United Nations to pull out of Bosnia

Newspday Clinton offers U.S. combat troops' assistance

WASHINGTON—President Clinton has assured NATO allies that the United States will provide most of the combat troops to protect a withdrawal of U.N. forces from Bosnia, administration officials said Wednesday.

Clinton made the commitment Wednesday after French officials declared that efforts to achieve peace between Serb and Muslim forces had collapsed and it was time to pull out French, British and other troops who make up the 24,000-strong U.N. Protection Forces in Bosnia.

But U.S. officials said Britain remains committed to the U.N. operation in Bosnia and that a withdrawal was still far from certain. Indeed, they said, renewed peace mediation efforts may follow next week's NATO meetings, which will be attended by Defense Secretary William Perry and Army Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Even so, U.S. Army Gen. George

Joulwan, the NATO Supreme Commander, and senior defense officials said contingency planning was under way to create a NATO shield for a U.N. withdrawal. Depending on the circumstances of the pullout, between 10,000 and 20,000 U.S. combat troops would be deployed to Bosnia.

In Germany, Joulwan noted that formal NATO and U.N. decisions were required before anything went beyond what he called "prudent planning."

"What we need is clear political guidance and this is still being developed at the North Atlantic Council," Joulwan said. "Also what is required is a request from

The size of a committee which will review candidates hoping to replace retiring-SIU Chancellor James Brown has been doubled after action taken in Edwardsville Thursday by the SIU Board of Trustees.

Brown said he recommended trustees increase the committee from five to ten members because a greater representation of faculty, staff and students is needed.

The committee, whose members are first nominated by campus constituency groups and then selected by the board, will now consist of two faculty members from SIUC, two faculty members from SIUE, two non-faculty members from SIUC, two non-faculty members from SIUE and two student representatives that may be selected from either or both campuses.

Lawsuit filed for injury after Pyramids fire

By David Vingren
Staff Reporter

A former SIUC student has filed a lawsuit for personal injury and mental anguish suffered from the 1992 Pyramids apartment complex fire.

Chanin Heid Birkhahn filed the $15,000 lawsuit Nov. 23 at the Jackson County Courthouse against Bonnie Owen Realty Inc., three other realty companies and two owners of the building for allegedly not keeping the apartment building in which she lived equipped to protect its residents from a fire.

Birkhahn alleges that poor management of the building was a contributing factor in a fire at the Pyramids apartment complex building, 516 S. Rawlings, that resulted in the deaths of five SIUC students on Dec. 6, 1992.

Birkhahn is accusing Owen, manager and operator of the com-

USG supports candidates

Senate backs two students for local council elections

By Chad Anderson
Staff Reporter

Undergraduate Student Government (USG) Vice President Carin Musak said Thursday that a USG resolution supporting two student candidates in the spring Carbondale city council elections is well-deserved.

Matthew Parsons, USG chief of staff, also said he and Lorenzo Henderson, former USG vice president, would not include former USG Commissioner for Housing, Tuition and Fees Andrew Ensor on their ticket as mayoral candidate this spring.

The resolution backing Parsons and Henderson was unanimously passed by the senate.

Musak said student government supports the two candidates because of their commitment to bettering the community.

"We're in support of them because obviously they're both current or past members of USG, and I can't think of two better people for the position," Musak said. "They have both given back a lot to the senators (of USG)."

Musak also said both candidates have many admirable qualities which make them good choices for city council.

"They both work extremely well with people. They're people persons," she said. "They both make the effort to meet people and find out their ideas on issues."

"Matt is so unselfish it's unreal. He would do everything he could to help someone out of a jam, and Lorenzo is currently working on bringing together the diversity between people on this campus," Musak said.

Parsons said he believes USG is supporting him because of his positions on community issues and problems.

"I think the student leaders are well aware of a lot of problems that exist in the city, because they've tried to address them," Parsons said. "They believe it's time for a change and a new direction, and I am presently the instrument of that."

Parsons said his campaign is currently revolving around the search for a mayoral candidate to run with the ticket, and with structuring a platform for the spring elections.

CLINTON, YELTSIN DISAGREE ABOUT TREATY — MOSCOW

— This week's clash between U.S. and Russian presidents over the expansion of NATO and the intractable war in Bosnia could play into a vicious circle of distrust that would impede cooperation between the two countries and prevent the kind of partnership the two have been striving for, analysts in Moscow say. Russia's refusal last week to join a new partnership with NATO and Yeltsin's comments at a summit in Budapest, Hungary, Monday that "the world cannot be controlled" from Washington were indications that Moscow still harbors old suspicions about the Western military alliance, despite a commitment earlier this year to work together. NATO's Partnership for Peace program was designed to bring Eastern European countries partially under the alliance's umbrella without immediately giving them full membership. But Russia suddenly refused to sign the agreement last week at a meeting in Brussels, Belgium, after NATO officials adopted a plan to set criteria for other, unspecified countries to become full members, a prospect unlikely for Russia.

TALK-SHOW HOST SAVES FAN FROM SUICIDE — NEW YORK

— Radio shock-jock Howard Stern was thrust into the improbable role of hero Wednesday when he distracted a possibly suicidal fan from a George Washington Bridge death leap during a seven-minute conversation that was broadcast live. "Let me thank you for calling in, I always wanted to help someone who was about to jump off a bridge," Stern told Emilio Bonilla, 29, of the Bronx, who police said had walked to mid-span from Washington Heights and was threatening to jump the more than 200 feet to the river below. Bonilla was grabbed by a passing motorist and a contingent of Port Authority police before he could carry out his threat. Stern and his sidekick, Robin Quivers, were jarred from their usual morning routine at 8 a.m. when Bonilla, a married father of one, called him from a cellular phone. Stern urged him not to jump, telling him he had much to live for — the upcoming film version of his best-selling book "Private Parts," for instance. "I tried to keep him laughing. When I mentioned the fact that I had a movie coming out and that he would miss it if he died, it caused him to laugh," Stern said at a subsequent news conference.

NORTH VOWS TO RUN AGAIN — BUT NOT IN '96 — WASHINGTON

— Defeated Virginia Senate candidate Oliver L. North said Wednesday night that he will not make another run for the Senate in 1996, but vowed, "I will be back. It's only a matter of when ... I run again." In the meantime, North said, he will host a daily, afternoon drive-time talk show. The Iran-Contra figure laid out his plans during an hour-long television appearance on "Larry King Live." North, whose initial try for elective office was boosted by contributions from across the country, did not rule out running for president or vice president — and said he has been urged to do both. But, he said, that would not happen in 1996. North said his family "suffered a lot" by his absence during nearly two years of campaigning and that they would be his "principal focus at least for the next two years." He pledged to support the Republican nominee for the Senate from Virginia in 1996, even if it is Sen. John W. Warner, who this year backed an independent against North.

NAFTA CAUSES MIXED REACTIONS, RESULTS —

By many gauges, free trade has been good medicine for the North American economy and an instructive lesson for the entire hemisphere. Yet a close look at one year's experience with the North American Free Trade Agreement shows how profoundly the world of commerce can vary from the world of political rhetoric and cold statistics. Neither the burning fears nor extravagant expectations sparked by the pact have borne out since it took effect Jan. 1. (It will take years to determine NAFTA's true effect on jobs, industries and the economies of North America.) Some rules have led to controversy, red tape and confusion. Others have opened up surprising opportunities. Tomato farmers in Florida are mad. Sausage exporters in Illinois are glad. And amid the fears of organized labor, union jobs in a California factory have expanded.

