Tap owner raps pitcher-ban policy

By JoBe Rimar
Staff Writer

Local bar owners shouldn’t have to take the consequences when underage drinkers using a fake identification to get into the bar get arrested, says John Budwick, assistant manager of the American Tap.

Budwick, who brought his case to the Liquor Control Commission last night, asked the commission to reconsider using pitcher-ban as a punitive action for serving underage drinkers.

Pitcher bans are imposed on drinking establishments by the city if they have more than nine liquor code violations within six months. The pitcher ban lasts for six months, during which time the bar cannot serve anything larger than 12 ounce cups.

The American Tap, Hangar 9 and Bards were penalized last month for having more than nine violations within six months. The American Tap and Hangar 9 both have 12 violations, while Gatsby’s has 22 violations.

Showing three rubber-band bound stacks of fake identifications his employees have confiscated over the past couple of months, Budwick said the pitcher ban not only penalizes bar owners for serving underage drinkers who may have gained entrance into a bar with a fake identification, it also penalizes the establishment’s customers.

“To me it looks like it is the pitcher ban costs more for students to come downtown and have a drink,” Budwick said. “It penalizes the students more than it does the bars.”

The commission voted unanimously to make an issue for Liquor Advisory Commission next month.

American Gas & Wash pillars brought down

By Catherine Edman
Staff Writer

Four pillars of the community hit the dust early Monday.

The seven-foot pillars at the American Gas and Wash on East Walnut Street were taken down by their owner when they attempted to move them fail.

Their creator, Kim Rasnick, said the brick and mortar structures began to crumble during attempts to move them.

“I didn’t think we were going to be able to move them,” Rasnick said. “But I was going to try.”

It cost Rasnick about $12,000 to build the pillars and $1,500 to remove them.

The city council had ordered the four pillars at the entrance to the new American Gas & Wash station move off city property.

City staff said the pillars, which were built three feet onto city right of way, created a traffic hazard. Drivers leaving the business could not see the bar/pool down East Walnut to merge safely with oncoming traffic, they said.

Rasnick maintained that the pillars created no obstruction to drivers sight, but moved the pillars Monday after the city council reached its decision last week. Rasnick said he received a letter last week from Bill Dixon, city manager, instructing him to move the pillars off city property.

Rasnick had asked the council for six months in which to move the pillars back onto his property. The request was denied. Council members were concerned about the question of city liability for any accidents that might result from the pillar obstruction.

City officials indicated that if he wanted to open his bar on Monday as scheduled, the problem needed to be corrected before an occupancy permit was issued.

He is planning now to open the gas station at the beginning of next week, pending final inspection by city code enforcement officials later this week.

Seven receive top honors in Big Muddy Film Festival

By Mary Caudle
Staff Writer

The subjects of the award-winning films at the Ninth Annual Big Muddy Film Festival ranged from junkmen to the mental deterioration of a woman stricken with Alzheimer’s disease, but each had one common element: the quality that merited them to be chosen from over 100 entries.

The Best of the Fest film presentation featured the seven winning entries of the festival Sunday night. The winning films and videos will earn each filmmaker a $100 Peoples Choice award.

The seven were chosen by guest jurors Joel DeMott, Jeff Kreines and Barbara Marquis, award-winning filmmakers from over 100 entries that were submitted by filmmakers throughout the country. The winning entries were “Time of Angels” by Bill and Kay Culler, “Associations” by Laurisa Stublender, “King of the Jungle” by Sharon LeFevre, “Rough Cut” by Craig Serling, “I Want to Go Home” by Alida Walsh, “Ghost Town” by Linda Adams and “The Day Before” by Farzan Navab.

“Time of the Angels,” a 10-minute film, depicts an Aztec myth through whimsical animation that showcases Huleby’s talents. Huleby includes an air of excitement as well as quiet reflection in the film, which is full of color and inventive design.

“Associations,” a six-minute film, explores the relationship between a daughter and her

Kidnappers extend hostages’ death deadline

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The kidnappers of three Americans Monday postponed “unanimously” a midnight deadline for executing their hostages, lessening the threat to refusal United States and Israel to yield to the captors’ demands.

The three hostages had pleaded for their lives earlier in the day, saying they would be executed unless Israel freed 400 Arab prisoners. Both Israel and the United States rejected any deal for the hostages.

Shortly after the midnight deadline, the shadowy Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, the group sent a statement to a Western news agency in Beirut saying it had “postponed until further notice” the “execution” of the three Americans. No further details were immediately available.

Earlier in Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman had restated the Reagan administration's position that it would not bargain for the captives’ lives.

“I’d only remind you of our position concerning hostages and no concessions,” Redman said.

The appeal from the three Americans, Beirut University College professors kidnapped last month — came as the United States tried to ease regional tensions by moving five more warships to the Israeli port of Haifa.

Two other warships had earlier been moved to Haifa from patrol duties with the 6th Fleet in the eastern Mediterranean in an apparent effort to curb speculation the United States planned an attack on Lebanon to free hostages.

