University to change investment practices

The SIU Board of Trustees will revise its policies in a move to economize the University’s Investment practices, which is responsible for more than $100 million in investments, SIU President Ted Sanders says.

The change follows the release of a study by investment consultants Ennis, Knopf and Associates, of Chicago, that recommends the University consolidate its numerous investment pools into one. The study released by the firm found that the University could see a greater yield from its investments if it consolidated the investment pools and divided that pool into short-term and long-term investment pools.

The board met Thursday morning at the SIU School of Medicine in Springfield. The report, which also advises the University to hire an external investment manager to oversee the operations, comes just six months after the SIU Board of Trustees authorized Sanders to hire an external consultant to examine the University’s business practices.

“The University’s Treasury department currently manages the investments. The changes to the system improve the University’s return on investments by as much as $1 million a year after cost, Sanders said.

Dan George, an associate of Ennis, Knopf and Associates, concurred, saying that with the consolidation of the investment pools and extended investments, the University would see noticeable benefits. These benefits would come at a cost, though.

“The University could expect higher returns, but higher volatility as well can be expected with longer bonds,” George said.

In order for the University to fully implement the recommendations, the Board must change some of its policies regarding investments to coordinate with the recommendations in the study.

Currently, board policy requires that all investments satisfy three conditions. The University would see its return on investments by as much as $1 million a year after cost, Sanders said.

Dear Editor:

I am writing to express my concern regarding the recent events at the University of Illinois at Carbondale (SIUC). I am particularly concerned about the safety of students and faculty, as well as the impact of these events on the overall campus community.

First, I would like to commend the immediate response of the police in addressing the incident of a carjacking that took place last night. The swift action taken by law enforcement is a testament to their commitment to ensuring the safety of the students and faculty. However, it is concerning to hear that the suspect remains at large, and I urge the university administration to prioritize the safety of its community by providing clear guidance on safety measures and protocols.

Second, I am deeply saddened by the recent death of a student, who was found in a dormitory on campus. My thoughts and prayers are with the student's family and friends, as well as the entire SIUC community. Such incidents are traumatic for everyone involved, and I urge the university to provide the necessary support and counseling services to those affected.

Third, I am aware of the recent reports of sexual assault on campus. These incidents highlight the need for the university to take strong and immediate action to ensure a safe and inclusive environment for all students. I urge the administration to consider implementing additional safety measures and policies, such as mandatory training for all staff and students on issues of sexual assault and harassment.

Finally, I would like to commend the university for its efforts to address these issues. I believe that by working together, we can create a safer and more supportive environment for all members of the SIUC community.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

MULTI-COLOR DAY: Open house provides details on academic, social opportunities

KELLY E. HARTLEIN
DAILYEgyptian REPORTER

Sniffing nearly 5,000 invitations, Brenda Major prepares for the SIUC Multi-Color Day open house designed for prospective minority students.

"This is an opportunity to diversify the campus," said Major, assistant director for New Student Admissions. "And it shows prospective minority students that there are a wide variety of opportunities both academically and socially here."

Major, a staff and student will conduct campus tours and panel discussions beginning at 8:15 a.m. Saturday in the Student Center for any student interested in the expanded culture of SIUC. The steady increase in minority enrollment has prompted the need for such programs that focus primarily on prospective minority students.

According to Admissions and Records, Fall 1998 black non-Hispanic undergraduates and graduate enrollment has slightly increased from previous years.

Black non-Hispanic undergraduate enrollment peaked at 755 in Fall 1992 and has remained at approximately 4,500 for the past 5 years. Black non-Hispanic graduate and professional students total undergraduate enrollment for Fall 1998 was 3,958 and 4,293 graduate and professional students.

In Fall 1997, undergraduate enrollment for black non-Hispanic was 4,216, an increase with 15,556 total undergraduate students, while the graduate-professional enrollment was 355, with a total of 4,071 students enrolled.

The increase in minority enrollment sparked the interest of many faculty members.

"We saw a need for a program that focuses on the needs of the underrepresented minority students," Major said.

"We started at a small preview, and it has expanded into a traditional open house."

"This is the seventh open house offered to prospective minority students," Major said the Multi-Color Day open houses has been well-received and successful in recruiting minority students.

"We know it works," Major said. "We can visibly see this in the number of students who are choosing the prospective minority students, many of whom are black, who also attended this event in the past.

