Chancellor to remain out of search

Beggs

AGREEMENT: Beggs will not return as dean of the College of Education.

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DE POLITICAL EDITOR

SIUC Chancellor Donald Beggs has formally announced he will not be a candidate in the chancellor search in accordance with an agreement he made with SIUC President Ted Sanders.

"Media attention and comments have prompted lots of discussion, and I wanted to make an important statement either reaffirming that I would not be a candidate or that I would actively seek the position," Beggs said.

"It was my perspective that it would be most appropriate to eliminate any potential confusion that might exist in people's minds both within the (search) committee and candidates interested in the position both on and off campus."

Last week, both Faculty Senate President Steve Jensen and Undergraduate Student Government President Dave Vingren said Beggs should be a candidate in the search, which began in July.

Beggs became chancellor after Chancellor John Guyon retired last summer. Beggs and Sanders then agreed that Beggs would serve for two years and not be a candidate once a national search was conducted.

"I am personally disappointed at the decision," Jensen said, "but I understand what happened with him and President Sanders. It's an issue of integrity."

Vingren was unavailable for comment.

SHAWNEE SHOWDOWN: U.S. Forest Service attempt to restore Bell Smith Springs by logging pines doesn't stand with activists.

BRIAN EBERS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Bell Smith Springs has come under the watchful eyes of several environmentally minded SIUC students who recently traveled to the location to observe the environmental repercussions of logging activities.

Many of the students are affiliated with the Student Environmental Center. They hiked, swam and brandished signs on Saturday in support of last month's court ruling.

A court-ordered injunction has temporarily halted the U.S. Forest Service's plans to regenerate native hardwood trees by logging non-native shortleaf pines from the Bell Smith Springs area.

Bell Smith Springs, in Pope County, is located in Shawnee National Forest.

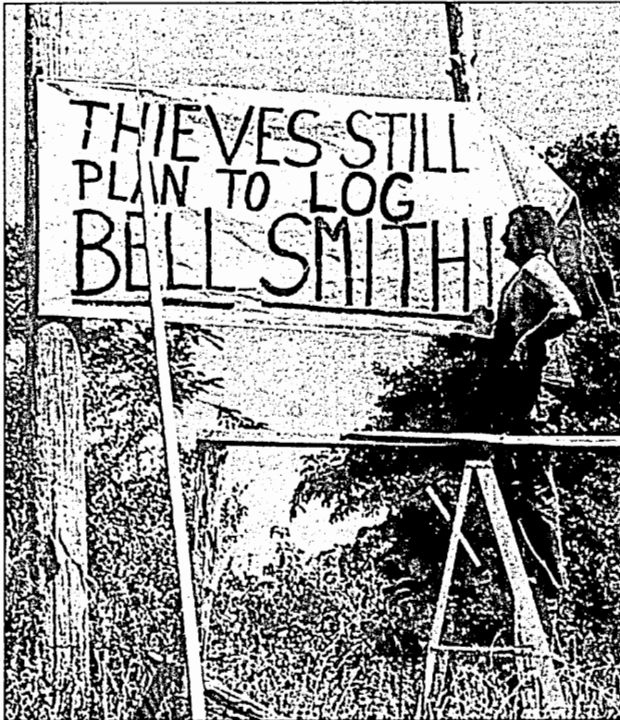

The grievance of local environmentalists is directed against the Forest Service's method for reinstating the hardwood ecosystem, which is the natural ecosystem for the area.

Witness implicates Neal in murders

FINGER POINTING: Defense hammers witness it claims committed crime.

LINDA A. KRUSTINGER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A prosecution witness in an area double-murder retrial on Friday recounted a whispered conversation in which the defendant allegedly admitted to shooting two teens in August 1996.

The witness, Reggie Cavitt, 16, of Carbondale, who the defense says murdered two Carbondale teens, was declared a hostile witness because of his uncooperative nature and conflicting testimony.

Labron Neal, 18, of Carbondale, is charged with six counts of first-degree murder in the Aug. 11, 1996, shooting deaths of Terrance Mitchell, 16, of Carbondale, and James Austin Campbell, 15, of Murphysboro, outside a party at Carbondale Mobile Homes. The first trial ended in a hung jury July 24.

Campbell's father, James Allen Campbell, is an SIUC associate professor in curriculum and instruction.

"Do you know who shot Terrance Mitchell and (James) Austin Campbell?" Jackson County State Attorney Mike Wepsiec asked Cavitt.

"I think I do," Cavitt answered.

"What makes you think that?"

"He told me," Cavitt said.

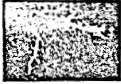

"Who is that?" Wepsiec asked.

"Labron (Neal)," Cavitt answered. Cavitt was declared a hostile witness by Jackson County Circuit Judge William G. Schwartz after Wepsiec argued Cavitt's attitude and demeanor were adversarial. Wepsiec said Cavitt's testimony differed from that of the previous trial. Cavitt also was declared a hostile witness in the first trial.

Members of the jury watched closely as Defense Attorney Paul Christenson hammered at Cavitt about

Student Center to offer 24-hour study facilities

Students now have a 24-hour study site in the Student Center with the designation of the Big Muddy Room as "the ideal study environment" by administrators and student leaders.

The room was earmarked for all-night studying last week after University constituencies hashed out the plan in response to students' demands that they be given a study area with extended hours.

The Big Muddy Room is located in the basement of the Student Center near the Arts and Crafts Center.

Students interested in after-hours study sessions can enter through the south end doors next to Neckers Building.

Mother Teresa, 87, dies

Mother Teresa, the Roman Catholic nun who made decades of devotion to the world's poor, died Friday in her religious order's headquarters in eastern India. She was 87.

