SIOU-C reserve may satisfy first cut

By Giny L. Lee

SIOU-C reserve may be able to solve the problem of the 5 percent cut in Thompson's first round of budget changes. The reserve fund is estimated to be worth $1.8 million, which could be used to fill in the gaps in the state's budget. This reserve fund is the last line of defense for state agencies, with state agencies being cut by up to 3 percent.

In the past, the reserve fund has been used to cover the costs of unexpected expenses, such as natural disasters or emergencies. With the current economic situation, the reserve fund may be needed more than ever to help state agencies weather the cuts. The reserve fund is expected to be transferred to the governor's office in order to be used as a last resort. The governor will then need to decide how the funds will be allocated to state agencies.

Voter turnout low in senate election

By William Jason Vogt

State Senator

The Illinois Board of Higher Education, announced the Illinois Board of Higher Education's decision to reduce the number of geographic seats in the state from 51 to 38. This decision was made in order to reduce the number of state senators and to make the electoral process more efficient. The reduction will also save the state money, as each senator represents a larger area.

The decision was met with mixed reactions. Some senators were disappointed with the reduction, as they felt it would make it more difficult for them to represent their constituents. However, others were pleased with the decision, as they saw it as a way to streamline the state's government and make it more efficient.

There were also discussions about how the number of geographic seats would be determined. Some suggestions were made, such as using population demographics or income levels. However, no final decision was made on this matter.

The reduction in the number of geographic seats will take effect after the next election cycle. The Illinois Board of Higher Education will be responsible for determining the new geographic boundaries for the state's senators.
MX missile ‘dense pack’ plan runs into criticism in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration, stung by House legislation mandating cuts in MX basing plans for the MX missile, ran into delays Wednesday on its proposal to deploy the deadly nuclear missiles together in Wyoming.

The public is getting the idea the whole thing is a boondoggle, said Rep. James N. Jackson, D-Wash., one of the Pentagon's staunchest allies in Congress, told Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger.

"I don't think you rescue the problem of the MX missile basing mode to in in Wyoming," Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a staunch supporter of military spending, said as the Senate Armed Services Committee began hearings.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, told Weinberger that a "political decision" had apparently been made to cancel the basing plan favored by former President Carter in favor of "a basing mode that is more environmentally acceptable and not as technically feasible."

Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., winding up his support in the lame-duck session following his defeat in the November election, said he strongly supported the MX missile but not necessarily the so-called "dense pack" for deployment near Warren Air Force Base, Wyo.

Weinberger defended the feasibility of the MX basing plans, which is designed to cluster the missiles in the event of a Soviet attack the first exploding enemy warhead would destroy or cripple the rest of the enemy's warheads in a phenomenon known as "fracture.")

He said Tuesday's $255-$176 House vote to delete $188 million for the first five missiles - if sustained by the Senate - would amount to "telling the world we are disarming unilaterally.

In a television interview, the defense secretary conceded that "...some way we have not yet been able to convey to the American people or to Congress the really serious nature, the growing problem of the peril from the rapid Soviet arms buildup.

Gen. John W. Vessey Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, testified that that the four joint chiefs originally opposed the "dense pack" plan, but one of those said he would agree to it if the plan would help with arms control efforts. The administration argues that deployed MX missiles put the United States in a stronger position for arms control talks.

Edward L. Rowny, special assistant for arms control negotiations, said the MX was not merely a "bargaining chip," adding, "We need it for our security, but once we get it, it does give us leverage."

President Reagan vowed after the vote to "do everything I can to take this case to the country."

Sen. Edward D. M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the ranking Democrat on the Armed Services Committee, also supported the administration, which has dubbed the MX as "a new kind of intercontinental ballistic missile" - the Peacekeeper.

Four inmates injured in prison fight

PONTIAC (AP) - A fight among inmates at the Pontiac Correctional Center on Wednesday left four prisoners slightly injured, one by a guard's gunshot, authorities said. The cause of the cellhouse brawl is being investigated by the prison's internal affairs department, said Dorothy Green, an administrative assistant to Warden Kenneth McGinnis.

