Cheney: Ground war may be needed

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Sunday a ground war could flush out Iraqi troops dug into Kuwait, but refused to discuss when such an offensive might begin.

Wrapping up a potentially pivotal weekend meeting with allied command leaders in Riyadh, Cheney said he would present his recommendations to President Bush at the White House Monday.

"I don't plan to give you a date (for a ground war) this morning," Cheney told a news conference shortly before heading home. "That's a decision that the president will make in consultation with (Saudi) King Fahd and other key allies."

Bush ordered Cheney and Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, into the war zone to get a first-hand assessment of operations and to examine the prospects for launching what now appears to be an all-but certain ground offensive.

Thus far, the 25-day-old war against Saddam Hussein has been dominated by a massive air campaign by allied fighter and bomber pilots who have combined for more than 50,000 combat and other flights over Iraq and Kuwait.

Cheney said Sunday, "We have made major inroads in destroying" Saddam's war machine, considered the world's fourth biggest military when the shooting began Jan. 17.

The defense secretary warned, however, "The possibility still exists that he (Saddam) may find some way to try to surprise us."

Cheney said Saddam may yet resort to chemical weapons, increased terrorism, or even mount

Record crowd flocks to SIUC for cultural fest

By Tiffany Youther
Staff Writer

The International Festival activities during the weekend turned out the largest crowd in the history of the event.

International Student Council President Nabarun Ghose said more than 15,000 people attended the festival.

About 4,000 people passed through the Student Center International Lounge Friday for the exhibition of arts and crafts.

Tables covered with artwork, clothing, jewelry and other crafts from 32 international organizations were on display.

Several international groups offered to write spectators' names in their native alphabet.

One booth offered a short lesson in origami, a traditional Japanese art of folding paper to create such things as flowers and animal figures.

Phil Alalibo, president of the Nigerian Students Association, said he was happy to see more children from local grade schools at the exhibition this year.

It is a very educational experience to see the products of many different cultures, said Alalibo, a graduate student in public affairs from Nigeria.

Ghose, a doctoral student in business administration from India, said he was worried the festival would attract so many people that not everyone could be accommodated.

Ghose said the ISC worked hard to publicize the festival this year, and he was pleased to see the national attention the festival received.

Blood pours in to exceed goal on first day of drive

By Rennie Walker
Staff Writer

To maintain the local blood supply, 156 pints of blood were donated on the first day of the on-campus blood drive.

The goal of the drive is to collect 1,950 pints by the end of the week.

If this goal is met, the Missouri-Illinois region will be better prepared to respond to a request for blood if it is called for the Persian Gulf war, said Vivian Ugent, American Red Cross coordinator for area blood drives.

At present, there is no call for blood from the Persian Gulf, Ugent said. There is still a constant need for blood donations because the blood only lasts for 42 days, she said.

"If there was a request for blood from the Persian Gulf, we would respond in the same way we respond to requests from the 150 hospitals in our region," Ugent said.

Donors waiting in line to give blood on the first day of the drive said they did not come specifically to support soldiers in

Prisons packed; state must find new alternatives

CHICAGO (UPI) — Illinois no longer can afford to imprison all its criminals and must find alternate correctional methods, according to a transition report done for Gov. Jim Edgar.

The report, outlined in Sunday's Chicago Tribune, says "conservative" projections by the Department of Corrections indicate Illinois would need $755 million in the next five years to build 13 new prisons merely to avoid worsening the current overcrowding.

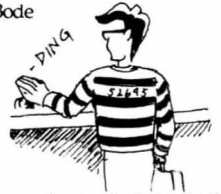

Those prisons, the report said, would add another $300 million a year to the department's operating budget — now $652 million annually.

"Economically, the state can't keep up with this," Corrections Director Kenneth McGinnis told the Tribune. "And it's going to get worse and worse."

The department says development of alternatives to incarceration "is critical." Among suggested alternatives are home confinement, electronic monitoring, imprisonment for set weekend periods, work

Army tanks move fast, burn fuel faster

M-1A1 fires rods, provides comfort for allied troops

By John Patterson
Staff Writer

United States ground troops in Saudi Arabia have the service of the "quickest tank in the world," an Army spokesman said.

Art Volpe, spokesman for the Army Tank Division, said the Abrams M-1A1 tank used in the Persian Gulf is the most lethal, mobile and survivable tank in operation anywhere.

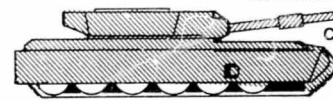

The tank, which varies in weight from 61 to 67 tons, can move at speeds of up to 43 miles per hour, and hit a moving target at night more than one mile away.

"Basically day or night, moving or not, when you fire at something you hit it," Volpe said. "It's not high-tech. What you aim at is what you hit. The M-1A1 is deadly accurate."

ABRAMS M-1A1 TANK

Speed: 43 mph
Acceleration: 0-20 in 7 sec.
Weight: 61-67 tons
120 mm turret gun

Cost: 2.3 million

The M-1A1 also is capable of accelerating from zero to 20 mph in seven seconds, making it one of the most versatile tanks in the world, Volpe said.

The one criticism of the M-1A1 is its fuel consumption. On a 500-gallon fuel tank, the M-1A1 has a range of 289 miles, which averages out to a little more than half a mile per gallon.

"In a recent demonstration, hitting speeds of 40 mph over sand dunes up to 150 feet, the M-1A1 made it roughly 200 miles in over 100-degree heat," Volpe said. "It burns some fuel, but the trade off, survivability."

The tank's interior is the key to its survivability, Volpe said.

The tank carries a crew of four, and in desert heat the interior can reach very high temperatures that cause fatigue, he said.

The crew keeps comfortable by wearing vests that filter cold air around them — almost like an air-conditioning unit, he said.

Chemical weapons also have been a concern in the gulf war, but the tank is equipped to handle that threat. By keeping the air pressure inside the tank higher than outside, any damage to the tank's armor will cause air to leak out rather than in, Volpe said.

In the event the M-1A1 is fired upon, Volpe said the tank's armor will withstand a large amount of punishment.

"They have been live fire tested, and are survivable to any ground launched threat, including another tank gun," he said.

The offensive capabilities of the M-1A1 are taken care of by a 120 mm turret gun. Unlike older era tanks, the M-1A1 does not use an explosive shell, Volpe said.

The M-1A1 fires a fin-stabilized rod at its target, and the kinetic energy behind it allows the rod to penetrate its target and inflict damage, he said.

The tanks which are produced by more than seven manufacturers at a cost of $2.3 million apiece, have been in use since 1984.

Currently 3,700 of the vehicles are in service, bringing the M-1 fleet to about 7,000.

Volpe would not say how many are being used in the Persian Gulf war.

UNLV reaffirms No. 1 in NCAA poll

NEW YORK (UPI) — Nevada-Las Vegas, coming off its toughest win of the season, remained the unanimous No. 1 choice Monday in the United Press International college basketball ratings, while Ohio State took over second place.

The Runnin' Rebels, who beat previous No. 2 Arkansas 112-105 on Sunday, swept the balloting for the ninth straight week. UNLV earned all 40 first-place votes cast Monday by the 42-member Board of Coaches and finished with 600 points.

The Rebels came back from a four-point halftime deficit against Arkansas to put together a 10-2 spurt to begin the second half and led by as many as 23 points before the Razorbacks closed the gap in the final three minutes.

"I don't know how you can play any better than we did the first 17 minutes of the second half," UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian said after the Rebels, 20-0, ran their winning streak to 31 games.

UNLV's performance also impressed several opposing coaches, including one who was in attendance in Fayetteville, Ark.

"I think Nevada-Las Vegas really established themselves," Missouri Coach Norm Stewart said. "They truly are a tremendous team. They seem to be well-focused. When you look at that, (it seems) the only thing that could derail them possibly is themselves and they seem to be so well-focused that you don't even see that happening. It's a tremendous basketball team."

UNLV is attempting to become the first team to win back-to-back national championships since UCLA in 1972 and 1973 and the first to take the title with an undefeated record since Indiana in 1976. The last time a team finished the regular season unbeaten was 1979, when Indiana State and Alcorn State turned the trick.

"I think you just saw why a lot of people believe this (UNLV) team could compete with some of those in the NBA," Arkansas Coach Nolan Richardson said.

Ohio State, which improved to 19-1 by routing Northwestern in its only game last week, moved into second place with 526 points. Arkansas slipped to third with 510 points and Indiana held fourth with 494.

Duke took advantage of an Arizona loss to move up one place into fifth. The Blue Devils posted three wins last week, including an impressive 88-70 triumph Sunday against Louisiana State.

"We lost to the best team we have played this year," LSU Coach Dale Brown said. "We have never seen that kind of defense. They hustled from beginning to end. We got whipped."

Arizona dropped one spot to sixth, while two losses by St. John's allowed No. 7 Syracuse, No. 8 North Carolina and No. 9 East Tennessee State each to move up one position.

Southern Mississippi broke into the Top 10 for the first time this year after improving two positions. Kansas leaped six spots to 11th and St. John's wound up 12th, a fall of five places.

No. 13 Utah moved up two places, No. 14 UCLA dropped three and No. 15 New Mexico State gained one. No. 16 Nebraska slipped two notches and No. 17 Georgetown improved two places.

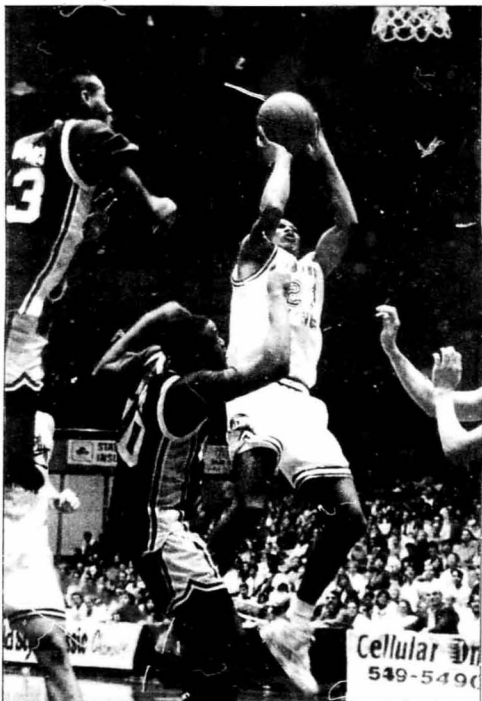

No. 18 Virginia plummeted five spots after suffering three losses in four games last week. No. 19 Oklahoma State and No. 20 Alabama each improved one position and No. 21 Texas moved up three.