Students splash into Christmas season

Swimming team helps provide toys for needy kids

When Christmas draws near many organizations across Southern Illinois collect toys for disadvantaged children, but some SIUC students are "diving" head first into the cause.

SIUC's swim team is joining the Carbondale Breakfast Rotary Club "Share the Spirit" project, which has served 500 to 600 needy children every year for five years.

Marcia Sinnott, project coordinator for Rotary, said members of the swim team are taking the money they would have spent on each other in their annual gift exchange and spending it on the children instead.

"It's real exciting to see these kids take time out of their busy lives and get involved with a community they aren't even from," she said.

"We've always been interested in working with SIUC, and we are pleased to have the swim team show their charitable spirit and community spirit all in the same setting."

Sinnott said the club will collect the toys next week and sponsor a party for the children with Santa Claus at the Holiday Inn Sunday, Dec. 18.

Some toys will be given to children at the party and some gifts will be taken to the homes of disadvantaged families by service agencies.

Rotary President Terry Mathias said there are more than a dozen drop-off locations in Carbondale for individuals and groups to deposit gifts for children.

Swim coach Mark Kluemper said Rotary had been receiving many gifts, but was short on gifts for those in the 10- to 16-year-old bracket.

He said a member of the men's team is paired with a member of the women's team to buy one child a gift, for a total of 25 gifts.

"The teams are really involved with community service and charities," he said. "They all get a real special feeling when they are able to do things like this."

Although the swim team is taking an active role in Christmas, the team is not the only group at SIUC in the spirit of giving.

Cyndi Robertson, an SIUC food service operator, said members of the food service will be spreading cheer in a similar way. Forty-two employees at the service adopted eight children and one woman from the Women's Center to buy Christmas gifts for this season.

"We wanted to do something for somebody else because we feel fortunate," Robertson said. "We are wanting to start a new tradition with the toy drive."

Patty Kortkamp, a volunteer at the Women's Center, said people and organizations are more generous around the holidays.

"Church organizations and individuals call up and offer help and donations to us," she said. "Donations have really picked up in the last five years because of the national attention domestic violence has received."

Kortkamp said the center also has a party for all the people it has served during the year. About 50 children and 20 mothers usually attend the party, and gifts are distributed then.

"I think people who are well-off feel a twinge of guilt around the holidays, and by giving to us they are helping and teaching their children generosity," she said.

Robertson said the employees started the drive after Thanksgiving and will be collecting toys, clothing and money until Dec. 12.

Open house to show off SIUC program's benefits

By Anika Robertson
Staff Reporter

SIUC's Women's Studies program is opening its doors today to showcase the department's selections of literary works and research from a feminist perspective.

The holiday/end-of-semester open house will also display the department's services, as well as encouraging discussions of gender-related topics.

Women's Studies is an SIUC academic program which focuses on academic issues of interest to women, such as gender roles and female authors.

Debbie Morrow, secretary of Women's Studies, says the library at the open house has many interesting and diverse titles, including the empowerment of women in literature.

Everyone is invited to browse through the major-resource library and discuss ideas, she said.

"The open house gives more exposure to the program as a whole, and gives many students from different programs a chance to meet and discuss women's issues," Morrow said.

Beverly Stitt, Women's Studies coordinator, said students need to know about the books, journals and manuscripts available in the library

"The open house ... gives many students from different programs a chance to meet and discuss women's issues."

— especially graduate students doing research.

"There are some titles that aren't even in Morris Library. We desperately encourage faculty to bring female students to come and take advantage of the wide variety of works," she said.

Stitt also said other college departments may not have as much different information available on women's accomplishments.

The library has a lending program and an electronic database dealing with women's research.

The end-of-the-semester/holiday open house is today from 3 to 6 p.m. at 806 Chautauqua. Refreshments will be served. For more information, call 453-5141.

Music professors plan jazzy concert at Carbondale bar

By Dave Katzman
Staff Reporter

The SIUC Jazz Ensemble will bring that genre back to the environment where it was born — the nightclub — when it performs at Pinch Penny Pub tonight.

Bob Allison, associate professor of music, trumpet and jazz studies, said two bands will perform: his band, and a band led by Philip Brown, assistant professor of music and double bass.

Allison said his band is made up of the more-experienced players in the SIUC jazz community.

Both bands are called big bands because the lineup includes many musicians.

Allison said a typical big band includes a rhythm section, piano, bass, four to five trumpets, four trombones and five saxophones.

But do not expect to hear the big-band music that 1930s America swung to — these are jazz performers.

"A lot of people who don't know much about jazz, when they hear a big band is going to be playing, think in terms of 1940s dance band music, but that will not be the case Friday night," Allison said.

"Our things are more jazz-oriented and we'll be playing some quite-contemporary jazz selections."

Allison, an SIUC instructor and band leader for 13 years, said he feels a nightclub is the optimum setting for a jazz performance.

"I think jazz is always preferably played in a club rather than in a concert hall," Allison said. "The concert halls are a little more of a sterile atmosphere."

The SIUC Jazz Ensemble also plays outside the Carbondale area on occasion.

Some of the selections the ensemble currently plays are pieces arranged by Bob Mintzer of the Yellowjackets, Buddy Rich's "Big Swing Face" and "Take the A-Train," a Duke Ellington song arranged by Don Sabesky.

"If people come, they'll be quite surprised at the quality of the group," Allison said.

The SIUC Jazz Ensemble plays tonight at 8 p.m. at Pinch Penny Pub, 700 E. Grand Ave. There is no cover charge.

Mental exercise: Rec Center to host 36-hour study session

By Benjamin Golshahr

Students can seek relief from the stress or solace from distraction while cramming for finals at the SIUC Recreation Center — even for 36 hours straight if they want.

The recreation center will be open for 36 hours, beginning at 10 a.m. Sunday and lasting until 10 p.m. the following Monday, during the SIUC Recreation Center's "36-Hour Jam."

Brian Lukes, assistant director of intramural recreational sports at the center, said this is a great way for students to work off the stress that often accompanies studying for finals.

"They can take a break from studying and get some exercise, or, if they want, they can come here to find a quiet place to study," he said.

He said this has been very successful in past years.

SIUC's Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority is sponsoring a "Study-Jam" in the recreation center's Alumni Lounge.

Teresa Hudson-Handy, a sen-

"We're going to provide a quiet, nice atmosphere conducive to studying," she said.

"We're trying to get people to prepare for finals, which they should have been doing all semester."

Hudson-Handy said refreshments, including doughnuts and coffee, will be provided for late-night students at the "Study-Jam."

Lukes said he expects this year's turnout to be as good as last year's, if not better.

"I think it's going to be a huge success, especially with the involvement of the student group (Alpha Kappa Alpha)," he said.

All the recreation center's facilities will be available for the 36 hours, except the swimming pool and the "Study-Jam," both of which will conclude at midnight Sunday.

