Off-campus precincts helped incumbents' win

By Tony Gordon
Staff Writer

In a race that featured two incumbent councilmen against two SIU-C students, incumbents Archie Jones and Charles Watkins soundly trounced students Matt Coulter and Paul Matalonis by a more than two to one margin city-wide, and by as much as eight to one in one section of the city.

In all but five precincts, voters appeared to be choosing to vote for both incumbents or both students. The only close three or four-way races that developed were in Precincts 3, 9, 11, 21 and 26.

Jones, seeking his fourth term on the council, was the top vote-getter in the election with 1,939 votes. Jones won eight precincts.

Watkins, appointed to the council in 1978, received 1,935 votes and won in 11 precincts.

Coulter, a graduate student in history, won five precincts. He finished third with 833 votes.

Paul Matalonis, president of the Undergraduate Student Organization, failed to win in any precinct and received 714 votes.

The margin of victory of the incumbents over the students was greatest in Precincts 1, 4 and 5 on the city's northeast side. In these precincts, more than eight votes were cast for the incumbents to every one for the students. On the southwest side, voters in Precincts 10 and 12 through 16 preferred the incumbents to the students by five votes to one.

Students outran the incumbents in Precincts 21 and 23 through 25, all of which voted at campus locations, by almost four to one. Precincts 6 through 9 on the northwest side went to the incumbents by almost three to one. The students were edged in southeast side Precincts 2, 3, 18, 19 and 22 by a margin of one and one-half to one.

The closest margin was in Precincts 11 and 26, which border the campus, where the incumbents received only 11 more votes than the students; 210 to 199.

Jones won in Precincts 1 through 6, 11 and 18. Watkins came in first in Precincts 7 through 10, 12 through 16, 19 and 25. Coulter won in Precincts 21 through 25.

Jones said Wednesday that he believed his victory demonstrated "that experience means something to the voters in this city. I am real pleased to be given the chance to serve the citizens of this fine community."

"I think that the Reverend Watkins and I had a break because we are better known in the community, but I know that we both also worked very hard trying to get out and meet the people and discover what their concerns are. I think all the candidates conducted honorable campaigns. I congratulate them for it."

Watkins said he was "very pleased and very honored by the people's support. I am very anxious to go on serving the community."

Watkins agreed with Jones' assessment of the campaign conduct, saying, "I think the term 'low-key' used by the media to describe the campaign is a result of the fact that there was no name calling and no scurrilous attacks from side to side, which I think is a very healthy atmosphere for a campaign."

Although he said he "thought I would have made a good councilman," Coulter said he was pleased with the results, that to him, showed "more young people concerned and involved with city government."

"As I have said throughout the campaign, the issues we tried to raise this time go beyond a single candidate or single campaign. The people in the dorm precincts who voted this time will probably be living somewhere in town for the next election. Hopefully, there will be more concern and more awareness of city government on the part of the students," Coulter said.

Paul Matalonis could not be reached for comment.

Conrail decision may be landmark case

By Scott Canon
Staff Writer

WHAT COULD BE a landmark case for railway abandonment is developing in Southern Illinois.

The Cairo to Lawrenceville and Lawrenceville to Paris rail lines are seen by some as vital links to delivering coal and other Southern Illinois goods to market.

Consolidated Rail Corp. (Conrail), the company that operates the lines, wants to abandon them, claiming they are proven money-losers.

Opponents say the abandonments would cripple the economy of Southern Illinois. Conrail responds that it must drop the lines to comply with a congressional mandate requiring the railroad show a profit.

Conrail filed for abandonment with the Interstate Commerce Commission March 31, drawing opposition from a congressman, senators and the Illinois Railroad Users Association.

THE QUESTION IS now up to the ICC. The commission may hold hearings, embark on an investigation, or both. Or, the ICC could simply grant the abandonment request as it has in the past 241 such cases.

Larry Lesser, ICC spokesman, said the commission has not decided how it will handle Conrail's request yet.

Political opposition to the abandonment exists. U.S. Sens. Charles Percy and Alan Dixon are urging both the state and federal governments to retain their freight rail subsidies. U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, of the Illinois 24th district, opposes the abandonment and supports the subsidies.

THE CAIRO TO Lawrenceville line, 143 miles, and the Lawrenceville to Paris line, 70 miles, are the first of 2,700 miles of track across the nation Conrail is trying to drop, said Bill Wilson, Conrail spokesman.

Wilson said Conrail, which was formed in 1976 from the remains of six bankrupt railroads, has been keeping its financial head above water through $3.3 billion in federal subsidies.

With those subsidies dwindling—the Reagan administration proposes to give Conrail $285 million this year and $150 million next year, but no more—the railroad needs to become more "cost-efficient and drop lines that don't make a profit," Wilson said.

State subsidies, also vital to Conrail service, are already being cut off. Gov. James R. Thompson told the railroad last month that the about $300,000 it was getting each year from the state to operate the Cairo to Lawrenceville line would be shut-off March 31, anticipating the cutback of federal aid. The line is now running without the subsidy.

STATE FUNDS FOR the Lawrenceville to Paris line will be cut-off April 30.

Dale McLaren, executive secretary of the Illinois Railroad Users Association, said Thompson is "jumping the gun."

"We don't even know if the cutbacks of federal subsidies are going to make it through Congress. If they don't, Thompson's move will be premature," he said.

To fill the funding void from state subsidy cutbacks, Conrail is considering the use of surcharges on cars running on the lines. The railroad would charge shippers a fee, probably about $125 a car, for every load that is shipped, Wilson said.

WILSON SAID THE abandonment proceedings will not affect the sale of the lines. He added Conrail is looking for a company to buy the lines. "We've had offers," he said. However he could not reveal who had made offers or the amount of the offers.

McLaren said three companies have made formal offers for the lines and at least one other company is interested.

Conrail is holding on to one portion of the Cairo to Lawrenceville line, a 4.6 mile strip from Mt. Carmel to Keensburg. Wilson said Conrail wants to keep providing service on that section because it, unlike the rest of the line, "is suspected to be profitable."

HE SAID IT IS hard to determine exactly what lines make profits since so many costs are spread across Conrail's national system.

McLaren questions the wisdom of Conrail retaining that part of the line. "The rest of the railroad is worth less without that section," he said. "To do that would be legal, but I don't think it's a good way to sell the Cairo line."

Whatever lines Conrail ends up using, it must reduce its labor costs to operate competitively against truckers and other railroads, Wilson said.

Labor costs consume 56 percent of Conrail's revenues. Too large a chunk, argues Wilson.

"That's simply too much to be paying for labor," he said.

One labor leader says union workers are willing to compromise to keep their jobs. William Cecil, chairman of the Mt. Carmel chapter of the United Transportation Union, said his union will negotiate with the railroad and possibly settle for lower pay.

"We may be part of the reason Conrail is in such bad financial shape," Cecil said. "We may have to accept part of the blame."

"We've got a lot of people who are scared their jobs might disappear."

Soviets claim shuttle is arms race weapon

By Thomas Kent
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union, which once warmly praised American space missions, has taken a hostile attitude to the U.S. space shuttle and is warning that the program may lead to a cosmic arms race.

Soviet space officials and the state-controlled news media are portraying Friday's maiden flight of the space shuttle Columbia as the start of a new "militarist and chauvinistic effort" by America to blackmail the world with "super-weapons."

Official commentaries indicate Moscow is determined to counter whatever military advantages the shuttle brings America. Despite official denials, there are some indications the Kremlin has already started its own shuttle program.

Lt. Gen. Vladimir Shatalov, the chief of Soviet cosmonaut training, attacked the possible military uses of the American shuttle at a Moscow news conference Wednesday.

"Of course, if the United States and the Pentagon leaders take this road, it will be a great tragedy for the entire world," Shatalov said. "It will mean a new spiral in the arms race, and certainly will bring the United States nothing, no advantages, except new enormous, colossal expenditures and more international tension."

U.S. officials say the shuttle is primarily a civilian research craft, but it also is expected to be used for putting spy satellites in orbit and for other military missions. The Pentagon has "reserved" for its use more than one-third of the shuttle flights planned by late 1986.

