IRS rules restrict summer jobs

HALF TIME: New tax rules require enrollment in at least six hours to work on campus.

BRIAN EBERS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Students who plan to work over summer on college campuses and take less than six credit hours must either take another course or work elsewhere.

The Internal Revenue Service in January amended the definition of half-time enrollment at public universities as pertinent to financial aid and on-campus employment.

SIUC, in compliance with the IRS revenue procedure governing taxation and availability requirements for federal financial assistance, requires undergraduates maintain six credit hours, and graduate students maintain three credit hours each semester regardless of duration.

Pam Britton, director of Financial Aid, said the Financial Aid Office is busy communicating the new guideline to deans and academic advisers.

The IRS granted a one-time exception to the guidelines for students who plan to be employed on campus and in their final semester or finishing a thesis or dissertation.

At SIUC, students are encouraged to speak with their academic advisers and bring proof of graduation to the Student Employment Office on the third floor of Woody Hall to apply for the exception.

"We were glad to see the IRS granted this exception because SIUC has been doing this for students for some time," Britton said.

The revised federal guidelines require students be students first and employees second, said Kevin Bame, director of tax management and compliance for SIUC.

The revenue procedure also exempts students from FICA taxes, so long as they maintain half-time status with a university.

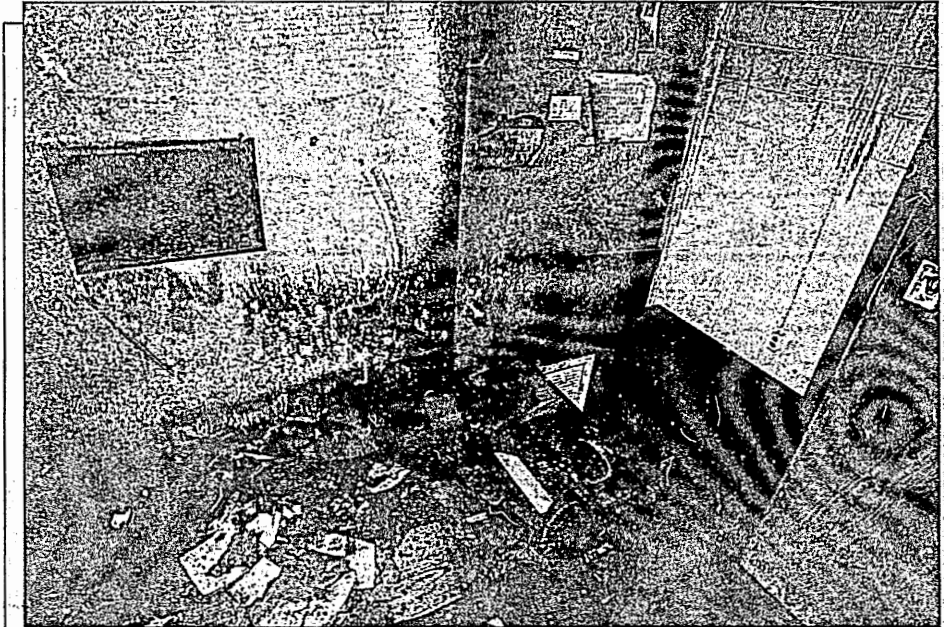

"The revenue procedure is good news for everyone," Bame said. "It puts everyone on a level playing field."

Prior to the existing federal regulation, the IRS jealously held universities to the informal "12/20" rule regarding the withholding of Federal Insurance Compensation Act taxes.

Under the old plan, as long as a student maintained 12 credit hours and worked no more than 20 hours a week on campus they were exempt from the 7.65 percent FICA tax, which funds Social Security.

"The schools felt that the 12/20 rule was not the spirit of the law," Bame said.

"It was always a pay-period by pay-period determination. We now have a rule that

STRAY SPARKS: Welding accident ignites fire that consumes Neckers office.

JAYETTE BOLINSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

An SIUC physics graduate assistant says the fire in the Neckers Building Monday afternoon damaged $1,000 worth of textbooks in his office.

Bob Baer, a physics graduate assistant whose office received the most damage in the fire, said nearly everything in his office was burned or heavily damaged by smoke and water.

"I had some library books in there that burned," he said.

"All of my undergraduate and graduate texts were in there and they all burned."

SIUC Police and the Carbondale Fire

Department responded Monday to a fire started when sparks from a construction worker's welder on the roof of Neckers landed on furniture in Baer's office.

Four offices contained within Room 501 at the top of the C-wing stairs in Neckers were affected by the fire. Baer's office sustained the most damage of the four.

