Alexander refuses to sign bill rescinding Uhuru Sa-Sa funds

By Diana Penner

Legislation passed last week by the Student Senate reducing funding for the editors of the Uhuru Sa-Sa, the Black Affairs Council newspaper, will be taken by the student body president.

Undergraduate Student Organization President Pete Alexander said Monday that he will not sign the bill passed by the senate last week. The bill gives the editors of the Uhuru Sa-Sa grants-in-aid rather than the original $1,465 approved for the spring term.

Alexander said he will not sign the bill because he does not approve of rescinding funding after parties have been given money and have budgeted the year's activities based on the senate allocations.

However, Alexander said that because BAC representatives have expressed concerns that even less money would be approved if the subject is considered by the senate again, he decided to let the legislation be implemented although he does not approve of it.

The president has five working days after legislation is passed by the senate to either sign or veto it. If neither action is taken, the legislation automatically takes effect.

The last week passed a bill giving the editors of the paper grants-in-aid of $480 each. The bill also stipulates that the difference between the original funding and the grants-in-aid be given to the BAC for programming.

According to Janice Benson, chairwoman of the senate Finance Committee, the recommendation of the committee was to give the editors grants-in-aid and return the balance of the original allocation to the Student Organization Activity Fund.

At last week's senate meeting, however, that bill was pulled and replaced by the one passed by the senate.

About 35 BAC members attended last week's senate meeting to protest the senate's decision to rescind the original allocation.

Busch halts attempt to burn effigy, flag

By Leanne Waxman

When told that he would not be allowed to burn a cardboard Iranian flag and effigy of the Ayatollah on campus Monday afternoon, a sitting Illinois executive resident, ripped the flag in two, beat the effigy on the ground until it was destroyed, dragged himself in an American flag and walked among about seven other demonstrators.

Travor Bussey, a freshman in math and science, and a Wilson Hall re-decent, cited the story of Monday's small protest near the south end of the hall in an attempt to make the world a safer place to live in.

The demonstrators, led by Bussey, walked off in the direction of the overpass after Bussey rapped words for about 10 minutes with Tom Busch, assistant to the vice president of student affairs. Bussey then continued his protest on the ground.

Bussey planned to burn the effigy along with an Iranian flag that he had stolen.

Bussey became agitated—screaming, "You don't understand!"—after Busch persisted that Bussey would not be allowed to burn the flag or the effigy, and ripped the cardboard Iranian flag in half, threw it on the ground and walked among the protestors standing by, yelling, "burn it Trav, burn it!" Bussey asked to speak to Student Chancellor Kenneth Shaw but was told that Shaw was unavailable.

Then again warned by Busch that it was against University policy to ignite an open fire on Illinois, Michael Richard Oltidl, a senior, said, "They (Iran) take our wheat, use our universities and what do we get, nothing but shit. Can't you realize that?!" After Busch began to respond, Bussey quickly knocked the Styrofoam head of the newspaper-stuffed facsimile of Khomenei—which was precint on a wooden stem—and beat the painted head into small pieces. Then he proceeded to beat the rest of the effigy on the ground until it was destroyed.

The small group of demonstrators carried placards which read, "The world condemns Khomenei," and "Free our people in Iran!"

According to Busch, one must secure a permit from the State Fire Department to burn an open fire on University property. Also, the University must obtain a permit to burn an open fire from the Environmental Protection Agency. An EPA permit is also necessary for burning homecoming bonfires, Busch said.

Assistant City Attorney Betty Burnt of the Carbondale City Code prohibits open fires within the city limits if the intent of the fire is not conducted by public officials, intended for or intended for recreational purposes.

According to Burnt, the City Code prohibits open fires on the Carbondale except for the three days before the homecoming.

Busch said the University was not aware of any attempt by the demonstrators to obtain a permit to demonstrate on the left.

After dragging himself in an American flag, Bussey led the demonstrators away and said to Busch, "You'll die a sad man."

Neither Bussey, nor the other demonstrators would comment further on the incident.

Police charge 13 with fake ID, alcohol violations

By Bill Crowe

Police Chief Ed Hogan said the arrests were part of a "normal police policy" and not the beginning of a crackdown on such violations. However, he did express an interest in the efficiency of ID-checking procedures at local bars.

Hogan placed part of the blame for the trend on the bar owners.

"Obviously the proprietors of the establishments are not closely checking ID cards," Hogan said. "It's becoming increasingly apparent that the sole responsibility for enforcing this law lies with the police."