She won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1979 for bringing hope and dignity to millions of destitute people.

Her simple message was, in her words, "The poor must know that we love them."

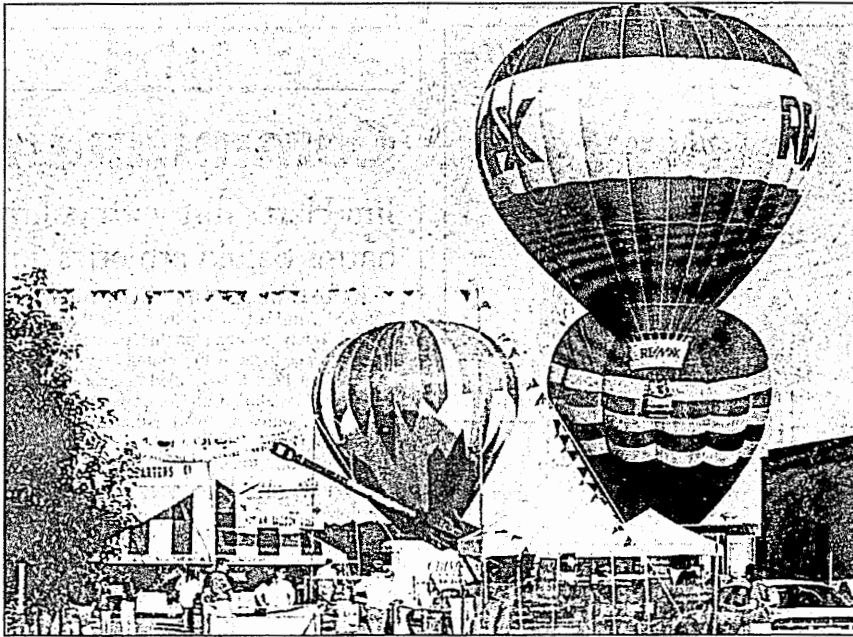

Mother Teresa said her divine call to work among the poor had come in 1946. She opened her first slum school in Calcutta, India, in 1949. She took the name Teresa, after France's Saint Therese of the Child Jesus. In mainly Hindu India, she was simply "Mother."

New sorority sponsors picnic

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY:

Sorority originally formed to help new Hispanic students, but all are welcome to join.

NICOLE CASHAW
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

With a picnic full of food, fun and games for all students, Sigma Lambda Gamma, the newest sorority at SIUC, welcomed everyone to join in a welcome picnic Saturday at Campus Lake.

Although the majority of the members are Hispanic, Julie Flores, a founder of the sorority and a first-year graduate student in workforce education from Norridge, said anyone is welcome to join.

"We want to help new Hispanic students on campus by letting them know we're here to help," Flores said.

Sigma Lambda Gamma, which received its chapter at SIUC in June, and its brother organization, Sigma Lambda Beta, are known nationwide and receive a lot of attention on campus, said Antonio Gutierrez, a first-year unclassified graduate student.

"We (Sigma Lambda Beta) have 39 chapters and 17 colonies nationwide," Gutierrez said.

Flores said the organization has expanded because it is not limited to Hispanic students.

"A lot of people think the sorority is only for Hispanics," Flores said. "Our sorority isn't only for Latinas. We want to share our culture with everyone else. Our main concern is our academics. And we also look for women of a good moral standing."

Since the organization began, the sorority has accomplished all the goals it set out for Commitment?

Jim Hart's flirt with politics harms Saluki athletics' future

WOULD-BE REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR Congress Jim Hart gave most people the impression that he was ready to abandon his post as SIUC Athletic Director as he toyed with running for political office.

Now that Hart has decided against running for U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello's 12th Congressional District seat, the SIUC community has to question the unexpected flip-flop. Is Hart really as committed to his SIUC position as he now wants us to believe?

TWO WEEKS AGO, THE ANSWER TO THAT question would be obvious to anyone with basic reading skills. Local media reported news of a Republican petition campaign waged to draft Hart into running for office, and Hart seemed as giddy as a Homecoming court candidate at the prospect of campaigning. Hart said at one point about his potential candidacy, "If I had any doubts, my supporters have allayed those fears." More important to SIUC, Hart said he had accomplished everything he wanted in his position as the head of the Athletic Department.

A word of warning for Mr. Hart — you have not raised the $2.3 million you said our troubled Athletic Department needed, and it is known that fundraising was one of the reasons you were hired in the first place. One of your wishes has been granted — mostly reluctant SIUC students will help fund your department with the bloated 85-percent increase in the athletic fee you proposed. But didn't you want to oversee the improvements to the athletic program you said that money would provide?

Hart has given SIUC men's basketball coach Rich Herrin a basic "do or die" ultimatum to turn around the basketball program within the next year. He also has a new football regime to guide as the new SIUC football coach he hired, Jan Quarless, begins the new football season. Both Saluki teams are less successful now than when Hart became athletic director in 1988.

NOW, LET'S ALL CONSIDER THE CASE HART inadvertently has placed before us. When Hart decided not to run for Congress, he said "unfinished business" at SIUC contributed to that decision. He specifically mentioned bringing SIUC's Athletic Department back to prominence as a significant factor. It now appears that Hart does not believe he has accomplished everything after all.

Hart, a former quarterback with the St. Louis Cardinals, was hired to bring "name recognition" to SIUC as he sought funds to help the Athletic Department. Almost a decade later, "name recognition" was what local Republicans were after as they courted Hart as a possible candidate for Congress. At a recent Republican dinner on campus, attended by the Republican Party's Illinois candidates for the 1998 elections, speculation mounted that Hart would indeed run.

