North Korean attack on plane criticized by the United States

SEOUL. South Korea (AP) — South Korea on Thursday accused North Korea of "serious military provocation" in the firing of a missile at an American spy plane and warned against further "reckless" actions.

The United States branded the missile incident an "act of lawlessness" by the communist North Korean government and said that during the mission Wednesday the SR-71 "Blackbird" spy plane was always in either international or South Korean airspace. The Pentagon said the missile missed its target by miles and the plane landed safely.

For hours after the incident the Pentagon had not directly accused the North Koreans of firing at the plane, but said the missile could have come from any of a number of launching sites in North Korea. It said the SR-71 was on a routine mission.

South Korean Defense Ministry spokesman Park Chong-shik claimed the alleged missile attack, as well as the reported intrusion of North Korean Mig jet fighters over P'anggyong Island Aug. 21, "proved that the communist North is always committing military adventures."

The military command charged on Aug. 21 that two North Korean Mig-21s had flown over P'anggyong, a U.N. controlled island about 125 miles west of Seoul, but fled when South Korean planes scrambled to intercept them. "Our armed forces will closely watch future North Korean movements and are fully prepared to counter any reckless North Korean provocation," the Defense Ministry spokesman said, adding: "We hereby issued a stern warning that in case the North continues such provocations, it should be held entirely responsible for all consequences."

The U.S. military command, meanwhile, called for a meeting of the Armistice Commission, which oversees the truce between North and South Korea. In Washington, State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said the meeting was called "to protest directly to the North Koreans this violation of the 1953 armistice agreement.

The commission was established to deal with violations of the truce that ended the fighting in the 1950-53 Korean war. At past meetings, North Korea has charged that American planes violated its air space.

The command said North Korea had not yet replied to the request for a meeting Saturday at Panmunjom, the truce village in the demilitarized zone dividing the North and South.

In a dispatch from the North Korean capital of Pyongyang, the Japanese news service Kyodo said there was no mention of the report in North Korea's news media.

The SR-71, which can fly at better than 2,000 mph, can photograph wide areas from altitudes over 50,000 feet.
Six lawmakers in leadership approved increases in program, "the government will not stand for this," she said in a statement.

"It's a good move by the governor, who recognized the mood of the taxpayers," said Patrick Quinn, head of the Coalition for Political Honesty. Quinn's group had threatened to organize a statewide taxpayer protest had Thompson signed the bill.

The coalition was the force behind last fall's Cutback Amendment, in which Illinois voters reduced the size of the House by one-third, from 177 members to 118, beginning in 1983.

The pension measure approved by Thompson would raise lawmakers' retirement benefits from 90 to 85 percent of their highest annual salary after 20 years in office. Those retiring with fewer years would get smaller increases, and all lawmakers would pay more out of their pockets into the retirement system.

Norman L. Lentz, administrator of the lawmakers' retirement system, said despite added contributions by government employees who, said, would be "a small additional cost to taxpayers." Quinn criticized Thompson's signing of the retirement bill, saying legislative pensions "are way out of line in Illinois." The average Illinois worker who contributes to Social Security for 30 to 40 years gets a smaller pension than a legislator with only eight years of service, Quinn said, citing state figures.

Stanislaw Kania warned in a speech televised Wednesday that the government will not make this "a political campaign," but it was directed against the party and the government, a commentator said.

In what appeared to be an attempt to postpone substantive negotiations, a Solidarity official said government press spokesman Jerry Urban told the union's representative he "had no time" for more discussions Friday.

The union official said Urban added he might continue the preliminary talks Saturday.

Solidarity is contending a propaganda campaign of its own. "There was indeed a campaign, but it was directed against the party and the government," a commentator said of the official PAP news agency.

In addition to the media, the government has started a "unprecedented anti-union campaign" and direct access to the mass media is needed to counter it.

Law School students’ return to strengthen GSC: Brown

By Alan Scagley Staff Writer

The return of Law School students to the Graduate Student Council (GSC) will help the GSC express student views with a stronger, more unified voice, Debbie Brown, GSC president, said Thursday.

The Student Bar Association (SBA), to which law students have an automatic membership, voted Wednesday to rejoin the GSC. The SBA pulled out in October.

While the SBA had not taken a role in GSC activities since then, Brown said the SBA was always technically part of the GSC. Since the SBA was never recognized as a student organization by the board of trustees, University guidelines still required law students’ fees to be channeled to the GSC.

State gets temporary ward

By Liz Griffin Staff Writer

Temporary guardianship of Shannon Mitchell was awarded to the Department of Children and Family Services Tuesday, because another mother is being held in Jackson County Jail on attempted murder charges, and Shannon’s brother is a minor.

Sherry Lynn Mitchell, 54, S. 17th St. in Murphysboro, is being held in lieu of $10,000 bond on charges of attempted murder and two counts of aggravated battery for allegedly beating her daughter Aug. 22 and 23.

The 16-month-old Shannon was beaten so badly that she needed a bandage in Jackson County State’s Attorney John Clemens said.

A preliminary hearing has been set for 1:30 p.m. Sept. 23.

A spokesman at Cardinal Glennon Memorial Hospital Thursday would not say if the child was still at that hospital.

Legal responsibility for the child’s medical treatment was the primary reason for awarding guardianship rights to the state after a 45-minute hearing Tuesday, Jackson County Circuit Court Judge Bill Green said.

“Here was a child that was left at a hospital who needed medical care,” Green said.

Brown said the only thing necessary to recognize representatives from the School of Law is a letter from its dean listing the representatives.

The SBA pulled representatives from the GSC after about a year of dispute over distribution of law students’ fees and the activities being planned by the GSC.

The SBA had said law students contributed more money to the GSC on a per student basis than other graduate students. The SBA also said law students received a smaller share of GSC money than other graduate students.

The SBA also said the GSC fee allocation board did not serve law students’ needs. The SBA claimed most of the money went to student-to-student conferences and to fund programs benefiting the graduate student body, but not the law students.

Brown said funding for law students will be better than when the SBA pulled out, because the creation of a special support committee. The committee has provided more funding for activities for School of Medicine students, a group of students with funding needs similar to those of law students, she said.

Brown also said funding for law students may be improved further through the findings of a GSC ad hoc committee studying the council’s spending efficiency. The committee will submit its findings in January, she said.

Currently, funding requests must be brought individually to the the council. Brown said an alternative to this system is to allocate money to each graduate school based on the number of enrolled students.

Speeches ‘kick off’ child care project

The Illinois child protection system is considered by many to be the most progressive and professionally run in the United States, said Gregory Corder, director of the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services.