The launching of the Columbia comes as the Soviets are waging a massive propaganda campaign against the Reagan administration, a campaign designed to make America's leaders appear bent on world domination.

Some Western analysts here believe the Soviet Union's own manned space program, which relies on one-shot missiles and space capsules, rather than reusable craft, can accomplish — though perhaps at greater expense — almost any military mission that astronauts aboard the shuttle could.

Bradley was taken to the emergency room at 6:15 p.m. in a private car with his wife and three aides. Spokeswoman Anne Burton said Bradley was "essentially dead on arrival," and was pronounced dead after efforts to revive him failed. Although the Army said he died of a stroke, she said he died of a heart attack.

Bradley had been confined to a wheelchair since suffering a severe stroke in 1975. In 1973 he underwent surgery to prevent a blood clot from migrating to his lungs.

He had lived at Fort Bliss, Texas, since November 1977.

Bradley's last public appearance was at President Reagan's inauguration. The aging general was wheeled onto a stage in a wheelchair Tall, scholarly, soft-spoken, Bradley was regarded as one of the greatest field generals of World War II. Known as the "doughboys' general" because he was thrifty with the blood and lives of his men, the master of military tactics was proud of his record of winning battles with minimum losses.

Omar Bradley dead at age 88

NEW YORK (AP) — Gen. Omar Bradley, who led a million U.S. soldiers in World War II and was the nation's last five-star general, died Wednesday at the age of 88. Pentagon officers said in Washington.

Bradley died of a stroke at 6:30 p.m. CST at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center in New York City, with his wife, Kitty, at his side, said Army Secretary John O. Marsh Jr. and Army Chief of Staff Gen. E.C. Meyer.

News Roundup

House Democrats fight budget cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats labeled President Reagan's tax-cut proposals "the fiscal equivalent of faith in a free lunch" Wednesday and said the spending cuts he wants would hurt poor and middle-income Americans.

In an unusual eight-page statement, the Democrats said they would reject a program "that puts the main burden of fighting inflation on the backs of the middle and low income workers while providing unprecedented benefits for the privileged few."

Soviet troops increase in Afghanistan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — The Kremlin poured 20,000 to 22,000 soldiers into Afghanistan in the past two weeks, pushing Soviet troop strength past the 100,000 mark in the face of relentless guerrilla warfare and widespread Afghan desertions, a Western diplomatic report said Wednesday.

If confirmed, the deployment would represent the largest movement of Soviet troops into Afghanistan since Moscow launched its intervention with 85,000 men in December 1979 to try to put down a Moslem revolt against the communist regime in Kabul.

Astronauts ready for Friday flight

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Two astronauts, eager "to give this country something to be proud of," put aside their books Wednesday, said goodbye to their flight controllers, and inspected the fire-belching rocketship they'll ride into space Friday.

John Young and Robert Crippen were flying solo from their training site in Houston to the launch site at Cape Canaveral in twin T-38 jets after a final meeting with flight directors at mission control. The first task on their schedule was the traditional visit to the spaceship being readied for liftoff.

Solidarity accused of 'anti-socialism'

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Czechoslovak officials Wednesday accused the Polish independent labor federation Solidarity of "counter-revolution" and "anti-socialism."

Despite announcement that Warsaw Pact military exercises in and around Poland had ended, U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said in Rome that Soviet-led forces on Poland's borders remained in a state of "military readiness."

NATO defense ministers meeting in Bonn called the Warsaw Pact military exercises "menacing" and issued a new warning to the Kremlin against intervention in Poland.

Education dean finalist pledges he will listen

By Randy Roguski
Staff Writer

Promising to be "open and forward" with students and faculty, the last of three candidates for dean of the College of Education completed interviews for the job Tuesday and Wednesday.

Donald Beggs, associate dean of the college, was interviewed by students, faculty, staff and administrators.

The other two candidates — John Sikula and James Muro — were interviewed last week. Sikula heads the Division of Education at Indiana University Northwest and Muro is dean of education at North Texas University.

In an open forum Wednesday,

Beggs said he would rely on student and faculty input when making decisions, much as he said the college now functions.

"I don't want to back away from decisions, but I want people to know I have listened," Beggs said. "I'm an eye-to-eye person. I want to really know what people are saying."

Beggs said he would sometimes attend committee meetings to solicit opinion and would use that input in implementing plans which he has for reorganization of the college and for development of its programs.

Programs in the College of Education, Beggs said, should place more emphasis on innovative types of instruction.

He said some courses should be condensed and others should offer more off-campus instruction.

Beggs said he might eliminate the position of one of the three associate deans and use that person to head new programs. He said he would also consider consolidation of the school's departments but would expect faculty to help him decide how much organizational change would be appropriate.

"I have no definite scheme in mind," Beggs said, "but I'm concerned that we administer the college in the most effective way we can. I have ideas, but I'd like to float them to the faculty."

Busch replacement field narrowed to 5 finalists

By Randy Roguski
Staff Writer

Five candidates still remain in the running for the position of assistant to the vice president for student affairs after surviving cuts Tuesday from a field of 27 candidates.

Finalists are Phillip Lindberg, assistant director of the Student Center; Barbara Stonewater, visiting assistant professor in higher education; Jean Paratore, coordinator of intramural recreation; Isaac Brigham, academic adviser for varsity sports; and Patricia Enos, a former college counselor in New England and former housing administrator in Iowa.

A six-member search committee chose the finalists Tuesday after applications had been cut off Friday. Recommendations were made to Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs.

Swinburne is expected to select his assistant before April 15. His selection will replace Tom Busch, who was named assistant to President Albert Somit March 10.

The search was originally restricted to SIU-C personnel, but Enos, who is the wife of an SIU-C employee, was included as a finalist because of her "fabulous credentials," said Loretta Ott, chair of the search committee.

Enos is a former college counselor for New England College at its branches in Henniker, New Hampshire, and Arundel, England. She has also been associate director of housing at the University of North Iowa.

Applicants were required to have at least five years of experience in an administrative or professional position and to hold at least a master's degree in college student personnel or a related area.

Meeting scheduled

Talks on disabled planned

By Melody Cook
Staff Writer

A public meeting to gather suggestions for solving problems faced by Carbondale's handicapped population will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Community Center, 607 E. College.

Ideas for increasing employment opportunities, access to housing and transportation, recreational and social participation for the handicapped will be among topics discussed at the meeting.

Mayor Hans Fischer will open the meeting and an interpreter is expected to translate his address for the hearing-impaired.

Members of the temporary task force appointed last month by the City Council will also attend the meeting. The 11-member task force, of which about half the members are either disabled or have disabled family members, is part of the city's participation in the International Year of the Disabled Person, as declared by the United Nations.

City Councilwomen Susan Mitchell, Carbondale's liaison to the U.S. Council for the International Year of the Disabled Person, said that while the city has already done a lot to increase accessibility for handicapped persons, "this is not the time to sit and rest on our laurels."

Organization against handguns fights harassment unarmed

GUN, Smith & Wesson, 44 Magnum, excel. cond. $200. 544-7190.

SO READ A TINY ad in the Washington Star two days after the President and three others were shot by a gunman. But it was a phony. If you called the number, you were answered by the National Coalition to Ban Handguns, the nonprofit organization that works tirelessly against the nation's gun madness.

"The ad was just another way of harassing us," said Michael Beard, the executive director of the five-year-old coalition. "In the twisted mind of whoever placed the ad, this was designed to get us to waste our time answering all the phone calls."

A lot of time was wasted, what with 50 callers responding to the ad on the day it ran, and ten callers by 9:45 the next morning. The market is hot for 44 Magnums.

In context, the ad was one of the milder forms of abuse directed at the coalition. In Washington, Beard or someone on his staff of seven receives an average of one death threat a week. While appearing on a television program in California recently, Beard received three death threats and had to be secreted out of the studio to safety.

Filthier-minded sickos send his organization envelopes stuffed with used toilet paper. The mail also brings bricks, sent first-class but with the postage left off. The intent is to force the coalition to pay the $4 postage due, and thus eat away at its resources.

