Task force wants cost projections

RECOMMENDATIONS: Plan would include lowering tuition rates for out-of-state and international students.

WILLIAM HAIFIELD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Concerns about the affordability of an SIU education has led an SIUC task force to recommend a four-year tuition, fees and housing plan that would tell students the cost of their educations four years in advance.

SIU President Ted Sanders said the plan, which the tuition task force finished last month, will be presented to the BOT on Thursday.

It will not be voted on until the board's June meeting, so that the University can discuss tuition, housing and fee increases.

"We will have an opportunity for a deeper and richer discussion involving students than if we were making the decision in May," Sanders said. "Our greatest concern is to get ourselves positioned right in a way that works for the University now and its students, but does not place us at risk in the future."

The plan states tuition increases could be planned in one of three ways.

- Tuition, fees, and housing costs could be limited to not exceed inflation.
  - Increases could be limited to no more than 3.5 percent per year.
  - Tuition, fees and room and board could be charged either at a flat rate or at increasing rates for all four years.
- Donald Wilson, vice president for University services and board treasurer, said the current cost of tuition, fees and room and board for an in-state SIUC student is estimated at $7,011 for an academic year.

Bringing sisters together

PERSPECTIVE: Graduate student says SIUC too cliquish; wants to remove tensions between women.

L'KEISHA R. GRAY
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Through observing campus life, Dennie Rogers has come to what she calls shameful conclusion: a lack of interaction and comradeship among African-American women.

Rogers, a graduate student in MedPrep from Chicago, said this is her first year attending SIUC, and the relationship between students is disappointing to her.

As a result, she presented "A Room Full of Sister," a workshop stressing sisterhood Monday in the Student Center.

"It's a strong need (for sisterhood)," she said. "It's so cliquish (at SIUC). There is no desire to associate with anyone who is different from you, and no one wants to be diverse."

"What I'm hoping to accomplish is some type of solution to all the tension between African-American women on campus. If I could at least get people to be comfortable with just speaking to one another, then that's a start because it's more than we have now."

As an icebreaker, some of the 25 members of the audience performed skits depicting what Rogers said is a common occurrence between women on campus.

The skit involved three women sitting together and speaking to another woman one another.

Because unity should be a natural reaction for all women, Major said it is not just a "black woman thing," but a "woman thing."

"Women all over the world, with the exception of very few countries, are placed in positions of second-class citizens," she said.

"We are often the source of ridicule, used as property, and that has really not changed for centuries."

Throughout an evening of sisterly chat and exercises, the women parted with a bond linking them together as they went their separate ways.

Before the workshop ended, Major gave the audience a challenge.

Each woman was told to do something for one week to make herself and one of the other women in the room feel special.

They also were given a homework assignment that entails each woman choosing three women a day for seven days who are strangers to them and speak to them.

Kawanna Nakia Toney, an undecided sophomore from Maywood, was

GLBF lobbies against sexual discrimination

LEGISLATION: RSO's adviser says bill would ensure equal rights.

JASON K. FREUND
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A House bill that would give equal rights to gays, lesbians and bisexuals is receiving support by about 20 SIUC students and Carbondale residents who are traveling to Springfield today to participate in a lobby for the bill.

House Bill 1241, co-sponsored by House Speaker Michael Madigan, D-Chicago, would make discrimination based on sexual orientation illegal.

The lobby day is being sponsored by the Illinois Federation for Human Rights.

Paulette Curkin, faculty adviser for the SIUC Registered Student Organization Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends, said the bill is an important step for the rights of gay and lesbian people.

"I feel it's the least the state can do," Curkin, University Housing off-campus housing coordinator, said. "It merely ensures that gay and lesbian people won't be discriminated against."

"Gays and lesbians can sometimes be an invisible minority. Politicians sometimes feel there are none in their district, unless we come forward."

Erika Kohoutek, GLBF co-director and Illinois Federation for Human Rights regional coordinator, said the group will concentrate on lobbying Southern Illinois legislators, including state Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, and state Sen. Dave Luechtefeld, R-Okawville.

"We're hoping to give them something to think about," said Kohoutek, a senior in English from Chicago. "We also have about 100 signed letters to give Bost and Luechtefeld."

Bost is unsure of his position about the bill.

SIUC's campus-wide recycling program will begin in fall 1997 even though $50,000 in state grant money for it was denied last week.

Most of the grant money would have been used to purchase more recycling containers to be placed across campus and in Housing areas.

"We did not receive the grant from the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs, but we were encouraged to reapply after July 1," said Marian Brown, plant and service operations associate director. "Based on the press release I read, they only awarded 34 grants statewide. It was highly competitive."

Brown said because a large number of containers cannot be purchased without the grant money, the Appropriate to this year's theme, "Africa in New Millennium: Challenges and Opportunities," Diouf, a graduate student in business finance from Senegal, is the first woman president of the African Student Council.

She also is the first woman to Africa Week is an important time for students of African her-

Disorganization

Students should vote carefully to avoid repeat of USG follies

THE APPARENT DISORDER OF THE Undergraduate Student Government serves a wake-up call for students to elect more responsible representatives in the tentative April 23 election.

