IBHE asks priority for SIU-E TV funds

By Lenore Sobota
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

CHARLESTON—The Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) approved a recommendation Tuesday to give SIU-E funding "as soon as possible" to construct a transmitting tower and broadcast facilities to serve the needs of the disadvantaged in the St. Louis Metro-East area.

The recommendation is being sent directly to the General Assembly for action.

James Furman, executive director of the IBHE, said the General Assembly has requested that a proposal from the board regarding educational television priorities be sent to the legislature by Oct. 15.

The Edwardsville campus already has a standard color broadcast studio, equipped with modern technical equipment, which can be used for on-the-air operations, with relatively minor additions, according to an IBHE staff report. SIU-E will broadcast over Channel 18 when the station becomes operational. The board directed SIU-E to establish a not-for-profit council similar to the Chicago Higher Educational Council or enter into agreements with other public private, elementary, secondary and higher education institutions in the proposed area.

The IBHE is presently developing statewide coordination of educational television in Illinois.

Rep. Samuel M. McGrew (D-Geneseo), chairman of the Illinois House higher education subcommittee studying educational television in Illinois, told the IBHE that more attention must be given to educational television.

He pointed out that Mississippi spends $3 million per year on educational television and Ohio spends $5 million while Illinois spent $350,000 on educational television last year.

IBHE defers action on tuition hike

By Lenore Sobota
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

CHARLESTON—The Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) reached no conclusions after an hour debate Tuesday on a recommendation to increase undergraduate tuition to one-third of instructional costs by 1980.

The board deferred action on the proposal, part of Master Plan—Phase 4 (MP4), until all sections of MP4 can be reviewed. The IBHE has set a tentative date of January, 1976, to vote on the MP4 document.

The tuition study committee recommended that undergraduate tuition be maintained at a level of one-third of instructional costs and that graduate tuition should be one-third higher than tuition paid by undergraduates.

Board member Harris Rowe, representing SIU, questioned the legality of the IBHE setting tuition levels.

"I don't think it (the governing statute) says the IBHE has the authority to set tuition in Illinois," Rowe said. "You'd have to use budgetary clout to penalize those who don't follow your recommendations."

The IBHE approves all university budget requests before sending them to the legislature.

Board member George W. Howard said he opposed the tuition committee recommendations "across the board."

Howard pointed out that many costs have risen for students and that tuition is a heavy burden "especially for the middle class."

Board member James M. Unland said he did not feel the increase of approximately $50 a year would be "too burdensome."

Unland said, "I think taking four or five years to get to the one-third figure is quite lenient."

Without the tuition increase, Unland explained, public higher education in Illinois would be $70 million in debt by 1980.

Board member Merle R. Yontz said the objections being heard over the possible increase in tuition are nothing "compared to the screams you'd hear if the legislature had to raise the sales tax."

James Zerkle, student representative to the IBHE, criticized the tuition committee recommendations for not considering total student costs when studying instructional costs.

"Tuition represents a small amount of what students have to pay (to attend college)," Zerkle commented.

A report submitted by the IBHE Student Advisory Committee showed that when fees, room and board and other expenses are included, students pay approximately 70 per cent of the cost for one year's education.

By tying tuition rates into instructional costs and inflation, "there will be one increase after another year after year," Zerkle said.

Howard said he was particularly concerned about the recommendations for graduate tuition increases. Howard said graduate students are the least able to pay such costs especially since the Illinois State Scholarship Commission grants financial aid to a limited number of graduate students.

Emperor Hirohito visits Illinois grain farm

PLAINFIELD (AP)—Japanese Emperor Hirohito got a taste of Middle America Tuesday, lunching with one of the world's most powerful big city mayors and touring some of its rich farmland.

After arriving Tuesday morning in Chicago with Empress Nagako from New York, the 74-year-old emperor toured the soybean and corn farm of Donald Baltz and his son, John, in Plainfield about 35 miles southwest of Chicago.

"Who'd think an emperor would come to a farm, especially our farm?" wondered John's wife, Marianne, who pumped Hirohito's hand repeatedly during the 30-minute visit.

She said she had to do her "spring cleaning in the fall" but the hectic pace of preparation was all worth it.

"Not everyone can say they've hosted an emperor," she said afterwards. "We have something to talk about the rest of our lives."

The emperor made the journey via motorcade with U.S. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz. He was greeted at the older Baltz' farm by well-wishers and Illinois Gov. Daniel Walker. Hirohito was shown how soybeans, a major import of Japan from the United States, were combined and stored at the elder Baltz' 750-acre farm.

"I'm losing ground on the harvest," said the elder Baltz of the timeout from the fields. "But you don't have the emperor here every day."

The emperor then drove about one-quarter mile to the son's 1,700-acre farm with its two-story white frame house that is nearly 100 years old. Two silos, trimmed in red and white, also graced the pastoral setting.

Butz and Baltz gave the diminutive emperor a 30-minute tour, showing him some of Baltz' 600 hogs and 35 cattle. He was shown also how corn is picked and stored and the Baltz' three children showed him their piglets and a small rabbit.

Their son John, 12, said he tried to learn some Japanese phrases for Hirohito's visit but "it gave me a headache after a while so I gave up trying."

Mrs. Baltz had prepared some squash bread for Hirohito, but the emperor had to hurry back to Chicago for an evening reception, where he joined the empress who had toured a children's hospital in the afternoon at the University of Chicago campus, where the atom bomb was developed.

Earlier in the day, the emperor touched upon both the urban and rural aspects of the Midwest at a luncheon given by Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago.

Hirohito praised Daley for his "remarkable achievements" in the areas of urban problems.

"In this age of increasingly complex urban problems, I believe there is much the large cities of Japan could learn from the experiences of Chicago," Hirohito said through the aid of an interpreter.

Hirohito and Daley exchanged toasts in an affair marked by great ceremony and the colorful display of pageantry.

Hirohito also acclaimed the Midwest "as the place which provides so much of the food that goes on our dinner tables" in Japan.

Agents arrest aliens in area orchard raid

A raid by federal authorities Tuesday morning netted 25 allegedly illegal aliens working in the orchards of a man already under federal indictment for using illegal migrant labor.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization agents searched the property of Ray Grammer, R.R. 4, Carbondale, and found the alleged illegal workers. The agents carried a search warrant.

A spokesman for the Illinois Migrant Workers Council said the 25 were Mexican nationals and had allegedly entered the country illegally.

Federal officials said the workers were removed to Chicago for deportation hearings before the federal court there.

Jackson County Sheriff Don White said the raid was conducted entirely by federal agents and his office was not informed of the action. The prisoners were not brought to Jackson County Jail, he said.

White said his office has investigated a traffic accident last week on Illinois 127 near the Grammer Orchard Road and has reported the suspected illegal aliens involved in the crash to federal officials in Chicago.

They (the Immigration and Naturalization Service) told us to go ahead and release them because they did not have the man-power or the money to come down and pick them up," White said.

Grammer, his daughter-in-law, Olga and Hector Cano, also of R.R. 4 were indicted by federal grand jury in East St. Louis for allegedly using illegal aliens. The offenses allegedly occurred between 1971 and 1974.

All three pleaded innocent in the arraignment held Nov. 25, 1974.

SIU Board to consider student attorney program

The final guidelines for the SIU-C Student Attorney Program will be presented for approval to the Board of Trustees at its meeting Thursday at 10 a.m. in the Student Center.

The guidelines were not approved by the Illinois Bar Association in time to be put on the agenda, said President Warren W. Brandt, but will be submitted as a "current and pending item."

The board gave approval in July for the collection of a refundable $1 student attorney fee provided the board had final approval on the guidelines.

The board is also scheduled to discuss

Phase Four of the Illinois Board of Higher Education's Master Plan.

The Resource Allocation and Management Program (RAMP) submissions for fiscal year 1977, preliminary budget requests, are also scheduled for discussion by the board.

The appointment of a vice president for administration at SIU-E will not be acted on at Thursday's meeting, said Andrew Kochman, SIU-E vice president and provost.

The SIU-E vice president for administration is a new position consolidating several non-academic tasks in hopes of reducing budget costs.

Tuition hike decision delayed

The committee's recommendations to increase out-of-state tuition to a level of full instructional costs by fiscal year 1977 also came under fire at the six-hour meeting.