No. 22 Michigan State returned to the ratings after a two-week absence and fellow newcomer Wake Forest was 23rd. Completing the list were Louisiana State and New Orleans, tied for 24th.

Dropping out of the ratings were Oklahoma, tied for 22nd before back-to-back losses last week, and Mississippi State.

Sophomore guard Tyrone Bell, after starting the Salukis' first 21 games, had the best game of his college career coming off the bench, scoring 19 points Saturday against Tulsa.

Tyrone Bell rings up points in rare trip off Saluki bench

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

Coming off the bench was something new for sophomore guard Tyrone Bell this season, but he turned out the performance of his career.

For the first time all season, Bell wasn't in the Salukis' starting lineup against Tulsa Saturday. But that meant nothing to Bell as he came off the bench on fire, running and gunning to a career-high 19 points in the contest.

"It wasn't so much because I didn't start," Bell said. "I think I was just really into the game. Usually, I come out and I'm a little tight. (freshman guard) Chris Lowe, (in foul trouble) I knew I was going to have to play a lot more minutes. So it might have fired me up a little bit."

"It was kind of a surprise (not starting). I came into the locker room and saw Emeka's (Okenwa) name on the board. But it really didn't bother me. I knew it was to help us win. I knew I'd still get to play a lot so it wasn't a problem."

Coach Rich Herrin made the lineup change to get a bigger team on the floor. Okenwa was inserted to center, moving sophomore Ashraf Amaya to power forward and senior Rick Shipley to small forward. Junior Kelvan Lawrence knife his way through the defense and has great straight ahead explosiveness. Tyrone is at his best when he can put all this together."

Bell, one of the quickest players on the SIUC roster, thrives off of running the court in a wide-open style game.

"I like to get in the open court and drive to the basket," Bell said. "Even though I'm only 6-foot-3 I've got good jumping ability so I can get my shot off over bigger people. In the open court my speed allows me to get past people."

Lowery, who also has come off the bench for the Salukis to spark the transition game, said Bell is one of the best at running the fast break.

"Tyrone is a very aggressive player," Lowery said. "He probably goes to the hole as well as anyone. He's one of the best finishers on the team."

When SIUC started losing ballgames in the middle of the season, many people began comparing the 1990-91 squad to last year's Missouri Valley Conference championship team. They looked to the shooting guard position and noticed the scoring difference in Bell and last year's shooting guard Freddie McSwain.

"You can't compare the two,"

Football players react to recruits

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

Size and experience are the buzzwords most applicable to the Saluki football team's 1990-91 recruiting class and the returning players are pleased to see a little of both.

The off-season recruiting paid off with more than 20 new players coming to the program. The Salukis have added 14 junior college players and also inked 12 high schoolers.

"I feel really good about this recruiting class," Saluki freshman offensive lineman Jason English said. "We need some age and experience and the JUCO players gave us that. They look pretty good and they should be able to contribute to the program."

The players were in agreement that head coach Bob Smith and his staff did the right thing in taking the usually un-Smithlike JUCO road to improve the team. Smith tends to look to the high school ranks to get talent, but he changed his ways this year to fill some immediate needs.

One former Saluki player Kevin Kilgallon, who has seen three coaches in his four years at SIUC, also gave the thumbs-up to this recruiting class.

"The program needs players who can play now," Kilgallon said. "We need a lot of big people on both sides of the ball and that's what we're getting."

After fans see the size of some of the new Salukis, the coaching staff can never be accused of not thinking big. Of the 26 players signed, 13 weigh 225 pounds or more. The linemen get a large charge as they added four players that top the scales at more than 270 pounds.

"I came here from a JUCO and that experience helps" Saluki Rob Harmer said. "Our team needs some help so we can compete well next year. It's good that we got a lot of linemen, a lot of size."

Moscow to respond to vote; military maneuvers planned

VILNIUS, Lithuania, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — Saturday's overwhelming vote for independence gave Lithuanian leaders a strong argument to back their secession drive, but they acknowledged Sunday that Moscow was unlikely to change its heavy-handed stance against secession. Within regular Soviet military maneuvers scheduled to start in the Baltic republic Sunday, Lithuanians waited anxiously for Moscow's response to Saturday's plebiscite on independence. The Lithuanian government said there had been no reaction by Sunday afternoon and there was no indication the troop maneuvers have started. "Everybody is wondering what they will do now," Lithuanian parliament spokesman Haris Subacius said.

Rioters report clash with police in Albania

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Dozens of police and rioters clashed in the main Albanian port of Durres leaving many people wounded in violence sparked by rumors of free passage out of the country on Italian ships, official news reports said Sunday. The reports said police arrested 42 young people in the violence that occurred in the Adriatic coastal town on Saturday. The incident was the first known outbreak of serious unrest in the tiny communist-ruled Balkan state of 3.2 million since mid-December, when anti-government riots rocked a number of large towns, including Durres.

Plane full of soldiers crashes near Bogota

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — A four-engine plane carrying about 80 Colombian soldiers crashedlanded north of Bogota Sunday moments after taking off from Bogota's El Dorado International Airport, but no one died in the accident, officials said. One soldier suffered a broken collarbone and four others received minor injuries. A spokesman for the Civil Aviation department said the plane took off about 10:30 a.m. and shortly afterward had engine trouble and began losing altitude. "We took off ... and a little bit later two motors exploded," said the plane's pilot, Luis Wilson. "With the soldiers' weight, it was impossible to stay in the air." The pilot told reporters. "Fortunately, we dumped ... gasoline during the emergency and that helped avoid a tragedy."

Hussein: 'Appeal for peace' misunderstood

WASHINGTON (UPI) — King Hussein of Jordan, accused by U.S. officials of giving oral support to Iraq in the Gulf war, said Sunday his "appeal for peace" had been misunderstood and he hoped there would be no lingering U.S.-Jordan rift. The Bush administration is holding up about $77 million in aid to Jordan as part of a review of aid to the kingdom. Secretary of State James Baker, during a broadcast interview, tied the review to U.S. budget constraints, although the White House has made it clear the review was prompted by Hussein's speech last week. The King has accused the United States of seeking dominance in the Middle East. The Bush administration said it recognizes the pressures facing Hussein.

Kentucky train derailment cleanup underway

WICKLIFFE, Ky. — Authorities Sunday mounted a cleanup effort along the Ohio River that was prompted by a freight train derailment in which at least two tanker cars ruptured. Seven cars of an Illinois Central freight train derailed Saturday on a bridge over the Ohio River about 5 miles northwest of Wickliffe, with five cars plunging about 60 feet into the river area and two others staying on the bridge, said Gail Bass, a spokeswoman for the Ballard County sheriff's office. "They've been working since it happened yesterday morning."

Lincoln fanatics now have historical guidebook

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Author Don Davenport said he is an Abraham Lincoln fanatic. He said Lincoln is as famous as Adolph Hitler, Jesus Christ and George Washington. Davenport has parlayed his enthusiasm into one of the first-ever travel books related to the president who signed the Emancipation Proclamation. The book, called "In Lincoln's Footsteps," is an historical guide to sites in Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky related to the former president.

Orangeburg anniversary marked by black leaders

By Jefferson Robbins
Staff Writer

Two years before Kent State, there was Orangeburg.

Carbondale black leaders gathered Thursday night to mark the 23rd anniversary of the Orangeburg Massacre, when three African-American students allegedly were gunned down by highway patrolmen at South Carolina State College.

The meeting, a panel discussion broadcast by WSIU 91.9 FM, featured Nathaniel Felder, former president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Carbondale chapter; the Rev. Loyd Sumner, NAACP president-elect; and Richard Hayes, former president and member of the NAACP Executive Council.

The discussion followed a WSIU program, "The Orangeburg Massacre," which examined the events of Feb. 7, 1968, when a group of students demonstrated for the racial integration of Orangeburg's only bowling alley.

Gunfire from patrolmen called in to control the crowd reportedly left three dead and 30 wounded, but the event received little coverage in the national news media.

Indictments brought against some patrolmen returned no convictions in a South Carolina federal court, the New York Times reported.

"To say that it was unfortunate is a gross understatement," Sumner told the radio audience from the Carbondale NAACP headquarters, 207 S. Marion.

The shooting was an exercise in police brutality, Sumner said.

"The students had no guns," he said. "The policemen were armed with rifles, bayonets and carbines."

Felder called Orangeburg "an incident which leaves a bad taste in the mouths of any humanitarians in America."

Felder said the limited press coverage of the Orangeburg incident displayed a national bias against black Americans and civil rights activities in the 1960s.

Orangeburg was overshadowed in the national press by the Kent State shootings of 1970, when four students were gunned down by Ohio National Guardsmen, Felder said.

"The nation was much more tolerant when these things happened to African-Americans," he said.

"A similar incident occurred at another, predominantly white university, Kent State," he said, "and it aroused the

'Carbondale' game to feature local businesses, advertising

By Sherri L. Wilcox
Staff Writer

Soon, Carbondale residents can cruise the Strip without leaving the house.

Wes Holly of Mount Juliet, Tenn., is creating a hometown board game for Carbondale, patterned after Parker Brothers' Monopoly.

Instead of Boardwalk and Park Place, spaces on the board of "Carbondale" will represent local businesses, and will display advertisements for the businesses.

Holly was in Carbondale last week selling ad space to local business owners.

Holly said he opened his gamemaking business, Holly and Company, eight years ago, and has created versions for more than 225 towns, including Paducah, Ky., and Marion.

"I have covered much of Kentucky and Tennessee, and I am looking forward to doing more business in Southern Illinois," Holly said.

He said players start with a bank account of play money and roll the dice to move around town and acquire property. Landing on someone else's property results in a rental charge.

Players can collect extra money by following instructions on drawn cards, some of which include, "Be a snob for the next 2 rounds and collect $200" and "Make a funny face for $50." The cards also allow players to send the person of their choice to jail and clean out each others bank accounts.