WHEN I VISITED BEARD the other morning following the Reagan shooting—which is one of an estimated 300,000 handgun crimes this year—he said that after five years the hostility of gun crazies is less and less jarring. He is more unsettled by the reactions of the supposedly rational, people who accepted the assassination attempt as an almost inevitable tragedy: "We are coming close to expecting that our politicians are at the mercy of handgun killers."

Beard, who is 40, was dressed neatly and about to have an orange for lunch, is refreshing to talk with. Because of some breakthroughs since the Lennor killing against the might of the National Rifle Association and its champions like Ronald Reagan, he senses that this lost cause of banning handguns is suddenly being found. "The message is getting across to large numbers of citizens that the handgun is hidden death. A recent Gallup Poll showed that six out of ten teen-agers favor an outright ban on private possession of handguns. It was the other way around a few years ago. Teen-agers tended to be very pro gun."

A few years ago also Beard found himself pursuing candidates to get them to speak out against handguns. "Now they are coming to us," he said. "A fellow running for the congressional seat of Gladys Spellman in Maryland walked in the other day to rent our membership list for mailing. Something else that has never happened is that gun-control positions are popping out voluntarily at state and local levels. In New Jersey, the president of the state senate, who is also a candidate for governor, has chosen to make the banning of handguns his campaign issue. Just two years ago, we couldn't have begged politicians to run on this issue."

ON THE QUESTION NOW on the minds of many—will Ronald Reagan's acceptance of private ownership of handguns be tempered?—Beard believes "that there are bound to be some subtle changes in the President's attitude. I would think that he's in the kind of position—because of being shot—from which he could not make a dramatic switch. It would make him look self-serving. But some subtle changes are possible."

In his personal life, Beard feels the tensions of an armed America as much as anyone. But he hasn't adopted the Nancy Reagan "little gun" method of home protection which, statistics reveal, provides mostly false security. Beard says he keeps a pool cue next to his bed: "A police chief told me that that would work best against intruders. It's a very effective weapon: It's quiet, you can club with it, jab it, throw it. And it won't go off accidentally, which kills 2,000 of us every year." (c) 1981. The Washington Post Company.

Big business stops at nothing

There is little doubt that the attempted assassination of President Reagan March 30 was a tragic and abhorrent event, but indeed typifies the ugly criminal element that permeates American society. Much has been made of the NCAA's decision to play the championship game between North Carolina and Indiana in light of this tragedy, but such criticism is unwarranted because the decision is a result of what we as Americans love to refer to as "the American way of life" or better yet, "American free enterprise."

Those writers who criticized the NCAA's decision to "play ball" ignore the fact that college basketball, like college football, is big business which in American "lingo" means big bucks. To suggest that such an economic bonanza as the NCAA Championship be delayed would seem to also imply that General Motors should have shut down its assembly lines, that First National Bank of Chicago should have closed its doors to its customers, and that Standard Oil should have turned off the oil wells until more information was learned about the president's condition. A possibility regarding these large business conglomerates shocks the American conscience. So why then should we be critical of the NCAA's decision to play round ball on the heels of Monday's tragedy? This decision is obviously consistent with the American way of doing things and exemplifies just another episode in the ongoing "American Dehumanization Saga" that began with the advent of so-called "Big Business."

Monday's episode, however, is an interesting one because the NBC telecast allowed America to come face-to-face with itself. I guess the NCAA decision makers heard that familiar tune dancing around in their minds—"Money, Oh Money, Got to get my hands on some."—Keith Davis, Second Year Law.

Hare Krishna, a cult or a religion?

At the Board of Trustees meeting Thursday, March 12, there was some timely input from Bennet Byk and Mike Glaub, which led the Student Senate to reconsider the status of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness (ISKON) Bhakti Yoga Club as a recognized student organization at SIU-C.

Since last fall I have followed the Hare Krishna's activities in the Daily Egyptian and endeavored to make the DE and the scheduling office aware of what is hiding behind the ISKON Bhakti Yoga Club. I also called to the attention of the Office of the Director for the Student Center that a woman, especially aiming at foreign students in the Student Center, was trying to sell Hare Krishna books. Her approach was to determine which country the students came from and to try and make friendly remarks before asking them to purchase the book "The Science of Self Realization."

I have extensive contact with foreign students and have found out from native Indians that the Hare Krishna religion in India differs from the way it is exercised in America, where it simply belongs among the cults whose primary aim is making money.

During four years I have had the opportunity to learn about the working pattern of such cults. The decoy is vegetarian food, meditation and yoga. Brainwashing is applied at the meetings with repeated chanting until the members snap. It is especially dangerous if a student gets exposed to these people when he or she is trying to get rid of a drug habit and is looking for some supporting authority. Once a young person is caught in the web, it is difficult to come out of the spell. It might cost parents $15,000 or more to have their son or daughter deprogrammed from cult dependency. If somebody leaves the cult, all ills will fall upon him.

After the latest crime in America it is time to clean up peoples' minds and behavior.—Sarah Smith, Carbondale.

One slimy gun, one less human

I am currently interning in Washington, D.C., through the Political Science and Radio-Television Departments. Being in the nation's capitol at such a dramatic period has provided me with valuable insight and experience into the real meaning of what this country is all about. Both Democrats and Republicans watched and prayed and America waited to see if yet another of its leaders had been slain.

Now, as the smoke begins to clear, our nation is again waiting and praying. Praying for an end to such senseless murders. Praying that a strict, national (rather than the present piecemeal set of state laws), penalty-laden ban on the manufacturing, sale, use and transporting of handguns be established.

Let it not be said that it was President Reagan's near fatal wounding, or former SIU-C student James Brady's tragic injury that has prompted this call for the elimination of handguns. Rather, it is simple textbook history which details reasoning behind such a necessary law. Killed: Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley, J. Kennedy, R. Kennedy, Wounded: Reagan, Roosevelt, Wallace. Near misses: Jackson, Truman, Ford, F. Roosevelt. Remember, all but one was shot at with a handgun. Now, if you have a few months to read, the FBI has a list with hundreds-of-thousands of civilians killed by a bullet fired from an easy to purchase and easy to conceal slimy handgun.—Ron Gavillet, senior, Political Science and Radio-Television.

For 25 years, library plays catch-up

Editor's note: Morris Library is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year, and the Daily Egyptian has prepared a series examining the library and how its expansion and subsequent financial problems reflect hardships faced by libraries across the nation in times of growing economic troubles. This first article deals with the history of Morris Library.

By Liz Griffin
Staff Writer

LIKE A LATE Christmas present, Morris Library was first opened for business on Jan. 9, 1956.

But even now, in its 25th year, as then, the library faces the problem of having to play catch-up—the University and the library itself were growing at a larger and faster pace than the library could keep up with.

The nucleus of Morris Library was two floors and a basement, costing $2.3 million. The exterior was completed, but 50 percent of the interior was left unfinished until the Illinois General Assembly appropriated $500,000 for its completion. The exterior of this first phase was completed between 1962 and 1964, when the five floors were added. The present building was completed in 1970.

Library officials would dream of adding more—a library-museum building in 1938, a 23-story tower in 1968, a departmental library in 1970 and a remote storage facility today. These have all remained dreams that never reached the light of reality, at least until now.

But the new director of the budding library would later say that even from the beginning, Morris Library was playing catch-up. Still another floor was needed to hold the library's growing collections in 1956.

RALPH MCCOY, WHO HAD BEEN librarian for seven years at the University of Illinois Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations, was chosen to assume the director's job. McCoy's title later changed to "dean," and he held this post for 21 years.

The building was named for SIU-C President Delyte Morris, whose goals were to help the impoverished Southern Illinois area from which he had sprung and to transform SIU-C from a small teacher's college to a major research institution. Morris gave one main mission to McCoy.

"President Morris gave me the freedom and assignment to build up a library to meet the needs of a developing university," said McCoy, who is now interim director of the Association of Research Libraries in Washington D.C.

When Southern Illinois Normal University opened for the business of teaching in 1874, so did its library. But its books and journals were like orphans for the next 30 years, for they had no real home called their own. They competed for space with classrooms and students. They were stacked on floors when money was lacking for shelves. In 1883, the collection survived a fire that destroyed the school's first building, Old Main.

"MANY OF THE EXCITED students wept silently as they continued carrying books out of the burning building," wrote Dolores Manfredini in "A History of the Southern Illinois University Library 1874 to 1950." "Some students became so blackened with smoke and soot they were unrecognizable."