HART'S CHANGE OF HEART SURPRISED political pundits, but his contradictions in his commitment to SIUC still leave a bitter pill for us to swallow so early in the school year.

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

Students best City Council

"Well, Mike, it looks like the carnapper issue isn't quite dead," I told my friend as we sucked down some suds at a local watering hole.

"Again with the carnappers?" he asked. "Look, Rob. The City Council has made its decision. Nothing you can say is going to change that. Can't you just leave the poor towing companies alone?"

Mike was referring to the half-assed way the City Council addressed the carnapper problem during the summer. Many of you who have lived in Carbondale for a while are all too familiar with the problem. The carnappers circle parking lots like starving vultures, looking for illegally parked students to feed on. Once they find someone without the proper decal, they carnap the car and hold it for ransom — sometimes demanding up to $65. It makes no difference to the carnappers whether that car belongs to a tenant who is in the process of moving into a new place, a pizza delivery driver trying to make a living, or even Mother Teresa. Everyone pays.

Sensing student frustration with the situation, some city officials suggested the City Council enact a $40 price cap on all non-consensual tows. To nobody's surprise, the towing companies showed up at the City Council meeting in force and whined and moaned about how the city was taking food off of their tables. In their infinite wisdom, the council decided the $40 cap was too low, and that it could hurt local businesses. I wasn't very shocked when they decided that a $65 cap was the better way to go.

"Look, just because this new City Council claims to be on the side of the students doesn't make it so," I told Mike. "I remember all that talk about a 'student revolution' during the election last spring. I didn't buy it then, and I don't buy it now. What they really meant was, 'You underage drinkers want to buy beer, and we want to sell it to you.' It had nothing to do with altruistic concern for the students, and everything to do with making more money. Period."

"Rob, you're just being unreasonable," Mike said. "You can't expect the city to doom towing companies to bankruptcy"

"Well," I said, "it turns out that the carnappers don't really need $65 a tow to make ends meet. Members of the student body governments have been meeting with the carnappers, and they have come to a compromise. They now say they can make a living at only $55 a tow."

"Wow," Mike said in amazement. "You mean to say that student government succeeded where the City Council failed? How did they do it?"

"I don't know," I replied. "I wasn't in the room when it happened. But I do know this — student government has very little leverage against the carnappers. They can't pass laws. They can't revoke business licenses. About all they can do is complain. They can complain rather loudly sometimes, but really, that's about it."

"And they succeeded where the city failed," Mike repeated in disbelief.

"Yep. Sorta makes you wonder if the City Council really tried to look out for the students at all, doesn't it?"

"Yeah," Mike said. "I guess you have a point."

"But on the bright side, the bar business is booming. Students are lining up in the streets to get into bars," I said, "and you had better believe their money finds its way into the cash registers — just like the beer finds its way into 19-year-old mouths."

"Bartender, two more beers please," Mike called out as he smiled at me.

"Since when have you had a problem with that, Rob?" he asked.

"Since never," I said. "I've been in Carbondale since 1990, and believe me — I drank at the bars while I was underage. I had a good time. And I gave the bar owners a lot of money. I just think we should be honest about what's going on here."

"Honestly isn't always the best policy," Rob, Mike said. "You should know that."

"Maybe, Mike," I admitted. "But then again — and I've asked this question before — was the election about the students taking an active role in city government, or was it just about selling more beer?"

"I think we all know the answer to that one," Mike said.

"Yes, Mike. I guess we do."

"I remember all that talk about a 'student revolution' during the election last spring. I didn't buy it then, and I don't buy it now."

Changing eating habits

CUISINE: Cafeterias, Carbondale offer more selections than mother.

LA'KEISHA R. GRAY
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Mark Swanson had to adapt to a life without his mother's home cooking and acquire a taste for traditional college cuisine.

"I used to like pizza a lot, especially pepperoni and pineapple," said Swanson, a senior in radio and television from Crystal Lake. "I ate it more than back at home because it was more convenient."

While a tasty slice of pizza once was a tantalizing meal for Swanson, his taste buds soon took a turn.

"Everyone turns over a new leaf," he said. "I started going to the Recreation Center, and I saw improvement and that built enthusiasm and confidence. So I excluded some things and included others."

Some of the foods that have replaced Swanson's pizza cravings are turkey, chicken, tuna and canned tomatoes.

Peggy Corly, the assistant director of Housing/Residential Hall Dining, said the dining services are trying to stay abreast of the changing eating habits of college students.

"We're serving a lot more 'lite' items, and they are being utilized a lot more frequently than in the past," she said. "Also, the pasta with various sauces is a lot more popular."

Corly said that what students eat relies on the times they eat.

"The fact that we're open continuously makes the dining halls more accessible," she said, "and this helps because college students' meal times are generally lunch, dinner and late-night meals, opposed to breakfast, lunch and dinner."

For students like Swanson who want diversity in their meals, the Carbondale community has a plethora of restaurants to appease any appetite.

For those students who are seeking to break away from tradition, Kevin Linda, a former SIUC student and the owner of Auntie's Famous Wings 'n Things, 216 N.

Washington St., has 32 special ingredients at the recently opened restaurant.

Featured on the menu at Auntie's are marinated buffalo wings and seafood plates accompanied by sauces in flavorful degrees of mild, hot and 911.

Although Linda said he can envision pizza staying around as one of students' best menu selections, he is aware of the one aspect of food that everyone agrees on.

"The more variety there is, the more diversity you get," he said. "People are enthusiastically surprised, and it has been very well received."