Hogan added that the police "get little or no cooperation from anyone else" when attempting to enforce such laws.

Four arrests for such violations were made Thursday night. Laurie Ann Walker of Baldwin Hall was arrested at Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois. Sally Ruth Barlow of Chicago was arrested and charged with the same offense at Sgt. T. J. McFly's, 315 S. Illinois.

Andrea Ilene Silver and Kathryn Lynn Nardecchia, both of Schneider Hall, were also arrested at Sgt. T. J. McFly's Thursday night, charged with underage acceptance and on an additional charge of use of a fake ID.

Michael Richard Oltidl, 511 N. Illinois, was arrested on the 200 block of South Illinois Avenue Friday morning and charged with underage acceptance.

Three additional arrests were made by police Friday night. One of the arrested was Kent Garvey Watson, 600 W. Freeman, who was charged with underage acceptance and use of fake identification at Gatsby's, 600 W. Freeman.

Four arrests for underage acceptance and use of false IDs were made Saturday morning at Gatsby's. Arrested and charged were: Dawn Nanette Christen and Debra Lynn Duff, both of 600 W. Freeman, and Jacob Denton Gills, and Michael A. Albert, both of Jerseyville.

Bradley Thomas Antonioe of Carbondale also arrested Saturday morning and charged with underage acceptance and use of fake ID at Sgt. T. J. McFly's.
Senate districts add little to balanced representation

By Karen Gaillo
Staff Writer
Editor's note: This is the third in a series of articles on the SIU-C student government.

Although the process of electing student senators by geographical areas has been used by SIU-C student government organizations since 1936, it apparently contributes little to balanced representation of undergraduates living on- and off-campus.

Thirty years ago, students were required to live on-campus regardless of their age or year in school. Today, about 10,000 SIU-C undergraduates live off-campus, according to Pat McNeil, director of off-campus housing. Several thousand students have moved since last spring, they do not know who their student senators are. Since seniors currently live far from geographical areas and are not seated until the following semester, the people they represent may have moved into another district. The senators that students vote for one semester may not be the same senators that represents them the next semester because of the frequent moves made by students each year.

The four districts consist of two on-campus areas: East Campus, which includes University Park and South Towers, and Thompson Point. The two off-campus areas, the East Side and West Side are defined as the areas east and west of Illinois Avenue. The constituents of West Side senators includes students in Small Group Housing (on-campus), west Carbondale and Murphysboro. East Side senators represent students from east Carbondale, Carbi- bra, Marion and West Carville.

A survey taken by the Daily Egyptian last year showed that out of 250 students surveyed, only 5 percent could correctly identify their representatives in the student senate.

A proposal was introduced last year by Sam Dunning, executive assistant to then-"field of interest."

News Analysis

Blankenship said she didn't know what method would give most representation because no other method has ever been tried at SIU-C.

"I'm wondering what the possibilities of representation by school could be. It has definite strengths and it's been talked about every year, but it's never been taken up by the senate," she said.

She said she feels the senate is very representative of the student body. There have never been any problems there.

"The geographical districts method allows for people on-campus to be represented and we get a better picture of student life on-campus," Blankenship said.

"Representation by college would be good for people who don't live within a district in Carbondale. It would let people be represented by someone in their field of interest."

U.S. has won NATO approval of new missiles, source says

By Arthur Gavash
AP Diplomatic Correspondent

PONTIAC, Belgium (AP) - U.S. officials have won NATO approval to base hundreds of new missiles in Western Europe, senior diplomatic sources and Monday at a conference of alliance foreign and defense ministers.

Official endorsement is expected Wednesday, the third day of the conference, for the continental plan that has been controversial within the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies.

Under the plan, the Tomahawk cruise missile will be deployed in Mediterranean Europe, but the U.S. has offered to withdraw the cruise missile in exchange for a weapons deal with France.

The possibility that the cruise missile will remain in the Mediterranean is still in doubt.

Khomeini blasts ‘bad’ Carter

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, grappling with the greatest challenge yet to his rule, angrily blamed President Carter on Monday, internal unrest and advised Americans to vote against the re-election of their “bad president.”

Khomeini virtually dared the “brainless” United States to try to organize an international economic embargo against Iran.

For the first time, American officials indicated they had reason to believe that some of the hostages may have been moved from the embassy to other, unknown locations.

Foreign aid shift backed by Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter endorsed on Monday shifting the focus of U.S. aid from supplying arms to reducing world hunger, which he was told could become more serious than the energy crisis.

