Check endorsing law set to change

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

The University Office of the Controller is sponsoring a seminar at 9 a.m. today in the video room of the New Student Admissions Building to advise campus employees on the new check endorsement law.

The new law, which goes into effect on Sept. 1, will change University policy of endorsing checks.

According to the Controller's Office, all departments endorsing checks must "restrict their endorsement to within one-half inch of the trailing edge of the check."

The law was passed to speed the process of giving quicker credit, said Elene Swafford, vice president of Carbondale City National Bank.

"It is going to be a learning process with everyone cooperating until the new procedure becomes natural," she added.

The seminar was designed to aid campus depositors in this transition.

"It is strictly for on-campus depositors who make payment through the Bursar's Office," Ruby Bacon, assistant to the bursar, said.

Although all departments who make payment will be affected by the new law, Bacon feels the Student Center probably will feel the most effect of the change.

The Bursar's Office already has received several calls since sending out a memo about the new procedure Thursday.

Any employee who is unable to attend today can arrange for individual consultation through the Bursar's Office.

Morris Library is still full of hot air

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

Temperatures are falling slowly in Morris Library, the dean of library affairs said.

The air conditioning is starting to come on, but it hasn't made much of a change," Kenneth Peterson, dean of library affairs, and the library director, said.

Library hours today still are 7:30 to 9 a.m., but the library will be closed Saturday and Sunday, Peterson said.

Hours after the weekend have not yet been determined.

"Everything is so hot, it will take a long time for it to cool down," Peterson said. "The temperature is still over 90 degrees in the library and on some floors it is still as high as 103 and 104 degrees."

Peterson said Physical Plant employees feel the library will need the weekend to cool sufficiently.

With the air conditioning off for the past two weeks, the library has suffered disruptions in the computer system, the telephone system and "we've even lost some of our lights," he said.

The normal temperature in the library fluctuates from floor to floor, usually ranging from 72 to 78 degrees, Peterson said.

"Occasionally the temperature gets into the low 80s, but that's usually when we have trouble with the air conditioning. The temperature has never been as high as it has been the past two weeks," Peterson said.

The computer system should be operating when the temperature falls below 90 degrees, Peterson said.

The air conditioning has been turned off during an asbestos removal and re-insulation project in the library basement.

Halloween committee discusses plan to close restaurants early

By Kathleen DeBo
Staff Writer

All businesses along the Strip may be required to close at 1:45 a.m. Halloween weekend.

During the Halloween celebration, Oct. 28 and Oct. 29, food booths are required to close at 1:45 a.m. and places that serve alcohol are required to close 1 a.m. Currently, restaurants that do not serve alcohol are not required to close at a specific time.

According to the proposal, however, restaurants without liquor licenses would close at 1:45 a.m. and be allowed to reopen at 4 a.m. Alcohol booths still would close at 1 a.m.

At its August meeting, the Halloween Core Committee discussed the proposal, which will be made to the City Council. The purpose of the proposal is to get Halloween revelers off the Strip as soon as possible after the celebration.

Other proposals to be made to the City Council include one that would require booths to prepare for inspections by 7 p.m. on Friday of the celebration. This proposal is designed to give fire and police inspectors time to complete inspections before the party starts.

Another proposal would limit the businesses allowed to have food booths to those that face South Illinois Avenue. The current wording allows businesses that have South Illinois addresses, but do not open onto South Illinois to have booths.

The committee also discussed having the haunted house above WCIL radio station open six days with Oct. 26 and 27 being limited to community groups such as the Girl Scouts. The haunted house would be open to the public Friday and Saturday of Halloween weekend.

A road race may also be added if the University athletics administration supports it and offers corporate sponsorship.

One of the goals of the committee is to expand events offered at Halloween.

Governor signs liability insurance bill

CHICAGO (UPI) — Illinois' 7 million motorists will be required to carry auto liability insurance under legislation signed into law Thursday by Gov. James R. Thompson.

Under the plan, motorists will face fines and revocation of their vehicle registration for failing to obtain insurance and to show proof of coverage when asked by law enforcement officials.

"Although most Illinois drivers recognize their responsibility to carry sufficient insurance, at least one-fourth of the motorists on the road are uninsured, creating enormous frustration for those who pay insurance premiums but must still pay their own damages when hit by an uninsured driver," Thompson said. "It can happen to anyone. More than 60,000 uninsured drivers are involved in accidents each year."

The signing concludes a 17-year struggle by advocates of mandatory auto insurance and makes Illinois the 40th state to have such a law. Major insurance companies fought the proposal, but said they are willing to cooperate with the law. They argued that it would drive up the cost of insurance and would not significantly reduce the number of un-

South African government toughens apartheid rules

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — The government's chief spokesman defended moves Thursday to toughen residential apartheid laws and said forced evictions of blacks living illegally in white-zoned areas would be handled "as humanely as possible." The government's defense of amendments to the 33-year-old Group Areas Act regulating where people may live on the basis of race came as a boycott.

Israeli officials defend deporting Palestinians

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israeli leaders Thursday defended the deportation of Palestinians accused of security offenses and said U.S.-Israeli relations remained firm despite harsh U.S. criticism of the expulsions. "We are not conducting a policy of expulsion," Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir told state-run Israel Radio. "The United States is not responsible for order here, we are responsible."

Lisbon fire destroys historic shopping district

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — A fire raged through Lisbon's historic shopping district Thursday, killing one man, injuring at least 42 other people and gutting dozens of landmark 18th and 19th century buildings. "It's a national catastrophe because it's our cultural heritage," said President Mario Soares, who toured the charred hillside area of Chiado by foot to survey the damage.

Fiscal 1989 deficit estimated at $144 billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Office of Management and Budget estimated a $144 billion deficit Thursday for fiscal 1989, still at $2 billion below the point where the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law would force across-the-board budget cuts. In a report required by law, budget director Jim Miller said President Reagan need not yet order the $10 billion-plus in cuts.

Noriega turns to Cuba, Libya to retain power

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Panama's military leader, Gen. Manuel Noriega, is turning increasingly to Cuba, Nicaragua and Libya to retain his shaky grip on power, the Panamanian ambassador said to the United States Thursday. Ambassador Juan Sosa, who represents Eric Arturo Delvalle, the Panamanian president recognized by the United States, told a news conference that Noriega "is fighting for survival in a situation that is ruining the country."

CHARLOTTE, N.C. Judge clears $14 million for state to help railroad

CHICAGO (UPI) — A federal bankruptcy judge Wednesday approved a $14 million, state-funded loan package to rescue the struggling Chicago, Missouri & Western Railway. The bailout package, which is expected to keep the rail line running through early 1989, apparently will head off a shutdown of the almost-cashless 631-mile regional line, which runs between Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City, Daniel Murray, the railroad's bankruptcy trustee, said.

Comedian pedaling on national scene

Man uses bicycle to gain attention

By Brad Bushue
Staff Writer

Equipped only with a Peugeot touring bike, a few essential possessions and a sense of humor, comedian Tom Snyder pedaled his way into Carbondale for an opening comedy performance at BG's Old Tyme Deli and Saloon Wednesday.

SNYDERS, 27, cycled his 12,900th mile of his comedy career as he came into Carbondale for a four-day performance.

SNYDERS SAID he has been zigzagging the country on bike since a trip to a Las Vegas engagement proved to be more than his car could handle mechanically.

THOUGH THE Ottawa native and Illinois State graduate has endured the miles of 15 states — including the blistering desert of the West and the steep hills of Missouri and Southern Illinois — his humor has not become cynical and he rarely considers quitting, Snyder said.

"I'D JUST be another comic," he said.

"I NEVER feel like giving up because I realize the bike thing has become my source of success, my shake," Snyder said.

"WHEN I to the club I'm working, all the pain from the trip is worthwhile because I get to ham it up and do what I do," he said.

—Tom Snyder

THE ROAD has not always been smooth for Snyder. After working in Las Vegas, he traveled 1,600 miles in 16 days to Des Moines, Iowa, only to find the club had burned.

SNYDERS ADMITS that his cycling to jobs is the reason for receiving national attention.

HE RECENTLY worked on Tom Snyder's nationally syndicated NBC radio program and has gotten attention for possible spots on Late Night with David Letterman and the Tonight Show.

WITH ALL the miles traveled on the road, Snyder said he has time to think about what he's doing.

"MANY PEOPLE think I'm crazy for doing what I do, but it's better than watching MTV and waiting to win the lottery," he said.

SNYDERS SAID he hopes to write a book about his career on the road.

SIU-C professor named president of music fraternity

By Kimberly Clarke
Staff Writer

Jervis Underwood, professor of music at the University, was recently elected national president of Chi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, the nation's largest and oldest professional fraternity for men in music.

Underwood has been in the fraternity for 34 years, and most recently held the position of national vice president of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia.

"It is enormously satisfying to reach the point where I would be elected national president of the fraternity," Underwood said. "It is quite an honor."

The fraternity was organized in 1898 with the purpose to "foster the cause of American music," Underwood said. The fraternity currently has about 4,000 active members and 100,000 alumni, he added.

However, with recent financial problems on the national level, Underwood said one of his goals will be to "straighten that out."

At a previous national meeting, there was a vote for a hefty increase in membership fees and dues and if it is supported by the members, things can "get back on track," Underwood said.

"My goal is to see the fraternity in the position to be able to do more for American music," he added.

Underwood has been teaching at SIU-C since 1971, and is a flutist with the nationally recognized New American Woodwind Quintet.

Controversy clouds candidates' stances

NOW THAT THE controversy surrounding Dan Quayle finally is beginning to fade, maybe voters will be able to discover what the Republican vice presidential nominee is all about.

Most everyone knows where Quayle has been, but very few know where Quayle stands.

We can dismiss his ducking the Vietnam war to escape the risk of getting his head shot off. Never mind that Quayle is a flag-waving chicken hawk who wholeheartedly supported sending troops to Vietnam.

We also can dismiss rumors — if they are rumors — of his alleged proposition to a Washington lobbyist and Playboy model Paula Parkinson, because, when it comes down to it, nothing happened and the only witness to the incident is Parkinson herself.

AND WE CAN dismiss him for his recent flip-flop on the issue of granting Cabinet-level status to the Veterans Administration just five weeks after voting against the bill.

We also can dismiss Quayle himself, but this is the man who in January may be just one heart beat away from the presidency. So, who is Quayle and where does he stand on important issues?

Now that all the "bum raps" are beginning to die down, maybe Quayle will get down to brass tacks and tell us why we should consider voting for the Republican ticket. But Quayle probably should play it safe and keep his mouth shut to avoid any more controversy.

To be fair, we also know little about the other candidates, and the little we do know is hardly enough information for anyone to feel confident about voting.