CUMMING, Ga. (UPI)—Residents of all-white Forsyth County aired widely varying views on race relations Monday on a nationally televised talk show, and eight black civil rights leaders were arrested outside while protesting the exclusion of blacks from the program. Many of the whites who spoke with black entertainer Oprah Winfrey said they took part in the civil rights march last month that attracted 20,000 people.

Sandinista abuses exaggerated, group says

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The administration is acting "as an apologist for the human rights violations" of the Nicaraguan Contra rebels while exaggerating abuses by the Sandinista government, a human rights group charged Monday. Americas Watch, a New York-based private organization, said the administration engaged in "deceptive practices" by claiming the U.S. backed rebels were taking steps to end their abuses. In fact, the group said, the Contras "took no meaningful steps to investigate and punish those abuses" last year.

Council decides to retain Russian, religious studies

By Renee Nanesta
Student Writer

The College of Liberal Arts Council has voted to not eliminate the Religious Studies Department and the Russian language major.

The elimination of the two programs was proposed last December by COLA Dean John Jackson in compliance with the 2 percent reduction in faculty salary base mandated by the University administration.

JACKSON’S PROPOSAL to eliminate the programs was a small part of the overall plan of reduction, said council chair Robert Jensen.

The COLA council last week voted 13-18—without debate—to retain the Religious Studies Department and 21-4 to retain the Russian language major.

The COLA council, which approves academic policy decisions for the college, is made up of 26 elected COLA faculty and student members.

THE 2 PERCENT cut in the faculty salary base for faculty over a five-year period is intended to bring faculty salaries to an equitable level, Jackson said. The 2 percent cut in the college’s base salary for faculty is to be redistributed for faculty pay raises. The total reduction for the college is 10 percent over five years.

A few people have called me stupid, short-sighted and moronic,” Jackson said of his proposal to eliminate the two majors. “But it is a policy adopted by the University that we have to live with.”

JENSEN said the dean probably could not predict any positions could be left unfilled for a year or if any faculty members unexpectedly leave.

The total reduction for this year in the COLA is $150,000, Jackson said. Cutting the two programs, he said, would have made up $83,500 of that.

After the meeting, Jackson said the cuts will be made elsewhere, but didn’t specify where.

LAST YEAR COLA received 1.5 percent of the 2 percent in salary raises for faculty members. He said the remaining 0.5 percent was put into the College of Business and Administration, the College of Engineering and Technology and Morris Library by the University acting president and vice president of academic affairs.

“I would not like to be dean right now,” said Dale Bengtson, Religious Studies Department chair. Bengtson said he had expected more support for retaining religious studies.

“People really don’t know what religious studies do and some faculty members think we teach Sunday school, he said.”

Sheep center buildings get facelift, two additions

By Dave Wrone
Staff Writer

Construction of five agricultural research facilities and renovation of two existing buildings has been started at SIU's Sheep Research Center.

Anthony Young, Animal Industries, Food and Nutrition Department chairman, said the new buildings are long overdue.

"Our present facilities were built in early 1900s, and normal farm buildings outlive their productive lifespan in 15 years." Young said. "It is an understatement to say that our present buildings are outdated."

Young said the decision to obtain funding for the buildings was made in the mid-1960s, but state funding was not released by Gov. James Thompson until 1985.

Approximately $1.3 million was appropriated for the additions. Young said, in addition to providing incentive to prospective applicants to the University’s agriculture program, he said the School of Agriculture’s research capabilities will benefit greatly from the new buildings.

J&L Robinson Development and Construction recently began construction on the facilities.

Young said the Cartondale-based construction company has been contracted to build a dairy calf barn, a small gestating and breeding house, a feedlot, and a cattle feedlot and a research physiology laboratory.

Zone Defense: Protect Your Own "Zone"

The Best Offense Can Be A Good Defense - to defend yourself against serious diseases, develop healthy habits which can either prevent them or detect them in their early stages.

HEALTHY HABIT 1. SELF-EXAM: Cancer is a serious business. Breast and testicular cancer are two cancers that are most treatable if detected early. You can do a very simple self-exam to check for these cancers.

HEALTHY HABIT 2. PAP TEST (for Women Only): A yearly pap test detects abnormal cervical cells. It is recommended for all women, 18 or over, whether they are sexually active or not. An abnormal pap is quite common and usually is not serious. However, it does require a prompt medical exam to determine its cause.

HEALTHY HABIT 3. PRACTICE PREVENTION: There are many types of STD's and most are preventable through abstinence. Knowing your partner, use of condoms and responsible decision-making. These habits and many others may also prevent pregnancy.

*Brochures explaining breast self-exam, testicular self-exam, STD's and birth control methods are available at the Health Service, Wellness Center, Student Health Assessment Center and Health Advocacy Offices.

City should reform zoning ordinance

THE CITY IS CONSIDERING changes in its controversial R-1 zoning ordinance. One of the changes would require landlords and renters violating the ordinance—which limits to two the number of unrelated people who can live in the same house in certain parts of the city—to share the blame.

