Saluki family weekend hits home

By Cynthia Sheets

Parents of SIUC students traveled far and wide from Algonquin and Des Plaines, located in Northern Illinois, to venture into Carbondale bars, tour the SIUC campus and stock up on supplies for their children, all in the spirit of Family Weekend.

Tres Hombres was packed Saturday night with parents and students taking time out to relax and catch up on times the students had spent away from home.

"We enjoy the experience of being around the kids," said Berta Henning, who was at Tres Hombres with her husband, Roger, and son Jason. "It makes you feel young again. The concerts we can't stay out as late as the kids do."

The Hennings traveled from Algonquin on Friday to visit their son, Jason, an SIUC senior, for Family Weekend. They went to the Saluki football tailgate and the Greek Sing. They also spent time grocery shopping at Wal-Mart.

Scott and Judy Vinger made the trip from Bowling Brook to visit their son, David, an SIUC sophomore, for the weekend. They said it was not the first time they had visited the campus.

"David's sister had gone to school here before he did," said Scott Vinger. "We've been here a few times before.

Dean Billups and Noreen Syringa came from Lima to visit their "beautiful, young daughter," Tonya Syringa. Billups said he is an SIUC senior.

"We arrived today (Saturday) around noon and went to the tailgate, football game and a bike trip off campus," Billups said. "The Family Weekend seemed to be a great way to catch up with the family before the start of fall classes."

Work or Time Conflicts? Need a midsemester class? Take an ILP class.

Individualized Learning Program Courses Carry SIUC Residential Credit Applicable to a Degree

ILP courses have no enrollment limits, and students can register throughout the semester. Students use a study guide developed by an SIU instructor to complete the course framework and study at a time and place of their choosing. To register in an ILP course, on-campus students need to bring a registration form signed by their advisor to our office at West Central 102. Off-campus students should contact the ILP office directly. We must receive payment of $65 per credit hour before registration can be processed. For more information, call the Individualized Learning Program office at 536-7751 or 1-800-818-2732 for further information.

GOP gays and lesbians seek party acceptance

Los Angeles Times

Each Colbert, named-fund Republican, is building his political persona a generation age for a trip to San Francisco to return with a Barry Goldwater campaign for president. When the 8-year-old got home, he mimicked his father's speech about losing County, helping a campaign poster stayed in a bookstore — a cooter Barry Brinda.

Last week, Colbert looked at a lonely chair in a different way when the took to podium in Palm Desert at the California Republican Party Convention. His task at what he called this "history-making" workshop. To help explain gay and lesbians Republicans to a party that is increasingly defining itself in opposition to them.

If anything, however, the workshop underscored the continuing isolation of gays and lesbians within the GOP — it attracted little more than a dozen like-minded activists.

Most of the 2,000 convention-goers, who picked up a huge notebook for Christian Coalition Director Ralph Reed's speech the following morning, were oblivious to the workshop.

Social-issue conservatives such as Barry Goldwater are on a roll within the party. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole — the front-runner in the race for the 1996 presidential nomination — has openly turned his back on gay and lesbian concerns. And Colbert and thousands of Republicans like him are left to confront challenge on the ground.

Politically, they must persuade an increasingly hostile party to accept them as members of a community that often ridicules them. About 15 million voters that traditionally has been liberal and largely Democratic.

The political consultant finds that 25 percent to 33 percent of gay voters — motivated by economics, by a sense of ideology and by policy habit — cast their ballots for GOP candidates, gay Republican activists acknowledge that some of their ranks are peeling away from the party and heading off into the furry world of "independents" and "dead-ends together.

For many, the struggle to recon- struct the party's conservative coalition and a Republican ideology has proven impossible. Marvin Liebman — for 30 years the director of America's conservative fabric — has found that the far way. Liebman, 72, announced his homosexuality in the pages of friend William F. Buckley Jr.'s National Review in 1992 and pub- lished "Coming Out Conservative" two years later. In 1995, he called it "unsplendid, unsaintly, and, by the radical right.