WE KNOW GEORGE Bush was a World War II combat pilot shot down over the Atlantic Ocean and that he supports reciting of the Pledge of Allegiance and prayer in schools.

We know that Michael Dukakis is Greek and is a cousin of Academy Award winning Olympia Dukakis. We also know that he never sought medical help for a mental breakdown.

We know that Sen. Lloyd Bentsen is a conservative Texan who disagrees with Dukakis on almost every issue, whatever those issues might be. We also know that he never pulled strings to get his son in the Air National Guard.

With only two months left in the race to the White House, and the little information available about the candidates, it is not surprising that a majority of Americans fail to vote at election time.

State gives fair new life

IT'S NICE to see a public official follow through on a promise. When the state bought the Du Quoin State Fair in 1986, Gov. James R. Thompson vowed to restore past elegance to the rolling hills of the fairgrounds that was the showplace of Southern Illinois before economic hard times hit.

Thompson, with a lot of bi-partisan support from the region's leaders, has followed through on that goal.

VISITORS TO the fairgrounds will see freshly painted facilities, manicured grounds and a wholesome family atmosphere. That is what a fair should be: Something for the family. This year's fair offers a diverse schedule of entertainment, much of it free of charge. Ticket prices for many of the night shows are about a third of what concertgoers pay at most venues.

ADMISSION TO the fair remains a bargain. Parking is free and there is a $1 per person charge at the gate. With free exhibits ranging from livestock to technology, a dollar admission is quite a bargain. The truly frugal could spend a day at the fair and have a good time just for the price of admission.

WE ARE GLAD the state has seen fit to keep this rich tradition alive. The fair once was a big event in the region and most counties sponsored one. We are fortunate that the state has rejuvenated this showcase of the county fair tradition, complete with the best of the region's farm products, the tastiest of the region's home cooking and the finest schedule of harness racing north of Kentucky.

Female intelligence can be gauged by reactions to sight of balding scalp

MILLIONS OF YOUNG men with thinning hair were surely feeling depressed after watching a network news show the other night.

The show was about a prescription drug that the federal government has approved for use as an anti-baldness lotion.

That might sound like good news, but it wasn't.

For one thing, various experts said only a small percentage of balding men would be helped by the drug. And the twice-a-day dousing would be expensive and have to be done as long as they wanted to keep their hair.

FAR WORSE, THOUGH, was a series of brief filmed interviews with young women at the beginning of the show.

The women were asked what they thought of men who were bald or had thinning hair. Between giggles and considerable eye-rolling, they said, in effect: "Eek."

As I sat listening to these cruel creatures, I thought of the agony they were bringing to millions of young men. Men who might be worthy, admirable, even heroic. Men who, through some genetic glitch over which they had no control, were born to be bald.

AND THERE WERE these young lovelies saying that despite whatever noble qualities a man might possess, they would reject him on the trivial grounds that the foliage on the very top of his body did not compare favorably with that of some jungle beastie.

So I decided to write something to comfort these young men and offer them hope for the future.

My motive has nothing to do with any personal baldness problem. As you can see from the picture in this column, I'm not bald. It's just that the top of my head is gone.

THIS HAPPENED WHEN I applied for my first job as a columnist. An editor said I should have my head examined. I took his advice and asked a doctor to examine my head, which he did, but he forgot to put the top back on. But that's another story.

Mike Royko

Tribune Media Services

"He probably spends 10 minutes every morning with a hair dryer and comb, getting it just so...in 10 years, that's 20 days of his life gone, just blowing hot air on his head."

—Dr. I.M. Kookie

We're talking about baldness. And, as I do with many complex subjects, I sought the expertise of the prominent psychiatrist Dr. I.M. Kookie.

I asked him why these young women reacted so negatively to the very mention of baldness or thinning hair.

"YOU WANT ME to explain their reaction in clinical terms?"

If you would. "Okay. They reacted the way they did because they are ninnies."

Could you explain that in simpler layman's terms?

"Yes. The intelligence of a female can be measured in inverse proportion to her reaction to the sight of a man's naked scalp. Or to put it another way, the more a woman thinks about how much hair a guy has, the lower her IQ is."

If true, that is a remarkable scientific finding.

"DON'T WORRY, IT'S true. Only a ninny worries about head hair. Do they care about how much hair a man has on his legs? Of course not. So why do they care about how much he has on his head?"

I hadn't thought of it that way.

"And what good is it anyway? You take a young guy with lots of hair. He probably spends 10 minutes every morning with a hair dryer and comb, getting it just so. That's an hour a week. In a year, he's spent more than two whole days on his hair. In 10 years, that's 20 days of his life gone, just blowing hot air on his head. And that doesn't count the time he spends getting it styled or combed it every time he goes in the john. A bald guy doesn't have to do that. So even if they live to the exact same age, a bald guy is going to live longer because of the time he saves."

SO YOU'RE SAYING that the more intelligent women are not concerned about male hair growth?

"That's right. An intelligent woman thinks about other qualities that are a lot more important than superficial appearances."

You mean wit, humor, gentleness, and whether a man is trustworthy, reliable, good and true?

"No, I meant money."

Money?

"Sure. You ever notice something about real rich guys? They can be bald as an egg and have a face like a newborn bird, but they ain't lonely. Intelligent women know that even guys with hair get old. But money gets younger. Even CD's will give you 10 percent over five years. Those ninnies on that TV show, they think a CD is some kind of disease."

BUT WHAT ABOUT balding young men who aren't rich? What are they supposed to do?

"It should be an incentive to them. They should learn how to do something useful, like insider trading. Now I got to go pick something up at the cleaners."

Asui?

"No, my spare hairpiece."

Students integral to local business

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

Where would Carbondale be without University students?

About $65 million poorer according to a 1985 study of the economic impact of the University on the Carbondale area by Sam Goldman, Educational Administration and Higher Education. Paul Sorgen, director of city finance, estimated that the students account for 30 to 35 percent of the retail sales in the City.

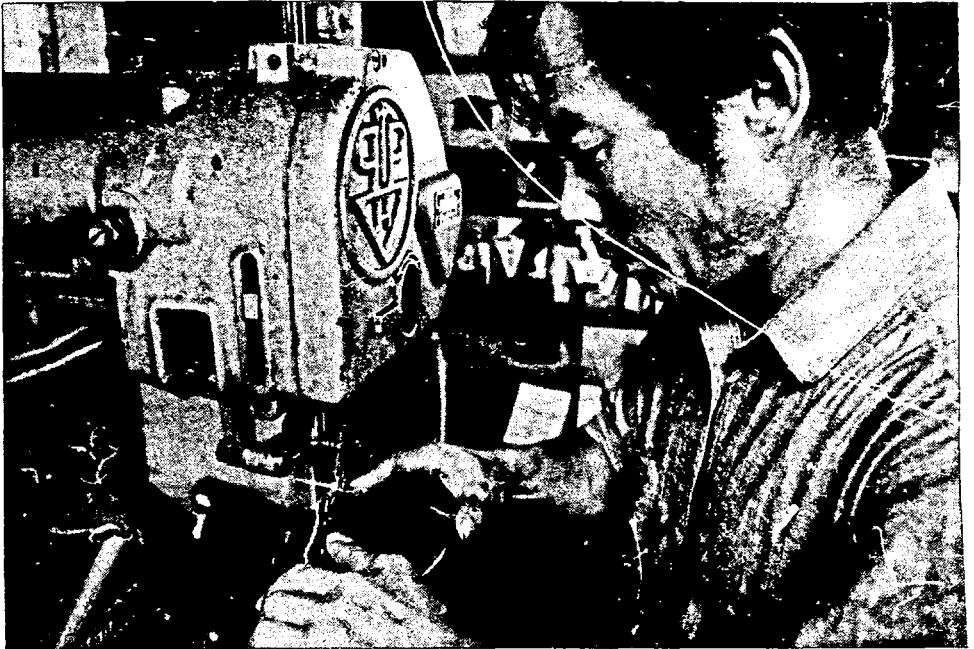

But students have a wider impact on City business than simply retail sales. From staying open extra hours at the bank the week before the fall semester to setting up a new system for turning on the gas and electric, Carbondale shifts to full-tilt with the influx of students coming back to campus in the fall.

Joe R. Kestler, executive vice president of the First National Bank and Trust Co., 509 S. University, said the week before fall semester begins the bank will "open up as many accounts in a day as we do in some months of the year."

The towing business also booms when students return to school. James Jackson, owner of Jim's Towing and Storage, Route 51 North, said his business increases about 50 percent in the fall.

Jackson said the majority of his business is that of removing keys for people who have locked them in their vehicle. He said 20 percent of his business is towing cars off private property.

Perhaps the hardest hit of the Carbondale enterprises in the storm-before-the-school-year chaos is the hotel business.

Scott Perry, a guest service representative for the Holiday Inn, 800 E. Main, said his hotel was booked solid for 7 days in a row before school started this fall.

"It means a lot of extra work (for the employees) and a lot of extra money for the hotel," Perry said.

But the Holiday Inn was not the only full hotel in the area. Perry said the night before the freshman moved into the dorms, the nearest room to be had without a reservation was in Cape Girardeau, Mo. — nearly 50 miles away.

Business is brisk during the semester as well, Perry said.

"When school is in, there's more University business, so we get more people visiting the students and more people visiting the campus," he said.

But students do not often check into Carbondale hotels during the school year.

Though Goldman's survey concludes that students spend less money in bars and restaurants than on groceries or housing the most visible of student activities is probably the daily congregation on S. Illinois Avenue, known as the Strip.

The Strip is a natural meeting place for transportationless dorm residents because of its proximity to campus and for everyone else in town because of its central location.

Gatsby's Bar and Billiards Parlour, Campus Shopping Center, receives at least 80 percent of its business from students, General Manager Ronnie Miles said.

"Our business revenue skyrocketed this week," he said.

Miles said business for Gatsby's probably triples in the fall and spring semesters compared to summer and

March on Washington set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Thousands of people from across the country are expected to gather Saturday at the Washington Monument and march to the Lincoln Memorial to mark the 25th anniversary of the March on Washington and Martin Luther King Jr.'s "I Have a Dream" speech. The 1963 march helped prompt passage of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, the 1965 Voting Rights Act, the 1968 Fair Housing Act and led to creation of President Johnson's "war on poverty." Michael Dukakis, the 1988 Democratic nominee for president; Jesse Jackson, the civil rights leader and Dukakis's chief rival for the Democratic nomination; and Coretta Scott King, King's wife, are scheduled to address the anniversary march from the steps of the memorial where King delivered his address.