It is reasonable to assume from the tantrums and incidents and the embarrassing disorganization of USG that most of the current senators and the USG executive board are interested only in serving themselves, not the students.

IRONICALLY, USG HAS HAD A HARD TIME all year filling seats in the senate, with senators and commissioners quitting left and right for different reasons while the senate keeps hobbling along like a three-legged dog.

Reportedly, USG election officials gave out petitions too early, making 37 petitions invalid. This forced the candidates to start the petition process all over again — giving candidates only about a week to campaign for office. In the past, there was at least a three-week campaign period, during which candidates were able to get their messages out in the open for debate and endorsements. With the limited amount of time for campaigning this year, it will not be possible to run a fair and effective campaign. This disorderly government is a threat to itself and to the constituents it serves.

USG PRESIDENT TROY ALIM HAS SAID that there is control in the student government. That claim is unfounded. Where is the order, Alim? Your administration not only has let the students down, but the entire campus is disgusted.

In a few weeks students will be asked to vote in the USG elections, in which a new president and senate will be elected. Students must first critique the candidates, holding them to a standard of reasonable responsibility.

BEFORE STUDENTS GO TO THE POLLS ON April 23, they need to take a close look at the current USG executives and the senators, and decide whether they want the same kind of government representing them on this campus next year. Vote for senators who show up to meetings and continue to serve constituents.

Students have a chance to elect candidates who should make a solid commitment — perhaps in writing — to their constituents to make USG better and more responsible.

This written commitment should specifically indicate what kind of reasonable changes the candidate could make if elected to USG. This kind of commitment could bring USG back to the hands of the students and back to the level of integrity it has had in the past.

Take it off: T-shirts provide false messages about wearers

Spring is here, and with it comes the beautiful and refreshing warm weather. Warm weather brings us the T-shirt, and with the T-shirt, we get T-shirts with asinine sayings on them.

There is nothing wrong with T-shirts or T-shirt sayings. What I have a problem with, and you should too, is all these people running around who apparently want to be naked.

You know what I'm talking about. Those stupid shirts that say things such as "Co-ed Naked Orgami!" or "Co-ed Naked Basket Weaving" or any other activity on the planet generally performed with clothes on.

I suppose the basis behind these T-shirts is that we're supposed to believe that the people wearing them really do, upon returning home from work, take off their clothes, call up some pals from the opposite sex, then go out and fight fires. Or play softball. Or brand cattle. The list is basically endless and is limited only by the creativity of the marketing geniuses who developed these monstrosities of good taste.

Just once I'd like to go up to one of these people and say:

"Listen, you're not fooling anyone. We all know you don't rock climb naked. That would be painful and stupid. Why don't you just go home, put on a nice shirt with no references to your own nudity and then come back and try to pick up the pieces? You're only embarrassing yourself. No one wants to see you without clothes on anyway."

And if they're so into being naked, why the hell are they wearing the shirt in the first place? Isn't that somewhat hypocritical?

TAKE IT OFF! Go shoot pool without any clothes on! Yeah, go get felt on the table, you weirdo freak!

Now, don't get me wrong. I'm not a prude. There is nothing inherently wrong with nudity or human sexuality in general. However, there is a time and place for expressing yourself, and that time is not when you're walking your beat. You've seen this shirt: "Co-ed Naked Law Enforcement. Up against the wall and spread 'em."

Now that's original. This is insulting to both the honest police officer that does his/her job completely clothed and also the hard-working criminal who doesn't need to be sexually harassed.

Furthermore, I do not support censorship of any kind, but I certainly don't think adults should wear these shirts in the company of children, especially adolescent boy-

Imagine the stress that young, 14-year-old Jimmy must feel when he sees an attractive woman walk by with a shirt that states, "Co-ed Naked Barbecue, Hear the Sizzle and Smell the Sauce."

This poor guy is having a major reality inquisition.

"Gee, do you think she really barbecues without any clothes on?"

Not only that, apparently she does this activity with members of the opposite sex, which could lead to some amorous activity.

"Dear Lord, maybe we should follow her home. This could be the stuff of legend!"

So, the two perverts follow the attractive woman home and break into tears when she walks out of the house into her backyard, not only fully clothed, but with a basket of laundry to put on the clothesline.

"Wait a second. She's not naked! There's no barbecue! She's by herself! What the hell kind of sick world is this? We've been duped! There is nothing else worth living for. I suppose now our only choice is to go home and break into my father's liquor cabinet, thus beginning our descent into drug abuse."

See? Because somebody wants to be cute and pretend like he or she lives a double life in some great naked fantasy world, two adolescents become disillusioned with their niche in the universe and resort to chemical means to get them through the day.

So, in conclusion, wear what you want. I don't care, and neither does anyone else. I'm just making fun of the people who think they're tricking the rest of the world into believing that they hang glide naked. You don't really hang glide naked, but if you want to lie, go ahead. I won't stop you. I'm just jealous because I didn't think of such a great marketing concept first.

