Unity Point to hold hearing on firing

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

The Unity Point School Board will set a hearing date with fired Superintendent Gene Broombaugh over his Jan. 26 dismissal.

"We (the board) will set a time for the hearing after we meet with our lawyers," board president Kenneth Mitsdarfer said. "The date could possibly be set next Monday or Tuesday."

Under Illinois School Code, a superintendent has a right to request a closed session hearing on dismissal ten days after being fired.

At the hearing, the superintendent can present evidence, witnesses and defenses on the grounds of dismissal.

Broombaugh was fired by the board Jan. 26 after a series of closed meetings in which the Unity Point parents were denied comment until the night of the Board's decision.

The parents were told that Broombaugh's contract would not be renewed for the good of the district, lack of communication with the board, changing curriculum without board approval and improper disciplinary action against a teacher.

No further explanation was provided by the board.

Parent Stan Lieber said the board is reluctant to say much because "it will end up in court" if Broombaugh files suit.

While the board allowed public comment before making its official decision, parent Tom Gutteridge said the Jan. 26 meeting was a "sham" because "the board already had its mind made up."

Over 100 parents, teachers and students attended the meeting and voiced their concern about the dismissal before the board went back into closed session to discuss Broombaugh's release.

"The board tried to handle it

Preschoolers given freedom of choice

Rainbow's End lets students decide courses

By Phyllis Coon

"We're going to the moon!" Molly Preece, daughter of Barbara and John Preece of Carbondale, shouts travel plans.

The Rainbow's End 4-year-old preschooler's call for 3-, 4- and 5-year-old astronauts brings about 10 children, who are either painting on trays or playing at a sand table, running to her snap-block spaceship.

But the difference between bus learning experience and others is that the space travel was initiated by a student.

Rainbow's End, the University's childhood development center, started making changes in its preschool curriculum in November as part of a study on child care, Evie Wexler Mylan, program director, said.

"With the new curriculum, the children decide what subjects will be taught," Mylan said. "Children learn when they are really interested in something."

Rainbow's End has become one of five replication sites across the country where the new child-care model is being researched, she said. The center has made a one-year commitment to the 5-year study.

The study is funded by a grant from the Department of Education. Director of the grant is Dianne Philibosian, an SIUC graduate, who is a dean at California State University in Northridge.

"One part of the grant is that she develop a child-care model," Mylan said. "She used recent research on but we are studying transportation today," Mylan said. "Now we are very open ended and the teachers can choose the children's ideas."

Teachers still bring in ideas they think might interest the children, she said.

"A teacher might bring in a book and then go with the flow of the children," Mylan said. "The teachers role is to get more involved in the play and extend it."

As the group of preschoolers begin testing the endurance of the space ship by standing on the four, flat plastic squares, their teacher, Jolene Bodner, joins the group.

"How long will it take to get to the moon?" Bodner asks. "A long long time," some of the astronauts guess.

Jet crash in Azores kills 145

SMYRNA, Tenn. (UPI) — The jet that crashed in the Azores Wednesday, killing all 145 people aboard, passed its last inspection without problems two months ago, according to the Tennessee-based charter flight service that leased the Boeing 707.

The jet, carrying 138 Italian tourists and seven American crew members, slammed into the mountainous island of Santa Maria on a flight from Bergamo, Italy, to the Dominican Republic.

"It was one of our aircraft," said Al Pittman, president of Independent Air Corp. in Smyrna. "I'm shocked. We have not had a serious accident before this, and of course, it hurts us all."

The doomed jet's last maintenance inspection was in December 1988 in Smyrna at a Federal Aviation Administration-approved facility, Pittman said. At that time, the jet checked out OK, he said.

In Atlanta, FAA spokesman Jack Barker said Independent Air had a clean safety record as far as officials were able to determine Wednesday.

Independent Air released the names of the seven crew members Wednesday. They were Capt. Leon Daugherty, 41, of Nashville, the pilot; Sammy Adcock, 36, of Nashville, the first officer; Jorge Gonzalez, 34, of Rex, Ga., the engineer; and flight attendants Yvette Murray, 26, of Marietta, Ga.; Angela Urban, 24, of West Palm Beach, Fla.; Helen Ziegler, 45, of Warner Robins, Ga.; and Sabrina Cromarty, age unknown, of Atlanta.

Pittman said authorities in the Azores confirmed that all

Robbery suspects given separate trials

By Richard Nunez
Staff Writer

During a preliminary hearing Wednesday, a judge approved a motion allowing separate trials for the two suspects in the armed robberies of a Carbondale motel and two liquor stores.

Circuit Court Judge David Watt appointed attorney Steven Applegate to defend Willie Vaughn and also dropped one count of armed robbery against Patrick Clark. Public Defender Robert Van Derhoff will continue as Clark's attorney.

Vaughn, 21, and Clark, 20, are charged with the Nov. 16 armed robbery of Warehouse Liquor Mart and the Nov. 28 armed robbery of TJ's Liquors. Vaughn also is charged with the attempted murder of a Warehouse Liquor Mart employee.

During the hearing, Carbondale Police detective Randy Corey testified that Warehouse Liquor clerk Bart Armit and another clerk, who alleged they were shot by Vaughn during the robbery, were able to identify Vaughn in a police lineup but could not identify Clark.

Watt later found no probable cause linking Clark to the robbery of Warehouse Liquor Mart.

Corey also testified that TJ's

Liquors' employee Michael Lucas was able to identify both Vaughn and Clark as the two men who held him up during the robbery of TJ's Liquors.

Carbondale police officer Albert Gould testified Lucas said two men entered TJ's Liquors about 10 p.m., Nov. 28 to purchase beer. Lucas told Gould after he reached down to get a pack of cigarettes for one

Moslem rebels fire rocket; Soviet soldiers stay at post

KABUL, Afghanistan (UPI) — A rocket fired by Moslem rebels crashed into Kabul Wednesday, killing seven people and injuring 21 as Soviet forces pressed their pullout from Afghanistan, official Kabul Radio said. Officials said about 300 Soviet soldiers protecting the Kabul airport and a Soviet food airlift will stay at their post until about Monday, two days before a U.N.-mediated deadline for Moscow's troop pullout from Afghanistan, officials said.

Guards kill one, injure 18 during prison riot

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Guards shot at rioting Palestinian inmates of an Israeli military prison Wednesday, killing one prisoner and wounding at least 18 others, the army said. Three other Palestinians died from army gunfire in the occupied territories. The violence flared a day after the United States accused Israel's armed forces of widespread human rights violations in the more than year-old Palestinian uprising in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Refugees protest proposed new government

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (UPI) — A brawl Wednesday broke up a rally by thousands of Afghan refugees protesting the proposed formation of a council that is intended to lead to a new government in Kabul after the Soviet troop withdrawal. About 5,000 Afghan refugees attended the gathering outside the offices of Sibghatullah Mojaddidi, head of the Pakistan-based Afghan rebel alliance, to protest as unrepresentative a council known as a Shورا, which the rebels are to form Friday.

Bush wants to resolve U.S. acid rain issue

Toronto Globe and Mail
 OTTAWA — The Bush administration wants to resolve the acid-rain issue at home before turning to a possible treaty with Canada, a top White House aide has told Canadian officials. "The first thing has to be the domestic (side) before he is prepared to be all that specific with the Canadians," national security adviser Brent Scowcroft said during a Washington briefing on President Bush's one-day trip to Ottawa on Friday, his first foreign trip as president.

Toronto Globe and Mail
 ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland — Stephen Ratkai offered a U.S. Navy officer an advance payment of $40,000 for secret information about how a U.S. post in Newfoundland was tracking Soviet submarines. As Ratkai made the offer to undercover agent Donna Geiger in a St. John's hotel room June 11, 1988, they were being videotaped by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Tower's nomination depends on investigation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the committee weighing John Tower's nomination as defense secretary, said Wednesday he would reject the nominee if asked to vote "at this point" because the FBI has not finished investigating new allegations of misconduct. At the same time, Nunn emphasized he had told President Bush he would reserve final judgment until all evidence is presented, which could postpone a vote by his Armed Services Committee for two weeks, after the Senate returns from its recess next week.

Cancer commission urges tobacco regulation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A presidential cancer commission launched a new offensive against the silent killer Wednesday, urging Congress to reclassify tobacco as a drug and order the Food and Drug Administration to regulate it. In its sweeping proposal, the National Cancer Advisory Board also called for greater use of early detection tests, such as mammography and Pap smears, and said minorities and the poor must be better informed about cancer.

Ethiopian director brings ghetto life in 'Bush Mama'

By Wayne Wallace
Entertainment Editor

Haile Gerima is no stranger to filming under stressful situations.

He shot "Harvest: 3,000 Years" in 1974 during a military takeover in Ethiopia, his native homeland. Filming for the two-and-a-half hour documentary was hurriedly completed in two weeks in "a guerilla-type production efficiency," according to Gerima.

While filming "Bush Mama" (1976) on the streets of Los Angeles, Gerima and his mostly-black film crew were accosted by members of the Los Angeles Police Department, who assumed that a gathering of black males was automatically connected with some crime in progress.

As officers hustled members of the crew up against police cars to be frisked, Gerima shouted, "Keep shooting!" Gerima included the incident in the final print of "Bush Mama," an otherwise fictional work.