Proposed increase has healthy benefits

A PROPOSED $3 STUDENT HEALTH FEE increase should be implemented because of the many benefits SIUC students would receive from the extra funding. SIUC Health Services Director Terence Buck gave the Graduate and Professional Student Council this proposal Wednesday night and explained that the fee increase would be fair. We agree.

The increase would be across the board. This would be the first increase in four years. This increase would be minimal compared to other increases in tuition and housing that are put on the students frequently. Those increases, whether necessary or not, will not deliver the range of services of this extra $3.

By increasing at this rate, the University could offer many new services by next fall: an HIV-testing program, a new clinical psychologist, and a residence hall nurse and an emergency medical vehicle to transport mental health patients from SIUC to Harrisburg.

THE EFFICIENCY OF THE SIUC HEALTH services should be praised by trying to keep the costs down while providing quality services. Therefore, in order to help keep health services more effective and modern, this across-the-board increase should be approved by all student government bodies and administration.

For example, the new proposed HIV-testing program would be more convenient and logical if it was implemented on campus instead of students having drive to Jackson County Health Department, located between Carbondale and Murphysboro.

This low fee increase is reasonable and needed. But if officials plan to implement the increase, they should use the extra funding for these mentioned new services and the continue the efficiency of the programs.

Finals week arrives: Where's the coffee?

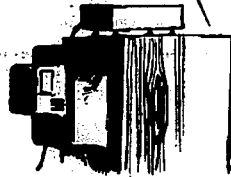

THE SEMESTER IS ALMOST OVER. WHETHER students are easing into it or rushing around cramming papers, projects and tests into the final days, one thing is clear: Finals are here.

Right now, some students are consuming caffeine to stay awake while others are taking their out their stress on roommates and friends. As we speak, Faner Hall computer lab is completely full and printers are spewing out sheets and sheets of dead trees. While all of this is going on, students are longing for the days when they had enough time to finish. Ahh, it all sounds like finals.

The Daily Egyptian wishes students the best on their finals and making it through another semester of conflict and controversy. As students hurry off to a final or to study, instead of wishing each other "Happy holidays," they should say, "Hope to see you next year."

Good luck.

Speaker misrepresents Muslims

Recently, Khalid Muhammad spoke at the Black Affairs Council Leadership Conference, and he lived up to every one of my dreaded expectations when he replayed the "dusty disc" rhetoric associated with the antiquated teachings of the misnamed, "Nation of Islam".

During the question and answer period, I tried to warn the audience that both Muhammad and Louis Farrakhan give a false image of the Islamic Religion.

Muhammad tried to give the Audience the impression that he is a devout Muslim, and he accused several prominent African Americans of being hypocritical and dangerous to the Progress of the Community.

I think that Muhammad should point the finger of hypocrisy and danger at his own person as long as he tries to present himself as Muslim while he still believes, follows, and teaches the un-Islamic and racist ideas associated with the "Nation of Islam" and

Louis Farrakhan. Muhammad and Farrakhan are demagogues who try to obtain a "stamp of Approval" for their hate-filled beliefs by putting on the Islamic disguise, much like the Grand Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan disguises himself as a Christian.

"Muhammed and Farrakan are demagogues who try to obtain a "stamp of approval" for their hate-filled beliefs by putting on an Islamic disguise, much like the Grand Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan disguises himself as a Christian."

I, and other Muslims of the Islamic Community in Carbondale, am trying to acquaint people in Southern Illinois with Islamic teachings so they can see how much more we share with their denominations than is usually thought.

Muhammad and Farrakhan only serve to damage these efforts by reinforcing the false, stereotyped, media-driven notion that Muslims are radicals, terrorists, polygamists, or other typed of extremists.

In the future, I hope that the BACLK will investigate their speakers more thoroughly and spend student funds more wisely by obtaining guests who provide more substance than emotional "hype and entertainment" in their talks, and who are not religious frauds who only hinder the efforts of right-minded people.

moved to its modern campus in 1989.

Klasek came to SIUC in 1971 as an assistant professor in the then Department of Curriculum, Instruction and Media. He was promoted to associate professor in 1977 and to full professor in 1981.

It was in 1978 that Klasek was promoted to director of SIUC's Office of International Education, and in 1984, he became associate vice president for academic affairs and research in charge of service programs.

Klasek has been the executive assistant to the president since 1990.

Linz Brown, associate director of international programs and services, said since Klasek became director of international education, his office, with the help of Klasek's leadership, has increased the amount of external funding for international activities by several million dollars.

Carla Coppi, assistant director of international programs and services, said since Klasek became director of international education, the international enrollment has boomed. Coppi said in the fall of 1978 there were 1,068 foreign students on campus — today there are 2,485.

SIUC Chancellor James Brown said Klasek's death will be a major loss for the University because Klasek was one of the finest in the nation for his efforts in promoting international education.

"What made him unique was his ability to see the possibilities for the University in expanding international education, an area few people know much about," Brown said.

Richard Blumenberg, an SIUC cinema and photography professor, said he has known Klasek for the past 20 years, and he has always been respected for his honesty and ability to listen and act on the ideas of others.

"He was an effective and well respected advocate of SIUC in the international arena," he said. "He made international education a significant part of this University."

In a written tribute to Klasek, James D. Quisenberry, director of international programs and services, said Klasek had a vision for the future of the University and a record of accomplishments.

Quisenberry said the loss of Klasek would mean the loss of "the fresh ideas and directions he cherished, of the leadership role he would have held in a new SIUC International Center of Excellence."

Bury-Swindell said Klasek had the foresight to see the need to have all the international programs on campus under one roof instead of spread about campus as they are today.

One of Klasek's most recent projects was working to establish a branch SIUC campus in the Chom Thong province of Thailand.

Bury-Swindell said wherever Klasek went he promoted the University.

"He always had the interest of SIU at heart," she said.

Klasek is survived by his wife, the former Lila Wanek; three children, Steven of Des Moines, Iowa, J. Mark of Lincoln, Neb., and Terese Francis of Wilber, Neb.; and eight grandchildren.

The visitation will be after 5 p.m. today at Meredith Funeral Home, 300 S. University Ave. Funeral services will be held at 10 a.m. on Saturday in Shryock Auditorium.

are going to shift gears after finals," he said. "Our platform should be finished before we leave here (for break) so I can sleep when I get home."

Parsons said he would like to have a mayoral candidate chosen by the time he leaves for break.

"We would like to have a three-person ticket before we leave for break," he said. "That way, if we get in we can guarantee people we will take action because we'd have a majority."

"I can tell you one thing, Mr. Ensor will not be added to the ticket in the spring elections. That will not happen, and we'll explain that later," Parsons said.

He also said it may seem like

SIUC is trying to run Carbondale, but that is not the case.

"The student population is equal to the community population, so we need to have a voice," Parsons said. "If people perceive it (campaigning three candidates) as running the city, then that's what the current city council is doing, and there are a lot of unhappy community members and students now. If they think we're a bunch of reactionaries and radicals that's fine, but we're going through the same process (of election) just like they did." Parsons said he definitely has a few issues he would address if elected.

"The bottom line, if I was to win, is to try and help this community move towards positive growth such as small business," he said. "If I'm elected, I want to see a mass-transit system happen. It can make a tremendous difference to this city and university. I would also listen to as many people as possible, and listen to their concerns."