Jurors deliberating in longest criminal trial

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — Jurors began deliberations Thursday in the marathon racketeering trial of 20 reputed members of the Lucchese Mafia family and lawyers were ordered to remain in the courthouse to avoid further delays in the longest federal criminal trial in U.S. history.

U.S. District Judge Harold Ackerman issued the order when it took more than 75 minutes to assemble the many defense lawyers in court after the jury delivered its first written question.

"The judge had a great deal of trouble getting attorneys there on time," said Grady O'Malley, a prosecutor for the federal Organized Crime Strike Force in Newark. "It took a while for everyone to congregate."

"The judge wanted all the lawyers within 10 minutes (of the courthouse) if the jury had a question," she said. "But when the jury's notes came in, it took me 25 minutes just to call everyone. So the judge ordered them to remain here" whenever the jury is in session.

The trial, believed the longest criminal proceeding in an American federal court, was turned over to the jury Wednesday after Ackerman read his 705 pages of legal instructions.

FBI agents deny they discriminated against Hispanics

EL PASO, Texas (UPI) — FBI agents testified Thursday that the bureau does not discriminate against Hispanics and said two people who are suing the bureau were transferred or disciplined only because of their work performance.

Three-fourths of the FBI's 404 Hispanic agents have joined in a discrimination suit brought by Bernardo Matias Perez, assistant special agent-in-charge of the El Paso bureau.

The suit seeks $5 million in damages for Perez and back pay and promotion for all 311 Hispanic plaintiffs.

Two agents testified Thursday that two plaintiffs in the suit were transferred or disciplined because of their work performance and not because they were Hispanic.

Agent Myron Hitch of the FBI's Los Angeles bureau said plaintiff Lionel Chavez was transferred off a SWAT team because he failed to show up when the team was called for emergencies.

Hitch denied he is anti-Hispanic and that he ever used the term "Spics" or "token Cuban." He admitted under cross-examination that he referred to Hispanic friends as "beaners" and "Mexicans."

"We'd joke around in the office," Hitch said. "I've called Hispanic friends 'beaners' and 'Mexicans,' but never meant anything derogatory by it."

Agent Robert Butler of Tampa, Fla., denied that plaintiff Maria Villarreal was discriminated against. Butler said he is not anti-Hispanic and often spoke to agents about ethnic jokes in the office.

"This kind of activity has no place in the FBI," he said.

Government lawyers were expected to rest their case by week's end, clearing the way for rebuttal testimony by the plaintiffs' lawyers. U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton, who is hearing the case without a jury, is not expected to make a ruling for weeks or months.

sured motorists on the road. "However, since it is obvious that our serious concerns about the deficiencies of this bill and its effectiveness have gone unheeded, we would suggest, and indeed urge, that the law be independently reviewed and evaluated periodically after it takes effect," said Bob Schultz of the Illinois Insurance Information Service.

Secretary of State Jim Edgar, a chief proponent of the plan, said Allstate and State Farm insurance companies have stated they would not be forced to raise rates because of the new law.

The plan requires motorists to carry cards issued by their insurance companies indicating they have liability insurance of $20,000 for injuring or killing one person, $40,000 for injuring or killing more than one person and $15,000 for property damage.

Motorists will have to display their insurance cards.

breaks. Miles, an electrical engineering major, said 30 of Gatsby's 35 employees are students. He said student patrons are more comfortable with being served by their fellows.

In any college town, the worker turnover from graduation and increased study loads is significant, but it is a job that requires its employees to work until 3 a.m., turnover is especially acute.

"We spend the first half of the year going through the gas, the new gas. For the second half we have a stable staff."

Miles said Gatsby's doubles its staff during the school year. Quatro's Deep Pan Pizza, Campus Shopping Center, is another business that bolsters its staff when school begins in the fall.

Manager Jeff Formentini said Quatro hires 10 to 15 more people for the school year.

Formentini said about 15 to 20 percent of Quatro's business is students, and though he thinks the business would survive without them, "Our business could not nearly be so successful without the students."

Finally, not all restaurants are inundated with students at the start of the school year.

Burt Cannell, part owner of Tres Hombres, said a substantial number of his customers are students, but that doesn't prevent his business from actually decreasing as the students come back into town.

Cannell speculated that because many of his customers are administrators and faculty at the University, the beginning of school means less leisure time for these people.

Drug bust in central Illinois indicts 16 cocaine dealers

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Sixteen "major drug dealers" were arrested in Knox and Tazewell counties Thursday on cocaine trafficking charges following a year-long investigation by state, local and federal law enforcement agencies.

U.S. Attorney J. William Roberts said the investigation, called Operation Iron Eagle, was undertaken by a task force of 14 state, local and federal law enforcement agencies.

The 16 were indicted by a federal grand jury. In addition, 10 other individuals were charged in local indictments in Knox County.

"Some (of those arrested) were working in concert, some were loosely related," said Roberts, adding that he did not know why the group chose two rural areas of central Illinois to operate in. "We expect more arrests — a number more. This is an ongoing investigation."

Roberts says the individuals were selling cocaine in quantities of $200,000 to $400,000 per week, depending on the substance's purity and he estimated two dozen more arrests to be a "conservative" number.

"These are major drug dealers," Roberts said. "The members of this group sold multi-kilo amounts of cocaine on a weekly basis."

One of the individuals arrested was a guard at the Galesburg Correctional Center. He could face up to 144 years in prison and up to $7.25 million in fines. He resigned his post at the prison earlier this month.

Roberts refused to say whether the investigation was targeting other guards at the prison, nor would he identify if any of the individuals could be considered a kingpin or the distribution area of the drugs.

Police said they seized Knott's Music in Galesburg, run by another of those arrested.

Airplane crash results in 3 deaths

PEMBROKE PINES, Fla. (UPI) — A small airplane crashed into a shopping center and burst into flames shortly after takeoff Thursday, killing all three people aboard the plane and severely injuring at least one person on the ground, officials said.

The six-seat Aerostar went down at about 3:30 p.m. just east of the Florida Turnpike after taking off from the North Perry Airport, about 16 miles north of downtown Miami, authorities said.

Employees of a print shop struck by the plane said they escaped injury by fleeing the building just before fire engulfed the structure.

But one woman entering the shop or just outside was badly burned and intense flames prevented firefighters and rescue crews from getting close to the scene for more than two hours.

Ron Gardner, spokesman for nearby Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport, said the plane had three people aboard when it left North Perry and all three died in the crash.

"As far as we know, those are the only three fatalities," said Gardner, acting as spokesman for local authorities.

The plane crashed into a shopping center with a print shop, a gift shop, a Weight Watchers store and a television repair store, with most of the wreckage in the print shop, Gardner said.

The names of the three dead were not immediately known.

Results negative, Murdale District boil order lifted

The water boil order enacted Tuesday for the Murdale Water District because of a break was lifted Thursday at 2 p.m., a water district employee said.

The boil order for the area between Carbondale and New Era Road in Murphysboro was issued by Environmental Protection Agency regulation when a break from unknown causes occurred in a water main in the Kinkaid-Reed's Creek Conservancy District and lowered water pressure beyond a usable level, water district employee Margaret Huck said.

The order was lifted when test samples of the water were returned negative.

Poshard's bid obtains boost

AFL-CIO, veterans give their support to state senator

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

State Senator Glenn Poshard received the support of two important organizations Thursday in his bid for the 22nd District's Congressional seat.

In a news conference before leaders of area Veterans of Foreign Wars, Poshard announced the beginning of Southern Illinois Veterans for Poshard and received the endorsement of the 22nd District Committee on Political Education, the political arm of the AFL-CIO.

Poshard is "a proven friend to working men and women in the 59th (District)," Ed Smith, representative of the AFL-CIO, said, as he announced the labor organization's endorsement of Poshard for Congress.

Smith called Poshard a leader in the Illinois Senate for sponsoring and getting important legislation to the state's working class passed.

During his three years in Springfield, Poshard has sponsored six acts beneficial to labor: Labor Management Council Legislation, State of Illinois Corrections Employees Retirement Bill, Plant Closing Notification Act, Unemployment Insurance Act, Collective Bargaining for Public Employees and Successor Clause Legislation.

"There is no question about it. This is clearly the candidate of the working men and women of the 22nd District," Smith said.

Although the VFW bylaws prohibit the organization from endorsing a candidate for political office, "the laws don't prohibit us from helping," said Chester Speers, of the Anna VFW, and that is what the group hopes to do with the starting of Southern Illinois Veterans for Poshard.

"We are now entering a period in the federal government where the congressman will be very, very active on our behalf," Stanley Macieiski, commander of the Chester American Legion and lifetime member of the VFW, said. "And we want a man of his caliber to represent us."

Poshard, himself a veteran, has most recently co-sponsored legislation to build a veterans home in Anna, which Gov. James Thompson has signed.

"We don't expect nothing for nothing, but we do expect him to be in our corner when we need him," Macieiski said.

Veterans request help now to battle problems in future

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

"We're facing a drought of votes in the Congress of the United States as far as veterans are concerned," a member of the Veteran Affairs Committee said.

Lane Evans, D-Rock Island, came to Marion Thursday, not only to help state Sen. Glenn Poshard with his campaign for Congress, but also to enlist the newly formed Southern Illinois Veterans for Poshard.

"We've got to stand up for the veterans of this country. Not only out of a legal sense but out of a moral sense," Evans said in a speech to area members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"We are sending a message to today's armed forces," he said.

Evans told the group that the morale of those serving in the armed forces is in danger because of the way the administration is handling America's veterans.

"If they see how their fathers and brothers are being treated by the Veterans Administration, it may reflect on their morale."

Evans said that no matter who wins the race for the White House, "veterans programs face cuts if we don't do something about these problems."

Among the state problems mentioned were Gov. James Thompson's attempts to close state veteran assistance offices and the lack of state funding for nursing homes.

By 1990, Evans said, half the male population over 65 will be comprised of World War II veterans, needing the assistance they were promised when they enlisted in "the great war."

But the problem isn't just one for the veterans, Evans warned.

"It's going to hurt veterans and non-veterans alike because its going to have some impact on the Medicare program and all of us who use hospitals."

"The battle to fight these budget cuts" has brought the veterans of all wars together, but the war isn't over yet, Evans said.

Vets center coming to Southern Illinois

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

There will be a veterans home in Anna.

Gov. James Thompson signed legislation approving the construction of a veterans home, adjacent to the Clyde L. Choate Mental Health Center in Anna.

The bill, co-sponsored by state Senators Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin, and Glenn Poshard, D-Cartersville, and state Representatives Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro, and Jim Rea, D-Christopher, will allot $3 million toward the new facility.

Construction is scheduled to begin in 1989, with completion expected by mid-1990.