"I am a conservative, Republican and gay," Liebman wrote early this year in the Advocate, the leading magazine serving the gay community, "God knows, I'm gay too. It's not possible to be all four, or have I become a living oxymoron? The answer eluded me for some time but is now obvious: No, it is not possible to do all four in the same world.

Five years ago, when Liebman had his public coming out, the con- junction was not yet quite so difficult to become so polarized on the issue of gay rights.

Now, gays, it is increasingly difficult to reconcile homosexuality and Republican ideology. Today, "Gay rights are a non-issue," Liebman bitterly claims. "The best way to oppose any gay agenda is to be polarized on the issue of gay rights.

Around the edges of the party, social conservative grassroots gays with a harsh rhetoric that has otherwise largely disappeared from American politics, now be- long among the leaders of the conservative movement, which has made little effort to woo blacks and women, there is little re- gret that Republicans gay feel increasing- ly isolated in the party.

"Their votes are welcome," says Robert Magarian, policy analyst for the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force. "But to give the same state- tion to them is completely counter to the moral heritage of the nation."

Student concerns aid in future of computer labs

By David R. Kazak
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The first meeting Friday between student leaders and SIUC Information Technology officials, designed to get students more involved with implementing new IT computer systems, led to a discussion about how the new programs will be funded.

Although the IT officials and students said they thought the forum was beneficial, concerns were raised when the funding issue was brought up.

Budgeting and Resources Executive Director C. Michael Williams, along with Computer Lab Director Patty Congrove and the new Help Desk Director Mike Schwartz, spent nearly two hours speaking with student leaders, including USGI President Diane Schreiner and Student Trustee Jason Ervine.

The IT officials brought survey information gathered on students' feelings about computer labs and IT, but Williams said the reason for the forum was because the information was old.

"We need to know more about the students and how they feel. It's a more competitive world out there. I'm here to show information and share what we know. If I'm wrong let me know," Williams, Budgeting and Resources Executive Director.

"We need to know more about the students and how they feel," Williams said at the meeting. "It's a more competitive world out there. I'm here to show information and share what we know. If I'm wrong let me know."

Williams was criticized over the last month-and-a-half for his decision to close the Help Desk, which gave aid to faculty and student computer users with questions about SIUC's computing system. He said it did not have enough money to complete the staffing needs of a new Customer Service Center, which was to take the place of the old Help Desk. The center has since opened.

"We needed to find a smaller staff than the 17 Williams said he originally wanted," one student said among the group members after the meeting. "Most of the new ideas and systems IT wants to implement over the next several years.

Work described as collage of sound to be focus of lecture

Ricardo Cruz describes his writing as that of a disc jockey, if you imagine music on the right and left playing at the same time with the sounds bleeding together, then you have the feel of what he is trying to say with his writing.

Cruz, who publishes his work under the name Ricardo Cortez, will appear with Capo White to read a collection of their short works of fiction. Readings will also come from Cruz's second book, "Five Days of Bleeding," which came out in September.

"My writing tends to be a little more current," Cruz said. "I want to get the reader, or listener, to question his or her definition of reality."

One way Cruz blends surrealism with his literature is to combine different genres of music with literature, as well as trying with the idea of "a person's name describes his or her personality."

"The book is about misgiving, which is the hatred against women," he said. "I wanted the work to be socially conscious, but remain free-flowing in the process."

Cruz attended college at Illinois State University before attending the University of Illinois at Chicago.

Parade float prompts concerns of gang involvement in Marion

By Julie Rendleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Members of a Williamson County citizens' group say they sponsored a gang-awareness meeting last week after a gang made its way into a local high school's homecoming parade.

The Southern Illinois Coalition of the People sponsored the open meeting Thursday, Williamson County Sheriff Dennis Presley and Hope in Peace Chief Tom Conditt attended the meeting.

"This meeting came about because of the Marion High School homecoming parade," Mike Maynard, a coalition member, said. "There was a gang symbol on the side of one of the floats, and we decided to warn the community."

