SIU-C complies with anti-drug plan

University required to punish students convicted for drug use

By James J. Black
Staff Writer

SIU-C appears to be in compliance with a part of President George Bush's newly released anti-drug plan that would cut federal aid to universities that do not satisfactorily punish students who abuse drugs.

Harvey Welch, vice president for student affairs, who has read a general account of the plan, said: "I would think we would have no difficulties being in compliance if something like that were passed."

Bush's plan calls for his administration to "propose amendments to the Higher Education Act to require colleges and universities to adopt drug-free campus plans and policies including user sanctions as a condition of receiving any federal funding and participating in federally funded student aid programs."

The proposal carries no legal weight.

According to the University's new drug abuse program designed to comply with the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988, the Office of Financial Aid and Student Assistance is to require students who receive federal aid, such as Pell Grants, to certify that they do not use illegal drugs. The office also must provide each student work with a copy of the Drug-Free Workplace guidelines and report any criminal drug statute conviction of a student worker to the U.S. Department of Education.

Students who are convicted of a drug offense then may be referred to the Wellness Center to participate in a drug awareness program. Convicted students also may be reported to Student Judicial Affairs for possible sanctions.

Welch said the sole area in which SIU-C might not be in compliance with the Bush plan is in the types of sanctions issued to students.

William Bennett, the national drug czar and main formulator of Bush's program, reportedly plans to require universities to formulate specific punishments for student drug abusers, but the nature of these punishments is unclear.

"I wonder what he describes as punishment?" Welch said.

If the sanctions specified in the Student Conduct Code were deemed inadequate according to Bennett's plan, Welch said, SIU-C

Group supporters: Legalize marijuana

By Darren Richardson
Staff Writer

A crowd of about 120 people, most of them SIU-C students, gathered Wednesday night in front of Shryock Auditorium to participate in a meeting organized to gauge local interest in the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws.

Kirsten Bonde, sophomore in anthropology, and several other supporters of NORML ported flyers across the SIU-C campus and on the Strip early Wednesday morning to announce the meeting, Bonde said.

"We really just organized this over the weekend," Bonde said. "We thought it was a good time to do it, the day after Bush's drug speech. Hopefully that should encourage people to become more actively political."

Joe Goldsberry, sophomore in liberal arts, helped Bonde with the organization of Wednesday's meeting.

"People need to be writing letters to their congressmen and to the president," Goldsberry said. He expressed concern that the President may be lumping all drugs into a single category rather than making distinctions between the effects of different drugs.

Bonde agreed that "there's a lot of misconception about marijuana and Bush is furthering it by just

Chamber offers a new Halloween

The Carbondale Chamber of Commerce has plans for a new, improved and dry Halloween celebration, James S. Prowell, executive director of the Chamber of Commerce, said.

Prowell said the chamber is contracting a St. Louis based company, Tinsley Amusements, to provide Carbondale with a family-oriented carnival to serve as an alternative to the former Halloween Fair Days.

"No public consumption of alcohol will be allowed at the carnival and we will use whatever means to enforce that," Jeff Doherty, deputy city manager, said.

A professional survey sponsored by the University and conducted by professors as well as a public hearing both showed that the legal public consumption of alcohol on Halloween was undesirable to a large majority of the Carbondale residents, faculty and students, Prowell said.

"The entire Carbondale community is fed up," Prowell said. "Whenever we have this (Halloween celebration), we open up our high school kids to a party atmosphere and underage drinking."

The City Council passed an ordinance this week repealing the Halloween Fair Days Regulations. The new ordinance mandates that there will be no street closings, no public consumption of alcohol, no food or beer booths, no amplified music and no on-street parking during the Halloween weekend.

Prowell said he wanted the car-

SIU-C could try landing honor society chapter

By James J. Black
Staff Writer

SIU-C likely will attempt for the sixth time to land a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, the nation's most prestigious national honor society, but when this attempt will occur is up in the air.

"Being awarded the status of a chapter has been a dream of the University for as long as anyone can remember," Mark Johnson, president of the Phi Beta Kappa Association, said. The association is made up of local Phi Beta Kappas.

The University, which last applied for a chapter in 1981-82, has been rejected on all five previous attempts. SIU-C's first attempt was in 1941.

The Phi Beta Kappa national assembly convenes once every three years to consider applications, a spokesperson for the organization said. The application process takes a full three years and applications are accepted at the time of the national convention for consideration three years later.

New associate vice president selected

Harry G. Miller, dean of the College of Technical Careers, has been selected as the University's associate vice president for academic affairs and research (budget).

"My job is basically to spend the money appropriated for our use appropriately, in a manner prescribed by the (University) president and vice president," he said.

Miller will be in charge of the academic affairs and research budget in his new position. He will advise faculty, department heads and deans on matters of appointments, tenure and promotion. He also will be involved in faculty recruitment and development and will act as liaison for faculty grievances.

"Harry is a capable administrator who is respected and well-liked by faculty, staff and students," Benjamin A. Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and research, said in an announcement of Miller's appointment. "He brings capability, enthusiasm, and a rare work ethic to an existing staff that is committed to promoting excellence and minimizing bureaucratic delay."

Miller's appointment fills the vacancy created when Ernest L. Lewis returned to a full-time teaching position in the psychology department.

Miller's appointment was effective Sept. 1 and is subject to approval of the SIU Board of Trustees and Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit. Paul Harre, associate professor in the College of Technical Careers, will replace Miller, serving as interim dean through June 30.

Miller was chosen through an in-house search in which University personnel applied for the position. The candidates went through a screening process, which consisted of appearing before a selection committee and an interview.

"There was a position open, so I applied for it. It was one of the finalists and for there, the decision was made," he said.

Miller said his first goal was "to get moved into my office," but beyond that, he has a definite agenda for the next six months.

Colombians offer $250,000 reward as bombings continue

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) - A wave of bombings continued Thursday, and U.S. and Colombian officials braced for possible bloody reprisals from warring cocaine gangs angered by the extradition to the United States of the man called the "chief of finances" of the ruthless Medellin cartel. The government also launched a television campaign and offered a $250,000 reward for information leading to the capture of the two top drug lords of the Medellin cartel. President Virgilio Barco planned to replace elected mayors in some cities with military officers in an effort to restore order. Barco also declared a state-of-seige.

Rockets fired in usually quiet Jordan Valley

JERUSALEM (UPI) - Several rockets were fired early Thursday into eastern Israel from Jordan in the latest incident along the normally quiet border, prompting Prime Minister Vitzhak Shamir to warn Jordan it must prevent such guerrilla activity. No one claimed responsibility for the rocket assault, the first time since June 3, 1969, the army has confirmed rockets were launched from Jordanian territory. Military sources said the Jordan Valley had not been hit by rocket attacks since the 1970's.

Soviet Union reassesses African military aid

LONDON (UPI) - The Soviet Union is re-assessing a 30-year-old policy of military aid to Africa that, with little other assistance, has resulted in a loss of influence on the continent, Jane's Soviet Intelligence Review said Thursday. A detailed analysis published by the London publication that specializes in East-West affairs said Soviet influence in Africa is waning because, instead of providing development aid as the West does, the Kremlin has done little more than provide weapons for wars of independence since 1960.

Navy: USS Iowa explosion set off by Hartwig

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Navy concluded Thursday the April gun turret explosion aboard the battleship USS Iowa that killed 47 sailors was "most likely" set off by gunner's mate Clayton Hartwig, but gave no motive for the bizarre tragedy. "We may never know why he did this," one Navy official said. The Navy report of the investigation into the April 19 explosion based its conclusion on circumstantial evidence, noting it could not make a "precise causal determination" because everyone directly involved in the tragedy had been killed.

Largest drug bust in Saline County history nets 'kingpin'

HARRISBURG (UPI) - Drug charges have been filed against four people, including a Chicago man identified as a "kingpin" in what officials said was the biggest drug bust in the history of Saline County. Saline County State's Attorney Rod Wolf said county authorities seized about eight ounces of cocaine, nine pounds of marijuana, five weapons and an empty pipe bomb in a series of arrests made Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Wolf said the cocaine seized had a street value of between $30,000 and $45,000. Identified as the "kingpin" was Billy G. Hendrix of the Chicago area. Wolf said Hendrix had been selling in the county for nine months.

American Red Cross blood drive short of goal

By Phillip Pearson
Staff Writer

The American Red Cross goal to collect 450 pints of blood Thursday at the University was missed, Vivian Ugent, coordinator of the drive, said.

Ugent said the Red Cross collected a total of 414 pints of blood yesterday in the second and final day of the Post Labor Day Blood Drive in the SIU-C Student Center.

She said although the goal of 450 pints wasn't met, the drive isn't very far away from the overall goal of 985 pints because the goals of the first two days were exceeded.

Despite missing the goal, Ugent said she was pleased with the response of students.

"We feel very gratified by the turnout," Ugent said. "Everybody was upbeat and that helped a lot."

SIU-C holds the collegiate record for blood donations during peace time. SIU-C set the record in 1986 with 3,429 pints collected in a five-day drive.

Blood drive coordinator Vivian Ugent said 414 pints of blood were collected during the second and final day of the Post Labor Day Blood Drive at the University.

The Red Cross blood drive ends today at St. Xavier Catholic Church, at Walnut and Poplar sts. Ugent said the Red Cross hopes to make up the difference by collecting an extra 32 pints, bringing today's goal to 162 pints.

"We hope to get enough to make up," Ugent said. "We need to get 162 pints."

Ugent said that in addition to the regular sandwiches and cookies available to donors, there will be pizza donated by Domino's Pizza of Carbondale.

She said things should run very smoothly today, with donors being able to give blood and be on their way in 45 minutes.

Besides being a make-up day for the Red Cross, Ugent said this is a make-up day for donors.

"Anyone deferred or who missed their appointment can come today," Ugent said.

Ugent said the goals the Red Cross sets for blood drives is based on what area hospitals estimate to be the need for blood.

