Dow Jones average sets all-time high

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market roared to its highest level in history Thursday as the Dow Jones industrial average surged 56.53 points to 2734.64 and shattered the previous record set two years ago.

Takeover news and firm bond prices powered the late-afternoon rally that drove other market indicators to all-time highs in the heaviest trading since mid-June.

The Dow's stunning close eclipsed the previous all-time high of 2722.42 set Aug. 25, 1987, which marked the apex of five-year rally in stock prices.

Six weeks later, on Oct. 19, 1987, the Dow plummeted 508 points since that crash.

Most analysts do not expect a recurrence of that collapse, but many expressed doubts whether stock prices would be able to hold onto their latest gains over the next few sessions.

In recent weeks, the Dow surpassed its previous record close during several trading sessions but retreated before the closing bell. Analysts said setting the historic high became a psychological block, which the new market approached with caution before finally making it history.

"We saw a little nervousness heading into the new high, but there was no real giveback, and a push late in the day was all it took," said Trude Latimer, market analyst with Josephthal & Co.

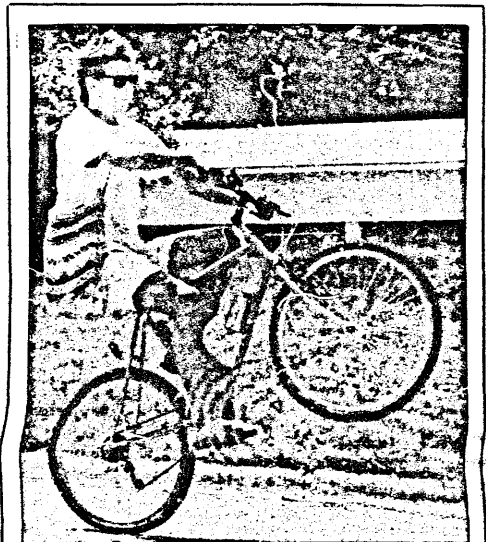

Broader market indicators, most of which made all-time highs earlier this summer, also set new records. The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 3.45 to 195.29 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index climbed 6.81 to 351.51. The price of an average share gained 68 cents.

Advances outpaced declines, 1,187 to 353, among the 1,969 issues traded. Volume swelled to 225,520 shares compared with 159,640,000 shares traded Wednesday.

Stock prices began to rise at the opening bell on news that Holiday Inns Corp. had agreed to sell its Holiday Inns chain to British brewery and hotel conglomerate Bass Pl.C. for $2.225 billion.

They also noted that stocks got an extra push from stronger bond prices, which helped the Dow rebound further from its 40.97-point drop Monday. The blue chip index rose 27.12 points.

Drug accessories spur legislation

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

Illinois merchants selling drug paraphernalia could get more than a slap on the wrist under a bill signed Tuesday by Gov. James R. Thompson.

The bill changes the sale of drug paraphernalia from a business offense to a Class IV felony, punishable by fines up to $250,000, prison and confiscation of profits.

"That is a real big jump," Jackson County State's Attorney Chuck Grace said.

Steve Kuncie, director of the Southern Illinois Enforcement Group, said that under the drug paraphernalia act, paraphernalia includes pipes, spoons, cocaine grinders, concealment cans and glass containers with bowls on top.

Kuncie added that although he hasn't dealt specifically with merchants selling paraphernalia in Southern Illinois, he is "sure the stuff is being sold."

The typical stores that sell drug paraphernalia are novelty or specialty stores and not large chains, he explained.

Kim Curlee, manager of Plaza Records, 825 S. Illinois, said he has stopped selling items that under the new bill would be considered drug paraphernalia.

Curlee said he previously sold items for tobacco use only, such as rolling papers, pipes and containers with bowls on top.

Curlee said he decision to stop selling the items was based on the working of the new bill. Pipes, rolling papers and or any other items that can be used for drugs other than tobacco could be considered drug paraphernalia under the wording of the new bill, Curlee said.

"Basically, until the bill is clarified, we just won't sell the items anymore," Curlee said. "We have to much at stake to battle the wording."

More residents to be served by City's sanitation service

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Carbondale's decision to extend its sanitary sewer service will incorporate about 2,000 people into the city, Steve Hoffner, city manager, said.

Although the residents of the Route 51 South area are part of the Carbondale Township, they are not officially affiliated with the city, Hoffner said.

The residents currently have septic tanks rather than a full sanitary sewer system, he said.

Hoffner said he had met periodically over the summer with the residents of the Route 51 South area to discuss the possibility of putting in the new sewer system and incorporating them into the city.

"Although some residents opposed the project, the majority of the residents supported it," Hoffner said.

The cost of the extended sewer system is $802,786. Funding for the project will come from a loan from the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

According to Larry Ziemba, regional coordinator for the IEPA, loaning money for wastewater and sewer facilities in Illinois is a new program.

"This new program will take the place of the EPA's grant program," Ziemba said. "Instead of giving away the money, we will loan out the money at low interest rates to cities wishing to improve its wastewater and sewer facilities."

Since this loan program is in its first year, Carbondale is the first city in Southern Illinois and one of the first in the state to receive such a loan, Ziemba said.

Hoffner said this was the first time Carbondale had ever applied to the IEPA for a loan.

One of the stipulations of the loan was that the city must award a contract before Sept. 30.

Hoffner said the City Council is expected to award a contract to the selected bidder at the next meeting on Aug. 29.

Work should begin on the extended sewer system before the Incorporation of the Black American Studies program and the Administration of Justice department into the University's College of Liberal Arts is John S. Jackson's primary goal this semester.

"We're hoping to get board approval to add these units," Jackson said.

The two academic units are currently under the jurisdiction of the College of Human Resources. Benjamin Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and research, has proposed the college be abolished and its academic units transferred to other SIU-C colleges.

The University's Board of Trustees will vote on the proposal

Director of aid wary of low default rate

By James J. Black
Staff Writer

The head of SIU-C's financial aid program said she doesn't take much stock in the fact that the University's student loan default rate is below the national average for four-year universities.

"The default rate being figured by institution is somewhat misleading in that the institution does not do any collection activities," Pam Britton, director of student work and financial aid, said. "Most institutions believe that calculation is not very valid."

SIU-C's default rate for fiscal 1987, the most recent data available, is 5.9 percent, according to a letter to the SIU-C administration from the U.S. Department of Education. An article in the Chronicle of Higher Education places the fiscal 1987 national average for four-year universities at 7 percent.

The default rate is the percentage of borrowers who fail to begin repayment of their loans upon expiration of a six-month grace period after the borrowers left college. Borrowers who defer or restructure loan repayment are not included in the default rate.

Despite her objections to the institutional default figures, Britton said SIU-C's low rate reflects positively on the University.

"I'm sure (SIU-C's low default rate) relates to employment opportunities for our graduates (and) the value of the education," she said.

Britton added that no studies have been conducted into why SIU-C's repayment history is better than average.

The figures in both the letter from the Department of Education and the Chronicle of Higher Education article are for students who left an institution between October 1986 and September 1987 and who had not begun repaying their loans by October 1988.

Britton said it would be difficult to compare the figures for fiscal 1987 to other years, since the methods of gathering data and the types of students eligible for loans have changed over the years. The data refer to Stafford Student Loans (formerly MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) - A hard-line Tehran newspaper Thursday approved Iranian spiritual leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei's call on parliament to back President Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani's new Cabinet, advising the legislators to place the interests of the nation before factional infighting. Rafsanjani has pledged to boost the nation's war-shattered economy, improve Iran's ties with the outside world, and prevent a further outbreak of fighting with Iraq.

Opponents of Marion mall call survey results bogus

MARION (UPI) — Survey results released Thursday showing 90 percent support by residents of the city of Marion for the construction of a regional Southern Illinois shopping mall are being challenged by opponents of the mall.

The survey has stirred up the simmering issue of using public money to help finance private projects.

The proposed method of financing the 768,000-square-foot mall — using the tax increment financing statute, or TIF — is the subject of a suit brought in January in Williamson County Circuit Court. The suit seeks to prohibit the city of Marion from using the statute to provide financial subsidies to the mall developers.

The suit contends the proposed mall, to be built on a 260-acre site currently being used as a farm near the intersection of Interstate 57 and Illinois Route 15, does not qualify for a TIF.

Jim Vogler, an attorney representing the three plaintiffs — Castel Properties, Castle Loan

Corp. and a private citizen, Ron Emery — said the TIF statute is aimed at giving tax incentives to developers to develop blighted property that would not be developed without incentives.

Vogler, with the Chicago firm of Winston and Strawn, contends the mall will cost taxpayers more than $46 million over the next 23 years.

Key findings in the survey, completed by Richard Day Research Inc. of Evanston were:

- 91 percent of Marion residents support the mall.

- six of seven people surveyed supported the use of tax increment financing to help pay for the mall.

- 86 percent think the mall will be built.

"We would like to see the survey given to a third party and let them look at it and see if it's fair and scientific, or is a PR release disguised as a survey," Emery, a Marion resident, said. Emery said he was one of the 300 people surveyed and called the survey's approach "slanted and totally misleading."

The survey of 300 Marion residents was conducted by telephone between July 14 and July 22. The poll has a margin of error of plus or minus 6 percent.

The $165 million development is a joint venture of The Edward J. DeBartolo Corp. of Youngstown, Ohio and Antonia Investments, Ltd. of St. Louis. Developers contend the mall will create 1,000 employment jobs during construction and 2,300 permanent jobs when the mall is open late in 1991.

Richard Day, of Richard Day Research Inc., defended his survey.

"It's very well done and objective, but you're asking can it be used to promote one side of the case — yes it can," Day said. "A serious scientific effort can be used for PR purposes."

Day, who said he holds a doctorate in political science from the University of Illinois, said he was willing to submit the survey to a third party, but he said he doubted if the developers who commissioned him to do the survey would want that.

Comedy Cellar comes back with improved programming

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

Ladies and gentlemen, let's give a warm welcome to the Student Center's new and improved Comedy Cellar.

Remy Billups, special programs coordinator for the Student Center, said the Comedy Cellar will return at 9 p.m. Friday in the Big Muddy Room of the Student Center as part of the Carnival of Crazeiness before settling into its normal Wednesday night schedule.

The first stand-up comedian appearing for the Comedy Cellar will be Ed Fiala. Fiala was selected as the first performer because of his numerous television appearances and because of the humorous sound effects he uses in his act, Billups said.

In addition to Fiala's act, the band Tin Pan Alley will perform in the Big Muddy Room at 7:30 p.m. and WTOA radio will be there throughout the evening, giving away Chicken Man t-shirts.

Although this is only the Comedy Cellar's second year, Billups said it has been successful so far and expects it to be even more popular this year.

Admission is $1 for all performances. The Student Center programming budget used to pick up the tab for the acts, but the cost increase will help improve the quality of the Comedy Cellar, Billups said. "We decided to go up a level on the type of entertainment we could book," he said.

David Romanelli, an SIU-C student, will continue to emcee the show as well as provide a brief warm-up for the main act. Billups said he expects that pizza and pop will continue to be available in the Big Muddy Room on Wednesday nights, but the decision hasn't been finalized yet.

Improvements on the show will include free bowls of peanuts on the tables of the Big Muddy Room, WTOA radio live remotes from the show, possible outdoor shows and plans to book a big-name comedy act once or twice each semester.

"The Comedy Cellar is still in its infancy, but it's been successful in the past and I expect we'll fill the room every night," Billups said.

COBA to sponsor picnic, fun for students, faculty members

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

The College of Business Administration will have a picnic Saturday near the SIU-C boat docks on the campus lake for faculty, staff and students in the college.

Deanna Hudgens, president of the COBA Student Council said, "We are trying to get people who are in the business college who are not active in any organization to get introduced to some of our groups."

Hudgens said the COBA student council acts as an umbrella organization for the 11 different student groups in COBA. Those groups range from the American Marketing Association and the Graduate Business Association to various business fraternities.

Kristy Leahy, vice president of communications for the council said, "This picnic helps to get students together with faculty and make the students feel more comfortable."

"Basically it's a social gathering. We've got a lot of things planned, picnic type stuff," Leahy said. Activities include barbecue, volleyball, games and music.