Through it all, Gerima has turned obstacles into advantages, winning the best feature film award from the Black Filmmakers Hall of Fame for "Harvest" and earning the distinction of having his work screened at the Cannes Film Festival.

Tonight at the Big Muddy Film Festival, Gerima will present "Bush Mama" and afterward will field questions from the audience. The screening begins at 6:30 p.m. Admission is $2.

Though scripted and professionally acted, "Bush Mama" retains all the immediacy and impact of a documentary, capturing the distinctive style of ghetto language and humor.

The film concerns Dorothy, a black ghetto woman on welfare who's driven to discover her identity and pride through political awareness.

The street scenes, with occasional outbursts of violence, combine with Dorothy's fantasies to provide a realistic insight into inner-city existence.

The New York Times called the film, "fiery, furious, overflowing with rhetoric and slightly out of breath."

Critics have hailed Gerima's work as signaling the emergence of a New Black Cinema, indicative of the vitality in independent black filmmaking among African peoples.

'Coverup' delves into covert actions in Iran-Contra affair

By Wayne Wallace
Entertainment Editor

If you want to see a film about Ollie North and Fawn Hall, "Coverup: Behind the Iran Contra Affair" is not what you're looking for.

The 76-minute independent documentary, directed by the producer of "Destination Nicaragua," delves much deeper into our government's covert operations than the American media was allowed during coverage of last summer's congressional hearings.

The result: several startling allegations against the Reagan-Bush administration, which the public has been previously unaware.

"Coverup" will be shown at 5 p.m. Saturday in the Student Center Auditorium as a feature presentation of the 11th Big Muddy Film Festival. Admission for the film is free.

Evidence presented claims that in October 1980, George Bush was sent to cut a deal with Iran to ensure the 52 U.S. hostages would not be released before the 1980 election, thereby foiling President Carter's campaign.

The film sheds light on REX 84, a plan constructed by Oliver North that calls for suspension of the U.S. Constitution in the event of a war in Central America and provides for the mass arrest of nearly one-half million undocumented refugees for incarceration in concentration camps throughout the country.

"Coverup" features interviews with former Reagan aides, as well as congressional footage, that point to a coverup in the Iran Contra hearings. It points to the Reagan administration and certain key congressmen, accusing them of keeping facts from the public during the hearings to preserve a complex network of covert operations systems.

The film sheds light on the REX 84, a plan constructed by Oliver North that calls for the suspension of the U.S. Constitution in the event of a war in Central America.

Scenes of Nancy Reagan's "Just Say No" campaign are spliced with clips of evidence claiming the CIA helped Contra leaders smuggle cocaine into the United States.

Originally scheduled for limited theatrical runs, the film attracted so much attention last fall it had to be released nationally to satisfy demand.

The Big Muddy's screening of "Coverup" was originally scheduled for 4 p.m. Saturday, but has been moved back to 5 p.m. because of scheduling problems.

Election commission selection in quandary

WANTED: STUDENTS to serve on the Undergraduate Student Government election commission. Members will be responsible for organizing and overseeing student elections in April.

So much for the free advertising, but we feel the USG needs a little prodding since their election preparations are as they say: moving slower than molasses on a winter's day.

The original Feb. 10 deadline for the Committee for Internal Affairs to choose the election commission is about to pass and the required Daily Egyptian advertisement requesting candidates for the commission finally has run in the paper today. And the $150 to be paid to the election commissioner is yet to be appropriated.

MERELY TECHNICALITIES, you say? There is plenty of time before April elections, you say?

Well in other years that might be true, but this year the commission will, in all likelihood, have to confront the formidable task of initiating and policing multiple polling places for which a referendum was passed in last year's elections. Unless, that is, the commission simply decides there shouldn't be multiple polling places.

Although there is some confusion as to whether the referendum carries the force of a legislative directive, USG President Bill Hall said he is under the impression that the referendum is non-binding. It amounted only to a survey of student opinion.

HALL SAID THAT even though the referendum is non-binding he "can't imagine" that the commission will decide to act contrary to the wishes of the students.

A nonbinding referendum gives the election commission room to maneuver. If it finds multiple polling places to be impractical this year, it can opt for using the Student Center as the only polling place, as has been the case in the past.

But this decision needs to be made in a reasoned and thoroughly researched manner. The slowness with which the Committee for Internal Affairs is acting could result in a commission that proceeds with the easiest rather than the best course because it hasn't had time to organize.

CHARLES HAGERMAN, chairman of the Committee for Internal Affairs, has blamed the workload left over from the Juliana Taylor debacle (Taylor was chair of the same committee) for the delay. But the advertisement, at least, has been delayed because of confusion within this semester's USG contingent.

"They (USG) don't have one person in charge. I've had five people contact me about this one ad and none of them know what's going on."

This from Suzanne Slas, the Student Programming Council promotions chairwoman, through whom the USG is attempting to place their advertisement for election committee members.

THERE ARE VALID reasons for not instituting multiple polling places for the upcoming elections. Foremost among them, is the possibility that people might vote twice at different locations. The obvious benefits would be that students would have easier access to polling booths and the consistently miserable voting turnout might be improved.

But the USG should not piddle and prattle until the only decision left for the commission is the most expedient one instead of the most effective one.

The USG has a chance to redeem itself in the eyes of the student body with an efficient, professional election. It shouldn't let that chance go to waste.

Deadline for election commission applications is Feb. 16.

Choice of abortion should be respected; made by individual

While I respect the conviction of staunch anti-abortionists, I feel that all too often these people are quick to judge those they perceive as opponents as thoughtless and immoral. I would like Ms. Jurich and Ms. Murphy to know that I have given considerable thought to my own position on abortion and believe very much in the sanctity of life. I was brought up in a religious home and reached my own conclusions regarding abortion after I became familiar enough with the issues to do so.

The taking of a life in this manner is a serious and tragic thing, but I am confident that few, if any, women who opt to have an abortion do so without much forethought and regret. The life of the unborn certainly must be considered, but only a woman contemplating abortion can weigh her situation and judge whether or not to forfeit the life of her child. I know this sounds harsh, but it follows a basic biological principle. Sometimes it becomes necessary to sacrifice a young life in order to preserve the quality of the mother's life (such as it may be).

My purpose in writing this letter is not to advocate abortion under all circumstances nor to fuel the abortion controversy. There are a "myriad of reasons" why people choose to support or oppose abortion. One person cannot judge for another what issues are most important in making a decision for or against abortion. Pro-choice advocates respect the right of others to choose to oppose abortion for whatever reasons. Anti-abortionists fail to extend any such courtesy. — Jeff Levensgood, graduate student, zoology.

Sexist language letter paranoid

I am responding to yet another letter from Joy Morris regarding the "problem" of sexist language in the classroom. Her central point seems to be that the use of the generic "he" when describing people of undetermined gender constitutes a systematic emotional abuse of all women. This gibberish normally merely causes mild irritation. However, its continual repetition is becoming fairly annoying. This annoyance is not caused by the particular issue itself, (the triviality of which is difficult to exaggerate), but rather by the likelihood that the next time a woman on this campus is subjected to genuine sexist behavior, the rantings of Ms. Morris ensure that it will be that much more difficult to get the case treated with the seriousness it deserves.

I realize, of course, that these views will consign me to the ever-lengthening list of those too insensitive or stupid to recognize their own innate sexism, i.e. disagreement with Joy Morris. It appears from her letter that this list includes, thus far, her professors, fellow students, University administration, American society and presumably, the rest of U.S. Western world. Some may suggest that this list indicates rather more about Ms. Morris than it does about the issues at hand. I, however, would never be so audacious. Being a graduate student in counseling psychology, she doubtless needs no lecture from me on the symptoms of obsessive and paranoid behavior. — Tim Bird, graduate student, political science.

Crowd important to Saluki's success

On Jan. 28, during the SIU basketball team's victory over Bradley, the group of true fans that I sat with were told by the Arena ushers and the SIU Police to sit in our seats. This order stemmed from the complaints of the people (I will not refer to them as fans) that were sitting directly behind us and claimed they could not see the game unless they stood up.

These apathetic observers of the game obviously enjoy the game on a different level than my friends and I do. We feel that the amount of enthusiasm we show at every home game is essential to the overall atmosphere of the event. Our standing and cheering for our team exemplifies the spirit we have for school and our appreciation of our great team.

The crowd plays a very important role in the success of a basketball team at home. Coach Rich Herrin can attest to this importance. In my opinion, groups like the SIU cheerleaders, who are doing a sensational job, and men of Delta Chi, who have made their voices heard, are inspirational devices for the players to do their best.

Why can't these people who just show up for a game when the team is having a good season find a place to sit where they will not bother the true fans (those who wish to participate, not just observe). Maybe the Arena should set aside a section devoted to the apathetic.

Randy Nicaise, sophomore, product design.

DE unprofessional in its coverage of BAS

There have been a few letters printed in the Daily Egyptian concerning the Black American Studies Association and the SIU administration's position in keeping the Black American Studies program intact. It is my contention that the DE has again continued on its nonprofessional quest of "yellow journalism," and continues to stir up negative views when the students air realistic opinions.

The administration should attempt to at least find out the types of curriculum that the students would like to pay their tuition for and from my own personal experience they have chosen the Black American Studies curriculum. Instead of biting the hand that feeds you, try sharing in on the just desserts. — Robert Glasper, freshman, social work.