SIU plans to offer program at two off-campus locations

Mount Vernon, Ullin sites for program in vocational training

By Tim Crosby
Staff Writer

SIU announced its plan to offer a bachelor of science degree in vocational education at two area communities during the Illinois Board of Higher Education's meeting Wednesday in Macomb.

The program, identical to the one taught on campus, will be offered in Mount Vernon initially, as early as spring 1990 and later in Ullin.

"At this time we only told the IBHE of our intention to start this program," Howard Webb, vice chancellor for academic affairs, said.

John S. Washburn, chairman of vocational education, said the program is intended to teach workers to train other workers.

"We don't provide the technical skills," Washburn said. "We are asking that they come to us already trained in their field. We teach things like curriculum development and teaching methods. These allow people to pass on their skills."

Washburn said the University decided to offer the program because demand is high in this area for this type of training.

"Places like General Tire, banks. Coca Cola in Centraia, they want to train people in these areas. There is a lot of interest in Mount Vernon because of the growth happening there," Washburn explained.

A smaller program that does not offer a degree is now being taught at the Mount Vernon Ramada Inn on weekends.

"We get mostly non-traditional students that work full time in that class," Washburn said.

Charles Morris, training manager at General Tire's Mount Vernon plant, said they encourage employees to participate in the program.

"We have a few employees in this program. Our company is interested in employee development," Morris said. "It allows employees the opportunity to branch out or continue on in the same job."

Morris said General Tire has a program that reimburses employees for the tuition and fee costs involved in the program.

"The employee pays the tuition up front. Then, depending on how high a grade they get, we pay them back for it," he explained. He said a similar arrangement would probably be made for the newer program.

Washburn said the requirements for the program will be identical to the ones on campus. The new program is modeled after the one the University has offered on military bases since 1975.

Opinion & Commentary

SIU-C's past greats to bask once again

THIS WEEKEND, six former Saluki athletes will be honored for their achievements by being inducted into the Southern Illinois University Sports Hall of Fame.

Often times, too much emphasis is put on athletics from the time a child picks up a baseball bat or runs without falling down, but there is no denying recognition when the athletes have been tried and proven winners. Athletes "live and die" on the playing fields every day, but few become immortal to live in the minds of those who watched them and competed against them. But this weekend, six will be given a piece of immortality, no matter how small it may be.

The six to be inducted are George Iubelt, Barb (Larsen) Scouler, Pam (Ratcliffe) von Jouanne, Phil Robins, Dave Stueb and Char Warring.

GEORGE IUBELT started as an assistant coach in 1959 and worked with the men's and women's basketball programs for a combined 26 years. Iubelt signed some of SIU-C's best recruits including Walt Frazier, Mike Glen, Dick Garrett and Joe C. Meriweather.

Swimmers Scouler and von Jouanne were All-Americans every year from 1980 to 1984. In her first year, von Jouanne had 29 wins and set 11 school records. She also was an All-American in four events that year. In her freshman year, Scouler had 35 wins, and 42 as a sophomore. She established 22 school records along the way.

Robins distinguished himself in track and field events. A native of Nassau, Bahamas, Robins won the 1976 and 1980 Olympics.

STIEB HAS become one of baseball's well-known pitchers of the game. He has become an integral part of the Toronto Blue Jays organization, and has collected awards such as The Sporting News American League Pitcher of the Year in 1982. He also was the starting pitcher for the American League in the 1984 All-Star Game.

Warring played women's basketball at SIU-C from 1980-1984, and remains the leading scorer for SIU-C's women's basketball with 1,530 points. She also holds the single-season scoring record of 561 points, and was leading rebounder in 1983 and 1984.

It would be easy for the University to forget its greats from the past, though it hasn't. Even if the University did, there would be at least a few fans out there who do remember, who were there for that one play, event — or whatever — that made the athlete shine above all else. And they will shine again this weekend, at least for a little while longer.

Success of sellout hinges on students

The McAndrew Stadium sellout has a black cloud hanging over it. From recent reports from Fred Huff, men's sports information director, it looks as if the stadium will be 2,000 plus short of its intended goal of 17,324 in attendance.

Why? Well, a variety of factors could be pointed to, but why dawdle over the ifs, ands or buts, and the would of, could of, should of formulas. Huff said the final attendance total depends on the amount of students who show up prior to the game. You know how students are: They wait until the last minute to plan anything.

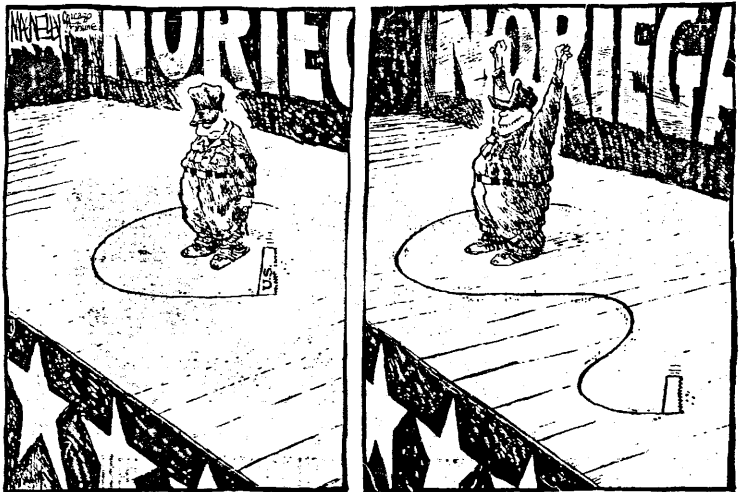

Come on over to the stadium and kick back, hang out, do a little tailgating and, oh yes, make enough noise to sound like 17,324 fans.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board, whose members are the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, the associate editorial page editor, a news staff member, the faculty managing editor and a School of Journalism faculty member.

Letters to the editor must be submitted directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which identification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Death penalty not answer to drugs; legalization and regulation could help

When people demand the death penalty for drug dealers do they really understand the full implications of their position? We are not talking about a few hundred Americans or even a few thousand. The demand for the death penalty is nothing less than a call for mass executions.

If such a law is ever enforced it will result in a program of mass murder and the victims would be poor. This will only add to the chaos and danger that we face as we try to suppress criminal drug cartels.

Ask yourself this, if you were a well-armed drug dealer, facing certain death if caught, and the police came pounding at your door, how would you respond?

Would you go to the gas chamber quietly or would you die fighting? Obviously a lot of cops are going to die enforcing this law.

The police in turn will respond with stronger tactics and we will all become subject to an even more intrusive and violence prone police force than we already live under.

If people really want to bust the drug gangs there is a solution that is rational, proven and obvious. Legalize and regulate drugs. Our own history points to this solution, just as it points out the futility of trying to legislate morality.

By regulating and heavily taxing all drugs the money could be raised to attack the social problems that lead to drug dependency.

But instead the politicians and the media preach a mutant strain of puritan morality and call for stronger punishment of the corrupt sinners (who are apparently beyond salvation).

Their solution to a complex social problem is to attack the victims and increase police supervision to force conformity.

But ask yourself one more question, is the harm that legal drugs might do to our society even close to the harm that a police force empowered to regulate the life of every citizen is bound to do? —Michael Polkinghorne, senior in history.

Style, cost of Bush plan questionable

A lovely speech on drugs, Mr. President I believed your information. I wish, however, I could have believed you.

You spoke to us about cocaine and crack, a very real concern. Through the entire speech, though, you had a goofy little grin on your face. Even as I sat listening to you tell of a six-year-old who lives around crack and doesn't even flinch at gunfire, I got the impression that you considered it something comical.

Next we have the cost. No new taxes, right? The money's there you say? What programs are you going to cut to do this? If your really concerned about drugs, and not just the votes this will generate, I challenge you to back this up by taking a little of your precious defense budget.

Couldn't we build 5 less B-1 bombers to fund this? Frankly, I find the Russians much less of a threat than a crack dealer with a machine gun.

Speaking of guns, why can't you leave pot smokers alone? We don't hear of killing in the streets over marijuana.

Let me offer this view to conservatives who feel that drinking is fine, while pot is so "awful." Assuming a person who has only pot in their system:

—I've never seen anyone begin a brawl in a public place while stoned.

—I've never heard of a man who forced sex on a woman while stoned.

—Very few people, who, on the morning after a good "high" turn over and think "who is this person? Did I really have sex with them?"

On the flipside, these three problems come up alarmingly frequently when speaking to people after a "drinking night out."

Is liquor really that okay? Is pot really that bad?

America, let's bring down crack and cocaine dealers instead of worrying about killing more Russians than we already can, and please figure out that pot is not the horror story some would have you think. —Steven E. Thill, photography.

Change needs to take place with the people

"We have met the enemy and he is us." —Pogo

The September 1 editorial in the Daily Egyptian regarding the proposed Adopt-A-Highway program could be a rallying cry for additional eco-action in our community. It is high time the peoplepower available to our campus organizations was utilized to give back to nature some of what we have taken.

"Oh, not us," we say. "We have eco-conscienceless. We took 'Survival of Man.'" We want to forget that it was us that threw the wrapper out the car window. We convince ourselves that we didn't really ever throw an empty container on to the "worthless" side of the road. But if it was not us, who was it?

A more important question concerns correcting the problem. If not us, again, who? History is full of problem that could have been avoided if people had only cared enough to act.

The student organizations on the SIU-C campus should take responsibility for highway cleanup and maintenance of that trash-free state around Carbondale.

The SIU-C Debate Team has accepted the DE's suggestion and will take responsibility for Highway 51 for two miles south of the Physical Plant. Don Grammer of the Illinois Department of Transportation has agreed to provide that opportunity. We challenge other campus organizations to join us in decreasing the difference between what we know to be right and how we act.

Let's do what we know is right. We say we care about the environment, but this concern is worthless until it becomes action.

As Confucius said, "That which is not changed will stay the same." Until I realize change begins with me, change will not come. — The SIU-C Debate Team's coaching staff.

Student organizing recycling

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

Recycling efforts on campus are at a grassroots stage but this could change if the University's Pollution Control office gets support to implement a campuswide recycling program.

Patrick Glisson, recycling project manager, said he is in the process of developing a program that could be completed by spring semester.