"This project has been nearly ten years in the making and I am extremely excited to see the one-story project now get underway," Rea said.

Originally, plans were made to renovate two existing buildings, but the costly removal of asbestos would have made the project economically unfeasible, a news release said.

"The money is in place and now it's just the matter of building it," Dunn said.

The facility will be the third of its kind in the state and the first in Southern Illinois.

"I am very pleased that the governor understands the need for such a facility in Southern Illinois," Poshard said.

Cutbacks decreasing quality of business school

By Miguel Alba
Staff Writer

The College of Business and Administration is feeling the effects of budgetary cutbacks. Thomas Gutteridge, dean of the College of Business and Administration, said the college is "scrimping and scraping" to get by on "cut funds are available.

The areas being hit are in the allotments to faculty for travel, telephone, and office equipment. "Some of the faculty will have to pay the travel costs themselves if they want to attend conferences, which usually run between $300 to $800," Gutteridge said, "This is cutting back on our ability to compete with peers at other universities."

The college has lost six faculty members this year due to cutbacks. Gutteridge said that the college is losing the "professional advantage" in attracting and keeping faculty. "They (faculty) move on elsewhere, where they can get the computer in their office or the extra graduate assistants," he said.

When instructors do leave, they are replaced by term faculty which are contracted by semester or year. These faculty members are usually recent MBA graduates and are paid less than tenured members. They usually teach the introductory courses.

"I don't feel comfortable doing this," said Gutteridge, adding that these instructors do not have the wealth and diversity in experience as compared to senior faculty, "but when it comes down to offering the class or not, there is really no choice."

Gutteridge feels the lack of appropriate funding is a cumulative problem, which if not corrected may lead to both students and faculty looking to other universities.

Gutteridge, who supports a tax increase, said that one will definitely be needed by June of next year, otherwise "All hell can break loose"

International group active

Council involved in helping students interact on campus

By Diana Mivall
Staff Writer

M. Ali Firouzi, International Student Council president, said he has worked this summer to achieve better communication and more interaction between international students and students from the United States.

"ISC was very active and productive during the summer," Firouzi said.

Carbondale's World Fair, held this summer at the University Mall, was organized by the Carbondale

Chamber of Commerce and the ISC, Firouzi said.

"This was the first time something was done off campus and it proved very successful," he said. Activities included artifact exhibitions from different countries, an international fashion show and the opportunity to meet others from different cultures, Firouzi said.

Firouzi said people from many towns around Carbondale attended the summer fair. He said he would like to see the fair made into an annual function.

Firouzi said he and other ISC representatives attended the 40th anniversary conference of the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs in Washington, D.C., May 30 to June 2.

"We took a videotape of past ISC activities including the International Festival, the cultural show and the fashion show," he said. Firouzi said NAFSA was very impressed with the activities.

"They couldn't believe these activities were put together by students," he said. "They (NAFSA) said the programs looked very professional," Firouzi added.

An ISC office in the basement of the Student Center is under construction, Firouzi said. "Hopefully the office will be completed sometime this semester," he said. This ISC office will be an interacting place for American and international students, Firouzi said.

Governor against tax increase for Kentucky schools

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Despite comments to the contrary by a cabinet member, the governor said Thursday lawmakers would not be considering any tax increases for education during the special session he plans in January.

"Let me say one more time, so we'll be sure about this, there will be no tax increase (on the agenda) in the special session of the General Assembly," Gov. Wallace Wilkinson said.

Wilkinson made the comment concerning Education Secretary Jack Foster's published remarks following an address to some 650 state officials gathered in Louisville for the annual Governor's Local Issues Conference.

"He's the governor, he decides what's in the call. He decides what he is going to do about revenue — not the secretary of education," Foster told United Press International.

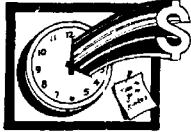

The governor announced the January date to bring lawmakers together in Frankfort last Friday, with a statement saying tax increases would not be on the agenda.

But published reports quoted Foster as saying, "The governor's statement about taxes is not an irrevocable position."

"I am open to funding education if I think it's needed and if we get the proper framework in place," after the special session, Wilkinson said Thursday.

And Foster explained, "The question that I was asked was that the legislature is concerned about money for the (education) program. And I said we agree on the programs first, then we'll talk about the money."

Enrollment for med school plummets to six-year low

CHICAGO (UPI) — Medical school appears to be losing its cachet for U.S. students, as applications and enrollments declined in the 1987-88 academic year, the American Medical Association said Thursday.

Applications to medical schools fell about 10 percent, from 31,323 in 1986-87 to 28,123 in 1987-88, with about 61 percent of applicants winning acceptance, Anne Crowley, an AMA analyst reported in the association's journal.

First-time enrollment in U.S. medical schools was down for the fifth straight year, and total enrollment hit 65,742, a six-year low.

"Despite the decline in number of applicants, the percentage of 'A' students entering has increased and the average Medical College Admission Test score of entering students remains high," Crowley reported.

Most of the decline in numbers of medical students is due to declining enrollments of white males. While their numbers have dropped more than 13 percent over the last four years, the number of black females starting medical school rose about 32 percent. Numbers of white females and black males have been steady, the AMA said.

About 36 percent of the students beginning medical school are women, the AMA said. Blacks, making up about 12 percent of the U.S. population, account for only about 6 percent of the students entering medical school.

Hispanics and Native Americans also are underrepresented, while "Students of Asian or Pacific Island ancestry are over-represented, comprising 8.9 percent of medical school enrollment, but only 1.6 percent of the general population," the AMA said.

One reason medical school may be losing its appeal is cost. A study by Paul Jolly of the Association of American Medical Colleges, also published in this week's issue of JAMA, showed 82 percent of 1987 medical students were in debt when they graduated, owing, on average, $35,621 — 6 percent more than the year before and an all-time high.

Jolly and his colleagues reported that 17 percent of U.S. medical graduates owed more than $50,000. The researchers said, "Heavily indebted students are more likely to be older, female, and members of minority groups underrepresented in medicine."

Group criticizes school food

Lunches contain too much salt, fat to meet standards

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A consumer group criticized school cafeterias Thursday for serving lunches so loaded with fat, salt and sugar that they fail to meet decade-old government dietary guidelines and new ones by the surgeon general.

With schools gearing up for the new academic year, Public Voice for Food and Health Policy issued a report that urged the National School Lunch Program to serve the dual role of giving nutritious meals to students while establishing healthy eating habits.

Executive Director Ellen Haas noted that Surgeon General C. Everett Koop recently documented five of the 10 leading causes of death are linked directly to poor eating habits, such as too much fat and sodium and too little fiber.

Moreover, Koop's report came nearly a decade after the departments of Agriculture and Health and Human Services issued dietary guidelines that stressed similar precautions.

Haas complained that the government has done little to insure nutritional guidelines are followed in the school lunch program. She said, "Many schools around the country continue to serve lunches loaded with saturated fat."

For examples, Haas described how school cafeterias often top fatty hot dogs with chili, offer ham and cheese toppings for a simple baked potato, and frequently have fried foods on the menu.

"Not only has (the government) not seen to it that schools cut back on fat, but many of the foods provided to the schools under the commodity purchase program contribute to the high-fat menus served," she said.

Suzanne Harris of the USDA Food and Consumer Services agreed that school lunches should be consistent with dietary guidelines but stressed that scientific evidence does not support setting absolute daily intake levels of sugar, fat or sodium for children.

Harris said, "Contrary to what is implied by Public Voice, the surgeon general recently issued a report stating, 'No data are available from prospective studies to demonstrate that feeding cholesterol-lowering diets to children can either support normal growth and development or reduce later heart disease rates.'"

Fire destroys college landmark

BLAIR, Neb. (UPI) — A fire roared through Old Main, the Dana College landmark building on a hill overlooking a Missouri River valley, Thursday, consuming works of art and research and an "almost irreplaceable" chunk of history.

"It's the symbol of Dana College," said Myrvin Christopherson, college president. "For those associated with the school, a little bit of Dana dies today."

Christopherson said the fire broke out in the northeast corner of the 103-year-old structure that was two-thirds renovated two years ago at a cost of $600,000 to $1 million.

Blair Fire Chief Steve Brown said firefighters Irvington, Kennard and Herman joined his units in response to the blaze, reported about 5:15 a.m. by a cleaning lady.

A Blair firefighter was taken to Blair Memorial Community Hospital where he was treated for smoke inhalation and heat exhaustion and released, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Blair is about 30 miles northwest of Omaha.

Inflation at highest point in six years

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Inflation hit a six-year high in the second quarter as the nation's "boom-like" economy drew off a $2.4 billion drought loss and grew at a 3.3 percent annual rate, the Commerce Department said Thursday.

The White House hailed the solid growth, but the report contained a danger signal. Two measures the Bureau of Economic Analysis uses to adjust for price changes and estimate the economy's underlying inflation rate shot up in the second quarter.

"This report shows a boom-like potential," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for The Boston Co. "We're into a boom with the kind of inflation that accompanies a boom, and that's a surprise to most people."

The fixed weights index, which corresponds most closely to the more commonly cited Consumer Price Index, and the deflator, which takes into account the composition of the GNP as well as price changes, both hit their highest levels since the third quarter of 1982.

The fixed weights index was 4.7 percent in the second quarter, up from 3.5 percent in the first quarter, and the deflator rose from 1.7 percent to 5.1 percent.

The bureau said the increase was caused by higher prices for food, energy and clothing.

In Los Angeles, where President Reagan was vacationing, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater hailed the figures and said, "Inflation remains low and under control."

James Miller, director of the Office of Management and Budget, said in Washington the report "does not suggest a likelihood of accelerated inflation" and told reporters, "We think the markets are a little unduly concerned about inflation."

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported this month that the July Consumer Price Index jumped 0.4 percent, an annual rate of 5.2 percent.

"The prices of what we're buying right now are rising faster than we thought they were," said Robert Diell, senior economist with The Northern Trust Co. of Chicago. "It's not necessarily good news, but we can explain it, so in that regard it's not as disturbing."

The nation's economy would have grown at an even brisker 4.3 percent annual rate except for the long drought, which sliced $2.4 billion off total output of goods and services in the second quarter, the bureau said.

The total loss of crops and livestock for the year is now estimated at $14.3 billion, most of which will fall in the second half, the bureau said.

The 3.3 percent, or $32 billion, annual growth in gross national product in the second quarter was better than the 3.1 percent rate the bureau forecast last month but on the low end of analysts' forecasts, which ranged from 3.2 percent to 4 percent.