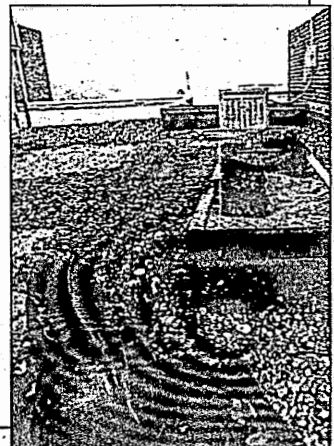

The walls and a metal desk in Baer's office were blackened from smoke. The carpet and ceiling tiles received extensive water damage. A desk chair and a sofa also were charred in the fire.

Monday's fire was the second fire in two weeks.

A March 23 fire started in the basement of Neckers was also caused by sparks from welding activities.

Argersinger's puts priority on shared governance

WELCOMING: Incoming SIUC chancellor pledges an open office to students, faculty.

HAROLD G. DOWNS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC's new chancellor says closing the gap between faculty and students is the No. 1 priority for the University.

"Building a sense of shared governance with faculty and students and creating new mechanisms to do that continue to be the major issues," said Jo Ann Argersinger, provost for the University of Maryland Baltimore County.

"The first thing I would want to do is meet with the different constituency groups and hear how their shared governance is working, and hear what changes may need to be made in that regard."

She was named chancellor at the March Board of Trustees' meeting, chosen from a pool of four finalists.

Argersinger, who will be in the Carbondale area this week to continue her search for a home, said she will make extensive efforts to get acquainted with students beginning July 1 when she officially moves into the office now occupied by Chancellor Donald Beggs.

"I would like to have focus groups, and I will probably work with informal advisory groups," Argersinger said.

"I would like to have a diverse setting with a variety of students on campus. That includes meeting with the student government and Greek organizations."

One topic she plans to discuss when she takes the reins is student research for both undergraduate and graduate students, which she said helps undergraduates advance to

SIUC students win defense contract

MONEY: Aramax Inc. developed into lucrative business from hobby origins.

TRAVIS DeNEAL
DE POLITICS EDITOR

What started as a childhood hobby has turned into a profitable business for two SIUC students who recently won a contract with the United States Department of Defense for their work on remote control electronics.

Matt Berry and Kent Stewart are the co-founders of Arcamax Inc., a local company that began in the top floor of the duo's house and grew to flourish, so much that they moved to the Dunn-Richmond Economic Development Center.

Berry and Stewart, originally from Oklahoma, said they began toying with remote control vehicles as youngsters. Both quickly graduated from the school of remote control cars to the more complex hobby of flying remote control helicopters.

Berry moved to Carbondale after working in Washington as an analyst for Intel while Stewart began school at SIUC. As the two childhood friends studied and worked with electronics, they developed their own gyro, the mechanism that stabilizes remote controlled aircraft like helicopters.

Arcamax Inc. began selling its part, the only American-made gyro, to aeronautical companies with military connections such as the U.S. anti-drug program last year, Arcamax has taken a more futuristic turn, manufacturing a tiny remote control surveillance craft that will be used for urban warfare situations and counter-drug measures.

BIG TOYS FOR DEFENSE: Kent Stewart (right) and his partner Matt Berry (left), co-founders of Arcamax Inc., fly a remote control helicopter that is often used to test equipment outside their office in the Dunn-Richmond Economical Development Center Wednesday morning. Arcamax Inc. recently won a contract with the United States Department of Defense to make a tiny helicopter-like remote control surveillance craft.

The aircraft, known as a Micro Aerial Vehicle or MAV, is between 4 and 6 inches in height and has a vertical shaft propeller, much like a helicopter. It contains a camera for surveillance, a radar system for guidance and a Global Positioning System, which also aids in guidance. It can be controlled up to two miles away.

Berry said the guidance systems in the MAV allow it to stay obstacle-free as it travels to the determined surveillance location.

"It can see an object and fly around that object," he said. "Also, it can fly down a hallway and tell the operator that a door is on the right. Sure enough, if the operator turns the camera to the right, the door will appear."

As Stewart demonstrates a remote control helicopter in the Arcamax office, he contrasts the chopper's controls to the handling of a MAV.

"Controlling a MAV is more like a video game," he says as the helicopter hovers and slightly shifts to left from the prevailing wind. "Many of the real world variables are removed, where as I have to deal with them when

Feds investigating animal deaths at Disney park

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is investigating a series of animal deaths at Walt Disney World's new theme park, which is scheduled to open in two weeks.

Disney officials overseeing the 500-acre Animal Kingdom have confirmed the deaths of 12 exotic animals.

USDA officials said they decided to look into the matter after receiving complaints from anonymous and named sources.