"It's growing. There is a lot of planning going on right now, but it is impossible to put a time frame on it," Glisson said.

Glisson, junior in geography, said part of the problem in developing such a long-range project is the fact that it is totally student initiated, leaving a lack of consistency as some student workers graduate. "But I plan to be here for awhile," he said.

ANOTHER PROBLEM would be funding, since the University would have to come up with the initial investment to get the program started.

"We haven't gone to the point of seeing what kind of funding is available for the program," Glisson said, "but there is support from a lot of student groups."

But according to John Meister, director of Pollution Control, a recycling program at the University usually lasts about as long as the student leaders supporting the program are in school.

"Recycling has always been one of those boom-bust industries," Meister said, explaining the economics of the business. "People get into it when the prices are high, but then when everybody does it, the prices are lowered."

MEISTER SAID there is a lot of negative public opinion about a campus recycling program that stems from Pollution Control's ill-fated newsprint recycler, Re-Use News, Inc., which folded in 1986 when the newsprint market went bust.

Under the auspices of Re-Use News, newsprint collection bins were placed around campus with the newsprint being stored in a trailer on McLafferty Road awaiting a buyer.

When the bottom dropped out of the newsprint market, the University was stuck with over 100 tons of paper and a trailer with burst-open sides because so much was stuffed into it.

"We were cramming newspapers into every nook and cranny hoping the market would be revived," Meister said. Eventually, the newsprint was hauled to a landfill and disposed as trash, he said.

BUT DESPITE negative public opinion, Meister said there is support from the University's administration to start a recycling program. "We have always had a favorable response in Anthony Hall."

Another organization that would like to see SIU-C establish a recycling program is Carbondale Clean and Green, Inc.

Jeanne Foster, Clean and Green coordinator, said the Clean and Green University committee is "trying to come up with some sort of plan to make it easier to implement" a recycling program.

"The University is not recycling because it costs more," Foster said. But once a program is implemented, money would be saved on trash hauling and disposal, as Tasis Karayiannis, owner of Southern Recycling, has said.

FOSTER CITED A recent study from Illinois State University, where two campus buildings produced over 10 tons of waste paper in a semester. "That's just a tremendous amount of paper," she said.

Nathaniel Felder, director of the Office of the Chancellor, said the University "would not be opposed" to establishing a recycling program. "I'm in the process of reviewing that right now," he said.

Recycling: Is it the answer or isn't it?

Local recycling efforts at grassroots level

Tasis Karayiannis isn't in the recycling business because he wants to make money.

It's a losing proposition, he says, but the long range result could mean a win for the whole world.

In five to 10 years, Illinois won't have anywhere to put its trash, Karayiannis said. A recent study by the Illinois Department of Energy and Natural Resources makes his prediction even more dramatic, shortening it to four to six years.

At any rate, the landfills are filling up fast and Karayiannis believes recycling is the only way to slow the trash flow. He says 75 to 80 percent of all trash can be recycled. But others flip-flop that figure, saying only about 30 percent of our waste can be kept out of the landfills.

MAYBE KARAYIANNIS' view is biased. He is the owner of Southern Recycling, 220 S. Washington St. His business collects aluminum cans, scrap metal, glass and paper and sells it to buyers in the respective markets.

However, he points out he started the business in January 1988 because he wanted to do something about the landfill problem. "I'm not in it for the money," he said.

"Recycling is the cheapest and least harmful way to deal with the problem," he said. "We have to recycle. We are running out of space."

Recycling is popular, but its mainstream popularity is causing problems for recyclers like Karayiannis, especially in the used newspaper market, which has been saturated by the mandatory recycling on the East Coast. Southern Recycling does collect newsprint, as well as computer and letter-grade paper, but will not buy the paper.

"EVEN IF WE DON'T pay for it, we're still losing money when we send the paper where it belongs," said Karayiannis, who was supervising the loading of newsprint onto a semi-trailer Thursday. "If the price drops anymore, I don't see how we'll be able to do it."

Jeanne Foster, coordinator of Carbondale Clean and Green, Inc.,

What to save?

Here is a list of items that are recyclable:

-Newspapers — Newsprint is being collected at Southern Recycling, 220 S. Washington and in collection bins at various locations around Carbondale. No money is being paid for newsprint, as there is hardly any market for it.

-Other paper — Southern Recycling accepts computer paper, letter-grade and ledger paper, both white and colored. Although the market for this type of paper is better than the newsprint market, no local recyclers are buying.

-Aluminum — Includes beverage cans as well as scrap (doors, windows, gutters, siding). Aluminum is being bought at Southern Recycling, Karco, North New Era Road and the Can Bank in the Lewis Park Mall but market prices vary.

-Glass — Southern Recycling and Karco buy both clear and colored glass but market prices vary.

-Motor oil — Many service stations in Carbondale collect used motor oil. For details, call Carbondale Clean and Green at 525-4148.

-Plastic — Is recyclable but none of the local collectors are accepting it.

said the newsprint market on the East Coast "has been a problem for months." Clean and Green, which has offices at 1212 W. Main St., is a clearing house for information on recycling as well as other environmental issues.

"(The saturated newsprint market) finally caught up with the Midwest," Foster said. "We're just lucky that anybody collects the stuff."

The market for computer and letter-grade paper is slightly better because it's easier to recycle, Foster said.

PURCHASING RECYCLED paper is one way to "close the recycling loop," Foster said. Her office uses recycled paper for its

The average person can consume a McDonald's Big Mac in less than five minutes but the package it comes in could be around forever.

The use of polystyrene, the plastic material which is used by McDonald's and Hardee's in packaging some products concerns the Illinois Environmental Council because it is harder to recycle and does not decompose in a landfill, Virginia Scott, council executive director, said.

But Betsy DeCampos, administrative assistant at the Polystyrene Packaging Council, said nonbiodegradable polystyrene has its merits. "Polystyrene just stays in the landfill but materials that decompose leak methane gases into the air and water," she said.

The Polystyrene Packaging Council in conjunction with the recently established National Polystyrene Recycling Council are using $14 million to establish five polystyrene recycling centers around the country.

The polystyrene containers are collected from restaurants and grade schools, washed and separated and sold to manufacturing firms such as Rubbermaid.

In turn, the manufacturers use the polystyrene to make such products as video cassette holders, fish tank covers, children's toys, clothing hangers and telephones.

McDonald's spokeswoman Linda Fontana said McDonald's is conducting a pilot program in Oregon where several stores place separate disposal containers for recyclable materials and disposable materials.

"The program has been extremely well-received by the community," Fontana said. "McDonald's is anxious to help out the environment."

Scott said she is encouraged to see some recycling of polystyrene but the cost is much higher than recycling aluminum or paper. "When you recycle a plastic milk jug, you have to find a new use for it. It's not the same as crushing glass," she said.

If all the fast food restaurants went back to using cardboard and paper, the recycled paper industry would be boosted, Scott said. "The cost to society is something they (fast food restaurants) aren't considering," she added.

Burger King spokesman Tim Hermeling said although Burger King uses polystyrene in coffee cups, salad platters and salad plates, the restaurant does not use foam containers for packaging its sandwiches.

"We have used cardboard containers since 1954 because it upholds the quality of the food better, is easier to carry and is environmentally safe," Hermeling said.

'Kid's Day' tailgate slated for Saturday

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

Area kids will get their chance to tailgate at Saturday's football game with a picnic sponsored by the Interfraternity Council.

The council, in cooperation with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and the other Greek organizations, have made announcements at local schools asking children from the area to participate in their 'Kid's Day' tailgate.

"This is a free event," Don Lockart, IFC public relations chairman, said. "We will be serving free hot dogs, chips and soft drinks plus all kids get free tickets to the football game."

Yard games also will be played, Lockart said.

The tailgate will be held in the Free Forum area by the Student Center parking garage at 2 p.m., Craig Jackson, graduate assistant for Greek affairs, said. "This is an all Greek event," Jackson said. "Members from all fraternities and sororities will be present."

Lockart predicted five members from each Greek organization would be present. The Greek members also will be accompanying the kids to the football game at an approximate ratio of one Greek member per child, Lockart said.

"Come on out and look for us," Lockart said. "There will be a big tent and the grill will be going."

High school students offered engineering aptitude test

University News Service

Area high school students considering careers in engineering, science, mathematics or technology can test their aptitudes for those careers Nov. 11 at the University.

Two versions of the National Engineering Aptitude Search test will be given to interested high schoolers — one to freshmen and sophomores and another to juniors and seniors.

Results of the three-hour tests help students, parents, teachers and counselors evaluate the students' mathematical understanding, science-reading and problem-solving skills.

The current academic year is the first that the test will be offered twice. The second date is Feb. 17.

High schoolers must pre-register by sending a completed registration form with a non-refundable $15 fee payable to the American College Testing Service. Registration forms may be obtained from the Office of the Dean of the College of Engineering and Technology. Completed forms and entry fees must be postmarked no later than Oct. 6 for the Nov. 11 test and no later than Jan. 12 for the Feb. 17 test.

The tests are given under the national sponsorship of the Junior Engineering Technical Society.

letterheads. "In fact, I like my recycled letterhead better and when people see it they say 'Oh that's not so bad,'" she said.

Plastic also has fallen victim to a saturated market and no local recyclers are collecting it, Foster said. "Actually, the market for shredded plastic is quite good, but the recyclers don't have the money to buy a $20,000 shredder," Foster said.

As a result of the growing popularity of recycling, other materials may soon go the way of plastic and newsprint.

John Meister, director of the University's Pollution Control office, says recycling has "always been one of those boom-bust industries."

"PEOPLE GET INTO it when the prices are high, but then when everybody does it, the prices are lowered," he said.

Meister also said he does not think recycling will make as big an impact in reducing the volume of trash as is popularly believed. "Actually, it would only save about 30 percent."

Karayiannis concedes that recycling isn't the answer for some people, especially if the market prices continue to drop. "The cheaper it is to do something, the less people are willing to do," he said.

But for now, recycling can save money, once people take the steps to initiate it, Karayiannis said.