This is a long-needed reform, and the city should waste no time writing it into the ordinance. Many current and prospective student tenants aren’t aware of the location of the R-1 zones. This leaves them open to legal problems that may have been avoided had their landlords been honest with them in the first place and informed them their lodgings lay in an R-1 zone. As the ordinance stands now, there is no incentive for landlords to make such a disclosure. Only the tenants suffer if they are discovered to be in violation of the ordinance.

City officials say it is still too early to tell what action will be taken against landlords who violate the ordinance. Since eviction is a major hassle for petty housing violators, the city should be equally tough with the landlords, enacting fines that are stiff enough to discourage any who may be tempted to disregard the ordinance.

Another change—under consideration—is making the city responsible for proving whether two or more tenants are related. Currently, the burden of proof lies with the tenants. Such a rule stands on its head the tenet of innocent until proven guilty. If the city is responsible for enforcing the ordinance, it only makes sense that the city also should be responsible for proving the guilt or innocence of suspected violators.

The city also has an opportunity to clean up one of the most unpopular and misunderstood ordinances on its books. While the city undoubtedly has an interest in passing ordinances aimed at protecting students from unscrupulous landlords, the overgrowth of multi-family rental housing, it also has a duty to assure that such ordinances are fair to all those who may be affected by them. Otherwise, it leaves itself open to charges of discrimination against one group of citizens.

Military chiecs sends wrong message

"PLATOON," one of the most outspoken anti-war films to be produced in a decade, opened Friday at the University 4 Theatre at University Mall. To publicize the movie, the theater is giving away two camouflage outfits, courtesy of Marion Army National Guard.

Such a giveaway is an affront, both to the film maker and the movie-going public. It distorts the movie’s theme, making it seem as if the Vietnam War were nothing more than the strong statements against U.S. involvement in Vietnam that it is. It also warps the public’s perception of the film in a way that verges on false advertising, or at least a bad and weak tactic.

The theater’s promotion scheme is tantamount to marketing “Platoon” action figures. Instead of reflecting the director’s message that war is hell, it gives the impression that war is fun, fashionable and not so far removed from everyday life.

The theater claims that the display advertising the giveaway—which has since been removed—was not meant to convey a militaristic message. The person in charge of publicizing “Platoon” says the decision to give away the camouflage suits was made with an eye to fashion, and that in any case, shirts, pants and rainwear do not a soldier make. The display is only a marketing ploy—a mannequin dressed in the same type of clothing to be given away. However, one addition was made—a camouflage helmet.

If helmets are in style this season, someone forgot to tell us.

Scheduling responsibility is up to students

I am sorry that Cheng Hung Yang switched Arabic writing students DEC. Feb. 2 did not have the courtesy to talk to the Department of Linguistics composition coordinator about his concerns over being made to switch LING 103 sections and that the OP published his letter without checking the facts.

The whole idea of the LING 101 and 102-103 sequence is to develop writing skills that will help students in other classes. To walk and take a 100-level class the last or second to last semester is most ill-advised. Advisors in all departments have the responsibility to make sure students take these courses early, not late. Some departments have self-advisement, which in some cases does not appear to work satisfactorily. The problem arose primarily because we are required to accommodate graduating seniors who still have to fulfill a composition requirement.

If the problem was not explained, students were assured that their work thus far would be counted in the new class, and asked volunteers to try again. When not enough students volunteered, students were chosen to move. When possible, that was done in the order that they had registered for their current section; when not possible, students were chosen at random.

In some cases, students register early to ensure the section of their choice, but have their registration cancelled because of nonpayment or other problems. When this happens, all we know is that the student has withdrawn from the course or section.

We offer as many sections of these courses as we can afford and have teachers for. We are trying to improve our registration procedures, believe me, neither the teachers nor the coordinator likes this situation. Improvement can only come about with the increased cooperation and responsibility of students and administration.

GTE problems a no go party

I am writing to address a problem which I share in common with everyone living in or near the GTE Towers or Thompson Point. The menace to which I am referring can be summed up in three letters: GTE.

My complaints start with the basic components of the phone system itself. In the dorms we have “party lines” which means that eight people share the same phone line (some partly). It only takes one person who enjoys talking on the phone to tie up the line all day. Imagine it with eight people. It is a real disaster when you finally gain access to the phone, you are many times infuriated to find that the line has gone dead or the receiver is broken. When the phone works, the dialing does not always go through and you constantly have to redial the number. If by a stroke of luck the phone works and the number you dialed is registered, then you have to pray that the operator is not busy and you have to start the whole process over again. And the folks wonder why we do not call home more often?

I am not asking for total reform but I think some improvements should be made within the existing system. First of all, the phone company should provide us with working equipment. Second, there should be more operators available. I would settle for these improvements and look at the plethora of fundamental problems if it is not too much to ask of you.

—Arthur Collins, freshman.