Imagine the stress the young, 14-year-old Jimmy must feel when he sees an attractive woman walk by with a shirt that states, 'Co-ed Naked Barbecue, Hear the Sizzle and Smell the Sauce..' This poor guy is having a major reality inquisition.

Writer to blame if students choose to read her column

Dear Editor:

We were amazed to learn last Friday from reading Ms. Mannino's "Politically Erect" column ("Columnists not to blame if readers squander time") that if her editorials exert suction, it's not her fault, nor the Daily Egyptian's for printing them, but ours for reading them.

It was also interesting to have her lecture on how much better it is to ignore something than get angry at it, considering that her column was a massive venting of her displeasure at readers apparently writing in to express complaints, no doubt well-founded.

Is she familiar with the term hypocrisy?

Most laughably, she goes on to compare her vacuous rantings with Chaucer's writings.

Only in your mind, Ms. Mannino, not in ours. Nice try, though.

Sadly, we have noticed her columns tend this way. Several weeks ago, she went on a hilarious rant about how the "Generation X label (is) unfair."

If she is so unhappy with negative stereotypes about her generation, why would she substantiate them so richly, with so much sheer, infantile whining about how everyone is going to think a bunch of bad things about her just because she is of this generation?

Oh, boo hoo!

That column, ironically enough, made the stereotypes she refers to real, by expressing her failure and defiant refusal to accept responsibility (and thus control) for what she says and does.

Talk about self-defeating!

And does anyone recall her post-Valentine's Day commentary?

Apparently she is unhappy with her boyfriend, and this somehow becomes fodder for a big, typically lame babble about how men don't give her what she wants from them.

What a sad, unfulfilled life.

CC

We were amazed to learn last Friday from reading Ms. Mannino's 'Politically Erect' column ... that if her editorials exert suction, it's not her fault, nor the Daily Egyptian's for printing them, but ours for reading them.

But Ms. Mannino has her denial and self-justification to wallow in, so we are confident that she will overcome and endure, especially with the DE to dignify her howls of alienation as if they represent some kind reflection or thought.

There truly are not enough laughs or points of entertainment and diversion in this region, and we appreciate the levity and amusement brought to us by the grim, somber absurdity of Politically Erect.

Please keep that stuff coming!

Letter shows dangers of bigotry

Dear Editor:

Professor Emeritus M. Lionel Bender, ironically of the Foreign Languages and Literature Department, thought it fitting to condemn Saleem Rasheed's March 25 guest column as extremist (in his March 31 letter to the editor).

Bender then gave a patronizing dismissal of the "Church of the Creator" promoted on this campus by Matt Hale.

Bender states that his "guess is that (the Church of the Creator) got a lot of hate mail and little or no supporting mail."

Instead, Islam is to be understood as the real threat, according to Bender, whose letter contains the stereotypical "terrorism" clichés.

Bender's fear of Islam is highly prejudiced.

But certainly Bender illustrates aptly that bigotry on the homefront is the ongoing and most immediate danger.

I am responding to M. Lionel Bender's letter in the March 31 Daily Egyptian.

I find it very hard to believe that this type of an argument could come from a person who has achieved the status of a professor. The first thing I would suggest to Mr. Bender is that he try and understand the subject about which he is writing.

If he thinks that splinter groups hold no threat, then he certainly should not be scared of the Islamic groups that he describes in his letter. Groups that he describes certainly do not represent mainstream Islamic thought, and therefore should pose no threat to world peace.

Another suggestion I would make to Mr. Bender is that he try to understand that many "bomb-throwing terrorists" are only using these weapons in response to tanks and other more sophisticated equipment that are being used to deny them land they have lived on for more than 1,000

The real threat lies when terrorism is sanctioned by a legitimate government, under the disguise of "security measures."

Mr. Bender's letter makes a lot of dangerous claims that he does not substantiate, and addresses a lot of complicated issues that deserve more consideration than he gives them in his letter.

Midwives need medical training

Dear Editor:

This is response to your article regarding lay midwives (April 2, Daily Egyptian).

Home births, I agree, are a choice that women should be able to make. However, your reporter and Ms. (Maggie) Jihan fail to provide any education that Ms. Jihan may have had in preparing her to assist at home births.

It is fine to have a "spiritual" calling, but perhaps both didactic and appropriate clinical education should be obtained to assist a woman in having a safe and satisfactory birth. There are several certified nurse midwives who deliver babies at St. Joseph's Hospital in Murphysboro.

These are well-trained individuals who support their moms in labor and assist them in birthing in as home-like environment as possible, with many new moms returning home in 12 to 24 hours after delivery. However, certified nurse midwives have the knowledge and experience to obtain assistance from a specialist when it is needed.

Your reporter should really get her information correct. One does not "ingest" meconium into the lungs. However, "aspiration" of meconium in the lungs causes distress and, occasionally, death.

Church names archbishop

APPOINTMENT:

Chicago diocese names Portland Archbishop to Bernardin's position.