Swanson urges students to break away from common choices and explore new foods.

"It's (pizza) become like a staple," he said. "Students are like, 'There's nothing else to do; let's order pizza.' Everyone will be looking for something new, and they'll try new things. And if it's good it'll stick. You should try and keep a variety so if you go on a diet you'll stick to it, and you won't knock yourself out."

itself and much more, Flores said.

The sorority has completed a number of community service projects and has increased its membership to about 12 members.

"There is a big misconception on campus that people think it is just for Latino men and women," said Gabe Cerda, a senior in civil engineering from East Moline and a member of the brother fraternity, Sigma Lambda Beta.

Flores has been at SIUC for five years, and she always had the idea of generating a Latino sorority on campus.

"We needed a support group for Latino women," Flores said. "So Gabe gave us all the information we needed to contact Nationals to get it started."

Flores said that with increasing membership, Sigma Lambda Gamma is made up of 23 chapters and 11 colonies.

Sigma Lambda Gamma Week is October 13-19. The group has an informational rush planned and other activities in the making, Flores said.

"We welcome anyone to come out," Flores said.

Non-native pines compose the canopy layer, or top level, of the forest, leaving the shorter, native hardwood trees in their shade. Hardwood trees are oaks, maples, elms and other deciduous trees.

Sean Whitcomb, a sophomore in plant biology from Springfield, is the Student Environmental Center coordinator.

"We've been there, I've seen the destruction that's going on," he said. "To me it seems like cutting these trees for the health of the forest is like having sex for the sake of virginity."

"This forest could be healthy if we let nature do what it's supposed to do."

In September 1992, Westvaco Corporation, a Kentucky-based paper mill, was granted the right to log more than 900 acres in Bell Smith Springs. Logging activities were terminated in 1994 by lawsuits filed by activists.

The latest lawsuit was in favor of the Forest Service, although an appeal and injunction to the ruling have ceased all timber cutting.

Legal action was taken against the Forest Service 16 days after Westvaco harvested 10 acres of pines. The Forest Service has about 3,400 acres available for harvest in Bell Smith Springs.

Whitcomb said the Forest Service is operating under the guise of "ecological restoration" to intentionally sell the pines at a loss.

"I think the Forest Service says they're (logging pines) with good intentions, but it seems that they're doing this for the good of corporate interest," Whitcomb said.

Steve Hupe, U.S. Forest Service forester, said the Forest Service is not in the practice of selling lumber at a loss to increase fiscal budgets.

"We engage in a great many pine sales, which often cost more money to log than we make in return," Hupe said. "In the lumber market, pines aren't as valuable as some of the hardwoods like oaks."

Samuel Stearns, public education coordinator for Friends of Bell Smith Springs, said the goal of hardwood regeneration is similar for all concerned parties, but there is no clear-cut agreement on how to accomplish that.

Hupe said that when the shortleaf pines were planted by the Forest Service in the 1890s, they were intended to serve two purposes: to control erosion and to provide a continuing supply of timber for U.S. citizens.

There are two methods to achieve hardwood regeneration. The first allows the shortleaf pines to live the natural course of their lives, which is estimated between 30 and 50 years. A second method supported by Forest Service biologists is to remove the non-native pines.

The restoration of a hardwood ecosystem will allow for a greater span of bio-diversity and general improvement to the Bell Smith Springs area, Hupe said.

"There will be an increased number of species, plants and animals," Hupe said. "Our proposition (for pine removal) has been supported by the state of Illinois Natural Heritage Division and the Department of Conservation."

"The hardwoods need sunlight to grow to their full potential. We are delaying the biological benefits on not having this natural ecosystem in Bell Smith Springs."

The estimated $454,000 cost of logging Bell Smith Springs could be better spent to enhance tourism, Stearns said.

"I have seen tourism grow exponentially in the last 10 years," he said. "With tourism, the land generates a small but sustainable revenue year after year after year."

"Instead of the land being degraded by loggers, the value of the land could be enhanced through improvements like interpretive signs, trail maintenance and creek crossings," Stearns said. "The money spent to log will create a tremendous negative impact. They should try to enhance tourists' experiences at Bell Smith Springs."

John Wood, forester at Westvaco, said the logging activities will benefit the environment and create useful wood products.

Commenting on the legal constraints placed on Westvaco, Wood said the two proposed methods of hardwood regeneration are in conflict.

"The U.S. Forest Service has said what is best for Bell Smith Springs," Wood said. "It comes down to being a matter of opinion. One is based on science, and I'm not sure what the other is based on."

Both environmentalists and the Forest Service are in agreement that the hardwood ecosystem should be the dominant ecosystem.

The Forest Service is in the process of rewriting its current forest plan. A court ruling last year found that the cumulative effects of the logging were inefficient, Hupe said.

"Our soil scientists had prescribed measures to mitigate the erosion potential that could have occurred when the timber sale takes place," Hupe said.

"The presence of logging equipment would disturb the soil. Advanced erosion could take place, but what's important here is achieving the objective of creating and improving the bio-diversity of the area."

In the U.S. District Court's August ruling against logging at Bell Smith Springs, Chief Judge J. Phil Gilbert found the Forest Service's arguments for logging "disingenuous" and "not worthy of comment by the Court."

For now, Westvaco will wait and see what happens in Bell Smith Springs, Wood said.

"It could be a year before we begin to log in Bell Smith Springs again," Wood said. "It's difficult to tell at this point."

RELATIONSHIPS:
College creates a good atmosphere for meeting and making friends.

LA'KEISHA GRAY
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Marshall Chandler was mindful of the chance of being exposed to scores of women and a shot at love when he came to SIUC, although he set out on a quest for higher education and networking skills.