Rainbow's End benefits student workers

The consideration of adding $1 to student fees to supplement Rainbow's End has been the topic of many newspaper articles lately. It is very true that without Rainbow's End's affordable day care, many people would not be able to further their education. That statement in itself holds incomparable weight, but there is more to consider. Through all this attention I've realized some people have the misconception that Rainbow's End helps only those students with children.

Rainbow's End provides a place for early childhood students to do internships and education, behavior analysis and gain essential experience. It has provided a site for research work and classroom projects for departments throughout campus. Recent examples of departments utilizing Rainbow's End include cinema and photography, design, behavior analysis and therapy, curriculum, instruction, media, speech communication, radio and television, journalism, and theater.

Rainbow's End also employs up to 20 student workers. These student workers are gaining valuable skills in childcare clerical work, bookkeeping and child welfare areas.

I've been employed at Rainbow's End for a year now. I am not an education major. This writer but have gained much experience at Rainbow's End. I honestly cannot think of another job in which you need to (and learn to) give care, protect, educate, medicate, entertain, be responsible, initiate, act at an instant and abide by strict federal state regulations at the same time.

You learn a lot of technical things, but you also learn a lot about humans. You learn to give attention freely—not didactic smiles, but doses of genuine affable titude.

Sometimes we forget all this campus has to offer. Sometimes we've just not made aware of it. Rainbow's End like other SU services does not cater to a choice minority. It is there for all of us. Rainbow's End keeps more than parents and their kids in school. It holds university studies, and nine

Coach Herrin not up to college standards

I'm sure this response will never be printed. But I feel as though I had to let you know how I feel about one of our area's biggest names. I have never really been a fan of Rich Herrin since my older brother played against Benton in high school. The fact remains, however, that he had tremendous success in coaching his high school basketball. I do have trouble with his being a Division I basketball coach, especially here at SU.

I know of his rich tradition in high school, but there is a great difference between high school and Division I athletics. I only have to state one name. Gerry Faust—a former Notre Dame coach who had success coaching high school; to determine which is easier, being able to win or dominating a region in a particular high school sport and doing the same at the Division I level.

I have been a fan of five games this year (Baylor, Bradley game on television), and in each game I saw some things that could be improved. In one game, SIU vs. Bradley: SIU played a great first half, the radiator must have shot 60 to 65 percent from the floor and were averaging by two or three points at the half. Stan Albeck, Bradley's coach (ex-NBA player), found the seam in SIU's 2-3 zone (a form of defensive zone) and Bradley players can match up against the Tulsa players. Final result: SIU loses by 12 to 14 points.

I would like to just say a little bit about the SIU vs. Nebraska game, one in which we really had a chance to win. With 45 seconds left in the game, SIU trailed by one or two points, had the ball, and still had two time-outs left. SIU runs its offense and the clock goes down to 13 seconds left. Steve Middleton throws up a two-point, off-balance prayer that coach Herrin called "his shot." I know Steve Middleton is our best offensive player and definitely light up the scoreboard, but that was far from being "his shot."

I don't understand why coach Herrin didn't call a timeout with about 13 seconds left, calm his players down and set up a play to free Middleton up for his real shot by a screen or some sort of clear-out. It is tough for any ball club to run down 35 to 40 seconds off the clock and still play off a good shot, especially it is the last 45 seconds of a game. And then go to a 'hate off' coach Herrin runs after the officials after the game is officially over to argue about a good no-call by the officials as soon as the gun sounded. Come on! If he is going to act like a high school coach then he should coach high school kids.—Robert E. Grimm, junior, visual communication design.

Valentine’s Day is just around the corner. The hearts are popping up at drugstore card racks, in candy store windows and flower shops, and on television. Some of us will give our hearts and some hearts will be broken. But how many of us will take time to consider our hearts and the part they play in our health?

About 300,000 people die each year of heart-related diseases. Heart disease is the No. 1 cause of death in this country. Experts that report that these deaths could be prevented, or at least delayed, by changing lifestyles.

In a classic study in the 1950s, autopsies were performed on American soldiers killed in the Korean War. The results showed that by the age of 20, 50% of the hearts were considered “plague,” which contributed to heart disease, were forming in the walls of major blood vessels.

Feeding the Hungry Heart—Provides information concerning the causes, dangers and treatment of eating disorders and food obsessions. Will meet from 9 to 9 p.m. Wednesday in the Rec Center. Co-sponsored by the Wellness Center.

Frees an all money, while looking and feeling better right now, not in 20 to 30 years.

The American Heart Association has established a set of guidelines to help lower the risk of heart disease. The main emphasis is on eating less high-fat, high-cholesterol food; red meat, butter, croissants, donuts, ice cream, whole milk and cheese. Instead, eat more whole grain bread, cereal, fruits, vegetables, nuts, popcorn, potatoes, lean meats, poultry and fish. But go easy on the fried foods.