Carter said he was “very excited and pleased” by a commission report which urged the United States to double food aid to underdeveloped nations.

Carter also said he was ready to make additional contributions to the United Nations’ food program.

U.S. to withdraw nuclear missiles

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The United States will probably withdraw some 1,900 tactical nuclear missiles from Western Europe in response to the Soviet Union’s planned troop reduction in East Germany.

316,000 raised for Cambodian aid

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — The 28-county Roman Catholic diocese of Springfield said Monday it has raised a record $100,000 in charity for a special collection to aid starving Cambodian refugees.

Bishop Joseph A. McNicholas, head of the central and Southern Illinois Catholic diocese headquartered here, said it was the most money ever raised for a special collection, and more than three times the $29,000 in Cambodian relief it pledged.

Academic programs sometimes disappear from the University bulletin from one year to the next. Courses in which there is no interest suffer from academic neglect and taxpayers who do not have the necessary support to justify their continued existence must be dropped.

In private enterprise too, survival of the fittest is the law of the marketplace.

It is interesting then that SIU-C, in particular its Office of University Relations, continues to peddle a product with a limited market as if it were the crust of the University's survival.

The Board of Trustees is being asked to approve a $10 increase in the student fee supporting athletics. The board is being asked to retrieve the athletics revenues from potential collapse. The Intercollegiate Athletics Committee is being asked to rubber stamp an administration proposal to tap an easy source of money.

Meanwhile, the University community is being asked to swallow a tax increase of $10 per student to support athletics. The line is that the $10 fee increase will satisfy Title IX requirements, stave off the effects of inflation and cover miscalculations in enrolment.

If the increase is approved, no one is certain what compliance with Title IX ultimately will require much less whether the requirements with the $10 fee are met. The $10 fee from the students' pockets by the increase, the athletics budget will still be far short of the funds that the athletics directors say they need to run quality programs.

George Mace, vice president for University relations and the spearhead of the drive to increase the fees, wants SIU-C to have a quality program. At the same time, he wants SIU-C to maintain NCAA Division I-A status by adding 12th sport and he wants students from a large base of other schools to become interested in the program.

But the fee increase is not the real issue; the need for an increase to support sports is just a technicality. The principal question that needs to be addressed by the administration, the faculty and students is: What do we want from an athletics program?

Mace says he wants an athletics program that will enhance the "corporate image" of the University. He wants to bring television cameras and sports reporters from around the Midwest to Saluki games. Mace wants for the University the prestige he's derived from other sports. "The great football programs, a whole stable of top-notch coaches," are respected in academia despite terrible records in football. They are, apparently, deviations from the norm by which some people measure prestige.

But what does the rest of the University want? Does the administration want to saddled with an athletics program that will be a constant source of fiscal crisis and controversy?

No one has asked the faculty if they mind that the athletics program will receive a special mid-year allocation of money that might otherwise be available for academic purposes. Faculty salaries and teaching facilities are deteriorating while the public relations budget for sports is increasing.

Nor have the students, who will pay more than $1 million per year in athletics fees if the board approves Mace's proposal, been asked if the program is worth the price.

Acting President Hiram Lesar made a succinct, if understated, appeal at the situation at the beginning of the fall semeser when he said: "We ought to examine our present philosophy concerning the kind of intercollegiate athletics program this University should support. A support is a question. This is a group of determination by the entire University community."

Lesar is right. The time to address the issue is now, before a fee increase is approved and before the University commits itself to a path it cannot follow.

Film's originality hurt by crudity

In a certain media class on Tuesday, Nov. 30, the class was treated to two home-made films which were final projects for the class. One film portrayed people's relations to media in a humorous way. The other film was excellent. In it, the class was treated to a close-up of a male dachshund's genitalia. The maker of the film bent over backwards to get a "moon" shot of himself in the film. There were allusions to masturbation, the elimination of feces and the urinating process. I am sure the film taught a lot about the media.

I thought the student did an excellent job of defining the film. He stated the angle of the shot, the cost of the film and other personal information. He neglected to mention what the content had to do with the project.

If I was pleased to let the Film-maker know that I am indeed offended. Perhaps I'll get a chuckle out of that.

If the film was as liberal as he seems, I am sure that he would not have been offended by this poem. This will open up the discussion also, because I write poetry.

If you want to show your butt be sure you've got some class. "Just because you can't cook, doesn't mean you're a rut. And your brain is up yours--"

I've always wanted to offend someone who believes that anything goes. It always seemed when I was getting lectured for my beliefs that someone was not letting me "do my own thing." And if the Film-maker, please be more sensitive of other's feelings. Crudity is not an originality for a name.