AT OLD TOWN Liquors and El Greco, 516 S. Illinois Ave., two businesses share one trash dumpster, paying about $200 a month for pickup, Karayiannis said. After the businesses started recycling glass, cardboard and other recyclable materials, $110 was saved each month because there was less trash to be hauled, he said.

However, recycling in Carbondale is at the "drop-off" stage, meaning the only way to get materials recycled is to take it to one of the collection points in the city. Another alternative would be to establish a curbside program.

Many Illinois communities have instituted curbside programs, and the idea is not new in Carbondale. In the early 1980s, the city instituted a curbside newsprint collection program, which required residents to separate and bundle newspapers apart from their regular trash. The program lasted until 1986, when the newsprint market went bust.

Dena Chriss, general manager at Carbondale Wendy's, said using foam packaging does not make sense. "Paper prevents the sandwich from falling apart, doesn't allow the steam to make the sandwich soggy and costs quite a bit less than foam," she said.

Nancy King, assistant manager of the Carbondale Dairy Queen Brazier, pointed out that although the price of foil packaging is going up, foam still costs more.

FOSTER SAID SHE sees curbside recycling once again becoming a reality in Carbondale. "Eventually it's going to have to come to that. We're running out of resources."

City Manager Steven Hoffner, said recycling is "very high" on the City Council agenda and it is "being moved higher."

"We are evaluating the alternatives that are available to us right now," Hoffner said. "We expect to be making a recommendation to the City Council in the next couple of weeks."

But Foster said some people may not participate in a curbside program "because they won't get any money out of it."

Indeed, money is definitely a big reason why most people recycle, although it can be backbreaking work.

"I'm thinking about quitting this job," said one woman who was pushing a grocery cart load of aluminum cans to Southern Recycling Thursday. "My legs and hips are sore. Some say it's from collecting these cans."

The woman said she makes about $5 to $6 a week from collecting cans. On Thursday, she received $7.50. "I didn't expect that much," she said.

Lawrence Hengehold, director of Computing Affairs, said SIU-C may not be comparable to other universities because much of its computer output is being stored on microfiche, rather than paper.

"WE HAVE ACTUALLY saved many trees," Hengehold said. Microfiche has been used for about ten years he said.

And as far as saving the used computer paper, Hengehold said that would be difficult. "The paper goes all over the campus after it leaves our labs. It's a sizable effort to collect all the wastepaper around campus."

But recycling at SIU-C has taken off at a grassroots level, with many individuals taking the time to start recycling programs in their offices and departments.

"A good percentage of the (aluminum) cans (used on campus) end up in the can banks," Meister said.

POLLUTION CONTROL is saving used letter-grade and computer paper, newsprint, glass and aluminum cans for that office and the Physical Plant, Glisson said. Other offices are invited to help the current recycling efforts, he said.

Money received from selling aluminum and glass would go towards paying the student workers who are administering the program, Meister said.

Although the campuswide program is far from ready, Glisson said Pollution Control would be able to help any department or office that wishes to participate in the current recycling efforts. For details, call 536-7511.

Other groups to contact include the Citizens' Recycling Coalition, which will meet at 7 p.m. Aug. 12 in Room 206 of the Lesar Law Building, and Carbondale Clean and Green, 1212 W. Main St., phone 529-4188.

would attempt to bring its policies into compliance.

The conduct code calls for sanctions ranging from a disciplinary reprimand, which is intended to "call to the student's attention the responsibility of meeting certain minimal community standards," to indefinite suspension.

Richard Hayes, coordinator of Student Judicial Affairs, said the sanctions are not meant to punish students, but rather to "redirect the student's attention to the educational objective."

Welch said the University's primary concern is to help students with drug problems get back on the straight and narrow.

"When it comes to our attention that a person has a problem with substance abuse, we attempt to help them start solving it," Welch said.

The Student Conduct Code provides for the inclusion of a "condition" when a sanction is issued. These conditions may entail a student's participation in counseling or therapy.

In addition, students who are not issued a sanction may be referred to counseling, often at the Wellness Center or the Counseling Center.

nival to be a family event by having it away from the "typical downtown area where the street party has occurred."

The four-day carnival, Oct. 26-29, will include amusement rides, and a midway with games and concessions, Prowell said. There also will be a curfew for minors.

Prowell said the city gave the chamber permission to use the five-acre lot behind the Murdale Shopping Center for the carnival. However, two alternate sites, one also on the west side of town and the other near University Mall, are still being considered.

Tim Hildebrand, Undergraduate Student Government President, said he was working closely with University administrators to plan a weekend event in 1990 similar to the Springfield weekend.

He said the event was still in the very early planning stages, but it was tentatively planned for the second weekend in October before the fall break, which is scheduled over the Halloween weekend in 1990.

Hildebrand said he expected a big crowd this year in Carboneale for Halloween.

"There is no doubt that this is the pivotal year," Prowell said. "I don't believe there will be any confrontations between police and students."

using the term 'drugs.' There are a lot of terms floating around that need to be defined by the administration and people need to realize there's a difference between drug use and drug abuse."

Bonde and Goldsberry said they hope to gain enough support to establish a NORML Registered Student Organization, but concede that finding a full-time faculty advisor may be tough.

"It's definitely going to be difficult getting a faculty adviser just because they may be afraid to be associated with drugs in any manner now," Bonde said. "What we want to stress to them is that we're an educational organization more than anything else." Bonde described the faculty adviser's role as one of representing the University's policies and making sure they're implemented.

NORML has not been a Registered Student Organization at SIU-C since the late 1970s.

Marijuana was criminalized in the 1937 Marihuana Tax Act, which levied a prohibitive tax of $100 an ounce for transfer to an unregistered person.

Other concerns raised at the meeting included drug testing, paraphernalia laws and federal aid to college students. Bonde said many students feel it's ridiculous that complete financial aid can be denied even if they're busted for just one joint.

"And if you're being drug-tested on the job, that's wrong," Bonde said. "They can tell a lot more about you from drug tests than just whether or not you smoke a joint after work. They can determine if you're manic depressive, epileptic or pregnant, among other things. Drug testing is a threat to job security whether you use drugs or not."

Bonde and Goldsberry agree with President Bush that drugs like crack and cocaine are serious dangers, but that marijuana is secondary even to such legal drugs as alcohol and tobacco.

"When the president says drugs are so bad for you, part of the problem is he doesn't talk about liquor and cigarettes. They're both physically addictive and marijuana is not. The only possible drug abuse that can stem from marijuana use is psychological abuse," Bonde said. She said she would like to see people boycott cocaine also, even though that isn't necessarily NORML's official position.

Others in the crowd agreed.

"Cocaine and marijuana are totally opposite," said Todd Foss, freshman in photography, "Cocaine causes a lot of people to go out and commit violent crimes.

Bonde said another meeting will be held Sept. 20, at which time officers will be elected. Plans also are in the works for a pro-marijuana rally Oct. 6 in the Free Forum Area. Bonde expects several local bands to play at the event.

He said his first priority is to follow through on several projects his predecessor had initiated.

"Ernie Lewis started some very good programs during the last year that I want to see through. His work was right on target with what I have planned to implement, so the transition should flow smoothly," he said.

Miller said he plans to put his own "character and stamp" on the position while continuing to "work well within the framework of the (campus) administration."

The national assembly will next convene in the fall of 1991. Thus, SIU-C would have about two years to prepare an application for a chapter.

In the past, it has taken the University up to a year to prepare an application. SIU-C's last application consisted of about 200 pages of information on SIU-C's liberal arts program, library and laboratory facilities and the University's students, graduates, faculty and staff.

Johnson said no action has yet been taken to prepare an application, but the executive committee of the Phi Beta Kappa Association will discuss the matter at its meeting in late September.

Johnson said it seems that SIU-C has improved in the areas that were cited as reasons for the denial of the University's last application. He said the organization of the general studies program and the honors program were main points of criticism.

Both programs have been reorganized since the last application, Johnson said, but it is unclear whether these changes would be enough for SIU-C to gain a chapter.

"It's getting harder and harder to get chapter status," Johnson said.

Johnson said he suspects the separation of the colleges of liberal arts and sciences may reduce the University's chances of getting a chapter.

Johnson said the separation of the two colleges is not as detrimental to the University as the attitude that students in each college should not necessarily take courses in the other.

English professor's second book published this summer

By Marlelouise Marks
Student Writer

Donald Hays, instructor for creative and fiction writing at the University has already written two novels. The first one, "The Dixie Connection," published in 1984 was one of the five nominees for the RENV Faulkner Award for best novel of the year.

Hays' "Dixie Connection" was also nominated by the Folger Shakespeare Library and the PEN/Faulkner Foundation. His second book, "The Hangman's Children" was published this summer.

"It's too recent to say if it will be as successful as my first one," Hays said. "I got good reviews in the L. A. Times Book Review, and I hope for a good sell on the West Coast."

The English Journal calls the "Dixie Connection" a "rousing good baseball story." The book is about the Arkansas Reds, a team of losers, misfits and ex-cons and their improbable season. It is about freedom and law, order and disorder and about life on the margin of the American mainstream, playing in the minor leagues, the Journal said.

Hays' second novel, "The Hangman's Children" does not stick to the '60s situation with which it initially commands attention; will the authorities catch up with a young man who burnt his draft card?

Instead three major characters tell the story: Jesse Lee Cantwell, his current girlfriend, Gloria Alice Dawn, and his father. All are Arkansas and Missouri natives, and the youngsters are typical middle-class rebels of the time. Jesse and Gloria are prototypes of the genial, cynical con-man who has never done much for his son. Now he tries to save Jesse from the law, and his attempts are ingenious and entertaining.

The story ends at the bloody Chicago Democratic Convention in 1968.

Donald Hays is about to finish his third novel and send it to his publisher.

"Hopefully it will be on the book market by next year," he said. "There is still so much to do from finishing writing a novel to its publication. The manuscript editor just sends it back to you if he or she thinks the novel needs some improvement."

Hays earned his bachelor's degree in English from the University of Southern Arkansas, and his master of fine arts in fiction writing from the University of Arkansas.