Corder and Illinois Sen. Kenneth Burke, D-Srth, spoke at Gaffey Hall Thursday morning, kicking off an SIU-C demonstration project to train students at five community colleges in 27 southern counties.

The project, Southern Region Care Provider-Training Project, was funded in November by a $929,000 grant from DCFS to train about 400 day care center employees over the next two years.

DCFS’ past has been one of ups and downs, Buzbee said.
One year in office is simply too soon to properly assess the merits and failings of a university president. As with any other administrator of a large institution, President Albert Somit will need time to see his good intentions to fruition.

But Somit can point to some very solid accomplishments during his first year. He not only realizes the importance of faculty, staff and student needs but he also has demonstrated in concrete ways a sense of what the University's responsibilities are to the community of Southern Illinois.

He has established a task force that is charged with defining criteria by which faculty can expect to be judged and rewarded. The University's ambivalence over the relative merits of tenure and non-tenure track faculty has existed for too long and has created confusion and uncertainty among many University faculty.

He has also established task forces that are examining academic programs and priorities and student-oriented services. With all universities entering an era of increasing competition in student recruitment, it is critical for the University to maintain and, in some cases, improve upon the academic and social services that it has to offer.

Somit must also be credited for reviving the University's role as a source of services and knowledge for the community beyond the campus. It is an important function which many universities lost sight of after the turbulent years of the late '60s and early '70s. Somit's plan for creating a Center for Service is a step towards re-establishing the bond between the University and the general public.

He has made a promising start but, in truth, the coming years will be the test of Somit's mettle. As he frankly admits when he speaks of operating the University in a "leaner and meaner manner," there are tough times ahead.

In the areas of declining enrollment, budget cuts and inflation are going to make it more difficult to run a large university; cost-cutting must be the watchword. It is an important function which many universities lost sight of after the turbulent years of the late '60s and early '70s. Somit's plan for creating a Center for Service is a step towards re-establishing the bond between the University and the general public.

Fifteen years ago when enrollment was skyrocketing and budgets were expanding, the concern of most university presidents was probably simpler, certainly less worrisome. Fifteen years later, with the situation exactly reversed, Somit cannot be given credit for maintaining that the job can still be fun.

He has, seemingly, a healthy blend of optimism and skepticism about what the future holds. As he can and do, and skepticism about what conventional wisdom says ought to be. Perhaps he will prove to be the perfect man for the job.

Aspen wanderings: zen and the art of fly-fishing

By George F. Will

Fishing with the children is more dangerous to parents than to fish, but there is a bigger danger. That is that too many people will reach adulthood without experiencing the interruption of time spent with nature. Such time is important to the development of something without which we cannot live well: piety.

"Piety," says James M. Gustafson of the University of Chicago Divinity School, is "a fundamental stance toward what is given in the world and human life. It is an attitude or disposition of respect, awe and even devotion that is evoked by human experience of dependence on powers we do not create and cannot fully master." By piety, Gustafson means neither piousness (pretentious display of religious posturing) nor piety (the religious movement that strives to precipitate a high pitch of emotion) nor the "fleeting emotions evoked by the glory of a sunset over New Mexican mesas." Rather, he means "a profound sense of dependence that comes with the recognition that, for all our human achievements, the world was brought into being by powers long before the emergence of our species: that the continuation of life relies upon powers that are not fully in human control, and that the destiny of the universe is not in human hands."

But, mysteriously, it is somehow endearing to focus all one's being on the task of tricking a trout into striking a line of metal and feather and thread. Fishing is a way of turning one's back on "the world"—that being, as Charles Dickens said, "a conventional phrase which signifies all the rascal in it." Fishing in the shadow of great mountains and in running water is a sweet reminder that man is but a shadow and nations are but bubbles in the flow of time. Fishing for trout is over in a few minutes. You can see your fly, and can see trout following your fly and disdainfully curling their lips at it.

Fishing is especially good for the unformed souls of children, who are never too young to learn what trout-fishing teaches, the lesson that there is generally a considerable gap between one's inclinations and the world's willingness to see them realized. Trout are much like children: They are often willful, capricious and madly-desiring to be evaluated in front of them.
This interview with President Albert Somit was conducted by staff writer Tim Capps Monday morning. In it, Somit answers questions about his recent trip to Europe, the University's task forces, tightening SIU's budget and his accomplishments during his first year as president.

Q.-You've been on a trip to Europe, correct?
A.-Yes, in July.

Q.-What were your goals? Did you learn anything? Teach anything?
A.-Well, the latter would always be a dangerous assumption. The trip had several purposes. I went to Poland to do two things. One was to attend the opening of the coal mining conference at our sister university, the University of Breslau. We held the conference one year and they held it the next. But primarily I went there to discuss the expansion of our faculty and student exchange agreement, which is largely in the sciences, but I thought we could expand it to cover other areas—and they were very receptive, so that I worked out well. I also went to many a meeting of the International Political Science Association and chaired a panel and also became editor of their journal.

Q.-What was the political climate in Poland?
A.-There's a tremendous amount of tension, of course, but everything considered, a surprising amount of good humor as well. Shortages were very striking. That was in July, and they were already in serious trouble. Gasoline lines were unbelievably long; they could be up to a kilometer. Almost anything you can think of was in short supply.

Q.-When you first came to SIU-C, you set up four task forces. One was an University Rewards and Honors. To serve as a rather obscure subject.
A.-[laughs] Tell that to the faculty. No, you're probably right. From an outsider's point of view, it probably is the most exotic. From the view of the faculty and staff, it is a question of what we get rewarded for and what we don't get rewarded for. And that task force was related, surely, to the task force on service, because it has been, over the past few years, a real feeling among many of the faculty that you don't get rewarded for doing service. It's been maybe five years, and that's conservative, since there's been a systematic examination of what we except of faculty and what we reward them for. Of what we recognize we reward them for and what we actually reward them for. Some people have said to me, 'We don't get rewarded for service so how can you ask us to do it?' The only reward we get for research. Then I talked to some of our outstanding research people, and they say the rewards for doing research are not adequate, either. Teaching rarely gets the kind of recognition it deserves. Those were the reasons for setting up the task force.

Q.-Another task force was the one on academic program priorities. A.-That task force has come in with a preliminary report. It has come up with an excellent set of criteria to evaluate both existing and new programs, and is now in the process of applying those criteria to a handful of programs just to see how the thing works in operation. From that, we will then have to move on to a continuing mechanism for the application of these criteria.