The prison has been the scene of a series of inmate fights going back to July 29, when one inmate was killed and 24 injured.

Senate committee approves gas tax

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Finance Committee, without much as a whimper of objection, tentatively approved on Wednesday a nickel-a-gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax to finance a multibillion dollar program of highway and mass transit improvement.

The full House approved the increase in the tax, currently seven cents a gallon, 392-149, early Tuesday.

The tax would raise an estimated $85 billion a year, money that supporters say would create 170,000 construction jobs. About $7 billion would go to highway and bridge work, while the remainder would be earmarked for mass transit construction.

Israelis, Lebanese clash in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Israeli and Lebanese troops clashed Wednesday in their first firefight since the June invasion. Two Lebanese soldiers were killed and one Israeli was wounded in the 15-minute gun battle near the Lebanese Defense Ministry in the Beirut suburb of Yarze.

Police, military, and military officials said 16 people, killed and 24 wounded in the continuing fighting in Tripoli between militias of the South Lebanon Army.

The Lebanese government radio also reported that Israeli troops had not entered the southern port city of Sidon and made a house-to-house search after an Israeli patrol was reported ambushed before dawn near the city.

Drug may reverse sickle cell anemia

BOSTON (AP) — An experimental drug may reverse the major cause of sickle cell anemia, an important killer of black Americans, by turning on genes that have been dormant since birth, a study shows.

The treatment is believed to be the first successful attempt to control the output of anemia, an important killer of sickle cell patients, yet on the market. And the drug is also extensively tested as a treatment for sickle cell disease.

The drug, called 5-azacytidine, has also been used to control the output of anemia, an important killer of sickle cell anemia patients.

SICU students may be paying $60 more in revenue bond fees if the Board of Trustees approves the plan at its meeting scheduled for 10 a.m. Thursday in the ballroom of the SIU-Edwardsville University Center.

If approved by the board, the revenue bond fee, which is currently $64.20, would increase to $62.20 per semester for full-time students. Part-time students would pay proportionately less.

The fee, which was installed in 1979, is used to support University Housing and the Student Center.

According to Bruce Swinburn, vice president for student affairs, the fee increase would raise about $254,000 during fiscal year 1984.

The fee increase was first introduced at the November board meeting. It was proposed following $72,421 of the expected $354,000 to be used to eliminate a deficit in Evergreen Terrace apartments is also scheduled to be considered by the board Thursday.

The apartments, which are owned by the SIU Foundation and managed by the University, will not have a rent increase next year if the action is approved, Swinburn said.

Possible changes in the board's process for approving guidelines used to select the SICU and SICU-E fee will be presented by Board Chairman William Norwood and Trustee Ad Van Meter.

None of the top executive posts need to be filled at this time, said Norwood, but he felt it was appropriate to consider new guidelines at this time.

Phyllis McCoven, chairwoman of the Civil Service Employees Council, will address the board for five minutes to give the council's opinion on initiating a 3.7% week for civil service workers.

McCoven, who received the council's unanimous support at its meeting Dec. 1, has said she was prompted to speak at this board meeting because Norwood had said that the board had dismissed the idea that the board would increase the revenue bond fee, which is $72,421 of the expected $354,000 to be used to eliminate a deficit in Evergreen Terrace apartments.

Several students also spoke against the fee increase at the meeting on Thursday, which is also the council's last meeting of the year.

A proposal to rename the SICU Conference Center, better known as the University House, is also scheduled to be discussed.

The University House, where the president of SICU resides, would be renamed "W. Clement and Jessie E. Starns University House" if the board approves the action.

Stone provided the approximately $1 million needed for construction of the house in 1965.

Also on the agenda will be a fee increase proposal for SICU-E and salary increase plans for both universities.

Election controversy must be cleared soon

The Dec. 1 Graduate Student Council election is definitely not one of those about which you can have a laugh and say, "Thank God it's over." The election has turned out to be as controversial as it was close.