'Carbondale' creator Wes Holly rolls the dice on one of his 225 board games patterned after towns.

"Monopoly fans love it," Holly said. "It's a great gift idea."

Ad space for "Carbondale" is selling at $110 to $220 a space, and Holly said each business that purchases a space on the board receives 10 to 20 free copies of the game.

He said the game should be in Carbondale stores by May 1, and it usually sells for $11.

City official: Students fail to vote in local elections

By Doug Toole
and Leslie Colp
Staff Writers

Most University students will not vote in the April 2 Carbondale election, a city official said.

City Clerk Janet Vaught said

most students do not register to vote. Those who do register, she said, do so to qualify for in-state tuition.

"(Students) are registered for one purpose and that purpose is not for voting," Vaught said.

Carbondale residents only cast

2,545 votes in the 1989 election, according to election statistics.

The 1980 census showed Carbondale had more than 26,000 residents. About 13,000 University students were eligible to vote in 1989.

More people vote in mayoral election years, but Vaught said she expects a lower turnout this year because Mayor Neal Dillard is running unopposed.

Carbondale resident Kyle Englert and councilmen Richard Morris and John Mills are running for two open council positions.

Brad Cole, Undergraduate Student Government chief of staff, said the requirements to vote in the city election are not difficult for students to fulfill.

Cole, who also is a deputy voter

International festival celebrates diversity

ONE CAN EASILY SPOT THE visual differences between cultures by simply walking through campus from students such as Vietnamese and Africans to Indians and Koreans, each group's mannerisms and appearances show off its culture.

But one cannot tell about lifestyles just by looks.

International Festivals provide a view beyond just the outward appearances by displaying the music, foods, arts, traditions, values and ceremonial dress of different cultures.

SIUC just celebrated the 10th anniversary of its festival this weekend, and this significance lies not just in this annual weekend of events.

In Carbondale, each day is an international celebration.

On a campus offering as much cultural diversity as SIUC, one can learn about international students all year.

THE RECOGNITION OF CARBONDALE as a cultural center has extended to the national level. Both President Bush and Vice President Quayle sent letters recognizing the importance of the event.

The proclamation of an International Week as Gov. Jim Edgar did for Illinois and Mayor Neil Dillard did for the city or a scheduled weekend of international activities raises the awareness that different cultures exist on campus.

But it also should increase knowledge about the way people live in other countries.

In this way, learning about diversity might lead ideally to a sense of oneness among all students by finding out the commonality of human goals transcend culture.

Bush suppresses press

By Leon Daniel
 UPI Chief Correspondent

The Bush administration has muzzled the press and put the Pentagon in charge of covering the gulf war.

That is like letting the fox guard the henhouse.

The public will get better war coverage when the press gets back into journalism and the military gets out of it.

The U.S. Central Command's daily briefings in Riyadh are reminiscent of the notorious "Five O'Clock Follies," the official briefings in Saigon during the Vietnam War that often conflicted with what reporters saw and reported from the field.

Armed with what they actually had seen, reporters were able to refute misinformation dispensed at the Follies, such as inflated body counts.

The press and the military had an adversarial relationship throughout the Indochina conflict that served the public well.

It was a relatively unfettered press that shed needed light on America's secret war in Laos, its unacknowledged bombing in Cambodia and such tragedies as the My Lai massacre.

There was a widespread notion on those days that Americans had a right to be fully informed about a war they were required to support with their tax dollars and blood.

The American press, for its part, established an honorable record throughout the Vietnam War of voluntarily withholding information that might endanger the lives of their countrymen in uniform.

Sadly, the Bush administration insists on prosecuting the gulf war behind a wall of secrecy, using the Pentagon to impose a strict system of censorship and pool reporting.

Sometimes the military minders corrupt the press in ways that might amuse the public, which never has overly cherished the disorderly mob that sometimes pompously refers to itself as the Fourth Estate.

A recent pool of reporters, for example, was dispatched from Dhahran to cover a ribbon-cutting at a new mess hall in the desert. But nobody will be buckling when the ground war starts filling body bags with the corpses of young women and men.

Shackles on the press raise the possibility of cover-ups, which have no place in a just war. When the killing on the ground starts, people will want to know how and why their loved ones died.

Wars surely are too important to leave to the generals. And how much the public has a right to know about them should not be solely to the president.

Martin moves into labor position through effective political games

Lynn Martin knows how to play the politics game.

The newly-confirmed Secretary of Labor won a seat on the president's cabinet last week.

But that should come as no surprise to the former Illinois congresswoman, who just three months ago suffered a heart-wrenching defeat in the U.S. senate race against Paul Simon.

Surely she never intended to beat the popular Southern Illinois senator especially with the odds of an incumbency against her.

Surely her campaign manager Roger Ailes, one of the sharpest managers around, never intended to manage a winning campaign against Simon.

Only about 5 percent of all challengers in this country get elected, and Ailes doesn't manage a campaign that he can't win.

Martin wasn't running to beat Simon. She wasn't running for a seat in the Senate. She was playing the politics game.

Jackie Spinner
 Investigation Coordinator

The word most likely got out on Capitol Hill that Elizabeth Dole would be stepping down from her Secretary of Labor post—if the American public knows anything by now it's that nothing happens by chance in Washington.

By running against Simon, Martin made a headline name for herself. Under the disguise of an American political campaign, her background and ideas became a matter of public interest.

When Dole announced her resignation, Martin became the logical choice for a replacement.

The issue then, as if there really are any issues in American politics, isn't whether or not Martin is qualified for the position.

Martin was a team player on good terms with George Bush and other high-ranking Republican officials.

That kind of patronage makes for good politics but does nothing to serve the public's interest.

Instead of providing the most qualified cabinet officials, committee members and bureaucrats, patronage serves the American people a platter of game players.

Martin had nothing to lose by staging a campaign against Simon, and her confirmation to the president's cabinet Feb. 6 only re-emphasizes a point about American politics.

It's never whether you win or lose, it's how you play the game.

Automobile drivers just as responsible for road safety as motorcycle riders

Motorcycle safety is something that most people think about only in the spring and summer.

Many people also think that motorcycle safety is the responsibility of the cyclist.

Think again. On Feb. 1, I decided to ride my motorcycle to school. I approached campus on Chautauqua Drive and turned on the Lincoln Drive.

At the next intersection a blue Dodge pulled in behind me and started tailgating.

Initially, I pumped my brakes so that my brake light would flash (a technique recommended at the Motorcycle Safety Course, offered here on campus).

Realizing that my efforts were futile, I employed a second technique of increasing the distance between me and the vehicle in front of me.

This second technique gives the cyclist time to brake, and someplace to go in the event of an emergency.

The driver of the blue Dodge was very persistent and stayed on my tail until we reached the parking garage.

No, the driver of the blue Dodge did not hit me.

There was no accident and the only harm was in infuriating me and making me nervous.

However, people need to realize that motorcyclists do not have the protective shell that automobile drivers have.

People also need to know that an accident involving a automobile and a motorcycle is likely to result in serious injury to the cyclist.

Last semester, a friend of mine spent a day in a hospital and missed three weeks of school and work as a result of a minor collision between a car and the cyclist that my friend was riding.

Please don't misunderstand me. I'm not claiming that it's always the fault of the automobile driver.

I know that many cyclists do not wear their helmets, jackets and gloves, and that often we see cyclists zipping around acting careless and foolish.

All I ask is that you give us a little consideration. Please do not tailgate. A fender bender for you can be fatal for a cyclist.—Michael A. Shelton, senior, advanced technical studies forces, who participated in more than nine hours of briefings with the two men on Saturday.

Cheney also met with representatives of the allied forces, as well as with King Fahd and with the exiled emir of Kuwait, Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah.

Although Cheney refused to disclose what he would recommend to Bush, he has suggested in recent days that a ground offensive would be helpful.

On Sunday he said, "You can make the air force even more effective than it's already been if you use the ground forces or amphibious forces to force him to move out of the positions he's currently in."

Cheney said a ground offensive would be part of "one campaign." "We're now in the phase that focuses on air power. At some point, we would expect to bring in other elements of our forces," said Cheney. "The question is when and what's the most effective use of those additional forces."

There's been speculation, particularly on the front lines among the troops, that a ground offensive might begin within weeks. Some top military brass, however, had suggested that more needs to be done to damage Iraqi forces in Kuwait.

U.S. military sources said Iraqi troops have appeared more active in recent days in bolstering defenses along the Gulf coast of Kuwait.

One high-level military source predicted Sunday that if and when there is a ground offensive allied forces could still catch Saddam by surprise because "the timing will be of our choosing."

"Just as with the air campaign," he said. "They knew we were coming eventually, but they really didn't know the time, the hour or the place, and I think we caught them with their shorts down."

Douglas Hurd, British foreign minister, holding his own news conference in Riyadh a few hours after Cheney left, said the allied coalition was moving ahead deliberately.

"I've not felt in the various conversations I've had in the last week, any pressure to launch a ground war before it was ready. Everyone understands we need to minimize casualties. There is a very great steadiness out there in the coalition on this point," he said.

Cheney said he was "struck by the enormous size of the Iraqi military establishment, the size of the army, the enormous number of tanks, the hardened aircraft shelters, the redundant communications systems."

"This clearly was a military force designed for major combat," he said.

After the news conference in Riyadh, Cheney and Powell visited a stealth bomber base in Saudi Arabia — where they met with U.S. and Saudi commanders and spoke with troops — and then headed home.

At the base, Bush's two top military advisers followed the example of U.S. troops by incriminated bombs with messages for Saddam.

Cheney wrote, "For Saddam, with affection." Powell, repeating a message he has given before, said: "To Saddam, you didn't move it, so now you lose it."

Cheney and Powell, who arrived Friday on their first trip to the war zone, met nine hours Saturday with allied commanders in the war room at the U.S. Central Command in Riyadh. Meetings also were held with Arab leaders.

Most of all, however, he said he was happy about the attention it has received from students and faculty at SIUC.

"We wanted a response from the students and now we have it," Ghose said. "We are finally there."