He came to the University this fall after accepting a position as assistant professor in the English Department.

Comedienne jokes on life, love, family

Nora Bentley
Entertainment Editor

Family, fatness and roommates were a few of the subjects Marian Kelly touched on at the Comedy Cellar Wednesday night.

After establishing that a Saluki was a vicious little dog, Kelly told the audience about her "one-stop-light" hometown in Missouri that believes in God and high school football. Anyone from a small town could relate to her description of cruising around the town square with a car load of girls looking for a car load of guys.

A Review

Stories of her childhood as one of 10 children were some of the funniest parts of her routine. Childhood games such as bunk bed skydiving and "I'm going to touch you" were hilarious.

Avenging herself for her brothers' torments during her childhood, she joked about taking her nephews and nieces out for the day and giving them candy and caffeine, then returning them to their father. Audience members who have nephews or nieces probably chuckled at their own recollections during that joke.

Annoying roommates: almost everyone in the crowd seemed to find humor in this subject and Kelly played upon the fact. She gained empathy by portraying herself as the not too sloppy slob and her roommate as a neat freak.

Sounding like her roommate on the phone, Kelly she said she broke up with her roommate's boyfriend because she was still mad at her for cleaning the tub just when it had gotten a little traction. It may have been a little exaggerated, but her story brought out the humor in a sometimes not so humorous situation.

Comments about her weight ran throughout her act, picking up the flow when she lagged in things to say.

Her comment about trying to put on pantyhose and the fact that they come from a nylon chicken was carried off by good body language and facial expression.

She ended the act with her version of the dating game. With her high-pitched, giggly voice it was almost like being at the real thing. Audience participation in the game added to the humor.

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

A relief map an engineering class is building for the Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge is benefitting more engineering students than just the one building the map, Roy Frank, engineering technology professor, said.

Frank said not only are the students getting valuable experience, the School of Technical Careers can use the maps on which they are basing the relief map for other classes.

"Acquisition of these maps are helping the program," Frank said. "We will be able to come up with new and beneficial projects for the students."

The relief map is being built by the civil engineering students in the engineering technology 492 course, which Frank said was a "catch-all" for various projects undertaken by the school.

Frank said the class of five students are building an 8-foot-square relief map of the entire refuge to be placed at the Visitors Center at the refuge.

The volunteer project, part of the "Take Pride In America" campaign, will be very beneficial to the refuge, according to Ed Wagner, outdoor recreation planner. "because most people can't read the standard government issue maps," he said.

"We're (the refuge management) very much looking forward to having the map to show visitors the beautiful landscape of Crab Orchard,"

Wagner said.

Wagner said the refuge management had been discussing such a map for about six years and Frank "came up with a positive yes" to undertaking the project.

The map, which was started last spring, should be completed and turned over to Crab Orchard by the spring of 1991, Frank said. A plaque with the names of all students who worked on the project will be placed with the map, he added.

Frank said the map, which will detail the entire refuge plus a strip about one-half mile outside the boundary, will total nearly 60,000 acres. It is being constructed of cardboard in various thicknesses, up to 40 layers in places, so elevations and contour can be accurately re-created.

This not only will make a better looking map, Frank said, it helps the students understand land contour.

"It provides the students with a good idea of contouring and how that will be used when building something," Frank said.

Frank said the class is currently working on the western end of the lake for the sake of simplicity. He said the land in that area is much flatter than the southern area, around Little Grassy and Devils Kitchen lakes. "Cause the glaciers passed over the western area."

The refuge is providing all the materials needed to complete the project, Frank said.

Angel Flight members test skills, make friends

By Chris Walka
Staff Writer

If one wants to test their leadership skills, ability to make decisions and make new friends while gaining exposure to the military, Angel Flight might be for you.

Angel Flight has been organized nationally since 1952, and at SIU-C since 1954.

Despite being housed in the Air Force ROTC building, the ROTC Angel Flight is a separate entity from its militaristic counterpart.

"We're basically showing support for the Air Force ROTC. It's fun to go with them and see what they are doing," Renee Lerch, commander of the Angel Flight, said.

Angel Flight, however, does give the casual observer a look into what the military is and it's functions, without committing themselves by enlisting.

Likewise, Angel Flight tries to uphold all the interests and ideas of the Air Force ROTC, having participated with them in the Veteran's Day Parade in St. Louis, in addition to balls and other parades.

Community projects also serve as another function of the group.

SIU-C's chapter has helped in the Special Olympics, helped to circulate petitions throughout the community during POW-MIA week and sponsored food drives for the needy.

Sponsored by the Arnold Air Society, Angel Flight consists of 68 active flights.

Currently, the SIU-C chapter numbers ten to twelve members according to Lerch, with last years total of 20 being reduced by several graduations.

Membership in the group requires that each prospective member be in good standing with the University.

The flight observes pledges by giving them a historical overview and a test.

Lerch said that no one has been turned away from the program.

Court appoints black judge to rule in racial slaying case

NEW YORK (UPI) — A black state Supreme Court judge has been selected to preside over the trial of seven men charged in the racial killing of a black youth during an attack by a white mob in Brooklyn, court officials said Thursday.

Justice Thaddeus Owens, 70, was chosen by Matt Crossen, chief administrator of the courts, said spokeswoman Mary De Bourbon.

De Bourbon explained that the random selection process by judges can be bypassed if a case is unusually sensitive or requires special expertise.

De Bourbon denied that the fact Owens is black had anything to do with his selection.

"It has everything to do with the fact that he is an excellent judge," she said, adding, "he has a well established reputation for fairness."

"He's a very firm guy. He's experienced, and his immediate supervisors ... thought this was the man for the job," she said.

Of the seven youths charged in the Aug. 23 attack in the Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn on four young black men that resulted in the shooting death of Yusuf Hawkins, 16, three have been charged with murder and four with assault.

Wednesday, Joseph Fama, 18, the chief suspect in the slaying, was indicted on 17 counts, including second-degree murder. The grand jury indictment said Fama

"shot four times at close range and struck Yusuf Hawkins three times."

Fama was scheduled to be arraigned Friday in state Supreme Court in Brooklyn.

Hawkins and three other black youths had gone to the predominantly white Bensonhurst neighborhood to look at a used car. They were mistaken for friends of a young woman who reportedly had jilted one of the attackers and began dating black and Hispanic men.

violence.

Two other youths Keith Mondello, 18, and Pasquale Raucci, 19, were charged with murder last week, and were out on $100,000 and $75,000 bail respectively until a hearing Sept. 18.

Stephen Murphy, Mondello's lawyer, said he would ask a judge to dismiss the indictment because he was never informed the grand jury was considering murder charges.

Joseph Fama, the chief suspect in the slaying, was indicted on 17 counts, including second-degree murder.

As the white mob, some armed with baseball bats, attacked the four black youths, one of them pulled a gun and shot Hawkins dead.

Hawkins's killing was New York City's worst case of racial violence since the 1986 killing of a black man in Howard Beach, Queens.

The senseless slaying has triggered marches, vigils and demonstrations marked by angry exchanges of racial epithets and calls for cool-headedness and non-

Murphy said he had never been informed Mondello would face anything more severe than the assault counts on which he was originally charged.

"They didn't alert me that they were presenting this as a homicide, on the assault I elected not to testify," Murphy said in a telephone interview, adding he would make the motion by Friday.

If the motion was accepted by the judge, a grand jury would have to indict Mondello or he would be allowed to go free.

Four other youths, Joseph Serrano, 19, Steven Curren, 18, Charles Stresler, 21, and James Patino, 24, were charged with assault in the gang attack, were ordered to return to court Sept. 14. None of the four youths have been indicted in the case.

Bush decries critics of plan to fight drugs

BALTIMORE, Md. (UPI) — President Bush decried Thursday critics of his new national strategy against drugs who "incredibly say" that the $7.9 billion is not enough to combat the scourge.

"It's that kind of thinking that's lost too many battles already," Bush told a gathering of some 7,000 friendly fellow American Legionnaires.

It was the second straight day that the president has answered critics, mainly from the ranks of the Democrats, who have questioned the funding and the thrust of the program Bush outlined to the nation on Tuesday.

In a speech that stressed freedom from drugs, and freedom from war, the president said:

"Now over the last few days there's been a lot of talk about our strategy by some, who incredibly say it's not enough - this from people who oppose the death penalty. It's that kind of talking that's lost too many battles already, so let's not let these critics lose the war."

"America must never surrender to the victory of drugs and crime," he said. "The future of our children depends on it."

"We are in this together so let us fight on every front," he added. "We're going to win this battle, kid by kid, neighborhood by neighborhood."

Bush told the gathering that "by taking the hoods off the streets, we can and will take back the streets."

Earlier Thursday, the first of what the administration hopes to be a series of suspected Colombian drug figures, accused Medellin cocaine cartel financier Eduardo Martinez Romero, was extradited to the United States.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said, "We're glad to see it happen (and) we assume there will be more." He declined further comment, saying the administration did not want to prejudice the case.

Associate dean appointed

By Carrie Pomeroy
Staff Writer

Juh Chen, dean of the College of Engineering and Technology, has appointed civil engineering professor Echol Cook as Associate Dean for Administrative Services.

Cook, who served as the college's associate dean from 1980 to 1985, will be the college's "contact person with all the different departments and the University's campus affairs and business divisions," Chen said.

"I'll be taking care of the budget, and I'll be looking at the college's alumni outreach...I'll also be looking over the physical facilities," Cook said.

Chen said the appointment will allow his office to serve the needs of the college better. Cook's position, which Cook said is a half-time appointment, will incorporate responsibilities formerly delegated to Associate Dean James Evers and Chen.

Evers is in charge of academic affairs for both undergraduates and graduates, while Chen handles research and development for the college along with his duties as dean. The addition of Cook's position will allow Evers and Chen to concentrate more time on these areas, Cook said.

"Our particular dean is very research-oriented, so I took over the budget for him," he said. "We each have our own specialties. Dr. Cook is pretty good with administration. My specialty is research and development for the college. I just redistributed the work local," Chen said.

