Brown to propose tuition increase

By Brandi Tipps
and Christine Leniger Administration Writers

SIUC Acting Chancellor James Brown will propose a 9.9 percent tuition increase for SIUC to the Board of Trustees today.

If the increase is adopted by the board, it would add $1.2 million a year to available funding.

The 9.9 percent increase includes a statewide 4-percent increase proposed by the Illinois Board of Higher Education Jan. 2 and a 5.9-percent increase proposed by SIUC President John C. Guyon.

Undergraduate Student Government, however, has asked students to attend today's Board of Trustees meeting to protest Guyon's proposal for a tuition increase.

Jack Sullivan, USG president, said if students let the board know they are opposed to the tuition hike by showing up at the meeting, it will make board members think twice about ratifying such an increase.

"Students are always saying they have no say in what goes on in the University," Sullivan said. "Now is their chance to show they don't want a tuition increase by attending the meeting."

"USG hopes that by students attending the meeting, the board will have a chance to see the people who will be affected by their dictation. Likewise, the students will be able to see those who dictate their college lives," he said.

Brown said SIUC needs additional funding to strengthen undergraduate program quality, such as more library materials, computing resources, quality faculty and staff and instructional equipment.

SIUC also needs $8.7 million for salary increases and $1.1 million for miscellaneous items such as the undergraduate student work fund, according to a report by the president's Budget Advisory Committee.

Guyon said he will propose the additional 5.9-percent percent increase to the board because the University does not know how much revenue will be generated by raising the tuition cap from 12 to 15 semester hours, which also is to be proposed at the board meeting.

Currently, students who are enrolled in 12 hours of classes pay the same as those enrolled in 15 or more hours. The proposal would make students pay for the extra three hours above 12.

"It will provide a little cushion for the University," Guyon said.

Brown said tuition at SIUC is $361 below the average of other colleges and universities, $615 below University of Illinois at Champaign and $172 below Northern Illinois University and Illinois State University.

The increases from the modified cap and the additional 5.9 percent increase over the IBHE recommendation would meet the immediate needs of the University, Brown said.

But even if the board passes the tuition increases, does not

SIUC soon to get debit card system

By Brandi Tipps
Administration Writer

SIUC officials say a new point-of-sale system could be operational on campus by the end of next week.

The point-of-sale system works by using an ATM card when purchasing merchandise or paying bursar bills to debit a student's bank account, said John C. Guyon, SIUC president.

The point-of-sale card is not a credit card, Guyon said. The money has to be in the student's account when the transaction is made.

William Capie, acting vice president for financial affairs, said the system should be on-line within a week at the University Bookstore, the Arena concert ticket office and the Bursar's Office.

The bookstore and Bursar's Office already have the new terminals and are waiting for the signing of the Legal Merchants agreement between the University and First National Bank, Capie said.

The agreement sets up the terms for payment between the bank and the University and sets the terms for where the money is to be deposited, Capie said.

The Arena concert ticket office already has a credit card system and does not need a new terminal because it can go on-line with some minor changes to the software, he said.

The system was expected to go on-line about a week ago, but the University still is negotiating some changes in the agreement, Capie said.

Last year when the University proposed using the current student Validine ID cards as debit cards, it went ahead and leased the equipment to do so.

The debit card system would have allowed students to deposit

Clinton: Caterpillar should not hire replacements for striking workers

PEORIA (UPI) — The strike by more than 12,000 unionized workers against Caterpillar Inc. drew support Wednesday from Democratic presidential front-runner Bill Clinton, who said the heavy equipment maker would make a mistake if it hires replacements for strikers.

Earlier in the day, Caterpillar Chairman Donald Fites won stockholder support of his handling of the bitter 5-month-old walkout and blocked union officials from making their case during a Wilmington, Del., meeting.

United Auto Workers Secretary-Treasurer Bill Casstevens twice tried to put the union's stance before the shareholders.

"You told your side," Casstevens said.

"We're entitled to share our side with the shareholders."

"This is a shareholders' meeting, not a press conference," Fites said. "You're out of order."

In Washington, 15 members of the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources, including Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., called on Labor Secretary Lynn Martin to appoint a neutral mediator to settle the walkout, and the company and union to meet with that person without preconditions.

"We fear... that use of the 'permanent replacement' weapon will convert this extended work stoppage into a far more

Edgar's proposed budget could cost city $534,800

By Teri Lynn Carlock
City Writer

Carbondale will lose $534,800 in surcharge revenue if Gov. Jim Edgar's budget proposal is adopted—another possible cut in the city's declining funds.

The Carbondale City Council adopted a $30.4 million budget Tuesday night, but city officials say it will need to be amended because of the state's tight budget.

Edgar proposed a lean $28.6 billion budget Tuesday to help the state recover from past overspending and the recession. But the budget also would deny local governments their share of the income tax surcharge.

Carbondale Finance Director Paul Sorgen said the money the city will lose if the surcharge is eliminated will affect many of the city's projects.

"Since they sprung this on us all at once, we'll have to take funding from other

Dawgs win, lose in typical fashion

By Scott Wuerz
Sports Writer

The baseball Salukis continued their on-again-off-again play Wednesday at Abe Martin Field by splitting a doubleheader with Eastern Illinois.

The Dawgs downed the Panthers in the first game 8-6 but were unable to adjust to EIU starter Craig Jones in the late game and dropped the contest 5-0.

SIUC coach Sam Riggelman said the split was a result of excellent efforts from both teams.

In the opener the Salukis rallied from a 2-0 deficit in the third inning to bat around and score four runs. Pitcher-turned-designated hitter Tony Giese led off the inning with a single and went to second on an infield grounder by catcher Dave Bernhard. Center fielder Leland Macon walked and the runners scored on consecutive singles by shortstop Clint Smothers and leftfielder Pete Schlosser. First baseman Darin Barton doubled in two runs, and second baseman Jeff Cwynar's single knocked in the Dawgs' final run of the inning.

The Panthers threatened with a pair of runs in the fourth but were unable to retake the lead as the Salukis scored four more in the bottom half of the frame.

Saluki starter Bobby Richardson earned the victory in game one. He gave up seven hits and two runs in 4 1/3 innings while striking out four and walking two.

In game two, the Dawgs fell victim to another power outage as EIU starter Craig Jones subdued Saluki hitters with a complete game shutout.