"What will we wear?" Bodner asks as preparations for the trip continue when Colleen Gerrity, a student worker, leaves the room to get construction paper for the children to make space suits.

"It takes a lot of planning ahead for materials," Mylan said. "But with an activity like this the teacher can bring in mathematics and science."

The new curriculum is more family like, she said. Children are no longer divided into classes by age. They get to interact with both younger and older children.

"We have a mixed-age setting, and we give the children more choices," Mylan said. "This opens up for more friendships, and the younger children can have the older children as role models. We also allow siblings to stay together."

The curriculum also involves teaching children about taking care of their bodies, she said.

"We no longer have teachers telling children it's time to eat," Mylan said. "The children are asked if their body is telling them that they are hungry or at another time, is their body is telling them if it's time to take a nap."

Health and independence skills also are taught, she said.

"The children are becoming more aware of germs," Mylan said. "If a child has put a toy in his mouth, they put the toy in a germ bucket where it is washed."

An emphasis has been placed on cutting down on the spread of disease, she said. The center also uses disposable placemats.

Besides the rugs where children play, the most germs have been found on the tables where they eat," Mylan said. "Even if the tables are washed and bleached, there are still a lot of germs there."

Some children have noticed the new curriculum, she said.

"We did this gradually because we wanted it to be comfortable for the children," Mylan said. "When we gave the children the option of being able to change rooms, they eventually realized that if they were playing an interesting game, they didn't have to get up and leave just because a teacher asked them if they wanted to move. They had to get use to the freedom of choice."

The children gathered around the spaceship for the final countdown.

"5, 4, 3, 2, 1, Blast off!" the astronauts scream.

"How are we going to walk when we get to the moon?" Bodner asks. "There's no gravity."

"What's that?" some of the astronauts asked.

145 people aboard the jet were killed.

"The Azores authorities have just sent us a communiqué. They tell us the airplane is totally destroyed and that the wreckage and bodies are spread over 100 meters," he said.

Pittman said the Boeing 707 was approaching the Santa Maria airport for a re-fueling stop and had been cleared to descend to 3,000 feet when the control tower lost contact with the airliner.

"No distress signals were sent from the airplane, and no radio traffic indicated any problems," Pittman said.

The crash was reported by a private citizen who "called the airport, said he saw the plane go down, heard a big bang and saw smoke," Pittman said.

Broombaugh would not comment on the hearing or the possibility of filing a law suit against the board.

Lieber, who is a University geography professor, said after the board "destroyed the man's reputation and made him unemployable," it would be logical for Broombaugh to file suit after all official procedures have been exhausted.

Gould testified Lucas said one of the men ordered him to hand over the cash in the register and then lay face down on the floor. Lucas said the store owner reported about $200 stolen.

Corey, the second witness, testified Armit said two men entered Warehouse Liquor Mart Nov. 16 to purchase lottery tickets. Armit said Corey one of the men pulled a gun and ordered Armit to put money from the cash register in a bag.

Corey testified Armit said he placed his hands on his head in reflex and that the man shot him in the left hand. Armit told Corey that as he lay on the ground he heard two clicks as if the man was attempting to fire the gun again.

Future of foreign language program undecided

Department to ask for 3 more years to rectify problems

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

The foreign language program will ask the Board of Trustees for three more years to evaluate the Russian program, rather than canceling it, Margaret Winters, foreign language and literatures chairperson, said.

The future of SIU's foreign language program will be discussed and decided on at Thursday morning's Academic Matters Committee meeting.

In 1985, the Board of Trustees gave the foreign language department three years to monitor and evaluate their programs, after which a decision would be made about whether or not to continue the master's programs and the bachelor's program in Russian.

"If SIU considers itself a comprehensive research university, it would be irresponsible to drop the foreign language program," Winters said.

In 1984, the Illinois Board of Higher Education declared SIU's master's programs in French, German, and Spanish economically not justified by the small number of students enrolled in the programs. The IBHE also questioned the feasibility of the Russian bachelor's program, since enrollment was at an all-time low.

Winters said the foreign language department has spent the last three years restructuring their programs to make them educationally and economically justifiable.

A student entering the restructured master's program will receive a master's degree in foreign language, with a specialization in French, German or Spanish, Winters said.

"This is really just a consolidation of the master's degree program," she said. "We feel we can go along with this and still keep up the quality of the programs and even improve."

However, the Russian program is an entirely different area, Winters said. If the Russian bachelor's program were to be cut it would mean the loss of an entire program at a time when understanding the Russian language is important.

Winters said the understanding of Russian is a political reality right now.

"We in America are finally realizing that we can't expect everyone to speak our language all the time," she said.

The foreign language department went through extensive internal and external reviews last year. Both reviews were optimistic about the quality of the programs, Winters said.

The reviews, conducted every six years, are compiled by both the faculty working in the department, and outside evaluators from other schools.

"The foreign language department has done a lot of work in redesigning and restructuring the programs, and should be applauded for what they have done," Mary Lou Higginson, acting associate vice president for academic affairs and research planning, said.

The University supports the changes at every level, she said.

The Academic Matters Committee will discuss the proposed changes in the programs Thursday at 9 a.m.

Fish ad offends Catholic listeners

BOSTON (UPI) — An ad agency pitching frozen fish dinners has run into trouble in the heavily Catholic Boston market with a cutesy 30-second radio drama intended to make you smile.

The ad involves a purported priest and a temporarily conscience-stricken nun.

The ad goes:

"Father, I have a confession," says Sister Catherine. "I've gone back to eating fish on Fridays."

"We stopped that in the '60s," Father Callahan replies.

"Now every Friday I can have Booth entrees like fillet Florentine and shrimp with fettuccine," the nun persists.

"Fettuccine?" the surprised priest asks, "I thought he was at the Vatican."

One Boston AM station, WBZ, has pulled the ad for Portsmouth, N.H.-based Booth Seafood Products because of "a moderate number" of listener complaints.

Tyler Cox, WBZ program manager, said: "I thought it was a cute ad but we program the station to suit our listeners, not me." The station's primary listeners are 40 to 50 years old.

A spokesman for the Catholic Archdiocese of Boston, John B. Walsh, said that although he does not want to be overly sensitive, "I found the ad somewhat offensive."

Walsh, who said he has read a transcript of the ad but not actually heard it, criticized the "cavalier manner in which a sacrament of the Church was being handled, the sacrament of penance."

Meanwhile, Paul Klein, the account supervisor at North Castle Partners in Stamford, Conn., is impatient. The ad, now in 11 markets, will be extended to three more in the coming weeks, he said.

Faculty can renew materials with ease via campus mail

By Scott Smith
Staff Writer

Beginning this semester, University faculty can renew their books at Morris Library by mail.

"It's an experiment," Jay Starratt, assistant director of library services, said.

Faculty can pick up renewal forms at the circulation desk in Morris Library. If the faculty members want to renew their materials, they can send the renewal form through campus mail instead of bringing the books to the circulation desk, Starratt said.

Starratt said the program will run until the end of summer, when the library staff will evaluate the service based on the following:

■ Can the service be offered without additional staff?

■ Will faculty build up a personal library because it's easier to renew by mail than to bring the books back?

■ Will the service be limited to faculty?

"It's probably going to be manageable," Starratt said.

The University of Illinois has a phone renewal system, which is what faculty requested, but that requires additional office space and people that the library doesn't have, Starratt said.

If the trial period is successful, the service could be extended to graduate and undergraduate students.

Activists stop abortion rule in coma case

MINEOLA, N.Y. (UPI) — A state judge granted a husband authority to order what he says would be a life-saving abortion for his comatose wife but anti-abortion activists persuaded an appeals court to block the procedure.

State Supreme Court Justice Bernard McCaffrey on Tuesday granted Martin Klein temporary guardianship of his wife, Nancy, who is 17 weeks pregnant, enabling Klein to authorize doctors at North Shore University Hospital to perform an abortion.

But only hours later in Brooklyn, State Appellate Division Justice Vincent Ballella Jr., at the request of a coalition of anti-abortion groups, blocked McCaffrey's ruling and ordered a hearing.

Schools jumping for funds

"Jump rope for the health of it" is the theme of the American Heart Association's "Jump Rope for Heart" program this year.

More than 200 students from kindergarten to eighth grade at Covenant Christian in Carbondale, Immanuel Lutheran and Lincoln Elementary schools in Murphysboro will participate in jumping to raise money for the AHA by collecting pledges.

"Jump Rope for Heart" also benefits the children by promoting physical fitness and demonstrating that keeping in shape can be fun, Barbara Stover, director of the event, said.

Research proves that jumping rope improves cardiovascular flow, develops rhythm, agility and coordination.

"The kids are so enthusiastic," Stover said. "It not only gives them an opportunity to compete and win prizes, but the kids learn about cardiovascular fitness."

Most third- and fourth-graders at Covenant Christian questioned said they have known someone killed or crippled from a heart attack.

One student said she wants "to raise enough money so we won't have heart attacks."

Bigger, meatier catfish option for land farmers

DECATUR, Ill. (UPI) — A professor who has been fiddling with animal genes for more than a decade said his method of producing bigger, meatier catfish could be a profitable option for farmers seeking a crop with more stability than corn and beans.