Chandler, a senior in radio-television from Chicago, said he was forewarned by his parents to focus on his classes, but other aspects of college life allotted him time to look for a relationship.

"Personally, my parents instilled in me the value that education should be my main goal, and women would always be there," he said. "But in college, you have a lot of free time to find a mate opposed to when you get in the work force."

"And now that I'm in college with my girlfriend, she's making the experience a lot easier because of the trust and love we have for each other."

Mary Woitke, an outreach group counselor at the Women's Services, said that while many students do get involved in relationships, conflicts may arise.

"I think college is probably the easiest place to meet people," she said. "It's the prime time in terms of how many people you come in contact with in classes and in organizational clubs. But, in terms of the time some students want to devote to a relationship, it varies and depends on what that students' priorities are."

Another conflicting issue related to a college relationship is contrasting goals for the future, and awareness of this issue may scare some students away from relationships. Samuel Goddy Sykes, a senior in administration of justice from Chicago, said college is the wrong time to pursue a committed love affair.

"If you're an ambitious person, then you are here to get your education," he said. "So, you really don't have time to build something long-term because you're only here for a short time, and more than likely you all go your separate ways afterward."

Sykes said he still chooses to date women who are available.

"I've had the opportunity to test the waters, per se, to see what I really like, and what I don't like," he said. "Nine times out of 10 I'll find a woman somewhere else, because although there're a lot of beautiful sisters here, I just can't be confined to one in order to search for what God has in store for me."

Luck and circumstance are what brought the hope for a life-long soul mate to Dianca White, a sophomore in aviation from Chicago.

"You can meet the person anywhere, it doesn't have to be in college," she said. "I wasn't looking for one at all, but it just happened to come my way when I got here, and I feel confident that this is it."

Confidence in the longevity of his relationship is something Chandler harbors, too. Happy and full of pride, he announces his plans for the future.

"Life and love are what you make it," Chandler said. "I'd rather be with someone who is productive so in the future both of us will be the supporters of our foundation. I've found that in my girlfriend, who is a very positive, productive and elegant young lady, and after our college years, I plan to marry her."

Black holes exist, says scientist

REUTER

LONDON—Astronomers who have theorized about black holes for years now say they have found more evidence that they exist and more ways of proving it.

New Scientist magazine said Friday scientists had located mysterious objects that suck in gas and then disappear from the universe for good; which they believe are black holes.

"We have located collapsed objects without a hard surface. These things answer to the description of black holes, and they can't be anything else we know about," the magazine quoted Cambridge University astronomer Martin Reese as saying.

Black holes, believed to be collapsed stars that generate tremendous amounts of gravity, have intrigued astronomers because they know so little about them.

Their force is so strong that nothing can escape from them, not even light.

Evidence for black holes, first posited by Albert Einstein, has been accumulating for the past 20 years.

But it has been difficult to prove they exist and are not neutron stars that form in the same way.

To determine the difference astronomers measure the mass of the object.

"Usually you would check the mass: in theory, a neutron star cannot be heavier than three Suns, so anything heavier is likely to be a black hole," the magazine said.

By using this principle, astronomers have turned up potential black holes weighing more than the three-Sun limit.

The magazine said V404 Cygni and Nova Scorpii 1594 are objects which must be considered as black holes along with Cygnus X-1.

"But some astronomers point out that proving that an object is too heavy to be a neutron star does not necessarily nail it as a black hole. It could be something more exotic that nobody has yet thought of," New Scientist added.

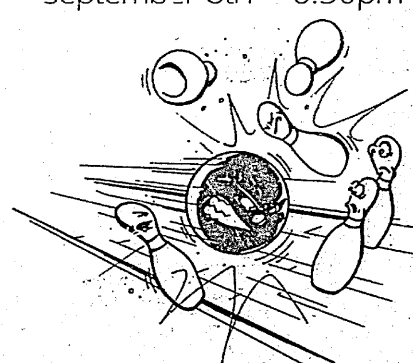

Ramesh Narayan of the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics in Cambridge, Mass., and Reinhard Genzel of the Max-Planck Institute for Extra-Terrestrial Physics near Munich and other astronomers have devised their own theories about confirming the existence of black holes.

In a press release issued Friday night, Beggs states, "I feel I must reaffirm those conditions and restate that I am not and will not be a candidate for the chancellor's position."

Beggs also told Sanders he would not return as the College of Education dean as he was for 15 years.

The search committee advertised in higher education journals and magazines for the position, which becomes available July 1. One such advertisement appears in the September Chronicle of Higher Education.

The committee is made up of 12 members comprised of faculty, staff and students. The committee will consider all national and SIU candidates who apply.

Beggs is uncertain about what he will do after a new chancellor is hired.

"Shirley [Beggs' wife] and I have talked over last weekend about what I perceive to be several options that I probably will look at in the next month or so," he said. "But for now I am still concentrating on making sure everything goes right at the beginning of the year and that people are comfortable in their environment." Beggs urged students, faculty and staff to get involved in the search.

"They should be using their own contacts and impressions of individuals nationally, internationally and on campus: who might be appropriate to the position," he said.

In his press release Beggs stated that he "hopes that others will respect this irrevocable decision."

"I truly appreciate the positive comments and support," Beggs said in an interview. "And I urge you to stay with me this year because we still have got a lot to do."

FORBIDDEN FRUIT: Cuban cigars move onto customs' hit list.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

SAN DIEGO—The sweetest forbidden fruit at the border nowadays is not white, powdery or from Colombia.