There has been an important representative tool for graduate students in the past with the potential of being more in the future. But the controversy raised over the election makes the immediate future shaky. This controversy has been divisive and instead of effectively running the business of the day.

If Steve Katsinas' election as GSC president was an illegal act; then the way the election was violated GSC's election by-laws as alleged by those filing appeals. Fresh election conducted along proper lines should be called immediately.

If, on the other hand, given the constraints of time and urgency, some assertion of the letter or spirit of the by-laws as claimed by those running the elections, Katsinas should be declared the winner and allowed to get on with the job.

EITHER WAY THERE is need for immediate but prudent action if the credibility of the organization is not to be compromised. Students, graduate or undergraduate, are facing many serious challenges to be present in the coming years that demand concerted effective action. Pluritoming student aid and soaring tuition fees are just two examples of problems to be dealt with. Time wasted on petty concerns, running for office, and paying for it. Everybody involved in the controversy must have the interests of students at heart before anything else.

Bridal shower gift-giving brings shower of woks

By Joan Lovelace

Student Writer

Bridal showers make me nervous. They are the epitome of femininity. A woman has to find her best man to attend one of these things. Every item sold around eating cake and drinking coffee in the midst of flowery conversation.

That way, even if the couple Rigby commercials. And they are supposed to be present in the present time that demand concerted effective action. Pluritoming student aid and soaring tuition fees are just two examples of problems to be dealt with. Time wasted on petty concerns, running for office, and paying for it. Everybody involved in the controversy must have the interests of students at heart before anything else.

Immediate action to gather data needed to fight tuition increases

Higher education in Illinois is in the midst of a deep depression. We aim to change that. We are well aware of the loss in purchasing power experienced by professional students in the past decade.

That's why we aim to take fight for fair education funding directly to the Door of the Illinois General Assembly. Only the Legislature, as final arbiter of our needs, can change the trend of loss in purchasing power that we have faced in the past. We need to be heard.

We cannot look to others to improve our plight. This we must do by ourselves. That's why we would like to extend a cordial invitation to those concerned with full and fair education funding to attend a brief organizational meeting of the ADH Kick Force on Tuition, Friday, Dec. 10, at 5 p.m. at the Machinist Room of the Student Center.

Steve Katsinas, GSC President-Elect, Graduate Student, Higher Education.

Election farce cannot be settled unless fresh GSC election held

The Graduate Student Council election on Dec. 1 was one big farce. The wizard in this joke of an election that was largely created through Paul Malina's sudden resignation.

A list of eligible voters should have been posted and verified. It was not. Ballots should have been clearly printed to avoid any confusion that Ann Greenley was running for president and Steve Katsinas was president.

In view of these circumstances, it is only right that a new election be held. All GSC representatives who are concerned about the way this election was run should call the GSC office and request an emergency meeting to have a fair and organized election.

The initial election was hastily conducted and poorly executed. Time is of the essence in correcting any wrongs that may have occurred. We have not heard the end of this issue. The discrepancies of the election have been uncovered along with the style of Steve Katsinas. Many people see and are disturbed by this event. Surely, the storm will not subside until a fair election is held.

Katsinas should back his "shallow victory" while he still has it. Because I feel as many others do, that a new election must be held in compliance with council by-laws... — Jami Krypsios, Senior, Jour.

Metal residue in deer reported low
By Jack Wallace

When the second half of the Illinois deer hunting season begins starting on Friday, deer hunters may be surprised to find that deer in the state have high levels of heavy metals and persistent pesticide residues, according to a study by the University of Illinois Cooperative Wildlife Refuge, said Woolf. He said the study was done for the purpose of understanding the effects of these metals on deer.

The study was conducted in mid-March and mid-May of this year, using deer from the University of Illinois Cooperative Wildlife Refuge. The deer were killed and analyzed for levels of heavy metals and persistent pesticides.