C. Larry Chrisman, a professor at Purdue University in West Lafayette, Ind., presented his techniques at the first Upper Midwest Aquaculture Convention and Trade Show recently.

"This is a way to get a fish that can be grown indoors, close to the markets where they are consumed," he said. "And we're seeing a tremendous interest in farmers trying to get into something different than the traditional corn, soybean, hog markets. I think there will be some real significant opportunities here for farmers."

Chrisman alters the genetic makeup of fish by adding a set or two of chromosomes to fish cells. Normally, all mammals and fish have two sets of chromosomes in each cell. This is referred to as a diploid cell.

A fish egg getting an added set of chromosomes matures into an adult with triploid cells. A triploid fish is meatier, grows more quickly and converts more of its food into fish flesh, Chrisman said.

By introducing a fourth set of chromosomes, Chrisman can produce a fish with tetraploid cells. This step is important because, while triploid fish are sterile, tetraploids are fertile. Chrisman also has learned that when tetraploid catfish mate with normal diploid catfish, a triploid is produced.

"It's becoming quite feasible to blend the technology now," he said. "The interesting thing about the triploid is, if they get loose, you wouldn't have to worry about them changing the genes of natural fish, because they (the triploids) are sterile."

But what if tetraploids escape and find their way into a large body of water with natural fish?

"That would never happen," said Chrisman. "Those fish are so valuable they'll be kept under lock and key at all times."

Four years ago, Chrisman became the first U.S. scientist awarded a patent for an animal — the triploid fish. Three months later, however, the U.S. Patent Office rescinded the patent on the animal but retained the patent on the triploid technology.

In 1986, the tetraploid technology was patented. Chrisman said a patent is pending for the tetraploid fish.

The Harvard mouse, a genetically altered mouse that contains a gene for cancer, was patented in March 1988. It is the first animal to maintain its patent.

Chrisman said an Indianapolis, Ind., company which supported his catfish research has purchased the rights to the patents on the triploid and tetraploid technologies. The company, North America Aquaculture Inc., plans to build a hatchery to develop triploids and tetraploids later this year.

Chrisman's research on catfish was an extension of similar work with mice. He said he was using mice to determine why some human babies develop triploid cells, a mistake that can lead to miscarriage.

Cold kills 1,600 head of livestock

DUBOIS, Idaho (UPI) — Officials confirmed Wednesday 1,600 head of livestock in eastern Idaho's Clark County froze to death and more were feared dead from a bitter week-long storm packing blizzard winds and sub-zero temperatures.

Meanwhile, the Idaho Army National Guard sent 10 more Guard members into the county Wednesday, bringing to 31 the number of guardsmen in the area along with a helicopter and tons of snow-removal equipment.

The county was declared a weather disaster area Monday by Gov. Cecil Andrus and the state was paying for the emergency efforts.

"The total on lost livestock as of 3 p.m. (Tuesday) included 812 cows, 31 bulls, 752 sheep, two horses and three pigs," Ball said.

Guard crews were working

20 hours a day in two 10-hour shifts in frantic efforts to remove snow from the towns of Dubois and Spencer. A Guard helicopter scouted inaccessible rangeland and dropped feed to 150 head of livestock by Wednesday morning, Ball said.

Ball said the Guard expected to finish its efforts in the area by Friday afternoon, barring any additional snowfall or extreme winds.

Manson denied parole for 7th time

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (UPI) — Charles Manson, a cult leader who directed his followers on a murderous rampage in 1969, was denied parole for the seventh time Wednesday and will not be considered for freedom again until 1992.

Manson, serving a life sentence, refused to attend the San Quentin Prison hearing after a dispute with officials over the customary use of a waist chain and handcuffs on convicts making their appeals to the board.

Albert Leddy, one of the three state parole board members hearing his case, said Manson was rejected because of the nature of his crimes, his "unstable personality," his six violations of prison regulations in the last three years and his failure to cooperate with prison staff.

The hearing lasted an hour, and the three members deliberated 27 minutes.

City council, funding groups split over railroad relocation

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

City Council members shot down a choice by the funding representatives of the city's railroad relocation program to build downtown overpasses or underpasses on Main and Walnut streets.

Tuesday night, representatives from the Central Highway Administration, SIU-C, Illinois Department of Transportation, Carbondale and the Illinois Central Railroad chose a Mill Street underpass and the Main and Walnut street passes as the alternatives to be studied in the program to divide railroads from heavy motor traffic by grading separation.

Councilman John Yow said the Main and Walnut overpasses should only be used as a last result.

Councilmen Richard Morris and John Mills agreed the overpasses would be unattractive to the downtown area.

The overpasses on Main and Walnut streets would put two lanes of ground-level traffic on either side of the overpass and cost $2.9 million for Main Street and $3.7 million for Walnut Street.

Morris, Yow, Mills and Mayor Neil Dillard cited the Mill Street underpass as their No. 1 alternative to the rail depression.

A Mill Street underpass would remove the traffic from Illinois Street," Dillard said.

However, Councilman Keith Tuxhorn opposed the Mill Street underpass because of the increased traffic flow on to Washington Street.

The Mill Street underpass would extend Mill Street east under the railroad tracks intersecting Washington Street.

"The Council promised to keep an eye cut for residential areas," Tuxhorn said.

He added the proposed $5 million cost for the underpass does not include right-of-way purchase or added expense to upgrade Washington Street.

Tuxhorn said he favored the Northern Connector, a new road along an abandoned railroad north of Carbondale.

Interim City Manager Jeff Doherty said the $9.5 million cost to the project would be its greatest negative factor.

Morris, Dillard, Yow and Mills indicated that they would support the Northern Connector if additional funding could be obtained and the problem with increasing downtown traffic could still be solved.

Enrollment up from last spring, professional students drop by 21

By Mark Barnett
Staff Writer

Enrollment for spring semester 1989 at SIU-C has increased by 207 students compared with spring semester 1988, B. Kirby Browning, director of admissions and records, said.

According to figures released Wednesday, on- and off-campus enrollment is 23,484. Browning said the figures released can be compared to a "snapshot" of enrollment taken at the end of the third week of classes. Students who have withdrawn after the end of the third week of classes were not included in the report.

Undergraduate enrollment is 19,279. This is an increase of 198 students compared with last spring's undergraduate enrollment.

Among undergraduates, 35 percent are seniors, 22 percent are juniors, 20 percent are sophomores and 23 percent are freshmen.

Graduate and professional student enrollment is 4,205. On- and off-campus graduate student enrollment is up by 30 students to 3,665. Last spring there were 3,635 graduate students.

Professional student enrollment for spring is down by 21 to 540. Last spring there were 561 professional students enrolled.

On-campus enrollment has increased by 247 students to 20,549 from 20,302 from spring semester 1988.

In comparison with fall semester 1988 enrollment there is a 3-percent drop, Browning said. Fall semester's enrollment was 24,227, he said. "It is not unusual for about a 3-percent drop in enrollment in the spring compared with the fall," Browning said.

Mardi Gras festivities end on cold note

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The hedonistic excess of Mardi Gras, one of the lightest attended Carnival blowouts in recent years because of extreme cold, gave way on Ash Wednesday to religious observance, trash pickups and hangovers.

Bitter cold that hit the city with wind chills in the low 20s in the final three days of Carnival leading to Fat Tuesday held the turnout to about 850,000 by police estimates, in contrast to crowds that exceeded 1 million in the two previous years.

The smaller crowd meant fewer problems for police faced with the job of maintaining control in an atmosphere of reckless abandon.

"When it's extremely cold you don't have a lot of conflict because there are a lot fewer people on the street," said Deputy Police Chief Ray Holman.

Despite the temperature, preliminary arrest figures indicated it was one of the rowdiest Carnivals in recent years.

Preliminary figures showed police reported 1,698 arrests related to Carnival activity since Jan. 27, the highest number since 1983 when there were 1,786 Carnival arrests. Most of the arrests were misdemeanors such as being too drunk, too raunchy or disturbing the peace.

While Catholics headed to church for services and to be daubed on the forehead with ashes — a symbol of penitence and reminder of mortality — sanitation crews were cleaning up mounds of debris from parade routes and the French Quarter.

Sanitation Director Patrick Koloski estimated the amount of trash picked up would be about the same as last year, a little over 2,000 tons.

"We won't know an exact figure for a couple of days," he said. "By Friday, we ought to be back to normal."

Dance company gives athletic performances

By Nora Bentley
Staff Writer

A strong, entertaining performance with only a few flaws greeted Tuesday night's audience of the Oberlin Dance Collective - San Francisco at Shryock.

ODC is a modern dance company that emphasizes athletic movement in its dance and doesn't put any role restrictions on its members. Both men and women perform strenuous lifts and complicated movements.

"Second Wind" opened the program with energetic, constant movement that was acrobatic at times. Stiff, precise gestures flowed gracefully into looser steps.

This dance was intended to comment on social dance, the innocence of the 1950s and courtship.

Five couples participated in "Second Wind" and at times there was almost too much going on at once. Parts of the dance were individualized, but all the dancers were linked loosely. The decision of which couple to watch was difficult.

"Natural Causes," the second sequence, took the viewer through the stages of a small child to a teenager. Brenda Way, founder and artistic director of ODC, was inspired by the death of a friend's child in choreographing this piece. It shows the losses that can be experienced during parenthood.