USDA officials wouldn't say what their investigation will encompass, but a but a Disney spokeswoman said company officials are confident inspectors will find they are taking excellent care of the park's 1,000 animals.

If Disney is found in violation of the federal Animal Welfare Act, the company could be fined or lose its license to display animals.

Residents rally in support of Moore

MOTION: Concerns about tourism director's performance went unexplained.

SARA BEAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Several Carbondale residents came forward in support of Carbondale Convention and Tourism Bureau Director Debbie Moore at the Carbondale City Council meeting Tuesday night.

At the March 31 city council meeting, council members Maggie Flanagan, Mike Neill and Mayor Neil Dillard voted in favor of a motion to notify the bureau of concerns voiced by the council members as it may directly affect funding from the city council. Council members Larry Briggs and John Budstick voted against the motion.

The testimonies on the behalf of Moore, who was not at the meeting, came after some members of the council voiced concerns over Moore's performance as director of bureau.

None of those who voted in favor of the motion offered any public explanation of their concerns.

Budstick motioned to fully fund the bureau for next year. The motion was seconded by Briggs, but Neill and Dillard opposed the motion because of the absence of Flanagan.

Flanagan, from whom the original complaint against Moore generated, was not present at the meeting. Tuesday evening because her mother is terminally ill with cancer.

The bureau receives about $201,000 in city hotel tax money annually. The council will vote on the funding for the bureau, along with the entire proposed $27.4 million budget for fiscal year 1999, at the April 21 city council meeting.

Carbondale citizens and business owners praised Moore for her work at the bureau and reprimanded the members of the city council for publicly criticizing Moore.

Eugene Groves, president of the bureau, spoke on Moore's behalf citing the numerous accomplishments and awards the bureau has received under Moore's direction.

About 70 percent of travelers visiting the Carbondale and Jackson County area visit in response to efforts of the bureau, according to a study conducted by the bureau and the University of Illinois Tourism Research Center. The study also said the bureau is responsible for creating $1.6 million in local tax revenues in the last three years.

Based on the involvement and the accomplishments of the bureau, its board of directors requested that they receive the full amount of funding recommended by City Manager Jeff Doherty, $200,926.

Carbondale resident Robert Stevenson said all the parties concerned should seek reconciliation somewhere other than in the public eye and compared the squabbles to "having cats in a gunny-sack."

Stevenson said he had spoken to members of the council and the community about Moore's performance and few offered anything but praise of Moore. He cautioned the council from acting hastily.

"Remember the devil you get may be worse than the devil you've got," he said.

Utilize debate to learn about candidates

Apparently, the Student Election Committee does not expect students to show up for tonight's student election debate, since it is conducting the debate in the Student Center's Mississippi Room that is barely large enough to hold the candidates themselves.

Undergraduate Student Government elections are April 15 and the campaigns are gaining momentum. Awareness and activism in the decision-making process are extremely important to make sure that constituents, the students, are not forgotten.

Student involvement in the upcoming elections, or any other university matter, is very important. Those elected make decisions that can affect the entire student body. The debate at 7:00 p.m. is a chance for students to see firsthand what the presidential and vice-presidential candidates, as well as the student trustee candidates, feel are the important issues at SIUC. Please do not cast your vote based on a flyer. Get educated.

The presidential campaigns this year are as follows: In the Shakedown Party, Rob Taylor is vying for USG president with current Student Trustee Pat Kelly as his running mate. Their platform is to unite and strengthen the student voice. In the Saluki Party, USG Sen. Sean Henry is running for USG president with Greg Akers as his partner. One of their main concerns being to ensure that USG lives up to its motto of representing the students. Last, but not least, the Progressive Party is headed by current USG Vice President Kristie Ayres and current Chief of Staff Jackie Smith.

They have been promoting their ideas through the acronym F.A.I.T.H. (Freedom, Academics, Information, Technology, and Housing).

The student trustee candidates are Mike Ruta and Bob Hanfland.

The debate is a perfect opportunity for students to become knowledgeable about the people running and the issues that they are endorsing. Issues, whether or not students want to admit, will affect each and every one of them.

Although most elections turn out to be popularity contests among students, the idea of students having a form of representation within the University should be taken seriously. Complaints are constantly heard but no one takes initiative towards actual change. Instead of voting for who you think is cooler this year, take the time to learn about the candidates and how their ideas would affect you, and vote off of knowledge, not ignorance. Do not allow political machines to insert people into office. Let democracy and a true vote of the people decide the election.