Q.-The service center is something that interests a lot of people.
A.-Right. The office has been announced, and I would hope within 10 days to identify the head of the office.

Q.-You have that person?
A.-Obviosly.

Q.-Did the idea for the service center arise from the task force on service?
A.-No. Well, I shouldn't say no. The idea for the center arose prior to the creation of the task force...it arose out of conversations I had, probably last November, with some faculty. The task force served at the same idea independently.

Q.-One of the attractive points of the service center is that it is to be run by volunteers, correct?
A.-People working in the service center are not going to be volunteers in the sense that they are not going to be paid. We're re-assigning people from other parts of the University, so we're not losing people getting additional money. Let's make clear that's not happening. We are simply shifting resources from one part of the University to another. We can do that so get the center off and moving, but eventually we will have to get additional resources as the services and research come up, we will have to meet those requests. But surely for the year ahead, the service center will handle the funding from its internal resources.

Q.-If funds will be provided from the University, where will the money come from?
A.-From the university.

Q.-But won't there be some programs that will receive reduced funding as a result?
A.-There will be some program...let's look at this way. We currently have a program called Area Services, which is supposed to be an outreach program. It's currently in the office of the vice president for university relations. It would make sense to at least think about picking up that group of programs and putting them in a new office, because that's the role they have. By looking around the University, we could identify, I would hope, three or four people who are competent in the area and we could ask them to take these new responsibilities on, say, a half-time basis for the first year. Obviously, their parent units would lose something, and we would have to make that up somehow. But we don't have additional outside funding for this year to carry the center. It's important to get it started and this is the only way.

Q.-There was one more task force, the one on recruitment and retention. Part of its report concerned image. One of the suggestions was that more money be spent on students than on perceived internal interests. What are your thoughts on this?
A.-I don't remember that particular recommendation. I really question that's the language of the report, but I will say that the task force updated our student programs and found most of them good, but concluded, reasonably, that some of them could be better. And I might say parenthetically that after the University asked SIU-C to do a survey, we SIU-C have one of the richest and best student service programs I've ever found. And I can't take credit for it so I can say that objectively. It existed

Somit's success rating 'too early to call, most say

Brown said, however, that she was still anxious about the kind of action Somit will take on the planned student referendum about the proposed elimination of the student union. He was unhappy that more students have not been appointed to the Intercollegiate Sports Committee.

"I am disappointed that we have only three students on the IAC," Brown said. "I had hoped for that more students would be sitting on the committee."

Todd Rogers, president of the Intercollegiate Sports Organization, also praised Somit for his approach to students, but said that the university with the President has been limited so far.

"Right now we're kind of waiting to see what value he attaches to student input," Rogers said. "He's available, and we feel like he listens to us, we just have to see how those meetings go." Rogers was pleased with Somit's agreement to hold a student referendum on the athletics fee increase, and also with the support he gave to the USO's Carbondale Clean-Up Day last year.

If there is any point of agreement among University, community, student and faculty leaders about President Albert Somit's performance during his first year in office, it is that it is still too early to pass judgement.

Several members of constituency groups in the Carbondale community were asked for their assessment of Somit's first year at SIU-C, and nearly all praised him for his attempts to improve relations between the University and the community, and for what several called his "accessibility." Many felt, however, that it would be some time before any conclusions about Somit's effects on the University could be reached.

"Overall, I would have to give him a positive rating," Deb Brown, president of the Graduate Student Council, said. "I find him accessible, and he communicates very well to students. He's also been very good about coming to us for advice about controversial matters, such as athletics, and we greatly appreciate that."

"First, I think that we are in better shape," Todd Rogers, president of the Intercollegiate Sports Organization, said. "I think that he has laid the groundwork for the future." Rogers said that Somit's approach to students was refreshing, and also said that Somit was successful in his job.

"I feel like he's doing a good job," Rogers said. "He's been very effective in his job, and I think that he's done a good job."

before I came here, and is really a must. We can do a little more with regard to strategies in action. We have one of the best ratings in the state, and this one was of the findings that the second-highest. If you look at the public university in two respects. I don't know if you look at the public universi-tention record is either the highest or second highest. I forget which, but that point the difference is becomes hundred -thousands of the normal. But we can still do better, and the idea here was to see how we can do better.

Q.-During the summer there arose questions about SU’S leave with pay. Will be clarified in the near future?
A.-It's being re-examined now. The trustees asked that we look at it, and it is being looked at again to see if it is as good as it should be.

Q.-Given the comments made by some state legislators, how concerned are you about Springfield?
A.-We get an occasional flap. The fact remains, we got very fair treatment from the Legislature on our budget. We were treated as well as any institution.

But we can still do better. It's going to be a very costly situation. We're not able to buy laboratory equipment, so we run the class without new lab equipment. That's what I mean by being leaner. You get hungrier and hungrier. We've run through the fat now, we're into the muscle and we're now getting worried about the bone.

Q.-Do you think the Service Center will cement this relationship?
A.-I have been going around Southern Illinois now for the last four weeks meeting with the mayors, and they've just been delighted.

Q.-Have you had the opportunity to try any local fishing spots?
A.-Yes, and I have had consistent luck. I think the biggest thing I've picked up has been about a pound. But I had the line break on a four-pounder, I've had some near misses that's the way it always happens.

Q.-Have you enjoyed your job so far?
A.-Yes, it's very interesting. The University has a tremendous amount of potential, it's a good university. And when you see a university where big things can be done and the faculty and staff are cooperative, it's fun.

Q.-If you had to rate your year's performance from one to ten, what would you give yourself?
A.-I laugh. I don’t think any president in his right mind would answer that one. I’ll let others do the rating.
He looks at the community as a whole, instead of seeing the University as a separate community within the larger. Somit's concern with community relations was also praised by State Rep. Bruce Richmond. D-38, who said Somit has had to be "cautious" so far.

"He's definitely trying to bring the University and community closer together," Richmond said. "I think he has wisely moved rather slowly to the point, because he has had a lot of people looking over his shoulder."

Richmond reserved his judgment on Somit's handling of University finances until he had more time to examine the situation.

"With people looking over his shoulder at every dollar he spends, he's naturally going to come in for some criticism," Richmond said. "For now, though, it's hard to say about the job he has done. I think what I've seen so far says that he'll be a fine administrator." Marvin Kleinau, chairman of the Department of Speech Communication, praised Somit for his leadership qualities, particularly his ability to make well-reasoned decisions.

"I think Somit has demonstrated that he is a cautious, but decisive, decision maker," Kleinau said. "In other words, I don't think his administration will be marked by gigantic mistakes, even though it will be marked by some fairly serious changes in policy."