WASHINGTON POST

CHICAGO—Archbishop Francis George of Portland, Ore. was named by Pope John Paul II Tuesday as the eighth archbishop of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago, where his appointment was greeted with mild surprise and cautious expressions of hope that he will be a unifying force like his predecessor, the late Cardinal Joseph Bernardin. George, 60, will be formally installed as Chicago's first native-born archbishop on May 7, taking control of the nation's second largest archdiocese with 2.3 million Roman Catholics.

At a news conference George appeared relaxed. But he gave few hints about what he will do on specific policies and issues, saying repeatedly he would first have to learn the situation in Chicago.

George is untested as head of a major archdiocese. A former philosophy professor with two Ph.D.'s, he spent much of his career in Rome administering his religious order.

He is a solid conservative who nevertheless surprised his colleagues by publicly opposing two anti-gay rights initiatives in Washington.

RECYCLE

program likely will start on a small scale at Thompson Point, as originally planned. Paper, newspaper, cardboard and plastic materials will be recycled.

Though the program was scheduled to begin in March, negotiations with housing administration and the grant denial will move the program's start-up date to fall 1997.

One such detail in the development process is compliance with Housing regulations.

Brown said open containers normally used for recycling cannot be used in Housing areas because they can be a fire hazard.

"Fire codes require any containers to be non-combustible, so the kind used in academic areas can't be used in the dorms," Brown said. "We are looking at different possibilities for containers we might use."

"The containers with self-closing lids are supposed to shut off the air and keep the paper inside from burning," she said.

The recycling program's new logo was designed by Nick Kassebaum, a sophomore in communication graphics from St. Louis, who entered his design into a contest, along with 33 other students.

"I wanted to incorporate the arrow with the tree," Kassebaum said. "I made about 30 thumbnail sketches while designing it."

Kassebaum received $100 for his winning logo.

Kassebaum's design will be placed on recycling bins and will go on a sign for the recycling truck, a two-ton box truck used to haul recyclable materials.

Chris Kalter, a first-year graduate student in geography from Mundelein, is preparing recycling awareness materials for the program.

"We are still working on educational materials for academic and administration buildings," Kalter said.

"Everything's in the works, and we're moving forward."

SISTERHOOD

enlightened by the sisterhood workshop and said she would like to see more of the same event take place on campus.

"It was very inspirational because black women came together and were all on one accord," she said. "If this was something we could do on campus all the time, I feel the stereotypes and attitudes we have toward each other will be abolished."

And while Toney will use what she learned as a tool for interacting with black women on campus, some said the lessons can be taken to other arenas of people's lives.

No matter what aspect of their lives the lessons are implemented, Major assured the women they have a chance to both receive and act as spiritual blessings by breaking up the monotony and promoting natural unity.

"I truly believe that you could save someone's life who is feeling depressed and isolated," she said. "You'll be surprised at how many lives you will touch just by speaking."

WEEK

where you are from.

"This is not only a chance to share our heritage but to feel home for a while."

The proclamation was given by Chancellor Donald Beggs on behalf of Gov. Jim Edgar and the University, and by Mayor Neil Dillard on behalf of Carbondale.

Edgar's proclamation, read by Beggs, recognized the achievements of African students at SIUC in promoting diversity and cultural and intellectual exchange between students and the community.

Beggs' proclamation recognized the participation of African students in the University and community.

Dillard's proclamation also recognized the efforts of African students to promote cooperation and relationships in the community, and he encouraged citizens of Carbondale to take part in Africa Week.

"I urge all of the citizens to observe and participate in the activities as many have before, and we hope they do again this year," he said.

Dillard declared the week to be a continuation of the existing international friendship, goodwill and understanding between the African students and the citizens of Carbondale.

"Whereas the city of Carbondale is extremely proud of the African students traditions and heritage that have been demonstrated in our community over these many years, as mayor of the city of Carbondale, I do hereby proclaim the week of April 7-12, 1997, as Africa Week in the city of Carbondale," Dillard said.

Diouf said the people of Carbondale have made African students welcome in the community and even share in the celebration of Africa Week.

"The community understands it and gets involved whenever we celebrate Africa Week," she said. "It's just a way to tell us, 'Yes you are here. We acknowledge it, and we accept you, and we want to celebrate with you.'"

Following the three proclamations, M. Stalls, adviser to the African Student Council and development skills training specialist with the Center for Basic Skills, read an excerpt from the poem "Heritage" by Countee Cullen.

She chose the poem because it does not tell people what or how to think about Africa, but it raises the question "What is Africa to me?"

"What I was hoping for is that (people) would think, 'What does it mean to me when I think of the continent of Africa?'" she said. "I thought that even though that poem is many years old that it could challenge every person here. 'The greatest challenge might be what will we do qualitatively and quantitatively?'"

As a demonstration of their heritage, four African students in traditional dress played a beat called "Wepilin," or "Let's Get Together," on African instruments.

"It's a song for joy," Coulibaly said.

"We are having joy because we are happy to celebrate our cultural heritage and to share with the community and to feel at home for a while."