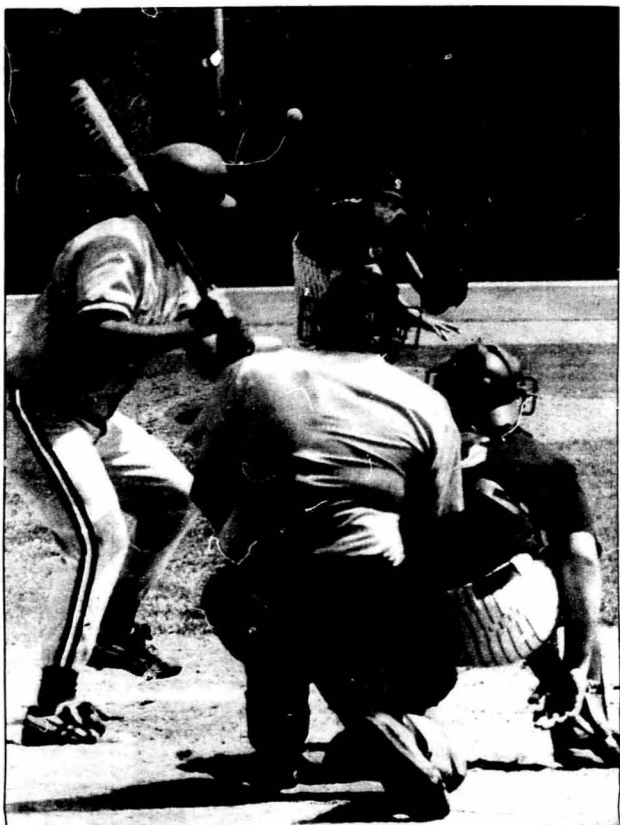

The Panthers jumped on SIUC starter Mike McArdle for three runs in the first inning and never looked back. Jones allowed only five hits—two to Saluki left fielder Ed Janke—while striking out two and walking no one.

Riggelman said the Panther starter kept hitters off balance with an excellent pitching performance. "He did a great job spotting the ball and changing speeds," he said. "Sometimes you've got to be willing to concede the other guy just has it and there's not a whole lot you can do about it."

Riggelman said the Dawgs were able to make some progress despite the loss because pitchers Henry Lemieux and John Etzel turned in quality relief performances. Lemieux, pitching for the second time in two days, threw 1 1/3 innings, giving up no runs as he continues to rehabilitate from what Riggelman called serious arm injuries.

The Salukis record stands at 12-16 with the split. The Dawgs play Murray State today before taking on Missouri Valley Conference foe Bradley at Abe Martin field for a doubleheader Saturday and a single game Sunday.

Olympic official urges republics to move slowly

KIEV, Ukraine (UPI) — International Olympic Committee President Juan Antonio Samaranch Wednesday expressed high hopes for eventual independent Olympic teams from Ukraine and other C.I.S. republics but cautioned against moving too quickly to sever sports ties built under the Soviet system. Samaranch said the gradual move to sports independence for the former Soviet republics—with 12 now-independent states competing as a "Unified Team" one last time this summer in Barcelona—was a good compromise for both the Olympic movement and the republics in the aftermath

Former Grand Slam champion reluctantly reveals AIDS secret

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former tennis great Arthur Ashe, angry that his secret was going to be made public, confirmed Wednesday that he has AIDS.

Ashe, the first black man to win a Grand Slam championship, told a jammed news session he developed the disease from a blood transfusion nearly nine years ago, and he has known of it since 1988. At that time, he thought he would be dead within three years.

"I read that 90 percent of those diagnosed with AIDS are out of here in three years, and that's the way I thought," he said. "But I saw I wasn't getting sick. We're still learning about the disease, and I'm living proof that what was thought to be the case as recently as three years ago isn't nearly the case. Early intervention can do wonders."

Ashe, calm, composed and soft-spoken, nevertheless expressed resentment that he was pressured to reveal to the world that he has AIDS. He was forced to do so, he explained, because he knew USA Today was going to publish a story on him.

"Someone ratted on me," he said with a small attempt at a smile. "It put me in the unenviable position of having to lie if I wanted to protect our privacy. No one should have to make that choice. I am sorry that I have been forced to make this revelation now. After all, I am not running for some office of public trust, nor do I have stockholders to account to.

"It is only that I fall under the dubious umbrella of 'public figure.' I am not sick, and I can function very well in all that I have been involved in for the past several years."

Ashe, 48, and wearing a grey suit with white shirt and red tie, was flanked by his wife of 15 years, Jeanne, a photographer, and New York mayor David Dinkins. At one point while reading a prepared statement, Ashe paused for a full minute when he came to a reference to his adopted 5-year-old daughter, Camera.

"Camera already knows that perfect strangers come up to daddy on the street and say 'hi,'" Jeanne said, picking up her husband's notes. "Beginning tonight, Arthur and I must teach her

O'Neal's father denies getting $10 million offer

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Shaquille O'Neal's father criticized LSU coach Dale Brown Wednesday for saying that his son has been offered a $10 million contract to endorse a brand of athletic shoes.

Sgt. Phillip Harrison, who serves in the U.S. Army in San Antonio, Texas, told the New Orleans Times Picayune that Brown "is not a truthful man" because "we have no contract and no offer. We haven't even talked to anybody about shoes."

Brown's assertion that L.A. Gear shoes had offered a four-year contract to O'Neal in return for his endorsement of the company's footwear was published in a San Antonio newspaper.

"I'm kind of disappointed, because I thought he (Brown) was the kind of person who wouldn't comment when he didn't have the facts," O'Neal said.

SIUC rugby players no fools in tournament play

By Thomas Gibson
Sports Writer

The SIUC Rugby Club advanced to the championship of the second annual All Fools tournament at Abe Martin field, but the Chicago Blaze team was too hot to handle.

SIUC's A-team advanced to the final game Sunday before Chicago Blaze City defeated it 18-6.

Junior James Neuber said Chicago's forwards maintained possession consistently.

"The whole team has strong defense," he said.

The Blaze is one of the better teams in Chicago and the toughest team SIUC has ever played, Neuber said.

SIUC's A team defeated the University of Illinois at Chicago

30-6 Saturday in the first round. Junior Kurt Francisovich and Neuber scored tries against UIC.

The same day SIUC returned to trounce Paducah City Club 44-6. Against Paducah, tries were scored by Francisovich, Neuber and junior Shane Cole.

SIUC had two A-side teams competing along with one B team. Senior Frank Silva said the Rugby team uses its A teams to play the opposing teams' best players and the B team for back up.

SIUC entered a B-side team in the A-side bracket of the tournament. The B-side team scored surprising victories over Eastern Illinois, 26-19, and Purdue, 16-4.

SIUC also entered a C-side team in the B-side tournament. They recorded a 14-6 victory over Purdue.

"I wasn't surprised, by the way. Purdue isn't that good," Silva said.

The Rugby Club is self funded and receives no additional aid from the NCAA or the school, Silva said.

He said the team pays for the tournament, travel, food, and hotel cost. To enter the tournament each team has to pay $250.

ARAFAT SAFE AFTER EMERGENCY LANDING—Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat was found "safe and sound" Wednesday in the Libyan desert after his plane made an emergency landing during a sandstorm, PLO officials said. The plane carrying Arafat was found about 14 hours after disappearing from radar screens during a sandstorm that forced it to land about 60 miles southeast of a Palestinian guerrilla camp that Arafat reportedly planned to visit.