And it may not seem like the biggest threat to the Western world. But U.S. Customs Service officials are all fired up about a recent surge of the smuggling of Cuban cigars into San Diego.

In recent weeks, there have been back-to-back record seizures at the San Diego border, netting a cache of nearly 5,000 cigars with an estimated value of $283,500 on the black market, San Diego customs spokeswoman Bobbie Cassidy said.

The August seizures put San Diego squarely on the map of the Cuban contraband cigar trail, an exploding black market fueled by the yuppie cigar craze and a worldwide dictate that Cuba makes the champagne of "puros."

"It's big money," said Rudy Camacho, top U.S. Customs administrator in San Diego. "It's a new smuggling trend, and it's indicative of the demand the American consumer has out there."

Nationwide, seizures of Cuban cigars have increased sixfold in the past three years, to more than $1.1 million worth in fiscal 1996, according to the Customs Service.

That's a leap from $318,401 in 1995 and a mere $142,014 in 1994, according to the service, which officials say reflects an increase in black market prices for the cigars as well as in seizures.

"It's the forbidden fruit factor," said Mike Sheehan, spokesman for Customs in Miami, where Cuban cigars have become a status symbol for the terminally hip of the South Beach area.

"The fact that it's illegal and difficult to obtain makes it all the more desirable."

San Diego got its first whiff of the problem Aug. 1, when customs inspectors at the San Ysidro border crossing found 2,025 cigars in the trunk of a 1972 Oldsmobile driven by Leonard Powell, 33, of Aliso Viejo, according to Assistant U.S. Attorney Bruce Smith, the prosecutor of the case. The cigars — high-end brands such as Montecristo, Romeo y Julieta, Cohiba Esplendidos — were valued at $121,500, a Customs statement said.

On Aug. 23, customs officials found 2,700 cigars crammed in the trunk of the 1997 Chevrolet Cavalier driven by John Daniel Mejia, 26, of Montebello, Smith said. The Customs Service puts the value of that cache at $162,000.

If convicted, they could face up to five years in jail and fines of up to $10,000, he said.

In Miami, a hotbed of opposition to Cuban leader Fidel Castro, smugglers sometimes are accused of violating the Cuban trade embargo. That can bring stiffer penalties — up to 10 years in prison and $100,000 fines — but defendants often get probation and financial penalties, Customs officials say.

Cuban hand-rolleds have a reputation as the best. The image endures in the face of critics who say the communist country's capacity to maintain quality has been hurt by the economic crisis after the crumbling of the Soviet bloc.

Panel seeks more spending to combat hackers

WASHINGTON POST
 WASHINGTON — A presidential commission warned Friday that government spending to protect the nation's "critical infrastructures," particularly its computer networks, needs to be doubled in the next year.

At a briefing filled with bureaucratic jargon, members of the President's Commission on Critical Infrastructure Protection said that federal spending on research and development of defenses against "physical and cyber threats" — ranging from terrorists to hackers to plain old accidents — now totals about $250 million a year. Commission member John T. Davis, representing the National Security Agency, said the protection effort needs to be "jump-started" by raising those expenditures to $500 million in fiscal 1999.

the events of the evening when the two teens were killed.
 "Why did you run to the Laundromat?" Christenson asked.
 "Cause somebody was shooting," Cavitt said.
 "Did you meet Labron after the shooting?"
 "Yes," Cavitt said.
 "Do you have an explanation for running half the distance of the mobile home park?" Christenson asked.
 "No," Cavitt answered.
 "Did you meet Labron at this intersection?" Christenson asked while pointing to an aerial photograph of the mobile home park.
 "I guess so," Cavitt said.
 "What were you doing with a killer?" Christenson's voice boomed.

 "Nothing," Cavitt answered.
 "You and Labron took the gun and hid it under the porch," Christenson said.
 "No," Cavitt said.
 "Why are you being so uncooperative? Do you have a reason for that?" Christenson asked.
 "No," Cavitt answered.
 Christenson established that Neal and Cavitt were longtime friends and members of the same street gang, the Black Gangster Disciples.
 Neal watched as one friend after another stepped into the witness stand to testify against him, occasionally taking notes or conferring with Christenson.
 The Campbell and Mitchell families smiled after FBI investigator Ron Bratcher recalled a conversation he overheard between Neal and LeSean Galloway when Galloway aided police investigations in recording conversations with Neal two days after the murder.

 Bratcher testified that Neal talked mostly of cleaning and hiding the .22-caliber long-barreled revolver. Bratcher also testified that Neal told Galloway, "You know how we used to talk about killing somebody and getting away with it. Well this is our time, just keep your mouth shut."
 The prosecution called a total of 11 witnesses Friday and played tape-recorded conversations. Wespac is expected to rest the prosecution's case Monday.
 Neal has remained in Jackson County Jail since November in lieu of $500,000 bail.
 The fifth day of the trial begins at 9 this morning at the Jackson County Courthouse in Murphysboro.

SIUC spikers fall in Saluki Invitational

MORAL VICTORY:
Volleyball team finds bright side after second-place finish.

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A slow start turned out to be the deciding factor in the SIUC volleyball team's loss to Austin Peay State University in the championship match of the Saluki Invitational Saturday.

The Salukis lost to the Lady Governors, 15-10, 15-12, 15-9, earning the team a second-place finish in the tournament.

SIUC defeated Morehead State University Friday and the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay Saturday afternoon.

Senior captain Erika Holladay said the team got behind early against APSU because of its inability to focus in the beginning.

"We started slow and never got in the groove," she said.

"Mentally we were there, but we didn't have enough tactics. We were doing the same thing over and over again."