During the song, two women, captivated by the rhythm, jumped from their seats to the front and danced as the lead drummer played on the "djebe" and another student shook a red "goussou," an African instrument used as a noisemaker, covered with a net of red, yellow and blue beads.

"I've never seen anything like that before," said Thamar Keene, a 14-year-old Carbondale resident. "It was really educating to me. I've never seen people dancing like that."

Trevyon Cole, a 13-year-old Carbondale resident, went to the event to learn about his African heritage.

He was surprised that this was the 23rd year Africa Week has been celebrated.

"I really haven't heard of it too much until I moved down here from Chicago," he said. "We never hear about Africa Week."

Diouf said organizing this year's Africa Week was a challenge she has enjoyed, and even though it will take effort, it will end successfully.

"We have worked very hard," she said. "United we always do great things."

"We still have a long way to go, but we are on the right track."

SIUC gives lessons in foreign customs

SKIP THE CAR:

Travel abroad more enriching than car, Simon tells students.

TRAVIS AKIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The rituals of a 797-year-old tea ceremony, the art of swordsmanship and a seminar on Russian icons illustrated the diversity of SIUC students as they performed for area high school students.

More than 1,300 high school students attended the 25th annual Foreign Language Day for area high schools Tuesday at the Student Center. The event was sponsored by the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures.

The day's events included a scholar bowl in which students had to answer questions about foreign languages and culture.

There also were presentations including the Japanese tea ceremony, a seminar on Russian icons and a demonstration in iaido, the art of Japanese swordsmanship.

In his opening remarks, former Sen. Paul Simon reminded the students that foreign language goes beyond the textbooks used in classes.

"I hope most of you are not just studying in a classroom," said Simon, an SIUC professor of journalism and political science. "The cost of a used car is about the same as traveling abroad. If you have a choice of a car or traveling to another country, traveling can enrich your life more than a car."

Giving the high school students an opportunity to learn culture beyond the classroom, students including Sumiko Seki, a graduate student in telecommunications from Fukuoka, Japan, took time to instruct them in different aspects of her culture, including the tea ceremony.

The tea ceremony began in Japan shortly after the tea plant was introduced in 1200 A.D. Shuko, a Buddhist priest, began to serve tea as a ritual, and after a tea hut was built for him, he became Japan's first tea master.

The original ritual was performed by men, but by 1900 A.D. the tea ceremony became something that was taught to women. Today most tea ceremonies are conducted by women.

Everything from the design of the cup to the way the tea hostess walks is important to the ceremony. Seki cleaned each item in the ceremony to show her respect for her guests.

Another presentation highlighted the art related to Russian culture.

Jason Pritchett, a sophomore in art history and French from Carterville, gave the presentation on Russian iconography.

Icons are religious art work depicting the saints of the church and usually tell a story related the saint's life.

"Icons are a reminder of the presence of God," he said. "They are devices that inspire prayer."

The iconographer, the artist who paints icons, in the Eastern Orthodox Church cannot live a life that betrays the teachings of the church. There are strict rules that apply.

"In order to be an iconographer you have to have the church's blessing. In the Eastern Orthodox Church you have to prepare for painting. The brushes are blessed, and there is a special ritual of consecration."

Meredith Deters' goal is to enter the business world with the language skills she is learning by studying Spanish.

"I thought it would help me in the business world," Deters, a freshman at Teutopolis High School, said. "It would help in talking to people at conventions."

While many students attended the seminars and learned about foreign cultures, others such as Kandace Bunselmeyer, a junior at Trico High School, were there to learn more about SIUC and their future in college.

"I came to see what SIUC had to offer," she said. "They do offer a business minor for Spanish. I plan on traveling and working in management. I just wanted to get to know it (SIUC)."

City raises water rate

UPGRADES: Raised revenue will be used to replace water mains.

JENNIFER CAMDEN
DE POLITICS EDITOR

Carbondale residents' water bills will go up 10 percent beginning in December to help pay for the city's water line replacement projects.

The current city rate of $2.18 per 1,000 gallons will rise 22 cents to $2.40 per 1,000 gallons, said City Manager Jeff Doherty.

Because residents are charged for a minimum of 6,000 gallons per month, bills will rise by at least $1.32 per month.

Residents' minimum water bills, now at $13.08 per month, will rise to $14.40 per month.

The water rate for SIUC, which buys city water at a lower rate, will increase 20 cents, from $1.94 per 1,000 gallons to $2.14 per 1,000.

City Engineer Larry Miles said $779,000 for water system improvements is budgeted for next year.

The projects include water line replacements on Pierce, Allman, Davis and Gum streets, the city's fiscal 1998 budget states.

Miles said replacements on West

Main Street and Walnut Street were scheduled for this year but were not completed.

"Several we had scheduled this year we didn't get to because we didn't have the money," he said. Doherty said older water lines do not affect water quality, but they tend to need frequent repairs.

For example, he said, the city recently replaced the water line underneath Wall Street, a project that first was suggested in 1986, after making numerous repairs to it. "We had to push that project back over time because we just didn't have the resources to go in and do it."