Presley said the sheriff's department has confirmed that the gang on the side of the float at the Marion High School homecoming parade was gang-related.

"The signs on the float said "Growth is Development", which is the gang's public face. We have also confirmed that the people on the float were members of the gang, Gangster Disciples, Presley said.

"The gang's names are the Gangster Disciples, Vice Lords and the Latin Kings. These gangs recruit men and women in their teenage years to mid-20s."

Dennis Presley
Williamson County Sheriff

Presley said that the sheriff's department suspects that there are also several other gang members now.

"The gang's names are the Gangster Disciples, Vice Lords and the Latin Kings. These gangs recruit men and women in their teenage years to mid-20s."

Presley said. "The gang members moved from Chicago to Sparta, then to Mt. Vernon. And they have moved to Marion."

Presley said before the gang moved to Marion about two years ago, gang problem was a concern in Williamson County. "Gangs and drug-related issues are on the rise."

Maynard said that there definitely are gangs in Marion and drug problem in Williamson County. He said the sheriff's department is planning to set up programs to help the community recognize the drug problems they are causing.

Presley said the Williamson County Sheriff's Department is planning to attend several classes to establish the officers more aware of the department's outreach in rural communities do not have a lot of experience in gang identification.

"I am planning on sending four deputies to gang specialty class in mid-October," Presley said. "We have also been approached and I am planning on going to another one in mid-November."

"The question is, is the sheriff's department is planning on having a few gang-awareness classes?"

"We are inviting school officials, police departments, and the state Police to attend these classes," Presley said.

Let's make Family Weekend bi-annual

IT SOUNDS LIKE A FANTASY COMPARED to gaiety and the last days of college partying, but Family Weekend rolls around and they manage to force a pothouse steak (sorry veggie people) and a tall glass of milk down the hatch. At dinner it becomes apparent to them that all the energy (cash) you had when the semester started was depleted after the first week of studying (food off). The question, the evil question is issued to you after an extended silence, “How are you doing in school Billy/Susan? Then the final sin and get your means off your tongue, much to your chagrin. “Finn,” you answer and swallow only a little longer than usual while keeping eye contact for the tense one or two minutes to make it believable. The DE supports this sin if it will keep your enrollment status active.

IN A DREAM LAST NIGHT THERE APPEARED three full Wal-Mart carts of food; all 38 lanes were open and each student stood with two parents and 1.5 siblings at their side. This dream always comes in a deep sleep on Family Weekend eve. If only this college-style Christmas would be a bi-annual event, there would be so much more to smile about as the disconnection notices pile up and students can't call to let anybody know about it because that notice came last week. The relief efforts that dominate Family Weekend come in all dollar amounts, shapes and sizes.

Maybe it is a bottled "poison" that feels as if it relieves stress but only leaves you sorry you drank it all in one sitting. Mom, who usually only has one shot of the "poison" in one sitting has quickly doubled her order. It gets you to go back to the hotel. But all that detail kind of gets swept under the rug if another relative joined your parents this weekend. If that was the case, then you became the makeshift tour-guide on campus or instructor in the library explaining the reason why Faner remains unfinished and isn't located in any library based on historical research. This weekend devotes to the family, in any shape or form, visiting, harmony with nature and worship. Happy Samhain!

Satanism has no ties to meaning of Halloween

This is in response to the letter on Oct. 4 on Halloween. The real problem I had, other than some distorted facts, was the implication Satan is the evil of the day. The word Satan comes from the Hebrew word for Satan, or to the Pagans who celebrate the holidays of Sambain. This is the day where the world between the world of the living and the world of the dead is the thinnest. It is also the start of the new Pagan year.

Pagan beliefs do not believe in a social worker or operating with other cults. The Pagan does not relate to a social worker or anything else. I tell you that there would be many fewer people if you stirme and think about others and their world view. I feel that despite all of these points, I have not been able to make them understood. Thank you for the chance to have my voice heard.