APSU was led by tournament Most Valuable Player Laura Mitchell, who recorded 11 digs against the Salukis. The Lady Goves compiled a .200 attack percentage compared to SIUC's .155.

Coach Sonya Locke said her team played well but were up against a team on a roll.

"I don't think that it was what went wrong on our side, but what went right on theirs," Locke said. "They were on, plain and simple. They did all the right things."

Holladay said the team must move on and use the tournament as a learning experience.

"We'll have to learn from this," she said.

"We have to blow it off, because if we dwell on it, then we're not going to grow in any aspects."

Though SIUC finished second in its own tournament for the second consecutive year, the team managed to achieve some positives.

SIUC won its first home match of the season against MSU Friday, 15-10, 15-13, 15-13. In the final game of the match, SIUC scored the final eight straight points to overcome a 13-7 deficit.

Locke said it was a relief to finally get a win after the team's 0-3 showing in the Carolina/Nike Fall Invitational in Chapel Hill, N.C., last weekend.

"After coming home 0-3, it's kind of nice to get that goose egg out of the way," she said.

SIUC defeated the UWGB Saturday afternoon, 15-10, 15-8, 15-5. Juniors Lindsay Fisher and Laura Pier led the way, recording 14 and 10 kills respectively. Pier and Fisher were named to the All-Tournament team.

Pier said the team played as a unit, unlike last weekend's performance in the Carolina/Nike Fall Invitational.

"Last weekend we were kind of in our own world. We were kind of quiet on the court," she said.

"We communicated a lot better this time."

The Salukis also showed depth, as 12 players saw action in the tournament.

Locke said she was impressed with the play of reserve outside hitters Marissa Kimbrough and Emily Wirth.

"Marissa and Emily, I thought those were the ones who came in and did something that really helped us," Locke said.

"It's not that others did not do a good job, but those two did what they had to do when they came in."

With a record of 2-4, the Salukis play host to Southeast Missouri State University 7 p.m. Tuesday at Davies Gym.

Locke said the season is young and the team has not hurt its chances of achieving its ultimate goal.

"It's still too early in the season to hang our heads," Locke said.

"I don't want to lead anybody astray to say that all our matches aren't important, but our No. 1 goal is to win a (Missouri Valley Conference) championship. That is something that has eluded this program ever since we got into this conference."

was pleased with the race," Bosak said. "The race was a good indicator for us to see where we're at."

The men's squad finished with a team score of 29 points, a distant margin over Kansas, who finished with 43 points. Lindenwood finished with 54 points.

The championship finish was a good way to start the season, Saluki coach Bill Cornell said.

"To win first place is a good start to the season, but we still have some things to improve on," Cornell said.

The other top finishers for the Salukis were sophomores Matt McClelland, in eighth place with a time of 26:07.1, and Eric Rushing, in ninth place with a time of 26:09.5.

While the men's team finished first, the women's team fell to the hands of Kansas, who had five top-10 finishers. The women finished with 50 points, behind Kansas' 34 points. Mississippi State finished in third place with 60 points, and Lindenwood finished with a score of 82.

The women were led by Monaco, who finished in second place with a time of 18:37.4. Behind Monaco was senior Raina Larsen, who finished ninth with a time of 19:31.9.

Other top finishers for the women's team were freshman Becky Cox in 12th place, sophomore Joy Cutrano in 13th and junior Leah Steele in 14th.

Cox said the Salukis' freshmen-dominated team was able to successfully gain its first experience in college competition. The top three freshman finishers for the team were Cox, Sharoun Downing in 21st place and Marissa Jelks in 22nd place.

"I think we did a good job for our first meet," Cox said.

"I didn't know what to expect, so I was really happy with where I placed."

Downing said other obstacles the freshmen were introduced to were the running conditions and competition.

"I thought it was difficult because I'm not used to running on grass," Downing said. "It was an experience to run with college athletes. I'm not use to people pushing me to the extreme."

FOOTBALL

"We didn't make anything happen, didn't come away with anything," Quarless said. "You just cannot get in that situation and not score, or it'll come back to get you. And it did."

Nicholls State took a 20-0 lead into halftime after a 26-yard touchdown reception by Ira Jackson was sandwiched by two field goals by freshman Kyle Leisher.

The Colonels wrapped up their scoring effort in the third quarter with a 3-yard touchdown run by Lumar and a 13-yard TD run by tailback Kendall Joseph.

Neither team scored in the fourth quarter, although the Salukis had their best chance to crack the scoring column when they took possession on the Colonels' 7-yard line with just over six minutes remaining.

But Quarless chose to go for the touchdown on a fourth-and-goal instead of a field goal, and SIUC's struggles continued as backup quarterback Marcus Capone threw an incomplete pass.

The final statistics reflected Saturday night for both teams. For SIUC, Skornia completed seven of 22 passes for 46 yards and one interception in his Saluki debut. Capone completed one out of six pass attempts for 11 yards in the fourth quarter.

Cornell Craig caught four passes for 29 yards to lead SIUC, while Reggie Fowler came off the bench for 26 yards on three catches.

The Salukis rushed for just 63 yards on the evening, led by fullback Bryan Noltbertowicz, who gained 40 yards on seven carries. Starting tailback Kariton Carpenter failed to get untracked against the Colonels and managed 11 yards on nine carries. Coe Bonner saw limited action in the fourth quarter and gained 12 yards on five attempts.

On the other hand, the Colonels dominated offensively, led by quarterback Brad Zeller and Lumar.

Zeller completed 12 of 17 passes for 168 yards and one touchdown, while Lumar rushed 24 times for 118 yards and two touchdowns.