Soyinka speaks to SIUC audience on humanity's struggle for liberty

By Christine Leniger
Special Assignment Writer

A Nobel Laureate Tuesday said often in the struggle for liberty, the blade of power is turned inward.

Wole Soyinka, 1986 Nobel prize winner in literature, spoke about the struggle between power and liberty during a public lecture sponsored by local businesses and various University organizations and offices.

Soyinka read from his work, "Mandela's Earth and Other Poems," about Nelson Mandela upon receiving conditional release from prison refused release stating, "liberty is not conditional."

"I am not a prisoner of this rock, this island. . . I am this rock, this island," Soyinka read from the book.

Clarisse Zimra, coordinator of Soyinka's visit to SIUC, said the diverse crowd's reaction to the readings was highly emotional.

"After he finished reading the poem dedicated to Nelson Mandela, people were crying silent tears," Zimra said.

Originally from Nigeria, Soyinka has blazed a trail of hope for fellow Nigerians and others who can relate to his works with their own struggles, said Antonio Washington, coordinator for Black Affairs Council.

"His readings touch each person individually," Washington said.

Wole Soyinka

"Personally, I got a sense of achievement in everyone's struggles. For instance, he mentioned Mandela and Muhammad Ali.

"Each person he mentioned in his readings had a certain crisis to deal with and through their struggles came their strengths, which relates to what I am going through in my own life," Washington said.

Soyinka came to the United States after spending some time in Europe where he saw the opening of one of his plays and the first black theater in London.

Soyinka called his perception of the world, "The Yoruba world view," which he exhibited through the reading of excerpts from some of his many poems, plays, novels and his autobiography.

His first reading of the Yoruba world view as defined in his play, "A Dance of the Forests," listed three worlds in functional existence: the worlds of ancestors, living and the unborn.

Clarisse Zimra, professor of English and coordinator of Soyinka's visit to SIUC, said what is meant by the three worlds is that different cultures explain the universal questions in different ways.

"Although he was raised a Christian and taught there are two worlds, this world and the after world, he never stopped believing in the Yoruba religion's version of the human place in the universe," Zimra said. "The Yoruba believe the universe was created when the first god, Ogun, broke through the horrible chaos and emerged with a new wisdom that believes the forces of creation and destruction work together."

The world of our ancestors consists of those who have gone before us and protect us. The living world is the world as it exists to people now living, and the world of unborn is the world of those people who have not been born, Zimra said.

His most recent novel, "Ake—the Years of Childhood," is the biographical story of Soyinka growing

Student in stable condition following explosion

By Casey Hampton
General Assignment Writer

A 27-year-old Nigerian graduate student from SIUE is in stable condition at St. Louis University Hospital following an explosion and chemical fire in a research lab Tuesday.

More than 150 students were evacuated from the science building after the explosion and several were treated on an outpatient basis for minor smoke and fume inhalation, said Samuel Smith, director of SIUE university news service.

Classes in the building were cancelled Wednesday for intense decontamination by OHM Corporation, an environmental clean-up contractor from O'Fallon, Mo. The Environmental Protection Agency will conduct a follow-up inspection when the firm's clean-up is complete.

Classes are expected to resume as normal Thursday, Smith said.

The explosion occurred at 3:18 p.m. in the lab on the second floor of the building while two students were working under a fume hood and the graduate assistant supervised from a nearby table.

A small chemical fire was extinguished by a professor across the hall who heard the explosion before the fire department arrived, Smith said.

The only severe damage occurred to the fume hood.

"The explosion was confined to the research lab and other chemicals in the room were not damaged," he said. "So it was not a major blow-out."

The two students under the fume hood were released after being treated for minor injuries and facial lacerations. The graduate student suffered more severe facial lacerations and eye injuries and remains in the hospital in stable condition, Smith said.

Officials have been unsuccessful in locating the family of the graduate student, whose name has not been released.

"We still don't know why the explosion occurred because we haven't been able to interview the supervising graduate assistant," Smith said. "He should be able to shed some light on it."

USG election fiasco ill-serves University

UNDERGRADUATE STUDENT GOVERNMENT chose its 1992 election date last week—nearly six months too late, according to USG's own bylaws. The student senate's failure to live up to its own regulations shines light on the disorganization within its ranks.

On April 29, student voters will cast ballots in an election whose target date has gone undecided for half a year. Somewhere a gap occurred between USG's executives, senators and commissions, and the necessity of a timely, well-planned election fell into that gap and was lost. The Oct. 15 deadline for the senate to create an election commission passed without much notice.

WHEN THE RESPONSIBILITY PASSED TO USG President Jack Sullivan, the commission was not appointed until February. A minor dispute between Sullivan and Election Commissioner Yusuf Haqq delayed the vote further: Sullivan picked April 23; Haqq argued, correctly, for an April 29 election to allow candidates more time to fire up their campaign machines.

In a large representative body, motions and legislation can sometimes get tangled, and one concern can be pushed to the back burner in favor of another. But choosing an election date and setting the election process in motion should be the first concern on a campus where the student electorate rolls over every year.

IF AN ELECTION DATE CANNOT BE SET on time under current regulations, perhaps USG should review those regulations. A standing election date written into the USG constitution would surely save quite a few headaches for senators and the students they represent.

When state governments miss legal deadlines, as the Illinois General Assembly did in its budget deliberations last summer, havoc is usually what follows. The consequences of USG's fumble are not so drastic. But as the undergraduate body's elected voice to the SIUC administration, USG owes it to the University to straighten out its election process.

Increase U of I faculty's salary

program:

Chancellor Morton Weir has said units that are university-wide or that fulfill the research mission of U of I would not be cut. Exempting research units would be just another example of Liberal Arts and other such students being sacrificed to the university's research machine, and this is why students have to be involved in the decision.

The state's budget crisis has shown the university cannot remain as is if it wants to continue providing a quality education. Program cuts are needed for the university to receive the funds it needs, and if salaries can be increased because of the cuts, that's all the better.

But a snip-snip here and a cut-cut there will not be acceptable. Non-technical students should not be made the primary targets while research programs are not hit

Even though U of I has taken severe budget cuts during the past two years, university officials said two weeks ago that faculty and staff might receive a 5 percent salary increase.

But because the university and the state are strapped for cash, some officials hinted that the salary increase would come at the expense of university programs.

A 5 percent salary increase is desperately needed, since paltry increases over the last two years have not even kept up with cost-of-living increases.

Cutting programs to provide for the 5 percent increase will probably be a reality, but students should be involved in any decisions to cut programs so non-research-oriented curricula are not sacrificed for more technical

Commentary

Not even 'none of the above' is best choice in '92 campaign

"I think I got this election figured out," said Slat Grobnik. "There ain't none of them any good."