Do not judge Christianity based solely on the actions of individuals

I haven't been following the issue closely, but noticing that Mr. Stromberg is in the field of social work, there seems to be a few facts of my own. There are many social workers, doctors, nurses, psychiatrists, and others in the "helping professions" who routinely represent themselves as experts in their field. They ignore the basic human rights of their clients. Audits and video if counseling sessions are played for other social workers or people concerned with mental health, otherwise illegal drugs for themselves and their friends. Drug and alcohol rehab counselors come into work drunk and high on acid. Social workers enter into relationships with their clients, become romantically involved with them, and take advantage of their trust and their money. Patients in psychiatric wards are physically and emotionally abused daily by the staff. Psychiatrists will prescribe electric shock treatment to "cure" psychiatric patients. They do all these things while proclaiming what a wonderful disease they provide to all of humanity. These facts aren't located in any library based on historical accounts of hundreds or thousands of years old. These are facts I have witnessed with my own eyes while working in the "helping professions" for five years. I've looked into the historical accounts of the representative treatment and torture of patients or charity cases in "normal" hospitals but I'm almost out of space.

Do I believe that, as a social worker, you are evil and capable of these activities? No. Do I believe that the helping professions are entirely worthless, evil and corrupt? No, I do not. Do I believe that these are the reasons behind the homelessness issue? - not really. In a survey of people that are helping professions are still brave and noble individuals who genuinely care about others and make the world a better place? Absolutely I do not let the actions of individuals, or past events affect my judgment of an entire class of people. Neither should you condemn Christians and Christianity in that way.

Those responsible for atrocities do not follow Christ

Yes, there are those who commit atrocities and claim the name of Jesus, but they are not a Christian any more than Satanists are. I believe that all who truly follow Christ do not believe in them. There is no one who can claim it. They are separate beliefs. You are the ones who are interested to know me. I'd be happy to tell you a story or two. Happy Sambain!

Arafat clarifies Jihad definition

By Stephen S. Rosenfeld

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Yasser Arafat, a “question about language. We bear many times using words like jihad and martyr, and some people hear those words and then imagine the wrong kind of terrorism as if there is some way in some way.

This is the first question. It is the only one about Palestinian intent and confidence on which all the other questions rest. And it is the one which, if not answered accurately, drains the heart out of the Israeli Life, Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, and the hard-line Left opposition aicket back to power.

Arafat answered by distinguishing his project, Muhammad’s “just- a jihad” from that of his “jihad” of “the reconstitution of mankind.” Jihad, I use these words, I’m not really addressing you. I’m addressing those who have been misled and deceived by those religious tendencies. And they are using these terms in the context of terrorism... And by using this terminology, if not addressed and corrected, the one in this dispute as in many others, the Palestinian Interlocutors: .

Arafat is not, for example, the one who advanced the idea that the other side’s requirement is more urgent than his own. His security forces have worked with the other side’s requirements to prevent terrorism. But at best he has shown only a technical appreciation of Israel’s appreciation of personal security, his purpose being to achieve political goals that are not his. He has failed to summon and to sustain an unequivocal moral outrage against terrorism.

That Arafat is still on the defensive on terrorism represents a considerable problem. The weight of the diplomatic effort is devoted to getting your年产’s powers to understand that this must be tied to that. That often means getting your political requirements recognized as more urgent than the other side’s requirements. This is what getting your political requirements recognized as more urgent than the other side’s requirements. This is what the Palestine affirmative action.

Arafat and Rabin are, finally, where between unproven and dubious. And I speak as an advocate for the United States and the United Nations, the narrow strip of contested Mediterranean land. Advocates have not been proven not to open themselves to charges of being soft on terrorism. The reason is to present a peace process that others seek to blunt precisely by the claim that the peace process is not possible. There may be a bit of truth to this claim. Nevertheless, the issue about language is an important one. There is likely much more truth in the reportage that there has been a situation that brings violence to a state of occupation, discomfiture, and the one as well as Palestinian interests. But it is there in all the others in the way of violence.