Dan Martin, attending his first meeting as a member of the IBHE, said the large number of Illinois residents attending school outside the state should be kept in mind when deciding how to treat out-of-state students attending Illinois institutions.

"We should move in just the opposite direction, Martin said.

He added that the board should try to remove the artificial, political barriers preventing non-residents from attending Illinois schools because of high costs.

The IBHE will continue discussion of MP4 at its November meeting in Champaign. Public hearings on MP4 will be scheduled next month across the state.

Several board members objected to the haste at which MP4 is being pushed through, but the target approval date of January, 1976, was not changed.

Jacques Cousteau to search for Atlantis

ATHENS (AP) — Jacques Cousteau, often described as a modern underwater Odysseus, will start scanning the Greek seas this month in search of lost treasures and the legendary city of Atlantis.

Student charged with possession of marijuana

A 20-year-old SIU student was charged Tuesday in Jackson County Circuit Court with felony possession of cannabis.

Kurt Larsen, R.R. 6, was arrested Monday by Illinois State Police Trooper David Mileur after Mileur stopped Larsen's car west of De Soto for an alleged traffic violation. Larsen is also charged with illegal transportation of alcohol.

Mileur allegedly found the marijuana during a routine search of Larsen's car, Larry Rippe, assistant Jackson County state's attorney, said. Information charging Larsen states the amount of cannabis at over 500 grams.

Larsen appeared before Circuit Judge Richard Richman and was released on $2,000 bond.

The world-renowned explorer told newsmen Tuesday that a recent agreement with Greek archaeological authorities foresees filming of the Aegean islands seabeds which will culminate in a submarine descent near the island of Thira into the sunken crater which many believe to be the devastated Atlantis.

The project is mainly funded by the Greek government. The film series will be entitled "In Search of Atlantis" and "Mediterranean Treasures" and distributed to major television networks.

"We may produce a great number of astonishing antiquities from our exploration of the Aegean Sea, or on the other hand very little," Cousteau said. "But we will undoubtedly reveal information leading to a better understanding of the region's fabled civilization."

The Aegean Sea is believed strewn with valuable antiquities from sunken ships belonging to varied civilizations which fell victim to storms, local wars or piracy.

"Marine and geological studies will hopefully help us draw radical conclusions on the extent of the obviously flourishing civilization in the devastated area and whether it was actually linked to the legendary Atlantis," he said.

South Africa relaxes job apartheid

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — More jobs will open to blacks in white-ruled South Africa in an effort by the government to boost production and counter 17 per cent inflation.

The relaxation of job apartheid was announced in a declaration signed Tuesday by government and business leaders and white trade unions, which previously had bitterly resisted black job advancement, especially in the gold mines. It also calls for price and wage restraint.

The manifesto, which did not specify exactly how or when job apartheid would be relaxed, said that inflation was a danger to South Africa's stability and that there would be the need for "certain voluntary temporary sacrifices by all sections of the community."

Major companies' tax rate under fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average effective income tax rate paid by 142 major corporations in 1974 was 22.6 per cent, less than half the standard corporate tax rate, Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio, said Tuesday.

Vanik, a House Ways and Means subcommittee chairman, said eight companies paid no taxes and 18 more paid at a rate of 10 per cent or less. The standard rate is 48 per cent.

The companies, whose aggregate income was $46 billion, were able to reduce their tax liabilities "through entirely legal means," Vanik said in a speech for the House floor.

Congress overrides nutrition bill veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate enacted on Tuesday a $2.75 billion child nutrition bill that President Ford vetoed four days earlier as too costly.

It was the seventh time in the 14-month Ford presidency that the heavily Democratic Congress mustered the two-thirds vote needed to override a presidential veto.

In all, Ford has vetoed 39 bills, 12 this year.

The action extends a school breakfast program which feeds 1.8 million low-income children daily and expands the school lunch program by requiring schools to offer 20-cent lunches to students whose parents earn between the poverty level of $5,010 and $9,770.

Committee approves U.S. technicians in Sinai

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved a resolution late Tuesday to send 200 American technicians to surveillance posts in the Sinai to help monitor the interim agreement between Israel and Egypt. The 10 to 2 vote clears the way for probable final authorization by Congress by the end of the week. This, in turn, would lead to implementation of the accord negotiated in August by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

The resolution passed by the committee contains a disclaimer stipulating that Congress is not bound by any of the collateral understandings Kissinger reached with the two states during his shuttle diplomacy. The House version, carrying the same provision, is due for a floor vote on Wednesday.

Ullman calls Ford tax plan 'impossible'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress cannot pledge to meet President Ford's request for a $28 billion tax cut tied to an equal reduction on spending until it sees the administration's new budget, the House's chief tax writer said Tuesday.

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., said Ford's plan is "an impossible one." Ford proposed enactment of $28 billion in permanent tax cuts for 1976 if Congress agrees to cut spending by an identical amount and set a $395 billion spending ceiling for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, 1976.

As the tax-writing committee began work on an assortment of tax revision legislation, including Ford's plan, Ullman said that "if the President wants a $395 billion budget, why doesn't he submit a $395 billion budget?"

islands centers around the popular island of Santorini, also known as Thira, 140 miles southeast of Athens. Archaeologists theorize that great eruptions took place around 2,000 B.C. which put an end to the Mincan civilization there. Several devastating earthquakes have taken place since then; the last one to cause any damage was in 1956.

The ruins of Thira have been systematically unearthed since early this century. The most striking finds were made in recent years by Greek archaeologist Spyros Marinatos, who was killed in an accident while working on the site earlier this year. By then he had claimed to have found Atlantis.

Cousteau says he has no new theory on whether the military, trading and religious center of Atlantis did indeed exist and fell victim to the eruptions, but he plans to pick up from existing theories.

"With this information we can very shortly begin underwater research around the coast of Santorini and inside the volcano's sunken crater," he said. The explorer said pictures around the crater had been taken as early as 1963, revealing crystal-like slopes embedded with fish fossils.

Cousteau said the operation will involve his entire crew and fleet of minisubmarines and bathyspheres carrying the most advanced electronic equipment. The main vessel, the Calypso, left the United States last week and is expected in Greek waters next week.

Cousteau said work is expected to be finished by July.

Coroner calls local man's death apparent suicide

A man was found dead outside his Carbondale home early Tuesday morning of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound, said Don Ragsdale, Jackson County Coroner.

Louie A. Reeder, 63, 300 S. Marion St., apparently shot himself in the chest with a 12-gauge shotgun. No foul play is suspected and a note was found, but a coroner's inquest is pending, said Ragsdale.

Reeder, a retired trucking contractor, was reported to have been in poor health the past two years. He lived in Carbondale most of his life.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday at the First Apostolic Church, 313 W. Chestnut St. Friends may call after 5 p.m. Wednesday at the Van Natta Funeral Home, 300 S. University Ave.

Departmental grade practices differ

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of three articles on grade inflation, the increase in higher grades. The first article dealt with grade inflation and its implications generally. This article reveals a few responses to one study of grade inflation at SIU.

By Nancy Landis
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

In a recent study of grade distributions in the College of Communications and Fine Arts for fall, 1974, significant differences in grading practices within the college were found.

The study was made in the spring by John Mercer, SIU professor of cinema and photography.

Mercer's study shows the percentage of A's in Communications departments ranging from 74 per cent in one department to 71 per cent, 63 per cent, 49 per cent, 39 per cent, 38 per cent, 37 per cent and 33 per cent in other departments in 400 level courses during fall, 1974.

Mercer concluded that departments within Communications and throughout the University, are not awarding comparable grades and thus are making the grading system useless.

Mercer said he skimmed grade distribution reports for the entire University for fall, 1974.

"I didn't make an analysis, but I noticed that at the 300 and 400 levels about 20 departments gave more A's than B's," he said.

"I think the best thing we could do is drop the system," Mercer said.

The grading system is not working because grades do not mean the same thing from department to department or from instructor to instructor, Mercer said.

Mercer said two things have gone wrong with the system: C is no longer used to mean "average," and using the relative system of letter grades, transcripts do not give accurate information about students' achievements in the various courses.

Mercer said a B on a transcript does not necessarily designate "above average" work.

Mercer said the best alternative to the present system would be a pass-no credit system. With this system, teachers would write evaluations of each student for each course.

The evaluations, Mercer suggests, would include students' ranks on tests and in class and would be included in transcripts.