A lone dancer in the spotlight wrapped in a white ribbon of cloth that led offstage, symbolizing the umbilical cord, began "Natural Causes." She danced closer to the source offstage and then spun away again, showing indecision. During the entire dance she was attached to the unseen source of the cloth, but at the end she broke away, symbolizing birth.

The dancer, Kt Nelson, gave an excellent performance at this point, holding the audience's attention.

The end scene of "Natural Causes" symbolized loss. One dancer was in black, while the others danced around her. She reached for them as they went offstage, but in the end was left alone.

"Format II" was the weak point in the program. The sequence was carried out without music as two dancers were started and stopped by two others with stopwatches. Occasionally, one of the dancers would say something like "stress" to break the silence, but overall the scene was boring.

"Several things. Drugs have pros & negative connotations. # Computer terminal will give free information to students

By Marc Blumer
Staff Writer

Students soon will be able to receive campus information through a public access system in the Student Center lobby, Doug Daggett, assistant director of the Student Center, said.

Visionlink Corporation will install a computer terminal that will allow students to access campus and local information at no cost.

Campus information available through the system will include athletic and performance schedules, campus dining, bookstore, conference room availability and directory information. This information will be programmed by Visionlink and may be called up from a main menu.

Public access Visionlink also will provide information on local business and services, some of whom will have placed advertisements in the system.

Wyatt George, sales manager for Visionlink, said that the consumer information is similar to the yellow pages of the phone directory, "but (Visionlink) gives participating businesses the opportunity to update, add or discontinue the information in their ad's daily."

George said, "An advantage of our system is that it is access only, which means that the user receives only the information he or she requests. The user can also print out any information on the screen and take it with them."

Daggett said the system "offers students an option to receive campus and consumer information while they are in the Student Center."

Visionlink also will have a system available for individual homes on a subscriber basis approximately one year from now.

Mutt ousted for likeness to pit bull

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — He has a winsome look and a big black spot around his left eye but county fire officials say the mascot for Fire Station 14 looks too much like a vicious pit bull and has to go.

Assistant County Fire Chief Ray Shackelford ordered Petey — a dead ringer for the hound in the "Our Gang" comedy series of the 1930s — out of the station, saying "If the dog nipped someone or even growled at them, the Fire Department would be liable."

While he acknowledged that Petey seems "to be a good dog," there have been several incidents in the South Los Angeles neighborhood near the station involving pit bull attacks and fire officials are not taking any chances.

But firefighters who care for the dog say there is no way Petey would attack anyone.

"It's terrible that they're making a stink about Petey, as if there isn't enough to worry about in the world," Capt. Mike Gregg was quoted in the Los Angeles Daily News Wednesday.

"And they're wrong. First off, he's not a pit bull, he's a mutt. Secondly, he's never caused a problem. It's a big stink over nothing."

If Petey could talk, he too would probably say his being banned from the station is unfair. The dog is a veteran of 12,000 emergency calls and a "buddy" to the 21 firefighters at the firehouse.

But Shackelford told the newspaper he has heard that Petey has nipped a few of his firefighter friends during play, inflicting bites serious enough to cause minor injuries.

Still, the consensus of neighbors appears to be in Petey's favor.

"We take the kids over there for a tour of the station every once in a while and the dog is really very nice," said Scott Richards, director of the nearby Vermont playtime childcare center.

"I've been here for 5 years and I've never known of any problem with the dog. I don't think it's right to make them get rid of him just because of his looks," he said.

Petey was found 3 years ago, injured and abandoned on the football field at Washington High School across the street from the station.

Gregg, who said firefighters befriended Petey and nursed him back to health, plans to find a new home for him by the end of the week — hopefully with one of the firefighters.

Black, Hispanic educational attitudes examined

Social barriers not necessarily a disadvantage

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — The lower achievement level of most black and Hispanic children compared with white children is not caused by parents who are indifferent to the value of education, according to a University of Michigan study conducted in the Chicago area.

"Although there were some distinct ethnic differences in academic performance, there also were some heartening findings about attitudes and expectations," said Harold W. Stevenson, professor of psychology and research scientist at the U-M Center for Human Growth and Development.

"We found that, despite poor economic conditions and social barriers, most black and Hispanic mothers were keenly interested in the educational process and their positive attitudes were reflected in their children's beliefs. This especially was true of the Black children," he said.

"IF TEACHERS" challenge minority children with high expectations and give them accurate feedback, these high hopes might become reality."

Stevenson, along with Chuansheng Chen and David H. Uttal, U-M graduate student research assistants, also report that when they compared the achievement scores for children whose mothers had the same educational levels, the ethnic differences disappeared in mathematics but not in reading.

"Our data confirms that the parents' level of education is an important factor in the academic performance of children of all ethnic groups," the U-M researchers said.

THE U-M STUDY analyzed data on 2,500 white, black and Hispanic first-, third-, and fifth-graders in 20 public and private schools in metropolitan Chicago. The researchers gave mathematics and reading achievement tests to all students, and administered individual math and reading tests to a sub-sample of 1,161 children.

Black mothers had spent as much time as white mothers reading to their preschool children.

They also conducted interviews with more than 1,000 children in the sub-sample and their mothers, probing their educational experience, expectations, values and concerns, as well as their aspirations for the future.

"We found that black and Hispanic mothers, like the white mothers, perceived their children as 'above average' in academic ability. However, they seemed to value education even more highly than white mothers and tried to be more helpful on schoolwork. They also reported that their children were happier in school than the white mothers did," Stevenson said.

THE MINORITY mothers' attitudes were paralleled by their children who, Stevenson said, "had very positive self-images and felt it was very important to get good grades in math and reading."

The researchers also found that the black mothers had spent as much time as white mothers reading to their preschool children, and trying to teach them to count and to say the alphabet.

"Hispanic mothers, however, spent significantly less time teaching their preschoolers," Stevenson adds. "This lack of preschool preparation may be one factor in their lower achievement scores."

Stevenson also said the researchers found statistical evidence for a disturbing phenomenon, which may explain why dropout rates among black students soar in high school.

WHEN THE researchers correlated the self-evaluations of the black children with their actual achievement scores, they found that the children thought they were doing better than they actually were.

"Black children don't get or have not incorporated reliable, accurate feedback," Stevenson said.

"It appears that teachers have low expectations for black children. They praise the children for a modestly good performance instead of pushing them to do even better. Then when the children enter high school, they find they are not prepared for the more difficult work in high school."

Bush pushing education as economic program

CHICAGO (UPI) — President George Bush believes education is this country's "most potent economic program" and that early childhood education is essential if America's youth is to compete, an aide said Wednesday.

"President Bush wants to be remembered as the education president," Joseph Watkins, associate director of public liaison for the White House, said. "He is committed to making American youngsters

"President Bush wants to be remembered as the education president."

—Joseph Watkins

the best prepared in the world by the time they are out of high school."

Watkins addressed more than 200 corporate executives from across the country attending a two-day Allstate Forum on Public Issues. The purpose of the forum is to formulate a plan for how business can play a more important role in the primary education system.

"The president believes education is the future's most potent economic program, our most important trade program and the country's most effective anti-poverty program," Watkins said.

Watkins told the group Bush sees education as the "most proven pathway to a better way of life."

"The early years are crucial, especially for preschoolers. It is important for the right mechanism to be in place," he said.

Watkins praised the business community for helping improve education and cited as example such programs as "Adopt A School."

"There are lots of different ways business and industry can form effective partnerships with schools," Watkins said. "Mr. Bush believes in rewarding effective schools who avoid high dropout rate and high illiteracy rate."

The president wants to provide greater choices for parents, Watkins said, and cited the College Bond Program as an example. The program, which Watkins said takes effect in 1990, gives parents a tax break if their children complete two or four year college programs.

Cleanup ships make efforts to contain barge's fuel leak

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — A three-nation cleanup operation tried Wednesday to surround a submerged ship with floating barriers to contain leaking fuel that is killing penguins and other wildlife in an ecologically fragile Antarctic bay, officials said.

U.S. and Chilean officials reported finding dead penguins bathed in fuel oil and said other wildlife is being affected in Arthur Bay along the Antarctic coast where an Argentine excursion boat struck a rock Jan. 28.

"There is an attempt to surround the ship with equipment that will prevent the oil leaking from the ship from going past the immediate environs of the ship," said a U.S. Embassy spokeswoman.

Crew and equipment from the United States, Chile and Argentina are at the site.

The Bahia Paraiso turned over Feb. 3 and at least partially sunk, sending some of the 840 tons of fuel on board leaking into the sea. The ship is just 2 miles from the Palmer Base Research Center belonging to the U.S. National Science Foundation.

The 350 people aboard the Bahia Paraiso were evacuated.

The foundation, alarmed at the effect of the leaking fuel on marine life, mounted a $250,000 cleanup effort Tuesday when some 52 tons of equipment and U.S. experts reached the site.

Chilean officials also reported finding a small group of penguins, all but one of them dead and all soaked in fuel.

"The effect on wildlife continues to be observed and we expect it to get more serious," said the embassy spokeswoman after a briefing from the National Science Foundation in Washington.

She said the NSF staff found at least half a dozen dead penguins. Chilean officials also reported finding a small group of penguins, all but one of them dead and all soaked in fuel, the officials said.