Jemal Powell, USG senator for the College of Mass Communications and Media Arts, drafted the resolution passed Wednesday night, and said earlier that USG should back the two candidates.

"I feel these people will do a great job on the Carbondale City Council, so let's get behind them and support them," he said.

Jack Dyer, SIUC executive director of University Relations, said the board was very receptive to Brown's recommendation and added he feels the larger committee will make the search more thorough.

"The original board statute (of having five committee members) was just to streamline the search to make it go faster," Dyer said. "Brown has decided to increase the committee size to put more depth into the search."

SIUC's non-student constituency groups, such as the Faculty Senate and Civil Service, will each nominate two representatives.

SIUE's Faculty Senate and University Staff Senate will each nominate four representatives, and student governments of both campuses — such as the Undergraduate Student Government and Graduate and Professional Student Council — will also be selected from a pool of nominees.

The board will select committee members from among those nominated.

Once selected, the committee will review a list of applicants for the chancellor's position and make a recommendation to the board of the most qualified individual.

SIU advertised nationally for chancellor applicants in fall 1994, placing ads in publications such as the Chronicle of Higher Education.

The application deadline was Dec. 1, and Brown said names of the candidates will be kept confidential until the search is complete to ensure fairness in the selection process.

USG President Edwin Sawyer and GPSIC President Patrick Smith both agreed a larger search committee is an improvement, saying they believe students will receive more representation on the committee.

Smith said, however, that the committee is still not totally fair because students are greatly outnumbered by faculty and staff representatives on the committee.

In other board business, contracts totaling $1.5 million were approved to renovate and improve Lentz Hall, a campus dining hall in Thompson Point.

Consumers benefit from holiday sales

The Washington Post

This holiday season is shaping up as a Golden Age for consumers, according to retailers, industry analysts and shoppers who say prices for many goods are steady or even falling because of a bruisingly competitive marketplace.

Retailers have trimmed their costs, restructured their businesses and slashed their prices to appeal to today's tightfisted consumers, who have become accustomed to warehouse-type prices at wholesale clubs and discount stores, retailers and analysts said.

In a survey of 50 retailers representing more than 24,000 stores nationwide, conducted by the Bloomfield Hills-based Taubman Centers Inc., 40 said they have not increased their prices, and 20 of the 40 said they have cut them below 1993 levels. Only three of the 50 said they have increased their prices, while seven said their pricing strategy was mixed between hikes and cuts.

"Make no mistake, it's tough out there," said Robert Mang, chairman of Washington, D.C., area department store chain Woodward & Lothrop Inc., which is aggressively discounting its merchandise and offering $10 gift certificates to shoppers who buy $100 of goods. "Everybody is endeavoring to become a low-cost provider."

Not all prices are stable—coffee, gasoline and new automobiles are notable exceptions—but in many merchandise categories, including apparel, consumer electronics, photography equipment, leather goods, jewelry and shoes, prices aren't rising, retailers said, and in some cases are dropping.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics, which compiles the national consumer price index, reports inflation was running at only a 2.8 percent annual rate through September, and that much of that rise came in specific areas such as transportation and medical costs.

The cost of clothing and upkeep, which includes services such as dry cleaning and tailoring, has fallen by almost 1 percent in that period, the agency said.

Executives at Bentonville, Ark.-based Wal-Mart, the nation's largest retailer, described the retail environment to industry analysts in August as "disinflationary."

"There has been no inflation pressure in retailing," said analyst Kenneth Gassman of Richmond, Va.-based Davenport & Co.

"Retailers continue to beat on suppliers for the best prices, and suppliers are going worldwide to find them. ... Price points are holding, or are below in many cases, where they were one to three years ago."

The price restraint, which many retailers see as essential to drawing cost-conscious consumers, may hurt some retailers, according to retail analysts. They said strong holiday sales may make for weak earnings reports in January.

"I am concerned about the profits that will be earned this holiday season," said retail analyst Janet Mangano of Burnham Securities. "Almost to a one, I expect (retailers') gross margins to decline" when they are reported in mid-January.

From the consumer's point of view, however, these are the glory days.

"There's no question promotional activity started much earlier than it has in the past," said Mark Shoifet, spokesman for the New York City-based International Council of Shopping Centers.

the United Nations and we have not received that yet."

At the United Nations, an aide to Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said there were no plans to recommend a Bosnia withdrawal to the Security Council. Spokesman Joe Sills said Boutros-Ghali still hopes to achieve a peace agreement in Bosnia.

In Washington, defense officials said the size of the force would depend on the threat to the overland withdrawal operation. If NATO determined that allied troops would be forced to fight their way out, as many as 40,000 troops, tanks and artillery could be sent to Bosnia. (Pentagon officials said the plans did not involve the 2,000 U.S. Marines stationed on ships in the Adriatic as a quick deployment force in case of emergency.)

More likely, senior Pentagon officials said, was a withdrawal in a relatively benign climate requiring only 20,000 NATO troops to protect the U.N. force. Clinton has repeatedly pledged that the United States would not send combat troops to Bosnia to impose a peace on the warring factions. And administration officials stressed that any NATO force would quickly leave Bosnia in the event U.N. troops pull out.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said planning for the evacuation was "the appropriate course of action." But he added that he hoped U.S. troops would not be needed and that "in any case, the Congress will want to discuss these contingency plans with the administration in detail."

Dole, a critic of current operations in Bosnia, said it was crucial that American troops not "be subject to United Nations decisions on their manner of operations, rules of engagement or ability to defend themselves, as is presently the case with NATO air forces."

plex, of failing to install an effective fire alarm system and failing to provide an adequate security system that would have prevented someone from entering the building and starting the fire.

Birkhahn also claims in the lawsuit that she suffered severe personal injury and severe mental anguish due to the fire, which resulted in a loss of her finances from medical bills, loss of earning capacity and loss of enjoyment of life.

Birkhahn also is accusing the complex's management of not keeping the fire doors closed to prevent fire and smoke from spreading throughout the building, constructing the building of materials that were not adequate for containing a fire and not providing proper fire escapes and fire extinguishers.

Police still are investigating the incident. They believe the fire was started intentionally, but no arrests have been made.

'Crack' down on resalers in Carbondale

By John Kmita
Staff Reporter

Two separate cases regarding the possession of "crack" cocaine with the intent to distribute in Carbondale were handled Tuesday by juries in Benton.

The United States Attorney for the Southern District of Illinois, W. Charles Grace, stated that on Dec. 6, a federal jury in Benton convicted Emanuel Lee Gould, 20, of Carbondale, of possession with intent to distribute "crack" cocaine in Carbondale.

The evidence in the case showed that on September 14, 1994, Gould, who was staying at Carbondale's Relax Inn, had in his possession 3.3 grams of packaged "crack" cocaine, packaged for resale.

The evidence also showed Gould had distributed 1.1 grams of "crack" cocaine to a minor just prior to his arrest.

Prior to the trial, Gould was ordered to be detained without bond. He remains in the custody of the U.S. Marshal pending sentencing.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Southern Illinois Enforcement Group, and the Carbondale Police Department conducted the investigation in the case.

Chief Judge J. Phil Gilbert set sentencing in the case for March 5, 1995, in Benton.