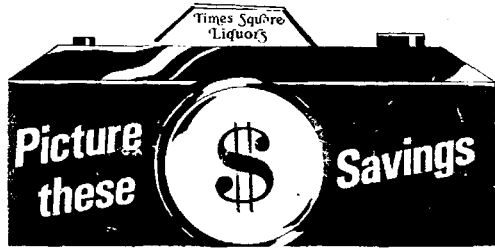

Sinai suggested the Democrats might be able to make some political hay with the GNP report.

"The political debate will more and more be stressing the inflationary consequences of an overheated economy ... as a result of big deficits and heavy borrowing," he said. "I'd be surprised if the Democrats didn't pick up on that."

The administration has set a 3 percent growth rate goal for this year and the economy would have to grow at only a modest 2.7 percent annual rate in the second half to meet that goal.

Continued faster expansion could overheat the economy and prompt further measures to cool it off, analysts said.

The Federal Reserve Board raised its benchmark discount interest rate Aug. 9 from 6 percent to 6.5 percent as a signal it means to curb inflation even at the risk of increasing unemployment.

Retired U.S. Army sergeant linked to East Bloc spy ring

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Officials said Thursday the United States and West Germany have broken a spy ring involving a retired U.S. Army sergeant and another American soldier who sold vital Western military secrets to the East Bloc.

The ring reportedly included at least eight people in West Germany and Sweden and sold secrets, including U.S. and NATO plans to defend Europe, to Hungarian agents who passed them to the Soviet Union.

While U.S. intelligence sources in Washington warned it was too early to assess the impact of the ring's activities, they noted that some military experts are comparing it to the Walker family case of 1985, one of the most damaging spy rings in U.S. history.

Former U.S. Navy Warrant Officer John Walker Jr. sold vital documents and information on secret military codes to the Soviets for 16 years, recruiting his brother, son and a Navy colleague to obtain documents after he retired.

West German federal prosecutor Kurt Rebmann said officials in Karlsruhe arrested suspects in the case Tuesday, including the retired U.S. sergeant, a 20-year army veteran who had access to secret documents and defense plans for seven years.

Rebmann said the sergeant recruited another soldier to sell secrets and used several people in Germany and Sweden as couriers.

The U.S. Justice Department identified the sergeant as Clyde Lee Conrad, 51, who has lived in West Germany since retiring from the army in September 1985.

Army records showed Conrad studied German for nine months at the Defense Language Institute in Monterey, Calif., before being assigned in November 1980 to the 8th Infantry Division in Bad Kreuznach, West Germany, where he stayed until retiring.

The records released by the Pentagon do not list Conrad's job, but an Army spokesman said he worked as a liaison with other U.S. units. The records list Conrad's military training as infantryman and administration specialist.

Rebmann said the sergeant recruited another soldier to sell secrets after he retired from the Army and used several people in Germany and Sweden as couriers.

For the seven years before his 1985 retirement, Conrad was "the custodian of secret matters" in Bad Kreuznach, 40 miles southwest of Frankfurt, Rebmann said.

"In this capacity he had access to secret military plans, especially including defense plans," Rebmann said.

He said the American is suspected of betraying the plans for a large sum of money to a steady East Bloc contact and also of delivering information through the couriers.

"After he left the army he attempted to recruit agents for his contact," Rebmann said. "He recruited another member of the U.S. Army for espionage and paid him a sum in five figures for military documents."

Officials did not say if the other soldier had been arrested, and he was not identified.

At his last meeting with his East Bloc contact, which took place in Vienna last month, Conrad delivered documents in return for money, Rebmann said. He was arrested Tuesday after an extensive investigation.

Iran, Iraq meet face-to-face

Five-hour session marks beginning of peace meetings

GENEVA (UPI) — Persian Gulf enemies Iran and Iraq began direct peace talks under U.N. auspices Thursday, meeting for more than five hours in an opening session in hopes of turning a fragile cease-fire into a permanent settlement.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar told reporters the initial meeting had been "good" and foreign ministers Ali Akbar Velayati of Iran and Tariq Aziz of Iraq had agreed to resume talks Friday.

Velayati and Aziz, each accompanied by 14 advisers, sat down at tables facing each other at 3:45 p.m. for the first direct talks between the two countries since the Iran-Iraq war began eight years ago. The fighting ended with a cease-fire Saturday after claiming an estimated 1 million lives.

The face-to-face session ended at 5:55 p.m. with the two delegations retiring to separate rooms. Perez de Cuellar then conducted shuttle diplomacy between the Iranian and Iraqi delegations until 9 p.m.

Perez de Cuellar, looking tired and blinking in harsh television lights, said the two sides had discussed substantive issues that procedural issues had been settled, and that he was satisfied with the first day of work.

"We had good discussions and we have covered many points," he said after the session ended. He said both sides had wanted to "consult with their authorities" before meeting again Friday.

"There is not much more I can say," said the U.N. chief executive, who earlier had asked Iran and Iraq to keep the talks as private as possible.

"As I have said before, I have found that the two parties are serious and are really interested in finding a solution, and I think it is only normal they are consulting with their governments and that tomorrow we are going to meet again at 10:30," said Perez de Cuellar.

Aziz and Velayati did not shake hands after entering the conference room and taking their seat to begin the session, and there were no smiles as they looked at each other across the room.

The atmosphere at the opening meeting, however, was "businesslike," U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani told reporters.

Aziz and Velayati had separate meetings with the U.N. chief executive Thursday morning before the first direct plenary session in the afternoon.

Aziz told reporters beforehand that Iraq would negotiate "in good faith" and the outcome of the negotiations depended on Iran also showing "good faith and seriousness."

Velayati, for his part, said Iran wanted "a just settlement" and similarly said success or failure depended on Baghdad.

Perez de Cuellar, in opening the direct talks, said he welcomed the two countries' acceptance of the Aug. 20 cease-fire and his invitation to meet in Geneva. He said he hoped the negotiations would be "constructive."

The U.N. team spoke in English, the Iranians in Farsi and the Iraqis in Arabic, Giuliani said.

Skull latest piece in body puzzle

PORTAGE, Ind. (UPI) — A skull found earlier this month has been identified as part of the remains of an Illinois woman whose torso was found in a garbage bag nearly three years ago.

Porter County Coroner John Evans said the skull, found by two men Aug. 7, was that of Dorothy Tapper, a 31-year-old Oak Park, Ill., elementary school teacher who disappeared in August 1985.

Tapper's torso was found near the intersection of Interstate 94 and U.S. 20 later that month. Investigators believe Tapper's killer, or killers, dismembered the woman's body and tossed out parts along raised sections of the interstate highway.

Two men fishing in the Little Calumet River in Porter found the skull.

Federal health officials offer plan for suicide prevention

ATLANTA (UPI) — Federal health officials said Thursday that communities should take steps to head off "suicide clusters," especially among teenagers and young adults, two groups that seem to be at high risk from violent death.

"Recent suicide clusters among teenagers and young adults have received national attention, and public concern about the issue is growing," a report prepared by the national Centers for Disease Control said.

"Unfortunately, our understanding of the causes and means of preventing suicide clusters is far from complete. A suicide cluster may be defined as a group of suicides or suicide attempts, or both, that occur closer together in time and space than would normally be expected in a given community."

The CDC report said a statistical analysis of national mortality data indicates clusters of completed suicides occur predominantly among adolescents and young adults, and that such clusters account for between 1 and 5 percent of all suicides in this age group.

"Suicide clusters are thought by many to occur through a process of 'contagion,' but this hypothesis has not yet been formally tested," the report said. "Nevertheless, a great deal of anecdotal evidence suggests that, in any given suicide cluster, suicides occurring later in the cluster often appear to have been influenced by suicides occurring earlier in the cluster."

"Ecologic evidence also suggests that exposure of the general population to suicide through television may increase the risk of suicide for certain susceptible individuals, although the effect has not been found in all studies."

The CDC said it has assisted several states and local health departments in investigating and responding to apparent clusters of suicide and suicide attempts.

"These clusters created a crisis atmosphere in the communities in which they occurred and engendered intense concern on the part of parents, students, school officials and others," the report said. "In the midst of these clusters of suicides or suicide attempts, community leaders were faced with the simultaneous tasks of trying to prevent the cluster from expanding and trying to manage the crisis that already existed."

"Potential opportunities for prevention were often missed during the early stages of responses as community leaders searched for information on how best to respond to suicide clusters."

Parents want AIDS education

Poll shows most favor classroom teaching of facts

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ninety percent of the general public and 94 percent of public school parents believe AIDS education has a place in the classroom, but a quarter of those surveyed said a child with the deadly virus should be banned from school, a Gallup Poll showed Thursday.

Eighty-one percent of the public school parents surveyed also endorse "safe sex" instruction on preventing acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"Presumably, most respondents understood this to be teaching the use of condoms," stated the report entitled "The 20th Annual Gallup Poll of the Public's Attitudes Toward the Public Schools."

While 57 percent of the respondents would allow children with AIDS to attend local public schools, 24 percent said they would be opposed and 19 percent were undecided, according to the findings, published in the September edition of "Phi Delta Kappan," an education journal.

"Forty percent of the national sample would start (AIDS education) when children are between 5 and 9 years of age; another 40 percent would begin at age 10 to 12; only 11 percent would wait until children are 13 or older," the report stated.

Other major findings: ■ Drug use, for the third consecutive year, was identified by 32 percent of respondents as the most important problem facing local public schools in 1988. Lack of discipline, identified by 19 percent of those surveyed, came in second; lack of proper public financial support, 12 percent; difficulty getting good teachers, 11 percent; poor curriculum/poor standards, 11 percent.

■ 50 percent approve of and 45 percent oppose spanking and similar forms of physical punishment permitted in the lower grades of some schools for children who do not respond well to other forms of discipline.

■ 40 percent approve of and 53 percent do not approve of year-round school, a proposal to deal with classroom shortages in some sections of the country as children of baby-boomers swell school rolls.

■ 86 percent favor periodic statewide competency tests for experienced teachers; 86 percent favor establishing national standards for certification of public school teachers.

■ 64 percent are willing to pay more taxes to help raise standards of education.

■ 73 percent favor a national exam for high school graduation; 81 percent favor national tests of other types so student achievement statistics can be compared.

■ 9 percent gave local public schools an A; 31 percent, B; 34 percent, C; 10 percent, D; 4 percent flunked them. The report said ratings have fluctuated little over the past four years. "The all-time low was in 1983, when C, D, and F ratings overwhelmed A and B ratings."

■ 70 percent favor and 23 percent oppose school programs providing before- and after-school care for latch-key kids.

WHO IS JESUS? SAYS WHO?

"Who was Jesus?" is a question that is being raised with greater frequency the past few weeks. Everywhere you go, someone is talking about Jesus. Every time the television is switched on or a newspaper is opened, Christ is in the lead story.