Charges by Iranians raise some questions

In regards to the Message of Dr. Bani Saheb, which appeared in the Daily Egyptian on Nov. 30, I would like to question some things.

First of all, I would ask what proof that the Iranians can agree on a "fair" charge that the U.S. Embassy was "an important administration and espionage center in our world." The fact that the Ayatollah says it is so is not proof, but only an indication that the Ayatollah has no concept of the responsibility required of a world leader.

Second, the claim that the return of the Shah would be "a great victory for you Americans" is preposterous. If the U.S. government yielded to these terrorist tactics, no American would be safe from similar actions. In addition to this, the claim that the Shah would receive a fair trial is out of the question.

Third, why have the Iranians permitted "37 years of betrayal, crime and corruption" before taking action. The Shah must have done something to have the right to prevent an earlier overthrow.

It is not within my rights to judge the Shah. Neither is it the right of the Iranian people to peace and hold the American Embassy. The Iranians have by-passed all international laws, and instead, have chosen to obey American laws of their rights and freedom. This is these rights of law and freedom which are essential to the American way of life. We should not allow them to be jeopardized.

Continuous snacking unsafe for campus

It is not often that I am incited to respond to an article in the Daily Egyptian, but the "Touch of Nature" column on preparation for winter sports by Debbie Sugarman (Dec. 9) has compelled me to comment. I strongly disagree with her attitude and advice on foods for campers. That outdoor experience is too important to be "watered down" on certain foods such as "Veggie Sticks," "fruit and cracker bars," "granola bars," and "breads" is not only illogical, but unhealthy.

In winter, a properly clad person can lose heat at a rapid rate, and a slight increase in caloric intake to maintain homeostomy (constant body temperature). In severe weather, active people could specifically qualify their consumption as hunger dictates.

Compulsive overeating is already rampant in this country, as evidenced by the statistics for obesity and its close associate, morose, diabeties. Diabetes (the effects) now ranks among the number two killer among our people.

The disease is not fully understood yet the present time, but we do know this much: "continuous snacking" on the sugar-rich foods that Debbie insists are "macaroly for campers is unsanitary.

I'm certainly not a health food fanatic, nor do I wish to tell people what to eat. My intention is to suggest that a parent in an influential position should be aware of the foods that are not supported by scientific fact.

As a graduate student in theater, I wish to correct the snide implications Kurt Boyle made in the DE of Tue., Dec. 7.

The theater department is not filled with faggots in pink tutus with frills. They are all in the dance department.

The faggots in the theater department are the ones who dress in dance costumes and who try to emulate the Village People. They would be caught dead in pink tights. Furthermore, they do not recite poetry. They have enough trouble with prose.

I trust that in the future Mr. Boyle will get his facts straight. Really!

SIU honorary group inducts 23 members

By Carrie Sweeney
Student Writer

The Sphinx Club has inducted 23 new members into the honorary organization according to Jim Karas, club president.

The 19 undergraduates and two graduate students were chosen on the basis of their academic standing and involvement in extracurricular activities. In addition, two non-student honorary members were inducted for their community contributions.

Founded in 1920, the club has become the oldest honorary society to recognize a student's involvement in campus and community activities, as well as his or her outstanding scholarship, Karas said.

"The Sphinx Club is one way of showing gratitude to students who involve themselves with organizations outside of class, such as Student Government, fraternities, sororities and resident hall activities," Karas said.

A new Flood Insurance Rate Map has been designed for Carbondale, according to James Rayfield, director of city planning.

Under the new program, the maximum coverage for structures has been increased to $185,000 and $60,000 for contents. Rates for both structures and contents are on an actuarial rates system, based on the probabilities of flood damage. The Federal Emergency Management Agency, a weekend of this year, the Sphinx Club celebrated its 40th anniversary as a recognized student organization. Since its formation, over 1,000 members have been inducted, including Walter Frazier, Acting SIU-C President Hiram Lesar, all University vice presidents and Guy Bode. Karas said.

"We hope the club will become a mean, to draw alumni back to SIUC and to keep them actively involved in the University," he said.