The NSF also reported about a 60 percent death or disappearance rate of skua chicks on the Antarctic shore. Skua are large brown and white sea gulls found in cold seas.

"Most of the birds have been affected one way or another, either by ingesting oil-soaked krill (small, shrimplike crustaceans) or having their feathers soaked with oil," said the embassy spokeswoman.

The Chilean navy said divers from one of its ships were trying to seal tanks and hatchways to prevent more oil from leaking.

An Argentine icebreaker also was in the area to help with the cleanup. Two other Argentine ships headed for the submerged ship and will attempt to salvage it after the cleanup is complete, according to the Argentine Embassy in Santiago.

The Argentinians have denied significant ecological damage was being caused by the damaged ship.

User fees may be answer to rising costs for park upkeep

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Will the public soon be charged for gaining entrance to the state's parks?

That's one option being considered to pay for the ever-increasing costs of maintaining conservation lands, according to Conservation Department Director Mark Frech.

Frech said he doesn't favor charging park visitors or other fees, but he said the agency might not have a choice.

"We haven't had a dime of new money in three years in this agency," Frech said. "If the administration and the General Assembly gives us money out of the General Revenue Fund, that is adequate; but if they don't, then we have to do something, like it or not."

OTHER OPTIONS include increasing other associated fees currently charged such as those for hunting and fishing licenses and boating and camping fees, or increasing the real estate transfer tax, currently charged to sellers at a rate of 25 cents per $500 worth of property sold, with the money targeted for conservation projects.

"We have sites out there that are developed and ready to be opened to the public, but we just don't have the money," Frech said. "It is the rubber band theory. Our rubber band has been stretched to the limit. It has no more stretch in it."

The state parks are an important part of tourism in rural Illinois, Frech said, and important to the overall economy of those areas. He noted that studies have shown as much as $900 million in state tax dollars are generated by the parks.

"PEOPLE SPEND more money and have more free time for outdoor recreation than ever before," he said. "We have to provide good facilities for them."

The agency expects nearly 35 million visitors to state parks this year and Frech said it is imperative officials have the manpower and equipment to provide visitors' services.

Studies have shown that as much as $900 million in state tax dollars are generated by the parks.

"The problem compounds when you go through lean fiscal years for the past two or three like we have," Frech said. "Attendance continues to grow and there's an expectation of services you're going to provide and a constant demand for new services."

Roy Miller, director of the agency's administration office, said the Conservation Department would have to receive a 6 to 7 percent increase over its current $137.6 million spending plan to avoid imposing fees.

Without such an increase, 30 to 40 sites around Illinois which the agency has not been able to maintain or open, would remain closed, Miller said.

"YOU WILL ALWAYS hear us talk about what we could do with more money," Miller said. "But we are looking at needing 6 or 7 percent growth in order to avoid implementing a park entrance fee if that's how they choose to deal with the problem," Miller said.

Income from other fees already imposed, such as those for hunting and fishing licenses, make up about 40 percent of the agency's operations budget. But the monies generally have remained stagnant because the number of people seeking the permits has been relatively stable, he said.

Last month, Gov. James R. Thompson said he was willing to consider an increase in the real estate transfer tax, but he quickly added that similar proposals in the past have run up against strong opposition from the real estate industry.

"I've always felt we shouldn't have an entrance fee to state parks because I have always felt there should be some areas in the state of Illinois that are maintained for the taxpayers," Thompson said. "How long we can resist the pressure on the fee side when other states have gone to fee systems in order to upgrade the parks for those who do use them is something I don't know."

THE FINAL WORD on whether park entrance fees will be imposed will be up to Thompson. His decision likely will be revealed in his budget message next month and Frech declined to predict what Thompson would do.

"I never second guess our governor," Frech said.

Corps debate plans to eliminate facilities

ROCK ISLAND. (UPI) — The Army Corps of Engineers is reconsidering its proposed closure or partial closure of 15 recreational facilities along the Mississippi River in Illinois and Iowa, a spokesman said Wednesday.

"We've been told to hold off," said Bob Faletti, public affairs officer for the Rock Island District, which operates 80 recreational sites in all. "Congress was quite upset. We are going to look at our budget again. We have to cut $36 million nationwide."

Faletti said state, county and local governments will be offered the opportunity to manage the areas themselves. If there are no takers, such amenities as rest rooms and picnic areas will be closed, he said.

"We are trying to minimize the impact on the public," Faletti said.

The corps considered the complete closure of the Mid-River and Curtis Bridge recreational facilities at Coralville Lake near Iowa City, Iowa; the Wallastuck East and Fifield areas at Lake Red Rock near Pella, Iowa; the Walnut Ridge, Laurie Park, Dogwood and River Bend areas at Saylorville Lake near Des Moines; and the Park and Fish area at Pool 22 on the Illinois side of the River.

Originally slated for partial closure were Sandy

Beach at Coralville Lake; Oak Grove, Sandpiper and Bob Shetter areas at Saylorville Lake; and the LD Recreational Facilities at Pool 13 and Fisherman's Corner at Pool 15.

Closing or partially closing those facilities would save the corps about $500,000, Faletti said. No permanent employees would be affected, he said, but the budget cuts would prevent the corps from hiring summer help.

The Illinois Department of Conservation said Tuesday it is considering charging the public entrance fees to state parks because its current funding from the Legislature is inadequate.

Other proposals under consideration include increasing fees charged for hunting and fishing licenses and boating and camping fees, or increasing the real estate transfer tax, currently charged to sellers at a rate of 25 cents per $500 worth of property sold, with the money targeted for conservation projects.

Faletti said the corps does not currently have the authority to impose fees on users of federal recreation areas. He said President Reagan proposed the authority before he left office but Congress has not acted on it.

Outpatient detoxification a possibility

BOSTON (UPI) — Many alcoholics could apparently undergo detoxification safely and effectively without hospitalization, sharply reducing the cost of their treatment, researchers reported Wednesday.

Dr. Motoi Hayashida and his colleagues at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Philadelphia compared the results of treating 87 alcoholics on an outpatient basis with treating 77 of them as inpatients.

In a special article published in The New England Journal of Medicine, the researchers found those treated as outpatients needed far shorter care — 6.5 days compared to 9.2 days.

Seminoles edge Irish in football recruiting battle

By United Press International

Florida State dominated recruiting in the nation's most talent-rich state Wednesday and snapped a top-rated defensive back away from national champion Notre Dame, strengthening the Seminoles' claim on the top freshman football class in the nation.

The Sugar Bowl champions signed eight players from the United Press International Top 100 — all from Florida, which has nudged aside Texas and California as the nation's new football recruiting hotbed.

"I really can't explain why things are going our way this year," Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden said. "Our biggest needs are for defensive backs and running backs, and we've been able to get some really good ones."

Wednesday was the first day the nation's colleges could sign high school football players to scholarship agreements.

Notre Dame was expected to sign at least 13 of the Top 100, more than any other school, but the Irish suffered a blow when defensive back John Davis of Pahokee, Fla., reneged on an oral commitment and signed with Florida State.

Max Emfinger, the Houston recruiting scout who picked the Top 100 for UPI, said based on a five-point system for each school's top 15 players, Florida State had 64 points to 59 for Notre Dame. UCLA was third with 55.5 points, followed by Ohio State with 55, Texas with 54.5, LSU with 54 and Michigan, Nebraska and Georgia with 53.5 each.

Oklahoma, meanwhile, felt the affects of its major NCAA probation by being able to recruit only one player off the Top 100 list. Oklahoma State and Texas A&M two other teams with recent tradition of success but also on probation, did not manage a single Top 100 player.

Clemson and Miami each pulled off late-afternoon recruiting surprises to challenge for bragging rights among the top five classes nationwide.

"All those schools are having great years," Emfinger said. "But when you add the points up, Florida State is definitely the leader."

Michigan signed seven of the nation's Top 100 players Wednesday, followed by Clemson with six. Miami, Auburn, UCLA and Ohio State were in line to sign at least five each, followed by Texas with four.

This is the first time in the last three years Notre Dame has not been the consensus recruiting champ, and Seminoles Coach Bobby Bowden said he was as surprised as anyone that his school had lured so much talent.

Unlike Notre Dame, whose 13 Top 100 commitments come from players in 13 states, all of Florida State's top prospects come from Florida.

"Florida (University) has always dominated this thing. They've been playing football for 100 years and we've been playing it for 41," Bowden said. "Miami, of course, is another world. They call their area the state of Miami, and it really is."

"But for some reason, we're the hot item this year, and it sure looks good on paper."

Despite the loss of Davis, Notre Dame attracted another top class, headed by quarterback Rick Mirer of Goshen, Ind., the No. 4 player in the country. Notre Dame said it would not release a list of its signings until Thursday.

"We had a good recruiting year on paper, and I want to keep emphasizing it's on paper," Notre Dame Coach Lou Holtz said. "You can't evaluate recruiting based on one year. You have to evaluate it over a two-year period."

"I think this year's team complements last year's team. I'm concerned about skill positions, because we don't have a lot of them in this group. We did have a lot of skill people last year, and we're fine if those people become productive."

Most players were holding to their non-binding oral commitments Wednesday. Exceptions included Davis and Parade All-America running back Rudy Harris of Brockton, Mass., who backed away from a commitment to Michigan and signed with Clemson.