In 1904, the state appropriated money for a library for SIU-C, and Wheeler Library was built. It's still there on a site backing Route 51. Now called Wheeler Hall, it's being used by the School of Medicine for faculty offices, classrooms and storage.

When Wheeler Library was built, "Southern Illinois could boast of having one of the few teacher training schools in the nation to have a separate library facility," wrote Kenneth Peterson, dean of library affairs, in the spring 1977, ICARBS, a library publication.

With the building of Wheeler Library, the books, journals, students and faculty began to breach the quiet Southern Illinois skyline as they pressed up, up, up. In 1903, there were about 17,000 volumes; by 1981 about 1.5 million volumes and 1.6 million microforms were housed on the SIU-C campus.

Thirty-five years after Wheeler Library was built, it had reached capacity, and a library-museum building was proposed. It was to contain a museum on the first floor and space for a collection of 350,000 volumes on the second and third floors. The building also would have held seven classrooms, four visual aid rooms, three elevators, air conditioning and artificial light, according to Manfredini, but the 1938 plans did not materialize because state funds were not appropriated.

IN 1948, WHEELER LIBRARY was found by the Illinois State Division of Architecture and Engineering to be unable to support the weight of stacks that "filled every available space from basement to attic," Peterson wrote.

Because of the Depression and World War II, funding had been denied for a new building. But the state's findings forced the moving of the some of the collection until Morris Library was built.

McCoy said Morris Library has matured over time, like a teenager evolving into an adult.

Partly due to the library's expandable modular structure and the idea behind it and partly because of its staffing, McCoy believes Morris Library's rate of growth during his 21-year administration was "probably greater than any other university library in the country," even though the rate of growth in volumes has slowed.

Morris Library is one of the largest open stack libraries in the country, according to McCoy, and its concepts of centralization and subject matter divisions are the latest word in library fashion nowadays.

"I can tell you," he said, "that many large university libraries would envy that kind of setup as they are looking at the cost. They'd be very happy to keep the collection under one roof and keep it in broad subject libraries."

SIU-C ADMINISTRATORS adopted the divisional concept after studying a few other pioneering universities, such as Michigan State and the University of Colorado. McCoy said it was his job to put the idea into working reality at SIU-C.

Humanities, social studies, education-psychology and science divisions were organized within the same building. An undergraduate library was added about 15 years later. Subject specialists were hired and these librarians were given the freedom to purchase the books and journals needed for their areas of the collection, he said, another key to the success story of the library.

"I didn't have a lot of strings attached, so I could do innovative things. We had funds, freedom and a sufficient staff," he said.

The collection was expanded in conjunction with master's degree programs and especially with doctoral programs. As dean of library affairs, McCoy said he was also an ex-officio member of the Graduate Council.

The library began a program of long-range acquisition buying in 1957. That year, the book budget was increased from $84,000 to $240,000. The collection grew from 190,000 volumes in 1957 to about 600,000 volumes in 1963, according to a 1963 issue of Library Progress.

AUTOMATED CIRCULATION WAS installed in 1963, replacing a cumbersome manual system. IBM 367, a computer circulation system, was designed by an SIU-C master's student in business with the help of IBM, according to McCoy. Morris Library was the first in the nation to use this speedier system.

The audio-visual film library became a part of the Learning Resources Service in 1967.

"This was unique because the films at that time were usually not a part of the library. But it became a part of the program with my arrival," McCoy recalled.

Cash copy center established at the campus green barracks

By Bill Turley
Staff Writer

A cash copy center has been established on campus to stop a "bad inconvenience of sending students downtown for copies," according to Harry Wirth, director of service enterprises. The center is located in Room 0844 of the green barracks and is open from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. on Saturday. Other reasons for the establishment of the center are tax problems with using rental copiers and whether the copying of theses and dissertations is University business, Wirth said.

A ban on cash sales of copies is in effect for all copiers except for coin-operated copiers and those in the Law School, he said. The Law School was exempted because of "community relations" with area lawyers who use the facilities at the school, Wirth said.

He said the concept of a cash copy center started in the early 1970s after a study was done on the center at Oklahoma State University. The idea lay dormant a few years and action was started on it in the summer of 1979. After several discussions with the president's office, approval for the center came in 1980, Wirth said.

The northeast end of one the green barracks was given the green light by SIU-C architects to hold the heavy copy machines, Wirth said. That sight was chosen, he said, because it was central.

Bids were sought from community businesses to operate the center and two were received, one from the Printing Plant, 606 S. Illinois Ave., and Henry Printing, 118 S. Illinois Ave., Wirth said. Henry Printing won the bidding.

The center opened March 23, according to Mike Henry, owner of Henry Printing. He said business the first few weeks "has been as well as we could expect." He said the center may be open additional hours after student use patterns have been established.

Ogilvie supports Fahner re-election

CHICAGO (AP) — If former Cook County State's Attorney Bernard Carey proceeds with his plans to challenge Attorney General Tyrone Fahner next year, he will not have the support of former Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie.

Ogilvie said he would support Fahner if Carey challenges him in the 1982 Republican primary. On Monday Carey said the former governor was encouraging him to run for the statehouse post.

Ogilvie admitted he had encouraged Carey to remain in public life but said he was "startled" by Carey's plans to challenge Fahner.

The former governor said he was a co-chairman of Fahner's campaign dinner last week and would continue to support the attorney general.

Carey, who was defeated last November in his bid for re-election, announced Monday that he planned to challenge Fahner. He said at the time that

Gov. James R. Thompson had been trying to "narrow" the Illinois Republican Party and set up a "one-man party."

Carey was referring to Thompson's appointments of Fahner as attorney general and Jim Edgar as secretary of state. Both men are close allies of the governor.

Carey also called Thompson a "political boss" and said if he runs for attorney general he will make the governor an issue in the campaign.

GLASS

Elliot Freeman, graduate student in art, cools the gathering before adding colored glass.

The art of glass blowing

Glass blowing is an intricate art, as demonstrated by Elliot Freeman, graduate student in art. Freeman is one of 15 students enrolled in a glass blowing lab in Pulliam Hall which is taught by Bill Boyesen, assistant professor in art.

The glass is gathered with a pipe from an oven, called a tank. The tank is heated to 1,850 degrees to keep the glass in a liquid state.

The artist blows through the hollow pipe until an air bubble forms in the liquid glass. After the glass cools, the glass blower adds more glass from either the crystal or colored glass tanks.

After the second gathering, he blows the glass into a basic shape, making it bigger while thinning the walls.

The glass is then reheated in a furnace called the "glory hole." The glass blower can add stems or bend the glass after it is removed from this furnace.

The glass is then put in another, cooler oven, called an annealer, which allows the glass to uniformly cool, preventing cracking.

'Winelight' appeal goes beyond world of jazz

By Rod Smith
Entertainment Editor

Saxophonist Grover Washington, Jr. is following a current, popular formula in jazz recording that has led to increased airplay, appeal and sales in the smaller jazz music market.

Washington's latest release, "Winelight," is his most successful to date, holding the title of Billboard's No. 1 jazz LP for 17 consecutive weeks and joining the distinguished company of George Benson and Chuck Mangione in becoming one of three jazz artists ever to crack the Top 5 albums on the pop music chart.

A primary reason for this surge is the album's popular single, "Just The Two Of Us," which features lead vocals from rhythm and bluesman Bill Withers. Withers, whose musical peak came in the early '70s with his hits "Lean On Me," "Ain't No Sunshine" and "Use Me," is the album's lone vocalist. "Just The Two Of Us" is the LP's only lyrical song and is Washington's first No. 1 single. His best previous effort was 1975's "Mister Magic," which peaked at No. 54.

GRUVER WASHINGTON JR.

The practice of using a rhythm and blues singer for a jazz LP has been a successful and popular idea in recent years that widens the appeal of jazz artists and their music. The first group to use this concept was the Crusaders, who hired Randy Crawford for "Street Life," which stayed at No. 1 in jazz for 21 weeks—a record that Washington may break.