The 1979 Sphinx Club inductees are: Undergraduates - Dana Albertini, Amy Biggs, Blanca Bressett, Cynthia Burgens, Gary Dowdalls, Mark Duerer, Sue Grozek, Nicholas Gritti, Donna Kunkel, Janet LaPlana, Dennis McMillian, Derek Moore, Theresa Peters, Zebra Quantock, Nancy Torrino, Tom Treling, Tammy Whitten, Mark Yoder, Ronda Zucco; graduate students - Gail Karl and Charles Martelle; and honoraries - William Doerr, Kay M. Cablevision plans fund-raiser to aid starving Cambodians

The SIU Division of Pollution Control recently completed a semiannual 24-hour sewage monitoring on campus in order to give students hands-on experience in the techniques as well as to provide the results to the city.

Pollution Control Director John Meister said the sample were collected every two hours by volunteers and were analyzed in the lab for content of minerals and solids. He said suspended solids and biochemical oxygen demand were the two most important measures which determine the type and kind of sewage treatment. BOD is a measure of organic waste in water. Meister said the test results will be made available to the Carbondale Illinois Sewage System for their use in the planning and treatment of sewage. Quality as well as quality was measured, and Meister said the results predictably revealed that the time between 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. had the greatest sewage flow but, "You would be surprised how much sewage is generated on campus in 2 a.m."

Cris Jensen, junior in economics, was one of the volunteers for cablethon. He explained the process: "We first opened the manages covers and dropped a ruler to measure the quantity of flow. Then we dropped a container to gather a sample for the lab.

Cablevision plans fund-raiser to aid starving Cambodians

By Cindy Humphreys

Staff Writer

Cablevision is raising money to aid the suffering people in Cambodia is being sponsored by Cablevision in January. "The extensive news coverage of the refugee has made people more aware of the problem and perhaps more willing to give," Cablevision's Program Director Deb Taylor said. "I thought the Cambodian problem needs some local attention," she said, "and that it would be a good idea to have a cablethon."

The cablethon will be held from 6 p.m. to midnight on Jan. 25, at various churches will be h.ing up local talent to fill up those three minutes.

Dickens’ classic comes to life

By M. Francis Jaeger
Students Writer

Viewing Friday night’s performance of Charles Dickens’ "A Christmas Carol," drew memories of the Ring-a-lone Jessa, and on a silver tower. The faithful resolution of the Christmas season, followed by the performances of Darrell Reed Payne’s direction, the University Theater lit up like a Christmas tree in joyous celebration of the holiday. Timothy J. Brown gave an excellent performance as Ebenezer Scrooge.

A Review

Ebenezer Scrooge. His transformation from the humbugging, embodiment of holiday generosity was amusing and exciting. He fully understood the crumble, as well as comic, possibilities of the role. Payne’s scenic design was impressive. With surprising versatility, the set creatively met all the challenges of a script which moves through time and space. All of the indoor scenes took place on a sliding wall which became Scrooge’s office, his apartment and the Cratchit home. The lighting, designed by Lang Reynolds, was excellent. As Scrooge left his office Christmas Eve the enchantment and excitement it would leave on an air of the supernatural as the bowing wind reached a ghostly crescendo. Both the heartwarming and eerie moments of the play were successful. The Christmas party at Mr. Fezziwig’s was delightfully happy. The exciting entrance of the Jolly Spirit of Christmas Past, breathlessly played by Elias Elahi, was well choreographed, and more than one audience stifled a tear at the holiday spirit the memory spirit set before Scrooge.

Community service programs featured on WSIU Thursday

"Services Available," a half-hour program detailing the community services offered by the SIUC Speech and Hearing Clinic, Dental Hygiene Clinic and the Alcohol Awareness Project of the Wellness Resource Center, will be aired at 8 p.m. Thursday as this week’s segment of WSIU-TV’s "SIUC Today." Diana Haviga, the program’s executive producer, said the three services were selected because they are available to the Southern Illinois community, as well as the University.

"We try to gear programs to the overall community," she said.

"Services Available," will be produced by Karen Starwich, a student in radio and television. Like other installments of "SIUC Today," it will be done in a magazine format. But Haviga said that the show will be filmed remotely with less studio production.

The program will concentrate on the services offered to community residents by the three institutions. In addition, it will include a feature on the Dental Hygiene Department’s clinic on wheels.

Watchmaker David Low examines a piece of a watch on his workbench. Low, who operates a small shop on South Illinois Avenue in Carbondale, has been in the business for 25 years.