Nadia Flores, a senior in psychology from Chicago, has been an SIUC Multi-Color Day participant for the past three years and visited the University for the first time as a sophomore when she was high school during a Multi-Color Day open house.

"I had a need to be addressed," Major said. "I went to the University to become involved; I saw a need for a program that focuses on the needs of the minority students." Major said.

Department of Cinema and Photography seeks upgrade

POOR CONDITIONS: Basement renovation program would benefit student safety

TRAVIS MASS
DAILY Egyptian REPORTER

The SIUC Department of Cinema and Photography is hoping to conduct a renovation program in the future because of substandard working conditions.

Students and faculty in cinema and photography have been utilizing poorly equipped and constructed editing facilities one class at a time, developing labs in the basement of the Communications Building. Jean Stawarz, an assistant professor of screen writing, said the facilities were in need of major renovation.

"There is no space to integrate equipment for digital technology," Stawarz said. "There is not enough room in the basement. The basement space is not big enough to support the needs of the department."

"There is no space to integrate equipment for digital technology," Stawarz said. "There is not enough room in the basement. The basement space is not big enough to support the needs of the department.

The basement was slated on the Illinois Board of Higher Education's funding list because of the potential for greater accommodation and space. The renovation committee is circulating a petition to support the renovation, Stawarz said. The department hopes this will be more effective than previous efforts by the faculty to change the situation.

"I think it will be more effective because the students' voice is the strongest," Stawarz said. "They pay the tuition, and they have the right to use the facilities."

NOTED film historian to speak at SIUC Saturday

Amie Bernstein, a film historian and SIUC graduate, will be having a presentation at SIUC to promote his new book "Hollywood on Lake Michigan: 100 Years of Chicago and the Movies."

The event will take place at 11 a.m. Saturday in Room 11 6 of the Communications Building in honor of the 150th birthday of Cinema and Photography. Work.

Bernstein will be reciting and using film clips to illustrate the significant influence Chicago has had on the film industry throughout history.

Topics will include the first African-American film studio established in Chicago; writers, actors, and directors from Chicago; and the 1950s "gore flics" originating in Chicago.

Bernstein also will be discussing SIUC's connection to Chicago's role in the film industry. He will talk about SIUC graduate Dennis Fumz, Mike Dawson and Steve James, who went on to make major contributions to the Chicago film industry.

The presentation is free and open to anyone interested.

Bar patron charged with domestic battery after fight

CARBONDALE

Police arrested a 19-year-old Illinois College student for allegedly hitting his ex-girlfriend with a beer bottle and then spitting on her face.

Barry O'Brien Todisco of Carbondale, 21, was charged with misdemeanor domestic battery.

It happened in Edward's, a downtown Carbondale bar.

The victim, a junior at ISU, said Todisco walked over to an empty table near her and started yelling at her. Todisco allegedly walked to the table and hit the victim with a beer bottle. The victim's friend intervened in the fight, and Todisco allegedly bit the tip off her left middle finger.

Todisco also allegedly bit the victim to the face.

The victim's friend tried to stop Todisco before he allegedly bit off her left middle finger.

Todisco resisted arrest at the scene but later admitted to Carbondale Police officers.

The victim said she wanted to press charges against Todisco.

The victim was taken to Carbondale Memorial Hospital, where she was treated for lacerations to her face.

The victim's friend said he had been watching the fight and did not want to get involved.

Mayoral endorsement mired in mediocrity

For the most part in contrast to a mostly pro-city Dillard. Pro-sstudent in the extreme is write-in candidate Rob Taylor. A late entry to the race, Taylor has run the most admirable, old-school campaign of the three.

Taylor’s goal is to push the issues he values most to the fore on the front-lines of city government. And as such we’d rather have him in the audience catalyzing students than part of the political machine.

So who do we endorse for mayor? Well, as an editorial board we disagreed on who should be mayor when the election smoke clears, but we all agreed that neither Dillard nor Budnick would destroy Carbondale if elected.

Budnick has the business know-how to help the economy, but Dillard’s leadership has been steady and non-controversial in a city that has a University with a controversial reputation. Dillard has a reputation for being a calm figure - I think it’s safe to say he waives a lot of the controversy opinion, but Budnick revives memories of Bob Tweed at Tammany Hall.