High levels of stress for long periods of time have been linked to more than one-half of all chronic diseases, including heart disease. Since there’s no shortage of stress in the life of a college student, learning how to deal with stressful situations is an important way to lower the risk of heart disease and feel better.

Physical activity is another important factor in keeping the heart healthy. Aerobic exercise three to five times a week can actually lower the levels of fat in the blood, as well as maintain vital strength of heart and lungs and help reduce stress levels. Bees s, it feels good to work out physically, whether it’s a brisk walk, jogging, aerobics dancing or riding a bike.

Hospital officials refused to comment on the CBS News report.

Morgan said McFarlane, 49, and a father of three, was home by himself with his wife, Jonda. When the episode occurred:

"I think his wife became concerned by his condition and called the hospital," he said. McFarlane was rushed to the hospital by ambulance.

Morgan is a co-counsel with Leonard Garment, McFarlane's chief counsel.

President Reagon was informed "this morning by his staff." White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater told United Press International, adding, "We have only received unfica- rable reports."

A source close to McFarlane said: "I think the whole thing weighs on him obviously. I think he feels bad that this (the Iraq arms deals) turned into a big problem."

It was unclear whether his breathing difficulties would cause any delays in the congressional investigations into the scandal.

John Henshaw, an aide to McFarlane at his office in the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, said McFarlane went to the hospital after suffering an "aroused reaction to a prescribed medication he took" and said the reaction did not cause a life-threatening situation.

McFarlane has been at the foreign policy think tank since March 1986, a few months after resigning as Reagan's national security adviser.

Henshaw would not say what prescription drug McFarlane was taking.

McFarlane has come under scrutiny because of discrepancies in his testimony and that of White House chief of staff Donald Regan over President Reagan's early actions in the shipment of arms to Iran.

McFarlane has testified that Reagan approved the first shipment of arms to Iran in August 1985 before they took place, but Regan said the president learned of the shipment after the fact from McFarlane.

McFarlane has said he found Reagan's version "puzzling" and could not account for the discrepancies. He said he was confident his own testimony was correct.

Students living in Carbondale can qualify for a program in which they would receive food every other month, Ann Marie Shepherd, surplus foods coordinator said.

USDA Surplus Food Distribution eligibility is based on proof of Carbondale residency, monthly income and household size. Eligibility is decided on a case-by-case basis and food is distributed first-come-first-served.

Applicant must have a residence’s license or S.U.I.F. test statement showing a Carbondale address to prove residency. Monthly income can be proven with check stubs, stamps vouched or proof of scholarship. Applicants also must list number of household members.

Maximum monthly incomes for households, based on the number of members in the household, are $-1158; two members-$1,146; five members-$1,522; six members-$1,538; seven members-$1,723; eight members-$1,929; and $1,936 is added for each member after eight.

People in the program receive such food stuffs as meat, American cheese, butter, milk, honey and rice.

"The bulk is given to families of six or more, but it may be distributed as others say, "she said.

Surplus from the January distribution will be given out at the Erumra C. Hayes Center auditorium, 441 E. Willow, from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Wednesday.

People interested in the program can bring the information needed to qualify Wednesday to the Hayes Center or call Ann Marie Shepherd, 449-3922.

Cooper to assault audience with ‘state of art splatter’

By Ellen Cook

Entertainment Editor

If you’re squirmish at the sight of blood, you’d better pass up the Alice Cooper concert Wednesday night at the Arena.

In a phone interview, Cooper said that this tour, his first in three years, will feature “more high-tech gore and state of the art splatter” than in previous years.

Tickets for the Cooper concert, which will feature the opening group Megadeth, are available at the Arena Box Office and at area ticket outlets for $11.50 and $13.50.

THE SHOW, which Cooper describes as a “high energy sequel to ‘Welcome to my Nightmare,’” will feature lots of face blood, a set that looks like “a carnival or fun house that’s been nuked,” and a guillotine with an 8-inch, 40-pound blade.

“They’re a certain amount of danger involved with a 40-pound blade,” Cooper said in reference to the act in which he is seemingly beheld.

The special effects for the stage show are created by technicians who worked on the films “The Fly” and “Aliens.”

he said, but some of his old style will remain in the new act.

COOPER SAID he’ll never get rid of his snake and trademark eye makeup, but “The theatrics will change. They won’t ever get stale.”

Cooper wants to keep his music from sounding stale too. Although he will perform older songs such as “ Billion Dollar Babies” and “School’s Out,” the band will give them a “contemporary sound,” he said.

Cooper describes his new band as “better than ever.” It has been touring since Oct. 20, doing shows in England, the Northeast and the South.

WHEN THE BAND toured the South, he said, the audience was disappointed that no Satan worship was involved. “Some people put all heavy metal bands in one bracket,” he said, adding that he doesn’t know any Satan worshipers—or cannibals.

Cooper said he had a good time when he began touring in 1973, but 1975 to 1980 was “very hard.” Alcohol abuse took its toll on him physically and the popularity of disco took its toll on the success of his music, he said.