Does that mean you don't care for either Bill Clinton or Jerry Brown?

"No, I mean all of them."

You mean there isn't one Democrat you think is fit to be president?

"That's right. And no Republican, either."

Let me see if I understand you. There is no candidate from either party who satisfies you? Then you must be for H. Ross Perot, who is thinking of running as an independent.

"No, I don't like him, either. Or any other independent candidate."

Don't you think that you are being overly critical and demanding? After all, you aren't a New Yorker.

"Nope. And I'm not the only one. From what I'm hearing, I'm part of the majority. We don't like nobody. Or if we like somebody, we don't like him very much, and the only reason we like him is because we don't like the other guy more."

I assume then, that you are rejecting Bill Clinton.

"You bet. He's just too cool, too calm, and too reasonable, too slick, and he's got an answer for everything."

And Brown?

"He's not cool enough or calm enough. He makes me nervous with all his yelling and goofy talk."

Then I would think Paul Tsongas would appeal to you.

"Nah. He's not slick enough. I want a president who looks like a president. Besides, he says we're going to have to make sacrifices. I don't want to make no sacrifices for anybody else. I want somebody to make sacrifices for me."

Ah, then Jerry Brown should be your man because he is vowing to make life miserable for the rich and the powerful.

"Yeah, but he says he'll pick Jesse Jackson to be his vice president, and I know what Jesse wants to do. He wants to take my money and give it away to somebody else. If he's ever president, he'll be remembered as the great Middle Man."

Mike Royko

Tribune Media Services

Well, we all have to pay taxes. Or most of us.

"Why? I don't see why the tax laws can't be changed so that everybody who makes a certain amount don't have to pay taxes. Only the people who make more than that amount."

And what amount is that?
"What I make. That's the cutoff. Unless I get a raise. Then the cutoff will go up."

Do you consider that fair?
"Who's talking fair? I'm talking about what's the best deal for me."

I think you are being unrealistic. After all, everybody would like to avoid paying taxes and pass the burden on to the next guy.

"That's right, so I'm no more selfish than the next guy."

Then what's wrong with George Bush as your candidate? At least he has said he's sorry he raised taxes.

"Too late. Not raising my taxes means never having to say you're sorry. Besides, he was sitting right next to Ronald Reagan when they were screwing up the economy and those savings and loans were swindling the whole country."

But you are still working and have about the same standard of living.

"Sure, but now I can't get a decent rate on my CDs."

Yes, but that's because the savings and loans must now show greater caution in making loans. Therefore, they have less need for your money and aren't paying high rates. It is for the national good.

"I'm not worrying about the national good. I'm looking out for my good. I want that 9 percent."

Let's get back to the candidates. A self-made man and a patriot like H. Ross Perot should appeal to you.

"Maybe. But what about him smoking that marijuana and playing around with other women?"

He hasn't been accused of these things.

"That's right, so how do I know he didn't do them? For all I know, he even inhaled."

But that hasn't even been suggested.

"I know that. So I can't support a guy who hasn't even been accused of not having any character yet, and hasn't had a chance to deny it, which would give me a chance not to believe him, no matter what he said."

In other words, you would question his character, regardless of the evidence?

"Hey, everybody's got something to hide. Besides, how did he get that super-rich if he didn't do something kinky, huh?"

What if Maric Cuomo got into the race?

"I don't like fast-talking guys from New York."

How about Sen. Lloyd Bentsen?

"I don't like slow-talking guys from Texas."

Well, let's say George Bush pulls a Lyndon Johnson and doesn't run for re-election. Could you support Dan Quayle?

"Let his wife support him: He don't sound smart enough to support himself."

What about Pat Buchanan?

"He doesn't have a chance because the media guys don't like him. That's one of the reasons I'm anti-media."

I think you will have a long wait if you're expecting a candidate who is absolutely perfect.

"I wouldn't vote for someone who was perfect anyway."

Why not?
"What, and have him looking down at me?"

necessarily mean that the increases will go into effect. The University must request appropriations from the state legislature, Brown said.

The appropriation request tells the legislature how much money the University is expected to receive and how much it is expected to need.

The legislature will look at the sum of money the University has in its appropriation request and then decide whether to appropriate that level of income fund money (tuition money), Brown said.

If the legislature changes the figures, then the University has to adjust the tuition it will charge, he said.

The legislature then sends the appropriations bill to the governor for his approval or disapproval, Brown said.

Also to be proposed is a 12.5-percent tuition increase for SIUE and a 17-percent tuition increase for the SIU School of Medicine in Springfield.

If approved, money from the tuition increase will be used to strengthen the library and academic computing, replace instructional equipment and reduce the student-to-teacher ratio from 22-to-one to 20-to-one, SIUE President Earl Lazerson said.

If the tuition increase for the School of Medicine is approved, the rate will be equivalent to the University of Illinois' College of Medicine rates.

The SIU School of Medicine's current tuition rates are $7,491 a year. The U of I's College of Medicine costs $26,226 for three years, while SIU's School of Medicine costs only $22,473 for three years.

contentious struggle, one in which thousands of workers may lose their jobs and the very existence of Caterpillar may become an issue," the committee said in a letter to Martin.

A group of 60 religious leaders also called on Caterpillar not to permanently replace workers.

Caterpillar imposed most conditions of its final contract offer on Monday, the same day it ordered 12,600 striking UAW members to go back to work.

Caterpillar officials said more than 400 workers reported Wednesday.

Clinton met separately with both Caterpillar officials and union leaders Wednesday.

"The workers have a right to strike and they shouldn't lose their jobs because they exercise it," the Arkansas governor said after the meetings. He said it would be a mistake for the company to replace strikers.

UAW President Owen Bieber said Clinton "reaffirmed" his stand in favor of legislation that would bar hiring of replacement workers during a strike.

"We're pleased that all these folks have come to town and we're not disappointed that we got some national attention," UAW Local 974 President Jerry Baker said. "Maybe a Bill Clinton or a Jerry Brown can get this thing off dead center."

Baker was referring to reports that Brown, the former California governor and Clinton's rival for the Democratic presidential nomination, also may visit central Illinois later in the week.

At the heart of the dispute is the union's demand for a contract patterned after the one it negotiated with Deere & Co., something Caterpillar has rejected.

The union has not said what provisions from the Deere contract it wants for Caterpillar workers.

Caterpillar's contract offer includes a 13-percent wage increase over three years, improved pensions, employee job security by for six years and a guarantee that none of its U.S. plants would be closed in the next six years.

would not have access to at all," he said.

The point-of-sale cards allow University and community businesses to offer the same system.

Jack Sullivan, Undergraduate Student Government president, said the businesses also were against the use of the debit cards because of the cost.

The terminals cost about $2,500 for first-year leasing on the Validine system, Sullivan said.

It drops to $1,000 the second year.

But the cost for the point-of-sale terminals is only $30, he said.