Other jazz musicians to use the R&B vocalist idea include Chuck Mangione (Esther Satterfield), Norman Connors (Michael Henderson) and Ramsey Lewis (members of Earth, Wind and Fire).

"Just The Two Of Us" is an infectious number that lingers in the mind. Withers, who hasn't been heard from for years, is a perfect choice to add a soulful vocal touch to Washington's already emotive horn.

The remainder of the album is Washington's usual combination of soft, mellow touches and screeching jams. Washington utilizes soprano, alto and tenor saxes, and although his horn is the group's focal point, he is not overbearing. A talented group including guitarist Eric Gale, bassist Marcus Miller and percussionist Ralph McDonald serves not only as a rhythm section, but also present themselves as innovative, improvisational musicians.

Most of the songs here contain tempo changes throughout their playing time, the best example being "Let It Flow," dedicated to "Dr. J.," pro basketball's Julius Erving. This cut begins with light melodies and then crescendos into a furious sax jam, paralleling Erving's flamboyant play.

Marketing formula or not, this is still a fine piece of work from one of jazz's most overlooked blowers. Buy this album not only for the extended work from Withers, but also for five other relaxing tunes that comprise the best jazz album of the year. (Album courtesy of Plaza Records)

Foley's latest radiates passion

By Bill Crowe
Staff Writer

With a little help from some very talented and insightful friends, Ellen Foley has become more than another wailing girly rocker. She's now a spokeswoman for females around the world, echoing their needs, desires and emotions.

Foley's second album, "Spirit of St. Louis," is a provocative blend of dance hall, pop, operatic and cabaret styles which paints vivid pictures of women, their men and love. It's produced by boyfriend and Clash guitarist Mick Jones, includes six Joe Strummer-Jones originals and highlights the playing of the entire Clash, along with members of Ian Dury's Blockheads.

Now, some readers may envision this as the Clash's view of women with Foley serving as a figurehead, and they're somewhat correct. However, Foley's considerable style and vocal range takes the 12 songs (with others penned by various writers including herself) and interprets them with sentiment and devotion.

The six Strummer-Jones tunes project a side of the group which has never surfaced before, namely a look at women as thinking and feeling people. The Clash legend has been built on an exciting blend of angst-riddled revolt and global politics, so it's delightful to see their writing being geared to individuals instead of the masses on a consistent scale.

"Theatre of Cruelty" has Foley's operatic soprano set within a quirky Latin conga-

'Heavy Metal' proves Fools are not foolish

By Alan Sculley
Staff Writer

Don't judge a band by its name. That's the moral of the Fools' second album, "Heavy Mental."

With a name like the Fools, it might be hard for people to take this band seriously. But the Fools are simply one of the best and most vibrant heavy metal bands around today.

The album has a few moments when the Fools step to average heavy metal thud, but on seven of the ten songs on "Heavy Mental," the Fools discover a bouncy, cheerful rocking sound that is far more exciting than some of heavy metal's big names could ever hope to find.

"Heavy Mental" also finds the Fools wearing several different influences that they mix into the bruising rock style associated with heavy metal.

On some songs, the Fools blend in a twinge of new wave. The album's opener, "Mind Control" bursts out with the fast, steady beat typical of new wave, filled over with snappy piano chops. Other songs have the melodic vocals and harmonies much more typical of new wave than heavy metal.

The band also plays big bopper on "Last Cadillac on Earth," a song which carries a pounding beat along the lines of the 1960s hit "Psychotic Reaction."

On "Lost Number," vocalist Mike Girard draws heavily on the crooning style of Roy Orbison, and to top that influence, the Fools also cover Orbison's "Running Scared." Unfortunately the latter song,

Review

Heavy Mental, The Fools, EMI America Records, Reviewer's Rating: 3 stars (4 stars tops).

which is the band's single from the album, is too country and sticks out like a sore thumb over the fairly constant rocking style of the other songs.

Other songs of special note are "Around the Block," which has a gutty sound reminiscent of the Rolling Stone's "Down the Line," and "Alibi," a blistering, but catchy rocker which is the album's best song.

The Fools may feature the average heavy metal line-up of musicians—dual electric guitarists, bassist and drummer, but the sound is much more unusual and exciting than the instruments. The band's sound is also more accomplished than one expects from a band with only two albums out.

A final strong point of the band is its attitude. I often get the feeling as I listen to other heavy metal bands that they take themselves rather seriously. Any band that names themselves the Fools probably is not so somber that they won't have some fun with rock 'n' roll or take themselves too seriously. Obviously, foolish sometimes means being good.

Stones' new album a rehash of mediocre tunes of the '70s

By Randy Lynch
WIDB Music Director

The Rolling Stones bill themselves as the "greatest rock 'n' roll band in the world." Many would argue that it isn't the greatest, merely the most famous. Of course, the band's notoriety is well deserved; and with the success of last year's "Emotional Rescue," the peared on "Love You Live" and "Time Waits For No One," a slower tune from "It's Only Rock 'n' Roll" that bears no resemblance to the Stones' sound, save for Jagger's vocals.

So "Sucking In The Seventies" is basically a breather for the Stones, a band that has been known for resting on its laurels. In less than 20 years, they have released 28 albums. Three of those have been live albums, none of which featured any new material. They have also compiled no less than five greatest hits packages, two of which are double albums. Such compilations are USUALLY a treat for fans who just want the hits.

"Sucking In The Seventies" certainly does not qualify as a "treat." Even the greenest, neophyte Stoner can see that the songs here don't represent the Stones' more vital work. There are some undeniably strong songs here, but this compilation can't compare to most of the Stones' studio efforts.

"Sucking In The Seventies" is clearly a profit-oriented venture. Maybe they should have named it after "Everything's Turned To Gold," or at least change it to "Sucking In the Seventies," or just plain...

Review

Sucking In The Seventies. The Rolling Stones. Atlantic Records, Reviewer's Rating: 1 1/2 stars (4 stars tops).

SUCKING IN THE SEVENTIES SUCKING IN THE SEVENTIES

Stones' popularity was rekindled. So why did they release "Sucking In The Seventies?"

When the Stones recorded "Emotional Rescue," it was reported that they had enough songs left over for another entire album. Unfortunately, "Sucking In The Seventies" is not that album. Instead, it is an oddball collection that could be called a greatest hits LP if not for the song selection.

Avid Stones fans will find that only two of the ten cuts on "Sucking In The Seventies" will add anything to their collection. They are "Everything's Turning To Gold," a single from the "Some Girls" period that never appeared on any previous album, and "If I Was A Dancer (Dance Part 2)," the follow up to "Emotional Rescue's" "Dance Part 1." These would make interesting additions to an album of new material, but they aren't strong enough to warrant buying the album.

Except for a live version of "When The Whip Comes Down," the rest of the album is a rehash of the Stones' more mediocre tunes from their last albums of the 70s. "Some Girls" provides the best of the rest with "Shattered" and "Beast of Burden." But why not include "Respectable," "Imagination" or "Miss You."

Perhaps the album is best characterized by the selections culled from "Black and Blue," certainly the Stones' worst LP of the last decade. It is represented here by the ballad "Fool To Cry," "Crazy Mama" (a "Tumblin' Dice" clone), and the reggae-rappin' "Hot Stuff." Somehow "Hand Of Fate," the best tune on "Black and Blue," was ignored.

The album is filled out with a live version of the Muddy Waters blues standard "Mannish Boy" which ap-

Spare change, alcohol sustain transient's life

By Pete Knecht
Staff Writer

After a breakfast of scrambled eggs, sausage and an English muffin in McDonald's, Joe Neal pulled out a makeshift dessert from the pocket of his battered blue down jacket.

"I've got to finish this bottle," he said, holding a pint of Wild Irish Rose wine, three-quarters full. "I'm getting 'the shakes.'"

Neal made no attempt to conceal the bottle from the breakfast crowd. His style of drinking was direct and simple, as was his summary of himself:

"I'm having a problem with alcohol."

Neal, a self-ascribed transient, came to Carbondale two weeks ago from Aurora in search of an alcohol treatment program.

Neal, however, is still living what is now an old way of life, "on the streets, in alleys and in apartment hallways," asking strangers for whatever money they'd part with.