Tiny parts and tools are scattered around the three-old wooden counters in the shop. On one of the counters, the wall decorations are displayed under the smoke. Two clocks, a large and a small, are proped up in the shop behind the glass. Within 1 pass away. In fact, it wouldn't be unusual to lose watches and clocks repair. It would be good service. Pappelis shows polish, talent

By Jordan Gold

Staff Writer

Joni Pappelis looks at her audience with the innocence of a comedian. This isn’t the face you see on her, though. She has a more serious look on her face, as if she were trying not to fall asleep.

Pappelis was one of the most polished performers on the evening. She seemed at ease with the audience, at least in the first set, tossing ad-lib into the mix and making it appear natural. She even showed off her ability to entertain, combined with her musical abilities, for a very successful show.

During her version of Joni Mitchell’s “Both Sides, Now,” Pappelis tossed into a very funny ad-lib. After the line “and they all laughed at me,” she added, “I guess I’m edgy.” The audience laughed heartily.

Other highlights of the evening included a song called “The Porch Song.” A combination of almost classical accompaniment and such lyrics as “to know the sun and see the moon,” the song was about sitting on a porch and thinking.

Pappelis offered some “wide-eyed rock ‘n’ roll” with her version of Dylan’s “All Along the Watchtower.” She played a quick, upbeat version of the song just as swiftly, all the while looking at the audience with wide eyes.

After the first set, Pappelis invited the audience to stay for the second. As a result, the crowd for the second set was large. This seemed to make Pappelis ill at ease, as she didn’t talk as much as she did during the first set.

Pappelis offered some “I’m not really sure” for the encore. She sang a version of Mitchell’s “For Free” along with Randy Newman’s “Sigmund Freud” and the “International Coffeehouse” of Albert Einstein in America” before leaving the stage.

After a short pause, she shyly came back on stage for the encore and said, “I guess I’m easy.” The encore featured the only song that Pappelis sang twice during the evening. “My Sweet Darling,” one of her own compositions. About a man leaving a relationship and a

Woodcarver’s legacy becomes subject of professors’ book

By University News Service

Old friends like Geno Casagrande remember him sitting at the bar of one of his favorite drinking places, the Amati and Tullio taverns in Freeman Square, carving a knife for a friend and drinking a cold beer.

He did most of his talking with a knife in hand, and the good bet nobody ever was more eloquent with a slab of black walnut as Fred Myers.

The rural West Frankfort woodcarver, who died in 1969 at the age of 39, left a rich legacy in walnut, cherry and white oak that will brighten many a household for decades to come.

In all Myers produced about 75 major carvings and paintings, according to SIU-C art historian George Mavigliano.

For in addition to the more than 100 smaller pieces — pipes, annual sculptures, etc. — his artistic talents, the SIU-C professor remembers, were not antecedent, but rather given to his past to account for his abilities.

Those abilities became evident early in Myers’ life, according to Lawson.

“His work was so impressive that often it happened once in a great while — someone who seems to have been a descendant of Fred Myers,” Mavigliano said.

“Fred had a great talent and a remarkable sensitivity that he expressed in wood, and there are no two antecedent, nothing in his past to account for his abilities,” Mavigliano said.

Mavigliano and Richard Lawson, associate professor of English, have spent more than 18 months scouring the archives of Myers’ works, letters and acquaintances. The results are in a book soon to be published by the SIU Press.

“The man was an example of one of those who seem to have been twice born once in a great while — someone who seems to have been a descendant of Fred Myers,” Mavigliano said.

Operation Merry Christmas begins

by Louise Wax

Staff Writer

Santa's helpers will be busy at a children's Christmas party when about 130 members of SIGC transmit, and for the first time ever, the transmitter was expected to be fully operational.

For the past three years, the Inter-Greek Council has sponsored Operation Merry Christmas to provide special entertainment and activities for children ranging from three to seven years of age.

The children chosen for the party were children who are experiencing a difficult time or who are struggling to raise funds for Operation Merry Christmas. The children were selected through the Women's Center program coordinator, Mrs. Brenda Mitchell, and the transmitter was expected to be fully operational.

Transmitter for WSU to be operating soon

by Michelle Goldberg

A new transmitter for the SIU broadcasting service will be on the air by the end of the semester, according to Eugene Dybvig, chairman of the Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. in the Inter-Greek Council's transmitter.

The transmitter will be shipped to Oakley for use at WSU Channel 16. The transmitter will be used to broadcast the same programming on the campus. According to George Mace, vice president of student affairs, the transmitter was purchased through Federal Emergency Planning and Welfare and state funds from the UISA and was expected to be operational.