Evidence of this can be found in Somit's handling of intercollegiate athletics and the administrative structure of the University. Kleinau said Somit has also demonstrated the ability to inspire the faculty with a degree of confidence which it did not always have, according to Norman Doorenbos, dean of the College of Science.

"There are many things I could say about him in a positive sense," Doorenbos said. "I turned down an academic vice presidency at a larger university, partly because I was excited about Somit's presence at this school. He has my vote of confidence, much more than some earlier administrators did."

President Somit has also done well handling pressure from local groups so far, but he must begin to set his own priorities for action, according to Stan Irvin. SIU-C's student trustee.

Rogers said, "Generally, though, we haven't had to deal with many cases. But we have had to deal directly with him yet."

One man who does deal directly with Somit on a regular basis is Carbondale Mayor Hans Fischer. Fischer praised Somit for his accessibility to the community and his concern with creating closer ties between the city and the University.

"We meet monthly, and he seems to me to have a strong orientation toward community-University relations, and that accounts for much of the good will that now exists between the two groups," Fischer said. "He has also been instrumental in keeping us aware of the interaction between the community and the University."

Fischer also praised what he considered to be Somit's concern with all facets of the local community, instead of the only three which relate directly to the University.

"His concern about minority involvement in the community has been articulated at our meetings, and he's concerned about the local affirmative action program," Fischer said. "I don't think his administration will be marked by gigantic mistakes, even though it will be marked by some fairly serious changes in policy."

Evidence of this can be found in Somit's handling of intercollegiate athletics and the administrative structure of the University. Kleinau said Somit has also demonstrated the ability to inspire the faculty with a degree of confidence which it did not always have, according to Norman Doorenbos, dean of the College of Science.

"There are many things I could say about him in a positive sense," Doorenbos said. "I turned down an academic vice presidency at a larger university, partly because I was excited about Somit's presence at this school. He has my vote of confidence, much more than some earlier administrators did."

Nuclear safety official says state needs to build waste dump

CHICAGO (AP) — An official of the Illinois Nuclear Safety Department says he thinks the state will have to build a disposal site for low-level radioactive waste.

Philip F. Gustafson, director of the department, said Wednesday the state will need a disposal site by 1998 when dump sites currently being used in Nevada, South Dakota and Washington no longer are available.

Gustafson said final approval for a disposal site rests with representatives of 12 other Midwestern states on establishing a regional disposal site for use by those states as well.

He said a site for a dump has not been selected. However, a report last year by the Illinois Geologic Survey identified several areas in the south and central portions of the state that may be suitable.

Gustafson said Wednesday the decision was preceded by a law passed by Congress last December, which lays responsibility for providing disposal sites for low-level wastes after Jan. 1, 1986, with individual states rather than the federal government.

The possibility of forming a regional disposal site is in preliminary discussion stages with representatives of North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Indiana, Michigan, Kentucky and Ohio, he said.

Illinois, which produces about as much low-level waste as all other 12 states combined, is in the lead in developing a dump site and may eventually serve as the "host" site for the others, Gustafson added.

"It is first and foremost in the interest of (Illinois) to have a site," he said.

The University Karate Club will have an organizational meeting at 1 p.m. Saturday in the Martial Arts Room of the Recreation Center. This new club is oriented toward individuals interested in karate training. No previous experience is necessary. Interested persons may call the club's president, Elliot Freeman, at 529-2056.

The Carbondale Community High School All Sports Kickoff will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Sunday at Evergreen Park. Those who will attend are asked to bring chips, a relish dish or dessert. Hot dogs and Pepsi will be provided. The public is invited to come and meet the athletic director, coaches, athletes and cheerleaders. In case of rain, the kickoff will be held in the high school's east cafeteria.

The Southern Illinois Friends' Society (Quakers) holds a meeting and worship service at 10:30 a.m. each Sunday in the homes of members and attenders. This Sunday's meeting will be at 211 South Maple St. Visitors are welcome. There will be a potluck lunch after worship. For transportation assistance or other information, interested persons may call 457-4542 or 349-4583.

25 to 50 couples will come to University Mall from 7 to 9 p.m. Saturday as the Western Square Dance Club of Southern Illinois puts on a show. The club encompasses several square dance groups from southern Illinois and St. Louis. Admissions is free.

A hunter safety program will be held at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Saturday at Ferne Clyffe State Park. It is to be conducted by Harry Beemer, the park's summer interpreter. The program is aimed at dealing with the important topic of safety and how it applies to hunting in hopes of reducing the number of persons injured while hunting.

Coal to star in SIU-C's fair exhibit

Coal and SIU-C will be the focus of the University's exhibit at the Du Quoin State Fair, which opens Friday. Two three-screen slidefilm shows have been produced especially for the 17th edition of the SIU-C exhibit at the fair, which continues through Sept. 7.

"Illinois Coal: Stubborn Treasure" is a 15-minute words-and-pictures look at the part the fuel has played—and is expected to play—in the life of Southern Illinois.

A second presentation is a "student's-eye" look at the academic, cultural and social life of the University. Both shows will run continuously from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily at the SIU-C geodesic dome, just off the midway.

Counselors from the admissions office and other offices will be at the exhibit to answer questions from noon to 7 p.m. on weekdays and 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. weekends.
A documentary film on the Southern Counties Action Movement will premiere at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Lutheran Center, 700 South Illinois Ave. The film, produced by the SIU Summer Film Workshop under direction by instructor Mike Covell, explores Southern Illinois' fast coal reserves, rising utility costs and the importance of citizen participation in local issues. Featuring many residents of the area, the film illustrates the work of the citizens' action organization. "Salt of the Earth," winner of the Best Film Award from the Paris Academy of Films, will also be featured. The 1963 film, directed and produced by Mike Wilson, is based on the struggle to organize zinc miners in New Mexico. A donation of $2 is requested. Child care and refreshments will be provided.

The closing date for registration for the Practice Law School Admission Test is September 7, and the test will be held September 12. To register, those interested must come to the Testing Service in Woody Hall, R304. Information is available by calling 536-3303. Registrants must pay a required fee to the Bursar.

The SIU Self-Defense Club will hold its organizational meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Martial Arts Room of the Recreation Center. Regular classes in the Korean martial arts of Tae Kwon Do and Hapkido will be on Mondays and Wednesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. and on Fridays from 4 to 6 p.m. Instruction is provided by Jeff Forby, who is a 4th degree Black Belt. Interested persons may contact Kerry Wall at 547-6202.

Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society will meet Tuesday from 12 to 1:30 p.m. in the Cortin Room of the Student Center. Dr. George Brown, director of honors opportunities, will speak on "contradictory perceptions." Information is available from Betsy Peterson at 536-5506.

 synopsis of a new book, 'A new contempt-of-court law went into effect Thursday in Britain, making it illegal for jurors to discuss anything that happens during a jury's secret deliberations. Reporters and researchers are banned from asking jurors questions about deliberations, and jurors can be held in contempt for telling them.

"Technically, the law makes it a crime for jurors to chat with friends or family about what happened in the jury room. But the attorney general must approve any attempt to bring contempt proceedings, making it unlikely a juror would be prosecuted for such a breach.

Besides their doubles success, the pair had impressive singles records in high school. Eastman was 52-10, Allen 53-10.
Molina, Auld's other recruit, has also had success. She is ranked seventh in her age group in Sweden. "They don't play tennis while going to school," Auld said. "School and sports are kept completely separate. That's why so many of the athletes there want to come over here.

Molina's brother Marco, the top singles player at St. Louis University, told Auld about his sister. "She's done well in international competition," Auld said. "Her father's Italian, so they travel to Italy often, and she's done well in some tournaments there.

Besides having played in Italy, Molina has played regularly at the Saik Club in Sweden. Auld said that Ray Rosenburg, who started former Wimbledon Champion Bjorn Borg playing tennis, taught Molinari to play tennis.

Going through the clay courts of the Saik Club to the asphalt courts of U.S. college tennis might be a tough transition for Molina, Auld said. "The game's played around the baselines on clay," Auld said. "It's tough to adjust to asphalt, a much faster surface. It's a slow transition, and I think Alessandra will be tough to break in."

Stadium stands’ safety questioned by officials

By Steve Metuch
Staff Writer

When the football Salukis com­e marching onto the field at McAndrew Stadium for their home opener Sept. 12, more attention may be given to the move­ment of the stands on the east side of the stadium. Some University officials are concerned about the safety of the six-year-old bleachers.

A study is underway to deter­mine the safety of the east stands, which can hold about 9,000 students, was conducted at the Nov. 3, 1979 game against In­diana State following police reports that there was visible "movement" of support beams beneath the stands. Wiss, Janney, Elns­tter and Associates Inc., a consulting and engineering firm from Nor­theast­ington, conducted the study. Its report, which cost $4,093, said further studies were needed.

The report didn’t successfully answer the safety question, according to Allen Haake, SUU­C’s supervising architect.

"The study was inconclusive be­cause the stands weren’t filled and the crowd was пape-colored," said Haake. "No further tests have been con­ducted since we haven’t been able to fill the east stands since then."

According to published reports, the union boning of variance in the stands during the Salukis’ first two football games con­cerned Haake. He said he found a movement of “three to four inches”, during an in­ves­tigation. Constant boning, which does not happen since the stands are not used all year, could lead to the shearing or breaking off of some con­nections beneath the stands, ac­cording to Haake. Haake said the stadium must be inspected and a building permit obtained to fix the problem.

Haake said the question of the stands’ safety was brought up again by Joe Yusko, university risk management director.

"Since I’m in charge of the University’s insurance and liability, I was concerned since the report was inconclusive. Large crowds are expected during the football season and I don’t want to have any doubts concerning the stands’ safety."

Haake said his study showed the stands are safe, but I want to make sure that they meet all the proper specifications.

Two members of the SIU-C women’s tennis squad have graduated, so Coach Judy Auld has signed three recruits and kept two walk-ons this summer.

Denise Martin and doubles partner Jeanie Jones both are gone, but Auld has recruited Amanda Allen and Heidi Eastman, both from Galesburg, and Aleksandar Molinari of Sweden.

Allen and Eastman were high school doubles partners at Galesburg, where Molinari had a 35-7 mark. They will join a tough high school schedule, which included several teams from Chicago, said Auld.

"Heidi’s the strongest of the three, and Amanda knows doubles strategy," Auld said.

"You could say Heidi is the power of the team and Amanda is the fundamental player. Both are very aggressive.

"Instead of splitting them up to possibly create two strong doubles teams, Auld is plann­ing on keeping them together.

"They’re familiar with each other," said Auld, "and they know what to expect from each other."

The fact that Allen and Eastman have been playing together for so long may help them at the college level, but Auld admits that tennis at the college level is different than high school tennis.

"You’re not always pushed, when you’re not in line for a team match," she said. "You’re almost always pushed in college...

Air Force wants to know why minority cadets leave academy

By Andrew Rosenthal
Associated Press Writer

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Cadet Cynthia Willis is confident she will win an Air Force commission in May and graduate near the top of her class. But by then, almost half of the 217 other blacks, Hispanics, Indians and Asians with her in 1979 will have long since deserted the U.S. Air Force Academy.

Academy officials, disturbed by this high rate of "minority attrition," have launched an intensive effort to find its causes and remove them. "We want to know what we can do as an institution to hang onto minority cadets, and we want to know if they are not doing anything to drive them out," said Maj. Ted Spencer, director of the academy's Recruitment and Retention Office.

The Air Force Academy, like the nation's other service academies, has a substantial percentage of each class. This year's senior class, for instance, is more than 40 percent smaller than when it mustered in the fall.

But the chance that cadets from minority backgrounds will leave the academy before their four years are up is even greater, academy officials said in recent interviews. Lt. Col. Michael O'Connell, acquiring officer for minority cadets, said 47 percent of the minority cadets in the class of 1981 have dropped out and more will probably leave in the 10 months until graduation. The dropout rate for non-minority cadets is roughly 15 percent, he said.

In the four service academies, only the Air Force's has a program aimed at retaining minority cadets. Spencer said it was established in 1975 to help develop a system the academy acknowledged was once racially inadvisable.

"When we opened in 1955, the only people going to service academies were white men," Spencer said.

Beginning in 1979 — when the first minority cadet, an Asian, entered the Air Force Academy — and 1980, the dropout rate for minorities has been 45 percent, with Hispanics and Indians dropping out at rates of more than 40 percent, O'Connell said.

Non-minority cadets recorded a 18 percent attrition rate during the 10 months of the class, he said.

The academy started actively recruiting minorities in 1971, but is still trying to strike a balance between judging the performance of minority cadets with lower standards or standards by as they fail because of their backgrounds, Spencer said.

"We want to be sure that if a cadet doesn't make it, it is because he wasn't qualified, not simply because he is black or Hispanic or Chinese," he said. To that end, Spencer established the Office of Minority Retention this summer and staffed it with Lt. Raphael Caraballo, an Hispanic, and two black second lieutenants who graduated from the academy last May, Craig Jenkins and James Geos.