Throughout the semester the Daily Egyptian has tried to combat the issue of student apathy. The action by the election commission suggests that they are anticipating a low turnout of student, so perhaps it would be in this student body's best interest to prove them wrong and not live up to their expectations. Show up and let USG know what is important.

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

Right or wrong, the answer is choice

After seeing a pro-life insert accompanying the Daily Egyptian Wednesday, I have concluded that we are shouting about the wrong things. First, one of the insert's many accusations is that pro-choicers support abortion because of overpopulation. The notion that the world's population could fit in Texas is beside the point. A woman has an abortion — right or wrong — because she feels it is in the best interests of her and her family.

Take the issue of women's rights: a sound argument, but the opposition says, "what about the fetus's rights?" and then you have people fighting over whose rights are more important.

The Bible has been used to vilify abortion, however pro-choicers can cite Genesis 2:7, "And the Lord God formed man ... and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."

Not until Adam takes his first breath does he have a soul. This would suggest the soul is imbued upon birth, not conception. No solution here; once again, you have people shouting because of contradictions within the Bible. And what about the plethora of other religions existing here in America? On whose beliefs are we supposed to base legislation? None, because America is not a theocracy. Your beliefs may guide your actions, but you can not force them on others.

Now, about limitation compromises: abortion is either legal or it is not. If it is legal, then there can be no restrictions to those who desire it. Why make restrictions to prevent certain women from having an abortion if there is nothing legally wrong with it? Otherwise, if it is illegal, that is your restriction. Anything in between makes no sense.

What these perspectives seem to forget is that the central issue of abortion is when human life begins. The trouble is, science can not answer this question. How do we define human life? Do we use presence of human DNA? Heartbeat? Respiration? Higher brain activity? Physical separation from the mother?

There is no legal precedent to use any as the beginning of life. Some suggest life begins at conception, others at birth. Which do we use?

A human being is more than the sum of its parts, and "what is a human?" may be the most complex question in the universe. Though many believe that life begins at conception, this can not be scientifically proven any more than one could prove life begins at birth.

Given this situation, the only solution that respects us as thinking beings is to allow the individual to make her own decision, based upon her own spiritual beliefs, her own emotions, her own situation. Since we can not satisfactorily prove when life begins, abortion must be a personal issue, not political.

In the abortion debate, we must remember that a free society is often a difficult and untidy one. The argument for the freedom to choose is not that it is about a woman's control of her body, spiritually condoned or always fair, but that it is a choice we all have the right to make.

Contract proposal far from acceptable

Dear Editor,

Faculty may want to read these pages of the recently distributed "Board Settlement Proposal" with special attention:

Page 12: The impressive-sounding 12 percent salary raise breaks down to a very modest 3 percent, 4.5 percent, 4.5 percent which leaves SIUC even further behind peer institutions, which will be getting raises that size or larger. Moreover, the increased raises for promotion, equity, etc. are first taken out of this money only by merit, to be determined "in accordance with merit plans approved by the Provost" (12). Why would the administration not propose the redistribution of merit peer review according to departmental operating papers, voted on by faculty?

Page 21: "The Board reserves the right to lay off bargaining unit faculty members from time to time based upon the Board's decision to curtail or discontinue a program, financial considerations, or other legitimate considerations." This clause allows the Board to terminate employees for considerations which they, and they alone, define as "legitimate." The proposal also states, "a tenured or higher ranking member of the faculty may be laid off first, while the non-tenured or lower ranking faculty member is retained" (21). Together, these clauses do away with tenure in any meaningful sense.

Page 29: For grievances over promotion, tenure, or merit, the "arbitrator cannot substitute his or her judgment in place of the Board's." This clause eliminates redress for such grievances outside the court system.

Perhaps even more important, however, is what is not in this proposal. There is no protection from the administration's accelerating rate of eliminating faculty lines, with the consequent erosion of programs, loss of research time, and inevitable rise in course load. As President Sanders was quoted in the Daily Egyptian, "I don't want to kid you, we may have to leave some positions unfilled to do this." In particular, there is no protection for the continuing existence of the research, unfunded as well as funded, necessary to mission of a Carnegie II university. Does Sanders think that this faculty would really trade away tenure, bidding grievance procedures, and protection against the continued erosion of programs and research time for a modest 4.5 percent raise, or for any raise?

How stupid does Sanders think we are?

Mary Lamb, professor, English.

Contract negotiations affect student opinions

Dear Editor,

During my time at this University I have been amazed by many things. Recently it has been at the faculty and administration disagreements. How can the faculty expect to receive any respect when they act like children? When has complaining ever solved anything? You (the faculty) seem to act as though you deserve a better contract. It may be true that SIU's professors are the lowest paid, but so what? Who is forcing you to stay here? You know how much you were to be paid when you started teaching here. If you do not like it, leave. If you think you deserve a raise, ask the students in your classes. Ask them if you, as an individual teacher, deserve a raise.