"A lot of people don't believe it, but that's the way it's been for me," said Neal, tipping the bottle of wine. He had previously been living on the streets of the western suburb of Chicago, although his "residences" varied with his mood and the weather.

"Some people who have their heat turned off in their apartments think they have the biggest problems in the world," he continued. "If other people had half the problems I've had, they'd flip out."

His jacket, which sat on a chair at the restaurant, served as a suitcase for his only possessions: a toothbrush, a tube of toothpaste and a warm can of beer he had hoped to trade for a cold one after breakfast.

"You don't see too many people living on the street who carry a toothbrush," he smiled, "but brushing's one thing I was taught to do when I was growing up."

His tan western shirt was given to him by a girl in Gatsby's, he said. He wore blue jeans and thinning suede shoes.

Neal's dark hair hangs over a long gash in the side of his face; a cut he received before coming to Carbondale. He had been sleeping in a railroad car and suddenly woke up as the car started to move. He cut his face after he jumped out of the moving railroad car.

"I don't eat, I drink. This is the first meal I've had in a long time. When I get enough money, I buy this," said Neal, pointing to the bottle. "I think alcohol's nourishing enough."

The previous evening, a preacher had stopped Neal and placed a hand on his shoulder. With faith-healing intentions, the preacher said he would help Neal cure his alcoholism.

In the morning, Neal laughed, he still needed the bottle to ward off the shakes. He said he believes in God, but he didn't take the preacher seriously.

Neal dropped out of high school in 1968. He started partying with an older crowd in his hometown of Mundelein, where he began smoking marijuana. Months later, he was into acid.

Those were the roots of Neal's history with drugs, which he describes as a "helluva history."

Neal said he has dealt marijuana and acid, and he has been addicted to Valium and speed. Alcoholism, arrests, jail sentences and probation have been mixed in.

"I've been arrested 64 times," Neal said soberly. Many have been for disorderly conducts, battery, theft and drugs, he said.

Neal attempted suicide by jumping from a Florida seawall in 1977. For a year, he was paralyzed from the neck down. He gained back almost full bodily control through "willpower," he said.

He has also attempted two drug overdoses. "I think the next time I'm just going to run in front of a train," he said calmly.

"Everything I do I go overboard on. I went overboard on the alcohol and everything fell apart."

Neal spent almost two years recovering in institutions from his paralyzing injury. Much additional time has been spent in various alcohol programs.

Neal spent this winter on the streets, he said, "living here and there, like the Salvation Army and missions." Two terms in "detox," a five day drying-out and counseling period were included. The detoxification programs were like a vacation, with beds, food and heat, he said.

But "what good is it for five days? You're in the same shape

Blood drive seeking donors

A fraternal organization is sponsoring a blood drive this week in Ballroom D of the Student Center.

The drive, which began Monday, is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. It is sponsored by the Arnold Air Society, a fraternal organization of the Air Force ROTC, according to Michael Potts, commander of the society and coordinator of the drive.

professor of aerospace studies said the drive was going "a little slow," and that "from all indications we're falling a little short of our goals."

Christian said the drive is important because "the Red Cross depends on SIU" to fill its blood needs.

Potts said the Red Cross supplies the posters and reserves the room for the drive, and volunteer nurses from the community handle the medical duties of collecting blood.

guitar rhythm to voice the plight of the workaday housewife. A beautiful, yet powerful Foley-Jones duet, "Torchlight," depicts two friend-lover's devotion to each other as the world crumbles around them.

The album's highlight, "In the Killing Hour," is a stirring torch song-march which pictures Foley as a never-say-die crusader proclaiming loyalty to her condemned prisoner-lover. Both "Torchlight" and "In the Killing Hour" show flashes of that familiar Clash revolutionary zeal, with additional touches of individual humanity and passion. Although Strummer-Jones have already achieved international notoriety, they continue to mature as songwriters.

The tunes written by other contributors are equally insightful and fit nicely into the album's structure. "Beautiful Waste of Time" and "Game of a Man," both written by Tylon Dogg, are effective looks at fragile women. Foley's contribution, "Phases of Travel," is powered by straight-ahead energy reminiscent of Elvis Costello's "Get Happy."

The steamy free-verse of "My Legionnaire" evokes visions of Marlene Dietrich in some of her finest films. You can almost envision Foley lying atop a piano in a smoke-filled cabaret as she reminisces about a past romantic encounter.

"Spirit of St. Louis" presents Foley as a multi-faceted vocalist who feels at home in nightclubs or elaborate concert halls. It's her coy sense of style and vocal durability which makes the album's overall intent come together cohesively.

Foley's debut album, "Nightout," was a mainstream girl-rock album which lacked

Art education presentations will feature variety of topics

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

A variety of presentations dealing with art education are scheduled to be given Thursday in the Student Center, during "Spring Celebration III: Excellence in the Arts."

The program, which includes 31 presentations, will cover topics such as visual arts, dance, music, theater, media and literary arts, according to Cecilia Muckelroy, conference chairperson for the Southern regional office of the Illinois State Board of Education, the sponsor of the event.

"I think many of these presentations are very relevant to a lot of students," she said. "Anyone studying speech, art, drama or media will find them quite interesting."

"Elementary and secondary education students will also benefit from the many presentations that are geared toward the future of art education," she said.

The program will be divided into four 45-minute sessions, starting at 9:35 a.m., 10:45 a.m., 11:45 a.m. and 12:40 p.m. In the first three sessions several presentations will be given by educators and educational administrators from schools and organizations throughout Illinois and neighboring states, Muckelroy said.

The fourth session will feature performances of drama and music by primary and secondary students from five Southern Illinois schools. Also scheduled for the fourth session is a keynote address entitled "Arts Education: What's Ahead?" by Bennett Tartelet, director of the Alliance for Arts Education at the John F. Kennedy Center in Washington D.C.

Registration for the presentations will be held from 8 to 9 a.m. in Ballroom D of the Student Center, although anyone may attend a presentation without registering, Muckelroy said. Anyone wishing to see a complete schedule of the presentations to be given should contact the campus office of the Illinois State Board of Education, located in Pulliam Hall, or stop by the Student Center on Thursday, she said.

Finding nude models poses problems for School of Art

By Sue Jamieson
Student Writer

Every semester Tilly Vaughn gets desperate.

Vaughn is the secretary in the School of Art's graduate advisement office, and each semester she is responsible for hiring nude models for art classes. Nude models are hard to come by, so Vaughn has to advertise and talk it up for weeks. The School of Art needs the models because "drawing nude models comes No. 1 after circles and squares," she said.

Vaughn has had some bad experience with obscene phone calls, so she never puts the School of Art's phone number in the ads. She also refuses to give the addresses and phone numbers of her models for the same reasons.

Faculty and students alike love to kid Vaughn about this job. They tease her by asking if she makes models disrobe when they apply for the job. "If anyone says anything dirty about it, I'll sock him," she warned.

Vaughn said the model "has to be dependable, on time, appealing as an object, but still have enough personality to make you want to draw him or her." All models must be enrolled as students, though not necessarily in art.

Nancy Moate, senior in agriculture, is one of the nude models this semester. She likes the job because "it's the best paying student job on campus." Models get paid the minimum wage of student workers and they collect a lab fee, increasing their salaries to $4.50 an hour.

Moate likes the people and enjoys listening to the teachers' critiques of students' work. Modeling nude has helped her "look at the world a little bit more closely."

Vaughn said that models do get nervous and embarrassed, and some never show up, but "it's just the first few minutes that you have to get used to." She said that one model got so when you get out," he said. "It doesn't make sense."

Neal's skills acquired from former jobs include house painting, type setting and upholstery and repair of furniture. He was last employed in 1979 as an assembly line tester for a manufacturer of stereos in Mundelein.

"I didn't make anything out of my life, but my sisters did," Neal conceded. His older sister is a professor of theology in Florida. His younger sister is a music teacher in California. Neal's father died five years ago; his mother died three years ago.

"My sisters don't want anything to do with me," he said. "They still talk to me, but they don't want me in their lives."

Neal wants to get off alcohol, he said, as he walked with a slight limp along South Illinois Avenue. But he wants to enter an extended program before he gets serious about quitting the bottle.