Capie said the University's long-term goal is to be able to have dual use of ATM point-of-sale cards and student IDs.

The point-of-sale system gets the University out of the banking business and lets the financial institutions and the merchants handle it, Capie said.

"We're trying to show the community that if it works for us, then it will be a benefit to them," he said.

Capie said every merchant who wants to participate in the system will negotiate its own agreement with First National Bank.

The point-of-sale card costs a merchant about 18 cents a transaction, Capie said.

But high utilization will reduce the cost.

money in their bursar accounts and charge merchandise on campus, Guyon said.

Capie said some of the equipment that was leased can be used for the point-of-sale system. The remaining equipment for the Validine system was returned and the money refunded to the University.

Local businesses rallied against the proposal, however, claiming the debit cards would give on-campus businesses an unfair advantage in competing for student dollars, said Donald Wilson, vice chancellor for financial affairs and chairman of the city-university committee.

"They were afraid the University would set up a system that they sources to complete unfinished projects," he said. "The money would have funded street and parking improvements and the cost of finishing the depot and old freight building projects in the downtown area."

Edgar wants the state government to keep the share of the Illinois income tax surcharge that had been promised to municipalities. This would contradict the General Assembly's decision to allow cities to share the revenue through July 1993. Edgar wants to maintain the 50 percent share of the tax that goes to education.

In June 1989, a bill to raise the income tax rate for individuals from 2.5 to 3 percent was passed during the legislative session in the General Assembly. The increase lasted until June 1991.

Soon after becoming governor in 1991, Edgar said he wanted to make the temporary tax increase permanent. His Democratic opponents, especially Neil Hartigan and Michael Madigan, saw no need for an extension. But Edgar won.

In July 1991, legislative leaders reached a compromise calling for a permanent extension of one-half of the surcharge for education and one-half for local governments.

Local governments would receive slightly less than half in 1991-92, and slightly more than half during the next fiscal year. The state currently is in the first year of this plan, and education is receiving more than half.

Edgar now recommends denying local governments their share of the income tax surcharge scheduled to take effect in 1993.

David Kenney, SIUC political science professor, said Edgar has a specific motive behind his proposal.

"I think he's attempting to lure the General Assembly into increasing the income tax," he said. "Then he can say he didn't recommend it—the General Assembly did."

"You can't take it away from two places, so someone wins and someone loses," Kenney said.

up in western Nigeria. The excerpt Soyinka read occurred during World War II when the town of Ake was expecting the arrival of Hitler's army.

Mary Lamb, professor of English, said she was particularly struck by a story Soyinka told of a warrior facing the World War II troops.

"This reading and the others had a feeling of humanity and tolerance balanced with a justified anger," Lamb said. "It is because of this, I'm glad the warrior survived."

Soyinka described the first time his village heard an airplane, the drone sent the Christians in the village to church to pray, while the children stared at the sky in awe.

Soyinka said apartheid is over, but a good political, economical, and social structure needs to take its place or they will risk the ruin of African culture. "The two party system has its good points and bad points," Soyinka said. "Of the two parties, people often find that one is a 'yes' party and the other is a 'yes sir' party."

"Economic equality will not come immediately; a lot still needs to be done," he said.

The English department sponsored a reception afterward where Soyinka met with the African Student Association and the Nigerian Student Association to talk with them about the current political situation in Africa.

The ASA and NSA presented Soyinka with two awards for contributions to the motherland and honorary membership in the ASA.

Annual contest for high schools test math skills

University News Service

Mathematics teams from Edwardsville, Johnston City and Waterloo high schools captured championship titles at SIUC's annual Mathematics Field Day last month.

For a fourth straight year, Johnston City won first place in the medium-school division. Edwardsville captured the trophy in the large-school division, while Gilbert High School in Waterloo clinched the single-A, small-school title.

The competition attracted 987 students from 47 schools vying for top honors.

Dave Koster, an SIUC chemistry professor, said accidents are possible anytime people work with certain types of chemicals.

"There are dangers in handling certain types of chemicals and you work with that knowing what the risks are," he said. "No one's immune to the danger if people get a little sloppy with their work."

Conrad Hinckley, also an SIUC chemistry professor, said the potential for an explosion is not high in student labs, but chances increase in research labs.

"There are some experiments in which there is an inherent risk of explosion," he said. "Those are in a research environment, but it's still rare."

Hinckley said no one has been seriously injured in an SIUC lab from explosion in the 25 years he has been with the University, but minor accidents have occurred.

"Explosions happen from time to time, but we've been lucky here," he said. "(Explosions) are becoming less and less possible because people are becoming more safety conscious."

Students and faculty are trained to handle potentially explosive chemicals, but accidents sometimes cannot be predicted in some research situations, Hinckley said.

Sesame Street Live presents "Let's Play and Ernie, Grover, Prairie Dawn, Elmo, School" featuring Oscar the Grouch, Bert Cookie Monster, Grundgetta and Big Bird.

Sesame Street to perform at Arena featuring live muppets in musical

By Kristi Rominger
Entertainment Editor

Come and play—everything's a-OK at the SIUC Arena.

Sesame Street Live, "Let's Play School," one of four Sesame Street Live productions touring North American cities during its 1991-92 season, will perform at SIUC April 10-12.

Sesame Street Live is an extension of the original television show.

By providing the entertainment and educational values of the Sesame Street television series and adding the warmth and excitement of a live show, all ages can enjoy this performance, said Jennifer Groen, VEE Corporation promotion director.

"Let's Play School," presented by the VEE Corporation in cooperation with Children's Television Workshop, is designed to appeal to families with children between 2 and 12 years old.

Sesame Street Live will have five performances at the Arena.

The usual classroom activities of roll call, spelling, music hour, story time, numbers and show and tell are played out through the eyes of Sesame Street's trusted television friends Big Bird, Oscar the Grouch, Bert and Ernie, Cookie Monster, The Count, Grover, Elmo, Prairie Dawn, Barkley the Dog, Grundgetta, Betty Lou, the Honkers, Amanda and Jodie, and special appearances by Q and U.

"It's really incredible," Groen said. "Sesame Street is pretty much an American Institution, and we are very lucky that we have the opportunity to have the rights to a show like Sesame Street Live. The children get so excited, because the characters they are growing up with—their buddies—are right there on stage."

Groen said the audience interaction is constant. Audience members stand up, clap and sing a lot during the performance.

She said it is a wonderful family time spent together—especially for the adults, even though the program is directed toward children.

"It is so gratifying for me to walk into an arena and see parents enjoying a special time with their children," she said. "Even the smallest children, who are probably too young to understand the program, are amazed by the bright colors and lights."

This family entertainment attraction features the life-size replicas of the Sesame Street Characters.

The stage includes a duplicate of the familiar television set with a thrust stage bringing the performance out into the audience.

The audience can expect to hear some old favorites from the Sesame Street television show as well as special songs such as a duet by Bert and Ernie of "Wherever We Go."