The three compiled a list of 190 minority cadets who were in danger of flunking or had said they might drop out. Then one by one, they are interviewing the cadets talking with professors and cadet commanders.

Minority cadets, physical or academic problems unrelined to their backgrounds have become clients of the minority office, he said.

"We're not pretending to be aware of everything," Spencer said. "Many minority cadets lack English and math skills because they did not get them in high school, and many lack parental reinforcement to go to college because most are the first generation to do so."

At the Coast Guard Academy in New London, Conn., 47 percent of the minority cadets in the class of 1981 dropped out before graduation while the academy's overall attrition rate was 25 percent, a spokesman said.

Despite its efforts to fight minority attrition, Spencer said, the Air Force Academy has not pinpointed why 104 of the 218 minority cadets who started with Ms. Willis three years ago have dropped out, but he offered a theory popular among her staff.

"School systems in the minority regions of the country suffer from lack of everything," Spencer said. "Many minority cadets lack English and math skills because they did not get them in high school, and many lack parental reinforcement to go to college because most are the first generation to do so."

Clarence "Jaybird" Tanner, an 87-year-old primitive artist, will be present at a public reception of his works, 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the University Museum at Fayer Hall. Refreshments will be served. Tanner's depictions include images of trees, small houses or cabins set among hills and animals, birds or particular people representing specific individuals or experiences that are part of Tanner's personal past. He lives at Royaland. Admission to the exhibit, which will be displayed in the museum from Sept. 1 to Nov. 1, is free and is open to the public on weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on Sundays 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.
It's plain that Dixon, Ill., isn't Plains, Ga.

DIXON (AP) — It's been nothing like the carnival atmosphere that invaded Plains, Ga., when Jimmy Carter was elected president, but tourists in Dixon, President Reagan's boyhood home, has been steady, if slow.

Townfolk in Dixon, and in neighboring Tampico, where Reagan was born, had hoped that the election of one of their own as president would bring them fame, fortune and lots of visitors.

In preparation, Dixon Mayor George Linquist called the mayor of Plains, Ga., to find out what to expect. But his caution may have been unnecessary.

"I can't say there has been any direct impact on Dixon from Mr. Reagan's election. We had a lot of exposure in the community, both state-wide and nationally. In the last two or three months it has not been too great," Linquist said.

Helen Nicely, who with her husband, Paul, owns and operates the Reagan birthplace in Tampico, said the number of visitors has failed to meet expectations.

"But it has been picking up the last two weeks," she said. "Although the tourist crunch never happened, there has been a steady stream of visitors to the Reagan home in Dixon and Tampico. In July, 3,100 signed the guest register at the old Reagan home on Hennepin Avenue in Dixon. But the visitors apparently didn't bring much money, or at least they didn't spend it in Dixon. The city comptroller said the city's sales tax receipts, a measure of retail trade, have not changed as a result of the rise in tourism.

Many of the tourists are on their way somewhere else and are led to Reagan country by signs on the highway. Reagan's home in Dixon was purchased by a non-profit group that planned to restore the house to the decor of the 1930s.

Howard LeFevre, an 18-year-old volunteer who was stripping the clapboard house of paint and wallpaper, said Reagan's brother, Neil, visited the house in July and the group restoring the house tape-recorded his comments as he toured the home.

Abused women turn to murder, create new legal questions

By Gary Langer
Associated Press Writer

CONCORD, N.H.-July 14-
Ana Pelton, down to 88 pounds from 130 and psychologically "a piece of meat" who went home with her husband. Last night, she mailed suicide notes to her ex-husband and her sister. Now she's putting a 26-caliber Beretta at her head.

"Go ahead," says her husband, who's been cheating on her for four of their 12 married years. "It will free me of the cost of a divorce." Mrs. Pelton turns the pistol and shoots him. She reloads and fires four more shots. He is hit in the head, the chest-"all over the place," a prosecutor says.

"It was a little hard for the court to understand the mental abuse she had been put through," says Ruth Scribner, one of Mrs. Kelley's lawyers. "A woman should not have to walk into court with missing limbs and her head broken open to prove she has been provoked."

Each year in New Hampshire, three or four men are charged with killing their wives. Police know of 324 cases of wife abuse last year, and counselors say that's just a fraction of the real count.

"Go ahead," says Ruth Scribner, one of Mrs. Kelley's lawyers. "A woman should not have to walk into court with missing limbs and her head broken open to prove she has been provoked."

"The defense has been raised elsewhere, with varying success: perhaps the most celebrated case was that of Francine Hughes of Dansville, N.Y., who was acquitted in 1977 of killing her sleeping husband by pouring gasoline under his bed and igniting it. Testimony showed she had been mentally and physically brutalized for years. "It isn't the right thing to do- but they're saying enough is enough, and they're lashing out," says Deanna Crawford of the state's Rape and Assault Committee.

Three New Hampshire women have been charged with killing their husbands this summer, compared to none in 1979 and one in 1980. Counselors and lawyers say the statistic has refocused attention on violence against women and on the tragic results when the victim returns the violence.

"The fear is incredible," Ms. Crawford says. "The terror in those eyes is incredible. They're exhausted everything: you've utilized the court and the police, and you're still living in total terror of being abused. What we're seeing in these women is terror, absolute terror."

Some men allow the terror to end endlessly. In others, something snaps.

"It's probably a combination of utter hopelessness and all of a sudden a rage," Ms. Crawford says.

Some people question if the violence is that spontaneous.

Assistant Attorney General David Harrington wonders if last winter's pardon of a woman who killed her husband with an ax "had anything to do with a bunch of wives saying, 'Hey, what the hell? She did all right.'

Richard Sebastian of the University of New Hampshire's Family Research Laboratory says the knowledge that battered women who kill may be able to defend their actions might remove a deterrent to murder.

"I'm not sure it necessarily encourages women," Sebastian says. "But fear of punishment for crime is an inhibitory factor, and when people no longer fear the factor, it's no longer influential."
What's next for Marcia Webb?

Maybe command of a battalion

Marcia Allen
Student Writer

No 9 to 5 job will do for her.
"I don't like to do the same thing day in and day out," she adds firmly. "Actually, that would bother me."

Capt. Marcia A. Webb, 39, an SIU-C graduate and native of Marion, is director of the Army ROTC unit on campus.

That means that she has overall responsibility for everything from recruiting to administrative duties, Webb said.