The music for the event will be provided by WIDB, which will be broadcasting live from the picnic area, Hudgens said.

COBA also will be sponsoring an information night on Thursday. Leahy said the information night will be used to expose the students in the business college to the various organizations on campus.

Starkis left hanging by Harvey's leaving

BASEBALL FANS, Tony's mom called earlier this week and he doesn't want to come out and play.

Through brief free-flow silence, she growled in on the edge of seats, and everyone asks, why?

He wasn't his grades, he didn't mention any family issues, he didn't mention a conflict with the team. Earthquake? Family feud? No, none of those.

The crowd asks what could have possibly made Tony make this last-minute decision that leaves the SIU-C basketball program in a bit of a predicament.

Oh, he could say that he wanted to play closer to home and that the university just wasn't for him.

How much by Harvey waiting until the first week of school to announce his intentions, the SIU-C basketball program has to fill a hole on the roster made by his absence. Adjustments have to be made to offense and his position at center has to be redefined to fit the team, or vice versa depending on the replacement at the center position.

ALSO, if Harvey would have stated his intentions earlier, then the scholarship he accepted to play for SIU-C could have been used to recruit another player earlier, who may of replaced Harvey or helped the team in some other way. A scholarship to play for SIU-C could mean all the difference to the recipient and the team if it were available.

We applaud Athletic Director Jim Hart's decision to not let Harvey out of his scholarship agreement. It was, and should be, an agreement, and should be honored as such.

Harvey said he wants to play Division I basketball. Under NCAA rules, Harvey cannot transfer to another Division I school and play his first year. He could transfer and sit out a year, and at the same time receive a scholarship from that school if Hart released him from his agreement at SIU-C. By Hart not releasing Harvey from his agreement he makes Harvey ineligible to receive a scholarship from another Division I school. Hart's action reflects good judgment and sets a precedent in dealing with athletes who do not feel they should honor their scholarship agreements.

HARVEY DENIED speculation that he left SIU-C because of a low GPA. But it is known that Harvey's GPA was below what is expected of an athlete his first semester. This indicates a lack of responsibility to Tony Harvey, the student. From experience, the athletic programs and the University should know monitor athletes' classroom performance as well as their performance on the court or playing field. Harvey's low GPA at the University certainly would not be put in the plus column when weighing his decision to leave the University.

There may be other reasons unknown as to why Harvey decided to leave the University, but until these are revealed we can only speculate. A scholarship is an honor, and along with it comes responsibility and loyalty. Unfortunately, Harvey does not wish to respect this, or perhaps is unable to.

We realize that Harvey's leaving will be felt, but we also think that the SIU-C basketball team will regroup and play well.

Opinions from elsewhere

... the House Ways and Means Committee has been throwing itself a heck of a 200th birthday party. There have been dinners and luncheons, commemorative presents, a documentary film and a 500-page, slick-peper history ... The money for the celebration — more than three-quarters of a million dollars so far — was donated by an array of large corporations, unions and, of course, Donald Trump ($10,000). Maybe these generous souls were moved by their love of history ... "We love to be patriotic," said an American Express ($25,000) spokesman. Or, could it be ... the corporate moguls and union leaders want the Ways and Means Committee to have the money for plenty of party hats because the committee has the power to write tax and trade laws and a party hat now could mean a favor later? No. It couldn't be.

Even to the end Rose sold his soul, putting baseball through the wringer

By Paul Daugherty
 Scripps Howard News Service

At 11 Wednesday night, 10 hours before baseball commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti would mercifully put Pete Rose's major-league life to rest, The Hit King was in Minneapolis, selling pieces of himself. You couldn't give him your sympathy, your prayers, your compassion. You couldn't give him a piece of your mind. What you could give him was your money.

"For $399, you own the number, the name ... the ink is still drying." A man in what looked to be a Reds warm-up top was talking. He was selling Rose's white home jerseys. A limited edition, he said. Autographed by Pete Rose himself. Four easy payments of $99.98. The toll-free number is on the screen. Get 'em while they're hot.

This was something called the Consumer Value Network. Pete Rose wore a gray suit and red tie. He was perched on a bar stool. He looked like he didn't have a care in the world. As this is written, no one knows how long Pete Rose will be suspended from baseball, only that he will be. One year, maybe. Maybe five. Does it matter?

Wednesday, his team was in Chicago, playing the Cubs. His wife was in Cincinnati, caring for the couple's two-day-old daughter. Anyone who cared for Rose — family, friends, attorneys, fans — was very far away.

Pete was in Minneapolis. A thousand miles from home. Selling pieces of himself. You didn't know what to call it. Arrogance? Stupidity? Desperation? Betrayal? What? Maybe sadness, on national display. Pete knew what to call it.

Commence. When the Associated Press reported that Rose admitted to betting on baseball, Rose was selling "The Ultimate Baseball Card Kit." A $95 value, for only $49.92.

When ABC's "Nightline" aired at 11:40, broadcasting Rose's baseball obituary nationwide, Rose was on the CTVN telephone line, talking with TI from New Jersey. "You're the best player ever," TI tells Rose. "The best hustler." "You near Philadelphia, TI?" asks Rose.

When you thought Pete Rose's silly-sad existence could plunge no further, when you thought (or at least hoped) that the best hustler's life could not possibly take another wrong turn, you saw him on a TV shopping show the night before the worst day of his life. On the eve of his execution, Pete Rose was hawkking baseballs. Autographed baseballs. Thirty-nine dollars and ninety-four cents.

He won't manage the Reds again. Ever. You saw him for the last time in a Reds uniform Monday night, in Chicago.

He likely won't wear a major-league uniform, either. Better to cut out Rose's heart than strip him of his uniform. But no one will hire him now.

Reds owner Marge Schott is sighing in relief, baseball having done for her what she has never had the guts to do.

"That son of a (bleep) Rose," as she often referred to her ex-manager behind closed doors, will no longer be around to intimidate her and steal her publicity.

No other team will touch him. Not now. Not after the estimated $1 million baseball spent investigating Rose, a burden shared by all its teams. Not after he so brazenly dragged the game through more than six months of muck. Not even after five years of calling the shots in the Reds dugout. Rose is not a great manager.

The possibility also remains that Rose will be indicted for tax evasion. Any federal action against Rose could make baseball's penalty seem like a vacation.

He won't be back. It's just as well.

If what has been reported is true, Rose is a liar of the worst kind. He took the love and trust of an entire city and mocked it. He is baseball's Judas. What was left of innocence here died by his hand. In that sense, Rose's lies diminish us all.

He could have been in Chicago on Wednesday afternoon, working for the organization he professes to love. He should have been with his wife and his child, where the Reds thought he would be. He was on an airplane. Flying to Minneapolis, to sell pieces of himself. Everything has a price.

Sometime long ago Pete Rose marketed his conscience. You'll find it side by side with his loyalty, his honesty and his principles. It's a shame. It's also who he is.

The host for the Consumer Value Network has more, lots more. Here's a baseball autographed by the New York Mets' Darryl Strawberry and Howard Johnson for only $79.22; there's a baseball signed by Nolan Ryan and Steve Carlton for $79.92. All major credit cards accepted.

You're crying a little bit inside, because nothing is sadder than a hero dying by his own hand. In the end, Pete Rose just didn't get it.

He's grinning now. Rose is on the bar stool, with a bat in his hand.

"The memorabilia," he says, "is just half the battle."

How to handle encounters with difficult people

By Paula Ancona
 The Albuquerque Tribune

Most of us probably know someone who's difficult to deal with. If you're not prepared, interacting with that troublesome employee, client or neighbor can make your stomach churn.

Try these strategies for dealing with difficult people:

— Don't take the situation personally; observe the difficult person interacting with others and you'll probably see that he or she is difficult for others, too.

— Consider the personality type you're dealing with. There are lots of names for these types: attacker, know-it-all, backstabber, complainer, people-pleaser, clam. Think about how the difficult person operates so you can predict behavior and plan a response.

— Force difficult people to get to the heart of the issue; make them explain their outrageous statements. — Avoid dealing with emotions; stick to the facts.

— Rehearse your meeting ahead of time.

— Don't write off someone as impossible just because of a few unpleasant episodes.

— Don't wait for a problem with a difficult person to just go away.

Totem poles were built by ancient tribes to mark their territories. With menacing faces carved into the towering wooden poles, the totems also were believed to ward off evil spirits.

Thomas Walsh, professor in the School of Art and Design, is sculpting totem poles of sorts. He says his large-scale sculptures are influenced by those ancient totems and obelisks. And his work, scary and somewhat grotesque, reflects the ancient influence. In its weird beauty, the work could very well ward off evil spirits but also beckon the presence of art lovers.

Walsh likes to work in large terms. His current work, "Landmarker," is a series of totem poles ranging from about 4 to 10 feet high. But he wishes he could make them bigger.

"I'd like to scale them a hell of a lot

"Weathervane," by Brent Kingston, director of the School of Art and Design is one of the sculptures displayed at the Stone House bigger than I'm doing them now," Walsh said.

AS THE PRIMARY teacher of large-scale sculpture, Walsh knows what it takes to get a work of art displayed on campus. Since most of the works he deals with are too big to be displayed in an inside setting, the only place to put the pieces is outside.

Over 20 works of art mark the campus grounds. The styles of the sculptures range from the traditional such as the bronze statue of the late SIU President DeWette Wesley Morris, which stands on the Old Main Mall, to the modern ceramic work, "Here," a Stonehenge-looking monument on a hill just south of the Wham Building.

Most of the works on campus are made of welded and forged steel. It's been the most popular medium, Walsh said, "because it's cheap and fast."

Although Walsh takes his influence from totem poles, most of the sculptures on campus take cues from the huge Pablo Picasso work decorating the Daily Center in Chicago. The sculptures' shapes look alien, but with the many sculptures dotting the campus, modern art works look strangely at home.

"IT'S A BEAUTIFUL campus and with the bushes and trees there are many settings where a sculpture would look natural," Walsh said. The main display area is the University Museum Sculpture Garden. Other sculptures are exhibited at the Lesar Law Building, the Stone House, and on the grounds of the Foundry, which is across from Evergreen Terrace.

Many of the works on campus were created by artists who once were graduate students in the School of Art and Design and have been donated to the University, either permanently or on a semi-temporary loan, Walsh said. Others were purchased by the University Museum for the Sculpture Garden.

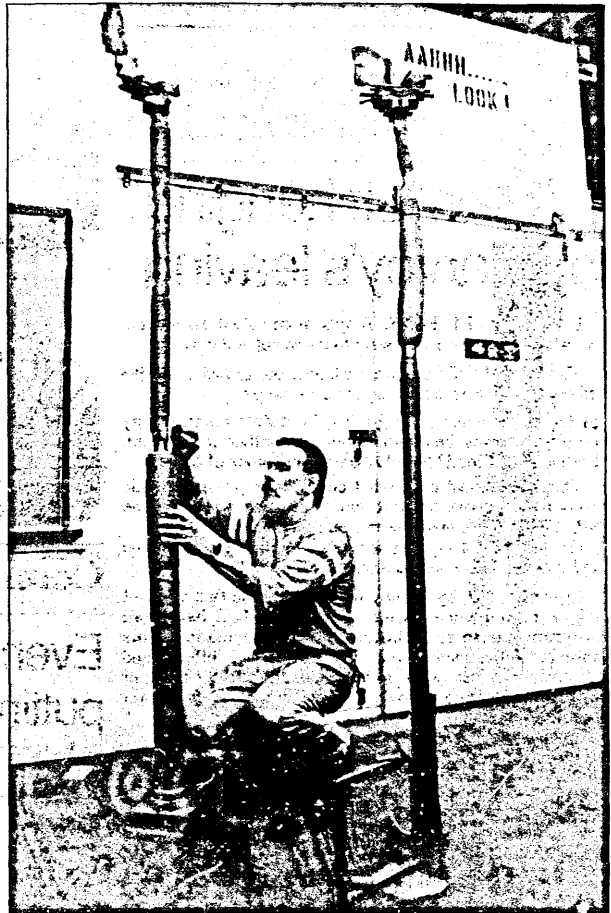

One graduate student who has displayed his work temporarily is Tim Starns, a master's candidate in sculpture. One of his most recent works is self-described as trash art, because it was made of trash and ended up in the trash. The piece was made of scrap wood and was placed behind the Allyn Building for a few weeks last spring.