The voices and music are prerecorded to present the familiar Sesame Street character's voices.

The cast of 17 varies in size, age and work history.

The cast members range from 4 feet 2 inches to 6 feet 2 inches in height to fit costumes from 5 feet 2 inches to 8 feet 2 inches in height.

The most important lesson of the day—learning about yourself and what is really important to you—is brought out by the pupils during show and tell time.

The fun goes beyond the everyday routine as the characters stretch their imaginations to explore ways to get to school and crossing the street.

Preschoolers have learned from Sesame Street in a fun way over the years.

Research has shown a distinct need for quality live entertainment for children. Twelve million people watch Sesame Street on television each week.

This is the 22nd season Sesame Street has been on public television. It is seen in 86 countries throughout the world.

Sesame Street began national broadcasts Nov. 10, 1969.

The Children's Television Workshop produces the show and includes concepts such as opposites, action words and feelings—all illustrated through the Sesame Street Muppets.

The television show strongly endorses the fundamental purpose of preparing children for school.

The educational goals include social, moral and affective development, language and reading, mathematical and numerical skills, reasoning and problem solving as well as perception.

Instructional goals also go into play with every script for the show. The symbolic representation of letters, numbers and geometric forms; relational concepts such as size, position, distance, amount; classification of size, form, function and class; attitudes toward inquiry and problem solving are some of the points the show wants to help young children develop.

The social environment also plays a major part in the development of a show. Identifying social units, roles, and interactions such as cooperation and rules are important points the show tries to get across to its viewers.

Vincent E. Egan, president of the VEE Corporation and executive producer of Sesame Street Live, said middle America is the perfect place to produce family entertainment.

The VEE Corporation is based in Minneapolis, Minn.

"I don't know if there's a formula for it, but I believe in being responsive to the wants and needs of the public and giving people family entertainment that they can enjoy," he said.

Egan signed a special licensing agreement in May 1980 with the Children's Television Workshop and Jim Henson Productions, Inc.

This agreement gave the VEE Corporation the exclusive rights to the life-sized replicas of the famous Sesame Street Muppets.

The Children's Television Workshop had admired Jim Henson's creations and he was asked to join in the early planning of the Sesame Street characters. Bert and Ernie, Kermit the Frog, Big Bird, Oscar the Grouch, Cookie Monster and others, some of whom were newly created for Sesame Street, were to become the heart of the series.

Since Sesame Street Live's 1980 debut in Minneapolis, 22 million children and parents have enjoyed the musical.

The company has produced and marketed a total of 16 live touring shows, eleven editions of Sesame Street Live, two productions featuring Jim Henson's Classic Muppets and three shows featuring Henson's Muppet Babies.

Tickets for Sesame Street Live are $9 and $8 reserved and are available at all SIUC Arena ticket outlets.

Child and group discounts are available.

Program to ignite awareness of fire safety and prevention

By John McCadd
Police Writer

To spark an interest in fire prevention, the Carbondale fire department has re-established the "Red Ball" fire safety program.

The Red Ball program requires participants to attach a red fire department sticker to the window of any room in their home that houses small infants, elderly people or people with disabilities.

In the event of a fire emergency, the arriving fire department could identify those residents who would need assistance during evacuation.

Carbondale assistant fire chief Harry Threlkeld said in addition to emergency assistance, the focus of the program is to provoke Carbondale residents to give thought to home fire prevention and safety measures.

"We think if people come in and request stickers, they'll eventually start thinking 'maybe we should start thinking about fire safety, or if there are areas in the house we should clean up and install smoke detectors,'" Threlkeld said.

Leon Smith, assistant coordinator for the Center for Independent Living and resident of Carbondale Towers, said the program would aid firefighters in the process of evacuation if there was some form of testing process for the program.

"I'm sure the program would be effective, but if it were to work, firefighters would need to assist in fire drills," Smith said. "If we could test the program, it would build initiative for (building managers) to set up an evacuation system with fire fighters' assistance."

The program is sponsored by the Carbondale Community Education Association Inc.

Art Wright, president of the Carbondale Community Education Association, said his organization saw the program as a necessary asset to the community.

The program was started by the National Fire Protection Association 18 years ago, Wright said.

"Recently we re-established it because it's a good program for Carbondale residents to be aware of," Wright said.

Threlkeld said the program also would be essential in certain critical areas, such as the Carbondale Towers on Mill Street and the Marion Street high rise because they house a number of disabled and elderly occupants.

Threlkeld said he is optimistic that the program will stir some thoughts about fire safety.

SIUC museum exhibit shows retrospective of artist's work

By Ronn Byrd
Entertainment Writer

Satirical works crossed with a stream-of-consciousness best describes an exhibit opening in SIUC's Faner museum, said Ben Meeker, assistant curator.

A retrospective of 42 years of work by Illinois printmaker David Driesbach opens today in the museum. The show will run through May 6.

"He's not serious," Meeker said. "His works are sort of funny. You don't come out of there feeling depressed."

Stylistically, his prints are strong line drawings with soft colors. It's all-around pleasant to see."

Driesbach, who calls himself a teller of tales with pop-culture interests, describes his work as autobiographical.

"My work often reflects the newspaper—what's going on now with the styles and what the young people are doing," Driesbach said. "I've been teaching college since 1951 and I see all these things around me. I kind of work off of that."

The Driesbach exhibit includes 40 of his 72 pieces.

Meeker said the exhibit was slimmed down for space considerations.

"I had to edit it down," Meeker said. "It's pretty crowded as it is. You definitely get a full idea of "The most noticeable change in my work is that the earlier prints are quite somber and serious. The later work is more whimsical and colorful. All of my earlier work was done in black and white."

—David Driesbach

how the guy's life's work is."

Driesbach said his work has changed considerably over the years.

"The most noticeable change in my work is that the earlier prints are quite somber and serious," he said. "The later work is more whimsical and colorful. All of my earlier work was done in black and white."

Some of the prints in the Driesbach exhibit include "Peace Bird Don't Crap on Me," "Saturn Devoured His Young" and "Poikilo Thermal Reverie."

"Poikilo" is part of a triptych, or three-piece print, named the "Search Triptych".

Meeker said Driesbach's sense of humor makes his prints fun. "He likes to put cryptic messages into his pieces," Meeker said.

"You can probably get three or four of his jokes in these prints. The titles alone are really funny, he said."

Driesbach was born in Rockford and studied at the University of Illinois, Beloit College in Wisconsin, Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts and the University of Iowa, where he earned a master of fine arts degree in 1951.

Driesbach first worked as a draftsman in a boiler and furnace factory, and after several teaching jobs, came to Northern Illinois University in 1964, where he retired as a professor from the College of Visual and Performing Arts in September 1991.

Driesbach has been invited to and has shown works throughout the Midwest, Mexico and Yugoslavia.