While he has shown leadership potential on the Council, not many of the EBP Editorial board would want to live next to him. Dillard may exude the existing and somewhat outdated Carbondale political culture, but Budnick as mayor may create too much of a war for the Council to get anything done.

What we’re saying here is that if you’re going to the polls looking for an ideal mayoral hero for Carbondale, you’re not going to find it this time around.

You are voting on who is going to be mayor - and as mayor in the weak mayor government structure Carbondale has, neither Dillard nor Budnick has enough influential clout to make or break this city.

This boils down to the better of two mediocre mayors.

So when you go vote on Tuesday, please do vote. I know you’re in college - in mind and go with the candidate that impressed you because none of them sufficiently impressed us.

Hitchhikers, crack and other perils of summer travel

The hitchhiking, the crack smoking, the crazy adventures out on the road. I’ve had so many eye-opening, life-changing and downright hilarious adventures out and about. I think it’s safe to say the 25 percent of my life I’ve spent travelling has shaped who I am more than the other 75 percent I’ve spent in school.

For instance, I found out I do get along with English, the British do. I speak English. I discovered this at a club in Dublin when a guy I had just met invited me back to his place and said, “We have some really good crack.” I was completely surprised. My British friend later laughed when I told her about getting offered crack in Dublin. She gave me the American translation: “We have some really good crack. We’ll have a good time.” How was I to know? I’ve learned that driving to Florida for vacation in a Volvo with 200,000 miles on it along with your best friend and respective girlfriends is not a good idea --- at all.

Especially if you want to smoke crack in a car. I can say it was a good thing there were separate beds for me and my girlfriend when we got down there.

Bad bad could we manage separate rooms.

Everyone makes fun of the French here, but we’ve forgotten they pet their TV programs over there, and when they’re on their own turf they have no money on us “stupid Americans.” There is no worse feeling in the world than running through the train terminal in Paris with a backpack full of random clothes trying to catch a train that leaves in 20 minutes and seeing police pinning customs officials joking about the dirty American (if you think the French are dirty, you should’ve seen me after living out of a backpack for three months). Worst two words you’ll hear a French agent say to you: “Passport, please.” Which, when they find you are American, they repeat weekly by “Si, monseigneur, je vous accompagne pas.”

So let’s face it, there are no mayoral candidates running this year that will lead Carbondale to the land of milk and honey. What we do have are three candidates running three different campaigns that all say they want the same basic things.

Neil Dillard is the same Neil Dillard he’s been mayor of Carbondale for the last eight years.

He has quietly been stating his stances on the issues while appeal to the calm rational side of his character that everyone knows.

The reasons to vote for him are in what he’s done for Carbondale from his largely figurative role as mayor in a city manager-city council form of government.

And true to his position, he’s waited for the other candidates to raise the issues before he’s given his vote.

John Budnick is the anti-Dillard. He’s lit a fire under the issues on the campaign --- landlord/tenant relations, a desperate University: form of government.

It’s an issue, not one candidate running for election has said they would raise the bar-entry age. And even some non-issues such as the bar-entry age.

Dillard’s goal is to push the issues he values most to the fore on the front-lines of city government. And as such we’d rather have him in the audience catalyzing students than part of the political machine.

Jazz is not dead

JAZZ HAS NEVER BEEN LONIER

The SJUC Jazz Ensemble hopes to touch more fans during their concert at 8 tonight in Shryock Auditorium as part of the ongoing Jazz Festival this weekend. Helping them out will be Bill Overton, a celebrated musician who just finished a 14-year career playing around New York. According to Allison, the director of the Jazz Ensemble, tonight's music will be accessible for everyone.

"The music tonight is bigger, thicker and louder," Allison said. "People are more interested and in your face. Notice jazz listeners will appreciate it more."

One of the distinguishing characteristics of jazz is improvisation, which Allison relates to speaking a language.

"Improvisation is not just playing what comes out," Allison said. "It's like a musical language and you have to learn the words. If you speak a language you improve. When you put words together you're improvising.

The musician's ability to improvise relies somewhat on the

"We travel to about 100 miles north a week," Lonik said. "I can pick morels up through Memorial Day up in northern Michigan. If you follow the season you can pick up to eight weeks."

According to Lonik, there are seven different types of morels including black, white and giant worms, which all have a distinctive cone shape.