In this sense, Pakistanis are a people who have paid more dearly than Israelis for each Israeli death. The Israeli response has been to keep Israel’s readiness to trade off Israel’s political presence to legitimate Palestinian insurrections. This singleness is evident in the set of issues—whether or not Israel insists on maintaining in the West Bank and in its dangerous, densely populated conurbation, and new construction in occupied Arab Jerusalem. These Israeli policies are what the terrorist groups and Arafat’s other faces count on to do him and his program.

Palestinian terrorism is also what the Jewish settler terrorists and the Israeli political opposition, according, house on to bring down the Labor government of Yitzhak Rabin. Likud has a heavy political investment in the flawed argument to keep Rabin out of it, a campaign to keep him for an hour is to recognize he is not talking. And by using this terminology, I think that not clear? Diplomacy is devoted to getting your political requirements recognized as more urgent than the other side’s requirements. This is what the Palestine affirmative action.

The United States delay paying U.N. bill

The Washington Post

At the United Nations, the argument the United States is having with the United Nations has passed beyond the point where it often is described as an argument to make up their mind. Delay in paying its bills is promptng visible irritation against the United States by United States allies. Washington’s $1.4 billion loan and the fee cover it provides for U.N. headquarters in New York is an important Gerald Ford statement that the United States unilaterally legislated itself a lower budget share, from 31.6% to 28.1%. This is not really the issue any more. The United States has a long history of taking out its foreign-policy finan ce from the United Nations. Two special factors aggravate this matter: a terrible budget squeeze in Washington, and the Republican Congress is generally attacking spending in general. This is where the Palestinian problem comes into play. The United States has a long history of taking out its foreign-policy funding from the United Nations. Mental aftershocks deadly to Kobe quake victims

The Los Angeles Times
KOBE, Japan - Late last Monday afternoon Masako Reppo drove the walls when she would sit. The quiet wife who liked to read Tolstoy undressed alone and left no note. She had started the day like all others since the great earthquake. Her two daughters were sleeping, and her 8-year-old was asleep in her way of life. She said nothing. Then, when her husband went out, she turned on the tap in the plastic bath, slid off her left wrist and died in a pool of her own blood.

"We never talked about the earthquake," her husband, Kiyoshi, recalled Saturday. "There was no talk of it as a possibility." Ama Fujiwara said his wife of 40 years came to the room last week, saying she would be the last in a string of suicides among survivors of last month's devastating earthquake in Kobe. Police reports count her as the 22nd suicide, but nurses and psychiatrists say the real number is far higher and surpasses the average suicide rate.

Two days before her death, Adams was searching for a bite to eat Sunday with their daughter, Stacey Adams, an SIUC student; before going back to Des Plaines. Hamann and Adams toured the had only heard about before. Now SIUC Beef Center, where Stacy works; shopped at Wal-Mart "Fred's Dance Barn. We didn't stay at Fred's too."

The weather definitely made the weekend for us," Hamann said. "We were going to ride the mechanical bull, but there were too many people, Heather added, and they didn't have to go there."..."..."...

not want the referendum to be examined, but rather feel there are other uses for the money. The referendum called for a 50-cent fee increase per student to cover the $18,000 cost of membership. Students have paid a 50-cent fee since the Illinois Student Association, which is now defunct. Bottom said the ISA funds have been transferred to the Student Organization Activity Fee, which provides money for Registered Student Organizations. Instead of raising a student fee, Bottom said USG decided to use the funds previously designated for the ISA, which would limit funds for RSOs.

"If it (joining USSA) is passed and there is no subsequent fee increase, RSOs would have $16,000 or $17,000 less each year," he said.

Bottom said students should have been given more details about how much membership would cost and how it would be funded before the spring referendum took place. Pfeiffer said the task force members have studied the situation thoroughly, and he is confident their recommendation will be in the best interest of SIUC students.