If a student did not pass a course, he would receive no credit, but would not fail the course.

Mercer said that to show a student ranked sixth in a class of 24 would mean more than to say the student received an A. He said in some classes where no C grades are given, a grade of A marking "superior" achievement is meaningless.

Mercer said the next best solution to the problem is to circulate the grade distributions to teachers and have a committee in each college study the distribution to see if grade inflation has "gotten out of hand."

The present system will not improve unless universities do something collectively, Mercer said. Mercer said individual instructors could not alleviate the problem, unless all universities place new requirements on grading practices.

Ed McGlone, chairman of the Department of Speech, said he disagrees with Mercer's conclusion that departmental differences in grading exist, but agrees that grade inflation exists.

McGlone said the distributions of grades in Mercer's study of the fall, 1974, term changed in spring, 1975, showing that some departments increased the number of A's given.

Grade inflation occurs in higher education in general, McGlone said.

There is a nationwide disregard for treating the C as an average grade, he said. The typical faculty member regards C as a low grade.

"Assignment of grades, in general, has been looked at as no longer a way to punish students," McGlone said.

McGlone said teachers are regarding students as people. When human relationships develop between students and teachers, grades tend to be higher, he said.

Instructors regard themselves in one of two ways—as teachers or as diagnosticians, McGlone said. Instructors who regard themselves as teachers give higher grades, while diagnosticians are more particular and give lower grades.

McGlone said he does not know whether teachers and diagnosticians tend to congregate in certain departments.

McGlone said he prefers that most of the class work be put on a pass-fail basis and that faculty devote more attention to telling students how well they're doing.

"I think that it is entirely possible to carefully evaluate student behavior without assigning marks," he said.

Charles Hunt, dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts, said the college was about in the middle of grade distribution scales for SIU as a whole.

"I'm not sure that the grading system any longer fits what we're doing in the University," Hunt said.

In the catalog, we print a policy concerning grades. Generally, that policy is not followed with the grades given," he said.

Hunt said policy and grades should be brought closer together, but the instructor is the only one to do it.

"I don't want to influence the grades at all," he said. "That's the prerogative of the instructor."

Hunt said the requirement for the dean's list for Communications has been raised because too many students were on the list. Previously students with 4.25 grade point averages (on a 5-point scale) were eligible for the dean's list. Now the requirement is 3.7 on a 4-point scale.

"The percentage of students being honored was so high that to me it took away from the honor itself," Hunt said about the Honor's Day program and dean's list.

"I don't think students are brighter," Hunt said.

However, Milton Sullivan, director of the School of Art, said the high percentage of A's in art shows that art students are above average.

"We have exceptionally fine students in the School of Art," Sullivan said.

"I assign grades in terms of quality of performance and objectives of the course," he said. Certain skills must be accomplished in art courses, he added.

Sullivan said teachers in art "grade very ethically and honestly." Grading depends on the class with no one rule for the school as a whole.

"All teachers can give you reasons" why they use a particular system of grading, Mercer said. Academic freedom is involved in allowing teachers to be the judge of student achievement, but academic responsibility is involved in making grades mean the same thing in all courses, he said.

Welch to review student life contracts

By Ray Urchel
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Harvey Welch, dean of student life, said an evaluation will be conducted of Office of Student Life personnel with term contracts to determine whether any of them should be given continuing appointments.

Term appointments come up for renewal at the end of each fiscal year. Welch estimated that 10 of the 15 persons working full-time in the Student Life Office have term contracts.

He said the figure does not include graduate assistants who are hired for only one year.

Welch said that it is "kind of unsettling (for staff members) to be on term appointments year after year."

He said he is reviewing the overall structure to determine the performance of the student life staff this year and last year.

Welch said the criteria used for the evaluation has not been finalized, although he said it would include a review of the job evaluation taken last year and how well the person is fulfilling the job description guidelines.

"It (the review) won't be a private thing," Welch said. "The individual concerned will be aware of what's going on."

Welch said that Vice President for Student Affairs Bruce Swinburne has not given him a deadline for completing the review. Welch said he is aware that Swinburne would like to begin making some decisions by November.

"I'm not operating on any November timetable or any other time frame," Welch said.

If a student life staff person "met the job description (for the position) and exceeded it in some areas," he would be considered for a continuing appointment, Welch said.

President Warren W. Brandt said on Sept. 29 that he has ordered his vice presidents to cut the size of their staffs by two per cent within the next two years because of the current financial situation.

Swinburne has said that there are some Student Life Office positions that should be placed on continuing appointments.

Giving someone a continuing appointment, Welch said, "wouldn't necessarily affect them" salary-wise. "It means that the University is required to give them a longer period before they may be terminated, he said.

Mary Helen Gasser, SIU affirmative action officer, said persons with term contracts must be given six months before they may be released, while persons with continuing pacts must be given notice one year before separation. The only exception, she said, is in cases of "financial exigency" by the University.

Adoptee rights

By Betsie Wissbaum
Student Writer

By sealing birth records, adoption agencies have relegated more than eight million adopted persons in the United States to the status of second-class citizens.

The basic reasoning behind this secrecy, according to public and private adoption agencies, is to protect the privacy of the real mother who gives up her child on the promise that her identity will be kept secret and also to safeguard the sensitive feelings of adoptive parents.

But no one stops to consider the possible psychological and physical harm this could wreak on an adopted child.

Sooner or later a child is bound to find out he or she is adopted. Knowing all the details about his or her real parents will make this knowledge less traumatic and will improve the child's feelings of self-worth.

Often, secrecy is a burden rather than a help to adoptive parents. With an open approach, they would realize that the adoptee's curiosity does not mean they have failed as parents. In reality, the reunion of a child with the birth parents usually has no effect on the adoptee's relationship with his or her adoptive parents.

Curiosity about one's heritage is a natural genealogical curiosity that even the most successful adoptee feels. If birth records were available to adoptees as adults maybe the "forbidden fruit" aspect of adoption would cease and consequently the need for reunions would be eliminated.

A recent pilot survey by three Los Angeles researchers of 250 participants leads these researchers to question some of the long-held beliefs about adoption.

The study revealed that adoptees are very careful to protect the privacy rights of their birth parents. Adoptees either write first or make third-party inquiries before meeting with birth parents. The Adoptees' Liberty Movement Association (ALMA) agrees that adoptees are the most zealous guardians of the birth parents' right to privacy and also of the adoptive parents' sensitivities.

The Los Angeles survey also indicated that birth parents have a need to find their children and to work out unresolved feelings concerning the child. The majority of persons responding to the survey were parents who had given up their children for adoption. One mother said she wanted her files updated because she had been a confused, frightened 17-year-old when the records had been written. If her child ever looked into the records she wanted him to know that she was now a happily married teacher.

Adoptees also have a right to know their complete medical background. It can be time-consuming, expensive and often embarrassing not to be able to tell a doctor exactly what diseases and physical disabilities run in a person's family.

Not knowing one's medical background could also have a bearing on a person's decision whether or not to have children. No one wants to take the risk of passing on unknown physical disabilities to one's children or grandchildren.

Seeking one's birth parents is not a desire to disrupt their lives, nor is it a rejection of one's adoptive parents. As Florence Fisher, founder of ALMA and author of "The Search for Anna Fisher", has said, "It is an affirmative of oneself."

Feminine isn't really such a bad characteristic

By Mary E. Gardner

The realization that women are persons has begun to dawn on many men and women alike. It is no longer a given that women must be passive, sensitive, frivolous parasites whose lot in life is pinned securely to the floor of a house.

As the idea is striking home, women are beginning to make a hair-pin turnabout in their lifestyles. They are displaying the ability to be aggressive, making every year a leap year. They are showing their capability of intellectual conversation, deep thought and making money.

In short, many women are utilizing their new-found responsibility of free choice to make the choices which would be socially acceptable for men to make.

With their changes in lifestyle, some women have made the complete switch from feminine to masculine. They have accepted society's value of masculine as all which is good and have equated all which used to be thought of as feminine as bad.

Women's liberation movement spokesmen (they can hardly be considered women) have decreed that cooking, cleaning, mothering and reading romantic novels are nothing short of treason. Women are made to feel guilty if they enjoy baking cakes and cookies, sewing and (bite my tongue) washing dishes.