Khalid Kamal, ISC vice president of internal affairs, described the main difference between this year's festival and those of the past.

"In the past, we were scared about attracting enough people" he said. "Now we are scared about whether we can handle such large crowds."

Kamal said the ISC office received many calls concerning the festival.

Ghose said the Student Center had to open all four ballrooms for the fashion show Saturday and even that was not enough.

"Usually we have standing room only but this year people couldn't get in," he said.

He said about 1,000 people stood outside the ballrooms because the place was too packed for any more to get inside.

The international buffet Sunday featured dishes from 15 countries. The buffet offered a sampling of a variety of ethnic foods, from Chinese Wonton Soup to Jamaican Jerk Pork.

Ghose said nearly 600 people attended the buffet, more than double the total in past years.

The cultural show Sunday was a colorful display of native costumes from 16 international student organizations.

The groups performed traditional dances before an audience of about 1,500.

"The house is open all the way to Ballroom A and still there are people standing outside," Ghose said. "It is overwhelming."

SIU Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit, who served as one of the judges for the cultural show, said he liked the performances. He said judging which group was the best was very hard because of the diversity of the cultures represented.

"It's like comparing apples and oranges," Pettit said.

The cultural show ended with a grand finale featuring members of the international student organizations holding lit candles and singing "What A Wonderful World" and "Imagine."

Ghose said the audience responded enthusiastically to the goodwill performance.

Winners of the events were the Filipino student organization in the exhibition of arts and crafts, the Korean student organization for the fashion show and the Bangladesh student organization for the cultural show.

The festival was sponsored by the ISC, International Programs and Services, and the Student Center.

the Persian Gulf, but to help anyone who needs blood.

Michael Davis, senior in speech communication, said he has given about four gallons at SIUC blood drives.

"It could be the person in line standing next to you. It could be your brother or sister. It could be someone reading this story in the paper. It could be anyone," Davis said.

Gary Thomas, a senior in outdoor recreation, said he has fainted all but one of the five times he has given blood at SIUC. He said he keeps donating because he knows people need blood.

"Blood is a natural resource,"

Ugent said. "It is precious resource because it can only come from people."

"I hope the people who want to donate blood do it because they want to help someone who needs help. Like a boy with leukemia, someone in a car accident, a person going through surgery or a person on dialysis."

Of all donors 21 people donated for the first time.

Pam Robbins, a Carbondale resident, was a first-time donor Sunday. She said she did not come to donate because of the war, but because her work schedule did not permit her to give during the week at past blood drives.

Her husband Hugh has given about three gallons at SIUC blood drives. Since he works on-campus at the physical plant, it is easy for him to donate blood during the week.

Sunday afternoon, the Robbins' decided to coordinate their schedules and take the time to give blood together. To give blood, a person must be at least 16 years old and weigh over 110 pounds. Donors can give every 56 days.

Donors can give from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. today through Thursday at the Student Center Ballrooms. The blood drive will be from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Friday at the Recreation Center.

release, boot camps and intensive probation requiring frequent check-in.

Those alternatives would leave expensive prison space for criminals judged truly dangerous, the report said.

Illinois built 14 new prisons while Gov. James R. Thompson was in office — one for each year of his tenure. But the tough 'Class X' sentencing law that Thompson pushed through the Legislature, along with the rise in gang- and drug-related crime in Chicago, helped fill those prisons as quickly as they were built.

The state currently has about 28,000 inmates in 23 prisons. Only one major prison is under construction and none is on the drawing boards. That equation, the report says, translates to 16,000 more adult inmates than available beds by mid 1996.

Other states, including Minnesota, Washington and Oregon, have passed sentencing laws giving judges more options for crimes against property. Illinois observers, however, give similar laws less chance here because of a continuing get-tough attitude toward crime.

For example, Chicago Mayor Richard Daley, seeking re-election amid a record murder rate, last week proposed new drug- and gun-control laws that would require consecutive sentences, lengthening the amount of time many convicts would have to spend behind bars.

The report warns quick action is needed before the problem snowballs.

Thousands make merry, not war

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — With Carnival in full swing, tens of thousands of revelers swarmed major parade routes and the French Quarter in a party mood Sunday, carrying on a raucous tradition despite the Persian Gulf war that intruded only slightly on the fun.

A postcard-perfect day of bright sunshine and mid-70 degree temperatures helped generate a mellow spirit among the throngs engaged in a partying ritual that will climax at midnight on Mardi Gras, or Fat Tuesday. The excesses then give way to the Christian penitential season of lent. "Make Mardi Gras, Not War," was the message on a new green, gold and purple button being worn by a few people in the crowds.

Many of the floats in parades snaking through the city carried American flags and "Support Our Troops" signs. One float carried a "No SCUD can touch this" sign.

An absence of sailors in uniform was another reflection of the war. The city normally is a shore leave point for several Navy ships at Mardi Gras. Last year there were seven vessels in port, turning loose thousands of sailors.

This year only the frigate USS Paul arrived, as naval forces are concentrated in the Middle East.

Tourists continued to pour into the city in numbers approaching the record crowd of about 1.5 million last year. But hotels were offering special deals and advertising in markets within driving distance to boost sales.

Hospitality officials said occupancy rates were running about 91 percent compared with 97 percent in 1990, a reflection of the national recession and the war.

Soviets negotiate with Iraq for peace

MOSCOW (UPI) — Middle East expert Yevgeni Primakov will soon travel to Baghdad as the personal envoy of Mikhail Gorbachev to meet Saddam Hussein in what the Soviet president has called a try for "a breakthrough for peace," the Tass agency said Sunday.

The official Soviet agency did not say when Primakov, who worked in Cairo, Egypt for eight years as a Soviet journalist, will leave for Baghdad, but Gorbachev said Saturday night the envoy would be leaving immediately.

Tass said: "Yevgeni Primakov, personal envoy of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, is to visit Iraq, the presidential press office announced Sunday. Time for departure was not specified."

Gorbachev said in his statement Saturday night that the war showed signs of exceeding its U.N. mandate to liberate Kuwait, requiring the immediate dispatch of a personal envoy to Baghdad.

"I will immediately send a personal representative for the meeting with President Hussein," Gorbachev said Saturday night.

"I repeat in order to make a breakthrough for peace in the Middle East it is necessary to put out the war fire in the gulf area as soon as possible," he said. "This is of utmost importance now."

Primakov, former head of the Institute of Near East Studies, twice visited Baghdad in October and met with Saddam in unsuccessful efforts to avert the Persian Gulf war, which was triggered by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

As in the present upcoming mission, Primakov traveled to the hot spot as the personal envoy of Gorbachev even though the foreign minister at the time, Eduard Shevardnadze, said he was ready to undertake the mission.

Film, music stars sing in support of soldiers

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — A star-spangled gathering of celebrities joined in a chorus of support Sunday for U.S. troops serving in the Persian Gulf, recording a song reminiscent of the anti-hunger anthem "We Are The World."

More than 100 celebrities signed on to record the song and video at Warner Bros. studios in an apologetic statement that the hostile reception given to returning Vietnam veterans will not be repeated when Persian Gulf veterans come home.

The all-star choir, under the banner "Voices That Care," included Hollywood heavyweights Michelle Pfeiffer, Kevin Costner, Denzel Washington, Meryl Streep, Sally Field, Sylvester Stallone and such sports stars as Wayne Gretzky, Mike Tyson, Brian Bosworth and O.J. Simpson.

The music industry also was well-represented with the likes of Paula Abdul, Michael Bolton, Belinda Carlisle, Frank Sinatra, Tiffany and Luther Vandross.

The celebrity-laden event was reminiscent of the "We Are The World" song and music video, orchestrated by Quincy Jones, that raised millions for African famine relief.

Air attacks: Allies pound Iraqi ground positions with increased bombing campaigns

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Allied forces continued their intense bombing campaign against Iraqi targets Sunday, flying 2,800 aerial missions during the 24-hour period and bringing to 60,000 the number of sorties flown in the Persian Gulf war.

The high rate of sorties against a wide range of Iraqi installations suggests that a ground battle with Iraqi troops may still be weeks off.

Marine Corps Brig. Gen. Richard Seal told reporters in Riyadh Sunday evening that U.S. fighters would continue their proven success rate of hitting Iraq's formidable military arsenal. The steady air-to-surface pounding of Iraq would lessen the dangers to allied ground troops once a land war begins.

"It's a target-rich environment" for aerial bombardment, Neal said. "It looks like it's going to be a target-rich environment for awhile."

Despite the U.S. military's assertion that it has destroyed 15 to 20 percent of Iraq's tanks, artillery pieces and armored personnel carriers, officials say they are impressed by the enormity of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's military might.

"I am struck by the enormous size of the Iraqi military establishment," U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said after meeting in Riyadh with leaders of the allied contingent.

Saddam "retains a very significant part of what was the world's fourth largest army," Cheney said.

Nonetheless, Cheney said, "we believe we have in fact done serious damage to many categories of strategic targets — that includes his air force and his navy."

The significant number of sorties notwithstanding, the military disclosed few operational details Sunday.

U.S. forces lost a second Harrier AV-8 fighter to enemy artillery in Operation Desert Storm, Neal said. The plane was shot down Sunday over southern Kuwait and the two-member crew was reported missing.

The downed Harrier brings to 25 the number of allied planes that have been lost or shot down by Iraqi fire, 18 of which were American and seven that belonged to other coalition forces.

Neal also said a U.S. Navy A-6E fighter attacked and destroyed two Iraqi gunboats in the Gulf.

Meanwhile, the number of Iraqi prisoners of war, some of whom are thought to be defectors, continues to mount.

On Sunday, 42 Iraqi troops were captured by U.S. forces or surrendered.

About 1,000 Iraqis have become prisoners since the allies attacked

Iraq Jan. 17 in an attempt to evict Iraq from Kuwait.

On Saturday, U.S. military officials said the most recent data show that allied forces have destroyed more than 750 tanks out of an Iraqi inventory of about 4,000, more than 650 of about 3,200 artillery pieces, and more than 600 of about 4,000 armored personnel carriers.

A senior U.S. military official said many of the tanks destroyed were used by the Iraq's 150,000-strong Republican Guard, which has incurred upwards of 200 air strikes a day, Neal said Sunday.

