross and John Falbo. LeFevre said Falbo is one of the best players in the region.

Colorado and Nebraska received positions in the tourney after each team advanced to the championship match of the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches' Association Oct. 29 in Des Moines, Iowa.

The Buffaloes advanced to the championship after defeating SIUC 6-3 in the semifinals. Colorado defeated Nebraska 5-4 for the championship in Iowa.

"That match could have went either way," LeFevre said. "Colorado and Nebraska are evenly matched."

The teams will hook up in a rematch at 2 p.m. Friday in the Region Five Tournament.

The winner of the Colorado-Nebraska match meets the Kansas-SIUC winner in the championship at 2 p.m. Saturday.

The tourney champion receives a bid into the February nationals in Louisville. Region five includes all teams in the Missouri Valley and Big 8 Conferences.

The Salukis are led by No. 1 player, senior Mickey Maule, who LeFevre thinks is one of the top three players in the Region. LeFevre thinks his No. 2 player, Joe Demeterco has a good chance to win Friday.

George Hime, the Salukis No. 3 player, has a tough match ahead of him LeFevre said.

"Their (Kansas) No. 3 player beat Demeterco earlier this season," LeFevre said. "This may be our toughest matchup Friday. I think the No. 4, 5, and 6 positions are up for grabs."

Judge David Perez.

The District Attorney's Office said Aquino was drunk when he lost control of his 1985 Mercedes-Benz as he was driving north on the San Diego Freeway Aug. 14, 1988.

The car rolled down a 30-foot embankment, killing two passengers in the back seat, Teresa Bello, 20, of San Francisco, and Howard Thomas, 25, of Ventura.

Former boxing champ sentenced to six years

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Former World Boxing Council super welterweight champion Lupe Aquino was sentenced Wednesday to six years in state prison for the deaths of two passengers in his car who were killed in a drunken driving accident last year.

Aquino, 26, of Ventura, who pleaded no contest Aug. 25 to two counts of gross vehicular manslaughter while intoxicated, was sentenced by Superior Court

Senior fullback Chuck Harmke (34) takes a handoff from freshman quarterback Brandon Prenger during practice Wednesday at McAndrew Stadium. Harmke and the Salukis, 2-8, are preparing for their last game of the season against Northern Iowa Saturday.

Injury costs Harmke a chance at 2nd All-American award

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

Fullback Chuck Harmke's chances for repeating as the Saluki's leading rusher were thrashed when he ripped a hamstring muscle in his right leg just prior to fall camp this year.

Last season Harmke led the Salukis with 795 yards on 185 carries. His performance earned him a first-team selection to the GTE Academic All-American squad.

After last season, Harmke was looking forward to a better performance in 1989.

"Last season was just a great thing to have happen to me," Harmke said. "My academic career had been going so well and all of a sudden my athletic career kind of came up and met it. It really made my life a lot better."

This season has not fared as well for the senior electrical engineer major.

"I don't know what happened," Harmke said. "I'm not as well-rounded as I used to be. I think I can still run and catch fairly well, but I've been disappointed."

"Last year was nice because when (the coaches) needed something done, a big block or something, I felt I could get it done," Harmke said. "Now I don't know if I could do the job. I know that I'm not the individual to be used in the situation."

So far this season, Harmke has been used sparingly, playing in six games for the 2-8 Salukis. With one game remaining in the season, Harmke has rushed for 144 yards on 27 carries, with no touchdowns. He led the Salukis with six touchdowns last season and was second in scoring with 36 points.

D.J. Wardynski, Saluki running back coach, said it has taken Harmke nearly the entire season to play himself back into shape. Harmke is playing at 100 percent, he said.

"He probably runs the ball the best of all our fullbacks," Wardynski said. "He finds the holes pretty well and has the ability to cut back. He would Return possible for Brown's Mack after fullback's release from prison

BEREA, Ohio (UPI) — Kevin Mack, released from prison Monday, said Wednesday he would play again this season, but Browns trainer Bill Tessenford said the fullback was at least two weeks away from resuming practice.

Mack was sentenced to six months in prison Oct. 3, but was granted an early release by Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Judge Richard McMonagle. He pleaded guilty to using cocaine, a fourth-degree felony.

The bruising fullback met with reporters for the first time Wednesday, but due to orders from McMonagle, was unable to discuss his prison stay or legal troubles. McMonagle, as part of Mack's two-year probation period, ordered the fullback not to discuss his drug or legal problems for one year.

"I'm glad to be back," Mack said. "I'm very anxious to get my life started back on the right track and get back to my job with the Browns."

Mack underwent arthroscopic knee surgery in late September, and his incarceration set back his recovery. He spent Tuesday and part of Wednesday undergoing tests.

In addition to the knee problems,

Mack has lost 15 to 18 pounds from his playing weight of 234 pounds. Tessenford said Mack was two to three weeks away from resuming practice, and four to five weeks away from playing.

"Kevin Mack is going to give it his best," Tessenford said. "Kevin Mack is a competitor. I see him coming back to play. He's got a long career ahead of him. There's no sense jeopardizing it for a game or two."

Mack said his knee was not painful, and he hoped to get his weight back up to 225 pounds before playing.

"Right now, my first priority is getting back in shape where I can get back on the field as soon as possible," he said. "It's going to be real difficult holding myself back. I don't want to rush out there and get an injury again, and that's what's going to happen if I'm not in shape."

The Browns will not rush Mack back into the lineup, but there is no question they miss his punishing inside running. Mack remains the only legitimate power runner on the team. Tim Manoa has been filling Mack's spot, but he is more of a blocking back.

Mack is a two-time Pro Bowl performer who gained 1,104 yards rushing in 1985.

"Kevin Mack is a big man, blocks well, catches the football well," said coach Bud Carson. "He has proven running ability. We just haven't been able to replace that."

Carson also took a cautious attitude toward Mack's eventual return.

"We have no idea as to when Mack is going to suit up," he said. "He's so far behind now that hasn't even come up. It's not a matter of a guy walking out and getting into shape. He's got to rehabilitate a knee."

As far as the players who will play Sunday at Seattle, the Browns have their biggest injury list of the season. Safety Thane Gash (neck), linebacker Clifford Charlton (thigh), linebacker David Grayson (neck), guard Dan Fike (foot), safety Kyle Kramer (thigh) and tackle Paul Farren (ankle) are all listed as questionable.

"We're a little more beat up than we've been at any time this season," Carson said.

The most serious injuries are to starters Gash, Grayson and Fike. If Gash can't start, rookies Robert Lyons or Kramer will fill in.