Here the dichotomy of the movement arises, for with the acceptance of the equations "male equals good" and "female equals bad," feminists have also charged men with the premeditated slaughter and/or enslavement of the female. They have declared men to be the enemy and accuse women who continue to associate with men of fraternizing with the enemy. They have not as yet realized they have become the enemy.

The way to win a war has never been to jump into the camp of the opposing side; and likewise, the battle against male domination of the world cannot be fought by turning women into men.

Certainly there is something to be said for self assertion and competence. There is much to be said too, however, for sensitivity and the practical ability to make oneself dinner.

Many traits now associated with being feminine are assets: the ability to display emotions, for instance, has been credited with the low rate of heart ailments among females.

A complete and across-the-board denial of everything the word "feminine" encompasses would set women back at least as far as they would go forward in that move.

Before women feel guilty about doing something which is normally considered to be feminine, they must consider whether that is indeed something to feel guilty about, whether it is really something to be ashamed of or if they are merely being taken in by the rhetoric of radical feminists. (Likewise, men must consider whether being "masculine" is always an exercise of good judgment or if they are being forced into a role by their peers.)

If women merely change because it is fashionable, then it is a case of women giving their freedom of choice to other women rather than to men. Surely this cannot be a step forward.

Taking on the characteristics of the majority has traditionally been the manner by which oppressed peoples join the group.

The Jews gained respectability through beating the anti-semitics at the money-making game. Italians have been known to change their surnames to fit into the crowd.

For women to change themselves psychologically into masculine beings, that which is claimed to be the enemy, would be nothing but a denial of the premise on which the feminist movement is based: women are as capable as men are. Such a change would merely make it clear that only persons who think like masculine men are equal to men.

If women do get on top of the heap by changing into masculine women, will this end a long line of succession in group oppression for the human race? Or will these masculine women feel the need to be better than someone else?

In all probability, these masculine women will simply oppress those women who do not totally denounce femininity, thereby perpetuating masculine domination of the world.

Middle East pact not equal to both sides

To the Daily Egyptian:

Jim Ridings' article of Sept. 23 "No communication is biggest obstacle to negotiating peace in the Middle East" states that the recent Egyptian-Israeli accord does not deal with the crucial issues, namely the plight of the Palestinian people and Israel's proclaimed right to exist. I agree with Ridings that the agreement ignores (not surprisingly) the issue of the Palestinians. But aside from this general remark, his article is full of mistakes.

First of all, the accord is not simply an equal give and take on both sides. The agreement is wholly favorable to Israel, which is left in occupation of more than 85 per cent of the Sinai, is guaranteed an estimated $2.4 to $3.3 billion in economic and military aid for the first year alone, and allows for some 200 American "technicians" to be placed in the buffer zone. This last provision is particularly ominous when viewed in light of the additional secret pledges made by the United States to Israel, as partially disclosed by the New York Times and columnist Jack Anderson.

In effect, the secret pledges guarantee a long term commitment to Israel's military and economic requirements.

Above all, it is a question of the forcible expulsion of the Palestinians from their homeland and the systematic repression and discrimination carried out against the Arabs within Israel. If space permitted, I could list the numerous methods of injustice perpetrated against the Palestinians in detail, from jobs to schools, to housing. It is illegal to rent a flat to an Arab in Upper Nazareth, to repression against Arab political groups within Israel.

But for now it will suffice to listen to the words of R. Weitz, a Zionist leader and for many years the head of the Jewish Agency's colonization department, which while written in 1940, clearly illustrates where the real source of the conflict (Zionist racism and aggression) lies; and further shows that the Arab people and the Zionist leaders understand each other a lot better than Ridings understands either one of them. Weitz states, "Between ourselves it must be clear that there is no room for both people together in this country...we shall not achieve our goal of being an independent people in this small country. The only solution is a Palestine, at least Western Palestine (west of the Jordan river) without Arabs...and there is no other way than to transfer the Arabs from here to the neighboring countries, to transfer all of them; not one village, not one tribe, should be left."

Poor reporting when Sullivan quit

To the Daily Egyptian:

Acting from an apparent belief that half a truth—like half a wit—is better than none, the Daily Egyptian has repeatedly presented the SIU community with poorly researched articles which occasionally pass for factual reporting. The DE is, of course, a learning experience for journalism students and, as such, should be viewed with a certain amount of tolerance. Unfortunately, many of the students in attempting to emulate their more crusty counterparts (e.g.: Walter Winchell, et. al.), project a naive cynicism which precludes as in-depth inquiry into their subject matter.

The coverage of Dennis Sullivan's resignation missed six points which I would like to add:

Sullivan pledged to invest $1,000 with any person or group who could bring the Greatful Dead. This was interpreted by various DE reporters to mean that he had personally pledged to bring them here. Attempts by Sullivan to explain this failed, as did his attempts to point out that the Dead had disbanded.

The DE got so wound up in the Greatful Dead that Sullivan's successful attempts to bring the Jefferson Starship (which had not disbanded) were overlooked.

The Student Attorney Program was a campaign promise which had its inception last year. Thanks to the efforts of John Huffman, SIU's Attorney, Tom Busch, from Student Affairs, and Doug Diggle, Student Body President, students should have an attorney in December.

When the federal government allocated $8.1 million to Carbondale, an advisory board was set up. Sullivan succeeded in doubling the number of students on that board.

Student Center room rates were reduced for students for the first time last year. As a result students and student groups were able to rent rooms at a lower rate than non-students.

Realizing the dangerous conditions of some of the bars in Carbondale, Sullivan and Barbara Tally instituted a bar survey which uncovered various infractions ranging from blocked fire doors to stopped up plumbing. This information was forwarded to Code Enforcement, who took the necessary action.

Air Force admission

To the Daily Egyptian:

The Fleetwood Mac-Ambrosia concert two weeks ago surprised me. I came to the concert hoping to hear Fleetwood Mac play "Bare Trees," "Sentimental Lady," "Emerald Eyes," and "Just Crazy Love," but that wasn't going to happen. And why not? Maybe Fleetwood Mac was promoting a new sound or they were tired of playing their established hits. Or maybe because the vocalists for most of the songs I listed were men, and the vocalists on stage Friday night were women. One of these speculations could be the answer, but nevertheless, I felt gyped at the absence of the songs.

I have nothing against a group trying to promote a sound. The Beach Boys, a few years ago, played their recent material for at least the first hour. But the second hour was devoted to their early '60s material.

The two lead women vocalists in Fleetwood Mac possess good wide range voices and could easily have carried off "Bare Trees" and probably the other three songs.

Here's a suggestion to prevent the reoccurrence of a group failing to play certain songs in the future. The people directly responsible with bringing groups to Carbondale could draw up a contract stipulating that certain songs be played. After all, the people who come to concerts pay to here and see the best from a group.

Eastside Garage ad offensive

To the Daily Egyptian:

Eastside Garage, the home of yogi mechanics, have recently come up with a new concept in advertising. In the Sept. 20 issue of the Daily Egyptian, a rather chubby and greasy yogi with a tattoo on his right arm salutes you with a NAMASCAR, (a Hindu salutation-I pay my salutations to the Divinity within you, from the Divinity within me with all the divine charms of my mind and the love and cordiality of my heart). Included in this ad is a rather poignant message that there are five million starving Asians in the world and offers an opportunity to help rectify this situation by bringing them a photo of yogi in a

To the Daily Egyptian:

Although the recent recommendation for discharge of T. Sgt. Leonard R. Matlovich from the Air Force on grounds of homosexuality may seem discriminatory, informed sources assure me that the decision is actually Phase One of a new admissions plan designed to increase enlistment, simplify admission procedures, and save taxpayers thousands of dollars.

The tedious process of acquiring biographic data, ascertaining physical and psychological health will be replaced by a simple test of sexual preferences. Eligibility will be speedily determined after a five-minute exposure to (exclusively female) porn: those who can get it up, can get up in the sky.

I commend the Air Force for their resourceful planning. Incidentally, this plan will eradicate another possible problem element for the Air Force, as not too many women will be able to pass it.

Guns inanimate

To the Daily Egyptian:

In a recent editorial, Jim Ridings attacked (again) in inanimate handgun. The gun by itself can do no harm—like a knife, a club, a brick, or a broken bottle. In the hands of the wrong person, any of those objects is a lethal weapon. It seems ridiculous to "control" the gun or knife when the perpetrator goes unpunished. The criminals know their "rights" and the courts uphold those rights. The worst crime is committed in our court system. Mr. Ridings should check to see how many "paroled" criminals repeat the same offense after jail.