Gould's conviction carries a minimum mandatory 5 years imprisonment and a maximum possible penalty of up to 40 years imprisonment and a fine of up to $2,000,000.

Grace also announced that in a separate case Tuesday, in Benton, two Carbondale men were indicted.

Henry Lee Griffin, Sr., 44, and Henry Lee Griffin, Jr., 18, of Carbondale were indicted by a Federal Grand Jury, in a one-count indictment charging them with possession of "crack" cocaine with the intent to distribute.

The violation took place June 27 in Jackson County.

The offense carries with it a maximum penalty of 20 years' imprisonment or a fine of $1 million, or both, and up to three years' supervised release.

Information for the indictment was obtained in an investigation conducted by the Carbondale Police Department and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The F.B.I. refused to comment on the cases or the issue of "crack" cocaine in Carbondale.

SIUC professor investigates bill

By Diane Dove
Staff Reporter

As time runs out for farmers to comply with a federal land-erosion program or risk losing benefits, an SIUC professor is investigating the handling of the situation.

Professor Steven Kraft, of agribusiness economics, along with Dick Esseks, a Northern Illinois University political science professor, spent more than six years studying the implementation of a program authorized by the 1985 farm bill.

The study has been funded by the National Resource Conservation Service (NRCS), the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), the Illinois Ground Water Consortium and the Joyce Foundation.

"We're studying a program called conservation compliance, where farmers with highly erodible land who want to remain eligible for USDA benefits must fully implement conservation-compliance plans before January 1995," Kraft said.

Kraft said conservation-compliance plans to conserve soil involve regulation of farming practices such as crop rotation, the type of tillage used and the amount of residue left on the ground after planting.

"We will be interviewing farmers in the corn belt who have conservation-compliance plans," he said.

Kraft said his new survey will look at:

- farmers' reactions to the conservation-compliance requirements
- farmers' progress in implementing the compliance plans.

■ their expectations regarding the extent to which they will be monitored, and

■ whether they think it is likely they will lose benefits if they fail to comply.

In a 1993 survey, Kraft said he and Esseks found 35 percent of the farmers in the study had not begun implementing the plan.

"Twenty percent said they anticipated doing all the implementation in 1994 and 15 percent said they didn't know when they would do it," he said.

"I can see them not complying and hoping it will be relaxed through the 1995 farm bill."

Farmers who fail to comply with the program will lose benefits such as crop insurance and disaster payments, Kraft said.

Kraft said 47 percent of the farmers believed there was at least a 50-percent likelihood they would lose their benefits if found to be out of compliance with the program.

Nearly one-third of the farmers believed there was at least a 50-percent chance they would be found to be out of compliance.

The survey also found that while 71 percent of the farmers in the study believed the plans would not change or would increase their earnings, 25 percent believed the plans would decrease profits, Kraft said.

Blues to overcome T-Birds

Blues saxman A.C. Reed is in the process of buying T-Birds on North Washington. Reed says he will transform the bar into the best blues club 'this side of Maxwell Street.' He plans to open the establishment by Jan. 1.

When Blues saxman A.C. Reed performed in Carbondale at a Sunset Concert in July, he was planning to open a blues club in Minneapolis. But now his plans have changed.

"I changed my mind," he said. "It stays too cold there."

So Reed, legally known as Aaron Corthen, shifted his ambitions south to Carbondale, where he is in the process of buying T-Birds, 111 N. Washington. He hopes to open the new establishment by Jan. 1.

Reed said he plans to feature the best blues acts this side of Maxwell Street.

"I'll play there quite a bit," he said. "And if I don't, then I'll get a replacement from Chicago. I'll get all my friends down here; you know: Junior Wells, Buddy Guy, Koko Taylor..."

Reed said he's already spoken with Taylor, who said she would perform at the grand opening of his club.

"It's no problem with them, they'll do it for me," he said.

Reed said he decided to open up his own club because of his failing health. He said he had to go to the hospital after playing a gig at the Kingston Mines in Chicago.

"At those places, they don't care if you drop dead on stage as long as you play," he said. "So I'm getting my own club. That way, if I don't feel like playing, I don't have to."

Reed still has to have the liquor-license transfer approved by Carbondale City Council at the Dec. 20 meeting. The Carbondale Liquor Advisory Board recommended the transfer at a meeting Wednesday night.

The club will operate under the name A. C. Reed's B & S Lounge, with B & S standing for blues and soul. When Reed is on the road or playing other gigs, Dennis Immen will manage

Weekend Spotlight

On key: Artist to sing

By Paul Eisenberg
Entertainment Editor

Georgy Rock, a folk artist who will perform tonight at Cousin Andy's Coffee House, summed up her abilities in one sentence.

"I sing on key, which is a wonderful plus, and I play guitar a little better than adequately," she said.

Her vocal style has been compared to that of Bonnie Raitt and Michelle Shocked, and she recently opened a show for the Little River Band in St. Louis, where Rock currently hails from.

"It's tough to be a warm up act," she said, "but if you can survive it and make just two more fans, then you've won."

She said she will play some of her original music, as well as some songs Raitt wrote before she was signed to a major label. She will also perform songs by local songwriters.

"Last year a couple of people had their stuff (songs) purchased because I was doing their stuff," she said.

Rock, originally from California, was traveling the United States and Europe with a band before deciding to settle in the Midwest in 1983.

"I discovered that the Midwest is great," she said. "Here, a person is first, it's not the kind of person you are that matters, it's who you really are. I liked it, so I stayed, built up a family of people, and I rediscovered myself."

That came on the heels of what Rock

Bars offer holiday cheer by keeping doors open

By Aleksandra Macys
Senior Reporter

Those who now have time to celebrate and are planning on enjoying the holidays in Carbondale will have ample opportunity to do so, as most local bars will remain open and offer diverse entertainment.

Genice Hanson, a bartender at Sidetracks, 101 W. College Street, said the bar will remain open and have normal business hours.

Hanson also said the bar will have bands on some weekends and will have a band for their New Year's Eve party on Dec. 31.

Finch Penny Pub, 700 E. Grand Avenue, will also remain open during the University break and on Dec. 22 will feature St. Stephens Blues, on Dec. 29, The Natives and on Dec. 31, in conjunction with their New Year's Eve Party, Professor 50s will provide the music, according to manager Erik Jensen.

Jensen said Nighthawk will play Dec. 15. Doug Woodruff, manager of Deacons, 700 E.

The Fighters fight long-distance relationship to stay together

By Dave Katzman
Staff Reporter

When Green Day and The Offspring took over 'Billboard' Magazine's Top 200 list this year, punk rock proved to the world that it is indeed still alive and kicking.

Carbondale will learn the same lesson tonight when The Fighters march down from Chicago to play with Carbondale's Diz Hicks and Toucan Slam, from nearby Olney.

The Fighters formed when two of the members, lead singer Jason Mojica and original drummer Don Shrader, were attending SIUC. Bassist Mike McKee and guitarist Paul Koob, remaining at Chicago, studying at DePaul University.

While many long-distance relationships are shaky at best, The Fighters were not affected by the 350 miles of cornfields that separated it. Mojica would call up Koob and hum a melody, Koob would process the murmuring into a guitar riff and the two would have a jam session over the phone.