What is the source of the sudden increase in dialogue about Jesus? A movie called "The Last Temptation of Christ," while causing a groundswell of protest, is generating an enormous amount of interest in the question, who is Jesus. How many times have you heard this lately?

"Do you know who people are saying Jesus was?"

"Yes, some say he was a teacher, some say he was a good preacher, some say he was just somebody who knew a lot about God, some are even saying he was a sinner."

"Well, what do you say?"

"I say he was the son of God, the Christ, the Messiah."

Does that sound familiar? Maybe you heard this conversation in the line at Woody Hall. Maybe it was being discussed by a couple at the train station and you overheard. Or, maybe you just recalled reading it somewhere.

Matthew's Gospel (16:13-16) reads:

Jesus went to the territory near the town of Caesarea Philippi, where he asked his disciples, "Who do people say (I am) the Son of Man is?"

Networks offer money to parents of rape victim

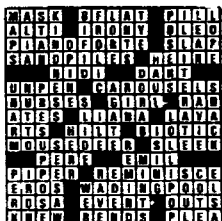

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Television networks have reportedly been offering money and free vacations to the couple whose yearlong stakeout resulted in the arrest of a man suspected of raping more than 60 women.

Robert Biddings, the alleged "Handcuff Rapist," was arrested last week, after the parents of one of victim spent more than a year staking out a bus stop where their daughter was assaulted.

Assistant Prosecutor Edward Morgan said he was asked by an unidentified television network to relay to the parents an offer of $1,000 and a free vacation in return for a television appearance.

Another investigator told The Columbus Dispatch he was offered cash in exchange for his story, while other detectives, the newspaper said, have been asked to pass on messages to the parents offering free travel and hotel accommodations for appearing in television studios in New York and Washington.

Bernstein is a hit on 70th birthday

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — Luminaries from the worlds of music and theater celebrated composer Leonard Bernstein's 70th birthday Thursday, launching a four-day gala tribute to the American musical legend.

Celebrities ranging from actress Lauren Bacall to popular composer Quincy Jones and humorist Victor Borge were on the guest list at the Tanglewood Music Center for a remarkable black-tie display of affection for Bernstein.

It was at Tanglewood nearly a half-century ago that Bernstein, then a 22-year-old student, caught the eye of the world's symphony elite.

"Why shouldn't I serve (my birthday) here?" Bernstein asked. "I feel that I built the bloody place. I was here before there was a Tanglewood."

The gala concludes Sunday afternoon.

The $50 man surfaces

DETROIT (UPI) — The identity of the mystery man in the white tuxedo with the plentiful supply of $50 bills has been solved by the man himself.

Deano Day, a disc jockey at radio station CKLW in neighboring Windsor, Ontario, Day told a news conference in revealed Thursday that he's the party who's been handing out the cash around Detroit the past few days.

It was all part of a publicity stunt for the radio station, which will change its call letters to CKMR on Monday, Day told a news conference in downtown Detroit.

Bentsen catcalled at VFW convention

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Democratic vice presidential nominee Lloyd Bentsen attacked Wednesday what he called Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle's flip-flopping on the issue of giving the Veterans Administration Cabinet status.

Speaking to about 1,500 lawmakers and staff at the Southern Legislative Conference, the Texas senator said Quayle, the Republican vice presidential candidate, was one of only 11 senators who voted against the VA legislation.

"When he stood up before the VFW. (Veterans of Foreign Wars), he had a deathbed of conversion," Bentsen said. "He saluted smartly, did an about-face and announced that he actually favored the Cabinet post. He said his vote against the proposal was a 'youthful indiscretion.'"

"A youthful indiscretion?" Bentsen continued. "My friends, that vote occurred only five weeks ago, on July 8, 1988. I don't think America can risk youthful indiscretion in someone who could become our president at any moment."

At a news conference following the 20-minute address, Bentsen was asked whether the Democrats had decided to increase their attacks against the GOP vice presidential nominee.

"We're just getting started," Bentsen said.

Bentsen, 67, said he would not attack Quayle, 41, as too young for the office, but would question his experience for the job.

"I certainly don't think he's too young, but you have to have some maturity regardless of what age you might be," Bentsen said.

Bentsen said Quayle's conversion on the VA issue appeared to be aimed at the presidential campaign.

"It sounds like he got taken to the woodshed," Bentsen said.

Bentsen continued to maintain he would not attack Quayle on charges the Indiana senator used his influential family to obtain a slot in the National Guard during the Vietnam War.

"I'm not stepping up criticism of his personal life. I'm very careful about that," Bentsen said. "But that doesn't mean all of a sudden we forego talking about the issues. That's what this campaign is all about — the question of his qualifications."

Asked whether he believed Quayle would still be on the ticket by the November election, Bentsen quipped, "I hope so."

Dukakis hammers Republican policy in anti-drug war

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis, hammering the Reagan administration's record on drug enforcement, said Thursday, "Zero tolerance for drugs begins in the Oval Office."

Dukakis, on the second day of a campaign swing through the Midwest, hit hard on the drug theme, saying in a speech at the Cuyahoga County Courthouse that after 7 1/2 years of tough talk, "The American people want answers."

Referring to his Republican opponent, Vice President George Bush, the Massachusetts governor said, "Why are we cutting federal aid to state and local drug enforcement by two-thirds when Mr. Bush wants to spend tens of billions of dollars over the next eight years on 'Star Wars'?"

"Why did the president veto legislation just one month ago that would have made the Pentagon the lead agency in gathering intelligence on drug traffickers and that would have increased the National Guard's role in drug interdiction?" he said.

Dukakis took a shot at the administration's anti-drug programs and noted its past alliance with Panama's leader, Gen. Manuel Noriega: "For years, while General Noriega ... was actively involved in the drug business, we were actively in business with General Noriega. That, my friends, is criminal."

"How can we ask our kids to say no to drugs here at home when we have an administration that's in bed with (General Noriega)?" he said. "My friends, zero tolerance for drugs begins in the Oval Office."

In Los Angeles, where President Reagan was vacationing, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said in response, "Dukakis talks, we deliver."

Bush hot in Texas

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — In sweltering heat, Republican George Bush launched the battle for his critically claimed home of Texas Thursday, stridently painting Democrat Michael Dukakis as too liberal and pushing favorite Lone Star State themes of gun ownership and breaks for the oil industry.

The vice president, beginning several days of day trips to different corners of Texas, rode to a rally in historic San Antonio on a river barge and told several hundred enthusiastic supporters that he would better protect their interests.

Bush, a former Texas oilman who claims Houston as one home town, stressed his support for more federal tax breaks for the oil industry — a position that is not as popular in other areas of the nation as in Texas.

"I want to put some incentives back into our energy business, into the oil business, that will encourage drilling, encourage oil rigs running and encourage us to be less dependent on foreign oil," Bush said.

Many oil industry tax breaks were curtailed in the 1986 tax reform bill and Bush, who has taken issue with parts of that legislation, stressed again Thursday that he wants to reduce the capital gains tax rate to encourage more investments.

Quayle: Solo campaign turning for the better

BOONVILLE, Mo. (UPI) — Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana, ignoring protesters shouting "Quayle's a chicken," said Thursday he has turned the corner in his GOP vice presidential campaign away from the controversy of his 1969 enlistment in the National Guard.

On the second day of his first solo campaign voyage since becoming the Republican nominee for vice president, Quayle concentrated on spreading his message of "family, freedom and the future" and indicated he does not plan any further response to questions of how or why he joined the Indiana National Guard during the Vietnam War.

Quayle came to Boonville, a community of 6,900 people, to stop in a local dining spot and his Thursday schedule called for visits later to the Missouri State Fair in Sedalia and the Sioux Empire Fair in Sioux Falls, S.D.

As he shook hands with well-wishers at the Columbia, Mo., regional airport, the senator, 41, told reporters, "A lot of things turned around in St. Louis."

Wednesday night, in a St. Louis address to a National Guard organization, Quayle stoutly defended his military record.

Groups demand ruling party of Burma forfeit its powers

RANGOON, Burma (UPI) — Hundreds of thousands of jubilant demonstrators Thursday celebrated hard-fought government concessions, but demanded more, calling for immediate dissolution of the ruling party, witnesses and diplomats said.

The party, which has ruled Burma with an iron grip since 1962, was increasingly under siege as thousands of civil servants, employees of state enterprises and sailors joined an estimated 500,000 demonstrators streaming through the streets of the capital.

"We want democracy now," the demonstrators chanted. Diplomats said there were reports of similar scenes in many other Burmese cities.

THE GOVERNMENT released one of its leading critics, retired Brig. Gen. Aung Gyi, and nine associates imprisoned since July 29, including Seiz Win, a reporter for the U.S. news agency The Associated Press, official Rangoon Radio said.

It said another 1,683 political prisoners, including 27 monks, were released.

"The Ministry of Home and Religious Affairs has instructed all police commanders ... to release all the people detained in the current disturbances with the exception of those who committed major crimes under the criminal procedure code," the radio said.

A strike by dockyard workers was causing a backlog of ships in Burmese ports, the radio said. It also reported violence and looting in Dala near Syriam on the bank of the Rangoon River opposite the capital.

DEMONSTRATORS TAKING taking part in massive protests Thursday were celebrating President Maung Maung's pledge Wednesday that a party meeting Sept. 12 would approve a national referendum to decide whether to transform the one-party state into a multi-party democracy.

Maung Maung, a civilian installed in office Aug. 19, promised that if the people chose a multi-party system, elections would be held and none of the leaders of the ruling party would run for office.

But one diplomat said Thursday, "The party is now irrelevant, Maung Maung is irrelevant. The ones who still have a say are the demonstrators and the army."

Protesters said they were not satisfied with the government concessions. They demanded the immediate dissolution of the ruling Burma Socialist Program Party, or BSP, and a return to democracy.

"WE WANT democracy, not BSP meeting," said one placard carried by the crowds.

A procession of hundreds of buses loaded with singing and chanting demonstrators wound through the city in the morning with security forces in sight. In the afternoon some troops moved back into the city, but did not confront or attempt to control the crowds.

"The military has come back to the downtown area — ostensibly to guard the bank and other government buildings," one diplomat said. Within hours of his release, Aung Gyi addressed a mammoth crowd estimated at 300,000 to praise the students, monks and people who fought for democracy, stressing discipline was needed to continue the struggle.

AUNG GYI called on the armed forces to uphold their pledge to safeguard the people.

"Even to think of doing something harmful to the people will amount to violation of this pledge," he said to wild applause.

Demonstration organizers said they planned a larger rally Friday near the Schwedagon Pagoda, the most revered Buddhist temple.