Though Neal said, "we're doing extremely well against the Republican Guard," he was unable to quantify the number of troops lost to air fire.

The highly mobile guard units, protected by fortified bunkers, are considered Saddam's greatest military asset.

Iraq has sent 147 of its planes, including 121 fighters, to Iran, where the Iranian government promised U.S. officials that the planes and crews would be grounded for the duration of the war.

The planes appear to be flying in groups of three to four and are "going very low and very fast" and about six or seven have crashed en route to Iran, Neal said.

U.S.-led forces have also downed 36 Iraqi fighters in air-to-air combat and officials believe they have destroyed at least that many on the ground.

Israel waiting for right time to attack Iraq

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israeli officials, joined by Iraq's renewed Scud-missile bombing, said Sunday they were "fully prepared" to retaliate, but would continue to wait for a propitious moment and consult with the United States.

The anti-Iraqi rhetoric warmed up following the explosion of a Scud-B missile on a middle-class neighborhood in greater Tel Aviv before dawn Saturday morning. The warhead, launched from western Iraq, flattened about 10 buildings — including a foreign embassy — damaged about 500 apartments and left 25 people injured.

The attack came after a six-day lull in Scud missile barrages, as life was beginning to return to normal. Saturday's attack was the 11th by Iraq since the Persian Gulf war began Jan. 17, when U.S.-led allied forces launched an air assault aimed at ending Iraq's Aug. 2 occupation of Kuwait.

Late Saturday night, Lt. Gen. Dan Shomron, the army chief of staff, released a statement saying that "Israeli Defense forces are fully prepared for an action to remove the threat to the home front," but would wait to see whether U.S. and allied forces could bring the war to a close without their help.

"The threat of the missiles still exists even though it's been degraded," Shomron noted in a message.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir put it more simply in comments released Sunday from a meeting with Sued Aaken, leader of the Danish Social Democratic Party.

Big business bursts Bush's budget bubble

WASHINGTON (UPI) — How tough is it to sell optimism in the midst of a war and recession? Just ask President Bush.

In a brief respite from management of the Persian Gulf war, Bush flew to New York last week to appear before the Economic Club of New York, a high-powered, male-dominated bastion of Wall Street money men and corporate kingpins.

It should have been an audience primed for the kind of upbeat assessment he had to deliver: unwavering faith in the fundamental strength of America, its peace and prosperity interrupted by mere "temporary disturbances."

"Make no mistake," Bush declared, "the current recession does not signal any decline in the fundamental, long-term health or basic vitality of the economy."

The captains of business and industry were less than stirred. Applause lines met with silence. When Bush boldly predicted the federal budget deficit — estimated at a record $318 billion this year and $281 billion in 1992 — "will be virtually eliminated by 1995," the scattered sounds of clapping were offset by a ripple of skeptical chuckles.

Why the sense of disbelief? Perhaps because Bush offered few details of how the nation, especially while preoccupied with immediate problems, is laying a solid foundation for the bright future he outlined.

It may be that his listeners had heard it all before.

Ronald Reagan was elected in 1980 on a platform that first promised a balanced budget by the end of his first term and later the end of his second, only to leave behind the largest accumulation of deficit and debt in history.

The Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law, enacted in 1985 in the absence of political consensus between Reagan and Congress to attack the deficit, was to have guaranteed a balanced budget by 1991. Two years later, the target was pushed back to 1993.

The administration now projects the deficit could drop to $2.9 billion by 1995 and turn into a surplus by 1996. But as Bush discovered in New York, that rather positive scenario does not have a large following of true believers.

Like Reagan, who once joked that the deficit was "big enough to take care of itself," Bush made light of the problem in words that underscored its enormity and intractability.

Asked about the peace dividend that had been expected from reduced defense spending in the post-Cold War era, he said to laughter: "I always had a different concept of a dividend: You have a profit, you pay a dividend. If you don't, why, you don't."

"We're operating at a 300-and-some-jillion-dollar deficit," he quipped, "so we're not exactly a dividend-paying mode." Webster's New World Dictionary defines "jillion" as a colloquialism for "an indefinite but very large number."

Since his Jan. 29 State of the Union address, Bush has failed to wow with his budget, his bank industry reforms or his domestic vision.

The spending limitations of last fall's deficit-cutting budget agreement with Congress precluded Bush from doing much more than reshuffling domestic programs and priorities — stealing from one to pay for expansion of another — in his budget for fiscal 1992.

The day after his New York speech, some Republican members of Congress urged him to focus more on the longer-range issue of how to strengthen America's economic power and industrial competitiveness once its current troubles are overcome.

For advocates of that view, however, Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady prescribed a dose of reality.

"The long run cannot begin until we get past the short run," he said.

Penguins dying from pneumonia in Chicago aquarium

CHICAGO (UPI) — Shedd Aquarium — hit by construction and legal problems in trying to prepare its new Oceanarium display — is trying to combat a common air fungus that has killed 13 of its 16 Gentoo penguins.

"In zoos across the world, of all penguins that die, aspergillus is the cause of death in 30 to 50 percent of the cases," said Dave Casper, zoo veterinarian. "It's a real problem."

Aspergillus is a fungus that is a common soil contaminant and when airborne is "the No. 1 killer of penguins and other water fowl," he said Sunday. The fungus settles in the lungs of penguins and causes pneumonia.

The first death happened last August. Since then, one died in September, another in October, five in November, two in December, two in January and one this month.

Zoo officials said precautions were taken when the 16 Gentoo penguins from Scotland's Edinburgh Zoo were brought to the United States last May.

Veterinarians gave the flightless aquatic birds antibiotics to try to prevent the difficult-to-treat infection and have even turned to an experimental drug to help the three remaining penguins, officials said.

"We've X-rayed their air sacs and they look fine but we just have to wait and watch," Casper said of the three quarantined survivors.

"You feel so hopeless with something like this where there is no known cure. You just keep hoping that something will help," said Betsy Raymond, a spokeswoman for the aquarium.

The 1-year-old penguins, which normally live up to 10 years, never have been put on display, officials said.

Iowa casinos roll in tourists

Boat cruises book Chicago travelers while Illinois waits

CHICAGO (UPI) — Iowa's floating casinos are filling their summer cruise schedules — mainly with Chicago-area tourists — while Illinois boat owners finalize plans to get their craft under way.

Iowa boat owners report very strong demand for their Mississippi River gambling cruises, the Chicago Sun-Times said Sunday.

Jack McNamara, communications director for Persian Riverboat Casino, said the Persian Gulf hostilities and threat of terrorism have scared travelers off foreign travel and sent them scrambling for vacations closer to home. That has benefited his boat.

"Whenever the Lord closes one door, he opens another," McNamara told the newspaper.

"We're hearing from so many Midwest travel agents that their customers are nervous and looking for destinations closer to home. Chicago is shaping up as perhaps our No. 1 market."

He said the President, sailing from Davenport, still has some openings available, "but you may need to have alternate dates in mind."

Illinois boats, delayed by strict licensing procedures and background checks of owners, will not hit the water until late this year or early 1992.

Pharaohs probably paid to have pyramids put up

GIZA, EGYPT (UPI) — Archaeologists say they have found 10 tombs they believe contain the remains of workers paid to build the pyramids, contradicting the belief that slaves were forced to construct the monuments to the pharaohs. The discovery was made in the sandy Giza plateau west of Cairo, where the three pyramids dating to about 2,500 B.C. are located.

Giza Antiquities Director Zahi Hawas said over the weekend that the new tombs were different from anything seen in Egypt before.

He said archaeologists discovered cone-shaped formations inside the tombs, which were probably used to store grain and other foodstuffs presented as a sacrifice to the dead person.

"Workers in ancient Egypt used to receive their payment in grain," said Hawas, adding there are indications from murals in the tombs that those buried there were laborers or artisans who worked on the pyramids. "It is now beyond doubt that these tombs belonged to the workers who helped build the pyramids," he said.

Hawas said it proved that laborers also built their own tombs.

SIUC-hosted theater festival brings prestige to University

Students from 125 universities to visit SIUC next year

By Karen Radius
Staff Writer

Next January SIUC will attract more than 1,000 people for the Region III American College Theater Festival.

Not only will the University gain prestige from the event, the Carbondale community will gain a significant amount of business revenue from the festival participants, said Denise Dillard, theater teaching assistant.

The ACTF is a national association organized by the John F. Kennedy Center for the Fine and Performing Arts in Washington, D.C.

The festival, scheduled for January 8-12, is presented annually in several regions in the United States, but next January will mark its first appearance at SIUC.

Illinois competes with colleges and universities from Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin and Michigan for grants, awards and scholarships.

More than 1,000 people from 125 colleges and universities are expected to participate.

ACTF provides opportunities for colleges and universities to present their best theatrical work and receive external funding.

Students will compete for awards, grants and scholarships in playwriting, acting, set designing, directing and critiquing, said Alex Chrestopoulos, assistant theater professor and festival coordinator.

"The festival will regionally and nationally enhance the image of the University," Chrestopoulos said.

Students will perform in six productions that have not yet been chosen. From now until December, the productions will be presented for the competition by each of the participating schools in Region III.

"A lot of schools send their journalism students to compete for the critic awards and scholarships," Chrestopoulos said.

Judges will be chosen from a regional selection team in October, he said. The judges will range from a variety of occupations such as professionals in the field of theatrics to professors at universities and colleges across the United States.

In conjunction with Shryock, the Student Center and the Department of Continuing Education, the Department of Theater is organizing the festival.

Dillard said the department wants to make the festival a community event by opening the productions and exhibits to the public. She is looking for community volunteers to help with the festival.

Randy Calvert, last year's "funniest college student in America," will emcee this year's competition to take place tonight in the Student Center Ballrooms A and D

SIUC's funniest students perform tonight for chance at national title

By Tracy Sargeant
Entertainment Editor

Students interested in showing off or just seeing comedy can laugh it up at the 5th Annual Certs College Comedy Competition at 7 tonight in Student Center Ballrooms A and D.

Randy Calvert, the national winner last year, is the host for this year's search for SIUC's funniest student.

In 1990, Calvert won the first round at the University of North Texas. He then beat out 12 top finalists to become the "funniest college student in America."