While the season-opening result was not what Quarless desired, he was pleased with his team's effort.

"I really told them I'm proud of them," Quarless said. "I thought what they did tonight was they played hard for four quarters. I'm very proud of them, but this is just the beginning."

Legislative Internship

Undergraduate students wishing to participate in SIUC Legislative Internship program are invited to submit an application to the Director of Undergraduate Studies in the Political Science Department by September 15, 1997. The SIUC Legislative Internship Program is coordinated by the SIUC Director of Area Services and administered by the Political Science Department. Successful applicants will register for POLS 395 for two hours each semester and serve their internship in the office of an area legislator. They will receive academic credit and student work hourly compensation. Interested students should submit a one-page letter stating their qualifications, experience and why they wish to participate in the SIUC Legislative Internship Program along with a copy of their SIUC transcript to the Director of Undergraduate Studies in the department of Political Science.

Rocca fires 9-under 62 to win European Masters

Italy's Costantino Rocca shot a 9-under-par 62 Sunday to win the European Masters.

The win gave him his first European PGA Tour victory since he won the Volvo PGA Championship in 1995.

Rocca finished with a 72-hole total of 18-under-par 266. He has now won four times during his career on the European Tour and will be playing in the Ryder Cup later this month.

Scotland native Scott Henderson finished in a second-place tie with Sweden's Robert Karlsson. Karlsson was trying to win his second straight tournament after he won the BMW Open last week.

Royals activate Offerman from 15-day disabled list

Kansas City Royals' infielder Jose Offerman, who had been sidelined with a sprained left ankle, led off Saturday night's game against the Oakland Athletics.

Offerman went 1-for-5 and struck out once during a losing effort in which Kansas City was defeated 9-3.

The infielder is hitting .304 and has hit two homers while driving in 32 runs for the season.

Offerman has been on the disabled list twice during this season. He missed several games during the summer with chicken-pox.

Last year's top rookie returns to Dodgers' lineup

Los Angeles outfielder Todd Hollandsworth returned from the 15-day disabled list Saturday as a pinch runner and scored a run in the 9-5 victory against the Florida Marlins.

Hollandsworth had been placed on the 15-day disabled list twice since Aug. 2 because of a fracture located above his right elbow.

The outfielder has missed 31 games because of the injury.

Hollandsworth was named the National League Rookie of the Year in 1996. But this year he has struggled, and he made a trip to the minor leagues in June. He has played in 90 games and has a .254 batting average. He has three homers and 27 RBI.

Braves trade Myers to Twins

The Minnesota Twins traded catcher Greg Myers to the Atlanta Braves for a player to be named Friday.

Myers struck out in a pinch-hitting appearance in a game against the San Diego Padres Friday. The 31-year-old catcher has hit .267 this season to go along with five homers and 28 RBI in 62 games with the Twins.

In his 10-year career, Myers has played in 645 games.

Saluki men sprint to first place

ON THE RUN: Women's team places second behind Kansas.

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Led by a combined effort from juniors Joseph and Jeremy Parks, the Saluki men's cross-country team opened the season with a first-place finish at home Saturday.

The men beat rival University of Kansas and Lindenwood College.

The SIUC women's team, led by sophomore Jenny Monaco, finished in second place behind Kansas and just ahead of Mississippi State University and Lindenwood.

On the men's side, Joseph Parks found himself in an all-out sprint in the last 300 meters of the race with Lindenwood's Sharif Karie in first place. Parks, however, could not push ahead of Karie and finished one-eighth of a second behind him for a second-place finish and a time of 24 minutes and 54.9 seconds.

"I was trying to lose him (Karie) the whole race, but he is a good runner, and at the end he had a little more speed than I did," Joseph Parks said.

"I was still very pleased with my time, though. That was my best time I've ever ran on that course."

Not far behind Joseph was twin brother Jeremy, who finished in fourth place for the Salukis with a time of 25:18.4. Along with the twins, sophomore Andy Bosak finished in sixth place with a time of 25:54.2.

Bosak said the competition was solid preparation for the rest of the fall season.

Dawgs blanked by Nicholls State 33-0

SHUTOUT: Salukis fail to convert on several scoring chances.

RYAN KEITH
DE SPORTS EDITOR

SIUC football coach Jan Quarless watched his fears about his team's lack of experience against a solid football team come true in a 33-0 loss at Nicholls State University Saturday night.

Nicholls State controlled the game offensively, producing 455 yards of offense while containing the Salukis to just 120 yards and six first downs.

With the win, the Colonels improve to 1-1 on the season, while the Salukis, who have the fourth-toughest schedule in Division I-AA, drop to 0-1.

"It's very disappointing," Quarless said in his postgame radio show. "I think if I look at overall performance, it's just disappointing. I felt we'd be in the ball game. We just couldn't get started."

Both teams set the tone for the game early on, as SIUC took the opening kick but sputtered offensively. Quarterback Kent Skomia threw two incomplete passes, and the Salukis were forced to punt from their own 23-yard line.

With regard to offense, things continued poorly for SIUC for the rest of the game as Nicholls State controlled the ball for 40 minutes and 33 seconds and held SIUC to just 19:27 in time of possession.

The Colonels took advantage of their opportunities early and often, grabbing a 7-0 lead with 5:32 remaining in the first quarter after a 7-yard touchdown run by tailback Nakia Lumar.

SIUC had a chance to knot the score after a Nicholls State miscue on a punt attempt gave the Salukis the ball on the Colonels' 36-yard line. But the Salukis squandered the chance to capitalize when place-kicker Matt Simonton missed a 47-yard field goal.