Mojica and Shrader returned to Chicago in May 1993 and, within a month, the group released "Give 'em the Business," its first 7-inch EP. To release the vinyl, the band started up Rocco Records, a spinoff of a comic/fanzine distribution company already in existence. "We practiced three or four times and then we had our first show," said Mike McKee. The Fighters former bassist who followed the maroon and white tradition in the band and transferred to SIUC in July. "It was kind of laid back; we goofed around a lot."

Mojica stayed up north, but Shrader decided to return to SIUC. The Fighters enlisted C.J. Heimberger to take over the drums and released two more 7 inches, "Breaking Bones For Lambs" and

"The Rambling Boys of Pleasure," a split release with fellow Chicago dwellers Winepress. The band took to the road for a mini-tour earlier this year, playing five shows from Olney to Huntsville, Ala.

"It was a little bit shorter than we wanted it to be," McKee said. "We weren't looking to make money off the tour, it was mostly just to have fun, meet people and to get the name of the band out so people outside of Chicago would know us."

McKee does not see the future of punk rock changing too drastically with the recent success of Green Day.

"Seeing Green Day on MTV wouldn't affect The Fighters at all because I don't think The Fighters have any ideas about cashing in on the pop-punk thing," McKee said.

"One good thing about Green Day being on MTV is that they were once like The Fighters — making their own records and doing their own tours."

And, just like the pastel-haired punkers from California, The Fighters plan to record another 7-inch EP, several compilation tracks and its first full-length release next year, all by itself.

The Fighters, Diz Hicks and Toucan Slam play tonight at Patty's Place inside Detours, 760 E. Grand Ave. The show starts at 10 p.m. Cover is $3.

OPEN, from page 8

Grand Avenue, said the bar will remain open for normal business hours and some bands are scheduled to appear in the upcoming weeks at Patty's.

Woodridge said the owners will play it by ear as to whether bands will continue to appear throughout the break, depending on attendance of the next few weeks.

Detours is also having a New Year's Eve party featuring a Chinese buffet, champagne and other New Year's traditions, Woodridge said.

He said tickets for the party are available now.

Linda Parrish, owner of Gatsby's II, 610 S. Illinois Avenue, said the bar and billiards room will open at 5 p.m. instead of the usual 1 p.m. during the break.

She said plans for a New Year's Eve Party are still up in the air.

Stix Bar and Billiards, 517 S. Illinois Avenue, also will remain open to patrons during the break.

Beach Bumz, 611 S. Illinois Avenue, will remain open during the break and some bands will perform.

PK's, 308 S. Illinois Avenue, will remain open for normal business hours and will feature bands on the weekends. Slappin' Henry Blue, featuring Tawl Paul, will appear on Dec. 31 for the New Year's Eve party.

Bill Dick, owner of Cousins Restaurant, 201 N. Washington Street, said the bar will remain open and feature bands, on weekends.

Dick said the bar will also have a New Year's Eve party.

Although most bars will be open, the Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois Avenue, will not.

Richard Simpson, owner of the Hangar, said the bar will be closed from Dec. 16 to Jan. 10. He said the bar will reopen Jan. 11, with live bands beginning appearances on Jan. 13.

"I don't like to stay open when I can't afford to have live bands," he said.

described as one of the worst times in her life.

She had just lost the last of her childhood friends, and she was considering hanging up her gloves.

"That was the last straw," she said.

"The ones who really knew me well were all gone. I lost heart. I found myself thinking 'maybe I should just manage a club and let other people perform.'"

"But I took a deep breath and decided to start again. I keep all my friends in my heart."

Now back in full performance gear, Rock has garnered several honors.

The Riverfront Times ranked her first among St. Louis area folk musicians, and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch said she "reminds you of Joan Baez."

"I like to be connected with people," Rock said.

"Tonight, she will have a good chance of making that connection, because as Cousin Andy's promoter Vern Crawford puts it, 'it's not a bar, it's a listening room." "Anyone who wants to sing along, well they can be in the band too," Rock said.

"That's why I title all my stuff 'Georgy Rock and friends.'" the bar. "We are looking for 25- to 30-year-olds who like good music," Inmen said after the liquor board meeting. Reed said he plans to remodel the bar and build a good handstand in the back. He will move to Carbondale as soon as his license is approved, bringing members of his band, The Sparkplugs, with him. Reed has many contacts in blues circles, having recorded with Muddy Waters, Albert Collins, and more recently with Bonnie Raitt and Stevie Ray Vaughn. This will be somewhat of a homecoming for Reed, who lived in Carbondale in the 1940s. In that era, he had to travel to Cairo to get a gig. "There was nothing in Carbondale back then — nothing," he said. If everything goes as planned, Reed will not have to travel that far anymore.

Film's stunts better than script

By Peter Rainer
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD—The best thing about "Drop Zone" are the stunt sky divers who dive-bomb through the air at speeds of 200 mph or float together in formation. The director is smart enough to keep the stunt divers at the center of the action. And a good thing too: The script is so preposterously contrived and tone-deaf that any attempt to play it straight would be laughed off the screen. Wesley Snipes plays Pete Nessip, a U.S. marshal tracking down a team of stunt sky divers who have a plan to swoop down on the Drug Enforcement Agency in Washington and abscond with their entire computerized roster of undercover drug agents. The team's asking price for the DEA list—$2 million a month. (No doubt a bargain compared to this film's budget.) Pete first gets wind of these jumpers when he and his brother Terry (Malcolm-Jamal Warner) are charged with transporting a convicted computer whiz (Michael Jeter) to a federal prison on a commercial 747. The jumpers, led by the truly bad Ty Monerief (Gary Busey), yank the master hacker off the approved, bringing members of his band, The Sparkplugs, with him. Later Pete goes to another sky diver—the good-bad girl parolee Jessie (Yancy Butler)—for help in cracking the case. Whereupon Ty offs her highflying boyfriend. So their motives for revenge are personal. The ground-level action is mostly filler for the high-flying jamboree.

New trainer for Aviation class

Donated to prep future UPS hires

By Kathleen N. Beattie
Special to the Daily Egyptian

A new DC-8 cockpit-procedure trainer which teaches students to locate airplane system problems will become part of the curriculum for third-semester aviation technology students within the next few weeks.

Scaled like the cockpit of the plane it represents, the trainer was donated by United Parcel Service early in June from the UPS center in Louisville, Ky.

The DC-8 cockpit-procedure trainer will work together with the Boeing 707 trainer as a realistic setting in which to teach students about real flight problems they may encounter.

The students will receive two to two-and-one-half hours instruction on the use of the procedure trainers. They will then be allowed to use the trainers in self study before being tested for mastery of the system.

Having the system saves money for the students, class instructor Charles Rodriguez said. If the students wanted to use the system on their own they would have to spend about $150 an hour. In the class setting students will practice on the trainers for five to eight hours.

"The simulator experience is very valuable to the students and saves them on expenses. They also receive an added bonus of being able to make the transition into jobs quickly because of the experience they have on the trainers," Rodriguez said.

The procedure trainers are considered superior to actual aircraft because they are noise free, less expensive to operate, and are less of a hazard than real aircraft.