He was heading uptown to "spare change" enough cash for another bottle. On the average, Neal can collect $8 to $12 a day from passers-by. Most of those who contribute afford him 25 to 75 cents.

"Spare changing in this town is hard," Neal griped through cigarette smoke. "Everyone has the same story. I'm a student. I barely make it myself. Then you see them walk into a bar."

He gets many free drinks in bars just "by rapping" with bartenders and other patrons. He said it is best to approach people leaving bars, rather than those entering them.

By being an alcoholic, "I've learned I'm not better, but I've learned I'm not worse either," he said. "I may be an alcoholic, but that doesn't make me worse."

"I know what I want to do," Neal reflected. "I want to be a counselor for people who are paralyzed."

A doctor once told him it would be a million-to-one chance that he'd even smoke a cigarette again under his own power after his paralyzing injury.

His life turned the way it did through "all the drugs and not taking work seriously," he said.

"I've gotten to where institutions have taken care of me so much that I depend on them."

"People talk about hitting bottom," Neal sighed. "I don't think people have ever seen bottoms like I've had. It's not your average growing-up life."

And he continued along "The Strip" to collect spare change.

SIU-C's library became one of four research and reference centers in an "Illinet" plan funded by the Illinois State Library in Springfield. Morris Library, the University of Illinois Library, the Chicago Public Library and the Illinois State Library opened their shelves to Illinois residents in a statewide interlibrary loan program.

In 1967, Morris Library was elected to membership in the Association of Research Libraries, a select group of 111 research libraries that must meet financial, staff and collection standards.

OCLC is a non-profit computer network system based in Columbus, Ohio.

Morris Library joined OCLC in 1974. Now a consortium of 2,000 libraries in the nation, members of this group have computer access to 7.25 million records of bibliographical information from which to make card catalogs. A library also may request interlibrary loans as a part of the OCLC subsystem.

As long as the state's economy was in good health, funds continued to trickle down to Morris Library and the collections rapidly continued to grow. As the library grew, McCoy and other University officials had visions of adding a 23-story tower.

In 1969, books were moved into storage at the Good Luck Glove Factory on Washington Street and the LRS film collection was moved to the Baptist Foundation Building.

McCoy suggested that the basement, second and third floors of the library be enlarged with the addition of the 23-story tower. In the plan the LRS and the humanities and social studies libraries would be expanded.

The remaining floors of the tower "would be used as storage stacks for all subject libraries, easily accessible by high-speed elevators, a conveyor system and telecommunication. On ground level there would be a through passage between the old and new buildings, but at basement, second and third levels, they would be joined," McCoy wrote in his 1968 proposal.

"When artists are intense, it's easier for me," he said. "Comfortable poses make the time pass easier." Parent often does Frisbee poses, since he is an avid Frisbee fan. "Sometimes I pose and the artists like it a lot, and things just work out," he said.

Parent's nude modeling at a commercial graphics night class almost led to a professional career. He had a photographer take some pictures which he sent to the Shirley Hamilton Talent Agency in Chicago. The next

Another model that poses for the drawing and painting classes is David Parent. While he was in the service, Parent frequented Black's Beach, a nude beach in San Diego. In junior college, he told a friend about his adventures and the friend suggested nude modeling.

Parent lined up a drawing session for himself. "My biggest concern was that I wouldn't know what pose to do," he said.

Parent has been modeling for 3½ years. The longest stint he had was 106 hours in a period of nine weeks. He posed for a

Mine owners see talks delay

By The Associated Press

Several coal mine owners said Wednesday it could be weeks before bargaining resumes with the striking United Mine Workers union, while some union officials said a fistfight between President Sam Church and his safety director had given their organization a black eye.

Scattered picketing continued in the coalfields, but there were no reports of violence.

Church, who has called the union's 39-member Bargaining Council to meet with him Friday in Washington, mixed it up with Everett Acord on the street Tuesday outside the union's Washington offices. They apparently were fighting over a letter Acord wrote to ranking union officers complaining about Church's decision to lay off union safety officials, including Acord.

"He called me a no-good, rotten SOB and Lord knows what else," Acord said Wednesday.

Acord said he invited the stocky, 250-pound union president to step outside after Church began to "manhandle" him during an argument over the layoffs.

pletely under their control. Dailey's voice becomes pained when he talks about it.

"For 10 years, we never heard anything about money being a problem," Dailey explained. "The Physical Plant was paying me for doing this. Then last year, the plant said they couldn't pay for it."

According to Dailey, his hours were cut back to four per day last summer and his $4,500 groundskeeping salary now comes out of Jones' baseball budget. Dailey quickly points out that the budgetary belt-tightening shows up in blemishes on the field that annoy and frustrate him. The infield grass in particular is more patchy than in previous seasons.

"Before, during the summer, I'd keep the sprinklers going for the grass," Dailey said. "Last summer, I couldn't do it. It got so hot that the grass couldn't come back."

"Like this bad spot here," he said, pointing just behind the home plate area. "I would have had it ready for spring, but now, they fight to see who'll pay."

Although Dailey takes pride in his one-man gang approach, he is realistic as well.

"Abe Martin came down here one time, and he was really disappointed with the way things looked," Dailey said. "I tried to explain to him that there's no way that one man can take good care of the field with just four hours a day."

Dailey has been working roughly eight hours per day since the season started, and said that he'll stay with the eight hour schedule until May. After that, he is uncertain.

"This is the first year Itch has had to take money out of his budget to pay me," he said. "He has to work all day and then worry about my money, too."

But Dailey's love affair with his work and the people he comes in contact with provide ample incentive.

"It hurts me for them to miss a game because of the rain," he said. "I guess that shows how much I like the game. I used to tease the players and tell them I'd give them a bag of Beechnut whenever they hit a home run. They'd run around the bases, and when they looked at me, I'd smile like hell."

Pirate called 'Baby Whale' by Sox sportscaster Piersall

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Did broadcaster Jim Piersall really call Pittsburgh Pirate Dave Parker a "baby whale" on the air?

Does Parker really care? The Pirate stammer, who admittedly has beefed up over the off-season, shrugs off the controversy and says critics should watch his line drives, not his waistline.

"We open the season Thursday and I'm prepared to play every day," Parker told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette before the team left Bradenton, Fla., Tuesday. "I want to play every day for my teammates, for (Manager) Chuck Tanner and myself."

In the club's media guide, the 6-foot-5 Parker is listed at 230 pounds.

When he reported to spring training, Parker said he had bulked up by about 25 pounds during the off-season while recovering from knee surgery.

"Yeah, I'm 255," he told the press. "What did you expect? All I did for two months was sit around the house. Did you think I'd lose weight when I couldn't exercise?"

This spring, Parker's activity was limited by his recovery from the knee surgery. He now says he weighs less than 250 pounds.

However, Piersall's estimates were higher as he watched Parker play in a spring game Monday against the White Sox. And Piersall, an announcer for the White Sox, reportedly blasted Parker on the air.

Piersall confirmed his on-the-air statements about Parker to Post-Gazette baseball writer Charley Feeney. He said he later spoke to Parker personally.

"I told him I called him a baby hippo or a baby whale, whatever," Piersall said.

"I told him that he should be ashamed of his condition. I told him he must weigh 260, 270 pounds."

Piersall also said, "I told him I watched him play for six years and he was one of the greatest in the game. I told him he was doing himself or baseball no good by being overweight."

Parker gave the newspaper a different version of his talk with Piersall. He said the White Sox broadcaster had denied ever making the critical remarks.

"Some of our players heard him deny it," said Parker. "But it makes no difference. He's a sick man. I know some of the players with the White Sox who would like to punch out his lights."

Parker played in 12 of 26 exhibition games this spring, batting .270 with three homers and nine RBI. Due to a slightly pulled groin muscle, he missed the Pirates final exhibition game Tuesday.

He stood by his pledge that he would let his statistics do the talking.

"Let them look at my stats in October," he said. "I'll be right up there. There won't be any critics after I put my stats together."

also pick up the rear. Vierke said there will also be police at each intersection, and water for the runners at the midway point.

Some SIU-C students will participate, Vierke said, but runners have also come from as far away as Mississippi, Indiana and upstate Illinois, as well as "fitness runners trying to stay in shape."