If you do not get at least 75 percent of your students to say yes, then in my opinion, you do not deserve one. If you want to strike then so be it. I do not want people who care more about money than my education trying to teach me. You say that the administration does not care about teaching and research, yet I bet that most of you have students that would say the same about you.

The administration does have its problems as well. There is a general attitude of not caring. This, I think, is the major cause for the decline in enrollment. The professors are the second major cause.

The general consensus is that students are apathetic. What do you expect when the administration and faculty cannot get along? It has been shown time and time again that this University does not care about what the students say. It seems that the people at the University are just like everyone else in this world, motivated by one thing ... money.

A few years ago people were complaining about the image of SIU. How does it look when professors only seem to be interested in more money and publicly make that fact clear? My wife is going to be a teacher and we have known from the start that teaching is not a high-paying field. You teach because you care. I wish the faculty felt the same.

Summer gas prices could drop

WASHINGTON POST

Gasoline prices this summer should be the lowest on record, after adjusting for inflation, Energy Secretary Federico Pena said Wednesday. Average prices at the pump are expected to be $1.10 a gallon for regular unleaded gasoline this summer — down from a U.S. average of $1.20 last summer.

The low prices are a result of increased worldwide oil production, a milder winter than normal in the United States and western Europe and a slowdown in the growth of demand triggered by the Asian financial crisis.

Despite recent attempts by major oil producing countries to increase prices by cutting oil production, the Energy Department's Energy Information Administration forecasts the average price of crude oil will be $14.67 per barrel, down from $17.86 last summer.

Cheap gasoline, higher household income and record-high consumer confidence will result in a 3.9 percent increase in vehicle miles traveled this summer, the biggest increase in summer driving in 10 years, the EIA predicted. U.S. motorists are expected to drive approximately 1.4 trillion miles this summer, or the equivalent of 7,200 round trips to the sun.

The national energy strategy's goals include reducing consumption by using more energy-efficient technology; ensuring against energy supply disruptions by diversifying sources of imported oil and reversing the decline in domestic production; promoting energy production and use in healthful and environmentally constructive ways; expanding research and development into new sources of energy; and cooperating internationally on energy issues.

applies across the board."

Bame said SIUC administrators and tax specialists approached the author of Revenue Procedure 98-

16 and explained that the University had traditionally allowed undergraduates to enjoy federal work study, regular campus employment and financial aid while taking three credit hours over the summer.

"[The administration] did go to bat for the students, but the IRS was not very flexible," Bame said. Guidelines from the U.S. Department of Education, in conjunction with the IRS revenue procedure, require students maintain the prescribed hours to get federal financial assistance and avoid FICA taxes regardless of the duration of the semester.

Proposed organic food regulation by the U.S. Department of Agriculture has left volunteers and customers of the Neighborhood Co-op in Carbondale wondering what the future holds for the local organic market.

STORY BY DANA DUBRIWNY

the chill the organic food industry is experiencing comes from the USDA's lack of specific prohibitions for genetically engineered foods, irradiated foods, intensive confinement of farm animals, rendered animal parts in feed and the use of toxic sewage sludge spread over farmlands and pastures.

Patrick Sweeney, a rural Carbondale organic farmer, inspects the progress of his compost pile. The pile, which is made up of primarily leaves, straw, and horse manure, is the main source of fertilizer for his three-acre organic farm.

Ben Lilliston, editorial director of Sustain, an environmental information group based in Chicago, said he believes the proposed standards are too vague and could spur the destruction of the organic industry.

local organic farmers out of the market." Patrick Sweeney is one of Carbondale's local organic farmers and provides organic foods to the Neighborhood Co-op. The business he depends on is based on the reputation he has built during the past 15 years.

"Hopefully I won't need to be certified because of the new regulations," he said. "People trust what I do, and maybe it's because we have a love for what we are doing. "I feel good about what I do and I think there is a loss of that in today's culture."

Sweeney concentrates on constantly improving the soil of his two- to three-acre organic garden. Growing a variety of about 40 different vegetables and 40 different flowers organically, Sweeney does not fear situations feared by most industrial farmers with mono-crop fields.

Having a variety of crops invites a diversity of insects to enter the garden, which allows insects to balance their populations. A mono-crop field, on the other hand, allows for only one type of insect and those must be terminated through the use of chemicals.

The Neighborhood Co-op, 104 E. Jackson Street, is working with national environmental groups to encourage local students and residents to take action by writing to the USDA against the proposed regulations.