Aung San Suu Kyi, the 40-year-old daughter of Burma's assassinated national hero Gen. Aung San, is scheduled to be the principal speaker.

"SHE IS is being touted as Burma's Cory Aquino," a diplomat said. Philippine President Corazon Aquino — widow of an assassinated opposition leader — led a popular uprising that overthrew dictator Ferdinand Marcos in 1986. Aung Gyi was seen as another possible leader.

Afghan guerrillas capture city near the Soviet border

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — U.S.-backed guerrillas have captured a provincial capital in northeastern Afghanistan near the Soviet border but lost control of the nearby town of Kunduz, a Western diplomat said Thursday.

He said the rebels seized Taloqan, capital of northeastern Takhar Province, more than two weeks ago, about the same time as the fall of Kunduz, just 40 miles away.

The diplomat, quoting Afghan sources, confirmed reports Afghan troops had recaptured the capital of Kunduz Province, but said, "Apparently no attempt has been made to retake Taloqan."

Taloqan would be the fourth provincial capital to fall to the guerrillas, who are backed by the United States, China and Iran, since the Soviet Union on May 15 began a scheduled nine-month withdrawal of its 100,300 troops from Afghanistan.

The diplomat said Thursday the reason the resistance has been able to hold Taloqan may be that in order for troops to reach the town in force they must first pass through Kunduz and Khanabad, which also were captured by the resistance earlier this month.

Rebels seized Kunduz on Aug. 11 following an assault launched to capitalize on the departure of the Soviet garrison from the town, located 40 miles from the Soviet border. Moscow says its forces also have vacated Taloqan and surrounding Takhar Province.

Fake Israeli agents kill man

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Six men posing as Israeli security agents beat to death a 34-year-old former police employee in the occupied West Bank Thursday in what authorities said appeared to be a revenge killing as part of a family feud.

But Palestinian sources, noting the man had a registered gun in his possession, indicated he may have been killed by residents who suspected him of working for Israeli authorities. Palestinians generally are not allowed to have weapons, but some who work for Israel are issued guns for their own protection.

The slaying came on the second day of a two-day general strike, which was called by the underground leadership of the 8-month-old Palestinian uprising to show solidarity with Arabs imprisoned for anti-Israel activity.

Arab merchants in East Jerusalem and the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip kept their stores closed in observance of the strike. Isolated disturbances were reported in the occupied territories.

Six men who identified themselves as agents of Israel's Shin Bet secret service dragged Said Haziza, 34, from his home about 1:30 a.m. Thursday and beat him to death with wooden clubs and iron bars, police said.

Haziza's body was found in a field near his home in Hebron, 20 miles south of Jerusalem, about 3 a.m., police said.

Authorities said Haziza was a former police employee, but they said he was not a police officer and refused to say specifically in what capacity he was employed by the police. They said his gun, which was taken by the attackers, was issued to him because of his work.

When asked if Haziza had informed on other Palestinians, police would neither confirm nor deny it, saying only that since the start of the uprising, Palestinians had claimed nearly every Arab murder victim was an Israeli collaborator.

Haziza had been knifed in the Hebron marketplace a month ago and was released only three days before he was slain.

Man burns up on toilet seat

JERUSALEM (UPI) — An Israeli woman's all-out war on a cockroach launched a series of mishaps that put her unsuspecting husband in the hospital with burns, two broken ribs and a cracked pelvis.

The incident, reported Thursday by the Jerusalem Post, occurred last week when a woman from the Tel Aviv area, whose name was withheld, found a cockroach in her living room.

She stomped the bug and tossed it into the toilet. When the critter refused to die, she sprayed an entire can of insecticide into the toilet bowl to finish it off.

Her unsuspecting husband came home from work moments later, perched on the toilet seat and lit up a cigarette. When he finished smoking, he tossed the butt into the toilet.

Simon, Botha trade views on apartheid

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., and Foreign Minister Roelof "Pik" Botha traded opposing views on anti-apartheid sanctions at a private meeting Thursday they described afterward as frank and useful.

Simon flew to Cape Town after the two-hour discussion at a private Johannesburg estate for scheduled meetings at parliament with government and opposition lawmakers.

"We had a good, frank discussion. We understand each other and we hope that some progress can be made," Simon told reporters as he exchanged farewells with Botha after their first face-to-face meeting.

Simon, chairman of the Africa affairs subcommittee of the Senate foreign relations committee, said: "You name the controversial agenda and that is what we discussed."

Botha said he echoed Simon's comment.

National forests still ablaze

Smoke cloud over Wyoming, other neighboring states

By United Press International

Yellowstone Park, ablaze with raging wildfires, is pumping out smoke like a giant wood-burning stove, shrouding nearly the entire state of Wyoming and part of Colorado in haze spreading to much of America's heartland Thursday.

People in surrounding states and even farther east are seeing the thick smoke pouring from seven major fires burning over 385,000 acres of the 2.2-million acre national park, the nation's oldest, and neighboring forests.

Among the blazes was the threatening 104,000-acre North Fork Fire, which burned to within 1 mile of Yellowstone's largest village complex near the center of the park and forced 700 people to pack up and leave.

"They're easily seeing the smoke in Nebraska and southwest South Dakota," a National Weather Service spokesman in Cheyenne, Wyo., 360 miles from Yellowstone, said.

Almost the whole state of Wyoming and northeast Colorado were covered by smoke from the burning forests and the pall could be seen even farther east, although not as thick, the official said.

Across the Plains, residents were treated to spectacular sunrises and sunsets when the sun, looking like a huge hot pink or red ball, faintly shone through the dense veil of smoke on the horizon.

A health alert was issued in Natrona County, Wyo., more than 200 miles to the southeast of Yellowstone, which borders Wyoming, Montana and Idaho.

Nelson Frissell, county health director, said the smoke from the fires were comparable to emissions from "a giant wood-burning stove." He urged people with ear, nose, throat, eye and lung ailments to get advice from their doctors on what precautions to take.

The Yellowstone fires were being battled by 4,000 firefighters, including 1,200 regular Army troops and chainsaw-armed crews cutting and digging out firelines to protect threatened Canyon Village.

Gov. Neil Goldschmidt declared a state of emergency in southwest Oregon Wednesday night after hot weather and strong winds sent flames blasting across the lines on four major forest fires. The largest was 1,000 acres.

Toys can be hazardous to a child's health

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — About 130,000 children each year are injured by toys that cut, puncture, burn, shock, or choke them, according to a Purdue University extension human development specialist.

Many parents assume that all toys on the market have been checked for safety and approved, but that is not necessarily true, said specialist Judy Myers-Walls.

With Sept. 4-10 declared Baby Safety Week by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, more attention is being focused on how to prevent accidents and injuries involving children, she said.

Myers-Walls noted that the huge number of toys on the market allows the CPSC to make only random checks on toys.

"Therefore, some unsafe toys can be on the market," she said, adding that imported and homemade toys do not have checks for safety.

It is the parents' responsibility to screen toys for safety and notify the CPSC, she said.

The division's Midwestern Regional Office is 230 S. Dearborn St., Room 2945, Chicago, Ill., 60604. The telephone numbers are: (312) 353-8260 or toll free at (800) 638-CPSC, which is (800) 638-2772.

Baby safety tips offered by Purdue expert

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Accidents are the leading cause of death of children under age 15, but most such accidents are preventable, says a Purdue University expert.

"Accidents, or preventable injuries, are the leading killer of children, taking 8,000 lives each year and disabling 50,000 more," said Judy Myers-Walls, Purdue extension human development specialist.

The U.S. Consumer Product

Safety Commission has declared Sept. 4-10 as Baby Safety Week, she said.

Myers-Walls cited five leading risk areas: motor vehicle accidents, fires and burns, drownings, falls, and chokings and poisonings.

Prevention is the key to reducing accidents, she said.

"That often involves childproofing the home," said Myers-Walls. Childproofing means that the environment is arranged to make it difficult or unlikely that a child will get into unsafe situations.

Put up a fence to keep children out of the street, and find a place for them to ride bicycles and kiddie cars away from traffic.

To prevent drownings, never leave water in a wading pool or bathtub while no adult is present. Surround large pools with double barriers. Teach water safety, but never leave a young child unsupervised around water. Always use approved flotation devices or life preservers when boating.

Court-martial begins in Navy recruit death

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — A Navy admiral had "serious questions" whether a lieutenant accused of negligence in the death of a trainee was derelict in his duties, but still recommended him for court-martial, testimony revealed Thursday.

The reservations of Rear Adm. David Morris were discussed during the opening day of the court-martial of Lt. Thomas A. Torchia of Princeton, Ill.

The former officer in charge of the Rescue Swimmer School at Pensacola Naval Air Station is accused of dereliction of duty in the March 2 death of recruit Lee Mirecki, 19, of Appleton, Wis.

Four petty officers received non-judicial punishment. A fifth instructor is scheduled to be tried Monday.

Mirecki, a recruit with a diagnosed phobia of water, had a panic-induced heart attack and drowned during a swimming class.

At a June hearing, a Navy pathologist called the death a homicide said Mirecki was "scared to death."

Groups want more stress on science

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Groups representing about 750,000 scientists and engineers Thursday called on presidential candidates to rejuvenate White House attitudes towards science by strengthening the role of the presidential science adviser.

In letters sent to Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis and the Republican nominee, Vice President George Bush, the groups indicated they feel the position of science adviser has been allowed to deteriorate in recent administrations, weakening to the point where it was left vacant for long periods of time.

"Our nation's hopes for a more secure, healthy humane and prosperous society rest on continued advances in science and its applications. Leadership in science and technology must come from the White House," wrote the groups, which included the American Association of Engineering Societies and Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

At a news conference,

Science and technology leadership needs to come from the White House.

leaders of some of the scientific groups called for a return to the "halcyon years" of the Eisenhower and Kennedy administrations, in which the Presidential Science Advisory Committee played a vital role in key decisions. The advisory panel was dismantled in 1973 by President Nixon, who was upset by its opposition to the Supersonic Transport plane.

"The 'vaccination' in the Eisenhower, Kennedy era somehow didn't take and there has been a gradual dilution (of science's importance) in following years," said Val Fitch, a Nobel laureate and president of the American Physical Society.

Fitch added there has been an aversion to science that amounts to "almost an anti-intellectual attitude" in the Reagan administration.

Gene placed in tree

DAVIS, Calif. (UPI) — Scientists Thursday reported that for the first time they have transferred a foreign gene into a walnut tree, a genetic engineering feat that lays the groundwork for protecting trees from insects and disease.

The achievement holds major implications for California growers, who produce nearly all of the nation's $300 million-a-year walnut crop.