Mace said that after Dybvig notified him that the transmitter was available, the transmitter could be transferred to SIU. On Oct. 31, the Board of Governors of WSU agreed to purchase the transmitter for $35,000.

Dybvig said that the present transmitter is one year past its three-year-life expectancy. He said the transmitter is expected to be operational in about two years.

The new transmitter should save the University $20,000 a year in operating expenses because of its high efficiency, Dybvig said.

"It's going to help the kids out a lot. Some of them are confused now and others are anxious. A lot of the families are in a bad position right now and it will be interesting to see how they react to the party," Ludwig said.

In addition, merchants were asked by the Operation Merry Christmas coordinating committee to donate gifts for the children. The children from the Eureka C. Hayes Center are currently enrolled in a city-operated child care program at the center. The children spend an average of five hours a day at the center.

"We get very excited to get and entertain the public," said Brenda Mitchell, education coordinator.

Gottfried sees good signs in losses

By Mark Pablick
Staff Writer
Saluki basketball Head Coach Joe Gottfried looked back on his team’s fourth-place finish in the Fiesta Classic at Tempe. And this past weekend with a 92-74 loss to the Sun Devils, despite losses to Arizona State and Seattle.

"Sure, it’s disappointing whenever you lose a game," Gottfried said. "But I think we’ve fixed a few valuable things during the tournament.

"We’re going to be a better ball club down the road." Gottfried continued. "The tournament will help us in the long run."

The Salukis fell victim to Arizona State 82-74, and to Seattle, 79-64. Gottfried even though his team played came-from-behind ball throughout the games. Gottfried saw some good things.

"It was a battle back in both games, rattling off an impressive second-half effort against Arizona State, outscoring the Sun Devils 22-10 during one stretch."

"We had a number of re-enforcing signs in both Arizona State and Seattle games," Gottfried said. "We were able to move the ball inside in the second half in both contests."

The Salukis were plagued, however, with a height problem. Both Arizona State and Seattle had 74 players — a big advantage, according to Gottfried.

"Both teams we played had awesome figures for centers," Gottfried said. "That forced some of our players to do some things they normally wouldn’t do."

The Saluki bench looked like a full gallery of musical chairs players moving in and out of the games, while Gottfried looked for the right combination.

"We’ll be moving people around in practice," Gottfried said, "at least until we settle on something."

"There are going to be times when we’ll have to go with a bigger lineup. We have people on our team that can each do certain things well. We just have to have the right mixture in at the same time."

One player who did it all was Wayne Abrams. The 6-4 senior earned all-tournament team honors. Abrams scored 19 points against Arizona State, and poured in 22 against Seattle.

Sophomore Edward Thomas, playing a reserve role against Arizona State, scored six points and grabbed five rebounds. Thomas made his first start in Saturday’s game, but could only manage three points against Seattle.

"When we come home on Tuesday, we’ll have played six games in 10 days," Gottfried said.

"We had some good all-around performances, especially out of the freshmen," Gottfried said. "There are freshmen on this country that aren’t scoring or contributing. We have people here who are progressing."

Paratore says football future bleak

By Ken Mac Garride

The future of flag football at SIU will remain up in the air for some time. The coordinator of intramural sports, Marty Paratore, who supervises the sport of 2,500 players on campus, says nothing needs to work. This year - as just a total disaster as far as he’s concerned.

"We’ve had upwards of 40 injuries at flag football," Paratore said. "What this means is there’s not too much that she said. "We’ve had players not only physically abused, but psychologically abused. People are in here during the season almost daily complaining about the brutality they are experiencing on the field."

"If you thought you were ‘beaten almost every day’, Paratore continued. ‘I will kill you. I will shoot you. Next time I see you.’ Some come up and grab them. A decision will be made in January by Paratore and those who work with her on what changes will be made."

"The baseball games range from simple rule changes to the elimination of flag football."

"There has to be something done," Paratore said. "We can’t see us running a tournament like we ran this year. I don’t think there were many places where people seemed to be enjoying themselves. This is what intramurals is all about. This is not varsity sports competition."

"To think of it’s our position next year at intramural sports to perpetuate the kind of attitudes we’ve been discussing on those fields," Paratore admitted. "Intramural sports is for competition, enjoyment, fun and exercise. It’s not for bullying anybody, threatening or frightening somebody."

Paratore said one problem is flag football is a violent sport being played by people who aren’t used to football. "Most of the guys who play this aren’t used to football," she said. "Many of them have never even played high school football and they think of flag football as tackle football. It’s not that, and it was never intended to be.