After the recommendation tonight, senators can expect legislation regarding USSA on the agenda for Wednesday's senate meeting, he said.

All recommendations made by the task force will be subject to senate approval at upcoming USG meetings.

The haunted house is not only supporting a good cause, but providing something fun for the residents to do.

“We’re hoping to provide a service to the residents, and make it more fun to live on campus,” Coleman said. “This offers a little relaxation before midterms and break, and we get to raise some money for a worthy cause.”

Chris Pinnick, RHA treasurer, said the money made from the haunted house will aid the cancer unit with cancer research and treatment.

“The money we raise will help provide for cancer research and provide treatment for families that can’t afford it,” Pinnick said. “From what I understand, we’re expected to split the money 50-50 between these two things.”

Students can also get community service credit for working at the haunted house, Coleman said.

“We need to get the word out,” he said. “All a student has to do is go to one of the RHA officers, the Housing program or just show up at the Grinnell basement every night (of the event) from 7 to 10. We are still looking for people to help with the set-up and the event nights.”

“One of the things that made the idea that a narrator should be very open-ended,” Cruz said. “It challenges a reader to go back and look for meaning in the story so that it doesn’t dominate it.”

Cruz describes his writing as free-associating, liberal and bold. He said he wants to play with language so there is always a different meaning and something new reads the same way twice.

“The word I use to categorize my writing is ‘language,’” he said. “It’s a cross between slang and language, which goes back to the untappable parts where I blend two different sounds into one.”

Along with passages from “Five Days of Bleeding,” Cruz will also read passages from his third book, which he is currently working on, a collection of short stories.

“This is a chance for students to come and hear a good sample of cultural works,” Cruz said. The lecture is tonight at 7:30 in the Student Center Ballroom C.
Solar power enjoys surge in popularity in California

Los Angeles Times

ARCATA, Calif.—Linda Parkinson and her family are unplugged, and there's the way they like it.

Surrounded by redwood trees and their boundless organic garden, they live in a sendsy, two-story wood house in the coastal hills of Humboldt County that have sost a need for a power company. They make all their electricity themselves.

With a solar-gallon array that tracks the sun and a bank of batteries to store energy, Parkinson, her husband, Michael Kirschner, and their two boys, 4, and 8, can produce enough energy to power a 1990s way of life — including a personal computer, a car, and a washing machine.

"We started out to be self-sufficient," said Parkinson, a 39-year-old wildlife artist who built much of the family's house herself. "Now it's part of our ideology. We don't even want to be plugged into the grid.

Alternative power — hailed in the 1970s as the United States' energy savior and scorned in the 1980s as too expensive to install — has quietly made a comeback soon had a thriving business in the mini- grid.

Sexually aggressive men have potential to become harassers later in life—study

LOS ANGELES—A new study suggests that men who are sexually aggressive may give clues on their eventual behavior earlier in life.

Psychologist Neil Malamuth, a UCLA professor of psychology, and his students have found that men who dominate and control women, especially when they are young, may have a tendency to commit sexual harassment and sexual assault later in life.

The study, co-authored by Malamuth, tracked the behavioral tendencies of 172 men for 10 years. Malamuth found that men who operate on aggressive characteristics and who are sexually aggressive toward women.

"We should not and we cannot live from that reality any longer," Malamuth said.

"When announcing the new policy, which begins immediately, Carothers cited a Harvard School of Public Health study that found 87 percent of college students suffered from "secondary binge effects" ranging from insults to actual assault, but that were caused by the excessive drinking of others.

"More of our students are demanding that they not be impeded upon by others who judge behavior that was inflicted by substance abuse," he said.

"Students who break the policy will be punished with a $50 fine the first time and $100 fine the second. A third infraction will result in a two-semester suspension.

Despite the ban at school activities, URI students will still be able to such their beer under their beds, though, as the new policy still allows students over 21 to drink in their dorm rooms.

But if university officials have their way, the Rhode Island campus may never be the same.