Clemson also pulled an upset by signing defensive end Arthur Bussie of Camden, N.J., the No. 20 player in the nation. In all, Clemson signed 20 Top 100 players from New Jersey, Massachusetts, Georgia, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Mississippi.

"The win over Oklahoma in the Citrus Bowl had to help us some," said Clemson Coach Danny Ford. "There was one youngster who felt the win over Oklahoma showed Clemson had an outstanding football program, and that contributed to his signing with us."

"This is the most national recruiting class we have had since I have been at Clemson," Ford signed players from 15 states.

A handful of top players remained uncommitted Wednesday, topped by the nation's No. 1-ranked player, running back Terry Kirby of Tabb, Va., and linebacker Rich McKenzie of Lauderdale Lakes, Fla., who reportedly will choose between Penn State and Michigan.

Kirby, who averages 30 points a game in basketball and is ranked by one magazine as one of the best 3-point shooters in the nation, has scheduled a news conference for Monday to announce his decision. Clemson and Virginia are the leading candidates to sign Kirby, who wants to play football and basketball in college.

Top players who committed and signed Wednesday included defensive tackle Ricky Sutton of Tucker, Ga., (Auburn), linebacker Jessie Armstead of Dallas (Miami), linebacker Tyrone Morrison of San Diego, Calif. (Ohio State) and running back Russell White of Encino, Calif. (California).

Armstead's decision to sign with Miami gave the Hurricanes a 1-2 swap of the best players in Texas. The Hurricanes earlier signed wide receiver Kevin Williams of Dallas (Roosevelt).

Miami also pulled an upset by signing linebacker Rusty Medears of Ozark, Mo.

Bobby Knight's Hoosiers on road to Final Four finish this season

Scraps Howard News Service

First Syracuse got 100 points, then North Carolina. Forget that these were two of college basketball's most talented teams, nobody gets 100 on Indiana unless something is wrong.

Well, if something really was wrong at the start of the season, it's fixed. Indiana not only is one of the nation's hottest teams with its 10-5 record and first-place standing in the Big Ten, it is one of the best.

Indiana has emerged as a strong Final Four contender because of its midseason play and coach Bobby Knight, who has won three national championships.

The principles of Knight basketball are in place — the extensive screening on offense and the superior teamwork in man-to-man defense. But Knight also has been flexible enough to use zone, and the key to the Hoosiers' rejuvenation has been the move to a three-guard offense featuring sophomores Jay Edwards and Lyndon Jones and senior Joe Hillman. The forwards are 6-9 freshman Eric Anderson and 6-9 senior Todd Jadow.

Edwards (19.7 ppg.) and Jones (8.8 ppg, 76 assists) were teammates on Indiana state championship teams at Marion High School. Ohio State coach Gary Williams compares their understanding of each other to Derek Whitteburg and Sidney Lowe, who played together at DeMatha High School in Hyattsville, Md., and on North Carolina State's 1983 champions.

"They were like eight-year players by the time they won the national championship."

"Plus they've gotten great work out of their inside people, guys like Jadow and Anderson. They just don't stop working. So with the combination of the talent they have in the backcourt — and you can't underestimate how good that backcourt is — plus the work ethic of the inside players, they have a great combination."

Bridges, an all-South, all-metro and all-Midwest selection, runs the 40-yard dash in 4.3 seconds and was a track all-star. Cager was all-metro and an all-district honorable mention, while Laurent was the team MVP, all-district, all-metro, all-state and a member of the academic honor roll.

Among the other high school signees are Terry Cameron, a 6-1, 170-pound running back out of St. Patrick, Chris Edwards, a 6-1, 220-pound linebacker out of Hoffman Estates, Robert Hanley, a 6-2, 270-pound offensive tackle out of Jeffersonville, Ind.

Ron Hubbard, a 6-3, 200-pound linebacker out of Ben Davis in Ind., Jason Jakovich, a 6-3, 240-pound offensive lineman and Dan Raub, 6-1, 240-pound defensive lineman, both out of Joliet Catholic, Yonel Jourdain, a 6-0, 185-pound tailback out of Evanston Township and Javier Juluaga, a 6-2, 205-pound linebacker out of Ron Calli in Ind.

On the junior college side, the Salukis signed four players out of Mt. San Antonio Junior College in Walnut, Calif., including Tim Collier, a 5-10, 155-pound running back, Darnell Crews, a 6-1, 210-pound linebacker, Monty Foster, a 6-1, 192-pound defensive back and Tim Wells, a 6-2, 190-pound defensive back.

Collier was an all-conference pick two years in a row and compiled 1,300 yards and eight touchdowns. Crews had 120 tackles last season and was named MVP linebacker and all-conference.

Foster, a two-year starter and MVP defensive back in 1988, was a member of the all-conference academic team. Wells recorded 100 tackles and was second in the conference with six interceptions.

The Salukis also signed Bernard Green, a 6-0, 135-pound defensive back out of Taft Junior College in Taft, Calif.

Smith said he is not focusing his attention on any one high school player, but is expecting results from the JUCO transfers.

"I will never single out a freshman before he has played a college football game,"

All 20 of the players were on some sort of all-something team, whether it be all-state, all-metro, etc.

In addition, Smith and his offensive coordinator are blessed with the presence of three more quarterbacks. Added to Fred Gibson, Scott Gabbert, Reggie Edwards, Scott Planz and whoever else shows up in the spring, the staff is faced with an offensive problem I'm sure they're more than happy to deal with.

In fact, SIU-C's current throwers may be starting to sweat. If Morris High School graduate Jason Knapp's numbers of 3,700 yards and 35 touchdowns are an omen of things to come, there may be some changes come next September.

Speaking of omens, it seems this recruiting class, possibly one of the best to hit Carbondale in some years, may be a weird talisman of what is in store for the future of Saluki football.

After the departure of Rhoades, there were a lot of question marks in the air, and even current players could be found scratching their heads, wondering what would happen next.

But Smith has answered all those questions.

As quickly as the former staff deserves credit for turning the recruits' heads, the new staff has earned a spot in the limelight for convincing these athletes that, despite a changeover, SIU-C was the place for them.

Are these recruits for real? That remains to be seen. But why not jump around and shout a bit now?

If 90 percent of these guys don't pan out, then this will be considered a bad recruiting year. That is the future.

The present says SIU-C's football program has just signed 20 promising young men. That's good enough for me.

Northern, Eastern sign 24 each; Southern Cal takes Butkus' son

By David Gallanetti
Staff Writer
and UPI reports

Eastern Illinois and Northern Illinois each signed 24 recruits Wednesday, the first sanctioned day to claim the rights to high school and junior college football players.

The Panthers, one of the Salukis' foes in the Gateway conference, picked up 16 Illinois high school players. Among the Panthers total signees were one quarterback, five running backs and eight wide receivers.

The Huskies claimed 11 Illinois high school recruits, including Mount Vernon's Troy Hughes, a 6-foot-3, 170-pound defensive back. Hughes picked Northern Illinois over SIU-C.

In keeping with their wishbone offense, the Huskies signed just one wide receiver, four quarterbacks and seven running backs.

On the national scene, Southern California signed seven high school All-Americans and Matt Butkus, the son of Hall of Fame linebacker Dick Butkus, to letters of intent, the school announced.

The All-Americans signed are quarterback Curtis Conway of Hawthorne, Calif.; tight end Brad Banta of Baton Rouge, La.; defensive back Marcel Brown of San Diego; fullback Rory Brown of Pueblo, Colo.; linemen Michael Hinz of Riverside, Calif., and Terry McDaniels of Pasadena, Calif.; and wide receiver Johnnie Morton of Torrance, Calif.

Conway, a highly regarded sprinter who finished second in the state 100, was rated 16th on the list of top 100 players selected for UPI by recruiting analyst Max Emfinger. Rory Brown was ranked 40th, McDaniels 50th and Hinz 94th.

Butkus was a two-way lineman at Loyola High School in Los Angeles.

First-year Colorado State University football coach Earle Bruce got a quick start, signing six high school players to national letters of intent.

Bruce demonstrated his determination to recruit more than the Rocky Mountain area. He signed players from Joliet, Ill.; Orange, Texas; Cincinnati, Ohio; Kokomo, Ind.; Chicago and Bakersfield, Calif.

The first group of signees included three defensive backs, a wide receiver, a linebacker and a tailback.

being cut from the athletics program, Armstrong has faced the problem of finding a new gymnastics team on which to compete.

He is at SIUC because of Meade and a good scholarship, so the decision could be difficult as to where he will be going in the fall.

Presently Armstrong is looking at University of Oklahoma and University of Illinois. Both schools offer good gymnastics programs and good scholarships.

With the addition of 12 freshmen to this year's team, Meade said, "We can have an excellent team, a very good team."

"Our win-loss record may not be as impressive as somebody else's. We are going to be a better scoring team than a year ago. We're looking toward qualifying for nationals and getting back into the Top 10 where we were two years ago," Meade said.

in the Arena as they face Indiana State.

Creighton's Blue Jays currently sit atop the MVC with a 7-1 record, and have already defeated SIUC and Wichita State on the road.

"They won on the road," Herrin said. "I don't know if five or six wins can get a piece of the title. We've got four home games left this season and we need to win them all."