"Morels go about 100,000 mushrooms that grow in the United States, only about 12,000 are considered very safe because of their high water content. Defying myths, most mushrooms are not dangerous. Out of the 100,000 mushrooms that grow in the United States, only about 12,000 are considered very safe because of their distinctive shape. Lonik said. Lonik said the rolling hills and valleys around the lodge are prime spots for morels. "I was here last year, and I spent 22 straight days hunting and picked four or five pounds an outing," Lonik said.

“A novice doesn’t know what to listen for,” Allison said. “They think it’s nonsense, bedlam, chaos — they don’t know what to look for, but a lot of people who aren’t musicians are still huge jazz fans.”

According to Allison, playing with accomplished musicians like Bill Overton as well as practicing hard to be ready really pays off for the students.

“The students are a good group,” Allison said. “I work them hard, but it’s challenging music.

It’s my job to show them and help them get better.

“I try to keep the atmosphere as professional as possible, meaning they are expected to come prepared, ready to rehearse and know their parts.”

The students have taken his challenge, and responded well.

BASKETBALL
Jenkins drafted in the USBL
Former SIU-C senior guard Monte Jenkins was drafted by the Gulf Coast SunDogs of the 13-team United States Basketball League Wednesday.

ROAD
MVC Tournament champions, Southwest Missouri State (17-13, 1-2). "That's a long trip," Saluki head coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said of Wichita. "That's a tough road trip. It always is, always will be, and then we go over to Southwest and there we have another, what, six-hour trip? So, it's a really tough road trip every time we make it."

Although it is a long trip, Brechtelsbauer does not expect it to affect her team's performance. "We just can't worry about those things," she said. "If you can get the job done, you get it done whether at home or away. Sometimes they have less distractions on a road trip. The fact that we're going to be on the bus for so long makes it not much more difficult, but we can't look at it. That's part of the game, and we have to adjust and get it done."

"If you can get the job done, you get it done whether at home or away." -- KAY BRECHTELSBAUER - SOFTBALL COACH

The Salukis were the preseason favorite to win the MVC, followed very closely by the Bears. However, the current leader in the Valley, Wichita State, has been somewhat of a surprise. WSU was only tabbed sixth in the poll. "Wichita is 4-0, and they've got to go in there and work hard and be smart and outplay them," Brechtelsbauer said. "They know they've got to go in there and work hard and be smart and outplay them."

Brechtelsbauer is pleased to start the Valley road trip on a positive note after defeating Southeast Missouri State Wednesday in a doubleheader at VEB Fields. "I like to go into something feeling good about ourselves, rather than having lost it," Brechtelsbauer said. "That's pretty tough to get them up, and going in having won our last six is going to help us."

"One thing that really stands out is the way they've got some guys that can swing the bat a little bit from what I saw last year," Callahan said. Heuring (3-0) will round out the starting staff. The Bears swept the Salukis last Wednesday, the Bluejays lost 5-4 to Creighton on May 7-9, but the hitters realize they are far from being back on the right track with key games right around the corner.

"The way we have been playing recently has been horrific," Schley said. "We haven't hit in clutch times, we haven't been pitching well. But (against SEMO) I saw some little sparks in the last couple of innings that might give us a little boost heading into the last four games has been horrific," Schley said. "We haven't hit in clutch times, we haven't been pitching as well. But against SEMO, I saw some little sparks in the last couple of innings that might give us a little boost heading into Creighton."
Tennis team takes the stand

Salukis welcome Northern Iowa, Drake and Creighton

Paul Wexlund
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC men's tennis coach Brad Iftner knows how much of an advantage playing at home is.

He also knows it invites a whole new set of problems.

The Salukis (9-6, 2-1) begin a three-match homestand at 3 p.m. today against the University of Northern Iowa at the University Tennis Courts.

On Saturday, Drake University comes to town at 9 a.m. before the Creighton University arrives at 9 a.m. Sunday.

"The guys have a lot of friends coming out to watch us and cheer us on," Iftner said. "But it creates a situation in which the guys could get distracted by hanging out and talking to their friends instead of focusing on the match."

"I'm expecting a really close match," Iftner said. "It will probably come down to the last match of the day to decide who wins."

"The guys feel that we are slightly favored," Iftner said. "But I don't know, it could go either way. We have two weeks until the MVC tournament, and we are in the dead center of the conference season. So now is a good time to make a name for ourselves as we enter the tournament with hopefully a high seed."