He said the board will not necessarily approve the plan and may opt to continue under the old plan or create its own plan.

Wilson said the BOT approves tuition and fee increases one year at a time and projects increases three years in advance.

The plan states that the Illinois Board of Higher Education should adjust its requirement that out-of-state and international students pay three times the tuition rate of Illinois students.

The task force recommends that they pay twice as much.

Also the task force further recommends that SIU consider a tuition pre-payment plan so people could buy credit hours at current tuition rates and use them later.

Wilson said the plan delineates ways of increasing tuition without causing students to look elsewhere for an education.

"We don't know if people are more inclined not to attend a school based on tuition," he said. "It comes down to what you get for what you pay."

Wilson said if the plan is approved, the increases could take effect in either fiscal year 1998 or 1999.

The SIUC tuition task force studied tuition, fees and housing costs at SIU and compared them to other Illinois public universities.

Wilson said the task force was comprised of faculty, administrators, and students.

"Students have been involved all semester long and will continue to be in the next two months," he said.

Sanders said in the two months before the BOT votes on the increases, he wants to compile recommendations about tuition from the Faculty Senate, the Graduate Council, the Undergraduate Student Government and the Graduate and Professional Student Council.

"There are some concerns with the wording," Bost said. "I have some questions and have to listen to the debates before I decide how to vote."

Bost said, for example, that a female prison guard who is a lesbian should not be hired in a position that requires her to oversee female prisoners showering.

"The language now says you can't ask, but if a person is a professed homosexual, should they be placed in that position?" Bost said.

Luetchefeld could not be reached for comment.

Kohoutek said it is good to have cooperation between students and Carbondale residents.

"It marks the first time in a while that the community and students have come together on an issue," she said.

"It's important for the bill to pass because discrimination in any form is wrong."

The bill, an amendment to the Human Rights Act, also would make denying housing to people because of their sexual orientations a violation of their civil rights.

"As a student of SIU and a member of the Carbondale community, I find it frightening that I can lose my job or be beaten up with no legal recourse," Kohoutek said.

The bill also would outlaw preferential treatment or other affirmative action based on sexual orientation.

Kris Bein, GLBF co-director, is confident the bill will pass the House.

"It is the first step to getting the rights we deserve. I have high hopes about the group going up there," said Bein, a junior in social work from Chicago.

The bill is scheduled to be debated before the entire House within the next few weeks.

Alomar booted in return from suspension

LIKE A CRIMINAL: League and Orioles officials are ready to forgive, but are the fans?

WASHINGTON POST

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The first day of the rest of Roberto Alomar's baseball career came here on Monday, and things went about as well for the Baltimore Orioles' second baseman as he probably could have hoped.

Alomar provided two hits and two nice defensive plays in the Orioles' 6-5 loss to the Kansas City Royals.

He was booed by the crowd of 40,052 on hand at Kauffman Stadium for the Royals' home opener, but the reception was not nearly as venomous as those in Cleveland and New York during last year's playoffs. Alomar even received some kind words from a group of fans after he signed autographs for about 10 minutes before Monday's game.

"At some point, people have to let it go," Orioles first baseman Rafael Palmeiro said on Monday. "They can't keep treating him like he's a criminal."

"The fans aren't going to forget right away. But he's going to keep showing them what a great player he is, and he's going to win them back over."

Alomar was vilified after he spit into the face of umpire John Hirschbeck during an on-field argument last Sept. 27.

Only an injunction issued by a federal judge in Philadelphia kept the major-league umpires from boycotting postseason games last year in response to American League President Gene Budig's decision to suspend Alomar for five games and his refusal to enforce that suspension during the playoffs.

Orioles officials were eager to have Alomar back in the lineup but were wary about how he'd be affected by the attention that he undoubtedly will continue to have to endure this season.

General Manager Pat Gillick gave Alomar the option of rejoining the team on Friday in Baltimore.

But Alomar wanted to play and traveled here on Sunday from Sarasota, Fla., where he spent his suspension working out at the club's minor-league spring-training complex.

"I'm tickled to death to have him," Orioles Manager Davey Johnson said.

"I missed him. I missed having him in the lineup and I missed having him around. He's going to be sensitive to (crowd reactions). But I told him I'd be worried when they don't boo you or cheer you."

Indeed, Alomar avoided rehashing the incident and the tumultuous times that followed it when reporters surrounded his locker before and after Monday's game.

"I don't want to start something up," Alomar said. "I don't worry about nothing. I'm just going to go out there and play the game of baseball."

"If you worry about things, you're not going to play the way you can play. ... I want to leave it at that."

Woods ready for Masters

TIGER AT AUGUSTA:

Golfing prodigy says his approach has changed since turning pro.

WASHINGTON POST

AUGUSTA, Ga. — So what's the state of Tiger Woods' game going into his third Masters, and first as a professional golfer?

This past Friday, after an intense week of practice back home in Orlando, Woods, 21, shot a 13-under 59 at his home course, playing with his friend Mark O'Meara, who shot 70 at the Isleworth Country Club. This was no local muni, but rather a tough, 7,200-yard, par-72 layout. Woods was 10 under after his first 10 holes.