Stricter gun control legislation is not needed; stricter punishment is. Criminals don't have to fear any severe punishment for crimes committed. This is epitomized in most of the cop-robber serials on television.

I think the return of capital punishment and mandatory penalties for crimes committed with a lethal weapon will do more to prevent crime than all the ridiculous laws the politicians could write. It strikes me funny that the two cities with the strictest gun control laws in the United States have the highest crime rates. The courts don't enforce the laws already on the books.

In closing, I would like to let you know that I am proud to be a member of the National Rifle Association. The NRA is doing more for your safety than you will realize. Punish the criminals, not the law-abiding citizen!

Thanks for the push

To the Daily Egyptian:

At 7:30 a.m. Sept. 19, my car stalled in two-three feet of water on Grand Avenue, outside the Morris Library Parking Lot. My thanks for getting out of the water go to a woman who saw my car stall and immediately called the Security Police.

After waiting 35 minutes, I decided to abandon the ship. As I was attempting to do so, some young man walking by offered to push my car out. He went knee deep in water when he stepped off the sidewalk. He alone pushed my car out of the water. Thank God for one beautiful young man that became soaked on my behalf. I did not even get his name, he simply vanished from the scene. My only hope is that he reads this section of the paper so he will know how much I appreciate him and his large heart.

Bakers claim homemade bread cheaper and more nutritious

By Kathy Drew
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Some breadbakers consider what they do, not only an art, but a necessity. They enjoy doing it, but more importantly they appreciate the nutritional and economic advantages to baking bread. Debbie DuPre, senior in journalism, said she began baking bread with her mother when she was about ten. Today she said she bakes bread because it's cheaper and provides more nutrition than store-bought bread. DuPre added that she enjoys doing it and doesn't regard it as an inconvenience.

DuPre said she bakes two loaves of bread a week and uses her own recipe called "Mama D's Secret Bread." The recipe calls for:

- 1 cup corn meal
- 1/3 cup molasses
- 4 cups boiling water
- 4 pkgs. active dry yeast
- 2-3 cups whole wheat flour
- (or 1 cup whole wheat and 1 cup of rye or pumpernickel)
- 2/3 cup sugar
- 2 tbs. molasses
- 1/2 cup cooking oil
- 1 cup lukewarm water

DuPre's directions and tips on making this bread are as follows:

Combine corn meal, molasses, sugar, salt, boiling water and oil. Let the mixture cool to lukewarm for about thirty minutes. Soften the yeast in 1 cup of lukewarm water, stir into the corn meal mixture. Add wheat flour and mix well. Stir in enough all-purpose flour to make a moderately stiff dough. Turn the dough about on a lightly floured surface using about 1 cup of flour and knead until smooth and elastic for 6 to 8 minutes. Knead the dough into flour until it is not sticky. Kneading also gets out air bubbles so the bread will be smooth after baking.

Next, put about a teaspoon of oil in a bowl. Turn the dough once in the bowl, preventing the dough from sticking to the bowl's sides. Let the dough rise for about 45 minutes, or until it doubles. Then, divide it into two loaves. Let the dough rise again.

Putting a damp towel over the dough keeps it from getting blown on and keeps it moist.

When rising, put the dough in bright sun or a warm oven. This helps the yeast grow so it rises faster. This will work at between 75 degrees and 115 degrees. 90 degrees is a good climate for yeast growth.

Shape the dough into 4 loaves and place in greased loaf pans. These pans should be wiped clean after use rather than washed, which may cause dough to stick to the pan's sides.

Bake the bread for 45 minutes at 375 degrees.

Ann Peck, a breadbaker of two years, bakes whole wheat, white and oatmeal bread which she says are all very easy to bake. Peck said she doesn't buy any prepared food.

"I know my bread is better than the stuff in the stores," Peck said. "It would be better if I had stone-ground wheat flour, but I can't afford that."

"I also bake my own bread because it's cheaper; some people don't think it is, but I've found it cheaper," she said. "I think I can make a loaf for about 58 or 60 cents, buy my loaves are bigger than loaves sold in stores."

Tom Russo, a senior in food and nutrition, said he bakes his own bread because of the pleasure in making it.

Russo said he varies his bread from heavy to light by using different ingredients. The economical aspect depends on what he puts in his bread, he said.

"At tops it costs between 45 and 50 cents," Russo said.

Comparing his bread to other breads, Russo said that his ratio of whole wheat to unbleached flour is higher. "Soy flour compliments the whole wheat flour. When the two are combined you get a higher protein value," Russo said.

- 2 cups rye flour
- 2 tsp. baking powder
- 1 cup milk
- 2 tbs. oil
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1 tbs. of instant milk
- 1/4 cup honey

Russo's directions for baking this "quick bread" are: Combine dry ingredients. Combine liquid ingredients. Then combine the two. Mix until smooth dough forms. Oil and flour a cookie sheet. Flatten the dough out to about 1/2 inch thick. Punch holes with a fork. Bake at 450 degrees for 10 minutes. The result is a flat rye bread.

Carbondale Fire Department promotes week of prevention

The Carbondale Fire Department has been visiting all schools in and around the city since Monday to help promote Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 6-12.

The department, with the help of the SIU Recreational Department, put on skits and a puppet show to demonstrate to students proper fire prevention techniques at home and other duties firemen have besides fighting fires, said Capt. Everett Rushing.

This program is different than last year's, said Rushing.

"We do this on an annual basis. Last year, we took some of the fire trucks to the schools, so the kids could look at them. This year is different, though, because if we do the same old program every year, the kids will get bored with it," he said.

The workings and equipment of a fire truck are being demonstrated on a model this year, according to Rushing.

By the end of the week, the fire department will have visited 12 area schools.

The department will sponsor its fourth Fraternity and Sorority water fight at 1 p.m. Saturday in the parking lot of the First National Bank, 509 S. University Ave.

The water fight consists of two opposing teams armed with a fire hose shooting water at a barrel, and trying to push the barrel to the rivals side, said Rushing.

"Everyone has fun and everybody gets wet," he commented.

This year there are 16 teams signed up for the fight, ten fraternities and six sororities, according to Rushing. Last year's winners were the Delta Zeta sorority and the Delta Upsilon fraternity.

Trophies will be awarded to the first and second place teams from each group. Rushing said if the weather is good, fire fighting equipment will also be in the parking lot.

Veep seeks defined education goals

By Laura Coleman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Coming up with an accurate definition of the purpose of higher education, and SIU in particular, is not something that is easily accomplished, and it is up to the entire community to achieve that definition, says Frank Horton, vice president for academic affairs.

Horton spoke to about 35 members of the American Association of University Professors Tuesday, saying that while the trend is for vocational emphasis to be put on what is being taught, educators and others must also consider the liberal arts approach in preparing students for the "real world."

"My concern is that there's a tendency of outsiders to view the University as an extension of a corporate training ground," Horton said. "Our purpose has never been to increase the income of the student, it has been to educate him."

Horton said a need exists for coming up with a definition "that we can be comfortable with as to what this University is about." We have to make a positive statement of purposes," he said.

David Kenney, political science professor, responded to Horton's comments saying all segments of society should be responsible for determining the goals of SIU and other state universities.

"He said University officials would be making a grievous error" if they did not solicit information from members of the general public, the legislature and other elements of society.

Speaking of SIU in particular, Horton urged the faculty to "define and defend" the University's needs to "up the organization" and further needed programs within the organization.

Folklore heritage to be discussed

"A Session on Folklore" will be held Friday from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Calipre Stage in the Communications Building. The event is being sponsored by the Speech Department and the Oral Interpretation Club and is open to the public.

"Folklore is knowledge gained from the environment," according to Ann Utterback, a doctoral student in Oral Interpretation. It includes myths, legends, folktales, jokes and proverbs that originated in an oral form, Utterback explained.

"The purpose of the seminar is to give life to folklore rather than sending students to the library to do research," Utterback said.

Jean Speer, a doctoral student in interpretation and folklore at the University of Texas, will speak on Southern Appalachian folklore. Speer, who produced a reader's theatre production based on folklore, will also discuss the relationship between interpretation and folklore.