The results of the study showed that the highest levels of cadmium and nickel were found in the deer tested. Cadmium was found at levels of 20 parts per million (ppm) in the liver and 10 ppm in the kidney. Nickel was found at levels of 10 ppm in the liver and 5 ppm in the kidney.

Woolf said that these levels are similar to those found in other studies of deer in the state. He said that the levels of heavy metals and persistent pesticides found in the deer are not cause for concern, as the levels are well below the levels that are considered to be harmful to human health.

The study also showed that the levels of cadmium and nickel in the deer were not affected by the time of year in which they were sampled. Woolf said that this is evidence that the levels of these metals in the deer are not affected by seasonal factors.

Woolf said that the study was conducted to better understand the effects of heavy metals and persistent pesticides on deer in the state. He said that the study will help to better understand the long-term effects of these substances on the deer population in the state.

The study was funded by the University of Illinois Cooperative Wildlife Refuge and the Illinois Department of Natural Resources.

Gasser said the proposed new University policy is modeled after regulations set by the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. The new policy would establish a separate board to consider complaints of sexual harassment which could not be resolved informally.

The Sexual Harassment Hearing Board would be composed of 14 members. If a formal complaint was to be filed before the board, a three-member panel would be selected which would hear testimony from the complainant, the respondent and others. The panel would then decide on the validity of the charges.

The University president would have final consideration of complaints involving SIU-C employees, and the vice president for student affairs would consider cases involving students accused of sexual harassment.

Resolution of a complaint against an employee could include one or more actions when a finding of sexual harassment has been found.

The actions could include a letter of warning to the offender, a letter of reprimand, other disciplinary action deemed appropriate and, in extreme cases of abuse of policy, initiation of termination procedures.

Gabriel commands audience with music, dance and theatrics

By Tom Travin
Associate Editor

Peter Gabriel is a performer who commands attention. From the time he entered the arena, leading a procession of his band members through the crowd to the opening strains of 'The Rhythm of the Heat,' all eyes were glued to him. He commanded attention throughout the show, as he didn't stop moving from the time he hit the stage until he walked off while the band played the ending notes of 'Piko.'

He moved freely because of a cordless headset microphone, which cut him loose from the handicap of a traditional stand mike with a cord or even a cordless hand-held mike. The headset enabled him to move without inhibitions, and he was all over the stage, even falling backward into the first three rows of the crowd during 'Lay Your Hands on Me' and resting there for 10 minutes before they gently returned him to the stage.

Audience participation was an important part of this concert and they were ready for it from the point when Gabriel told them that, "If you want to be in this band, you're on television." The arena filled with the sound of 20,000 voices chanting "Peter Gabriel." They played the entire show like that and rarely let up for two hours.

Gabriel is a paradox. A humble family man who, according to the concert program, "almost always want to be in the corner," he has a very talented performer who is demanding of his band, his technical crew, his audience and, most of all, himself. He proved by allowing his audience to hang on to his every word. He also had a lot of fun with it, dancing and singing along with everyone. He was a rousing success as he nonchalantly imitated a dancing monkey.

It was a night in fine voice for the entire evening. In one of the most effective and chillingly powerful voices in contemporary music today, he produced a wealth of ideas, sometimes from simple harp tone to a piercing tenor. His voice could turn the vocals, even the crowd, into a colossus of sound. He commanded attention.

A cross between free-form Vizage, the F-52s and the Plasticman, they seemed like too many other bands in the business today, and their attempts at social statements were lost on the partisan Gabriel crowd.

"I Have the Touch," followed "The Rhythm of the Heat," and then Gabriel picked up the pace momentarily with "Not One of Us" from his third LP. He slowed things down again with another new number, "The Family and the Fishing Net," during which he displayed his expressiveness to the fullest.

"Shock the Monkey," the FM hit from his latest album, brought the crowd to a frenzy, as the first 10 rows began dancing and singing along, and many packed the front of the stage. Gabriel milked the crowd response a bit too much, though, and the number dragged out too long.