"On offense," Paratore said, "we’re running a spread out at the quarterback and knocking him down," Paratore continued. "We’re fearful of his flag you can’t play that way, then don’t play the game."

Paratore stressed that excessive roughness is not unique to SIU flag football. She said it’s a concern at other universities throughout the country. Some schools already have made changes in the way flag football is played.

"There are schools where you play on your knees," Paratore said. "It has to be a passing game."

Ten swimmers qualify for nationals

Marty Krug qualified for the nationals in the 50-yard freestyle, and Rick Theobald and Garry Mastey met standard times in the medley relays.

The Salukis qualified in the 400-yard medley relay by adding the individual times of Samples, Norton, Veervoorn and Mailer. The team qualified in the 800-yard medley relay by 7 seconds.

"We were close to making national standard in five other events," Steele said. "We’re working especially hard with Manteo, Mike Brown, Brian Tyldal, Dean Leonard and Mr. Pollard, getting them ready for another chance."

Steele said he had expected only to break one school record and reach standards five times.

"The people who did show up, got their monies worth," Hunter said. "The crowd was enthusiastic and receptive."

Early holiday for tankers; qualify ten for NCAA finals

By Rod Smith
Staff Writer

"We had our Christmas early," said Capt. Bob Steele, head coach of the Huskies swimming team after 27 lifetime best swims, qualifying 17 times for the NCAA championships. In the Salukis’ six meet this weekend, the Huskies qualified for the Olympic trials in all but the 200-yard IM. The swimmers shaved their bodies and rested for the meet in which six school records and six freshman records were broken.

"We were right down before this meet, but we weren’t even close to national standards," said Steele. "We had the swimmers write down what they thought their times should be, and whether or not we should shave down.

"Anders Norling and Brian Tynbom said ‘well yes, what have we been working as hard for,’ and it helped both mine and the team’s confidence." "

Sophomore Roger Vion Jouanne led the Christmas party, qualifying for the NCAA’s in four events, the 100-yard individual medley, and the 200-yard breaststroke. butterfly and individual medley. He qualified for the Olympic trials in all but the 400-yard IM. Von Jouanne’s 5:37.24 in the 400-yard IM was a new SIU record. Steele said he thought Von Jouanne’s times in all four events were the best in the United States this year.

Norling and freshman Pablo Restrepo both made national standards in the 100- and 200-yard breaststroke. Norling swam the 100-yard breaststroke in 56.28, setting a new school record, and turning in the nation’s best time.

Restrepo shaved four seconds of the SIU record in the 200, swimming the race in 2:02.28, which Steele thought was another national best. Steele said he thought Bob Samples’ time in the 50- and 100-yard freestyle qualified him for the Olympic trials. He met NCAA standards in both events.

In the butterfly events, freshman Keith Vrooman and Jorge Jimenez both qualified for the NCAA’s in the 200-yard race. Vrooman set a freshman record in the 100-yard butterfly.

"Jorge’s race was probably the most pleasing of the meet," Steele added.

Hawaii Rainbows earn national spiker crown

By Mark Pabich

University of Hawaii women’s volleyball coach Dave Shoji has had a national championship on his Christmas list for the past five seasons. This year, however, Shoji received his wish. The Bows, who have won the past three NCAA titles, and the Waikiki Wahine coach has seen the impossible happen and only to watch another team take it away.

This year, however, Shoji received his wish. The Bows, who have won the past three NCAA titles, and the Waikiki Wahine coach has seen the impossible happen and only to watch another team take it away.

"I was happy about the way we battled back after losing the first two. We’re a mature team with eight seniors who have had to deal with pressure," said Shoji.

Hawaii, which was seeded second in the tournament, finished the three-day event undefeated. The Bows were ranked as the nation’s best collegiate team in a pre-season poll by Volleyball Magazine. "I guess they picked our team right," Shoji said.

Three Bowes made the all- tournament team — Senior Wayne Mitchell, junior Angie Matthew and sophomore Diane Sebastian were selected. Shoji said Sebastian, who is a two-year starter and team captain, was strong both mentally and physically.

"Diane is playing so much better this season, and her play has improved," Shoji said. "Some of the balls she had been hitting, she’s been nonreturnable."

UCLA finished as the best career NCAA record, defeating University of the Pacific 15-8, 14-16, 14-16, 15-7, to capture third place in the tournament. The Lady Brains put two players on the all-tournament team, Denise Corletti and Linda Robertson. Jayney Lawrence was selected to the second team.