Wayne Lanter, a faculty member at Belleville Area College, will discuss coal mining folklore in Illinois. Lanter has done extensive field research into the formation and development of coal miners unions in Illinois, according to Utterback.

Women slate automobile clinic

The Women's Center, 408 W. Freeman, will hold an auto clinic 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the downstairs living room for women who want to learn basic repairs and general maintenance techniques of automobiles.

The clinic is scheduled "because many women are ignorant about cars and they have to deal with them and to show women how to save money on general repairs and maintenance," said Marcie Dachik, program coordinator of the Women's Center.

Carroll Bailey, a general service worker in the Sears, Roebuck and Co. Auto Center, will teach the clinic. She does mechanical work on cars, such as installing batteries, shock absorbers and tires, at the center.

Dachik said the clinic will be held for several successive weeks and that Bailey would probably explain the functions of different parts of the car during the first session. Plans will also be made to look at cars, Dachik said.

Dachik said the clinic is free and open to all interested women in the Carbondale area.

Scientology offers alternative to problems of modern living

By Mike Landers
Student Writer

Scientology is a modern religious philosophy offering participants an alternative to the immediate problems of daily living, according to Wayne Mize, an employee at Carbondale's Church of Scientology, 417 S. Illinois Ave.

Scientology's founder, L. Ron Hubbard, collected concepts and ideas from various religions, psychoanalysis, hypnosis and other areas, Mize said. By separating fact from theory and superstition, he developed his own theory that grew into what Scientology is today.

Mize said that the basic purpose of Scientology is to heighten the awareness of an individual through a systematic approach that eliminates the superstitious qualities normally associated with religious philosophies.

According to Scientology, the human mind is divided into two parts: the analytical and the reactive. The analytical mind is the conscious, logical thought process involved in making judgments and decisions. The reactive mind, on the other hand, is the source of fear and other unwanted emotions, and is thus not under the control of the individual.

Mize said that the object of Scientology is to "erase" the source of the reactive mind by making the analytical more aware and, consequently, more able to control itself when confronted with problems.

This is accomplished through a process called "auditing," Mize said. Auditing is a step-by-step process vaguely similar to psychoanalysis. It involves a conversation between the "pre-clear," who is attempting to "clear" his reactive mind, and the "auditor," who helps the pre-clear achieve his goal.

By asking questions, the auditor directs the pre-clear's attention to certain areas, according to a standardized program of progressive "grades." The order of these grades is essential to effective auditing, Mize said.

After finishing the graded program, a pre-clear may join an advanced organization to complete the erasure of his reactive mind, at which point he becomes a "clear." Scientists claim that clears are "the sanest and most able people on earth."

Mize said that there are 6,000 clears all over the world today.

The extremely systematic, mind-oriented auditing process makes Scientology distinctive among religions and philosophies today, Mize said. The focus is on the individual and his ability to function in society rather than on a relationship between man and a "higher power."

The concept of God is replaced by awareness of a logical order in daily life; scientists "know," they don't "believe." "Faith doesn't really have anything to do with Scientology," one member said.

Women's Club to sponsor tour

The SIU Women's Club is sponsoring a bus tour of the Perryville, Mo., area and the Ft. Kaskaskia area including the Pierre Menard home Oct. 16 from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The tour is open to club members and guests and will be open to the public if room is available, said Alice Morigi, club publicity director.

Cost of the tour is $5.25 which includes lunch in Perryville. Reservations, which are required, should be made with Mrs. Robert Mohlenbrock, 1 Birdsong Drive, Rt. 1 Carbondale, by Thursday. Checks for the tour should be made payable to the SIU Women's Club.

The tour will visit the Vincentian order of St. Mary's of the Barren Seminary collection or rare books, porcelains, paperweights and jade. The National Shrine of Our Lady of the Miraculous Medal, on the seminary grounds, will also be visited. The seminary is the oldest institution of higher education west of the Mississippi River, Morigi said.

The Pierre Menard home in the Ft. Kaskaskia area, is an example of 18th century French Mississippi Valley architecture.

The Masters of Business Administration Association (MBAA) will hold a get-acquainted meeting at 7 p.m. Wednesday in Das Fass, 517 S. Illinois Ave. Topics of the meeting include an introduction to the placement service and the MBAA's resume service. All MBA's are invited.

The Saluki Ad Agency will hold a fund-raising sale at 7:15 p.m. Wednesday in the Arena. Posters displaying all of the U.S. presidents, state flags and pre-American flags will be sold at a cost of $1. The sale will resume immediately after the Air Force Band Concert.

The deadline for student registration for the Nov. 1 Graduate Management Admission Test is Oct. 10.

Professor Carl Langenhop and assistant professor John Gregory, both of the Department of Mathematics, attended a symposium on "Calculus of Variations and Control Theory," Sept. 22 through 24 at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. The symposium was sponsored by the UW-M Mathematics Research Center.

Harry T. Moore research professor in English, has recently had his biography of D.H. Lawrence, "The Priest of Love," (New York: 1974) selected by two book clubs, the Biography Book Club and Reader's Subscription Service.

Philip Dark, professor of anthropology, gave a lecture at the St. Louis Art Museum on September 23 entitled "Masks and Men in Western New Britain." The lecture was given in connection with the exhibition "Ritual Arts of the South Seas: The Morton D. May Collection."

Thomas J. Hatton, associate professor of English, has written a book about the late Karl L. King, who was a composer, conductor and bandmaster for Barnum and Bailey's Circus band. Hatton, who came to SIU in 1965, is the coordinator of the creative writing program.

Rose Mary Carter, associate professor of home economics education will be in Washington, D.C., Oct. 20 to 23 to serve as a research consultant to the U.S. Office of Education.

Students needed to join project in Yugoslavia

An SIU professor needs three or four students to aid in studies beginning this winter to discover how newly-developed highway and road systems have altered the lives of rural Yugoslavian people.

Theodore Buila, an assistant professor in occupational education whose parents were born in Yugoslavia, will be researching changes in family working patterns, farm practices, community services and work roles. Most of the study will be done in small villages, geographically similar to Southern Illinois, located 30 minutes to an hour, by foot or horse, from bus stops.

Students joining the project will have to pay their own transportation and subsistence costs but can gain academic credit and use information gathered for thesis or dissertation projects.

"The project might be of particular interest to persons with Slavic backgrounds, but there is no specific language or educational requirement, other than an interest in serious research," said Buila.

The project is scheduled to last five years and will be funded by the International Research Exchange and the University of Ljubljana, where Buila was formerly a student and teacher. Buila specializes in rural sociology and agricultural extension work, and will teach a course in agricultural extension at Ljubljana while the research project is getting under way.

Frisbee tourney to test tossers

Frisbee enthusiasts will get a chance to show off their skills at a Frisbee tournament, scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Saturday at McAndrew Stadium.

The contest will be comprised of three separate events, followed by an overall skill competition. Trophies will be awarded to winners of each event.

The first event, distance throwing, will be divided into categories of male and female. The second event will be accuracy throwing, followed by a throw, run and catch competition.

The tournament is cosponsored by the Free School and the Carbondale Park District. Applicants must register for the event by Thursday. Registration forms are available at either the Student Government Office, third floor of the Student Center, or the Carbondale Park District office, 206 W. Elm.

In event of rain, the tournament will be held Sunday.

Beg your pardon

Tuesday's Daily Egyptian article on nose evidence incorrectly stated that nose evidence is not sufficient cause for University Housing staff to file disciplinary reports.

Carl Harris, coordinator of University judicial systems, said the Housing staff can, and should, file the disciplinary reports for the alleged usage of marijuana.

However, nose evidence alone is not sufficient grounds when a case is brought before the judicial board, he said.

Soliciting direction to be set

By Peggy Sagans
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Carol Coventry, assistant coordinator of the Student Activities Office, was appointed chairman Tuesday of the subcommittee established to write guidelines for issuing campus solicitation permits.

The Committee to Study Procedures for Solicitation Permits was set up by Bruce Swinburne, vice president for Student Affairs.

"Obviously there are discrepancies as to what the policy is and what's going on," said Swinburne. "The committee has been set up to set guidelines," he added.

Board of Trustees policy states that the permits are only for student organizations and university-related functions. They are not issued for those persons or groups involved with making a profit or commercial enterprise, Coventry said.