NOT THAT STARNs doesn't have higher hopes for his disposable art. "They'll be discarded, unless somebody wants it casted in bronze," he said excitedly.

But regardless of the garbage status of his work, Starns says it was a great experience displaying his work for all to see. "I got great response when they saw the pieces placed. People enjoy seeing sculpture."

Because of the temporary status of his art work, it was relatively easy for Starns to have his work displayed on University grounds. Before any work is placed, it must have the approval of Campus Services and the Physical Plant. Since no heavy equipment was needed for Starns' sculpture, and since the work was going to be discarded eventually, he was able to get the work placed on his own, he said.

However, some works, especially permanent pieces, require the involvement of Physical Plant and grounds workers to to further locate the sculpture. insurance the sculpture is properly installed on the University landscape.

WALSH, WHO HAS helped bring the most work to campus, seems somewhat mystified by the process to get a sculpture placed.

"There are a lot of places to put sculptures, but you need a lot of funding," Walsh said.

Some expenses to have a sculpture placed include:

•Transportation. The work has to be transported to the site, on a truck or trailer of some kind, and then, depending on how large the work is, heavy construction equipment (crane or hoist) may be needed •Installation. Most works are seated into the ground with a concrete foundation. The works must be secured properly to prevent theft or falling, which could result in damage.

•Insurance. The artist must pay for liability insurance, just in case someone is injured while viewing the art work.

Walsh said the expense and paperwork involved in placing a work on campus is ironic, considering most of the work is donated. "You have to go through a lot of committees before they say: 'Yeah we'll take your freebie.'"

Late ceramist's legacy is right 'Here' on campus

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

To learn about art, is to learn about the creative process ... to learn how to externalize feeling, intuitions, sensations and concepts and give the structure material form - Nicholas Vergette.

"Here" is right here on campus. "Here" is the title of the art work that adorns a wooded knoll between the pathways around the Wham Building, Lawson Hall and Morris Library.

"Here" is SIU-C's Stonehenge. The object of constant conversation and study as well as being a prop for relaxation.

"Here" was sculpted by the late ceramist Nicholas Vergette and was installed in 1972. It was the first permanently installed, outdoor artwork on campus. Two years later, Vergette died of cancer. It was his last major work and it remains as his legacy.

Vergette, a faculty member in the School of Art, said at the time largest ceramic sculpture ever. that he thought the work was the work consists of several free form cast clay obelisks standing from 6 to 14 feet high.

An Englishman, Vergette studied painting at the Chelsea

School of Art in London during the 1950s. He became interested in pottery and ceramics shortly after graduating and came to SIU-C in 1959 to take a teaching position.

He believed clay was superior medium for sculpting large-scale works. His reasons are revealed in the text of a memorial service held for him on Feb. 28, 1974.

"Clay has been downgraded a great deal," he stated. "I like it because it is commonplace. My pieces are designed as massive heavy shapes, and clay is ideal for this."

Further reasons Vergette gave included clay's relatively low cost and its resilience to weather.

He hoped that "Here" would be considered his masterpiece. He called it "a stepping stone between buildings and nature. They look kind of natural ... clearly have suggestions of growth but are not completely organic."

And the sculptures do blend in with the grass and trees. They seem to attract attention. "Here" has been the subject of countless photo essays, drawings and English papers. It even was the inspiration for a dance routine.

Despite the work's durability, it began to show signs of wear, obviously from the many people climbing on it to get a different perspective.

In 1982 it was repaired and restored. In 1977 the University honored Vergette by naming the art gallery in the Allyn Building after him.

Noriega compared to Hitler by official

Regime labeled international outlaw

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States compared the Panamanian regime of Gen. Manuel Noriega to Adolf Hitler and said Thursday Noriega will soon become an international "outlaw."

American officials also hinted they were prepared to act unilaterally to topple Noriega after the Organization of American States failed to negotiate the strongman's removal from power in Panama.

A four-member commission appointed by the OAS foreign ministers reported Wednesday that it had not been able, in three months, to mediate the terms under which Panama would return to civilian democratic rule.

The OAS issued a report critical of Panama's abuses of human rights, but also criticized the U.S. government for staging military maneuvers at a time when such actions could inflame the political situation.

The OAS foreign ministers ended their marathon strategy session early Thursday morning. The U.S. representative, deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, warned that if Noriega does not relinquish power by Sept. 1, the date set by the Panamanian constitution, "Then the Noriega regime will have declared itself to be an outlaw among civilized nations and we should treat it accordingly." Eagleburger said every OAS member nation "has the obligation to isolate this outlaw regime." He did not suggest any specific actions, although U.S. officials talked earlier of further tightening the existing economic embargo as a first step.

Accusing Noriega of giving safe haven to drug traffickers, the laundering of drug money and permitting his country to be used as a cocaine transshipment point, Eagleburger compared Noriega to Hitler.

Eagleburger said, "That is aggression as surely as Adolf Hitler's invasion of Poland 50 years ago was aggression. It is aggression against us all, and some day it must be brought to an end."

Noriega was indicted last year by two federal grand juries in Florida on charges of involvement in drug trafficking.

One State Department official said, "Clearly, the multilateral approach didn't work with Noriega, and so we are now looking at other options for acting alone. At this point, I wouldn't rule anything out."

In its final declaration, the OAS council of ministers recommended the Inter-American Human Rights commission send a delegation to investigate reports of abuses by the Noriega government. But even the recommendation, according to the declaration, can only be carried out with "the consent of Panama."

White gang kills black teen-ager in New York

NEW YORK (UPI) — A black teenager was shot to death in an attack by a gang of young whites carrying baseball bats and seeking revenge for a friend whose girlfriend spurned him to date blacks and Hispanics, police said Thursday.

Yusef Hawkins, 16, was fatally shot during the confrontation Wednesday night with a gang of whites waiting outside an apartment where a party for the young woman's 18th birthday was under way, police said.

The gang apparently mistook Hawkins and three other blacks for the woman's new male friends, police said. The four black youths had gone to the predominantly white Bensonhurst section of the New York City borough of Brooklyn to buy a used car.

Police were investigating the killing of Hawkins as a racially motivated incident. Witnesses heard some of the whites, identified as neighborhood youths, utter racial epithets, said Commissioner Benjamin Ward.

The white gang, referring to the youths, shouted, "Is this the nigger boyfriend?" Deputy Commissioner of Public Information Alice McGillion said.

The 9:30 p.m. attack began when some of the whites, waiting outside the party, followed Hawkins and the black teenagers after they walked past the group and turned onto a nearby avenue, Ward said.

"The former boyfriend and a group of his friends waited outside the apartment for the girl's new friends to arrive,"

Ward said. "The four black youths, on their way to buy the used car which had been advertised, unknowingly walked into the white group."

"This (white) group was building and talking and bragging and ... and it's possible other kids were joining in, hanging around to see the action," Ward said.

Hawkins was shot twice in the chest during the attack in which he and his friends were surrounded by as many as 30 bat-wielding white youths about a block away from the party, Ward said. A total of four shots were fired.

Hawkins died later at Maimonides Medical Center.

Police arrested three whites but were awaiting formal charges pending the determination of an assistant district attorney, Ward said.

Arrested were Brian O'Donnell, 18, Pasquale Raucii, 19, Steven Curreri, 18, all of Brooklyn. None of the three is believed to be the gunman.

Four spent .32-caliber shells were recovered along with seven baseball bats, but no gun was found.

The girl, who police declined to identify, had recently broken up with one of the neighborhood youths and had begun dating black and Hispanic young men, Ward said. The ex-boyfriend had warned her not to bring blacks and Hispanics into the neighborhood, the commissioner said.

"We have a spurned lover who is jealous and is looking for the new boyfriend, and it

'90 Census could shift House seats

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As many as 17 seats in the House of Representatives will shift following the 1990 Census and blacks and Hispanics could pick up between six and 10 of them, a study by the Population Reference Bureau said Thursday.

William O'Hare, director of policy studies at the non-profit research group, however, cautioned that the estimates were based on current population projections and will not be certain until after the official census is taken on April 1, 1990.

On April 1, 1991, the Census Bureau will release the data needed to draw new congressional districts. Census figures are also used to draw state legislative boundaries and in funding formulas for more than 100 federal programs.

According to O'Hare's projections, 17 seats in Congress will shift following the 1990 Census with seven states — Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Texas, Arizona and California — gaining seats; and 11 states — Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Kansas and Montana — likely to lose one or more seats.

O'Hare made his predictions in releasing a Ford Foundation-financed study, "Redistricting in the 1990s: A Guide for Minority Groups," aimed at aiding minority involvement in the reapportionment process.

"Every state that will gain seats in Congress, with the exception of Arizona, has at least 1 million black residents," O'Hare said. "Three key states — California, Texas and Florida — where the black population is growing rapidly are also states that are likely to gain at least three seats."

"Given the growth of the black population in these states and the availability of new seats, the number of blacks in Congress seems likely to increase," he said.

Before the death of Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, there were 24 black members of Congress.

At the same time, 12 congressional districts now represented by blacks are losing population and will have to be enlarged to meet the equal population requirements under the one-person, one-vote rule.

They include the districts of Democratic Reps. John Conyers and George Crockett in Michigan; William Gray in Pennsylvania; Cardiss Collins and Charles Hayes of Illinois; Kweisi Mfume, Maryland, Donald Payne, N.J.; Edolphus Towns and Charles Rangel, New York; Louis Stokes, Ohio, and Harold Ford, Tennessee.

Hispanics, have nine members in Congress.

Sept. 7. If ratified, the proposal will make "a sizable increase" for the college, Jackson said.

"Just by sheer size, the addition (of the units) will change us. Administration of justice alone has 500 people (majoring in the department), which we will now deal with," he said.

However, Jackson stressed the two academic units will "fit very nicely" within the ideological framework of the college.

"Administration of justice approaches crime and its treatment from a political, science, economic and social perspective, while BAS comes from a social science heritage. Both are fine additions to our curriculum," he said.

If the transfer is approved, Jackson said BAS offices will move to the fourth floor in Faner Hall previously occupied by the Department of Recreation, while administration of justice will remain in Faner Hall to facilitate the transfer.

Jackson said the college also hopes to minimize the long-standing controversy surrounding BAS by presenting the program as an educationally and culturally sound program.

During the 1988-89 school year, several student organizations and faculty members protested what they perceived as a lack of interest in BAS on the part of the University administration.

Jackson said gaining the student body's confidence would be top priority if the program does become part of the college.

"Proving to the students within BAS that the University is indeed serious about this program is a primary goal. By establishing ourselves and working together, we can have a good, sound program that will benefit the University," he said.

BUSINESS, from Page 1

Eldorado, said the bill is good anti-drug legislation as long as the law enforcement officials follow up by enforcing it.

"It's ridiculous that we allow articles needed for that activity to be sold," he said.

Phelps added that punishing the drug offenders but allowing merchants to sell items used in drug activity is a "subtle endorsement" of drug use.

Curlee said he "never wanted to do something against the wishes of the community," but believes banning the sale of drug paraphernalia has a blanketing effect on the drug problem.

Curlee said banning the sale of drug paraphernalia is not going to prevent people from using drugs.

Senator Jim Rea, D-Christopher, said the law is a very important component in alleviating the nation's drug problem.

"We have to stiffen the penalties through anti-drug legislation," Rea said.

Both Rea and Phelps said the Assembly will be pushing through more anti-drug legislation this fall.

"As long as drugs remain a problem, there will be a constant flow of tightening legislation," Phelps said.

LOAN, from Page 1

Guaranteed Student Loans) and Supplemental Loans for Students.

According to the letter from the Department of Education, the University is not required to take default reduction measures spelled out by the department because SIU-C's default rate is below 20 percent.

Universities with high default rates may be excluded from loan programs, required to delay loan disbursements until 30 days into the semester or obligated to implement a default management plan approved by the Department of Education.

"However," the letter states, "all schools are required to provide entrance counseling to first-time borrowers prior to the first disbursement of a loan."