Though Woods has never broken par at Augusta National in six Masters rounds — finishing tied for 41st in 1995 and missing the cut last year — he remains among the favorites here mostly because of his length off the tee, with the right-to-left action the course requires. Last year, he played the 500-yard 15th hole with a driver and a 9-iron.

He also said Tuesday he had tried to tighten up his swing over the past few weeks in practice, that he is putting very well and "I'm hitting a lot of crisp shots with my irons as well as my tee shots. The work I did at home was definitely worthwhile, and I'm swinging a lot better than I was last year."

Though he finished tied for 31st in his last event — The Players Championship two weeks ago — and hasn't really been in contention since finishing second at Pebble Beach two months ago, Woods is fully aware many people are picking him to win.

"To be honest with you, I don't care what anybody else says, as always," said Woods, a Stanford sophomore a year ago. "I just came here to win. That's what I'm going to do in every tournament. I'll try to stay as patient as possible and gut it around. This time I'm here as a professional. I didn't take finals last week, I didn't have to write any papers. I was able to practice getting ready for a tournament like I normally do."

SPORTS TALK

panic just yet. SIUC has 21 conference games remaining with 1-4 Bradley on the agenda Saturday and Sunday.

The Salukis are by no means lousy. They are nowhere near that. Callahan is still up to his ears in talent and has a team that has yet to put it all together. Hopefully that will happen today.

They've got solid hitting in Brad Benson (476), Aaron Jones (.387), Jerry Hlairston (.354) and Matt Dettman (.344). As a team the Salukis are hitting .362 in the league. In Valley action alone Jones, Jamold Little and Cory Schrank are all hitting .500 or above.

The pitching staff has managed to get by without the services of Tory Hlattan and Aaron Bresko, both serving 15-day suspensions for violating team rules. Whether or not they will factor into the remainder of the season has yet to be determined as both players return with the Bradley series.

The Salukis have even survived the loss of David Piazza, who is gone for the season after suffering an elbow injury.

Obviously the team has got what it takes to overcome unforeseen obstacles. Granted, the Salukis should be among the conference leaders at this point in the season.

But then again, they have only played seven conference games thus far, including what should have been a sweep of the Panthers Sunday.

So what if Callahan lashed out. It's no big deal and that's not what's important. What is important is whether or not the message hit home. The lashing was probably just what the club needed.

Rest assured the Salukis will heed Callahan's warning and go out today intent on keeping away from such lashings in the future.

SOFTBALL

sophomore catcher Brooke Hattermann gave SIUC an added boost from the plate by going 2-for-3 with one double and one RBI.

Sophomore shortstop Lori Greiner added the triple that drove in one Saluki run.

In the night cap, SIUC went 11-for-29 as a team, including a 2-for-4 effort by Greiner and a 3-for-4 effort from center fielder April Long.

After weeks of solid pitching and defense, Brechtelsbauer is happy to see some offensive consistency in her team.

"We are getting some good pitching and we're getting some good defense," she said.

"And think the thing that has happened in the last week, that I think we were slow in starting, was our offense. Now we are starting to swing the bats a little bit better."

TENNIS

of a fight."

Junior Mick Smyth said that while the team took a big step from last week, Southwest Missouri State was just the better team Saturday.

"I think they were stronger at the top of their lineup," he said. "We expected a lot of close matches, but it just didn't go our way."

SIUC will be in action beginning Friday against Bradley University and Indiana State University in Peoria. Game times have not been announced.

Ifner said that while he knows what Bradley brings to the court, he is interested to find out about Indiana State.

"Indiana State is a unknown, because they have a new coach who went out and recruited players on campus," he said. "There were only three on the team during the fall season, and now there is seven, which should make for good, high-level matches."

Baseball Dawgs
need to heed
coach's warning

So Dan Callahan had a few choice words for his club following Sunday's debacle against the University of Northern Iowa. So what?

No matter how you slice it, the criticism was necessary.

Saluki baseball followers can read whatever they want into Callahan's critical response to SIUC's pathetic display against the Panthers, which led to two unnecessary losses.

He is not known for blowing up that often. He prefers a more subtle approach. But when seven errors lead to a score of unearned runs, what else is there to do?

Remember, Callahan's job is to motivate his players and make them winners any way he can. Isn't that every coach's job? Think about it. If lashing out were a crime, Indiana's Bobby Knight would be serving two life sentences.

At this point in SIUC's season, there is little room for compassion, and if things have to come down to an all-out butt-chewing or a rash of criticism to make 'em winners, then so be it.

And so Callahan's Salukis will take the field against the University of Evansville today a little wiser, a little more tired from extra workouts and a lot more focused on what needs to be done to ensure themselves of a conference tournament appearance, which is unlikely if they continue to display the same lackadaisical approach as they did Sunday.

Prior to Sunday's letdown, the Salukis were on a roll, winners of five of their last six games. A sweep Sunday would really have given them some momentum. Too bad the defense forgot to show up.