Cook said the dean's changes were necessary to run the college more efficiently.

"Things were getting done, but they weren't getting the attention they needed," he said.

Evers, associate dean since September 1988, said the addition of Cook's position "is a plus" for him.

"It takes the operation of buildings, the shops and physical facilities and the budget out of my responsibilities and gives me more time for academics," he said.

Cook said the present structure of the dean's office is somewhat unusual.

Most colleges have an associate dean over the undergraduate program. Another dean is usually in charge of the graduate program.

Prime Minister Mazowiecki names members of Cabinet

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki on Thursday named his new Cabinet, which includes 10 Solidarity ministers and four each from the Communist Party and Solidarity's coalition partner, the Peasant Party.

Solidarity's tiny Democratic Party coalition partner was given three portfolios of ministerial rank. Solidarity took control of the critical foreign affairs and information portfolios. The communists retained the interior and defense ministries as promised, plus the transportation and foreign trade portfolios.

The Mazowiecki government is the first non-communist government in the Warsaw Pact, and the communists had fought hard to retain the Foreign Ministry and the information portfolio.

Mazowiecki, who presented his list during a private meeting with the Solidarity members of parliament, was overheard by reporters.

He asked the members to quickly confirm the choices.

The Sejm, or lower house of parliament, will hold hearings during the weekend before it holds a full session Tuesday.

"All of us have to begin a new chapter and I ask you not to begin a campaign of calling to account various people," he said. "We have to attract people."

He also said that during his 14 days in office, he has realized how difficult Poland's economic situation has become.

"The situation of the country is difficult economically and externally, and I ask you for help to lead this country through this difficult period," he said.

The candidate for foreign minister is a man independent of all major political power brokers but counted in the Solidarity ranks: Krzysztof Skubiszewski, 65, a professor from Poznan with substantial foreign experience.

A frequent visitor to France and West Germany, he also has studied or taught at Harvard and Columbia in the United States, Geneva and Oxford. Since 1981 he has been a member of Roman Catholic Primate Jozef Giemp's social council.

The former interior minister, Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak — who was also prime minister for 15 days but resigned when he was unable to form a cabinet — will retain his post, as will Gen. Florian Siciwki, the defense minister.

The other portfolios falling to Solidarity were construction, industry, education, culture, labor, finance, central planning, and radio-television.

The Peasant Party will control the ministries of justice, agriculture, health and environment. The Peasants lost a battle with Solidarity over agriculture because they wanted to retain communist minister Kazimierz Olesiak, who had recently introduced free market pricing.

Panama: U.S. guilty of 'aggression'

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Panamanian military leader Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, in a message to the summit conference of the Non-aligned Movement, said Thursday his country will continue to resist what he termed U.S. "economic aggression and military provocation."

Vice President Carlos Ozares Tynpalos of Panama, speaking on the final day of the four-day summit of the 102-nation movement, told the conference about Noriega's message and accused the United States of plotting to oust Noriega.

"For more than two years, the republic of Panama has resisted with dignity and firmness the policy of economic aggression and military provocation to which it has been subjected by the government of the United States, in open defiance of international morality and peoples right to self-determination," said Noriega's message.

Noriega said, "The Defense Forces of Panama, together with its people, shall continue to resist, for as long as is necessary, and under whatever circumstances imposed from outside. And we shall not take one step back."

De Klerk: Despite losses election is 'clear mandate'

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI) — Acting President Frederik de Klerk claimed a "clear mandate" Thursday for his racial reform program following parliamentary elections that excluded the black majority and ignited some of the worst rioting in the country in years.

With all but 4 seats decided, the National Party had 91 seats, the Conservative Party 38 and the Democratic Party 33, state-run radio reported. It was the party's worst showing since 1953 when it was re-elected with 94 out of 159 seats.

Police said 12 people were killed in the Cape peninsula in factional fighting and clashes with lawmen overnight but rejected as "untested allegations" unofficial reports that between 23 and 25 died in street battles between demonstrators and police.

Cape Town human rights attorney Essa Moosa said information from eight predominantly mixed-race townships indicated 18 children were among at least 25 killed in election day violence. He said "quite a number" were shot in the back by police and added the death toll was expected to rise.

Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu warned De Klerk his presidency was now mired in "a pool of blood."

He urged De Klerk to urgently carry out his pledge of sweeping reforms after polling that returned the National Party to power for another five years by the slimmest margin since 1953.

In a report detailing incidents of violence in more than 30 townships in the country, police said they used birdshot, teargas and rubber bullets to break up mobs of street activists, some who erected barricades of burning tires.

Independent sources monitoring the unrest said as many as 200 people were injured.

DeNoon's runners to host weekend track competition

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

The SIU-C women's cross country team will be hosting Kansas and Purdue 10:15 Saturday in a triangular meet on campus.

This will be the first of two meets that will be hosted by the Saluki women. It'll be hosting two meets this season. SIU-C also will host the Country Fair Saluki Invitational on Sept. 30.

SIU-C is coming off a triangular meet victory over Murray State and Eastern Illinois in Charleston last week. The Salukis had 23 points as a team. Murray State finished second with 45 and Eastern Illinois was third with 70. The Salukis took six of the top 10 places.

Leann Conway was the overall winner of the meet with a time of 19:01. Conway was one of five freshmen Saluki runners to finish in the top 13.

"We would like the success of the freshmen to continue," Don DeNoon, SIU-C women's cross country head coach says. "We got off to a good start and would like to keep that going."

"We would like the success of the freshmen to continue. We got off to a good start and would like to keep that going."

—Don DeNoon

DeNoon says his team will be up against some stiffer competition Saturday. Kansas has two returning runners in Teri Geryzbowski and Tricia Brown. They also recruited a freshman star of their own in Daniela Daggy.

Purdue is more of a veteran team. They return leading runners in Kathleen Hoffmann and Amy Koontz. Lori Overturf and Gina Pifchke are also outstanding runners on the Purdue team according to DeNoon.

"Purdue has five outstanding kids returning and their past experience puts them ahead of everyone else in this meet," DeNoon said. "Kansas has a good starting list as well. It may have been smarter to just schedule Kansas for this meet because of Purdue's experience. But we will get a chance to see where we stand with them."

Dawn Barefoot and Rosanne Vincent are both fighting the flu bug, but DeNoon says they will both run Saturday. Barefoot and Vincent finished fifth and eighth respectively last week.

Cubs defeat Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Marvell Wynne and Doug Dasenczo homered Thursday night to lead the Chicago Cubs to a 6-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Chicago victory, coupled with the New York Mets' 13-1 victory over St. Louis, gave the first-place Cubs a 1-1-2 game lead over the Cardinals. The Cubs and Cardinals begin a three-game series at Wrigley Field on Friday.

Cubs starter Mike Bielecki, 15-6, gave up five hits and two runs in 5 2-3 innings, walked four and struck out five.

Wynne's second-inning home run off Phillies starter Ken Howell, 11-11, gave the Cubs a 1-0 lead. It was Wynne's seventh homer of the season.

Dasenczo's first career home run in the third gave Chicago a 3-0 lead, scoring Bielecki, who had walked. Dasenczo was a late addition to the lineup when Jerome Walton sat out with a sore shoulder.

The Cubs added a run in the inning when Dwight Smith singled, went to second on a walk to Mark Grace, advanced to third on a flyout and scored on a wild pitch.

Philadelphia closed within 4-1 in the fourth on a home run by Len Dykstra, his seventh of the season.

Chicago took a 6-1 lead off Don Carman in the fifth. Ryne Sandberg tripled and scored on a passed ball. Grace singled, stole second and scored on an RBI single by Shawn Dunston.

Mets pound Cardinals

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gregg Jefferies hit two homers in a game for the first time and drove in five runs Thursday, powering New York to a 13-1 rout of the St. Louis Cardinals and keeping the Mets' hopes alive in the National League East.

St. Louis committed five errors in dropping a full game behind first-place Chicago. The fourth-place Mets drew within three and a half games of the lead, after Chicago beat Philadelphia 6-2.

Jefferies had two doubles in addition to hitting his fifth and sixth homers of the season, a two-run shot in the third inning and a three-run blast in the Mets' four-run fifth.

His third-inning homer gave the Mets a 2-0 lead. One out later Howard Johnson delivered his 33rd homer to help make a winner of Frank Viola, 3-4.

Viola allowed six hits over the first seven innings. The Cardinals' only run came in the fourth on Pedro Guerrero's 13th homer. Cardinals starter Ted Power, 6-7, left after the third inning with a slight groin pull.

New York took a 7-1 lead, scoring four times in the fourth off reliever Matt Kinzer. Barry Lyons had an RBI double. Viola singled in a run and two runs scored on errors by center fielder Milt Thompson and third baseman Terry Pendleton.

Midwestern Collegiate Conference runner up. They swept three games against Indiana University Purdue University at Indianapolis.

At 7 p.m. SIU-C will play its final game of the weekend, against Oklahoma.

Oklahoma is favored to place high at the Invitational. The Sooners finished the season last year with a 23-9 record.

Cocher Miles Pabst, said the team has been working hard on the offensive and defensive points of the game.

"It's the most experienced team I've ever had. We haven't played anybody yet but they are ready to go."

"I don't know about Butler but I do know that SIU and Georgia are very strong," Pabst said.

Oklahoma has 4 returning seniors and only lost two to graduation.

The Salukis suffered a setback when they found out junior co-captain Lori Simpson, who is recovering from orthoscopic surgery, will be out for the entire season.

Tickets or ticket stubs from the football game can be used to get in to any volleyball match this weekend.

(74), doubles (10), triples (3), home runs (12) and runs batted in (48). SIU-C went 37-14 during Stieb's only season here and landed a berth in the NCAA Midwest Regionals.

"I am proud and honored to be selected," Stieb said. "I had an enjoyable time under Itchy and it was instrumental playing there. I got to pitch in a few games and I would say that was the most important year of my amateur career."

Stieb's arm strength was evident in the outfield. The Salukis had a few injuries on the pitching staff in 1978. Jones and one of his former assistants, Mark Newman converted Stieb into a short reliever.