Judy Baker, a Co-op volunteer, said that there had been few letters submitted so far, but the Earth Day Festival that will be held in the square pavilion April 22 will allow participants to voice their opinions.

Mike Fontana, a senior in English from Anna, is a regular customer at the Neighborhood Co-op. Since he was 19, Fontana has kept organic gardens and is an avid activist against chemicals used in farming.

"I have written a letter to the USDA," he said. "I understand if the government cares if you do something, but I don't understand why they care if you don't do something."

Because organic farming is absent of chemicals, Fontana wonders why the organic farm trade needs to be meddled with.

"The government mandates industrial farmers to use chemicals," he said. "It is a fallacy and a mean joke to make people use chemicals, but in order to get relief from the government, it is graduate school.

"One of the things that make undergraduates successful is having intensive research experience, and that experience provides them with writing skills and political skills that course work can't do by itself," Argersinger said.

The party school image of SIUC is one Argersinger never heard about, but she will emphasize a combination of academics and recreation for students to help ease that distinction.

Despite boiling tensions between the faculty union and the administration over contract negotiations, Argersinger said she looks forward to working closely with the union to maintain a positive relationship.

"I know there are some tense moments, but I am hoping that is resolved shortly," Argersinger said. "I will have an open and collaborative office. That has always been the way I have operated and will continue to operate."

Argersinger intends to teach history starting spring 1999 in addition to her chancellor duties. Her husband may join the teaching ranks as well.

"I intend to teach because I want to get to know the students firsthand."

JO ANN ARGERSINGER
INCOMING SIUC CHANCELLOR

"I intend to teach because I want to get to know the students firsthand," Argersinger said. "The duties of the chancellor are pretty broad and involve fund raising and making friends. It is a very big job and will require working around the clock."

She wants to bring Phi Beta Kappa, a national honor society, to SIUC to place the University among the elite schools in the country.

"If we create various scholarship opportunities and if we are successful in getting Phi Beta Kappa, that would be good," she said.

Argersinger was born in Birmingham, Ala.

She received her bachelor's degree in history from UMBC in 1974 and her master's and doctorate in history from George Washington University in 1976 and 1980. She has been provost at UMBC since 1994.

Argersinger has published two books and several articles in various history journals.

She will earn $155,000 as chancellor with an additional $27,000 housing allowance, as well as use of a University vehicle.

required on the loan application that you use them."

The federal government, as part of the 1990 Farm Bill, passed the Organic Foods Production Act which would guarantee a consistent standard for organic foods from state to state.

The passage of the act created the National Organic Program within the Agricultural Marketing Service of the USDA. The program plans to implement the organic standards once the final rules are signed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

However, the new provisions, proposed Dec. 16, 1997, have caused organic consumers like Fontana to doubt the future of the organic market.

Fontana is weary of government intervention in the food market and believes that it is based on monetary greed.

"All of these provisions are unacceptable. When they radiate the food, it kills the energy in the food and you become more susceptible to new diseases which causes a need for a larger American Medical Association," he said.

"We have been taught that there is no energy in food, and it is really too bad."

"The only research I lost was some journal articles and background research for my thesis," he said.

Baer said he estimates his property loss at just over $1,000, and Bill Weatherly, Building

Services foreman, said he has not been informed about damage estimates to the offices.

Weatherly said he does not know how sparks from the welder actually got from the roof into the building.

"It was just a fluke accident," he said. "It's just something that happens."

Baer said he was told that he would be reimbursed for his text books, but he is unsure who will pay or who is at fault for the fire.

Arcamax also is working on another project similar to a plot element in the futuristic movie

"Runaway," bullets that can follow their targets, or "smart" bullets.

Although Berry and Stewart, who take electronics classes part-time now, are building "heavy-duty" equipment through their company, which they say is necessary to keep the company successful, they continue to pursue recreational remote control projects.

"We'd like to stay in this as long as possible," Berry said. "We do stuff we don't like as much to be able to do the things we like."

Stewart agrees.

"It gives us enough money to go out and do some wild hair project," Stewart said. "We can fund a project no one else has tried doing then try to put it on the market."

Yankees pressured to win already

WASHINGTON POST

In a moment of light-hearted hubris, Yankees owner George Steinbrenner asked Joe Torre this spring whether an American League manager had ever gone undefeated.

He wasn't serious, of course, but the message was clear. Steinbrenner expects the Yankees to win the American League East title this year. He expects them to reach the World Series. He isn't going to be satisfied with anything less — which is why the club's frightening first week seemed so significant, when it really wasn't.