Barist Tony Levin showed his expertise on Chapman Stick, a 12-string bass-like instrument, and drummer Jerry Marotta carried the rhythm with fervor as Gabriel danced all over the stage, acting monkey-like and performing soothing vocals with Levin and guitarist David Rhodes on a chin-up bar.

"John Has a Headache," a ballad written by Gabriel, brought another round of cheers. "I recall a story of a business man in times of depression," Gabriel said. It was an accessible, sensual, fun dance tune unlike anything Gabriel has ever put out, and he and guitarist Rhodes had a lot of fun with it, dancing wildly to its primal beat.

"Lay Your Hands on Me" stunned the crowd during Gabriel's excursion into the last two hours of the evening, as he and his band members performed a fanatical response. An inspirational rendition of "Sabbath Hill" brought the house down — again. "San Jacinto," from the new album, was handled emotionally and with maximum lighting effect ever the stage for three encores — "On the Air," "Kiss of Life," and "Bird."

For "Kiss of Life," Electric Guitarist returned to the stage for a dance-a-thon, and Gabriel inspired the crowd to "move along with us." It was a roaring anthem to the joy of life and all band members except Marotta and keyboardist Larry Fast danced and jumped all over the stage and got the audience going even more.

"Bird," Gabriel's ode to African go-go dancing and eyeliner.

The special effects enabled him to move in and out of the crowd and come back on stage to move like a street performer. He proved for the entire show that he was a rousing success as he nonchalantly imitated a dancing monkey.

The arena concert was the last of the group's current American tour and they seemed relieved to have made it to the road. They played the entire show like that and rarely let up for two hours. They were out must of the crowd in the process.

The opening act for a major art exhibit was scheduled to hit the Arena stage in one hour. The jam of crowded, over students, some cracking new-smelling texts for the first time, was beginning at Morris Library. And Philip Graham was in the Student Center, cracking open his short story manuscripts before a group of about 23.

This was Graham's first SIU-C reading, though he had read at many literary centers before. Graham seemed to find a special charm in delivering his own words in public, and he could turn the room to check for reactions. At the point when Graham's eyes met hers, she noticed her own mouth was open. A bit embarrassed, she closed it, and then looked around the room to check for reactions.

Some students, some chattered over students, some had turned up new questions she could ask about herself. "Hmmm. Maybe she really wanted to make an art sculpture of her boyfriend's un-shaven face," she thought. After he took his first drink of milk, when she had that milk mustache covering his authentic facial hair. "Yes, exactly," she screamed, and then looked around a bit embarrassed. Women's studies plans open house

The SIU-C Women's Studies Program will hold an open house from 2 to 4 p.m. Friday at the program's headquarters, 216 Chautauqua St.

Refreshments will be served and the group's Womyn's Night Pot will entertain.

Women's Studies Program Coordinator Elizabeth R. Earnes, professor of philosophy, asks visitors to bring cold plates and to wear a theme of their choosing to their vision covering his authentic facial hair. "Yes, exactly," she screamed, and then looked around a bit embarrassed. Pizza purchases aid WIDB project

By Jack Wallace
Staff Writer

For the residents of Thompson Point, chowing down on a large pizza may now involve more than just filling stomachs.

Domino's Pizza, 616 E. Walnut St., is donating $1 for every large pizza delivered on campus until Dec. 17. "The money will be used for the purchase of cable to connect WIDB Radio to the Point," said Varrecce Johnson, a disc jockey at the station.

Stainless Steel, a freshman who lives in Bowyer Hall, said a petition drive early in the semester netted 564 signatures from among Thompson Point's 1,331 residents in support of the hookup.

But Joe Demshar, owner of Domino's Pizza, said such problems of different nature occurring on the campus may not be as easy to resolve. "We've had a phenomenal amount of trouble and it just doesn't have to be that way," he said.

"This campus is one of the worst places in the state for acts of vandalism to employees' cars and people phoning in bad orders," he said. "We've had three car windows broken out and at least 30 cars broken into, five assaults on drivers delivering pizzas and at least $2,300 worth of bad orders on campus."