"If something goes wrong with the real aircraft, it can be very dangerous. With the procedure trainer we can simulate the problems with no danger," Rodriguez said.

The trainer looks like the actual cockpit of the DC-8, except that it has one extra panel designed for the instructor's use. This panel allows the instructor to cause certain problems to occur during engine start up in order to test student reactions to the problems.

The instructor can cause a wide range of problems, including causing an engine to false start. A false start could include both a hot start — when too much fuel is used — and a hung start, when too little fuel is used. The electrical and other systems can also be affected by the instructor's panel.

Larry Staples, chairperson for aviation technologies, said, "The procedure-trainer testing works to create an understanding in electrical systems and builds the students' knowledge at the same time."

"The procedure trainer is a terrific thing. It's like a super-duper video game designed to train aviators," Rodriguez said.

The DC-8 cockpit-procedure trainer will be used in the third-semester power-plant testing class in which students are taught the starting procedures for a turbine engine. Turbine engines power large commuter aircraft such as the DC-8 and the Boeing 707.

"Having both systems allows the students to be exposed to both the Boeing and the Douglas system, and provides an easy transition for them between aircraft," Staples said.

Rodriguez said he works to train mechanics who will apply good logical techniques.

"You need an active mind to make the repairs. You can have a robot replace parts. We need someone who can logically solve problems and troubleshoot," Rodriguez said.

The donation is beneficial to UPS because it will allow them to hire SIUC students knowing that they are already familiar with the equipment they will be using, Rodriguez added.

Having the two systems also allows the instructors to spend more individual time with students in the trainers, and makes a backup teaching aid available in case one has a malfunction.

"The program is reminiscent of the training of general practitioners," Rodriguez said. "The students are trained in a wide range of aircraft from wood structures to modern structures."

After successfully completing the program, students can apply for the airframes-and-powerplants license through the Federal Aviation Administration.

"Our students will be qualified upon graduation to work on just about any type of aircraft," Rodriguez said.

SIUC is highly advanced in the training of aviation technology students, Staples said, with only Purdue offering a similar program. The systems are available not only to students enrolled in the technologies program, but also to flight students who wish to take the course as an elective.

The training technology students receive is often ahead of the training airlines can offer their employees.

"Very few companies have the equipment to begin with. In the general sense we are better-equipped than most airlines to train," Staples said.

Defense to investigate flight cost

By John F. Harris
Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Although a commercial flight was leaving the next day, but that wasn't soon enough for Air Force Gen. Joseph W. Ashy. Instead, the new leader of the U.S. Space Command traveled on an Air Force C-141 transport jet—which flew him, one aide, and the Ashy family cat from Italy to Colorado at an estimated cost of at least $120,000.

Ashy's Sept. 9 flight—on a 200-passenger plane specially equipped with a luxury cabin and carrying a steward on its crew of 13—was more convenient at the time, but it is causing big trouble now. After a complaint from Capitol Hill, Defense Department Acting Inspector General Derek J. Vander Schaaf has agreed this week to investigate the propriety of the flight and whether Air Force public-affairs personnel were truthful in answering press inquiries about it.

Ashy, who followed Pentagon regulations by paying $85 fare for the cat, declined to comment. A spokesman at the Space Command in Colorado Springs, Lt. Col. Dennis Gauzi, said Ashy and his aide considered flying a commercial flight out of Rome on Sept. 10, but worried the schedule wouldn't give him enough time to take an eight-hour training course in Colorado the next day on procedures for alerting the president in the event of an air attack. He was sworn in on Sept. 13.

Ashy, a 32-year Air Force veteran and fighter pilot, didn't want to leave any earlier, because he was still commander of the 16th Air Force in Italy, a job that included directing air missions over Bosnia.

Air Force officials acknowledge that Ashy's flight looks bad, but said that no regulations were broken. Ashy, they said, was on an especially tight schedule to get to his new posting.

Gingrich: cut off wealthy

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—Acknowledging the need to curb the growth of entitlement programs, incoming House Speaker Newt Gingrich said Thursday that wealthy retirees should buy their own health insurance and that Congress eventually must "look at" long-term and perhaps painful ways to keep Social Security solvent.

Denying Medicare to retirees with annual incomes of more than $100,000 would save the government about $6 billion over a five-year period, Gingrich said during a breakfast interview.

He also expressed regret at having suggested that as many as one in four White House staffers had used drugs before joining the Clinton administration and at calling President and Mrs. Clinton one-time members of the "counterculture."

The outspoken Georgia Republican said he stands by his remarks, but added that he should have kept them to himself.

Last season, UNC-C was the Metro runner-up and made a post season appearance at the NIT.

The highlight of the 49ers 1993-'94 campaign, though, was a 64-62 home win over Louisville, who at the time was ranked No. 5 in the nation.

UNC-C head coach Jeff Mullins is going into his sixth season and said this Niner team may be his best ever.

“Every year our goal is to sustain our program,” he said. “We want to compete for the league title each year. This (recruiting) class and the talent of our returnees will allow us to continue to compete for the top spot in the Metro.”

Lang is complimented by 6-1 guard Andre Davis, who averaged 11 a game last year and Central Arizona Community College transfer Ponce Adams (6-2, 20).

Saluki head coach Rich Herrin and his troops are coming off a 72-65 loss to rival St. Louis Monday and stand at 2-2 on the season.

Herrin said his team will have to be sharp Saturday as UNC-C is no exception to the Dawgs' brutal non-conference schedule.

“We're looking forward to Saturday's game at Charlotte,” he said. “We'll have to play well to stay in the game, but you can say that about every game we're scheduled to play this season. There are no automatic Ws.”

SIUC turned the ball over 23 times against SLU mainly due to a 2-3 half court trap the Billikens used in the second half.

The Salukis are still searching for a consistent point guard this year as freshman Shane Hawkins and junior transfers Jaratio Tucker and Johnny Datzic are all sharing time.

Herrin said someone has to step up and lead his team the way SLU seniors did on Monday.

“It wasn't that we didn't play hard. St. Louis is a very talented team,” he said. “They've got great confidence and senior leadership. We're missing that right now, but we'll be all right if we just take care of the basketball. We'll get that (turnovers) corrected.”

SIUC and North Carolina-Charlotte tip-off Saturday evening at 6:35.

where I was going to go,” he said. “It was a last minute thing. I think I decided (to attend SIUC) just because it was close to U of I, and I made a lot of good friends there (Illinois).”

In his first year as a Saluki, Franks contributed right away. He set an SIUC season-best time in the 100-yard butterfly (49.51 seconds) and the second-best time in the 50-yard freestyle (21.13 seconds).

SIUC men's swim coach Rick Walker said Franks has brought a lot to the team since his arrival last season.

“Mark has added a lot of seniority. When he came in he was a transfer from the University of Illinois when they dropped their program. He added a lot of maturity, not only in the water, but also out.”

This season, Franks has continued to win, and has improved while doing it. At the MVC Championships last weekend, the Saluki senior won all three events he entered — the 200-yard individual medley, 100-yard butterfly and 100-yard backstroke.

Franks has had great expectations put on him by Walker, who expects him to have his best season as a collegiate swimmer this year. Franks said he is just now beginning to live up to those expectations.