The Yankees have one of the most expensive rosters in the history of baseball, out by Sunday even the expansion Devil Rays were ahead of them in the standings. Steinbrenner had to love that.

The rival Orioles, meanwhile, took advantage of a soft early schedule to get the jump on the rest of the division, which focused even more attention on the Yankees' poor start.

"I think if this wasn't happening at the beginning of the season, it would be no big deal," shortstop Derek Jeter said soon after pitching ace David Cone got cuffed around by the unheralded A's last weekend. "But now it's magnified."

Everything is magnified in New York. The stars are brighter. The sandwiches are bigger. The pressure to win is greater. This year, especially.

find some people, so it wasn't until you get those phone calls back that you go, "Oh, OK, now it's final. Now we can do it." And I called Fred, and that's why the late hour. Things happen like this, and sometimes they're out of your control."

The decision to postpone comes in the midst of a media circus of reports concerning Herrin's future. Reports have included Herrin being asked to resign and refusing to do so after meeting with Hart to discuss his future Tuesday afternoon.

Hart said the extra attention has made for a difficult week.

"It's been brutal," Hart said. "It's no fun reading some of the things that you read and hearing some of the things that are said, and people suggesting you don't have a brain in your body and 'What are you doing?'

"I'm just trying to do the right thing, and the right thing for me is not the right thing for some other people, I guess. I'm just trying to do the right thing for everybody concerned, and if I get taken to task for that, so be it. I'm not judged by you all, anyway."

senior third baseman Matt Dettman and sophomore outfielder Marty Worsley. They led at one time 4-1.

But the Sycamores climbed back into the game and tied it in the bottom of the seventh inning with a one-out solo homer by outfielder Rick Angell.

The Sycamores added the go-ahead run and an insurance run as Biggs failed to shut down Indiana State. Sophomore pitcher Jim Pecoraro got the last two outs of the inning.

The Salukis blew a chance to split the doubleheader, which is even more disappointing because the Salukis were never really in the first game.

The Salukis fell victim to the Missouri Valley Conference 12-run rule, losing 13-1 in the bottom of the eighth inning when Sean Brummett hit a two-run homer off senior pitcher Chris Kulig in the first game of the doubleheader.

The Salukis took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Brad Benson hit a solo shot, his fifth of the year. But then Angell led off the bottom of the first with a triple and the Sycamores exploded for four runs in the inning.

The Salukis never scored again in the game, and the hot-hitting Sycamores continued to pound the Salukis with 18 hits.

Junior pitcher Dave Piazza was the loser and now has a record of 5-

2. Right-handed senior pitcher Tony Harden went the distance for the Sycamores and is now 5-1 on the season.

With the two losses, the Salukis have now dropped six games in a row. They are 12-21 overall and 6-8 in the conference.

The Sycamores extend their winning streak to four and improve to 21-6-1, 9-1 in conference play.

BASEBALL

The Salukis next play at 1 p.m. Friday at Abe Martin Field as they begin a four-game series against the University of Evansville.

There are more than 70 items up for grabs this year, and letters of authenticity accompany many of the items.

Baseball coach Dan Callahan said because of the success of the fish fry last year, it has now become the main fund-raiser for the baseball program.

"Last year was the first one we had, and I think we served more than 600 dinners," Callahan said. "It's our biggest fund-raiser. I think if you ask some people who went last year, they'd say it was a good time, the food was good and there was plenty to eat. The price is reasonable."

SIUC GOLF

Saluki men finish 18th in Arkansas St./Indian Invite

After opening the season with a fifth-place finish in last week's Pepsi/SMS Challenge, the SIUC men's golf team finished 18th at the Arkansas State/Indian Invitational Tuesday in Jonesboro, Ark.

The Salukis shot a 92-over par 956 to finish last among the 18-team tournament. The University of Nebraska (892), Wichita State University (897) and the University of Southern Mississippi (898) comprised the top three.

Two other Missouri Valley Conference teams, Southwest Missouri State University (916) and Illinois State University (937) finished ahead of the Salukis.

The Salukis, who have yet to record their first sub-300 round this season, were led by West Frankfort native junior Craig Castrale. Castrale finished the tournament in a six-way tie for 29th in the 92-player field after a season-best 230 (76-80-74).

The Salukis continue play Monday at the 54-hole Shocker Classic in Wichita, Kan.

Saluki women head to challenging Liz Murphey

The SIUC women's golf team travels to Athens, Ga., Friday to play in the Liz Murphey Collegiate Classic at the University of Georgia Golf Course.

According to the College Golf Foundation rankings released April 1, 11 teams in the tournament were ranked in the top 41 in the nation, including defending champion University of Georgia (5th), Furman University (6th) and Louisiana State University (7th).