"The financial aid office has developed a number of loan-counseling and debt-management activities in compliance with this requirement:

- A brochure outlining repayment options, debt management, borrowers' rights and responsibilities, loan deferment and consolidation and average indebtedness at SIU-C is being distributed at entrance and exit loan counseling. This brochure also will be sent to borrowers who apply for graduation or who withdraw from the University. These students also will receive an exit counseling letter.

• A loan counselor was hired for the week before the fall semester and the first two weeks of the semester to offer advice and answer questions from students picking up loan checks. The counselor is located at a table in the Bursar's Office.

• Group loan counseling sessions are planned for Sept. 26 and 27 in the Student Center. First-time borrowers will be required to attend, as will selected Sociology 101 classes. Borrowers who apply to graduate in December will receive a letter advising them to attend. All students are welcome. The sessions will include an audio-visual presentation developed by the financial aid office with the help of an outside consultant.

New medication reduces drug use

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Monkeys addicted to cocaine kicked their habits by taking an experimental medication, suggesting the treatment may offer a powerful new weapon in the war against illegal drugs, researchers said Thursday.

Harvard University scientists discovered that a daily dose of buprenorphine, which already has been shown to help heroin addicts, dramatically reduced the craving for cocaine in five rhesus monkeys for 30 consecutive days.

The findings are particularly significant because currently there are no uniformly effective treatments for cocaine abuse or the dual abuse of cocaine and heroin, often injected in a potent form called a "speedball."

The researchers, noting intravenous drug use accounted for about one-third of the cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome nationwide last year, also pointed out: "Dual addiction to intravenous cocaine and heroin may increase the risk of AIDS, both through needle sharing and through the combined immunosuppressive effects of both drugs."

Harvard University scientists discovered a daily dose of buprenorphine dramatically reduced the craving for cocaine in five rhesus monkeys for 30 consecutive days.

Dr. Herbert Kleber of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy said the research indicates buprenorphine may be "a promising approach" to helping addicts, especially in light of problems recently documented in the use of methadone to treat heroin abusers.

"We are clearly looking for drugs that can affect cocaine use. We know there has been a major increase in cocaine use among people on methadone maintenance," Kleber said in a telephone interview. "If switching to buprenorphine will decrease (such) use, this could be a useful advance."

Dr. Marvin Snyder of the National Institute on Drug Abuse agreed buprenorphine is an "exciting possibility," saying one of its big advantages is the promise in treating cocaine and heroin addiction simultaneously.

"It would be rare to have that kind of therapy," the medications expert said, though he warned there was not enough evidence to recommend widespread use.

Federal researchers currently are testing about a half-dozen other medications, including some anti-psychotic and anti-convulsant drugs, that have shown some signs of helping cocaine addicts.

In a study published Thursday in the journal Science, the Harvard team said monkeys who could self-administer cocaine cut their drug use an average of 97 percent while taking buprenorphine. Before receiving the medication their cocaine use was similar to that of human addicts.

Earlier this year, Yale University researchers using buprenorphine to treat heroin addicts reported the medication also reduced cocaine use in that group by as much as tenfold compared to methadone.

"I was thrilled when I got the (Harvard) results. I thought it was the piece that was missing," said Yale's Dr. Thomas Kosten, explaining that the animal studies clearly document buprenorphine suppresses cocaine cravings.

Dr. Jack Mendelson, one of the Harvard study's authors and co-director of drug abuse research at the Harvard-affiliated McLean Hospital, said in his opinion buprenorphine is the most promising treatment on the horizon for cocaine and cocaine-heroin addiction.

Still, Mendelson said, "There's not going to be a 'magic bullet' for any form of substance abuse. Substance abuse has its roots in the chemistry of the brain but also in the environment in which we live and the availability of the substance abused."

Buprenorphine now is approved for intravenous use as a prescription painkiller, used mainly in surgical and hospital settings.

Voyager finishes tour, discovers new moons

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The Voyager 2 probe, winding up an epic grand tour of the outer solar system, raced smoothly toward its once-in-a-lifetime flyby of Neptune Thursday, discovering two new moons and beaming back spectacular photos of the ringed planet.

"This is it! This is the 24 hours we've been waiting for," Voyager project scientist Edward Stone said as the spacecraft closed in on the eighth planet from the sun, a giant ball of frigid gas currently farther away than even Pluto.

With excitement building to a fever pitch, hundreds of journalists, scientists and VIPs gathered at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory to share in the drama of Voyager 2's fourth and final planetary encounter and to witness the nuclear-powered spacecraft's departure from known space.

Project manager Norman Haynes said the 1-ton robot craft was on course for a 10:56 p.m. CST flyby over Neptune's north polar region at an altitude of just 3,048 miles above the methane cloudtops — the closest Voyager 2 has been to any planet since launch from Florida 12 years ago last Sunday.

Five hours after close approach, Voyager 2 was scheduled to sail within 24,000 miles of the strange moon Triton, a pinkish satellite with a transparent atmosphere that may feature glaciers of frozen methane — natural gas.

Confirmation of a successful flyby was not expected until 3:02 a.m. CST Friday because at Neptune's vast distance — 2.7 billion miles — radio signals from the probe, traveling 186,000 miles per second, needed four hours and six minutes to reach Earth.

But engineers had no doubt Voyager 2 would keep its date with destiny, and project manager Norman Haynes said the spacecraft would pass within about 19 miles of its planned aim point.

Colombian hit squads begin terror campaign

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Drug-financed hit squads blew up political offices and torched politicians' houses Thursday in a self-declared "total war" against Colombian officials seeking to extradite cocaine kingpins to the United States for trial.

The so-called "Extraditables" commando group claimed responsibility for the wave of terror in a statement delivered to Colombian news media and warned of further attacks against a wide range of targets.

"We declare total war on the government, on the industrial and political oligarchy, on journalists who have attacked and abused us, on judges who have sold out to the government, on extraditing magistrates, on the presidents of trade unions and on all who have attacked us," the statement said.

The so-called "Extraditables" commando group claimed responsibility for the wave of terror in a statement to Colombian news media and warned of further attacks.

The attacks represented the first reprisals by drug traffickers since Friday, when President Virgilio Barco promised to extradite the leaders of narcotics rings to the United States, where many of them face trial for drug offenses.

Colombian authorities also have arrested thousands of suspected drug traffickers and confiscated their property in a sweeping crackdown following the slayings last week of a superior court judge, a police chief and a leading presidential candidate, all of whom had taken a stand against drug trafficking in Colombia, the source of most of the cocaine consumed in the United States.

New Argentine government favors pardons for officers

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — The new government of President Carlos Menem favors granting pardons to military officers accused of human rights abuses and those on trial for rebellion, Defense Minister Italo Argentino Luder said Thursday.

The pardons would be applied "on a case-by-case basis" and would be granted by Menem before the end of the year, the minister said.

According to government sources, those who might be pardoned include five ex-military junta members serving long jail sentences on convictions for responsibilities for the murder and torture of 9,000 political prisoners, another 18 senior officers who are under trial for the human rights abuses, and the officers involved in three rebellions against the government of President Raul Alfonsín.

"After analyzing all the alternatives, we are inclined toward granting a pardon," Luder said in a news conference Thursday with foreign correspondents based in Buenos Aires.

In Bogota, the capital, Minister of Defense General Oscar Botero said Colombia would "meet the challenge of the cocaine terrorists," indicating the government would root back down from its pledge to root out and extradite drug cartel leaders.

The government also released the names of 11 people it described as British or Israeli mercenaries who allegedly were hired as instructors for drug-financed commando units or right-wing death squads.

The Extraditables, described by police as an organization of hit squads trained and financed by the drug cartels, have claimed responsibility in the past for the slayings of numerous judges, police officers and journalists, including the assassinations of Justice Minister Rodrigo Lara Bonilla in 1984 and Attorney General Carlos Mauro Hoyos in 1988.

Most of the attacks Thursday were in Medellin, a provincial capital 170 miles north of Bogota and home of the world's largest cocaine cartel, according to U.S. drug officials.

Police said a bomb exploded Thursday in the offices of opposition Social Conservative Party, killing passerby Oscar Marin, 32. Another bomb explosion ripped through the offices of the New Liberalism Party, causing an estimated $164,500 damage but no casualties.

The New Liberalism group is a faction within the ruling Liberal Party formerly led by slain presidential candidate Sen. Luis Carlos Galan. Galan's assassination during a political rally Friday prompted the government crackdown on drug traffickers.

Police defused two other bombs at the Medellin offices of the national radio networks RCN and Caracol, authorities said.

Suspected drug gangs also set fires that destroyed the ranch homes of former treasury minister Edgar Gutierrez Castro and Sen. Velez Escobar in Medellin's outskirts, police said.

Menem, who was inaugurated on July 8, repeated during the election campaign he opposed granting pardons or amnesty to officers accused of rebellion and human rights abuses.

In his latest statement to that effect, Menem said Wednesday in a news conference in Brazil, when asked about the possibility of his granting a pardon to officers, that he would "assume all the responsibility, as president of the Argentines."

"Argentina can't live in the past," he said. "The time has come to pacify emotions and proceed with courage to bring reconciliation to Argentina."

The pardons would be a third concession to officers who took part in the so-called "dirty war" in the 1970s when suspected political dissidents and terrorist sympathizers routinely disappeared during military rule.

In 1987 President Alfonsín, under pressure from middle rank and junior officers, granted two amnesties.

Sociology professor named head of Women's Studies

By University News Service

Kathryn B. Ward, associate professor of sociology at Southern Illinois University-Carbondale, has been named coordinator of SIU's Women's Studies program. She replaces Linda R. Gannon, professor of psychology, in the half-time coordinator's position.

Ward took over the job on Aug. 14.

"She's a natural for the position," said Lon R. Shelby, sociology chairperson. "She's worked on virtually every task force and in every women's group on this campus, and her courses are at the core of the women's studies curriculum."

A faculty member since 1982, Ward has taught courses in "The Sexes in the Modern World," "Race and Ethnic Relations," "Sociology of Gender," and "Women in Social and Economic Development." Her research has focused on fertility, labor markets, political economy and social movements.

Ward is the editor of "Women Workers and Global Restructuring," set for publication next spring by ILR Press. Her first book on the women's status and fertility worldwide was published by Praeger Publishers in 1984.

She is an advisory editor for "The Sociological Quarterly." Ward, 33, graduated from Fort Hays State University in 1977.

Student's play takes first in national contest

By University News Service

At age 27, Denise K. Dillard has already achieved what many young playwrights will only dream about.

Dillard, a master's degree student in theater at Southern Illinois University-Carbondale, won the American College Theater Festival's National Student Playwriting Award this year and traveled to Washington, D.C., to see her play, "Blue Collar Blues," performed in the Kennedy Center's huge Terrace Theater.

"The play's political jokes went over pretty big in Washington," said Dillard, who lives in Paducah, Ky.

"Jabs against the Republicans got a nice laugh, but the soybean and cotton jokes didn't fare as well."

"Blue Collar Blues" takes place at Queen City Beauty Shop, the Wagon Wheel Bar and radio station KARK in fictitious Coffee, Ark. When the town's sewing machine factory announces it will close up shop and move to Argentina, townfolk are devastated but attempt to go on.

The story is that of lost jobs, hopes and dreams, of rocky marriages, of an all-to-familiar situation which confronts rural America.

"Commy hits set the tone; you even hear on-the-air contests," said Dillard who came by much of the radio material first hand in 1985 as the nighttime voice of country station WJRD in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

After walking away with blue-ribbon honors from the University of Minnesota at Duluth in 1987-88, Dillard then entered the national theater contest again the following year.

This time around Minnesota's troupe was even more particular. Dillard's script beat out more than 800 others and proved itself when UM-D's production of "Blue Collar Blues" sailed to a first-place finish.

Spoils from the competition include a contract with the William Morris Agency, which represents leading playwrights, and Samuel French Inc., one of the country's top play publishing houses. French will publish "Blue Collar Blues."

But first Dillard has to trim and polish it.

"I hoped to finish by August, but now it looks like May," said Dillard, who returns to SIU-C full time this fall.

Her other plays include "Infatuations on the Seventh Floor," which describes as "the yuppie play of the decade," and "Exposure by Express," a story about a newspaper editor driven to drink by a professional mistake. SIUC produced the latter during its 1988 Summer Playhouse season.