"We knew he could hit with power but he also had a tremendous arm," Jones said. "Mark Newman and I decided to convert him into a short reliever because we felt that is how he would make the big leagues."

Stieb says injuries also played a role in him becoming a pitcher. "We had a few injuries on the pitching staff that season," Stieb said. "I just wanted to help out the staff."

Along with being the Salukis most valuable player, Stieb was named to the 1978 all-American team. Joining Stieb on that squad were Bob Horner, Hubie Brooks, Kirk Gibson and Steve Balboni, all of whom later went on to major league stardom as well.

The former Saluki standout spent one season at SIU-C before being drafted for the Majors in the fifth round by the Toronto Blue Jays. When Stieb came to SIU-C, he was replacing a fan favorite in outfielder George Vuckovich, who also went on to big league fame.

"I remember my first game as a Saluki. We were playing a double-header and I hit a home run in each game," Stieb said. "I was filling Vuckovich's shoes. He was a fan favorite and so one really knew anything about me. That is one of my more memorable times at SIU-C."

Dave's brother, Steve, was a catcher at SIU-C in the late '70s. Although Steve red-shirted the year his brother came to the Salukis, "Steve was very instrumental in me transferring to SIU-C," Stieb said. "It was fun coming up with him. I would be in the outfield and could throw guys out at the plate to him catching."

Stieb is one of 13 major league players that have played under Jones during his 20 years at SIU-C. "Coach Jones is a very knowledgeable man and is a good coach for the players," Stieb said. "He pretty much let me play my game and didn't work me a whole lot."

The former Saluki is so appreciative of Jones that he contributed $10,000 to help SIU-C build the team's clubhouse a couple years back. "We asked Dave for the money and he didn't hesitate in sending it," Jones said. "It helped out a lot."

Stieb's first place Toronto Blue Jays are currently involved in the American League Eastern Division title race and he will not be able to attend the Hall of Fame ceremony. After pitching the Blue Jays to a victory over the Chicago White Sox Tuesday, the 32-year old righthander is 15-8 this season with a 3.70 earned run average. He has won six of his 17 seven decisions. Stieb is 18-4 during his career against the White Sox.

As for the Blue Jays pennant hopes, Stieb is pretty confident that his team can hold off the second-place Baltimore Orioles.

"I don't think the Orioles can continue to do what they are doing and they have a tough schedule ahead of them," Stieb said. "We also play them at home in the last three games of the season and that will be to our advantage - if it comes down to that."

Last season Stieb went 16-8 with a 3.04 ERA. On more than one occasion during the past two seasons, Stieb has flirted with legendary efforts.

In one week's time in late September of last season, Stieb came close to pitching the first no-hitter in Blue Jay history - twice. On September 24, Stieb came within one strike of no-hitting the Cleveland Indians when Julio Franco spoiled it with a bad hop single.

Six days later, in Toronto, Stieb again had a no-hitter going with two outs in the ninth. Baltimore pinch-hitter Jim Traher then blooped a single to right, and Stieb settled for a second consecutive one-hitter.

Stieb finished with three one-hitters last season and has added two more this season.

"I would like to get one before the end of my career but it wouldn't be a big deal if I didn't," Stieb said. "No-hitters are a lucky sort of thing. I have a certain amount of luck but it seems to run out on that last hitter in the ninth. I really don't set goals, I just go out and do as well as I can."

Despite his near misses with no-hit bids, Stieb seems to have gotten better with time in the Big Leagues. Some of his accomplishments include being selected to the All-Star team in 1980 and being Stieb named The Sporting News American League Pitcher of the Year in 1982. Stieb led the league in innings pitched, complete games and shutouts in '82. He also started the 1984 All-Star Game.

Jones thinks Stieb's success gives SIU-C exposure. "I know in his book 'Tomorrow I'll Be Perfect' he is wearing a Saluki shirt in one of the pictures and he is good about mentioning us in it," Jones said. "That is prestigious for us and can help recruiting in a way."

Stieb plays in the American League where the designated hitter rule is in effect and the pitcher doesn't get to bat. Once known as a power-hitting outfielder, hitting no longer matters to Stieb.

"A while back I might have wanted to bat but I'm happy with what I'm doing," Stieb said.

Stieb became the winningest pitcher in Toronto Blue Jays history this summer. His career record is 147-121 going into this week-end's action.

"I was talking the Blue Jays General Manager, Pat Gillick, about Stieb and he told me that he really takes care of himself," Jones said. "He could be around a long time if he keeps it up."

From the San Francisco Opera...

Dear Ruvell:

I would like to take this opportunity to tell you how extremely satisfied the San Francisco Opera company and staff are with the Kawai pianos that have recently been made available for our use. And I would like to add my personal gratitude of having the chance to become familiar with (and in fact, own) the Kawai piano.

The musical staff of the San Francisco Opera have repeatedly spoken to me about the quality of these Kawai instruments. The pianos maintain their regulation well, and also stay in tune over long periods of time. Our pianists and assistant conductors have also expressed their delight with the superior tonal qualities of the Kawai. They are unanimous in their praise for these instruments.

Because I had a chance to try many Kawai models, I decided to purchase a Kawai grand piano. It is a magnificent instrument, and I would recommend the Kawai piano without hesitation.

Let me also add a note of personal thanks, and thank you both of the San Francisco Opera for all your attention and care. It continues to be a pleasure to work with you and your most capable staff.

Sincerely,

David Gyle

Softball season opens today

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

As this week heads for a close the Saluki softball team is preparing for its first exhibition double-header against Lincoln Trails Community College at 3 p.m. today at the IAW softball field.

SIU-C coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said even though she hasn't played against the Lincoln Trails team, she has seen the starting pitcher in action over the summer.

"I am familiar with the pitcher, she throws hard with good accuracy and ball movement," Brechtelsbauer said.

"We can't take anything for granted. Just because they are a junior college doesn't mean we can ignore them. If a junior college has a strong pitcher, you can be beat very easily," Brechtelsbauer said.

As far as hitting off of a fast pitcher, Brechtelsbauer said the team needs to time her motion, swing early and stay on top of the pitch.

"We need to go out there and score some quick runs, take good lead-offs and play aggressive softball," Brechtelsbauer said.

"The team has been working on hitting, defense and staying ahead of the pitcher," she said.

Brechtelsbauer also said the starting lineup won't be finalized until after practice, but fans can expect to see some new faces alongside the old.

Currently, the softball field is in excellent condition because of the little precipitation in the past few days, she said.

Harriers seek revenge on Kansas

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

The SIU-C men's cross country team will be looking for revenge in its season opener against Kansas beginning at 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

Kansas defeated the Salukis 24-36 last season.

"We have a tough job ahead of us," said men's cross country coach Bill Cornell. "Kansas has a good team. This meet should be a good yardstick for us."

The Salukis will have nine runners Saturday including sophomore Mark Stuart, freshman Gerallt Owen, sophomore Vaughan Harry, senior Paul Burkinshaw, senior David Beauchem, junior Mike Kershaw, junior Evan Taylor, sophomore Mike Danner and junior Neal West.

"They are all running real well and our returners are ahead of their times from last year," Cornell said. "Last year's freshmen have really improved so far from what I've seen in practice."

The Salukis lost 1988 medalist Jon Dennis, but three-year letterman Beauchem returns this season. Beauchem is an all-conference returner who finished the Missouri Valley meet in the No. 8 spot last season and was the league's 3,000-meter steeplechase champion.

Beauchem is joined by fellow senior Burkinshaw, Kershaw, and sophomores Stuart and Harry all of whom finished from 12th (Burkinshaw) to 25th (Kershaw) last year.

"Our lead runner could be a different person each week," Cornell said. "Stuart has been doing well along with all of our returning runners."

One of Cornell's top recruits, Gerallt Owen from Aberystwyth, Wales is still adjusting to the climate, Cornell says.

"Gerallt is running right up there with the leaders, but he is still adjusting to this heat and humidity," Cornell said.

Illinois State was picked first in the preseason cross country poll with the Salukis running second in the Missouri Valley Conference. Cornell thinks his Salukis could challenge the Redbirds.

"We need to run well as a group and jell as a team to contend with Illinois State and Wichita State," Cornell said. "They both have pretty good front-line runners."

Saturday, September 9 at 5:00 pm
Tailgate, Saturday Afternoon Before the SIU vs. Western Football Game

The SIU Veterans' Club is open to all students with any past or current military service in the United States Armed Forces.

The SIU Veterans' Club has several major roles:

INFORMATION- The Club is the focal point for information and advice for veterans on the SIU campus. The SIU vets cover a broad range of academic majors, interests, and ages.

The club publishes and distributes the "Rumor Control", the campus wide vets' newsletter.

SOCIAL- The club sponsors a wide range of events to include canoe trips, rappelling, intramural sports, caving trips, and football game tailgate parties. After the bi-monthly meetings, we gather to socialize in a local establishment. The social year is highlighted by the annual pig roast.

SERVICES- The SIU Veterans' Club works with a number of other veteran related organizations. We have raised funds for the Illinois Vietnam Veterans' Memorial. We work with the VA hospital through our monthly bingo games at the Marion VA medical facility and joint attendance at varsity sports events. We are the focus for Vietnam MIA/POW activities on the SIU campus.

The Veterans' Club meets every other week on Wednesday in the Student Center. Watch the DE for dates and place. Our meetings start at 7:30 pm and are open to all vets.

Rugby strives for improved conditioning, season record

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

SIU-C's rugby club is looking forward to an exciting season despite a 12-10 season-opening home game loss at the hands of the St. Louis Royals cityside club Sept. 2.

Junior Norm Smyth said the only thing the team lacks right now is the stamina required to run up and down a 100 meter field for two 40-minute halves.

"We have a lot of good rookies to go along with our experienced players," Smyth said. "We have some really good athletes. Right now, we really have to concentrate on conditioning."

Smyth insists rugby is the perfect game for anyone who wants to pursue contact sports after high school, but are too small or to slow to play college football.