Reggie Still, "Grandma", of Grandma's Kitchen, has been informed that he may not renew his permit to run his stand this winter.

Barbara and John Belcher, who started a fruit stand in front of the Faner Building last spring, say they will not be able to renew their permit.

Permits will not be given out unless they are in accordance with the new guidelines, Coventry said.

"It appears to me that the procedures set up by the Board of Trustees have not been followed carefully," she said. Hence the committee is to develop guidelines for a consistent practice that will comply with board policy, Coventry said.

Currently, the policies concerning solicitation permits lie within the jurisdiction of three areas: University housing, the Student Center and Student Activities.

Clarence Dougherty, a member of the committee and director of the Student Center, feels it is time to review the policy on solicitation permits. "It hasn't been reviewed for a long time, but now it is time," he said.

There are matters to be considered such as health regulations and insurance that need to be examined to determine who has the responsibility and authority to issue permits, he said.

Another committee member, Harvey Welch, dean of student life, said, "Student Activities may not understand the areas they are responsible for," and that is a large part of the problem.

When asked if an exception has been made in the board policy,

Welch said, "I don't think there has been an exception made, but if so, I'm not aware of it."

James Sheppard, assistant director of the Student Center and a member of the subcommittee, sees the duty of the subcommittee in two respects.

First, the subcommittee is to identify the problem, work with it and finally make recommendations to the committee, Sheppard said.

Second, the subcommittee will attempt to draw up or recommend different policies involving the three areas, he said.

Thursday was the first time the subcommittee met.

The subcommittee plans to withhold further information from the press until the committee meets, but the legal implications of keeping closed meetings are being considered.

Counseling center helps campus community

By Mary L. Hoeren
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The SIU Counseling Center in Washington Square A offers professional counselors to help anyone within the campus community who has a small or large emotional problem, skill development concern or personal growth questions.

"No problem is too small if it is a concern of a client," says Chuck Landis, counseling center director. Campus community, he explained, is students, staff and faculty members and their spouses and dependent children over 16 years old.

The majority of counseling is done in an individual or group format, although he said the center does provide some family counseling and some couple counseling. Individuals within private or group counseling are usually working on a personal or emotional problem, a growth concern or a development skills program such as assertiveness training.

Psychological testing is not done at the center although some testing may be done within the context of an individual counseling session, he said.

Landis said most of the therapy is on a short term basis with the average being four weekly sessions. The maximum for individual counseling is eight sessions. He explained that most of the problems dealt with can be resolved within that time and also, because of the staff limits, it is difficult to set up long-term counseling for a large number of people. If more counseling is needed, he said, the client can join an on-going group.

Two on-going therapy groups have been established with a flexible format which allows a client to enter or leave the group "when they have done the work they came to do," Landis said.

Before entering counseling, an intake interview is set up. Landis said between 10 a.m. to noon and 3 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, counselors are on duty for interviews or telephone appointments. Landis said some problems are solved within the initial interview. Appointments with a counselor for further help can be made.

Also during the interview, a basic data sheet is filled out including an optional section describing the problem. The counselor, with the client, specifies the problem or concern and then "works out the most helpful and effective way of dealing with that," Landis said.

Landis also said the client may be referred to another agency if the Counseling Center cannot help.

Depression is the most common problem. Landis said this includes loneliness and a general dissatisfaction with social relationships. He also said it could be related to a boyfriend-girlfriend problem, academic stress, achievement anxiety and concern about future plans.

Student clients have problems including life adjustments, adaptation to a new city or new phase of life and the pressure of making important life decisions in a short period of time. Landis said the center sees more students with these and other types of problems. He explained that faculty and staff members have more financial resources to pay for private therapy.

Landis also said the center sees a few more women than men. The center is funded through student affairs which pays for the 16 staff members. Staff includes four full-time and three half-time Ph.D. counselors; two Master's level counselors; and one full-time and six half-time doctoral interns. All the counselors have areas of expertise in addition to their general counselor training, he said.

All the staff provide complete confidentiality for all clients. Landis said information is released only to a physician, other medical personnel, or another agency. He said it is released only on the written consent of the client.

The center sees about 500 clients a year in individual and group therapy.

The Counseling Center also sponsors counselor training programs, the Counselor-In-Residence program on East Campus and other outreach programs.

Landis said the resident counselors are members of the center staff. They will be evaluated throughout the year and a decision on the continuance of the program will be made. This program is "an attempt to provide counselors for the residence halls staff and to make counseling more readily available to students," he said.

The SIU Counselor Center training program is one of the six centers approved and certified by the American Psychological Association. Other programs include helping with the Crisis Intervention Go-Out Team which responds to calls for help in areas including suicide threats, drug overdoses, psychotic actions or family arguments, he said.

The center is not just for severe problems, he said, but for anything that is a concern of a client.

Radio-TV boasts high graduate employment

The Department of Radio and Television at SIU places almost double the number of graduates in their chosen field than similar programs at other universities, according to the department's chairman, Charles Lynch.

A mail survey of SIU's radio and TV graduates shows that 60 per cent are working in their chosen field. "Most schools find that only about 35 per cent of their students actually go into the broadcasting field," Lynch said.

"The department has earned a good reputation with employers who call us constantly for job applicants and with students who come here for training," Lynch said.

Out of 854 persons who graduated from the department from the time it was formed in 1951 through June of 1974, 543 are working in broadcasting-related fields. No employment information was available on 179 of the graduates and 132 were working in professions outside of broadcasting.

Lynch said the survey showed SIU graduates working in broadcasting-related operations ranging from the offices of Mary Tyler Moore's MTM Productions and Norman Lear's Tandem Productions to the CBS Radio Network and the Leo Burnett Co. Inc., an advertising agency.

There are 514 radio-television students enrolled at SIU this fall, 60 more than last year.

"We're growing by leaps and bounds," Lynch said.

All this circus lacks is a big top as these in a six-week course taught by the SIU children arrange the animals they created School of Art. (Photo by Timothy Le Gear)

Art class helps children develop their own circus

A circus consisting of red snakes, yellow camels, blue elephants and other creatures differs from most circuses in that it was created out of clay by art students ages 8 to 12.

The 30 works of art were created by 13 children during the third of a six-week course taught by the School of Art and sponsored by the Division of Continuing Education.

"We showed the kids a circus movie and supplied them with clay," said Karyn Kozak, graduate student in ceramics and glass who taught the session. "Forks, popsicle sticks and uninhibited imagination were their tools. The freedom of material that kids have is what we as adults should try to retain."

Karyn said that the goal of the three-hour Saturday morning class is to acquaint children with and introduce them to the medium of clay with hopes of exciting them about the class and the capacity of their imaginations.

The children's art classes began in the fall of 1974 and will continue each semester with new crafts being offered periodically.

Airgo's glider program sets sensations soaring

By Jim Cook
 Student Writer

The sensation of soaring in a glider is "like that wing is an extension of your arm," says Bob Mudd, director of the five-month-old glider program run by Airgo Inc. at the Southern Illinois Airport.

A glider is an aircraft with no engine. It depends instead on columns of rising warm air, called thermals, to keep it aloft. A tow plane is used to get the glider to an altitude from which the pilot can cruise in search of thermals, Mudd, 29, said.

The pilot depends on an instrument called a variometer to tell him when he hits a thermal. Any slight increase shown by the variometer is an indication of rising air.

After locating a thermal, Mudd explained, a glider pilot may circle around within the thermal to gain altitude. Hawks use the same technique to fly with little effort. Gliders have ridden these thermals as high as 46,267 feet, the world record.

A glider isn't necessarily restricted to riding thermals, he said. After gaining a sufficient altitude, the pilot is free to travel wherever he wants as long as there are more thermals available to recover altitude periodically. Some gliders have traveled over 500 miles, Mudd said.

Airgo trains glider pilots and gives rides in a two-seater kept at the airport, Mudd said. The cost involved in earning a private pilot glider license is about half of that for an airplane, he said.

The controls of a glider are simple, Mudd said. Besides the variometer, the instrument cluster consists of an air speed indicator and an altimeter, to tell the exact altitude. The motion of the glider is controlled by a single control stick and two rudder pedals.

"It's a quiet ride," said George Aimone, senior in aviation. "There's no sound but the wind going, 'shhh.'"