All students who wish to participate can sign up at 6 p.m. in the ballrooms.

Each student's three-minute routine will be videotaped and judged at the national level by Jerry Seinfeld.

Seinfeld has appeared on "Late Night With David Letterman" and "The Tonight Show." He stars in his own syndicated television show titled "Seinfeld."

Three finalists from four regions will travel during Spring Break to Daytona Beach, Fla., for the national finals competition.

The winner of the final round will have the chance to perform at The Comic Strip and Catch a Rising Star, both New York City comedy clubs.

SIUC will be one of 75 colleges and universities in which the comedy competition takes place.

Ectopic pregnancies at record level

ATLANTA (UPI) — The number of ectopic pregnancies has reached the highest level ever reported in the United States — 88,000 annually — but the death rate is down dramatically, federal health officials reported.

Overall, the nation recorded 877,400 ectopic pregnancies between 1970-1987 with the number increasing fivefold over the 17-year span, the federal Centers for Disease Control (CDC) said.

During that 17-year period, 782 women died as a result of ectopic pregnancies, the CDC reported. However, the fatality rate decreased 95 percent, from 35.5 per 10,000 ectopic pregnancies in 1970 to 3.4 per 10,000 in 1987.

Ectopic pregnancies occur when a fertilized ovum implants at a site other than the endometrial lining of the uterus, resulting in illness and fetal loss.

In 1970, there were 17,800 ectopic pregnancies reported but that number increased to 88,000 in 1987, the last year for which statistics were available. Ectopic pregnancies occurred in women aged 25-44 at a rate of 10.7 per 1,000 pregnancies, up from 4.5 in 1970.

Although ectopic pregnancy represented 1.7 percent of all pregnancies in 1987, complications of this condition accounted for 12 percent of all maternal deaths in that year.

The CDC reported the increase in ectopic pregnancies in one of its recently released surveillance summaries. It said similar increases had been reported in other countries.

"The number of workdays lost by these otherwise healthy women and the costs of hospital care continue to increase. In addition, ectopic pregnancy is one of the leading causes of maternal death in the United States, and is the leading cause of maternal death in the first trimester," the CDC said.

The health agency said the cause of ectopic pregnancy was not known but that it has been attributed to several factors, including scarring of the fallopian tubes by acute or chronic salpingitis, an inflammation resulting from a variety of infectious agents.

"However, in recent years rates of salpingitis in the United States have remained stable or have decreased slightly, not paralleling the increases in ectopic pregnancy rates," the CDC said.

The rate of ectopic pregnancies increased almost fourfold for white women and almost threefold for blacks and other minorities.

The CDC said past studies indicated that 20 percent to 70 percent of women who had ectopic pregnancies were unable to conceive again.

"However, new diagnostic and therapeutic measures may improve the outlook for these women," the CDC said.

Kuwait police officers poised for battle with Iraq

HARAM, Egypt (UPI) — For Kuwaiti diplomats the scene Sunday could not have been more like a dream. Their forces smashed Iraqi command posts with grenades, mangled Iraqi troops in hand-to-hand combat and drove the Kuwaiti flag into reclaimed soil.

Malaysia moves to rid television of sex, violence

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (UPI) — The government has directed television stations in Malaysia to reorganize their programs and drop shows depicting sex and violence.

Information Minister Mohamed Rahmat, who issued the directive Friday, said such programs should be replaced with those promoting family spirit.

Programs meant for telecast should have the prior approval of the Film Censorship Board, he said after meeting with board members and representatives of Radio and TV Malaysia, or RTV, and TV3.

The information minister is empowered under the Broadcasting Act to control material meant for telecast.

Mohamed said television stations should support the policies of the government of Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad by including educating and providing information.

"Television has a social responsibility and should avoid telecasting programs which give a negative effect," Mohamed said, adding the needs of advertisers should not be a major consideration.

Mohamed said the government's policy on programs would be reviewed periodically to take into consideration public opinion.

Mohamad Nor, chairman of the Film Censorship Board, said certain programs currently being shown might be removed because they depict violence and sex. He did not mention any specific shows or when the cuts would be implemented.

Saddam to Iraqis: 'We will win war'

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, making his first public address in more than two weeks, praised his people Sunday for their strength and faith as war wracked their nation, and assured them "we will win."

The Iraqi leader declined to discuss the progress of the more than 3-week-old Persian Gulf war or any recent peace initiatives during his 20-minute broadcast on Baghdad Radio.

In the hard-line message, Saddam — who has been in hiding since the war broke out — praised Iraqis for their "great strength" in standing up to the allied air bombings of the nation.

He cursed the allied bombers as "warplanes of shame," and gave assurance that Iraq would liberate Muslim holy places in Saudi Arabia.

"Iraq must be patient," Saddam said. "Because eventually we will win."

He said that President Bush has "lost his credibility" with the American people, and warned that U.S. economic and military power are "not enough to defeat Iraqi terror, the fortress of faith in Iraq."

Returning from a weekend stay at Camp David, Md., the presidential retreat, Bush fired his own salvo.

"I heard what Saddam Hussein said and he didn't say anything about getting out of Kuwait," Bush said.

Prosecutor: CIA helped thwart Iran-Contra inquiry

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The CIA helped undermine the Iran-Contra criminal investigation by providing witnesses with "stunning memory lapses," a former prosecutor charged, and the agency also bribed senior officials in Costa Rica.

The allegations are contained in a book by Jeffrey R. Toobin, a federal prosecutor in New York who worked for Iran-Contra special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh from 1987 to 1989.

The book, "Opening Arguments," will be published in March, but galley proofs recently were provided to reporters. Toobin won a legal battle with Walsh, who argued unsuccessfully that the book would reveal grand jury secrets, compromise prosecution strategy and reveal classified information.

Toobin said the CIA bribed officials in Costa Rica to allow construction of a remote airstrip used to resupply the Nicaraguan rebels. The CIA operation would have violated federal law against aiding the Contras.

CIA spokesman Mark Mansfield refused to comment.

Toobin's book focuses mainly on the prosecution of former Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, convicted of four counts in the worst scandal of Ronald Reagan's presidency. The Iran-Contra affair involved secret weapons sales to Iran, efforts to win freedom for American hostages in Lebanon and the diversion of profits from the arms sales to help the Contras.

The book details Toobin's change from idealistic Harvard Law School graduate to his realization that the law cannot correct many wrongdoings.

The Iran-Contra prosecutions were particularly difficult because the former officials hired top-flight lawyers, Toobin said, and the cases were additionally complicated by problems with classified intelligence documents.

Toobin said prosecutors in Walsh's office were looking for evidence that Reagan administration officials used money and influence to persuade Central American countries to aid the Contras despite a federal law cutting off U.S. assistance.

President Bush has denied the existence of such agreements.

But Toobin said prosecutors noticed "a strange, almost off-hand reference in a document involving a senior administration official. "As I began to understand this quid pro quo project, I felt a keener outrage than I did about any other part of the Iran-Contra affair — more than the lying, the shredding or even the diversion. I recognized in myself a sentiment that I rarely head another soul in Washington express: I was shocked." Toobin said.

U.S. Marines heading north toward Kuwait

WITH U.S. MARINES IN NORTHEASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (UPI) — Thousands of Marines are moving north, closer to Kuwait and the land war almost everyone in the war zone expects to start soon.

For days now, convoys have churned dust along roads that are mere tracks in the sand toward a black cloud, hugging the northeast horizon, hovering over Kuwaiti oil wells believed set afire by Iraqi troops.

All day, one after another, four-engine turbo-prop C-130 cargo planes skid to a stop in a cloud of dust on unpaved desert runways to disgorge the bottled water, food, medicine and ammunition for the advancing Marines. A chain of helicopters ferries supplies slung beneath them in nets to the new supply city.

Once arrived, the machines and the men they carried stretch in long lines that drop beyond the horizon across the vast plain along the Saudi-Kuwaiti border.

The once flat, empty desert is pecked with the fighting holes and living-quarter "hooches" the Marines have dug, where they may have to fight and will try to sleep.

Lance Cpl. Kearney Brown, 21, of Jackson, Miss., is one of those thousands of desert diggers.

"Everywhere we go, we dig holes," Brown said. "We're moving today, digging more holes. No matter how deep you dig, the wind is gonna come in."

But after being fired on by Iraqis invading the Saudi city of Khafji, "whenever we stop, the first thing we do is dig," said Capt. Pete Chapla, commander of "The Magnificent Bastards," a rifle company.

"They don't even have to be told any more," said Chapla, 29, of Jacksonville, N.C., adding that within a week, the honeycomb of foxholes will be connected by trenches — "all done with pride."

Out front or alongside the shoveling Marines are four-axle, light-armored vehicles with their 25mm cannons and smaller machine guns, tracked amphibious assault vehicles with their jut-jawed prows — "sand pigs," as they're affectionately called — and tanks.

For Corpsman Sean Summers, 20, of Portsmouth, Va., the move is his first to the field from the hospital where he is used to working, and he is visibly anxious.

Under a stiff wind and noon sun, warm even for the desert in mid-winter, Summers sits with feet in the trench that marks the boundaries of what will be the hooch he'll share with a sergeant.

consciousness of a nation."

Hayes said the control of the news media by European-American businessmen limited the flow of information about racial incidents like Orangeburg.

"If we (African-Americans) do not communicate, if we do not influence the media, we cannot educate," Hayes said.

With racial violence on the rise today, the possibility of another Orangeburg is present, Summer said.

"Anger is still boiling beneath the surface," he said. "Equality does not come without a terrible price to be paid."

The three panelists, all veterans of the civil rights movement, said Orangeburg was a historic point in the struggle for equality and deserves recognition.

"(Orangeburg) is important because three human beings died," Hayes said. "If we don't remind each other, we forget, and we allow the same thing to happen again."

Felder said he agrees that Orangeburg is an important part of history.

"If a people lose their history, they can no longer exist," he said. "Without knowledge of the Orangeburg Massacre, American history is incomplete."

registrar for Jackson County, said to be eligible to vote, a person must:

- be an Illinois citizen;
- be at least 18 years old;
- have two forms of picture identification;
- have lived at their Carbondale residence at least 30 days before the date of the election.