Demshar said that the restaurant has "had at least 250 bad orders called in as people ordering a pizza for someone down the hall as a joke."

Despite the problems, Demshar said Domino's hopes to raise $4,000 for the Thompson Point project. "We've raised over $1,000 so far and we may have to extend the time to reach our goal," he said.

The fund-raising drive began Nov. 28. The chief engineer at WIDB, Jim Baer, said some technical aspects have to be resolved before the project can be completed. "We're working with Radio Systems Inc. of Edgemont, Pa., and we have to determine whether or not we will have to put transmitters in every dorm."

In return for its help, Domino's Pizza receives "a trade-out from WIDB of $432 in advertising," said Tony Uhlich, a senior in advertising who works at the station.
'Party Pack' packed with tips on spirited, spiritless parties

By Bob Delaney
Staff Writer

It was the week before finals and the Wellness Center threw a party... er... a party about parties. It may be a bad time for students, but it's a good time for holiday parties, said Nancy Logan, alcohol education specialist at the Wellness Center, which sponsored "The Party Pack" workshop Tuesday along with Intramural-Recreational Sports.

While in the season to decide how to throw that holiday party, "The Party Pack" got students into the spirit by showing them just what an overabundance of the spirits might do to a party. The 25 persons who attended the workshop had a dickens of a time thinking about what made typical Carbondale parties tick or bomb. Good food, people, atmosphere and space make a party, participants said. But getting into the spirit without the spirits can be challenging. "We've not opposed to drinking," Logan said. "There's nothing wrong with drinking. It's the excessiveness. While one-third of Americans do not drink," she said, "you never hear about them. It's a drinking society. The person with a can of Coke at a party becomes a target for pressure. Most of the participants who spoke said it was uncomfortable to have a host pressure them into drinking. It can ruin a party, participants said. Most said that others should be offered, especially when people like to try something new during the holidays, Logan said. While the typical scrooge may throw a Christmas party by setting the faithful keg at the front door, a number of parishers may want something else. Participants talked about party games ranging from the simple - charades - to the bizarre - "bring a guest," where parishers go into the night and find a guest to bring back to the party.

It all depends on mood, Logan said, agreeing with the participants. Some things may work great one time but flop another. A host should be able to tell the mood of the party and whether a new game or music could be tried. Often a party starts with a small group and blossoms until the gathering becomes the Great American Party.

Logan said serving low-sodium foods could help parishers. Popcorn and other salty foods increase thirst, although they are better than no food at all, she said. And for those who do think drinking is necessary for socializing, drinks should be limited to one drink per hour. The amount the body's system generally can burn, Logan said.

For those watching the waistline for the holiday season, most drinks are not low-calorie. A rum-and-coke has more calories than an ice cream cone. Logan said, "People might walk into a bar and order three or four rum-and-coke who might not otherwise sit down and order three or four ice cream cones."

FILMS AND VIDEO

Student Center Auditorium — woodstock! It's a Woody Allen Weekend! Friday, it's "Annie Hall." Allen's semi-serious satire on relationships, where you can see the legendary bumbling comedian sneeze away a bunch of cocaine, make a hilarious attempt at cooking a live lobster, and lose his lover, Anne Hall (the brilliant Diane Keaton), to the masterfulistic L.A. entertainment scene that he despises. Saturday, Allen attempts a more serious treatment of relationships and enlists the impeccable Keaton, superstar Meryl Streep and the lovely Marcel Hemingway in "Manhattan." Sunday, "The Silence," super-heavyweight Swedish filmmaker Ingmar Bergman's gripping story of two incestuous sisters. All films at 7 and 9 p.m., $1.50.

Selected scenes from Anton Chekhov's "The Seagull" will be performed at 8 p.m. Friday in the Lab Theater by first-year graduate acting students and advanced undergraduate acting students.

The performance will be a workshop production and will be rendered in rehearsal costumes, using rehearsal props. Admission is free.