Christian H. Moe, chairperson of SIUC's theater department, hopes to see "Blue Collar Blues" produced at SIU-C next summer and says Dillard's success is "quite a nice coup."

Police Blotter

A 38-year-old Carbondale woman was arrested Wednesday on charges of unlawful use of a weapon and aggravated assault after threatening a 15-year-old juvenile.

Eunice Ann Higgins, 303A E. Elm, was arrested at 9:30 p.m. by Carbondale Police.

Higgins was injured in the altercation and transported to the Jackson County Jail after being treated at Carbondale Memorial Hospital.

An SIU student was arrested in the 700 block of E. Washington St. shortly after midnight Thursday and charged with public consumption of alcohol.

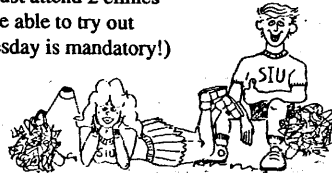

Edwin R. Dooley, 22, was stopped by University Security police and was released shortly after with a notice to appear in city court Sept. 11.

Reduced French naval force reaches Lebanon

BEST AVAILABLE DOCUMENT

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - France reduced its naval force heading toward Lebanon and the warships appeared to slow their advance Thursday as they cruised less than 200 miles from the Lebanese coast, far out of range of hostile Syrian and Moslem militia artillery.

The Syrian-backed Moslem forces have threatened to fire on the French ships and stage retaliatory attacks inside France if the naval force intervenes to help Christian forces in Lebanon's civil war.

The Soviet Union and the United Nations, meanwhile, launched fresh efforts to halt the civil war and resume Arab League efforts to the same end in Lebanon.

In Paris, French Defense Minister Jean Pierre Chevenement announced a reduction in the eight-ship French force, saying a destroyer and an oil tanker were being relieved of duty and a frigate was being pulled back.

The move left the aircraft carrier Foch, an oil tanker, two frigates and a landing ship stationed off the coast of Lebanon.

French officials gave no explanation for the reduction of the force, which came as diplomacy gained momentum and while the Moslems maintained an anti-French rhetorical war.

French and Lebanese sources said the French ships were still at least 180 miles from the Lebanese coast, well out of danger from Syrian and Moslem cannons.

The latest warnings were made Thursday by Nabih Berri, chief of the pro-Syrian Shiite Amal militia, and Abbas Al Mousawi, a ranking leader in the anti-Western Hezbollah group, during a Shiite rally in the southern port city of Tyre.

Berri said "as the French president said that no one has the right to dictate what France should do in Lebanon, I declare that we have the right to act freely.

"We will fight the French on our shores," Berri said.

The Hezbollah clergyman said "we will confront France, Iraq and Christians together."

According to sources and witnesses, Syria and its allies have beefed up positions around military role.

France has said its ships were to aid some 7,000 French citizens and deliver food and medicine, but Syria's allies charged Paris intended to back the Christians.

At midday Thursday, Lebanese naval sources told the Christian-run Voice of Lebanon radio station that the French vessels, including the Foch, were located 12 miles from the shore, but the radio station later retracted that report.

French and Lebanese sources said late Thursday that the French ships were still at least 180 miles from the Lebanese coast, well out of danger from Syrian and Moslem cannons that are maintaining a nearly 6-month-old siege around Christian harbors. The ships were reported about 200 miles from the coast Wednesday night.

"We will consider a ship approaching our coast as a military target," said Brig. Sami Al Khateeb, the chief of Moslem army brigades.

"The French are making a major mistake and complicate the Lebanese crisis."

Sheik Zouair Kanj, a Moslem leader linked to Hezbollah, "any stupid act against the Moslem areas by the warships will prompt Moslems to retaliate in the heartland of France, especially Paris."

Officials said Deputy Tarasov, a special envoy of Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, arrived in Moslem West Beirut after a two-day flight to Syria where he held talks with Foreign Minister Farouk Al Sharaa.

The Soviet minister met Selim Hoss, the head of the Syrian-backed Moslem Cabinet, at his residence in West Beirut, the officials said. He was later scheduled to meet Christian leaders.

Political sources said Moscow was seeking to persuade Syria, its main ally in the Arab world, to avoid military confrontation with the French force because Paris had declared the fleet would not engage in military action.

Poll: U.S. would support educational changes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A majority of Americans would support a sweeping array of educational changes ranging from higher school taxes to a national curriculum and the doctrine of choice espoused by President Bush, a poll showed Thursday.

The 21st annual Gallup-Phi Delta Kappa poll of attitudes on public education indicates Americans are moving away from such traditions as the neighborhood school and local control of education in search of alternatives, said John Rowley, president of PDK, the education fraternity.

"The public seems to be ready for some tradition-shattering changes in the policies that govern our public schools," Rowley told a news conference.

However, when asked to grade their local schools, 43 percent of those polled gave them an A or a B, up from 40 percent last year and a low of 31 percent in 1983. Four percent failed their schools, the same as the last two years.

The survey of 1,584 adults last spring found 60 percent favored choice — defined as the right of students and parents to choose which public school in their communities the students will attend. Thirty-one percent were opposed.

In contrast to previous polls that found most Americans wanted less federal influence in education, 69 percent of those surveyed said they support a required national curriculum, 70 percent back national achievement standards and 77 percent favor standardized national testing.

The study also found for the first time that the public favors, 48 percent to 44 percent, increasing the amount of time a student spends in school. But the authors cautioned "no decisive majority has emerged" on the issue.

Eighty-three percent of those surveyed said more should be done to improve public schools in poor areas and 62 percent said they would pay higher taxes for that purpose.

"The public is more receptive to higher taxes. This is ... a major change," Alec Gallup, co-author of the study and co-chairman of the Gallup Organization, said. "In the past, they almost invariably said 'no' to higher taxes."

Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos hailed the poll as evidence Americans support the administration on choice, which it believes will force schools to improve so they can keep their students.

Medical school applicants down

BOSTON (UPI) — The competition to become a doctor in the United States has continued to slacken, a new report showed Thursday.

The number of students applying to U.S. medical schools dropped again for the 1988-89 school year, and the academic credentials of those accepted dipped slightly, according to an annual report from the American Medical Association.

"There's been a slow but steady decline in applications for about the last eight to 10 years," Barbara Barzansky, assistant director of the AMA's Division of Undergraduate Education, said.

"I think the medical schools and the AMA are concerned about it. They want to make sure they are going to be able to fill their classes with high-quality students," Barzansky, who co-authored the report published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, said.

Richard Randlett of the Association of American Medical Colleges in Washington acknowledged medical schools are concerned about the drop in applicants and have stepped up recruitment. But preliminary data for the 1989-1990 academic year are more encouraging, he said.

Experts blamed the drop in applicants on competition from other professions, a diminished public image of doctors, the high cost of medical school and other factors.

"The applications for '89 show a slight increase over last year's. So we are a little bit encouraged that the decline is not apparently continuing, or is reaching a stable level," he said.

The number of students applying to medical schools in the United States peaked in 1974, when 42,624 hopefuls vied for acceptance.

But there were only 26,721 applicants to U.S. medical schools for the 1988-1989 academic year, 1,402 fewer than the previous year, the new report said.

Medical schools accepted 17,108 of the applicants, or one student for every 1.6 applying, the report said. The acceptance ratio was one to 1.7 the year before and one to 2.2 a decade earlier.

Experts blame the decline on myriad factors, including competition from other professions, a diminished public image of doctors, reports of a possible physician glut and the high cost of going to medical school.

An accompanying report showed the percentage of medical school students who graduate in debt continued to increase in 1988.

Red Cross operation sends East German refugees west

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — More than 100 East Germans left the East bloc for the West with the blessing of the Hungarian government in a unique Red Cross operation after weeks of refuge in Bonn's embassy in Budapest, officials said Thursday.

The humanitarian operation, kept secret until just before the citizens' emigration to the West, was the first legal exodus of East Germans from a country allied to East Germany under the Warsaw Pact, the East bloc military alliance.

Without directly mentioning the event, the official East

German news agency lashed out at what it termed "the human smuggling, reminiscent of the Cold War."

But West German officials praised Hungary for allowing the East Germans to leave the Hungarian capital and fly to the West.

Government officials in Bonn said all 108 East Germans who took refuge for weeks in the Budapest embassy arrived in West Germany after a flight to Austria by the Red Cross Wednesday night.

They said members of the Geneva-based International Committee of the Red Cross arrived at the embassy Wednesday with travel documents for the stunned East Germans before flying them to Austria.

The officials said that for security reasons the East Germans were not told in advance of the operation, carried out in conjunction with Hungarian authorities and the local Red Cross society.

More than 200 East Germans are still in Bonn's diplomatic missions in East Berlin and in the Czechoslovakian capital of Prague, hoping to force the hardline communist East German government to grant them exit visas.

Gene opens door to treat fatal disease

TORONTO (UPI) — Researchers Thursday hailed the discovery of the cystic fibrosis gene as possibly "the most important tool ever" for preventing and treating the most common inherited fatal disease in North America.

At a news conference to announce the medical milestone, Dr. Lap-Chee Tsui of the University of Toronto said "we have achieved an important step" in the fight against the disorder, which afflicts about 33,000 U.S. citizens.

A team headed by Tsui and University of Michigan's Dr. Francis Collins reported it has identified the gene responsible for cystic fibrosis. They were also able to pinpoint the major defect on the gene that causes the disease in the majority of patients.

"We can finally look into the eyes of children and young adults with cystic fibrosis and tell them that the door to their future has been opened."

—Dr. Francis Collins

Discovery of the cystic fibrosis gene opens the way for long-awaited screening tests among the general population to determine which couples are at risk of having afflicted babies. Previously, doctors were only able to offer analysis to families with a history of cystic fibrosis to determine who might pass on the disease.

About one in 20 Americans carry the cystic fibrosis gene. A person must inherit two copies of the cystic fibrosis gene, one from both parents, to develop the disease.

"We finally have what may be the most important tool ever for completely understanding cystic fibrosis and developing the most comprehensive treatments," Collins, whose findings will be published Sept. 8 in the journal Science, said.

Robert Dressing, president of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, called the gene discovery the "most significant scientific breakthrough" in the fight against the disease in the past four decades.

Singer Nicholas Tremulis featured tonight at Carnival of Craziiness

By Christine Broda
Staff Writer

Nicholas Tremulis and 24-7 SPYZ may not have much in common, but both will highlight this year's Carnival of Craziiness in the Student Center tonight.

Nicholas Tremulis will begin at 8:30 p.m. in Ballroom D. The band will be making its second appearance at the University since performing at Springfest 1988. The 12 member group has been described as a fusion of rock, R&B and funk.

Tremulis, it is said, has already conquered the Chicago music scene. He has sold out shows and has received substantial air play on WXXRT.

24-7 SPYZ will begin at 11:30 p.m. A combination thrash metal, funk, rap and reggae band, RIP magazine has called them "an all-black outfit that energetically combines the freshest elements of Living Colour, Fishbone and Badbrains."

Admission to the bands is free after the initial $1.99 door fee to the Carnival is paid.

Local bands at the Carnival will include Tin Pan Alley, Liquid, Night Soil Coolies and Four on the Floor.

Park service marks 73rd year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Smokey the Bear won't be there, but his ranger friends will be on hand as the rest of the nation is invited to celebrate the 73rd anniversary of the National Park Service Friday by visiting parks from Yosemite to Shenandoah for free.

"Congress declared that one day a year be a free day," said Park Service spokeswoman Anita Clevenger. "All of the parks that charge an entrance fee get a free day" Friday, she said.

Many of the 354 "areas" included in the national parks system will also sponsor special programs, she said, in honor of the Aug. 25, 1916, act of Congress that established the National Park Service.

Those areas include national historic sites, monuments, recreation areas, seashores, and wild and scenic rivers in addition to 50 national parks. In 1988, the combined park areas logged more than 282.3 million visitors, Clevenger said.

Among the special National Parks Day events are hourly "staircase tours" of the Washington Monument, offering visitors a rare chance to see some of the 193 memorial stones inside the monument. Except for limited exceptions, the staircase has been closed to the public for many years because of vandalism of the stones.

In the Great Smoky Mountains park, rangers will hand out literature on the history of the Park Service, including a free trivia game. Sample question: What was the first national park? Answer: Yellowstone, approved in 1872 by President Ulysses Grant.