The technique eventually may lessen or even eliminate the need for risk-laden insecticides and pesticides, Abhaya Dandekar, assistant professor of pomology at the University of California, Davis, said in an interview.

"Our findings are exciting because they indicate this genetic engineering technique can be used to improve the performance of the walnut tree — for example, eliminating the walnut tendency to go rancid — and even to protect the crop from damage caused by insect pests and disease," he said.

"By speeding up the breeding process, asexual gene transfer techniques like this offer a special advantage for breeding crops like the walnut that take a long time to mature to the stage of flowering and fruiting."

Because of the long maturation period of the walnut tree, field studies of the technique — already being tested as a pest control on faster growing crops such as tomatoes and tobacco plants — may take five years to 10 years, Dandekar said.

Numerous genes in tomatoes and tobacco plants have been identified as serving a variety of beneficial functions, he said.

"But we could never use that information in trees before because we could not cross those plants with trees," said Dandekar, who collaborated on the project with Gale McGranahan, a Department of Agriculture horticulturist.

Former Salukis in Olympics

Three former SIU-C athletes — diver Wendy Lucero, shot put and discus thrower Connie Price and cyclist Sally Zack — are headed for the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea.

Lucero finished second with 1,030.98 points in the 3-meter springboard finals in Indianapolis.

Lucero captured first-place in the one-meter national championship at the NCAA Women's Swimming and Diving Championship in 1985.

"I never had a dream that I would win a national title when I came to SIU," Lucero, a native of Aurora, Colo., said.

Lucero, a 1986 SIU-C graduate, was coached by Dennis Golden, a former All-American diver for California State at Los Angeles. Golden, a former Saluki diving coach, believes in psychological conditioning and uses principles such as mental visualization in his coaching and teaching.

Her present coach is Doug Ingram.

Connie Price, a former basketball stand-out at SIU-C, will be competing in discus and shot put.

The 6-foot-3, 208-pound center from St. Charles, Mo. was a four-year starter for Cindy Scott. She still holds five school records, including one for best field goal percentage for a single season (.650) and No. 5 all-time scorer (1,271 pts.) and rebounder (744).

Don DeNoon, SIU-C's women's track and field coach, persuaded Price to give the sport a try when her basketball eligibility was up.

"You could see Connie's potential immediately," he said.

Price ranks No. 3 with a toss of 212 feet, 8 inches.

Zack, of Concord, N.H., started her athletic career as a walk-on for the gymnastics team and struggled through two years of practice, performing in only one meet on the balance beam.

Zack switched to cross country and track during her junior year and between trips to the training room to treat chronic foot problems managed to win Most Valuable Player honors. She is fifth among SIU-C's top five in the 3,000 (17:43.7) and the 10,000 meter run (38:55.92).

Zack, who took second with 38 points in the U.S. Olympic Trials in Spokane, Wash., will compete for the gold Sept. 26 in the all-or-nothing 50-mile road race.

Increase attendance at Saluki sporting events.

Consider having the Saluki football program change classification from Division I-AA to Division II. "I don't think we can compete at that (Division I-AA) level," Hart said.

Hart admitted that he would continue to serve as an analyst with WGN-radio for Chicago Bears football broadcasts, even though he would be unable to attend two SIU-C football games this season because of that duty.

Indiana State coach wants squad to continue improvement in skills

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

Indiana State is poised to move into the Gateway Conference's first division. Last season's 5-6 record, a marked improvement over the 3-8 mark in 1986, has the folks in Terre Haute thinking about continued achievements.

Where this team is and where it could be hinges on the performance of the Sycamore's offensive line, which must be rebuilt for the upcoming season.

Aside from the offensive line, though, the team appears ready to make its move.

Ninth-year coach Dennis Raetz said consistency will be a big key. "We have to get the intensity and improved play from day one of drills in August to the end of the season," he said.

Back at quarterback is junior John Sahn, who came back from knee surgery and won the starting job away from senior Kyle Fröndorf. In what turned out to be a sensational season, Sahn quickly earned the attention of opposing defenders.

Sahn's numbers last season made him the most efficient passer in the conference. His rating of 129.7 ranked him 14th in all of Division I-AA.

As a sophomore, Sahn played nine games and completed 46.3 percent of his passes. He was intercepted only five times, which was three fewer than any of the I-AA leaders.

The tackles are junior Mark Bertram and senior Paul Wafzig. Junior Walter Crutchfield is at safety and junior Lavent Blaylock is at one corner.

Hartzog added the daily duties of AD to his busy schedule as track and field coach.

Hartzog occupied the AD chair until 1985, when an uncontrollable scandal developed in the basketball program, a problem which was more than he could cope with and was not responsible for.

Hartzog resigned but is still coaching the men's golf team on a part-time basis.

Struck served as special assistant to the president in charge of athletics in the summer of 1985.

Jim Livengood established a school record for shortest term spent as AD at SIU-C.

He came here from Washington State, where he was serving as an assistant, and 22 months after his arrival he went back to Washington State to take over the AD position there.

His short stay, however, produced one memorable event in Saluki history; the men's and women's departments combined to be under one administrator.

Charlotte West, interim AD for 11 months, established a record for longest time spent as interim AD.

Her reign as interim AD brought a major change in the football program at SIU-C. She was responsible for the acquisition of Rick Rhoades as football coach.

ADMINISTRATION

Hart spells out program objectives

By Lisa Warns
Staff Writer

Jim Hart, who will have served nearly two months as SIU-C's athletics director on Aug. 31, is in good humor these days.

It's easy to guess why. Indications are that his fund-raising campaign, Jim Hart's First Fifty Club, is going well.

The goal of the promotion was to raise $50,000 for SIU-C intercollegiate athletics.

"I have a good feeling we will surpass our goal," Hart said Wednesday in an interview at his office at the Arena.

However, Hart refused to disclose the current amount of contributions until a Sept. 1 press conference.

Midway through the fund-raising, it was announced that $27,000 had been contributed.

The idea for the First Fifty Club emerged from talk tossed around the office during his first week, Hart said.

"There is always room for improvement (in fund-raising tactics)," Hart said, pointing out that not enough alumni have been reached and some don't even contribute.

The bottom line is to get money the University's athletics department can use, Hart said.

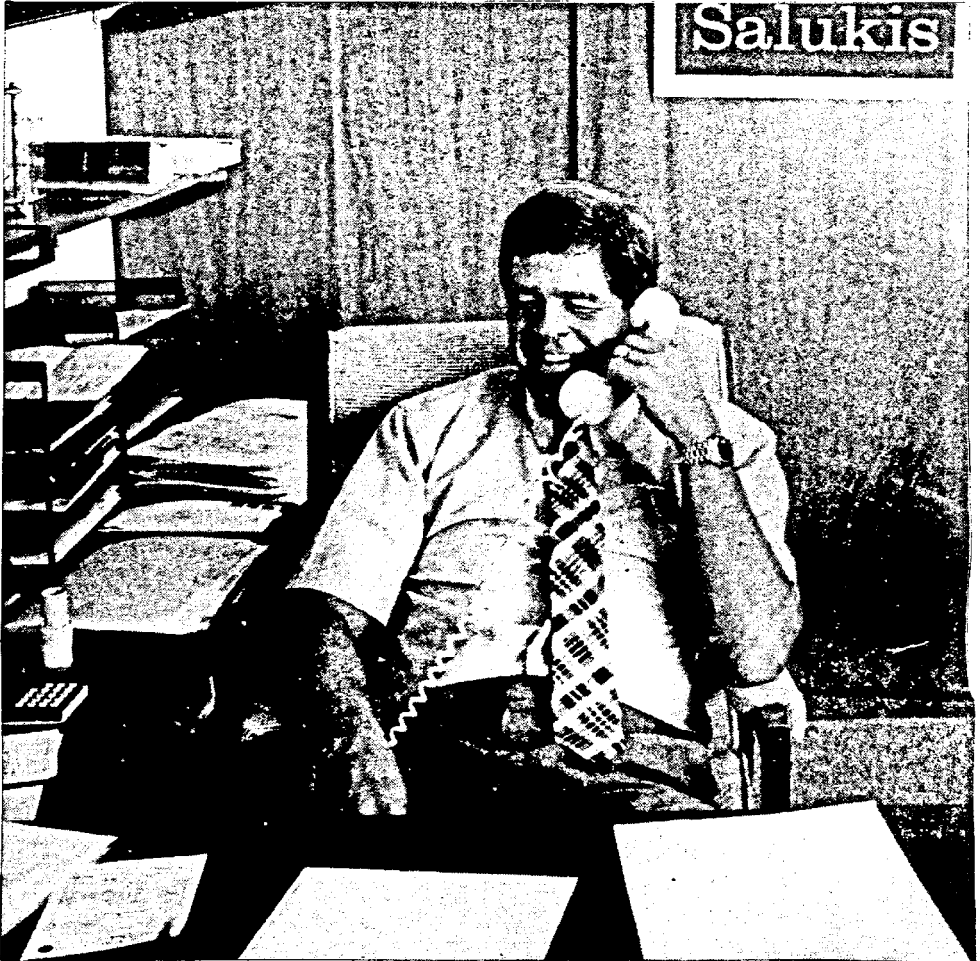

The University currently is searching regionally for an athletics development director to assist Hart in his fund-raising efforts.

Other items on Hart's agenda:

Greater harmony between men's and women's athletics.

Although men's and women's athletics are no longer separate departments, Hart wants all the offices in one building to develop a sense of teamwork.

Install working lights at McAndrew Stadium. Light standards are in place at the 50-year-old facility, but a night

Five others have directed athletics in decade

The 1980's have given SIU-C some of the most recognizable athletics directors in its history, but it also has resulted in a lack of consistent leadership for the program.

Jim Hart is the ninth athletics director in the department's 75-year history, but the sixth person to run SIU-Cathletics in this decade.

The six people are: AD Gale Sayers (1976-81), AD Lew Hartzog (1981-1985), AD Jim Livengood (1985-87), and interim AD's Dean Stuck, who served as special assistant to the president prior to Livengood's arrival, and Charlotte West.

Gale Sayers, one of the greatest and most-celebrated running backs in the history of the NFL, was undisputedly the most prominent figure ever to occupy the AD's chair at SIU-C.

Under Sayer's leadership, fund-raising reached an all-time high.

While serving as SIU-C's AD, Sayers was elected into the NFL's Hall of Fame, which attracted even more attention and money to the SIU-C program.

Like many before him, Sayers chose to move on due to major realignment in the university's system.

Sayers accomplished much more than most are willing to acknowledge.

After Sayers, came Lew Hartzog, one of the most successful coaches of any sport in SIU-C's history.