DURING HIS YEARS away from the music industry, Cooper stopped drinking. Now, that the “burden of alcohol” no longer exists, he said he finds touring as enjoyable as ever.

“I love it. It’s the first time in a long time that I’ve really, really had fun.”

Cooper estimates that 20 percent of the people who attend his shows are older fans who know his music and have been to his other shows. Mindful of the majority of his audience, he said he hopes to bring the radio back to the kids.

“THE KIDS WHO come to my concerts don’t listen to Lionel Richie. They don’t listen to Whitney Houston. They listen to Motley Crue, AC/DC and Alice Cooper. That’s rock and roll.”

Cooper, who has been married for 11 years, has two kids of his own: a 3-year-old daughter and an 18-month-old son. His children have seen his gruesome stage show and music videos, but think nothing of the hype.

“They think it’s hysterical. They’re not scared at all. It’s just daddy in makeup.”

Alice Cooper will assault the Arena Wednesday night.

Career Enhancement Week planned by COBA council

By William Brady

The College of Business and Administration's Student Council and its student organizations are sponsoring Career Enhancement Week this week. This year's program has 19 meetings scheduled.

Career Enhancement Week is a program that encourages student awareness of oppurtunities in the business sector. The council first organized the event four years ago.

Representatives from sales, service and production organizations in Southern Illinois, the Chicago area, St. Louis and Florida are scheduled to discuss the opportunities at this year's program.

TOPICS include "Taking the Initiative in Your Job Search," "The Corporate Image" and "Dress for Success." A complete schedule may be obtained from Rehn Hall, Room 121A.

All meetings will take place in the Student Center River Rooms and Ballrooms. A banquet will be held at 7 p.m. Friday in the Student Center Old Main Room to close the program. Tickets are $7 and may be purchased from council members or in Rehn Hall, Room 121A.

Thomas Gutteridge, COBA dean, will be the guest speaker at the banquet and Mr. Herbert G. Cady, senior vice president of marketing at Peabody Development Co. in St. Louis, will give the keynote address.

ISSC to award $1 million in scholarships

The Illinois State Scholarship Commission has awarded more than $3.4 million to 7,005 Illinois Merit Ratings Scholarship winners for the 1986-87 school year.

A total of $4.65 million was allocated by the Illinois General Assembly in this second year of funding for the MRS program. An additional $1.5 million will be still be awarded during the remainder of the 1987-88 school year.

ISSC awarded $500 to each of the students who are enrolled in at least two postsecondary institutions. These students are attending public four-year institutions. The University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign ranks first with 115 recipients, Northern Illinois University following second with 303. IU-CUC ranks fourth with 212 recipients.

Recent legislation has expanded the MRS criteria to cover students graduating in the top 15 percent of their high school classes. Students currently in that category should check with their high school counselor for information about the MRS program or write to the Illinois State Scholarship Commission, Client Services Division, 100 Wilmot Road, Deerfield, Ill. 60015.

Prof: Lincoln saw 'divine plan'

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Although he shunned organized religion, Abraham Lincoln, believed he was predestined to be a central character in a divine plan to save the deeply divided America of the 1860s, a noted humanities scholar says.

Ephraim Fischhoff, emeritus professor of humanities at Sangamon State University and a specialist in the sociology of religion, said the 16th president's view that he was part of a "larger scheme" allowed him to hold the country together and reign over personal and political trouble.

"William Herndon, Lincoln's law partner, was very clear and I think accurate in his writings that Lincoln had a somber feeling he was one of the chosen instruments of a divine plan," Fischhoff said.

"Lincoln was an almost mystical awareness of the religious overtones of politics. His "faith toward none and charity toward all" statement is a classic example of it all being Biblical."

Lincoln, who was born 178 years ago this Thursday, grew up with the dogmatic and fundamentalist religion of rural Kentucky and Illinois. But this was an age and was exposed to his free-thinking Springfield law partner and came to reject organized religion.

During Lincoln's years in Springfield, his wife, Mary, was a member of a local Presbyterian church. Since he rarely attended services at the same time he was becoming increasingly well known in political circles, he took some public criticism for being an "infidel," as Fischhoff said Lincoln sometimes was called.

But Fischhoff said Lincoln gradually developed an "undenominational" religious perspective that spilled over into his political thinking. He ended up believing in a "one world religion" and a system of world order and development, Fischhoff said.

Lincoln died in Springfield to view the U.S. Constitution as a quasi-holy document that not only provides for American freedoms but also served as a symbol for other struggling nations.

Financial woes plague Cub team; trades key to Dawson acquisition

CHICAGO (UPI)—The Chicago Cubs have heated up their talks to unload some of their high-salaried players, presumably to clear the decks for a final offer to free agent Andre Dawson.

The latest round of talks with Dawson remain on a back burner until the Cubs determine the market price for their payroll they can pare to make room for the former Expo outfielder.

The Cubs are talking with the Atlanta Braves about a trade of southpaw pitcher Steve Tarpley and infielder Rafael Ramirez. Last weekend, a reported deal involving pitcher Denny Eckerseley for Ramirez fell through.