At Bryce Canyon Park, Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, Rep. James

Hansen, R-Utah, and park officials will participate in ceremonies marking the historic restoration and redevelopment of the Utah park.

But Smokey the Bear, the symbol admonishing Americans to prevent forest fires whom many Americans mistakenly associate with the National Parks, won't be on hand for the festivities, according to Elsie Cunningham, Smokey's official public relations agent at the U.S. Forest Service.

"No, the bear won't be there," Cunningham said. "Smokey is a U.S. Forest Service Symbol. ... We would love for Smokey to be tied in with the parks, but up to this point the marriage hasn't come about."

"He's probably going to be doing his ambassador work somewhere else that day."

Bush fishes with Dutch minister

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (UPI) — President George Bush welcomed Danish Prime Minister Poul Schluter to his seaside home Thursday, heralding changes in Europe he "couldn't have predicted."

The overnight trip by Schluter and his new wife, Anne Marie Vessel, was more of a pleasure visit than for international consultations. But the vacationing Bush took the opportunity to salute his longtime friend and relations between the U.S. and Denmark, as "first class, strong in every way."

The two leaders, who met more than a decade ago as ambassadors to the United Nations, spent the afternoon boating and fishing — but had to go into town to buy fish. Bush quipped "that's the only way I can get them." The two leaders then had dinner at the president's family compound.

Greeting Schluter at the Bush estate earlier Thursday, the president lauded signs of democratic reform in Poland and said they would discuss sweeping changes throughout Europe.

"I think the prime minister would agree with me that there are fascinating changes taking place in Europe — changes that he might not have even predicted ... and certainly changes so fast that I couldn't have predicted them just seven months ago when I became president of the United States," Bush said.

The arrival coincided with Bush's pledge of continued support for one remarkable sign of change in Poland, where Tadeusz Mazowiecki was elected prime minister in the first non-communist government since World War II.

"I also salute President (Wojciech) Jaruzelski for his political wisdom in endorsing a government reflecting the genuine will of the Polish people, and Solidarity, under the leadership of Lech Walesa, for its constructive role in helping bring about a new beginning in Poland," Bush said in a statement.

"These developments hold promise not only for a peaceful democratic transition in Poland but also for a broader process of European reconciliation, toward a Europe whole and free," Bush said.

Schluter's spokesman, Bent Skor, said Schluter and Bush would discuss the situation in Eastern Europe, especially Poland, and that Bush was winning high marks for his role.

"The president is showing himself to be a deft professional. He is chalking up high marks for his European policies," Skor said.

Schluter is en route to Mexico for an official visit and will leave Maine Friday morning. Bush has invited Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and his family to visit next week.

So far, Bush has spent most of his three-week vacation enjoying sports — boating, golfing, fishing and even swimming in the cold Atlantic Ocean.

SCULPTURE, from Page 5

MARTIN MUNSON assistant curator at the University Museum, said cost is definitely a limiting factor when student sculptors are deciding on a medium for their work, as well as the size and location.

"A lot of students have to scam," said Munson, who is a graduate student in sculpture. A lot of sculpture material is acquired from government surplus, Munson said. "We get a lot of things from the Boneyard on McLafferty (Road)."

One of Munson's sculptures, "Two Times Square," is being exhibited in the Art Foundry yard. Made of scrap lumber, the work was inexpensive to create. "I spent like $3 on some washers and the rest I scammed," he said.

Having the exhibit yard at the Foundry makes getting art work easier, Munson said. "The Foundry gives students the opportunity to work on large-scale sculpture. It's good experience to get something in the outdoor environment."

EVEN PROFESSIONAL sculptors have problems getting their work displayed. Fredda Brilliant's statue of the late SIU President Morris almost didn't make it to campus. University officials had to struggle to obtain funding to have the bronze work flown from Paris where it was cast.

The statue of Morris was unveiled in Morris Library in 1983, where it stood until 1987, when it was placed outside on the Old Main Mall.

The University Museum has been the leader in bringing modern sculpture to campus. Works by such internationally-acclaimed artists as Ernest Trova and Richard Hunt highlight the collection, which is mostly from SIU-C artists.

Walsh says he considers Trova's work, "Av-Yellow Lazenger," among the best on campus. Trova, who resides in St. Louis, has developed an intimate relationship with the Art Foundry, where many of his works have been cast.

Consultant for Peruvian TV: The culture makes the news

By Tim Crosby
Staff Writer

A University professor who visited Peru on a Fulbright teaching scholarship this summer said culture determines what makes good broadcast news.

William Johnson, a radio and television department faculty member, spent three months lecturing, conducting professional workshops and learning about the Peruvian broadcast industry while in the country this summer.

Johnson, who speaks fluent Spanish, said clear differences exist between broadcasts in the United States and Peru.

"I don't think that's a bad thing," Johnson said. "I didn't go down there to tell them, 'This is the way you have to do it.' Their system works well for their culture. I tried to show them why we do the things we do."

Johnson said one of the main differences is the lack of a news anchor on Peruvian broadcasts.

"They call them announcers instead of anchors," Johnson explained. "They are not journalists, but simply people who read the news."

Johnson said the broadcast personnel were extremely receptive, and encouraged him to make suggestions.

"One thing I tried to get across was better visualization of content," he said, explaining that many times the pictures shown with broadcasts had little to do with the story content.

One of the main differences between broadcasts in the United States and Peru is the lack of a news anchor.

"During a story about economics, they might show a picture of the building involved. I went out with a camera crew and they asked me for suggestions sometimes. We worked on the connection between technique and communication," he said.

Johnson also noted some differences that United States broadcasters might use to improve their programs.

"Our news segments are too short for one thing," Johnson said. "We only have a half hour of national news where they have an hour, or hour-and-a-half. Talk is more important in their culture though."

Besides organizing a workshop in which six of the seven competing broadcast companies in the city of Lima participated, Johnson put together a three-day teleconference between two experts in broadcasting in the United States and five Peruvian panelists. One of the experts in the United States was Ken Keller, another professor in the radio and television department.

"Ken went to Washington especially for the conference. I wanted him because he has been news director or producer at several major stations, including St. Louis and San Antonio."

Polish Communists officially fall

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — The Polish Parliament confirmed Solidarity activist Tadeusz Mazowiecki as prime minister Thursday to lead the Warsaw Pact's first non-communist government, climaxing Solidarity's triumphant rise from an outlawed union to the nation's leadership.

The Sejm, or lower house of Parliament, approved the nomination by President Wojciech Jaruzelski on a 378-4 vote with 41 abstentions, mainly from deputies of the Communist Party.

"I am moved by this moment," Mazowiecki said in a brief acceptance statement. "Thank you for the great proof of trust you showed me. I am aware of the weight of responsibility and the huge tasks confronting me."

The confirmation climaxed the rise of Solidarity from an illegal labor union only four months ago to the leadership of the nation, the first non-communist government since 1947 in Poland and the first in the East Bloc since the communists took control in Czechoslovakia in 1948.

Mazowiecki said he hopes to announce his Cabinet Aug. 31 — the ninth anniversary of the Gdansk accord, which he helped draft, that created the Soviet bloc's first independent trade union — but was not sure whether he could keep that date.

Like thousands of others, Mazowiecki was arrested and detained after the declaration of martial law Dec. 13, 1981, that subsequently outlawed the union.

But he remained in the hierarchy of the union and was in the front lines in a series of strikes in April and August last year that eventually forced the government and the Communist Party to legalize Solidarity on April 17 following crucial talks.

In Gdansk, Solidarity leader Lech Walesa watched the confirmation on television.

Civilian abduction sparks Israeli West Bank manhunt

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israeli soldiers conducted house-to-house searches and maintained curfews in the northwestern West Bank Thursday to find an Israeli abducted by two masked men wielding axes and knives.

The military closed off the area surrounding the West Bank town of Tulkarm and surrounding villages to aid the search for Shaul Mishani, 45, a gold dealer from Bat Yam. Mishani disappeared late Wednesday while collecting debris owed to him by Tulkarm gold dealers, Army Radio reported.

It was not clear whether the abduction was politically motivated, but it was the first time an Israeli civilian had disappeared in such circumstances in the 20-month-old Palestinian uprising. Earlier this year, the disappearance of two soldiers within Israel prompted massive searches that only located the body of one soldier three months after he disappeared.

In a visit to the Tulkarm area, Chief of Staff Dan Shomron told Army Radio the search for Mishani was "being conducted in all the ways possible. We will do our utmost to find him quickly. "We are going from house to house, knocking on every door, going from roof to roof, searching basements," said one soldier involved in the search.

Two masked men armed with knives and axes stopped the taxi Mishani was in late Wednesday, ordered the driver to drive to the outskirts of Tulkarm and forced Mishani out of the car, Army Radio reported. They told the driver, an Israeli Arab, to wait in an alley until they returned, but after two hours the man left and reported the incident to police, the radio said.

In Jerusalem, Israel's High Court upheld the deportation orders against four Palestinians described by officials as prominent leaders of the Palestinian uprising. The exact date when the four — Mahmoud al-Matur, Audeh Ma'ali, Majed Labadi and Dr. Tayasir Aruri — will be deported is not known.

The United States and other countries have condemned deportations, but Israel has expelled more than 50 Palestinians since the uprising began. The High Court consistently upholds deportation orders.

In the village of Eizariya, just east of Jerusalem, authorities investigated the death of a 15-year-old Palestinian after paramilitary Border Police stopped him for questioning late Wednesday.

Palestinian sources said the youth was beaten but an army spokesman said an initial investigation showed the Arab died of natural causes.

At least three other Palestinians were shot and wounded in clashes with soldiers in the Israeli-occupied territories.

Miners try to confront governor

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — A day after the arrests of AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland and United Mine Workers President Richard Trumka, striking Pittston miners returned to the state Capitol to continue efforts to meet face-to-face with Gov. Gerald Baliles.

Capitol police refused to allow the miners to erect tents on the grounds as they did Wednesday after a boisterous union rally that moved from Richmond to southwest Virginia's coal fields. The miners stayed on the capitol grounds until shortly before an 11 p.m. curfew Wednesday.

Police Sgt. David Haywood said the miners could occupy the sidewalks along the capitol grounds as long as they continue walking.

"They have to be marching, they have to continue to stay on the move," Haywood said.

UMW official Rusty Franklin, who organized the peaceful march, protested "harassment" by the authorities for not letting them erect tents.

Baliles was on vacation in Virginia Beach and did not intend to return to the Capitol to meet with the miners, said Chris Bridge, his press secretary.

Some miners took a morning tour of the capitol and some passed out leaflets at Crestar Bank, which is a target of the UMW because of its lending practices with Pittston.

Miners say they want to meet with Baliles to discuss the role of the State Police in the 21-week-old dispute with Virginia's largest coal producer.

PTL partner in crime faces trial next week

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Evangelist Jim Bakker's alleged partner in crime at PTL faced sentencing Thursday in a plea-bargain that calls for him to tell all he knows about the television preacher's wheeling and dealing ways.

Richard Dortch, 58, strolled into U.S. District Court in Charlotte two weeks ago and pleaded guilty to four of 24 counts of mail fraud, wire fraud and conspiracy he and Bakker faced for money-raising schemes at PTL.

"In the last few years, I have had a lot of time for reflection," Dortch said. "I am not proud of myself and I plead guilty."

Both Dortch and Bakker — whose trial starts next week — were facing 120 years in prison if convicted of all the charges against them. But prosecutors have offered Dortch a maximum of 10 years in the federal prison of his choice.

Attorneys close to the case said they expected U.S. District Judge Robert Potter to hand Dortch the full sentence when he appeared in court late Thursday afternoon.

But Rule 35 of the Federal Code allows prosecutors to return to court within 120 days of sentencing and ask for a reduction, provided a defendant has been cooperative.

Prosecutors believe Dortch will cooperate fully in the prosecution of Bakker.

August 25, 1989

MEMORANDUM

TO: University Community
FROM: John C. Guyon John C. Guyon
SUBJECT: Drug-Free Workplace Guidelines/
Drug-Free Awareness Program

On March 13, 1989, Chancellor Pettit distributed to all members of the University community guidelines implementing the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988 (PL 100-690), which requires contractors and grantees of federal agencies to submit a certification that they will provide a drug-free workplace as a precondition for receiving federal funds. Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, as a recipient of federal funds, is required to comply with this legislation.