The Sycamores come into tonight's contest sporting a dismal 0-8 league mark, after having been dealt an 81-72 loss by the Salukis on Feb. 4. Herrin said he does not like the idea of facing Ron Greene's team five days after playing them.

"I don't like that," Herrin said. "But the schedule is made and we have to go by whatever it says. We are not going to change much. We are going to go out and guard them, and look for an up-tempo game."

"We have got to be mentally ready and be ready to play. We need a great crowd to help us and give us a shot in the arm. The game is in our court now."

Herrin said the killer instinct, which the Salukis lacked in their victory over the Sycamores, is something that can't really be taught or worked on.

"We want to win," Herrin said. "I think the big thing is we have got to have dominating players. The key to our success is we have gone out and played hard."

"We need to play with the same intensity as we did against Evansville to get where we want to be this season. We've got to be tough down the stretch run and for sure we can't take Indiana State lightly."

Women preparing for Gateway meet

In order to sharpen their skills for the upcoming conference championships, the Saluki women track team will run in meets today and Saturday.

The Salukis will compete in an unscheduled meet at Arkansas State. Memphis State, Alabama and Mississippi also will be participating in the non-scored meet.

Then Saturday, SIUC will compete at the Golden Shoe Invitational in Madison, Wis. against a field of nine teams including Wisconsin, Minnesota, DePaul and Eastern Illinois.

The Saluki women are coming off a solid performance in last weekend's Iowa Haweye Open in which SIUC placed second behind Iowa. Though the meet was not a victory, Coach Don DeNoon thinks the team did well despite their illnesses.

"Overall it was a good team effort," DeNoon said. "We still have athletes who are not recovered. We just don't have all our guns loaded."

One of those guns is junior Dora Kyriacou, who not only has been battling the flu, but also is suffering from an ear infection. Kyriacou has not practiced in the last three days in an effort to rid herself of the infection.

A few of the guns are ready to fire including jumper Christiana Philippou and sprinter-hurdler Kathy Raske.

Philippou, who has the season conference highs in both the long jump and the triple jump, pulled down two first-place finishes in the Iowa Open.

averaging 13 points per game. She took over a starting position when 6-1 junior Deb Kirsch injured her knee two games into the season.

Hasemann is third on the Gateway scoring latter at 18.2 ppg. She has been the Westwinds' top scorer in 14 games this season.

"Hasemann's on a roll," said Scott, noting the 31 points she scored against Wichita State and the 27 against Southwest Missouri.

The Salukis have settled on a starting lineup featuring Cathy Kampwerth at center, Dana Fitzpatrick and Amy Rakers at forward, and Tonda Seals and Colleen Heimstead at guard.

The inside play of Kampwerth and Rakers could be the difference, Scott said.

"Kampwerth is playing well, but I wish she could be a little more greedy and want the ball.

She could dominate even more. I have no complaints with her play, I just want her to do more."

In her last appearance, Rakers had only five shots. "That's not enough for her. But we've seen a new sense of fire in her eyes," Scott said.

Kampwerth is leading the team with a 10.9 points per game average. Rakers is scoring 9.8 ppg.

Kirk refuses to accept mistakes

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Former Memphis State University basketball coach Dana Kirk refuses to accept responsibility for his crimes, a federal prosecutor told a judge in a pre-sentencing memo.

Kirk, who was convicted in November of tax evasion, filing false returns and obstruction of justice, faces up to 24 years in prison and $275,000 in fines when he goes before U.S. District Judge Odeh Horton for sentencing Friday.

Ewing did not recommend a sentence for Kirk, a popular and controversial Memphis State coach from 1979-1986, but he said the judge should consider Kirk's lack of remorse.

In a U.S. Probation Office pre-sentencing report, Kirk said, "I sincerely regret that what I did or what I did not do was viewed by the jury as a criminal act."

"Mr. Kirk has never accepted responsibility for committing any crime."

Freshman Ricky Armstrong practices a routine on the rings Wednesday at the Arena. Armstrong participates in six events, his best being the floor exercise.

First year gymnast dealing with program's ultimate fate

By Tricia Jording
Staff Writer

Freshman Ricky Armstrong is a top recruit in the gymnastics field and one of Coach Bill Meade's best bets to score for the Salukis throughout the 1988-89 season.

According to Meade, Armstrong has good strength and could be SIU-C's star. Armstrong, originally from Memphis, Tenn., attended Pocono Mountain High School in Swiftwater, Penn. where his gymnastics career began.

In his junior year, Armstrong tied for second on the high bar at 1987 nationals in California.

"I was successful in high school up until last year, my senior year when I was hurt so I didn't compete much," Armstrong said.

"Choosing SIU was not a tough decision as I had a good high school coach and he referred me to Coach Meade immediately. I was told by a lot of people that Meade was good and now I agree with all of them," Armstrong said.

Armstrong competes in all six events, high bar, vault, still rings, pommel horse, parallel bars and his best event, the floor exercise.

"Personally I think I'm performing well although I hope it gets better as the season goes along," Armstrong said.

Armstrong doesn't have any individual goals yet but the team's main goal is to go, compete, and maybe win the NCAA Championships in April.

Salukis ink 20; Smith pleased

Five JUCOs added to roster

The Salukis had 20 football players sign the dotted line Wednesday, the first day of the NCAA's national signing period, and expect possibly four more, coach Bob Smith said.

SIU-C will gain 15 recruits from the high school ranks and five junior college transfers. Of the high school players, nine are from Illinois.

The Salukis signed seven of the nine recruits verbally committed to SIU-C that were listed in the Chicago Sun Times top 100 list.

"I'm not real surprised, but very pleased," Smith said. "This is a strong tribute to the evaluative skills of the previous staff, definitely a tribute to Southern Illinois University and the surrounding community and, in no small part, a tribute to the guys who came in a week ago and moved their feet and put the final lock on some of these inlance."

"I think things went smoothly, and on paper it looks like a fine recruiting class."

Smith said the Salukis might have picked up two more recruits late Wednesday night and two more early this morning.

Smith said the number the Salukis will receive is a plus, but quality is what counts in the end.

"I thought if we signed 15 to 17 I would be ecstatic," Smith said. "Number is really not a concern, but quality is what is really important."

Among the signees are three quarterbacks, Mike Bellson, 6-foot-2, 180, out of Buffalo Grove High School, Jason Knapp, 6-1, 180, of Morris and Steve Stam, 6-1, 175, of Bishop McNamara.

Knapp threw for 3,700 yards and 35 touchdowns in his career at Morris, who finished up at 11-1 last season, their only loss coming in the state football playoffs. Knapp was named Little Seven Conference Most Valuable Player for the second straight year, the first time in the league's history a player earned the honor consecutive seasons.

Joining Knapp is Jeff Johnson, 6-2, 195, a wide receiver from Morris who had 45 catches for 987 yards and 12 touchdowns rushing. Johnson was named first team all-conference and a member of Joliet's all-area team.

The Salukis picked up a trio of players from St. Augustine High School in New Orleans, La.

2 staffs deserve credit for signing's success

Oh my goodness.

When glancing at the list of recruits the football team signed Wednesday, that phrase immediately comes to mind.

I mean really, who would have ever thought a brand new coach who doesn't even have a full staff yet could possibly sign 20 recruits on the first signing day.

Well for starters, Bob Smith thought he could, and I'll bet if you look even closer his entire staff and most of the athletics department thought he could do the job too.

But before all the credit gets piled on the new regime's shoulders, there is a matter of Rick Rhoades and his staff. For these are the men, the Fred Rileys and Greg Mc-

From the press box

Mahons just to name two, who originally netted these young men and enticed them to consider SIU-C in the first place.

Simply put, there are an awful lot of shoulders that deserve a pat after yesterday's performance.

Personnel wise, the Salukis' recruiting class looks to be way above average.

Sitting in a third-place tie with Tulsa in the Missouri Valley, the men's basketball team is facing a must-win road for the rest of the season co-

Rick Herrin said. "I don't think, if we want to win the league, there are any we can afford to miss," Herrin said. "Creighton will not miss two more. The last six are must wins for us."

Westerwinds carry 3-game win streak to Arena

The Western Illinois women's basketball team has won three straight games, and that alone has Sauki coach Cindy Scott concerned about tonight's Gateway Conference game against the Westerwinds.

Tipoff is 5:30 p.m. at the Arena. The men's basketball game against Indiana State follows.

"Western's coming in having won two conference games," said Scott of the an emotional high are teams you don't want to play."

The Salukis are second in the Gateway with an 8-3 conference mark and 10-9 overall record. Western Illinois is 5-14, 4-7 in the Gateway.

"They are a capable ball team," Scott said. "Coach (Kelly) Hill has them playing hard."

This is not the first time Western Illinois has come off a major victory and entered into battle against the Salukis. The Westerwinds have upset Eastern Illinois 84-79 in Macomb prior to playing SIU-C on Jan. 14.

Although the Salukis hung on to win the season's first meeting 47-37 in a display of defense as yet unrivaled in the conference regular season, the final score was too close for Scott's comfort.

"Western did a good job of denying the pass," Scott said. "We were very lethargic in Macomb, and we have to be aware of what Western can do."

Western Illinois was led in the first game by Gail Diask, who scored 12 points, and Robin Haseman, who had 8 rebounds.