Ramirez became expendable for the Braves when acquired infielder Damaso Garcia from Toronto last winter.

Trout, 5-7 last year, earns more than $2 million a year. Eckerseley around $850,000 a year.

Already this winter, the Cubs unloaded their veteran third baseman Ron Cey to Oakland. Cey was making $950,000 a year. The Cubs are paying half of his salary with the A’s picking up the rest.

Cubs President and General Manager Dallas Green has insisted the Cubs would make an offer to Dawson only if it fits within the club’s financial scheme.

“We have one of the largest payrolls in the league,” Green said. “We made some investments with long-term contracts that we don’t want to make those mistakes again.’

Dawson’s agent, Dick Moss, turned to the Braves last month when the Cubs reportedly bowed out of the bidding.

The Braves showed lukewarm interest in Dawson, who has made the Cubs his No. 1 pick. When Green was able to dump part of Cey’s interest and there were renewed trade talks for Trout and Eckerseley, the interest in Dawson was rekindled.

Moss is seeking at least $1 million a year from the Cubs for at least two years.

But for Green to be able to sell that kind of deal to the Tribune Co., owners of the club, he apparently has to cut down the current payroll.

By unloaded Trout or Eckerseley, he will come close.

Chicago also has waived Keith Moreland, who is earning $1.3 million a year, and Jerry Murphy, who is making about $650,000 a year.

If some of the veteran players on the White Sox don’t care for Fregosi’s approach toward spring training, the Sox manager has a memory to cherish: “I don’t care what they think they may be reluctant to do,” Fregosi said. “I’m a believer in fundamentals and mechanics. It will be done and it will be done right.”

If players balk at his methods, Fregosi has made it clear where the door is.

“The aren’t getting paid to like it. If they don’t like it, they can leave right now,” Fregosi said. “I’ll tell you why I feel this way. It’s simple. I don’t like to lose. Period.”

While the White Sox may be lackling in fundamentals, in Fregosi’s mind, he was surprised to see so many other American League clubs in similar condition.
LPGA’s Lopez enters Hall: sets sights on repeat No. 1

SARASOTA, Fla. (UPI)—Nancy Lopez, her entry to the LPGA Hall of Fame secure, wants to again become the top player in women’s golf.

Lopez qualified for the Hall of Fame by winning Sunday’s $390,000 Sarasota Classic. Her 35th career title came on the same course where she won her first tournament nine years ago as a rookie.

All that delays her induction into the Hall—where she will join 10 others—is a requirement that she be a member of the LPGA for 10 years. That comes in July.

Lopez, three times the LPGA Player of the Year, played in only four tournaments last year because of the birth of her second daughter. She is having foot problems this year.

“I’ll play as much as I can,” she said Sunday after winning despite a final round of 2-over-par. “I’d like to be No. 1.”

The tour moves to Hawaii for two events after a week off and Lopez said she will play in one of them. She said she will leave the tour while husband Ray Knight—who has not yet signed a baseball contract—attends spring training.

She then will return to the tour. Lopez won Sarasota with a 7-under-par 281 and earned $39,000. Kathy Baker and Anne-Marie Palli were second at 284 with Heath Farr and Chris Johnson at 285.

“It’s really special for me to win it here,” Lopez said. “I was so nervous, so excited. I always think of my mother.

She had died in September about five months before the tournament and she never got to see me win. A lot of memories come back.”

Lopez, 30, is the first player to qualify for the Hall since Jo Anne Carner was inducted in 1982.

“I found myself really anxious,” Lopez said. “I was hoping everyone would hurry up and hit. I was feeling a lot of anxiety, but I wasn’t nervous. I never thought about it (the Hall of Fame) until I got to the last hole.”

PGA’s Pavin not particular; will take win in any major

By Gordon Sakamoto

HONOLULU (UPI)—The majors await Corey Pavin.

In just over three years on the PGA Tour, the 27-year-old from UCLA has won six tournaments, including two this year, and earned more than $1.2 million. His latest triumph came Sunday at the $600,000 Hawaiian Open when he edged Craig Stadler on the second playoff hole.

Asked afterward which of the majors tournaments he would like to win, Pavin said: “I would like to win any major. I don’t care which one.”

“I’m not going to say my goal this year is to win one specific major championship. I still want to keep everything in perspective and go out and work hard and keep working on my game and concentrating.

“I’m not going to sit here and say I want to make $700,000 or I want to win two majors or whatever. I just want to go out and play hard and try to win as many as I can.

For Pavin, perspective is everything. “I don’t want to put any numbers up for dollars or any numbers for wins,” he said. “I don’t think it’s going to do me any good this year. In previous years, it was something I could do or shoot for, but I don’t know what really my potential is now.”

“B.B.” bounces by

Saluki forward Bridgett Bonds drives around Northern Illinois defender Tammy Hinchee, who eventually got called for a blocking foul. Bonds scored 16 points and grabbed 11 rebounds in the Salukis win over NIU last week at Davies Gym.