Pursuant to the requirements of the Drug-Free Workplace Act and the Chancellor's Guidelines, all faculty, staff and students are notified that:

The unlawful manufacture, distribution, dispensation, possession, or use of controlled substances is prohibited on property owned or controlled by the Board of Trustees or in any site where duties of University employment are being performed. Violations of this prohibition will subject employees to disciplinary action in accordance with the applicable personnel policy, law or regulations having the force of law. As a condition of employment for an employee directly engaging the performance of work pursuant to a grant or contract covered by the Drug-Free Workplace Act (PL 100-690), the employee will abide by the above terms and shall notify the University* of any criminal drug statute conviction for a violation thereof not later than five days after such conviction.

*Faculty and staff shall notify the Office of Research Development and Administration. Students shall notify the Financial Aid Office.

In order to further implement the requirements of the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988, the following program/procedures will be in effect:

FACULTY AND STAFF PROGRAM

1. The Personnel Office will administer a Drug-Free Awareness Program as part of the Employee Assistance Program. The program will inform employees about the dangers of drug abuse in the workplace; the University's policy of maintaining a drug-free workplace; the availability of drug counseling, rehabilitation, and the Employee Assistance Program; and the penalties that may be imposed upon employees for drug abuse violations.
2. The Office of Research Development and Administration (ORDA) will carry out the following requirements with regard to employees engaged in the performance of work on Federal grants and contracts:
  - a. Provide each employee to be engaged in the performance of the Federal grant or contract a copy of the statement set forth in paragraph A of the Drug-Free Workplace Guidelines (issued by Chancellor Pettit on March 13, 1989).
  - b. Notify the granting or contracting agency within ten days after receiving notice of a criminal drug statute conviction of an employee engaged in the performance of work pursuant to a grant or contract.
3. Within thirty (30) days of receiving notification of conviction of an employee of a drug violation in the workplace, one or both of the following actions will be taken through appropriate administrative channels:
  - a. In accordance with applicable University personnel policies, impose a disciplinary sanction on such employee, which may include termination of employment.
  - b. Require of such employee the satisfactory participation in a drug abuse assistance or rehabilitation program approved for such purposes by a federal, state or local health, law enforcement or other employment agency.

STUDENT PROGRAM

1. The Financial Aid Office will administer the following requirements with regard to students:
  - a. Obtain proper certification from students receiving Pell Grants. Report miscertification in accordance with Section 668.14(g) of the general provision regulations regarding fraud for any student convicted of a drug offense during the period covered by the Pell Grant.
  - b. Provide each student employee with a copy of the statement set forth in paragraph A of the Drug-Free Workplace Guidelines.
  - c. Notify the U.S. Department of Education of the criminal drug statute conviction of any student engaged in work supported by the agency's funds within ten days after receiving notification of the conviction.
  - d. Direct students convicted of a drug offense to the Wellness Center for participation in the student Drug Awareness Program.

Refer the incident to the Student Life Office which will take appropriate action in accord with established University student disciplinary procedures.

2. The Wellness Center will administer its comprehensive Drug Prevention Program. Students who are referred to the Center will be assessed for the level of involvement with the substance and referred to the agency or the service which will best assist them.

The Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988 makes a public policy commitment to a safer, more productive working environment. Consistent with this policy, Southern Illinois University at Carbondale is committed to maintaining a drug-free workplace. I ask the support and cooperation of all members of the University in complying with these requirements.

Rose: I did my part to get into baseball's Hall of Fame

The suspension of Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose probably won't keep him out of the Hall of Fame.

Because more than 400 members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America are eligible to vote for Hall of Fame candidates, it's impossible to gauge how the suspension will affect their opinion of Rose when he becomes eligible for the Hall in 1992.

But a random poll of several writers Thursday morning indicated that what Rose accomplished on the field will carry more weight than his gambling suspension.

Rose, baseball's all-time hits leader, said Thursday he's not concerned about it.

"I did my part to get into the Hall of Fame," Rose said. "It's up to you people who do the voting ... I can't really worry about something that's not under my control. It works against me because I was never able to tell my side of the story. But I will tell my side of the story before you're ready to vote for the Hall of Fame."

Of the eight guidelines for the writers to base their choices on, only one could trip Rose. Guideline No. 4 says candidates "shall be chosen on the basis of playing ability, integrity, sportsmanship, character, their contribution to the team on which they played and to baseball in general."

Most of the writers contacted Thursday morning said they had no problem with Rose's induction, but they also said they would reserve judgment until all facts are known about the extent of Rose's gambling.

"I think I'd still vote for him because of what he did on the field," said Paul Meyer, who covered the Reds for Dayton Newspapers, Inc., from 1974 through 1986 and currently works for the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

"I think he was a hell of a player, and I guess I'd like to hear what Pete has to say about all these allegations. If it turns out he did in fact bet on the Reds, then I'd probably re-think this. But if they voted today, I'd probably vote for him."

Rick Hummel of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch said the fact the suspension may be lifted by the time Rose is eligible may help.

"I think his chances are still good," Hummel said. "I'm just guessing the suspension might be lifted by the time his name comes up. He's got two more years to go before his name comes up. He didn't do this while he was playing. I would vote for him right now."

Bob Hertz of the Pittsburgh Press covered the Reds for The Cincinnati Enquirer from 1969 through 1978. He said Rose's strong relationship with writers should help him when he becomes eligible for the Hall.

"I think he should go in," Hertz said. "I've got no problem with him going in. I think he's probably a sick puppy who needs some help. I think what he did was dastardly to baseball, but it doesn't detract from what he did on the field."

Earl Lawson, who covered the Red for The Cincinnati Post for 34 years before his retirement in 1984, said he hoped Rose would still be elected to the Hall, but that even if he isn't, there's no way he can be kept out of Cooperstown, N.Y., altogether.

"The guy's had a great career," Lawson said. "You can't take that away from him. Whether he's elected to the Hall of Fame or not, he's going to be there. There's no way they can take his records away from him.

"I still think he belongs in the Hall of Fame."

Jack Lang, secretary of the BBWAA, declined to say how he would vote on Rose.

"I'll have to sit down and do some soul-searching," Lang said. "A lot of stuff will come out between now and 1992. For me to say now would be prejudging him, which is what he accused (commissioner Bart) Giamatti of doing."

Psychologist claims Pete Rose behaves like compulsive gambler

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Banned Cincinnati Reds Manager Pete Rose shows several traits of the compulsive gambler — beginning with denial that he is an addict — a psychologist who has studied Rose through media reports said Thursday.

Compulsive gambling is a mental disorder that cuts across class, age and sex, said Vincent Rinella, director of clinical program development at the Philadelphia Psychiatric Center.

Addicts exhibit common characteristics and Rose, as an athlete with a competitive personality and high energy level, fits a general portrait of a compulsive gambler, Rinella said.

Compulsive gamblers also have a high rate of absenteeism from work, ask others for money, borrow money from illegal sources, avoid paying taxes and have family problems, he said.

Rose allegedly has evaded tax payments on his winnings from gambling.

Rinella, a psychologist and lawyer, said Rose's denials that he is addicted to gambling only conforms to the pattern. "Denial is the hallmark of any addiction," he said.

According to Rinella, the amount of money wagered or lost does not determine compulsive gambling.

"It isn't a matter of gambling $1 million a year. If it gets you into economic or legal trouble, you're a compulsive gambler."

"Beyond these traits, compulsive gamblers are driven by the thrill of having money on the line, or what gamblers call 'action.'"

Angelo S. said his gambling addiction also led him to leave his wife five times while fleeing from loan sharks.

Rinella said the treating of compulsive gamblers has a higher success rate than programs for drug and alcohol addiction.

The Philadelphia Psychiatric Center offers treatment programs on both an in- and out-patient basis which include counseling and therapy and close coordination with Gamblers Anonymous, Rinella said. Legal advice on how to handle debts is also available.

Both Rinella and Angelo S. stress that attendance at Gamblers Anonymous meetings is necessary to treat addiction to gambling.

"When I went to my first meeting, they gave me a book," Angelo S. said.

"It was as if someone had been following me around for years."

The treatment method of Gamblers Anonymous, like Alcoholics Anonymous, focuses on getting gamblers to recognize their addiction and to take responsibility for their actions.

Reds fans don't begrudge Rose

CINCINNATI — Earl Drayer propped himself against the bar and let out a loud cheer when Pete Rose's face flashed across the television screen Wednesday night.

"Go Pete!" he shouted in unison with about 20 others. "He really didn't do anything wrong."

Drayer and others who live in the neighborhood where Rose grew up and learned to play baseball say they will always remember him as the greatest player in the game, despite his banishment for gambling.

Bob Noeth, 48, Pete's stepbrother, played ball with Rose when they were growing up. Noeth said the Rose case has been "taken too far" by commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti and the media.

"I don't think what he did is as bad as lazy people who sit around and take drugs." M o s t of the bar patrons agreed that Rose's off-field problems should not keep the all-time hits leader out of the Hall of Fame.

Others weren't surprised Rose decide to end his court fight by accepting the suspension.

"I think he knew he was dead meat," said Jeff Stevison. "I'm a Reds fan, but what can you say when everyone in town knows he's guilty?"

Despite the gambling allegations and suspension from baseball, Stevison said most fans will remember Rose for his accomplishments on the field. He said money and ego are what brought the Reds manager down.

"Money affected his brain," Stevison said. "But he's still a great athlete. Nobody can take that away from him."

Ken Kuhn said Rose's lengthy legal battle with Giamatti hurt his credibility and cost him support in the community. He said the sentence was the best move for Rose and his supporters.

"I think everybody will be relieved it's finally all over," Kuhn said. "I think people in Cincinnati will always remember him as a great ballplayer, but I'm afraid everyone else will only think of him as a gambler. It's a shame his image has to be tarnished like that."

Pam Petrosky of Southgate, Ky., said she fears the suspension could cost Rose his street — Pete Rose Way — as well as a spot at the Hall of Fame.

"I think it would make people mad if they changed the name of the street or tried to keep him out of the Hall," she said. "Cincinnati wanted him when he was playing baseball. They can't take that away from him now."

reinstatement after one year.
According to the agreement:
■ There will be no further hearing on the matter by Giamatti or the courts.

■ Rose acknowledges the sole and exclusive authority of the commissioner to resolve the case.

■ Rose acknowledges Giamatti acted without bias.

■ Rose neither denies nor admits he bet on big-league games, but acknowledges the commissioner has a "factual basis" for imposing the penalty.

"The banishment for life of Pete Rose from baseball is the end of a sorry episode," Giamatti said. "One of the game's greatest players has engaged in a history of acts which have stained the game, and he must live with the consequences of those acts."

President Bush, vacationing in Kennebunkport, Maine, said of the Rose announcement, "As a baseball fan, it's very interesting."

Former baseball executive Buzzy Bavasi said punishment was called for.

"When it comes to baseball, I'm a purist," he told San Diego radio station KSDO.

Browns look to overcome also-ran status this season

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The Cleveland Browns like to brag about their number of playoff appearances.

Since they joined the league in 1950, the Browns have appeared in the playoffs 21 times, tying the Los Angeles Rams for the most post-season appearances in NFL history.

The important number to the Browns and owner Art Modell is not 21. It's 25, which is the number of years that has passed since Cleveland last won an NFL championship.

The team has made the playoffs six times in the 1980s but three of the worst moments in team history followed. "The Pass," "The Drive" and the "The Fumble" still haunt the team and its fans.

The Browns are so eager to reach the Super Bowl that they let Coach Marry Schottenheimer go after he led the team to four straight playoff appearances.

In his place is Bud Carson, the longtime NFL defensive assistant who is getting his first head coaching job at age 58. He takes over a team with the best record in the AFC the past three years but one that appeared to slip in 1988.

The Browns, after three straight Central Division crowns, went 10-6 and lost in the wild card game to the Houston Oilers. With the AFC Central shaping up as one of the top divisions in football, Carson has his work cut out for him.