"It's a good alternative for anyone who used to play football in high school," Smyth said. "It's a good contact sport. It just takes a while to learn the rules."

The rugby club faces St. Louis University on Saturday at Scott Air Force Base.

Senior Steve Brady, who coaches the team, said it is a great opportunity to blow off steam after a long week behind the desk. "It really helps to get my mind off school," he said.

"Our team has a better attitude than last year," Brady said. "We have a lot better chance of putting together a winning season."

According to a guide published by Midwest Rugby and Soccer Supply, rugby is a simple, man-to-man contest for a blown-up pigskin.

Rugby is a handling game. Each side has 15 players: eight forwards and seven backs.

The forwards deliver the ball to their backs, who advance by passing the pigskin from one to another or back again to the forwards. Their opponents attempt to stop them by tackling the man who has the ball.

The object is to cross their opponent's goal line and ground the ball. This is referred to as a "try," (four points), and then a conversion kick is attempted at the goal (two points).

Two other kinds of kicks can put points on the scoreboard. A drop kick can be taken at the posts anytime during play. If the kick splits the uprights, it is worth three points.

If the referee finds a team breaking a rule, he awards a penalty kick to the opposition from the point of the infraction. If successful, the kick is also worth three points.

Play is continuous until someone scores, breaks a law or propels the ball into touch (out of bounds). The ball is thrown into the line-out by an opponent of the player who last touched it.

Any player may run with the ball, pass it or kick it. It is illegal to pass it forward, fumble so it bounces forward, lie on it, throw it into touch, or hold on to it after a tackle. There is also a law against offside play. Minor infractions result in a scrum.

A scrum is used to restart the game after an infringement. The forwards pack down against each other and both teams push to gain possession.

Rugby is an aggressive sport played without the benefits of pads or protection, other than the shirt on your back. If a player is injured, his side plays without him, there are no substitutions.

Despite the general aggressiveness of the sport, Brady insists injuries are few and far between. "We might get one or two major injuries per season," he said.

Anyone who would like information or would like to join the club, can go to Abe Martin Field behind the Arena from 4 to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

British official seeks cancellation of soccer match after rampage

LONDON (UPI) The nation's top sports official Thursday asked soccer authorities to cancel England's exhibition game against Finland in the wake of a drunken rampage by English fans in Sweden.

The violence Wednesday, in which 100 English fans were detained, was a prelude to Sweden's 0-0 draw with England in a World Cup qualifying game in Stockholm.

Sports Minister Colin Moynihan wrote to the English Football Association asking it to call off the national team's trip to Rotterdam Dec. 13.

"We are conscious it would be unwise of us to insist on playing a friendly match if the authorities in our countries indicate the game, and movement of people around it, constitute a threat to public order," FA spokesman David Bloomfield said. "We will be speaking to the Dutch FA as they issued the invitation in the first place."

Moynihan's request bodes ill for English soccer clubs hoping to return to European play.

They were banned after the 1985 Heysel Stadium disaster in Belgium in which 39 fans, most Italian, were killed at the European Champions Cup final between Juventus and Liverpool. English fans were blamed for starting a riot that caused a wall to collapse.

The return of English clubs to Europe depends on Moynihan's approval. He is unlikely to give it as long as certain fans of the national team continue to travel to games against the advice of the FA, without tickets and apparently with the desire to make trouble.

However, FA Chairman Bert Millichip Thursday said soccer authorities could not be held accountable for the actions of people outside stadiums. He pointed out that the 200 or so English fans admitted to Rasunda Stadium for Wednesday night's game were well behaved.

"What can we do about drunks on ferries or in city centers?" he said. "It is a law and order matter."

With England on the brink of qualifying for the World Cup, officials are now concerned with how to control English fans in Italy. However, FIFA, world soccer's governing body, said it would not ban England from the 24-team tournament.

"We have had the official report from our commissioner and it says that there were no incidents in the stadium, that the organization was perfect and that the match was very clean," FIFA spokesman Guido Tognoni said.

Salukis prepared for Western

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

The Salukis, 0-1, will be facing Western Illinois University, 1-0, a team Saluki Head Coach Bob Smith said was bigger and stronger with a more wide-open offense than SIU-C's last opponent, Nevada-Reno.

WIU is the defending Gateway Conference Champion and come into Saturday's contest a 5-game winning streak over the Salukis. WIU beat the Salukis last season at Macomb 17-13.

Smith said it has taken longer for the Saluki defense to prepare for WIU because of the wide-open offense employed by the Leathernecks.

"Reno likes to run right at you off tackle but Western mixes it up with a variety of run and pass plays," Smith said.

WIU lost its all-time leading passer Paul Singer to graduation and will depend on the arm of senior Gene Benhart, 6-5, 215. Benhart completed 10 of 26 passes for 93 yards and two interceptions in WIU's 24-10 win over Arkansas-Monticello.

Bruce Craddock, WIU head coach, said Benhart was Singer's back up last season and knows the Leatherneck offense.

"He is a real good player," Craddock said. "I would feel better of this was the sixth or seventh game of the season, we have a long way to go."

"Benhart just needs some game experience," he said.

Smith said Benhart has good speed but was not quick-footed as quarterback go.

"They (WIU) have a gifted quarterback," Smith said. "He has a fluid arm with good accuracy."

The Salukis will start junior Fred Gibson, who rushed for 114 yards including touchdown runs of five and 71 yards in the two teams' last meeting.

Saluki sophomore back-up quarterback Scott Gabbert will be available for action but is still suffering from soreness in his shoulder and elbow, Smith said.

Senior running back Chuck Harmke and sophomore offensive guard Tom Roth are still recovering from injuries and their status is day-to-day, Smith said.

Craddock said the two teams always play each other tough and have a wholesome rivalry.

"The outcome of the game will come down to execution," Craddock said. "Whichever team executes the best is going to win the game."

Craddock said his team is relatively inexperienced with the loss of 17 seniors to graduation.

"It's just too early to tell whether or not our back-ups will be able to step in and play," Craddock said.

Craddock said it has been hard to prepare for the Salukis recently because of the coaching changes over the last three seasons.

Following the 1987 season head coach Ray Dorr left the University to take a position at the University of Southern California. Rick Rhoades took over last season but left after only 11 months for the University of Alabama.

The current Saluki team is one which Craddock is impressed with because of its veteran players.

Craddock mentioned seniors Ron Kirk, a 6-4, 230-pound defensive end, corner back Willie Davis, 5-11, 200, guard Reese Youmans, 6-7, 275, and center Bob Grammer, 6-3, 275, as well as Harmke and juniors Gibson and linebacker

Kevin Kilgallon, 6-0, 215, as experienced players.

"I'm impressed with their team," Craddock said. "I have a lot of respect for coach Smith. He will have the team prepared. He is a quality coach with a good staff."

Smith believes WIU, 6-0 in conference play and 10-2 overall last season, will be prepared as well.

"There defense is improved over last season," Smith said. "They're a strong progressive defensive unit with big strong athletes extending to their secondary."

Offensively, we'll have to throw the ball deep and more often to keep their defense honest," Smith said. "It will be tough to run against (WIU). We'll have to try and mix it up a little with more of an emphasis on the pass."

"We need to keep them off balance by throwing on first down now and running on passing downs," Smith said.

Motivation has not been necessary during practice this week, Smith said.

"We've really had the best week of practice this year," Smith said. "We've seen some pride rise to the top this week."

Smith seeks additional student body support

Football coach says big crowds make difference

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

Paramount to the success of any football program at any level of collegiate competition is the support of the institution's student body, Saluki head football coach Bob Smith said.

"This is a big school and if our student body gets behind us, it will mean a touchdown at every home game," Smith said.

"I'm so excited about playing at home for the first time," Smith said. "We'll be heavy underdogs but I'm looking forward to the game."

Smith said he did not feel any pressure to win following a disappointing 41-3 loss to the University of Nevada-Reno last week.

"Our plan is going to work," Smith said. "The way the coaches deal with the players, prepare for games, work on the technical aspects of the game and work in the off season have worked in the past."

"I told our players that what we have planned will work, it's worked for 27 years," Smith said. "I've had it work in as little as six months and as long as four or five years."

"Given time, we will win — and win big," Smith said.

"The support of the fans would be a big stride in speeding up the process," Smith said. "Fans make a great deal of difference. We're asking for all the help we can get."

"Once we start winning, attendance at the games will become a habit," Smith said. "We are asking the fans to get behind us early to speed up the process."

Senior center Bob Grammer, who will be starting in his 34th consecutive game for the Salukis, is hoping for a big crowd as well.

"There is no doubt a big crowd will help," Grammer said. "There's nothing like driving for a score with the crowd going wild."

As part of the Salukis first home game against Western Illinois University, six former Salukis will be inducted into the University Sports Hall of Fame.

Those being inducted are George Jubelt, Barb (Larsen) Scouler, Pam (Ratcliffe) von Jouanne, Phil Robins, Dave Steib and Char Warring.

Toronto pitcher Dave Stieb enjoyed his career as Saluki

By Greg Scott

Dave Stieb once was known as a slugging centerfielder during his days as a SIU-C Saluki under coach Richard "Icky" Jones in 1978. Now Stieb is known as one of the premier starting pitchers in all of Major League Baseball.

Today Dave Stieb is a starting pitcher for the Toronto Blue Jays, Stieb will be one of six inductees for the SIU-C Sports Hall of Fame Saturday.

Stieb came to SIU-C as a junior after two years at San Jose Community College in California. Stieb's only season as a Saluki was in 1978 when he hit a team-high .394 and led the Salukis in hits

Three matches slated for women's volleyball

The SIU-C volleyball team opens its 1989 season against the University of Georgia, 7 p.m. Friday at Davies Gymnasium.

Georgia, with a record of 5-2 this season under new coach Jim Iams, placed second at the Wyoming Invitational, and took Maryland 3-1 in their last match. "Georgia has a new head coach. I haven't seen them play but they have always finished respectably," SIU-C head coach Pat Hagemeier said. The Salukis will take on Butler University at noon Saturday.