Anyone meeting these requirements can register to vote at the City Clerk's office in City Hall, at the County Clerk's office in the Jackson County Courthouse in Murphysboro or with Cole in the USG office on the 3rd floor of the Student Center.

Cole said student voter turnout is lower for city elections than for state or national elections because students often do not know about the candidates or the issues they represent.

Students sometimes spend nine to 11 months a year in Carbondale, he said, and should be more aware of city politics.

"I feel people as a whole don't take advantage of their right to vote, especially students," he said.

Drought forces California to buy water from farms

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Sales of water by farmers to the state in California's drought emergency will be voluntary, and compulsory taking of water will be avoided, state Water Resources Director David Kennedy said Saturday.

"I don't see that at all," Kennedy said when reporters asked him if proposed sales of water by growers of rice and other crops would be made compulsory. "It will be on a willing-seller basis."

"We don't expect that to change," Kennedy replied.

California, the nation's No. 1 agricultural state, is in the grip of a five-year drought. It is gradually running out of water for crops, and cities like Los Angeles, San Diego and San Jose have restricted water use by 15 percent or more.

The Department of Water Resources is sounding out some growers of rice, tomatoes and corn in Northern California on a deal where they would be paid to keep their fields idle and turn their irrigation water over to the state. The state hopes to collect 500,000 acre-feet of water this way.

Earnhardt leads Clash from start to finish line

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Defending NASCAR Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt continued his recent domination of superspeedways Sunday by winning both segments of the Busch Clash at Daytona International Speedway.

the third lap of the first segment and went on to take to win.

The field was then inverted, forcing Earnhardt to start last in the second segment. He charged through the 14-car field and took the lead by the second lap. He hung on and edged Mark Martin by two car lengths and pocketed $60,000 for winning both segments.

The Clash, which featured the drivers who won pole positions last season, was divided into a pair of 10-lap segments. Earnhardt grabbed the lead on "Passing all those cars in just two laps was awesome, I had a lot of fun," said Earnhardt.

Kaufman, Smith carry Illini to win

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Andy Kaufman scored 28 points and Larry Smith added 25 Sunday, carrying Illinois to a 94-74 Big Ten victory over Minnesota.

Kevin Lynch scored 28 points for the Gophers, who dropped their third straight to fall to 10-10 and 3-7. Dana Jackson had 11 points and Walter Bond 10 for Minnesota. Deon Thomas added 19 points for Illinois.

half to open a 47-35 margin at halftime. Led by Kaufman and Smith, Illinois turned a 30-28 Minnesota lead with 5:42 remaining into a 43-30 bulge at 2:23.

The Illini, 18-6 overall and 8-3 in the Big Ten, have won six straight games and are in third place in the conference.

The Illini scored 15 straight points in the closing minutes of the first

"I felt more comfortable on the floor than I have in the last four or five games," Kaufman said. "I concentrated a lot more on shooting."

UNLV wins battle for NCAA top spot

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (UPI)—If there is any doubt as to who rules college basketball, Nevada-Las Vegas delivered a crushing reminder Sunday.

Facing what was expected to be their toughest test of the season and finding themselves trailing at halftime for the first time this year, the No. 1 Rebels opened the second half with 15 overwhelming minutes of basketball.

UNLV built a 23-point lead before downing No. 2 Arkansas 112-105, keeping alive the Rebels' hopes of becoming the first NCAA team to go through a season unbeaten since Indiana in 1976.

The Rebels, 20-0 this season, won for the 31st straight time and wiped out Arkansas' 20-game winning streak with a humbling show of strength by Stacey Augmon, Larry Johnson and Anderson Hunt. The unstoppable trio combined for 82 points.

"I don't know how anybody can play better than we did during the first part of the second half," UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian said. "We did a great job of denying them the ball and we did a great job getting to the basket.

"There aren't too many teams that can come in here and win. I know I've never had another team that could have won here. I've never seen one-tenth the build-up for a game that there was for this one.

"Everywhere we went in Fayetteville all people wanted to talk about was the game. I went for a walk yesterday and three cars stopped and people got out asking to take a picture with me. I thought our kids handled the pressure of a big game real well."

Arkansas, 23-2, could handle the pressure for only the first half.

"The first five minutes of the second half were critical," Arkansas Coach Nolan Richardson said. "We were up four at the half, but they (the Rebels) hadn't played up to their capabilities. We had to cut our mistakes in the second half."

Men's tennis falls 7-2 to Ohio State

Senior tennis player Joe Demeterco was the only Saluki to escape Ohio State unmarred Saturday.

The SIUC men's tennis team took it on the chin, falling 7-2 to the Buckeyes.

Demeterco, the Dawgs' No. 1 singles player, was the only Saluki to win in singles. He also teamed with Tim Derouin to win in doubles to notch SIUC's only points.

Demeterco defeated Gabor Kovacs in straight sets 6-4, 6-0. In doubles, his team took John Brumbaugh and Enrico Sartori 6-3, 6-4.

The Salukis fell to 2-2 on the season as a result of the loss.

No. 2 singles player Richard Stenstrom was knocked off 6-3, 6-3 by Jason Katzer. Derouin fell in his singles match to Sam Sebastian 6-3, 6-3.

Jay Merchant took his opponent, Saamil Jhaveri, to three sets before losing 6-3, 2-6, 7-5. Kai Kramer also went three sets with Eric Faro before falling 6-4, 5-7, 6-2.

Danny Gonzalez lost 6-3, 6-0 to Veto Mazzo.

The other Saluki doubles team of Merchant and Gonzalez were defeated by Mazzo and Katzer 6-2, 6-1.

The Salukis, who are on the road for all but one of their matches, travels to South Bend, Ind., to compete in the Notre Dame Quadrangular next weekend.

Jordan, Barkley lead East to All-Star victory

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Michael Jordan made his All-Star homecoming to North Carolina a spectacular one Sunday, scoring 26 points to lead the East to a 116-114 victory over the West.

Jordan, a native of Wilmington, N.C., and product of Dean Smith's North Carolina basketball program, also had 5 rebounds, 5 assists and 2 steals in the 41st midseason classic, played at the Charlotte Coliseum.

Jordan's East teammate, Charles Barkley, won Most Valuable Player honors, finishing with 22 rebounds and 17 points while playing on an injured ankle. He had said before the game he didn't want to play, but NBA officials required him to participate.

With the East leading 116-114 with 23 seconds remaining, Barkley was tied up by David Robinson and the East lost possession on the jump ball. The West called timeout with 15.5 seconds left. Robinson lobbed a pass out to Kevin Johnson, who lofted a 3-point shot with six seconds left. The potentially game-winning shot appeared on target but teammate Karl Malone inexplicably interfered with the ball. The East inbounded and Leonard ran out the clock.

The East, which thanks to Barkley enjoyed a 61-46 rebounding edge, has won nine of the last 12 All-Star Games. The East leads the series 27-14. Malone, Robinson and Magic Johnson led the West with 16 points each. Patrick Ewing added 18 for the East.

As is typical in these sorts of games, the play was shoddy at first as the teams needed time to adjust to the free-wheeling style. The West led 23-22 after one period, hitting 35 percent of its shots. The East shot just 32 percent in the first quarter.

Jordan and Ewing scored 4 points as the East built a 14-8 lead with 6:36 left in the opening quarter. The West went on an 11-4 run to lead 19-18 with 3:10 remaining. Johnson had 5 points in that burst.

Before a crowd of 23,530, offensive showmanship went on display in the second quarter, and a late run helped the East outscore the West 45-35 for a 67-58 halftime advantage. Jordan had a steal and scored 6 points in a 9-0 spurt that ended the period.

The West clawed back in in the third quarter and trailed 94-92 heading into the final period. Malone had 8 points and Clyde Drexler 6 in the period, while Jordan was held scoreless.

Jordan began to assert himself again in the fourth period. He kept alive a key possession with a rebound with less than three minutes to play that built the East lead to 112-107. Jordan passed to Barkley at the top of the key, who passed it to Bernard King on the left baseline, who dropped it to Ewing for a slam.

Jordan had 7 points in the quarter and Barkley 6 rebounds in the final 12 minutes.

Leonard joins boxing legends with pitiful defeat

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sugar Ray Leonard stayed around long enough to become part of boxing's saddest tradition.

Pick a great fighter — Joe Louis, Sugar Ray Robinson, Muhammad Ali among them — and their storied career likely ended with pitiful showings against men they would have outclassed in their prime.

Leonard talked about that before his Saturday night fight against Terry Norris. He also once said he would rather quit one fight too late than one too soon.

That one fight came Saturday night at Madison Square Garden. Norris used the greatest boxer of the post-Ali era as a punching bag, dropping him twice and winning a lopsided 12-round unanimous decision.

Leonard, who always called his own shots in boxing, quickly made the obvious call — three months before his 35th birthday.

"It took this kind of a fight to prove it to me, it's time for me to venture away from boxing,"

Leonard said. "I had to find out for myself. I've always been a risk-taker."

Leonard waited a career to fight at Madison Square Garden. He left it with a split lip and dark glasses covering swollen eyes, serving to remind him of the prowess of 23-year-old Norris for days to come.

"Time to take up golf lessons," Leonard said. "I knew before I got in the ring it just wasn't there."

Leonard brought few of his old skills into the ring. Whatever he had in his previous bout against Roberto Duran 14 months ago vanished. One judge, Barbara Perez, gave Norris every round and nobody argued.

Leonard entered the stretch needing a knockout to win, and all he wanted to do was survive.

"He hit me with some shots," Leonard said. "The only thing I wanted to do was finish on my feet. I knew the fight was out of reach."

Norris apparently was the last to know. He said he was hurt in the final round, and never thought he would win by knockout. After Leonard went down in the second and was staggered in the third, he rebounded to win the fourth on two judges' cards.

"There was never a time when I thought I had Ray," Norris said. "I shook him up in the second and third rounds, but I never thought I was in control."

"Ray showed me in the fourth round he was still a great fighter. You can never underestimate Ray."

Still, even Norris seemed to join the sparse crowd of 7,495 in taking pity on Leonard. His manager, Joe Sayatovich, thought the champion eased up in the final rounds.