"We know we have an uphill battle, but when you are playing that caliber of teams we are looking at scores more than finish," coach Dierie Daugherty said. "It is a first-class tournament and is valuable learning experience for my kids."

SIUC placed 11th of 15 schools last weekend at the Indiana Invitational in Bloomington, Ind. Senior Jamie Smith led the way with a 244, including the Salukis' only round in the 70s during the weekend. Smith's score tied her for 37th individually and was 23 shots off the pace.

NBA

High school basketball standout to jump to NBA

Korleone Young, one of the nation's top high school basketball players, is skipping college to enter the NBA draft.

"I've made this decision based on many hours of consultation with my family and friends," he said Wednesday.

Dressed in his gray and white uniform and speaking at a news conference at Hargrave Military Academy, the 6-foot-7 forward said Wednesday he has wanted to play in the NBA since he was in grade school watching Julius Erving.

"In my heart, I think I can become a good NBA basketball player," he said. Hargrave coach Scott Shepherd said Young visited Arkansas, Connecticut, Georgetown and UNLV this season and would have qualified academically had he chosen to attend college.

Young, a first-team Parade Magazine All-American in his junior and senior years, has hired an agent, Shepherd said. But he would still be eligible to attend college in the fall if no NBA team drafts him June 24.

Young hopes to be the fifth player to enter the league straight out of high school since 1995, joining Kevin Garnett, Kobe Bryant, Tracy McGrady and Jermaine O'Neal.

HUT, HUT, HIKE: Saluki football coach Jan Quarless watches over his team as they run drills during spring practice Wednesday afternoon at McAndrew Stadium. Quarless' team has been decimated by injuries this spring and is practicing with only 40 members.

The waiting game

The fate of Rich Herrin's 13-year career at SIUC rests on the outcome of Friday morning's press conference

RYAN KEITH
DE SPORTS EDITOR

SIUC men's basketball fans will have to wait just a little longer to learn the future of coach Rich Herrin.

Just two hours after scheduling a press conference to announce Herrin's future, SIUC Athletic Director Jim Hart postponed the press conference around 1 p.m. Wednesday. The press conference was re-scheduled for 10 a.m. Friday.

"I really can't say anything about what the context of it is other than what we had reported earlier," Hart said. "It's just in the best interest of all the parties to wait a little bit longer."

Herrin could not be reached for comment. Hart would not elaborate on who might be speaking at Friday's press conference.

"No, I can't at this moment," Hart said.

"I'd like to think that both Rich and I would speak, but that hasn't been determined yet."

The announcement comes at an awkward time for Herrin and the Saluki program. Wednesday marked the opening of the national spring signing period for recruits, and SIUC has two scholarships open.

Debate surrounding Herrin's future with the University began July 22, when Hart announced that Herrin's contract, which had been annually renewed unless SIUC decided otherwise, was being rewritten. Hart said at the time Herrin's deal would be re-evaluated following the 1997-98 season, and a winning record would not necessarily guarantee his return for another year.

But Herrin received a vote of confidence Nov. 11 when Hart said Herrin's deal was being restored to its rollover status and it would still be re-evaluated following the season. Herrin's current deal expires July 31.

After posting a 14-16 record this season and falling to Illinois State University in the second round of the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament Feb. 28, Herrin said a decision would be made on his future within the next six weeks. Herrin underwent hip replacement surgery in early March and has been recovering since.

Hart said the decision to postpone the press conference was made in a joint effort with SIUC Sports Information Director Fred Huff.

"It was after a few phone calls, and then you can't make the decision until you touch all bases," Hart said. "When I first got wind that we were probably going to postpone it, it was not something we could just call you all and say it's not going to happen because you (the media) had to touch base here, here, here and here."

"In the lunch hour, it's pretty difficult to SIUC put men on base and even had them in scoring position but never could get that big hit or sacrifice fly that would put the game away.

In the sixth inning, senior outfielder Joel Peters hit a lead off triple, but all the Salukis got was a couple of weak ground balls and a strike out that kept Peters stranded at third.

And then to make matters worse, the Salukis' bullpen failed to protect a one-run lead in the late innings, and the Salukis lost the second game of a doubleheader 6-4 at Indiana State, University.

Junior pitcher Jason Frasor pitched well through five innings, giving up three runs on six hits and striking out six while walking one.

He had some arm pain in the fifth, but he was able to finish the inning. The Salukis replaced him in the bottom of the sixth with junior pitcher Adam Biggs.

Biggs pitched well in the sixth, and it appeared the Salukis were cruising to a victory. They got home runs from