According to Webb, the best aspect of her job is working with students on a personal basis.

"In ROTC, we're not concerned with just the academic life of the student," she said. "We watch the cadet develop management skills and experience. We work with the overall concept of the cadet."

Webb was instrumental in the development of the Army ROTC unit at SIU. "When we arrived here in March 1980, we didn't have an office, a title or even a phone," she said.

Webb volunteered and was selected for her current assignment. She came to SIU from an assignment at the University of San Francisco as an assistant professor of military science.

"I feel it would be a wonderful opportunity to start a new program at my alma mater and to serve the Army," she said.

Currently, there are approximately 30 cadets enrolled in the Army ROTC program; six are female. Webb says the Army of the future will need more women to fill needed positions.

Webb says she has experienced no problems with male cadets respecting her authority.

"Cadets feel that any officer in a leadership position is qualified to be there, and they treat me as any other officer," she said.

Webb received a bachelor's degree in English from SIU in 1963. Prior to entering the Army, she was the assistant controller of the National Shoe Buying Department at her headquarters in Sears, Roebuck and Co. in Chicago.

Based on her experience in the civilian working world, Webb received a direct commission as a first lieutenant in 1972.

Concert to feature bluegrass music

A concert featuring various local bluegrass musicians will be presented in Turley Park, 7 p.m. Saturday.

The concerts, which are presented the last Saturday of each month from May to September, have featured bands such as the Pyle's Pine String Band, Cake's All Dough Boys, Idle Hands Band and many other local favorites.

The concert is preceded by an informal afternoon jam at 4 p.m. possibly featuring bluegrass, folk and old-time music.

Funds to widen street could be a year away

By Bob Rondurast
Staff Writer

Motorists forced to cope with the bottleneck on West Main Street between Old Main and Oakland, have faith. Relief may be one more lane away, though it will be at least a year before it becomes a reality.

A design report detailing a plan to relieve congestion is nearly ready to be sent to state transportation officials for approval, according to Illinois Department of Transportation Planning Engineer Ted Reeder. He said that any modifications at the intersection of Oakland and Main eliminating left turns at the intersection. The right hand lanes would be used exclusively for right turns.

In order to add a left turn lane on Main "they'd have to put up a median," Reeder said.

The proposed widening will replace the one lane of east-bound traffic with two, with additional modifications at the intersection of Oakland and Main eliminating left turns at the intersection. The right hand lanes would be used exclusively for right turns.

In order to add a left turn lane on Main "they'd have to put up a median," Reeder said.

With the bottleneck eliminated at Oakland, Jennings anticipated that traffic flow would increase by 1,500 cars on Walnut Street, from the 4,800 cars that presently use the street.

MAURICE BUCHANAN TURNED DOWN A BASKETBALL SCHOLARSHIP FOR AN ARMY ROTC SCHOLARSHIP.

"They needed to go to college. I needed to go to college that really provoked me to be a successful. We're Maurice. Who's just a guy who's from a local Illinois town and we're not very good basketball players," said Maurice. "I feel that you're not going to be successful without getting a scholastic degree because you know a lot of people who have been in the military but I'd like to go on to college."

In order to add a left turn lane on Main "they'd have to put up a median," Reeder said.

Telpro is hands-on media production

By Laura Wu
Student Writer

"Hit cart! Crack mike! Fade up on camera one and cue talent!" These television directors commands are given every Friday at the WSIU-TV Channel 8 studio.

The camera one is focused on the blank television monitor screen by using the picture that camera one is focused on (camera one may be one of up to four cameras in the studio) and cue the actors to perform.

The director and his or her loyal technical crew are students involved with Telpro, a non-profit, student-run radio and television production company. Telpro works with the facilities of the WSIU radio and television broadcasting service.

Thomas Von Berg, executive producer of Telpro, said as many as 60 students write, produce, direct and perform for the company.

These productions for WSIU-TV include public service announcements, news and spot promotions that are televised on Channel 8 and other local television stations in Southern Illinois.

"If the big time means being seen by all your friends on television, then Telpro is a way of doing just that," Vonberg said.

Even though the air time for these productions is only 30 or 60 seconds, it takes three to four pre-production hours of work and then four to five in-studio production hours of work, Vonberg said.

"The whole idea behind a student-run organization is to get students involved and to let them see how it will be after they graduate and get a job in television production. The job of the board members is to help the other members gain hands-on experience," Vonberg said.

Membership includes 10 board members and approximately 70 students.

Bill Beauchamp, operations manager, is primarily responsible for making sure the whole organization is run properly and successfully, said Vonberg. Students take part in the organization by raising and allocating funds, instructing studio operation, and setting rules to abide by.

Telpro is the only organization of its kind in the nation. Therefore, SIU-C students are getting a little more out of their education than students who attend other universities with a radio and television program.

"Students here at SIU treat Telpro with respect and a very professional attitude. Any production the organization undertakes is done with the thought in mind that the production will be 'air quality' when it's done," said Vonberg.

Under the University policy on the Release of Student Information and Public Law 94-482, the University makes directory information accessible to any person external to the University "directory information" concerning a student, unless that student notifies the Office of Admissions and Records that he or she objects to the release of such directory information. Directory information is considered to be public in nature and will be released at any time upon request without prior approval from the student.

Notice is hereby given that directory information listed below in respect to each student enrolled at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale will be available to any person unless the student files in writing with the Office of Admissions and Records a request to restrict release of student directory information to external sources.

The University has designated directory information the following student information:

- Student name.
- Student local address and telephone number.
- Student home address and telephone number.
- Date of birth.
- Total number of hours carried.
- Classification (freshman, sophomore, etc.).
- Academic unit.
- Dates of attendance.
- Degrees and honors earned and dates.

- The most previous educational agency or institution attended prior to enrollment at Southern Illinois University.

- Participation in officially recognized activity or sport and weight, height and pictures of members of athletic teams.

Any student enrolled for the Fall Semester who does not wish to have released the above listed items of information should contact, in person, the Office of Admissions and Records, Woody Hall by Thursday, Sept. 3, 1981. Students who elect to restrict release of student information must sign a statement to that effect. The restriction on the release of student information will be valid until September 1, 1982, and must be renewed annually each Fall Semester.

Students who wish to verify or correct the existing student directory information must also contact in person, the Office of Admissions and Records, Woody Hall.
Tax cuts may cut desire of wealthy to help charities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The country's private charities said Thursday they stand to lose more than $18 billion over the next four years because President Reagan's tax cuts will give the wealthy less incentive to make contributions.