The URI change in policy partly stems from a summer court decision that held the university responsible for the 1990 rape of a URI freshman at a fraternity party where alcohol was being served. The student was awarded $750,000 by the jury, although the school plans to appeal the judgment.

อยากจะข้าวสาร&Wali交叉-country teams give two-performance

By Chad Anderson Daily Egyptian Reporter

Both Saluki cross-country teams prove that the name was not what was called the Martin Foods/Saluki Invitational. SUIC invited teams from all over the Midwest to come and do something. It was a high-mileage meet, but it was held in an open environment.

The races went well, lasting almost the entire 11 weeks, and the men ran to a second place finish out of 12 teams.

Junior Kim Koerner gave her parents the best Parent’s Weekend gift she could imagine. She won her first collegiate meet, breaking the competition away. Koerner finished 21 seconds ahead of the closest competitor, and ran 45 seconds faster than her personal record.

Koerner’s parents were on hand to witness the victory, and said it was the best way to see her run strongly. “We make it to only about half the meet, but we always make it when she does. We love her.” Mike Koerner said. “I saw her rise to the top with her run on Parent’s Weekend. She’s been edited a few times, but she’s good to see her healthy.”

Koerner, who was on the verge of tears after jumping into her father’s arms, said her parents are always there for her. “They’re always at home supporting me and I always tell them what I think. I can’t do this without her,” she said. “I finally showed them. I really wanted to win today because I’ve never won a conference meet.”

Koerner’s coach Dan DeNoon said his team has been training well lately, and the recent run in the training program may have helped.

“Although DeNoon eliminated the team’s morning runs this week and instead, he emphasized two-a-day practices. He thought we performed better this week (after cutting the miles) and we’re back on the right track,” DeNoon said.

“We’re still on the verge of a few weeks, then we’ll double up again, and then we’ll be ready for the conference meet.”

Junior Stacie Mennes took the long road to the Salukis, but they led the men to a first place finish, but were out at the finish line from a freshman from Morehead College.

Julietsu Wanjiru, a 19-year-old freshman from Kenya, ran almost a minute faster than Mameros, with a time of 27:26, and impressed the entire crowd.

“He was just awesome,” SUIC men’s coach Bill Conwell said. “He beat the second-place finisher in 21:40 set in ‘84 by two-time All-American Chris Baysan.”

Conwell was impressed by his team’s performance, and said the performance of the Eagles on Saturday could move the team up in the Missouri Valley Conference rankings.

“I’m happy, considering we didn’t even off the training,” he said. “I think they ran very relaxed, and that’s pretty good because we had a tight pack. That should move us up in the MVC ratings.”

The next goal for Conwell was to make the team set a goal and run a time within the top 17 of each other.

Although Conwell was impressed with his team’s performance, there are a few things the team will work on the next week.

“Mark Russell didn’t get out like we wanted him to and Joe Parks was a little bit dominated because he couldn’t run with his brother (Jeryn),” he said. “It’s just in his (Jeryn) head, and we can get over that.”

SIUC cross country team

SUIC cross-country team SIUC's Kim Koerner received a duffle bag from coach Dan DeNoon Saturday morning after the Martin Foods/Saluki Invitational. Koerner finished first in the women’s collegiate ranks.

SIUC outside hitter Mario Moreland killed any chance Bradley University had of beating SUIC’s volleyball team Saturday night in David Hall, Bradley University, and it was literally. Thanks in part to Moreland’s offside attack, SUIC beat the Lady Braves, 15-12, 15-10, 15-10 to improve to 7-3 in the Missouri Valley Conference. In her first season, the freshmen from Lancaster, Tex., led the Lady Braves with 14 kills.

Although somewhat surprised, Moreland said she was happy to get the start that her home conference Saturday will provide with more opportunities to start in the future. “I’d had a lot of chances, but it’s a good job tonight,” Moreland said. “I think it’s more chances to start.”