Traditional peoples may suffer from ways of West, expert says

By Juliana Anastasoff
Staff Writer

The importation of Western industrial society to traditional peoples can also bring the social ills of the Western economic model to the country, according to a professor from the University of Zambia, Lusaka. The importation of these societal sicknesses presents a monumental task to the "Third World" social worker, says Yeti Rani, visiting professor in community development.

Rani spoke Wednesday in an informal presentation on "The Practice of Social Work in the Development World."

Rani said the term "developing" refers to areas which are trying to recover from colonization and are vulnerable to neo-colonialists, both externally and internally. These countries find themselves in a state of struggle and shock, forced into the periphery of a world economy, she said.

"When we talk of development in the social work context, we talk of the peoples' right to self-determination," Rani said. "We are dealing with human beings, not 'cases.'"

Rani said in traditional, rural communities in Africa, there is no need for social work because each person has a place in a social relationship.

But unrealistic images of "glitter and gloss" attract the perceptions of many a rural villager, Rani said.

"In almost every village in Africa one individual or another migrates to the city," said Rani. "She described the shanty towns that ring around the cities and contain unemployed, displaced persons. Classrooms are packed, she said, making quality education for migrants near impossible.

"In the rural, traditional areas, people took care of each other. If there was a problem with a poor harvest, one village would take care of the other," she said.

But in a rapidly changing society, there is also a lot of change in human relationships. In the urban areas, there may be no place for those who drop out of the social stream.

Providing "permanent relief" is the task of the social work agencies. Rani said individuals, groups and communities must be helped to become self-reliant, economically, she said.

"Functioning as a creative catalyst toward self-reliance and dynamic social change is the challenge to the social worker in the developing world," Rani said.

Cancer patient vows to whip it

"Mind has a capacity to cure"

By Mary Beene
Student Writer

Richard Thomas doesn't believe in giving up. Thomas, 60, professor of community development, is on disability leave because of bone cancer. He spends his days with his wife, Barbara, working on the reconstruction of their home, a white Cape Cod.

"My wife is as concerned about my condition as I am," he said. Yet, "I think we're both optimistic at least. I haven't been defeated," he said.

Any number of things can happen in one's lifetime, such as a bad heart or kidney, he said. "I happen to have inherited this condition," he said.

"I thought 'F1NALS leave to reduce the stress in his life," Thomas said. "I have been advised by my physician to take a leave of absence until I cure my condition," he said.

"I have to either cure it, live with it or die with it. I want to take the first option," Thomas said. "One never really knows what's going to occur. I'm hopeful I'm on the road to recovery," Thomas said.

"I have to either cure it, live with it or die with it. I hope to return to teaching in the summer or fall.

Bulls’ Dailey suffering from stress

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Bulls guard Quintin Dailey is suffering from "extreme emotional stress" and has requested a temporary leave of absence to seek psychiatric help, a spokesman for the National Basketball Association said Wednesday.

Dailey failed to show up for a Friday night game against the New York Knicks and club officials learned after contacting police that the rookie guard had fallen asleep in his suburban Northbrook apartment.

Spokesman Tim Hallam said Dailey would not play in Wednesday night’s game against the Bucks in Milwaukee, but left open the portion of when Dailey would return.

"It’s up to Quintin," said Hallam. "He has the full and complete support of the entire Bulls organization in his efforts to deal with his personal problems and return as a valuable member of the team. Dailey has been unavailable for comment since Tuesday. His telephone number is unlisted and Hallam refused to provide a charger with the situation.

"The Associated Press reported erroneously Tuesday night that an all-points bulletin had been issued for Dailey after he failed to show up for Tuesday night’s game.

"When asked whether he will still believe that the student nurse, Dailey responded, " Basically, I don’t. I had to go through the situation by myself."

Any fan who brings two cans of food, will get into the game free.

Salukis hope a center appears at Morehead

By Dan Devine
Staff Writer

It seems that natural centers are a rare commodity. At least Saluki head coach Van Winkle hasn't found one yet.