Several of Driesbach's works are owned by The Boston Museum of Fine Arts, The Cincinnati Museum of Fine Arts and the Ontario East Gallery in Chicago.

The Driesbach exhibit is open to the public and admission is free.

Faner museum hours are from 9 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Sunday.

Studio to record concert by SIUC gospel singers

By Sherri L. Wilcox
General Assignment Writer

Members of an SIUC gospel group will sing the praises of the recording industry this weekend as they cut the first record of their music careers.

Voices of Inspiration, a registered student organization at SIUC, performs gospel music in and around the SIUC community. The group recently performed at Africa Week and UpWard Bound, a university-sponsored program to encourage high school students to further their education.

Robco, a local recording studio, will tape the group at its spring concert at 4 p.m. April 12 at the Greater Gillespie Temple in Carbondale.

Joe Cook, a senior in administration of justice from Washington, D.C., is the musical director of the group. He said the main purpose of the group's music is to glorify God.

"We're trying to market what we have done because it is something positive to do," he said.

The group is made up of 50 SIUC students, and three auxiliary members from Carbondale Community High School, who do not qualify as full members because they are not SIUC students.

Members of Voices of Inspiration make up both vocal and instrumental sections. The instrumental portion includes bass and lead guitarists, two keyboardists, two drummers, a saxophonist and a trumpet player.

In addition to campus and Carbondale performances, Voices of Inspiration, travels to other campuses and has performed in Chicago, St. Louis and Washington, D.C.

"We travel to sing at other colleges and participate with their gospel groups," Cook said. "It's a great experience."

The group is non-denominational and has been in existence since 1987.

Proof of Utah mixes sound, funny lyrics in show

By William Ragan
Entertainment Writer

Members of the local progressive band Proof of Utah are not from the state known for its Mormons and beehives.

In fact, they say they have never even visited Utah.

However, the members of Proof of Utah create a unique musical state of mind by experimenting with strange sonic textures and humorous, absurd lyrics.

The band will perform at Hangar 9 tonight and is made up of four SIUC graduate students: guitarist Mike Brosco, bassist Steve Burton, Louie Simon on drums and Steve Ward on guitar.

Proof of Utah received their odd title from a conversation Simon had at a party with a girl who was visiting from Utah. Simon said he didn't think anyone came from Utah and the reply was, "Well, here's proof of Utah."

Violin player Barry Benjamin, trombonist Steve Hudson and Chickerman, who plays keyboards and saxophone, will join the band at the Hangar.

The band began its career in 1983 in Bowling Green, Ohio, where the members were undergraduate students.

Brosco and Simon were in a band called Invisible Flintstones, and their songs were all based on the popular cartoon. In fact, Proof of Utah still plays one song, "Betty's Pleasure" from its rocky past.

The duo hooked up with bassist Steve Burton and later met Steve Ward, who came in at the height of the band's performance art period.

"We later found out he played guitar," Brosco said.

The quartet recorded a demo as a group project, and a friend who worked at a local record store in Bowling Green persuaded the band to release it themselves, going so far as to front part of the money.

Proof of Utah formed Smiley Turtle Records to independently release its albums, starting with the 1985 release, "A Dog, A Dodo, and A Fool." The name of the record label came from a ceramics project of a turtle Simon got an F on because of the accidental goofy smile that mysteriously appeared on the turtle's face.

"I dropped the class and formed the record label," Simon said.

The band moved to Champaign upon graduation, and decided to go to graduate school in Carbondale after playing a show at the Hangar two years ago, Simon said.

"We decided to go to the same place together so we could still have a band," he said.

Proof of Utah has released four albums on the Smiley Turtle label, including "It Doesn't Matter Much," "The Belly's Virginal Polyliips" and "Out of Order," 100 copies of which will be given away at the band's show tonight.

The group also has signed with Recommended Records in Germany, which has distributed two separate albums throughout Europe: "Happy To Be Here," in 1988 and the most recent release, "Free and Female."

While the group usually sells enough records in the states to break even, Proof of Utah are much more popular in Europe, something Simon attributes to the band's hard-to-classify style of music and the fact that the music is "too weird for the States."

"We combine a lot of different kinds of music to create our own style," he said. "We want to avoid pigeonholing ourselves because it gets boring. We're also trying to mix some ironic humor in it."

"A lot of the time we make fun of the styles we're covering," Simon said.

An example of their mimicry of styles is "Hot Rods To Hell," Proof of Utah's closing song, which Simon and Brosco wrote for a friend's B-Movie. The song lifts guitar riffs from Led Zeppelin, The Kinks and Deep Purple and parodies glam rock at the same time.

Although the band has been compared to Frank Zappa, Captain Beefheart, The Residents, Brian Eno and other musicians who add a strong dose of humor to their music, Proof of Utah's music is unique to the point of being indescribable, Brosco said.

"The main goal is to synthesize the different sounds we've grown up with and try to put them together," he said. "It's really great to experiment."

Brosco said bands like Proof of Utah are a dying breed, as independent music is slowly getting strangled by major labels.

"There's no longer this series of steps... to getting a deal, there's just this jump into the void. I don't know if I like what's on the other side," he said.

Because of the independent nature of the band and its lack of money, Proof of Utah's upcoming 6th album is quietly collecting dust on a shelf in the Smiley Turtle studios.

The band will play more than a dozen new songs at the Hangar tonight, some of which were written scant weeks ago, Simon said.

"We're excited about playing the Hangar. It'll be fun to see the reaction to the new songs," he said.

Black Mamba will open for Proof of Utah tonight at Hangar 9. Admission is $1.

After all, you have similar controversies in your past, like the fact that you allegedly did for a major organized-crime figure who contributed to your campaign...

Even president sends wishes to tennis great

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush telephoned Arthur Ashe Wednesday to wish him well after learning that the former tennis great had contracted the AIDS virus from a blood transfusion.

Ashe told reporters at his news conference in New York, where he announced his condition, that Bush offered to provide him any help he could. Ashe said he told the president he would likely get back to him.

Ashe said he might do some work for Bush's National Commission on AIDS. The White House welcomed the offer, but said at the moment there are no openings on the 15-member commission.

Last fall, Bush named Magic Johnson to the commission after Johnson retired from the Los Angeles Lakers basketball team when he tested positive for the AIDS virus.

Johnson was quoted in the current edition of the Advocate, a homosexual newspaper, that he is so fed up with the administration's handling of the AIDS crisis that he has told Bush he will "step down" if "things don't change."

White House deputy press secretary Judith Smith suggested Ashe might be able to assist the administration by helping educate the public about AIDS.

Smith said she was unaware of any correspondence from Johnson threatening to quit. She also pointed out that the administration spends about $4.3 billion a year to combat AIDS, more than on any disease other than cancer.

The deputy press secretary also noted that when Bush named Johnson to the commission he told him, "Hey, if we need to do more ... let me know."