"This unintended but unfortunate side effect of the broader tax bill could weaken many of the very voluntary organizations the president and the public are counting on to make up for federal budget cutbacks," said Brian O'Connell, president of Independent Sector.

Independent Sector is an umbrella organization representing most of the nation's public service organizations.

The income loss projected for private charities and public service organizations follows a study, released by the same group last spring, which concluded that cuts in the federal budget would take away $21.3 billion. With the $18.3 billion expected to be lost because of the tax package, the total loss in charitable giving will total $45.6 billion through 1984, O'Connell said.

Reagan's budget projections had assumed that some of the cuts made in federal support for social service programs, the arts and similar areas would be made up by private philanthropy. Instead, O'Connell said, private philanthropy and the services it supports are caught in a "triple whammy."

"Federal program support has already been cut, contributions are now projected to go down and all this at a time when everyone is looking to these same organizations to expand their services," O'Connell said.

The new study says that while charitable giving will go up slightly, it will grow at a considerably slower rate than it would have under the old tax law.

Don't make your mail look for you

Carbondale postmaster Hubert Goforth offers these tips to assure problem-free mail delivery to SIU students living away from home this fall:

Let your home post office know your college address as soon as possible. All your class mail will be forwarded without charge.

Get a free change-of-address kit at the post office. Use it to let your correspondents know your new address—especially newspaper, magazines, clubs and other regular mailers.

If you change your residence, notify the post office of your next address.

If you have a separate mailbox at your residence, make sure it's identifies with your name. If you live in an apartment, fraternity, sorority or rooming house, have a clear understanding where your mail is to be distributed. Do not use SIU as your address.

During holidays and recesses, you may arrange with the post office (in your mail) or have the post office forward first class mail to your temporary location.

When the school year is over, notify the post office of your next address.

Goforth said the basic rule to remember is "don't make your mail look for you."
TV special on SIU to be aired

“Mission in Partnership: The Southern Illinois University System,” a 30-minute television special on the SIU system, will air at 8:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 17, on stations WSIU-TV in Carbondale and WUSI-TV in Olney.

Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw narrates the production, which was videotaped on the campuses at Carbondale, Edwardsville, East St. Louis, Alton and Springfield.

The feature addresses the University’s role in responding to a wide range of social issues, including population changes, inflation, dwindling productivity, energy and the standard of living.

Teaching, research and community service activities are discussed by Shaw and several faculty, students, staff and area residents.

The production, which was completed this summer, was written by the University News Service and produced by the Broadcasting Service.

Phil Kappa luncheons open Tuesday

Phil Kappa Phi Honor Society will open its 1981-82 series of monthly luncheon meetings Tuesday, when George Brown, director of honors opportunities, will speak to members on the topic, “Contrary perceptions.” The meeting will be in the Coroneth Room of the Student Center.

The SIU-C chapter of Phi Kappa Phi is beginning its 26th year on campus, having celebrated its silver anniversary last spring. The national association of Phi Kappa Phi (freely translated, “Let the love of learning rule mankind”) was the first honorary society to recognize superior scholarship in all fields of study and to take into membership the highest-ranking students from any branch of learning.

At SIU-C, members of Phi Kappa Phi are chosen from both the undergraduate and graduate student body on the basis of academic achievement.

Old opera house will be concert hall

FRANKFORT, West Germany (AP) - This city’s old opera house, wrecked by allied firebombs in World War II and dubbed the nation’s most beautiful ruin, will reopen as a concert hall Friday after more than 10 years of reconstruction.

City officials said the “Alte Oper,” built in 1880 and dedicated to “the true, beautiful and good,” cost an estimated $64 million to rebuild—twice the original estimate. Frankfort citizens donated about $6 million.

Higher ed costs outstrip support, U.I. leader says

CHAMPAIGN (AP) — Students will pay higher tuition at state universities because the schools' costs are raising faster than tax support of the institutions, the chancellor of the University of Illinois says.

"I am deeply concerned about the rising cost of higher education for the students, but I see no other possibility for the immediate future," John Cribbet said Thursday.

He said inflation had pushed up all the costs of operating a college or university in Illinois, as well as in the rest of the nation.

"Public support is not keeping pace with those rising costs because the state faces similar problems in all areas," said Cribbet.

Despite the economic problems, Cribbet said the University of Illinois will continue programs to attract and help minority students and those from poor families.

"We're going to have to work very hard at it, but I think it's far too early to conclude that all of higher education is going to go elitist," said Cribbet.

That's not the tradition at Illinois or in the public institutions of the nation generally.

Brothers combed firm’s trash for evidence in price-fixing suit

By Charles Chamberlain
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — For two years, two brothers collected hundreds of pages of corporate papers from boxes set out for garbage pickup by a company they are suing for alleged price fixing.

Howard and Edward Perk, owners of suburban sewing machine outlets, were elated Thursday that a federal judge ruled the documents they painstakingly pieced together can be entered as evidence in a trial.

The brothers accuse Swiss-Bernina Inc. and Fritz Gegauf Ltd. of Switzerland of price discrimination.

Howard Perk said that several years ago when he was at the suburban Swiss-Bernina warehouse to pick up parts, he noticed an invoice to a competitor showing a discount for merchandise.

"I told the company's manager that we should be getting the same discount, but he said we couldn't get one," Howard Perk said. "Later during a warehouse move I took a look through a dumpster of trash and saw pieces of paper that showed discounts to other sewing machine outlets."

The Perks said they decided to make night trash raids to help in preparing their case.

They said that on nights before garbage pickups they would haul away boxes of waste paper put out for collection.

"We tracked out several hundred boxes in two years and methodically put the materials together and gave it to our attorney," Howard said. "The things they don't want other people to know about they throw away."

The brokers' lawyer, Dan Clune, said he will present "several hundred" pieced-together documents at the trial, which he hopes will be scheduled within a year.

U.S. Magistrate John W. Cooley, supervising pre-trial proceedings last December, ordered all documents obtained by the brothers barred from use at trial. But Judge George N. Leighton of U.S. District Court ordered late Wednesday that many documents, some taped together, were proper evidence — that they were the type that could be obtained during routine court proceedings.

But even sensitive documents, such as communications between attorneys and clients, can be used as evidence, Leighton said.

"The likelihood that third parties will have the interest, integrity, perseverance and stamina, as well as risk possible criminal and civil sanctions, to search through mounds of garbage in hopes of finding privileged communications — and that they will then be successful — is not sufficiently great to deter open attorney-client communication," Leighton said.

He said if such fears of trash-hunters exist, the documents could be "rendered unfathomable."