"I want us to have a team with backbone, with players that get after people," Carson said. "I want to be able to blow people off the line of scrimmage. I don't want to have to throw on third-and-one. I want this team to have a tough personality."

That is exactly the kind of talk the players and fans like to hear.

Carson is replacing the 3-4 defense with an aggressive 4-3 front with a main goal of getting more pressure on the quarterback. The move to four down linemen should benefit second-year man Michael Dean Perry the most, as his quickness gives him an advantage in the interior of the line.

The rest of the line however, is a question mark. Veterans Al "Bubba" Baker and Carl "Big Daddy" Hariston have looked good in training camp, and free agent signee Robert Banks, second-year player Van Waiters and rookie Anthony Stewart should contribute at end.

Linebacking is solid, and the secondary has good depth and a new look. Three-time Pro Bowler Hanford Dixon will play at free safety, with Felix Wright moving to strong safety and wither Anthony Blaylock or Kerry Glenn taking Dixon's cornerback spot.

Offensively, quarterbacks coach Mark Trestman has been promoted to offensive coordinator, and the Browns shipped out Ernest Byner and Herman Fontenot in an attempt to add speed to the offense. They traded up to get running back Eric Metcalf but he is unsigned, as is second-round choice Lawyer Tillman, the receiver from Auburn the Browns traded a No. 1 pick to get.

With Metcalf holding out, tailback is a question mark. Free agent Keith Jones and Tony Baker, who carried three times last year, are the leading candidates to start. Kevin Mack is the fullback but he will stand trial Sept. 18 on drug charges.

The offensive line played poorly last year as the Browns went through four starting quarterbacks. Pass protection must improve if Bernie Kosar is to stay healthy and the line must improve its run blocking with the hard-blocking Byner gone and the offense featuring smaller backs.

Tight end Ozzie Newsome is back for his 12th and final season with the assurance that he will be an important part of the offense.

Carson was with the Steelers when they won their first two Super Bowls but unfortunately the Browns don't have Joe Greene, Jack Ham, Jack Lambert or Mel Blount.

The Browns are strong in some areas, questionable in others. How the offensive and defensive lines come together will determine the success of Carson's first season.

Redskins' Doug Williams scheduled for back surgery

CARLYLE, Pa. (UPI) — Washington Redskins quarterback Doug Williams is scheduled to undergo surgery Friday to correct a herniated disc in his lower back and will be sidelined at least eight weeks, the club announced Thursday.

Williams, 34, injured his back during an offseason workout on a treadmill and missed all of the club's training camp at Dickinson College.

Williams, entering his 10th NFL season, will be operated on by neurosurgeon Dr. Bruce Ammerman, a consulting physician with the team, at Sibley Memorial Hospital, according to a statement released by the club.

The quarterback's injury was identified after doctors at Sibley performed a medical procedure

Wednesday in which dye was injected into his spinal cord and he was X-rayed to determine whether there was spinal-column or spinal-cord damage. The injury initially was believed to be a nerve root irritation.

He will spend four to seven days recovering in the hospital, then will be sidelined up to 10 weeks. The Redskins could place the quarterback on the non-football-related illness-injury reserve list as early as next Tuesday.

Williams spent 10 days in the hospital earlier this month receiving traction therapy on his back.

Mark Rypien already has been named the team's starting quarterback for the regular season opener Sept. 11 against the

New York Giants.

Meanwhile, the team reportedly was seeking to trade veteran defensive tackle Dean Hamel, who walked out of camp Aug. 7. Hamel spoke with coach Joe Gibbs by telephone Wednesday night and Thursday morning and told reporters that the team is trying to trade him rather than let him return.

Gibbs would not confirm that the team is seeking to trade Hamel, who has played four seasons with the Redskins and was in line to inherit the starting tackle spot vacated by the retired Dave Butz.

"Things just aren't resolved," Gibbs said. "I talked again this morning with him and we're just going to continue to try to work that out."

Western Illinois seeks to repeat as Gateway Conference champs

MACOMB (UPI) — Can senior Gene Benhart do for Western Illinois at quarterback what Paul Singer did the last three seasons?

If so, the Leathernecks could win their second consecutive Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference football title. If not, they'll probably finish about third, which is where they were picked in a preseason poll of conference coaches.

This is likely to be a football season at WIU filled with passion and perspective. Coach Bruce Craddock, heading into his seventh season, is battling liver and stomach cancer that was diagnosed last spring.

"He hasn't missed a practice yet and he's regained most of the 40 pounds he lost in the spring," said WIU Sports Information Director

Larry Heimburger.

Craddock, 37-28-1 in six seasons, has been the conference coach of the year the last two seasons and was the Kodak Division I-AA coach of the year last season in the Midwest.

The Leathernecks, 10-2, and 6-0 in conference play in 1988, suffered only one conference loss in two seasons behind Singer, who was drafted by the Atlanta Falcons of the NFL. He was one of four Leathernecks drafted. Also picked were defensive end Marlin Williams, guard Ron Nesbitt and fullback Brett Grimshaw.

"I don't think Benhart will throw as much as Singer, but I'm sure he will run more," Heimburger said of the 6-foot-5, 215-pound quarterback from the Chicago area.

Western returns eight starters on offense and six on defense.

Besides Benhart, the key offensive players are senior running back Michael Cox, and wide receiver Steve Williams. Cox rushed last season for 435 yards and nine touchdowns, and Williams caught 53 passes for 872 yards.

The offensive line is beefy, led by two returning starters — Brian Rebac (6-5, 315) and Shawn Matraw (6-4, 230) and the leading lineman will be Rich Ruether (6-2, 265).

The kicking game is probably as good as any in NCAA Division I-AA, Heimburger said. It will feature punter Mike Krause, who averaged 40.9 yards last season, and kicker Layne Bennett.

Rose banished from baseball for life

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pete Rose, whose slashing singles and head-first slides once made him the very embodiment of baseball, Thursday was banished for life by Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti, ending a gambling scandal that has shadowed the game for six months.

Baseball's all-time hit leader may apply for reinstatement in a year but no major leaguer, most notably members of the 1919 Chicago "Black Sox," has won such a reprieve.

Saying he believed Rose bet on Reds games, Giamatti insisted he had upheld the power and mandate of his office to maintain baseball's integrity. In Cincinnati, where his wife Carol gave birth to a daughter Tuesday, the former Reds manager denied gambling on baseball or having a gambling problem.

"I made some mistakes and I'm being punished for those mistakes," said Rose, whose job as manager terminated with the signing of the agreement at 3 p.m. Wednesday. "The settlement is fair."

"My life is baseball. I hope to get back into baseball as soon as I possibly can. Regardless of what the commissioner said today, I did not bet on baseball. That's all I can say."

Standing before a major-league logo that was framed appropriately enough in funeral black, Giamatti set no timetable for Rose's reinstatement. He said the burden was on Rose to show a "redirected, reconfigured, rehabilitated life."

Giamatti stressed there was no evidence Rose bet against his club. He also said any decision on Rose's Hall of Fame credentials belonged to the Baseball Writers' Association of America. Voting guidelines for the Hall of Fame include the issue of integrity.

"There is no deal," Giamatti said. "There is a standing major-league rule on the subject. It is not Pete Rose's rule. It is not Bart Giamatti's rule. There is no automaticity. There is no guarantee."

The ban goes into effect immediately, with the Reds naming Tommy Helms as the team's new manager. Rose, 48, may not hold any job under major-league jurisdiction, whether as an official or broadcaster.

So marked an apparent end to what has become baseball's biggest scandal since Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis ruled members of the "Black Sox" conspired to throw the World Series. Ironically, Chicago's opponent that year was Cincinnati.

With emotion he has not shown since he broke Ty Cobb's career hit record Sept. 11, 1985, the man once known as Charlie Hustle told a separate news conference in Cincinnati: "As you can imagine, this a very sad day. I've been in baseball three decades and to think I'm going to be out of baseball for a very short period of time hurts."

But there is no guarantee of a brief absence. Under major-league Rule 21, a player or manager betting on games involving his own team shall be declared "permanently ineligible." Rule 15 (c) allows a banished figure to apply for

Volleyball's alumni return for matchup

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

The Salukis Volleyball Team with host their annual alumni match at 2 p.m. Sept. 3 in Davies Gym.

Coach Patti Hagemeyer commented that this year's roster includes approximately 21 alumni returners.

"This is an annual affair, they've done it every year and it has been real successful," she said.

The alumni come from various places. Coach Hagemeyer said that some of them are coaching high school volleyball.

"But, a lot of them are returners from the last three to four years. There will be a few here and there from an earlier year," Hagemeyer said.

"The whole weekend is planned with things for the alumni to do. Weather permitting, they will play beach volleyball on Saturday. They will probably get nice and sore before the match on Sunday," she said.

A banquet will be held after the match.

Coach Hagemeyer said that this is her team's first real game this year.

"In fact, that's the first time we'll have had a team together as far as a starting line-up. And it will give me chance to see what they can do six on six," she said.

She also said that it's exciting to see the returners and that she's interested because she hasn't meet a lot of the alumni.

"The older kids know some of the people that have been out the last three years, but it's always fun for the younger kids to see who some of the older alumni are," she said.

The games will be run with the alumni rotating in and out periodically. "They've told me that their so old that they'll need a break. We're going to let each take their shot at us. We'll play five games no matter what," she said.

The match starts at 2 p.m. and is free and open to the public.

Women golfers' top priority winning conference tourney

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

SIU-C women's golf coach Diane Daugherty promises plenty of intra-squad competition for the top roster positions in the upcoming golf season.

Daugherty, entering her fourth season with the Salukis, looks to improve the team's second-place finish in the Gateway Conference Championship in the spring. Illinois State won the championship last year.

"We have a real tough schedule and stiff competition," Daugherty said. "Our main goal of the year is to get the championship back."

The women's golf team has captured the conference championship three times in this decade, the latest one coming in 1988. Also in the same year, Julie Shumaker walked away with the individual championship title.

Daugherty hopes her three seniors, Shumaker, Lisa Meritt and Lisa Johnson will provide the leadership needed to return the championship to SIU-C.

"We have a real strong nucleus. Besides our three seniors, there are three returning sophomores who have a year experience under their belt," Daugherty said.

"I expect a lot of inner-squad competition. It's going to be hard to determine our top six players," Daugherty said. "Our freshmen will really push everyone else. I'm pleased with the way everyone prepared over the summer."

Daugherty refers to her incoming freshmen, Kimberly Haywood of Evansville, Ind, and Elizabeth Kozlowski of Valparaiso, Ind, as highly talented.

"Haywood comes to us with great experience. Among her many accomplishments, she finished second in the Indiana state high school tournament," Daugherty said.

"Beth comes to us from a great golfing family," Daugherty said. "Her sister Tina was our No. 1 golfer two years ago."

The team's first competition will be Sept. 16-17 at the 29th annual Illinois State Invitational in Normal. The competition for the top six spots on the team will begin Sept. 7 with the first of four 18-hole qualifying rounds.

Saluki defensive coordinator doing well after heart surgery

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

Gerry Hart, SIU-C football's defensive coordinator, should be back home within a week and back with the team within a month following heart surgery Tuesday in St. Louis, head coach Bob Smith said.

The 54-year-old graduate of the University began feeling ill shortly before the practice season began and originally thought he had the flu, Fred Huff, men's sports information director, said.

When Hart did not begin to feel better, he went in for tests, Huff said.

Hart has been spirited since the operation and has been joking with relatives.

Until Hart is able to return to the practice field, Stanley King, defensive backs coach, and Ralph Young, defensive line coach, will share the defensive coaching duties.

Smith said King will ultimately have the responsibility of preparing the team's game plan for its first game against Nevada-Reno Sept. 2.

Hart, a native of West Frankfort, spent the last six seasons coaching in the Canadian Football League before joining Smith and the Salukis.

Hart had coached at the University prior to this season. In 1963 he was hired as the quarterback coach and coached current Athletic Director Jim Hart for three seasons.

Cubs acquire pitcher

CHICAGO (UPI) — In an effort to strengthen their middle relief, the Chicago Cubs Thursday acquired lefthanded reliever Paul Assenmacher from the Atlanta Braves for two minor league players to be named later, a Cubs spokesman said.

Assenmacher, 28, was 1-3 with no saves and a 3.59 ERA.