Ashe news stuns athletes, politicians

United Press International

Magic Johnson, who five months ago quit the NBA after contracting the virus that leads to AIDS, offered his support to Arthur Ashe Wednesday after the former tennis great revealed he has AIDS.

Like many in the athletic and political communities, Johnson was rocked by the news.

"I'd like to extend my full support and prayers to Arthur, his family and friends," said Johnson, who retired from the Los Angeles Lakers last November.

"It takes great courage and strength to make such an announcement. I'm sure Arthur will meet this challenge head-on and become a leading voice in the fight to educate, raise funds and increase awareness to all, especially our youth.

"I applaud his decision to make his condition known and I'm eager to speak with him so that we may join forces in our efforts."

President Bush telephoned Arthur Ashe to wish him well after hearing the news, and Ashe said he might do some work for Bush's National Commission on AIDS. Ashe told reporters at his news conference in New York, where he announced his condition, that Bush offered to provide him any help he could.

Bush named Johnson to the commission last fall.

At Amelia Island, Fla., where the world's finest women tennis players are competing in the Bausch and Lomb championships, one of Ashe's close friends said she was "overwhelmed" at the disheartening news.

"When I was first told of Arthur's announcement I was just overwhelmed," Zina Garrison said. "I have been aware of AIDS but I never knew anyone so close to me with it. This is just another example why everyone should take the disease seriously and face the reality that AIDS has no boundaries."

Garrison, who like Ashe is black, said he has made a great impact on professional tennis and her as a player.

"He's been a great influence in my life both on and off the court. He's a great ambassador for the sport of tennis and many of his contributions will go unmatched," she said. "He's a very close friend and my thoughts are with him. It's kind of shocking. It shows that this disease can hit anyone."

ESPN commentator Cliff Drysdale, a long-time friend, said Ashe told him he had the disease at the ATP Championships in Frankfurt last year. Drysdale said Ashe told him at that time he was thinking of going public with the news.

"He had some practical reasons from the standpoint of wanting to continue to travel. He thought there might be some restrictions on people with AIDS going abroad," Drysdale said.

"Arthur is one of the great human beings ever to play the game of tennis," former tennis star Chris Evert said. "It just seems so unfair that in his young life he has had a heart attack, open-heart surgery and now has to be stricken with this virus."

AIDS gets adults, kids and sports superstars

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An estimated 1 million Americans are infected with HIV, the virus which causes AIDS, and the disease AIDS has killed over 138,000 since its discovery 10 years ago, according to the Centers for Disease Control.

AIDS has affected two major sports figures in the past five months. Former tennis great Arthur Ashe Wednesday confirmed he had AIDS, and Magic Johnson retired from the NBA's Los Angeles Lakers last November after contracting HIV.

Unlike Johnson, who attributed his contracting the virus to promiscuous heterosexual sex, Ashe said he developed the disease from a blood transfusion nearly nine years ago. He said he has known it since 1988.

The human immunodeficiency virus slowly but surely kills enough disease-fighting T-cells so that a person becomes susceptible to a host of life-threatening illnesses called "opportunistic infections."

Only after an HIV-positive person develops one or more of these infections is he or she considered to have AIDS. Months or years can pass before this occurs.

"The interval between becoming infected and being or feeling ill on average is 10 years," said Dr. June Osborn, professor of epidemiology at the University of Michigan and chairwoman of the National Commission on AIDS.

Improvements in the treatment of these infections also has resulted in an increase in life expectancy after diagnosis with AIDS. Considerable research also is underway to prolong the amount of time between infection and development of the disease.

Kaposi's sarcoma, a soft tissue cancer, and Pneumocystis carinii pneumonia, a lung infection caused by a parasite, are among the common opportunistic infections.

The drug AZT and 13 others approved for AIDS and AIDS-related conditions have increased a patient's ability to live with the disease.

Widely used blood tests can detect antibodies to HIV but not the disease itself. A positive test result does not by itself mean a person has the disease.

Antibodies are disease-fighting molecules which develop after exposure to the virus.

HIV is transmitted by exchange of body fluids.

how to react to comments that have very little to do with our reality."

There were more than 200 people jammed into a room for the hastily called news conference at the main headquarters of HBO, one block from Times Square. Ashe is a tennis commentator for the cable network, and said he intends to once again cover Wimbledon this year "assuming the UK will grant me entrance to the UK."

Born in Richmond, Va., July 10, 1913, Ashe was one of the first black tennis stars. As an amateur, he won the first U.S. Open in 1968 and captured Wimbledon in 1975 with a stunning upset over Jimmy Connors, who at the time was suing Ashe for libel. In all, Ashe had 33 career titles and rose to No. 2 in the world rankings in May, 1976.

He later served as U.S. Davis Cup captain for five years.

of the Soviet Union's breakup. "The future depends on you," Samaranch told Ukrainians as he neared the end of a six-republic tour. "You are one of the biggest countries in Europe and you are very important in sports."

"But I think you have to use what you have now in terms of past sport organization in order to change the things you have to change in the future."

Samaranch said he fully supports Ukraine's decision to participate in the next Winter Olympics as an independent.

"We hope to see a fully independent Olympic team in Norway (1994 Lillehammer Games)," Samaranch said. "That which is good for the country is good for the Olympic movement."

Samaranch also expressed optimism in the future Olympic success of Ukraine, which has provided many Soviet Olympic champions.

"Knowing the importance of sport in Ukraine, I think the future of the Olympic movement in this country is very bright," he said.

In order to help Ukraine and other former Soviet republics get on their feet, Samaranch said the IOC has asked international sports federations to recognize independent sports bodies in Ukraine and other republics as soon as possible. He said he expects most will do so by next summer.

Valery Borzov, head of Ukraine's National Olympic Committee and a former Soviet Olympic sprint champion, said Ukraine hopes to continue cooperating with other former Soviet states both in the upcoming Summer Games and when Ukraine begins participating as an independent team.

"It will be like a meeting of old friends, even though in Norway we will be represented by separate teams," he said.

"But I'm not at LSU anymore. I'm looking forward. I'm not looking backward."

The 7-foot-1, two-year All-America center announced last Friday he would skip his senior year of eligibility at LSU in order to play professional basketball.

O'Neal, his father and Brown were in Los Angeles Wednesday to attend a banquet. O'Neal was among finalists for the John Wooden Award, annually presented to the nation's outstanding basketball player. The award went to Duke's Christian Laettner. Brown was unavailable for immediate comment about the sergeant's remarks, although Harrison confirmed that agent Leonard Armato of Los Angeles, who has links with L.A. Gear, will be O'Neal's agent. Harrison also criticized Brown's failure to keep quiet about the disclosure that O'Neal would move this year into the National Basketball Association. "When Coach Brown came to my house on Sunday, we asked him not to reveal this information on Shaquille to anybody," Harrison said.