With a 3-2 conference record heading into the Northern Iowa series SIUC had a perfect opportunity to improve in the standings, yet blew that chance with its biggest defensive letdown of the season.

Now instead of being at the top, they are clinging to the league's No. 5 spot with a 3-4 record.

"Here we are picked to finish third in the polls and we're down near the bottom and playing like we ought to be at the bottom," Callahan said.

Wins from here on out are extremely critical. With SIUC's string of bad luck when it comes to Mother Nature, they cannot afford to play like they did against the Panthers again.

But Callahan has had a rather rough time of convincing some of his players that with each and every loss, the Salukis become a heartbeat away from not even making a conference tournament appearance. Each and every game is critical.

"That's what concerns me," Callahan said. "I don't know if some of our guys understand how much parody there is in this conference. All these games mean a lot. They might not seem monumental now, but you start getting into 24, 26 on, not only do the games mean a lot as far as wins and losses, but (it also means a lot) where you are in the standings as far as qualifying for the conference tournament."

Luckily there is no need of an all-out

Carisa Winters struck out a career-high 12 batters without allowing a walk, and Jamie Schutteck set a school record as the softball Salukis swept both games of a doubleheader against SIUE Tuesday at IAW Fields.

Paced by Winters, SIUC won the first game 5-1 and the nightcap 9-2 thanks to Schutteck, who set the school record for most career wins with 57.

"I didn't even realize I was that close," Schutteck said after the game. "Nobody tells me. I just read about it in the paper."

Winters' seven inning gem upped her record to 6-7 with the win, which ended the Cougars' (27-11) 23-game winning streak.

"I like (the no base on balls) better than the strikeouts," Winters said. "Giving someone a free ride is the worst thing to do. If I pitch the ball over the plate, hopefully they will strike-out or the defense will take care of them."

Winters said after a bit of a rocky start, she is starting to see some improvements in her pitching.

"I am starting to get my drop ball a little bit better," Winters said. "And I am not walking as many batters as I did in previous games."

The Salukis are now 24-11 on the season after winning the nightcap. Schutteck recorded her 16th win of the season.

Saluki coach Kay Brechtelsbauer was pleased with what the record-setting performance by Schutteck means to the Salukis' program.

"You want every player as they come in to do better than the person ahead of them because that means the program is going forward," she said. "I'm pleased for Jamie because she is certainly deserving. It has taken a lot of hard work on her part, and she has gone through some injuries and struggles."

Both of SIUC's runs in the second game went to Tracy Remspecher, who started the game but was pulled after 1/3 of an inning. Schutteck came on in relief of Remspecher, throwing 6.2 innings and allowing only four hits and no base on balls, while striking out six batters.

Overall, the solid pitching of Winters and Schutteck is not a complete surprise for Brechtelsbauer and the Salukis.

"I won't say it's more amazing, but I think they are doing an outstanding job," Brechtelsbauer said. "But I don't think it's anything that is a surprise, they are talented athletes."

The Salukis got a solid offensive performance in both games of the doubleheader, recording two doubles and one triple on the afternoon.

Salukis fall to Aces, Bears on tennis court

PUSHED INSIDE:
Forced indoors by rain,
Dawgs drop 9 of 12
matches in Evansville.

BRAD WEBER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC's men's tennis team should have stayed outdoors in the rain Saturday at Evansville, Ind.

After having to play inside because of the weather, the Salukis were upended by the University of Evansville Friday 4-1 and Southwest Missouri State University Saturday 5-2.

Men's coach Brad Ifner said there were no excuses for the losses but, because his team was not outside, Evansville was able to take advantage of their powerful serves.

"Being indoors doesn't affect the ball as much as being outdoors does," he said. "Evansville was able to take advantage and capitalize to win when they had to."

Kyle Henry won SIU's only point against the Aces as he came from behind to grab the victory in three sets. Also providing a fight for the Salukis (3-10, 0-5) was freshman Juan Carlos England.

Ifner was happy with the performances of the two individuals.

"I was impressed with Kyle's effort this weekend," he said. "He fell behind in the first set but battled back to take the point. It was also nice to see Juan Carlos England play tough and nearly force a third set."

England said in his match against Evansville's Duncan Sherriff, he played his best tennis of the year, but lost his focus on a controversial call after leading 3-0 in the first set.

"It made me angry that the umpire said my ball was out of play," he said. "After the call I lost more of my mental game than anything, but I would just call my match bad overall luck."

In the Salukis' match against Southwest Missouri State, SIUC kept it close in the beginning as freshman Randy de Guzman won a 6-3, 7-6 decision at the No. 2 spot to cut the Bears' lead to 2-1. Junior Brian Eitzkin won his first match of the season with a 6-2, 6-2 win as well, but it was too late for the Salukis.

Ifner was disappointed by the performance of doubles play against the Bears and talked with his team about regaining its focus for the rest of the matches.

"After the doubles matches I had a meeting with the team," he said. "I told them we have to show something in our singles play because the first matches didn't indicate we put up much