"Our center spot is something that is still a question," said Van Winkle. The Saluki basketball coach has tried Walker, Tucker, and Karl Morris in the pivot over the past four games, but hasn't found any answers amongst those trio. Walker has started three games, but his center play is more comfortable playing closer to the basket. Van Winkle looks like a center, he's 6-8, but he hasn't played like one so far. A junior college transfer, Hunter is still adjusting to major college ball, according to Van Winkle.

"I still think it's a new situation," he added.

Morehead State Coach Wayne Martin doesn't think he has a center. He has SIU-C. Morehead State Thursday night at 8:30 (Carbondale time) in Kentucky.

"We don't have a true center either," said Martin. "It looks like we match up well size-weigh.

What Miller has instead of a center is a pair of dominating perimeter players. Van Winkle is 6-7, is averaging 12.3 points and 9.3 rebounds through four games, and Jeff Tucker, also 6-7, is doing an amazing impersonation of a center claims to the contrary.

"We've averaged 11.1 points and 8.5 rebounds. Maybe he's not a natural center but he's got the statistics of one.

With the help of point guard Guy Mannfield and 6-6 guard Eddie Childress, the Eagle front line has led Morehead State to a 5-1 record. The Eagles opened the year with a 66-64 loss to Western Kentucky, but have since rebounded to win three straight. SIU-C, by contrast, won its opener but has since dropped three in a row.

Morehead State notched a 85-61 win over Tennessee-Western at home, and then won two road games. The Eagles beat Eastern Illinois 72-66, and edged Missouri Valley Conference foe Indiana State 78-74.

Losing three four-year players from a 17.0 team has only been a minor in-convenience for the Eagles, who have been picked to finish second behind Murray State in the Ohio Valley Conference. Last week Murray State beat SIU-C 69-64.

Miller skillfully replaced the departed. He brought in Harrison and Tucker, both junior college transfers, to give the team added height and he then welcomed the return of injured guard Childress.

Childress missed all of last year after being one of Eastern State's top rebounders and scorers in his first two years. Recovered from his knee injury, he is averaging 11.3 points a game.

Point guard Minnifield is the Eagles leading scorer, 14.8, and fourth player scoring in his games. The Eagles are shooting only 42 percent.

The Redbirds were ranked in the top 20 in one poll as the new season's biggest upset by Western Illinois, 82-72, is doing an amazing impersonation of a center claims to the contrary.

"I'm going to have to work our way into the top 20," said Van Winkle. "Our team is still very early.

We won't see much of the Eagles until the season's first two weeks. Recovered from his knee injury, he is averaging 11.3 points a game.

Salukis women hope to end slump against Murray State

By Jackie Rodgers
Sports Editor

When asked what her team's game plan would be for Thursday night's contest with Murray State, Coach Cindy Scott said, "Win."

A win might be the confidence booster the Salukis women need to get on track, according to Scott. The Salukis are 1-3, but that record could just as easily read 4-0 had not poor free throw shooting and turnovers not plagued the team this season. The team is shooting only 42 percent from the field and averages 23.5 misses a game.

The kids need to relax and go out and play," said Scott. "Right now they are frustrated and disappointed. We have to realize that it is still very early in the season. There are 31 games left to play and that's plenty of time to do a good thing.

The Salukis hope to show Murray State some good things Thursday night at 7:30 in Davies Gym. The Racers are 1-3 on the season, having lost to University of Tennessee at Martin last weekend, beaten Arkansas State 74-62, and lost to Murray State 71-68 in the season opener on Jan. 19.

The Salukis hosted Murray two of its 17 losses last season, including a 66-64 beating in Carbondale last year. Under Scott, Murray has never lost to the Racers in Carbondale.

The bulk of the Racers' balanced scoring comes from the front line, with Sandi Davis leading the team at 16.2 points and 8.8 rebounds a game.

Cyndi Scott, a 5-10 guard, has averaged 13.0 points and 6.4 assists a game for the Salukis, who are shooting 41.7 percent from the field.