Despite Bradley’s 3-5 record in league action, the spikers were somewhat surprised at their aggressiveness on the court. Despite losing the match, Bradley’s Jenny Pavlas added 26 kills of her own.

“We should have won three in three sets,” Moreland said. “We had a lot of opportunities to put them away, but we missed a lot of serves.”

The spikers committed seven service errors which helped poor SIUC’s victory. The win allowed SUIC to take over sole possession of third place in the MVC.

“We could not serve. We did not give ourselves any opportunities,” Locke said. “I don’t want to turn it into a positive for SIUC because it’s a negative on our side.”

Locke said she cannot do anything to improve her team’s serving. She said it is something each individual has to work on.

“Although the league race has reached the midway point, Locke said it is still too early to tell where SUIC stands in the Valley meet.”

“Tired of being where we are at,” Locke said. “I’d rather be here versus the bottom.”

“Tired of getting to right now how the rest of the season will go. Every team is getting to get better as we go along so we can’t expect the standings to stay the same.”

SUIC takes on Arkansas State Tuesday before hosting Creighton and Wichita State next weekend.
The other huge "defensive play to any challenge that we faced," he said. "It was unbelievable, it was a big factor." "As close as this game was, I think the crowd was a big factor. "Making noise on third-and-short — that just gets us fired up. They (the crowd) may not realize it, but it does." Watson added in addition to the 12,600 that packed McAndrew Stadium Sunday, part of the credit for the defense's improvement against the Redbirds was pending defensive coordinator Laywood Ferguson in the pressbox to get a bird's eye view of the field. "It just felt like maybe he could be of better use up there, in terms of seeing what he needed to see," he said. "It's hard to see on the sidelines. It's hard to see what's going on — and you get to 'play Nintendo' up there. "He got to 'play Nintendo' today. Apparently, Ferguson is pushing the right buttons with his defensive coordination, because they believe they can defeat anyone. "I think this is the beginning of a new era," Baker said. "We're looking really good, especially the defense." "The defense's road. We should be nationally-ranked soon."

Running game, stingy defense help SIUC shoot down Redbirds, 14-11

SIUC wins two straight at home

The SIUC football team earned its first Gateway Conference win since 1993 as the Salukis shut down the Illinois State Redbirds, 14-11, Saturday, at McAndrew Stadium.

The Dawgs controlled the ball on the ground and came up with big plays on defense to put two consecutive home victories together for the first time in coach Shawn Watson’s two-year tenure.

The Salukis defeat of ISU in front of 12,600 fans during Parent’s Weekend improves SIUC’s record to 3-3 on the season and 1-1 in the Gateway.

The Redbirds, picked in the preseason to finish second in the conference, dropped to 1-1 in league play and 2-4 overall.

Watson said after a last week’s

Saluki wide receiver Johnny Thomas (85) looks for running room on his way to the end zone Saturday against Illinois State. Thomas’ touchdown accounted for SIUC’s only offensive points, as the Dawgs went on to defeat the Redbirds 14-11 at McAndrew Stadium.

Bend but don’t break.

The Saluki defensive unit defined the statement Saturday, giving up 301 total yards — but almost all of them were between the 20’s.

The Dawgs allowed Illinois State entry into the end zone only once (followed by a two-point conversion) and an early 42-yard field goal in the second quarter.

“Everything,” said Hendricks, who also intercepted a pass Saturday, agreed with Watson and said the interception was a key to the Dawgs’ win.

 Watson said the game was turned around early as well, and the team got the job done.

“Defense played great,” he said. “We did a good job of limiting the offense. We didn’t let them score many points.”

Aside from the performance against Indiana State Sept. 10, when the Salukis last 52-3 and gave up 417 total yards and six touchdowns, the Saluki defense has been rock solid.

Hendricks said the Indiana State contest was behind them when the team hit the field, and it was just time to play ball.

“We gave up 52 points last week, and that’s a lot down for the defense, but games go that way sometimes,” he said. “This week, we came out here with a mission, we came out here with energy and we got the job done.”