Pavin's perspective is his goal to win a major this year.

NCAA cage tourney

Winning women may have to leave Davies

By Anita J. Stoner
Staff Writer

The 17th-ranked women's basketball Salukis want to play at home should they win a berth in the NCAA tournament—but they would have to move out of their current home, Davies Gym.

According to Saluki coach Cindy Scott, Davies Gym will not seat enough people to keep ticket prices low and recently it has strained to accommodate capacity crowds. For example, a capacity crowd of 1,200 would have to pay $10 per tournament ticket for Davies to even get consideration from the NCAA, Scott said.

SIU-C will try to get either a first or second round home game, assistant athletics director Charlotte West said. But the request for a home game must be made with definite plans for playing at the Arena.

SIU-C must submit a bid to the NCAA with an estimate of attendance and the amount of money generated. The NCAA then decides what teams will play host for tournament games based on won-loss record and the amount of gate receipts each school guarantees.

The team will have to forego the advantage of the pit-like crowd atmosphere because Davies would put SIU-C's home-site bid at a disadvantage compared to larger-capacity gymnasiums at other schools likely to be in the running.

With the tradition of the team rooted at Davies gym, the players and coaches have expressed Davies-loyal feelings.

"It's our gym, our chairs, our lockers," team leader Marilalice Jenkins said.

Saluki assistant Julie Beck said, "We love to play at Davies, but we knew it was a move to the Arena was coming." Fellow assistant George lubell agreed that Davies gives SIU-C a crowd advantage, but said the time is right for the Salukis to move to the Arena.

Lubell originally said that if the team is to play a tournament game at the Arena, it must begin the move after the Eastern Illinois game so that the team can adjust to the court, which is much different from Davies.

Team trainer Sally Perkins will take on the chore of assigning different workout exercises to help the players make a gradual adjustment from the soft wooden Davies surface to the harder Arena surface.

In December 1985, Western Kentucky slaughtered the Salukis in the most recent women's game at the Arena, and part of the blame fell upon the neutral-court theory.

Lubell said crowds of 1,000 will not create enough noise in the Arena, so seating in courtside blachers can hopefully be adapted to help.

"The location of the fans is essential," he said.

West said a staff meeting today will take care of the NCAA bid and moving plan.

"Tickets, seating and lockers," West said of today's agenda. "And if we're going to have a tournament game in the Arena, we'll have to make it feel like a home site—not a neutral court!"

Polls plunge women cagers from 14th to 17th in nation

The SIU-C women's basketball team suffered a setback in the national polls and dropped from No. 14 to 17 in the Associated Press and is tied in the USA Today.

The Salukis don't have to feel left out—all but two of the top-20 schools shifted positions.

Texas remained a near-unanimous selection as the country's No. 1 with a 20-1 record. A loss shifted Auburn (19-1) to third while the only remaining undefeated team—Rutgers (20-0)—climbed to second.

Mississippi (20-0) rose to fourth followed by Louisiana Tech (17-2), No. 6 Long Beach State (20-2), and No. 7 Tennessee (17-4) made room for Ole Miss and the Techsters.

No. 8 Virginia (19-2) and No. 9 Georgia (18-3) round out what would be nearly an all-South top 10 if it weren't for the presence of climbers Rutgers and No. 10 Ohio State (18-3).

Iowa (16-4) lifted to 11th, Louisiana State (14-4) dropped to 12th and Vanderbilt (18-4) made 13th.

Independent college teams becoming a basketball relic

CHICAGO (UPI) — Independent college teams have gone the way of the set shot, the 5-foot-10 inch guards and the underhand free throw.

Independents, in other words, are becoming extinct and it is little wonder. With NCAA automatic bids awaiting the winner of league tourneys, it is getting harder for the dwindling number of independents to grab a piece of the NCAA tournament pie.

More significantly, networks have lined up their own television packages with the networks and syndicators, leaving the independents to fend for themselves.

Which brings us to the case of Notre Dame, DePaul, Marquette and Dayton, four of the classiest independents remaining. The four Midwest Catholic schools have resisted temptations to join existing leagues, preferring to play a round-robin slate among themselves and draw whatever league teams onto their schedule as possible.

"The trouble was getting the schedules done," said former DePaul athletic director Ed Manetta. "We had to get the conference teams before January in most cases. Those conference teams didn't want to or couldn't break away in January or February to play us." As a result, some attractive dates did arise in December that made television officials happy. That also improved better attendance.

After December, some of those DePaul-Georgetown, Marquette-LSU or Notre Dame-UCLA matchups began to dry up. Instead, you could find DePaul squaring off against Pan-American, Marquette meeting Southwest Louisiana or Northwestern".

"The key to the package.

But the athletic directors at the schools, which also don't have major college football programs like DePaul, better not wait around too long for the Irish to change their minds.

The best idea would be to go with the same way and find a swingman. The television market is a competitive one.