Soybean market topic of meeting

Illinois farmers will discuss the effects of government grain export policies and overseas competition on soybean marketing prospects at a meeting on Oct. 15 at SIU. The meeting is scheduled at a noon "brown bag" luncheon in the Thebes Room of the Student Center.

William Tiberand of Bloomington, executive secretary of the Land of Lincoln Soybean Association and manager of the Illinois Soybean Operating Board will be the guest speaker.

The SIU chapter of Alpha Zeta, honorary fraternity in agriculture, is sponsoring the program, which is open to the public.

A motorcycle accident may sideline Ruth Harris (right) for the remainder of the season. Women harriers finish fourth

The women's cross country team finished fourth Saturday in a seven-team meet held at Western Illinois University, Macomb, as the Salukis were hampered by the loss of two top competitors in two consecutive days.

Lost probably for the season Friday was Ruth Harris with a severe ankle lacerations suffered in a motorcycle accident.

Coach Claudia Blackman said Harris is in a Belleville Hospital and should be released Wednesday. The other Saluki loss occurred during the Western Illinois meet, when Jean Ohly passed out halfway through the race. Ohly was running even with SIU's Peggy Evans, a seventh-place finisher Saturday, when the incident occurred.

Blackman said it appeared that Ohly had a "touch of the flu." She has been running with the team this week and should be ready for Saturday's dual competition with the University of Kentucky, Blackman said.

The potential loss of Harris would be damaging to SIU, since Harris has been placing in the top three finishers about every meet this season.

Winner of the Western Illinois meet was Iowa State with 16 points. Iowa State's Carol Cook came in first on the three mile course with a 17:19 clocking.

Blackman said if Ohly would not have passed out, SIU would have been in serious contention for second place.

The Salukis will run against Kentucky Saturday, beginning at 9 a.m. on the Midland Hills Golf Course. The starting time was requested by Kentucky, Blackman said, because several members of it's team wanted to get back home for homecoming festivities.

Terriers win 6-0, claim third shutout

Another tough defensive effort by the Carbondale Community High School football team enabled the Terriers to claim their third straight shutout Friday against Marion, 6-0.

The Terriers only score came in the second quarter on fullback Bob Bleyer's one-yard plunge. Bleyer totaled up 25 yards of the 36-yard scoring drive, which was set up by a short Marion punt. A poor center snap prevented the extra point.

Two Terrier fumbles gave Marion a chance to score in the last five minutes, but the home team was held by the aggressive Terrier defense.

The win provides the Terriers with a 5-0 season mark and a 3-0 standing in the South Seven Conference. Carbondale is tied with Mt. Vernon.

Road Runner sets record

Peggy Evans, a member of the SIU women's cross country team, set a Lake Murphysboro course record for women in the Road Runners Club run Sunday.

Evans' time of 26:50 clipped more than two minutes off the old mark set by Sunday's second place finisher, Carolyn Gibbard. Marilyn Good came in third among the women.

Evan Smith, SIU journalism instructor, finished with the fastest time of the day for the four-mile course with 22:18. He was followed by Dave Johnson and Ron Knowlton.

Valley honors defensive back Woods

By Dave Wiczorek
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

Even during a losing season, some bright spots can break through the dismal atmosphere.

Just that happened Tuesday afternoon when news came from the conference office informing the football Salukis that freshman teammate cornerback Kevin Woods, was named Missouri Valley Defensive Player of the Week.

Woods is the first SIU football player to receive the conference honor.

"I'm kind of flattered and happy about getting the award," said the smiling Woods Tuesday outside the team locker room. "A couple of guys brought it to my attention. It was tacked on the bulletin board but I hadn't seen it."

SIU lost to Long Beach State Saturday 31-24, but it was not because Woods was asleep at his cornerback position. He earned the conference's accolades by making 13 tackles (six unassisted, seven assisted), recovering three fumbles and breaking up two passes.

Will success spoil this new 18-year-old star from St. Louis?

"It really doesn't affect me," Woods remarked modestly. "We haven't won any games yet. If we had won the game last Saturday, it would have been a lot better."

Woods beat out two other defensive players for the award, tackle R.V. Wilson from Tulsa and linebacker Dave Warren from Wichita State. Wilson was credited with five tackles and two assists in the Golden Hurricane's 35-7 victory over New Mexico State. Warren had nine tackles and a fumble recovery in the Shocker's 13-10 win over Louisville.

"I'm still making freshman mistakes," Woods admitted, "but the coaches have built a lot of confidence in me. They said they were not going to give me anything, that I would have to go out and earn it, so that's what I'm doing."

Woods was an all-stater just a year ago at Southwest High and a St. Louis Post-Dispatch Scholar-Athlete. His high school team won the St. Louis Public League title with a 10-0 record. He was a defensive back on a squad that gave up only 22 points all season.

"A lot of schools heard about me," Woods recalled. "Missouri and Minnesota saw me play but they thought I was too small."

He is listed at 5-foot-10 and 183 pounds on the roster, but looks smaller.

"When the recruiting season started,

I just said I would go to the school that made me the best offer. Southeast and Southwest Missouri made offers, but SIU's was the best."

Woods said, "I'm really glad I came here. The coaching is great and everyone is easy to relate to."

Woods has been impressing a lot of opponents and teammates with his play. He leads the squads in tackles with 37—better than a nine-tackle average per game.

"I just always try and be around the ball," Woods said, explaining his team-leading takedowns.

The secondary as a whole has not been without its problems this year, but Woods thinks it is on the verge of improving significantly.

"We've been playing together better as a unit the last couple of games so that will help," he said. "Myself, Paul Benne, Joe Hosman and Valdreu Rodgers have been starting the last three games and we've been working better."

"One reason why there could be pressure on us is that we have made only one interception all year," reasoned Woods. "In practice we have been working on going to the ball when it's thrown and we're doing a lot of interception drills."

Speculation - a sports writer's privilege

By Dave Wiczorek

Speculating—the sports writer's equal to clairvoyancy.

It has been a part of the scribe's stock of skills since the first sporting event was recorded in a newspaper.

Fans and writers get a kick out of speculating the outcome of a season, but coaches look with scorn at a writer who makes what I call an educated reflection on a team. Coaches are ruffled more when their team is on a losing streak.

They take exception to the writer who says the team plays with as much enthusiasm as a third string senior who has played on losing squads for three seasons.

As you might guess, I'm getting around to doing some speculating of my own. This is the proper time for some educated reflection, considering the SIU football team has just lost its fourth game in a row.

With seven games remaining on the 1975 schedule, it is beginning to look doubtful that the Salukis will finish 500 or better. The team can finish no worse than 6-1 the rest of the year to finish above .500.

A 6-5 (or better) record is still possible (but not probable), but it will call for some mighty quick improvements.

Saturday, SIU will be at Illinois State, followed by a trip to Northern Illinois and back to Carbondale for Homecoming against Wichita State. After all the Homecoming hoopla is over, the Salukis could conceivably be 4-3.

But a dark shadow looms over the rest of the schedule.

Coach Doug Weaver and his troop finish up with Drake at home, Arkansas State away, Bowling Green at home and Lamar away in Texas.

SIU is likely to be considered the underdogs against the last four teams. The Salukis have a losing record against Drake, Arkansas State, Bowling Green and are even at 2-2 with Lamar.

The team could be in a position to win all seven of their remaining games, but unless the defense tightens up and offense learns the meaning of pass completion, we can only expect more losing.

After four games, SIU has the worst defense in the Missouri Valley Conference. Opponents are running by Saluki defenders at an average of 299.5 yards per game. That is nothing to be proud of, especially when the opponents can also pick up 133 yards in passing.

Powerful running offenses are likely to be a problem all year because most of the time SIU is overmatched by a larger offensive line. This puts added pressure on the secondary, which has been responsible for much of the tackling work thus far.

On offense, the wishbone has not even come close to imitating the original University of Texas "bone," averaging just 200 yards rushing.

As for the passing game, I hope the Salukis don't fail as miserable when they make passes at girls.

Even for a wishbone offense, 15 completions for 43 attempts is not overwhelming. This is not a poor reflection on starting quarterback Leonard Hopkins. He has been on target plenty of times, and in clutch situations. But if a statistic for the number of dropped passes existed, SIU would rank on top.

SIU can still turn the season around, but if they don't hurry, the Salukis will be mathematically eliminated. The magic number is two. Two more losses and SIU will be labeled losers again.