"You ever see a better champion than Ray Leonard?" Sayatovich said. "Let the man walk out. Ninety-eight out of 100 guys would have quit in the eighth round."

Leonard has retired before, beginning in 1976 when he won a gold medal at the Montreal Olympics and said he would never turn pro. He gave up a perfect time to quit after coming back to stun Marvin Hagler in 1987. Leonard kept coming back, but this retirement appears to be for keeps.

If Leonard were to fight again, he would be reduced to an undercard fighter or headlining small shows in tank towns. Neither of those options are suitable to a man of Leonard's pride and ego.

Leonard leaves boxing after earning close to $110 million in the ring and retaining much of it. His lawyer, Mike Trainer says he went out in fine style despite the loss.

"This is what it takes — Ray had to experience it," Trainer said. "If it was going to end, this is the way I wanted it to end. He didn't get knocked out and he didn't get hurt."

"In the fifth round when he was missing left hooks, I said,

'Pal, finish on your feet, don't get hurt and let's get out of Dodge.'

"I'm really proud of him. I didn't want to see him get counted out because he has such huge pride, he couldn't have handled that."

He goes out with a 36-2-1 record and championships in five weight classes. His final fight was for a title and he earned $2.5 million or so.

Leonard's next challenge is finding out what to do with his life. He lost his side job as a commentator when HBO fired Leonard last year for signing to fight Norris on HBO rival Showtime. Leonard has said he wants to eventually try his hand as an actor, joking about sharing the silver screen with his old friend Hagler.

Leonard's other old rivals, Tommy Hearns and Duran, continue to press on. Somebody has to carry on the tradition of great fighters who don't know when to quit.

said. "Do you know anybody in the country that can win and shoot 22 percent? Let me know. I want to coach that team."

The win upped the Salukis' record to 6-5 in the Missouri Valley Conference and 12-10 overall. Tulsa fell to 5-6 in the Valley, 12-10 overall. SIUC now is in sole possession of third place in the MVC, three games behind first-place Southwest Missouri State.

Sophomore guard Tyrone Bell did not start for the first time this season, but came off the bench to lead the Salukis. He notched a career-high 19 points, shooting seven for nine from the field.

The lineup switch is something Herrin said SIUC fans could see a lot of the rest of the season. Only 4,624 fans woke up in time to witness the switch this time around.

Herrin inserted freshman Emeka Okenwa to the center position, moving sophomore Ashraf Amaya to power forward. Senior forward Rick Shipley played small forward and junior Kelvan Lawrence was penciled in at Bell's shooting guard position. That left Mahan handling the ball at the point.

"We've toved with the big lineup," Herrin said. "We'll play the bigger lineup off and on throughout the rest of the year. Sometimes we can play it, sometimes we can't."

The Dawgs started off shaky, falling to a 15-7 deficit in the first seven minutes. They were 0 for 6 in 3-point attempts, while shooting 39 percent from the field in the second half.

Amaya and Mahan each chipped in 16 points, while Amaya collected 10 boards. Shipley, who helped dominate the inside in the second half with a blocked shot against Tulsa's forward Michael Scott, notched 7 points and grabbed 10 rebounds.

The Salukis held Tulsa's leading scorer, guard Marcell Gordon, to just 10 points in 36 minutes of play. Gordon came into the contest averaging 16.7 points a ballgame.

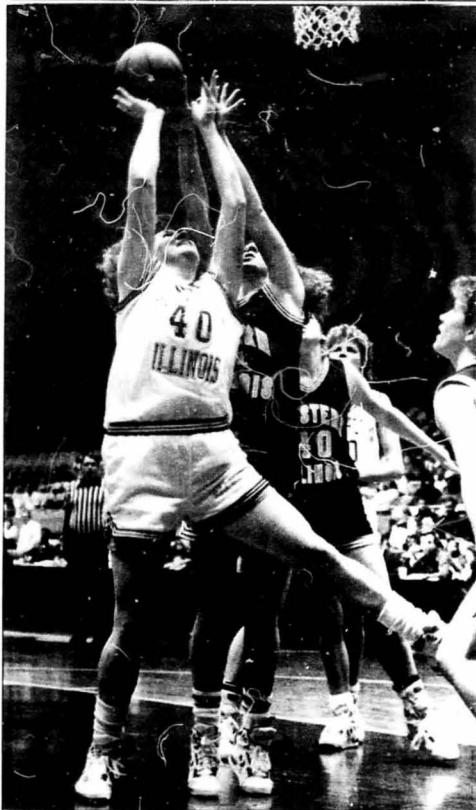

"He had a bad game," Barnett said. "I don't know if it was as much Southern Illinois as it was Marcell Gordon. He just didn't play very well and our shooters didn't shoot."

Scott led the Golden Hurricane with 15 points and nine rebounds. Guard Reggie Shield pitched in 12 points for Tulsa.

Tulsa was able to pull within 9 points in the second half when SIUC stuttered at first with the Tulsa full-court press. But Tulsa was forced to foul late in the contest and SIUC was able to knock in the free throws down the stretch.

The Salukis, who are gearing up for the MVC Tournament in March, are on the road Wednesday against the Indiana State Sycamores.

"That's (tournament) what it's all about right now," Herrin said. "We have to get better every time we go out. We might end up getting beat in the first game (in the tournament), but we'll be ready to play."

SIUC won three of the 13 events. Chris Hagenbaumer won the 200 breaststroke with a score of 2:09.19.

Junior Deryl Leubner, sophomore Brian Gargan and Jeff Goetz won the 400 free relay with a score of 3:06.80. Gargan, Hagenbaumer, senior Chris Gally and Randy Roberts placed first in the 400 medley relay with a score of 3:25.38.

"We won the first relay," Ingram said. "The guys certainly came out of the shoot with excitement. We weren't able to sustain the momentum."

The diving events featured top national freshmen SIUC's NCAA qualifier Rob Siracusano and Iowa's NCAA qualifier B.J. Blair. Blair won both diving events with scores of 302.55 in the 1-meter and 308.85 in the 3-meter. Siracusano scored 292.50 in the 1-meter and 287.55 in the 3-meter.

"Siracusano did a nice job," Ingram said. "He placed second on both dives. Blair is a quality diver. We knew that going into the meet. We thought being home would give us the edge."

"IUC senior Eric Bradac faced Olympic bronze medalist and NCAA distance swimmer Arthur Wojdat and NCAA All-American Thomas Gawronski in three events. Wojdat won the 500 freestyle with a score of 4:28.04 over Bradac's 4:29.64.

Bradac came in third in the 1650 freestyle, which he won at the Saluki Invitational last Saturday, with a score of 15:26.06. Wojdat scored 15:14.72. Gawronski scored 15:23.72. Wojdat also won the 200 freestyle.

"It was one of the hardest triples you can go through," Wojdat said. "I had tough competition in all of the freestyle events."

Bradac fell 8 seconds short of qualifying for the NCAAs. He said he expects to place within the next couple weeks. He said 7th-ranked Iowa gave SIUC tougher competition than they are used to.

"They have a tough team," Bradac said. "They have some excellent swimmers. It was certainly a good opportunity to swim against a team of that caliber."

Gargan agreed that Iowa pushed the Salukis at the meet.

"It was the first time we competed against that strong of a team," Gargan said. "It gets us ready for the championships. We'll go through faster and faster swims, and make cuts for the NCAAs."

The men's swimming team is back in action Feb. 15 at the University of Nebraska. The women's next will also make the trip to meet the Cornhuskers.

Sophomore Brandi Mock and junior Theresa Lyles missed action because of leg problems. Both athletes were members of the 4x400 relay teams and are SIUC's best 200-meter and 400-meter runners.

The Salukis grabbed two first-place finishes. Sophomore Leanna Conway ran a 5:03.29 to win the mile and sophomore Cheryl Evers won the shot put with a toss of 46-0.

Conway's time moves her up to No. 4 on the Salukis' All-Time Honor Roll in the mile. Evers' throw moves her to No. 3 on the list.

Sophomore Nacolia Moore is now No. 2 in the triple jump with a 38-6.3/4. She also recorded personal bests in the 55-meter dash (7.32) and the long jump (17-11.2).

Sophomore Dawn Barefoot, with a third-place finish in the mile (5:06.93), sprinted up the list to No. 5.

Junior Becky Coyne leaped up to the No. 3 position in the 55-meter hurdles with a time of 8.33.

every phase of the game they beat us," SIUC head coach Cindy Scott said. "We were able to come away with the win because we have some very talented players who stepped it up late in the game."

Early, it seemed as if nobody from either club was going to make a move to the forefront. Then a pair of outside guards, WIU's Michelle Nason and SIUC's Alison Smith, began to smoke. Nason, one of the nation's top three-point shooters, drilled three first-half trifectas while Smith hit a few jumpers to end the half with eight points.

Few players from either team were shooting well, including Rakers who was being jostled inside by WIU's Heidi Butz. Rakers could only convert 2 of 12 first-half attempts, but her presence was being felt in other areas. The 6-foot-3 senior was a defensive terror early as she pestered two Westerwind shots, ripped three steals and hit the glass for 11 boards.

Despite three of their players playing over 35 minutes, the Westerwinds never tired and even managed to fight back from a seven-point deficit to take the lead from the Salukis midway through the second period.

The Salukis were shooting poorly during WIU's 14-6 run that gave them a 41-38 lead with 12:10 remaining. The 10 early second-half points of sophomore Kelly Firth kept the Salukis from being swarmed over.

"I thought we had it," WIU head coach Kelly Hill said, "until I looked up and saw that there was more than 10 minutes to go. I knew the Amy Rakers show would begin sooner or later."

The "show" as Hill put it, began as the result of a loose ball.

Rakers and a Westerwind player scrambled to the sideline after the loose rock. Rakers did her best hockey imitation and gave her opponent a nice hip check that sent her to the floor by press row. Add in the scowl Rakers gave to her afterwards and it was obvious that she was going to do the pushing now.

From the 10:43 mark to with just 1:30 to go, Rakers hit five shots and two free throws to take the Salukis one-point deficit into a five point lead. WIU wouldn't let her get the ball inside, no problem for the All-American, she popped jumpers of 10, 16 and 18 feet during the span.