But the best race may come in the men's division where two local marathon runners will go head-to-head in the Lifestyling race for the first time. Vierke said Chris Waythomas, winner of the St. Louis Marathon last month, and a qualifier for the Boston Marathon, will face Steve Harworth, also a local runner.

Baseball victory a full-blown success

By Dave Kane
Associate Sports Editor

The flag beyond the center field fence at Abe Martin Field was nearly straight out all Wednesday afternoon, an indication of just how hard the wind was blowing toward left field. Appropriately enough, the SIU-C baseball team provided the sparse crowd with a full-blown 11-3 thumping of Southeast Missouri State.

"The last two days, it's been horrible," said Saluki Coach Itchy Jones. "Windy weather is a nightmare in baseball. Players don't mind the cold nearly as much as they mind it being windy."

Unlike the previous day, when SIU-C stranded 14 baserunners in a 7-5 loss to Murray State, Wednesday's win made the constant gusts a little more bearable for Jones and the Salukis. In fact, a couple of wind-blown SIU-C fly balls turned into home runs—one by catcher Gary Kempton and one by second baseman Bobby Doerr.

Doerr's homer, a two-run shot, came with no outs and Mike Robertson on second base in the bottom of the sixth. Robertson had led off the inning with a double, and Doerr's home run, his second in as many days, gave the Salukis a 7-3 lead.

Kempton, shaking off the effects of a concussion he suffered during a game against St. Louis University Monday, was allowed to start by Jones just prior to game time, and promptly gave SIU-C a 2-1 lead

Kurt Reid hustles back to first base to beat the pickoff throw from Southeast Missouri State pitcher Steve Garrow to first baseman

Steve Williams in the second inning with a two-run homer after teammate P.J. Schranz led off with a walk. The game also provided SIU-C sophomore lefthander Rick Wysocki with his first start since March 13 after being sidelined with arm trouble. He allowed one run and three hits, and struck out three and walked two in three innings. Righthander Harold Brown took over in the fourth inning, and was credited with the win to improve to 3-1. SIU-C's three-run fifth inning made Brown's victory possible. Doerr led off with a single and went to second when SEMO third baseman Jeff Reinagel's throw to first got away. Designated hitter Dwayne Flowers then singled home Doerr. Schranz followed with a single that sent Flowers to third, and after Schranz stole second, Reinagel made another error on a ball hit by Kempton to allow Flowers and Schranz to score SIU-C's sixth and seventh runs. Mike Blumhorst followed with a single that sent Indian starting pitcher Steve Garrow to the dugout. Rob Clark relieved Brown in the sixth, and Ken Klump pitched the eighth and ninth innings for the Salukis, who are 15-8.

Road racers expected at lifestyling run

Some of Southern Illinois' best distance runners are expected to compete in the fourth annual Lifestyling 10,000-meter roadrun and two-mile run Saturday on the SIU-C campus.

The race will highlight a week of wellness programs sponsored by the Student Wellness Resource Center, according to Scott Vierke, lifestyling program director.

The 10,000-meter race (6.2 miles) will begin in front of the Health Service at 9 a.m.

Over 400 runners are expected to attend "the biggest road race in Southern Illinois," by volume," Vierke said. "This race starts off the road-racing season in this area."

SIU-C President Albert Somit will fire the starting gun and Bruce Swinburne will be master of the award ceremonies following the race, Vierke said.

All participants will receive a T-shirt and certificate, with the winners in each division given a special trophy, and top male and female couple receiving a special award.

Age classifications in the race will range from 16 and younger to 60 and older.

Vierke said the new faster, flatter course will go from the Health Center to McLafferty Road, then north on McLafferty Road to Chautauqua Street, west to Roden Road, south to Reservoir Road, east to McLafferty Road, then back up McLafferty Road to Small Group Housing, and around the one-way street finishing at the Health Service.

Ballpark boasts a one-man ground crew

By Dave Kane
Associate Sports Editor

The jargon of his profession isn't very confusing. In fact, 54-year-old Leo Dailey is about as grass-roots an individual as you'll run into around the SIU-C campus. His job isn't the most glamorous, either, but he wouldn't have it any other way.

Dailey, a Herrin native, has been the groundskeeper at Abe Martin Field for the past 11 years. He has put in more time at the ball park than all the members of the Hill Gang combined. He is an admitted Saluki fan, also, and no one could accuse him of being a fair-weather fan. He has to contend with Mother Nature every day.

Dailey's is essentially a one-man operation, which is amazing when compared to the groundskeeping crews of most major league stadiums. Abe Martin Field is one of major-league proportions.

His resources are limited, also. There is no tarpaulin to keep the infield dry in case of rain, and the small tractor that's already been overhauled three times isn't always available.

Nevertheless, Dailey takes pride in the fact that he's able to leave his personal touch on the playground the Salukis call home.

"If the players offer to help me a little sometimes, it's fine," said Dailey one rainy afternoon, his boots splattered with mud. "But it's mainly my job. My main concern is that it's ready to go to play ball. It always makes me feel good when people say, 'boy, the field sure looks sharp.'"

Dailey is a University employee who, when not at the ball park, is "doing landscaping or sometimes moving furniture." But his attention is focused on the baseball field roughly eight months a year. For those eight months, his designated overseer is Saluki Coach Itchy Jones. Labor relations have been good.

"Itchy doesn't bother me when I'm doing my job, and I sure don't bother him when he does his," said Dailey. "He lets me take care of it the way I want to. I've been happy with it. I wouldn't be down here for 11 years otherwise."

The elements have been Dailey's day-to-day adversary. The sun and wind have left their marks on his weathered face and hands. He seems to draw extra adrenalin with such challenges, as was the case last Saturday when he sloshed around a muddy infield sopping up as much water as possible with a few towels.

"You just sop it up and hope you get a little sun," he said. "Then you drag it with the tractor. If you get a good wind, it dries it up. If we don't get any rain tonight, it'll be 100 percent ready to go in the morning."

Even though it rained again that night, the Salukis did get to play their doubleheader Sunday afternoon. Dailey usually gets up with the birds on game days. "Getting it 100 percent ready inside the fence" is Dailey's credo.

"The players are out here about 11 or 11:30 in the morning to practice," Dailey said as he described his schedule. "The day before I usually concentrate on getting the grass cut."

"I usually get here about six in the morning on game days. I drag the field, rake it, sweep it a little, then put the bases out. That takes a good four to five hours right there. Then I pick up the trash off of where the Hill Gang sits and get a hold of the Physical Plant to pick it up."

The day-to-day work draws most of Dailey's attention. But Dailey and Jones have problems that aren't com-

Golfers to play 54 holes in EKV outing

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

The Saluki men's golf team is looking for strong individual performances from two or three of its players in the Colonel Classic at Eastern Kentucky University Saturday and Sunday, according to Coach Jim Reburn.

The Salukis will face 23 teams, including Ohio State, Western Kentucky, Eastern Kentucky, Ohio, Bowling Green, West Virginia, Purdue, Indiana State and Murray State.

"It's a good field with some class teams competing," Reburn said, "but the competition won't be near the level that we've been playing against."

Ohio State, the winner of last year's tournament, will provide the toughest opposition, Reburn said. Eastern Kentucky also will be a strong contender for first place.

"Ohio State is a national power and the favored team going into the tournament," Reburn said.

Salukis John Schaefer, Butch Poshard, Rich Jarrett and

Robert Hammond will be making the trip to Richmond, Ky., and either Tom Jones or Doug Clemens will round out the SIU-C roster to the required five players for the tournament.

"John should have a fine tournament," Reburn said, "even though he had a little trouble in Alabama. He's a fine player."

The tournament in Alabama last week was Schaefer's first appearance in the Saluki lineup this season. Schaefer was sidelined by a broken finger on his left hand, and had not played for about five weeks.

Jarrett has played well in the Colonel Classic in the past, Reburn said, and should have some good rounds.

"We have to get down to that 300 mark or better," Reburn said. "We'll probably finish in the upper half of the field, maybe eighth."

The Salukis will shot 54 holes in the two-day tournament. The 6,700-yard, par-72 course will not be as difficult as previous courses SIU-C has played this season, Reburn said, but it is still a tough course.