“This past weekend (MVC Championships), on two days rest, I swam my best time in the 200-individual medley (1:51.73),” he said. “In my 100-fly, which is my best event overall, I was sort of disappointed. I was about a half second off of what time I wanted to go.”

“In the next three months, there's going to be a big push for conference and the NCAA's, but it will be my biggest season.”

Walker agreed that Franks' strength in the water is the 100-yard butterfly, but his greatest strength away from the pool is his attitude.

“It's (staying focused) very difficult for a senior, because, to some degree, the light is at the end of the tunnel. It's very easy to get complacent and just try and finish out the year.”

“Mark, on the other hand, is trying to not go through that, and is continually trying to better himself.”

Franks said after he finishes this season, he will continue towards his hotel-restaurant management degree. He will also train for the 1996 Olympics, but as a swimmer for Great Britain, not the United States.

in both seasons this year.”
The weather was not the only reason for the hunter's success, Shelton said, the farmer's crops also had an effect.

“Deer are susceptible to crop harvests in many counties,” Shelton said. “Because of the availability and abundance of food the deer were out, and there were plenty of hunters out there taking advantage of it.”

John Roseberry, the senior scientist at the co-operative wildlife research laboratory at SIUC, said the reasons for a good harvest this year are many, but the large population is the biggest reason.

“The population has gone up continually since hunting started in 1957,” Roseberry said. “There have been years that were flat, but the real steep increase came in the 1980s.”

“The white-tail deer are so adaptive and versatile, that they are able to utilize a lot of the habitat around here that scientists thought they would not be able to use.”

After the first shotgun season, the total harvest was down from last year, but according to Roseberry, things evened out in the second season.

“There is a tendency for the harvest to even out second season for a couple of reasons,” he said. “Hunters during first season tend to trophy hunt more, then go after the does as the season winds down to fill their tags.”

“Another reason is that the yearling males are very vulnerable. They get hammered real hard first season, and there are not as many out there second season and hunters end up taking more females.”

Roseberry said the herd is continuing to grow in most counties, which can be contributed to good herd management by conservation officials, and recreational hunting.

SIUC is currently developing a computer program that is able to retrieve historic deer harvest data to be used to analyze population trends in Illinois counties. The program will inevitably be able to assist scientists predict the harvests for deer seasons as a means of population control and protection.

“Ultimately this will be one of the many tools at the scientists' disposal, when they are determining the number of deer tags that are given out in each county,” Roseberry said.

This is a Federal Aid project. A percentage of the money from the excise taxes on firearms, ammunition and tags is given back to individual states to be used for conservation research.

Roseberry said this particular project is federally funded to develop the computer program whose only purpose is to enhance the management of the deer herd.

the coach wanted us to do,” Hassell said.

Scott was also pleased that her squad could put together two solid halves of basketball.

“Well that felt good and I think the key was that we did it with our defense,” she said.

The Salulus defense set the stage causing 36 Northern Illinois turnovers, 21 in the first half alone.

“Our quickness with (Kasia) McClendon, Gilmore and Hassell on the court at the same time really, really bothered them (NIU),” Scott said.

Forward Christel Jefferson did an especially good job stopping NIU standout Leslie Pottinger holding the senior guard to just 12 points, which was almost five points below her season average.

“Her (Jefferson) mission going into the game was to keep Pottinger in check and I think she had two at half time, so she did a good job on her,” she said.

The Salukis also got some unexpected help from freshman Branda Anderson scoring four points and grabbing five boards in just ten minutes of action.

“It felt good I haven't playing as well as I hoped, when I got here and it was nice come in here and contribute,” she said.

SIUC will not play again for over a week, until the team heads to Puerto Rico for the San Juan Shootout.

Scott said there is still work to be done before the team travels to the Shootout on Dec. 19.

“We are going to continue to work on defense, but I think we need to learn how to rebound a little bit,” she said. “Our motion game is still a little rough, we have a long way to go with our motion offense.”

The Salukis will take on Old Dominion in San Juan, Puerto Rico Dec. 19 at 2 p.m.

Salukis face UNC 49ers

By Grant Deady
Sports Editor

Chapel Hill, N.C. may be home to the No. 1 Tarheels, but the city of Charlotte has got a team of its own this season.

The Saluki men's basketball team is taking its show on the road for the next three games with North Carolina-Charlotte being SIUC's first destination.

The 49ers boast one of the nation's top recruiting classes according to "Hoop Scoop" magazine and return a first-team All-Metro Conference selection in 6-7, 235-pound Jarvis Lang.

Lang averaged over 19 points and 10 rebounds per game last season, while throwing down a school record 54 slam dunks.

"There's more talent on this team than any team since I've been here," Lang said. "I think we will battle for the conference crown. I want the league race to be a dog fight. That makes you better as a player and

Gilmore powers SIUC to win

Team ends 5-year losing skid

Turn about is fair play as the SIUC women's basketball team crushed Northern Illinois 87-57, Thursday night at the Arena.

The Salukis, 3-2, lost to the Huskies by 48 at DeKalb last season, and lost the last five games in the series, but used tremendous defense to win its third straight at home.

SIUC women's basketball coach Cindy Scott said that beating Northern Illinois was especially sweet.

"Well I'll tell you it took five years to do it, that's a long time coming, but I thought we played extremely well defensively tonight."

Nikki Gilmore took over the game scoring 18 of her 21 points in the first half and sparked the Salukis on the defensive end swiping the Huskies seven times. Throughout the game Gilmore was able to drive to the basket, scoring herself or setting up a teammate.

Gilmore said she did not understand why Northern Illinois did not compensate for her penetration.

"I can't believe they (NIU) let me do that," Gilmore said. "In the second half they went to a zone and then went back to a man. I thought they should have went to a zone earlier or sagged back on me."

"She (Nikki) had a super first half, we just beat them on transition taking the ball to the hole," Scott said. "And then we were running a clear for her, letting her go one on one and people can't contain that."

Freshman Cari Hassell also added to the Huskies woes scoring 15 points on five-of-eight shooting from the field.

"We came out there worked hard, executed well, we did exactly what

Swimmer sets high expectations

By Chris Clark
Staff Reporter

For SIUC swimmer Mark Franks, the road to Carbondale has been a long one.

Born in Germany, Franks moved to Ohio when he was six. A year later he moved to Connecticut, where he lived for eight years.

In his senior year of high school, Franks moved to Switzerland and attended American International School in Zurich. He then came back to the United States and attended the University of Illinois for two years.

While at Illinois, Franks set three school relay records and two backstroke marks. But after his sophomore year, Illinois cut its men's swimming program, which left Franks facing yet another move.

Shotgun deer season totals up

By Sean Walker
Staff Reporter

The shotgun deer season came to a close last weekend, and the Illinois Department of Conservation released the total number of deer harvested in Illinois showing a slight increase from last year.

Paul Shelton, the program manager of the forest wildlife program at the Illinois Department of Conservation, said there were 96,230 deer harvested in Illinois this season, which is up 4,675 from last year.

Jackson County harvested the third most deer in the state behind Pike County's first place total of 4,020 deer followed by Adams County in second place with 2,910.

"We expected it to be close to last year's numbers, but it was slightly higher than we expected," Shelton said. "We were sure it wouldn't be a run away from last year given the fact that we had excellent weather
