Newsday

Surprising his allies in Congress and environmental groups, President Clinton said Monday he would move to abolish the White House Council on Environmental Quality and replace it with a smaller office he said would have more ciout.

Since its creation in 1969, the council has been the prime vehicle for raising environmental issues in the decision-making circles of the White House. But the council was ignored by former Presadent Reagan, and had only limited influence under former President Bush.

In announcing the reshuffling Monday, Clinton said environmental policy would instead be coordinated by a new, slimmed-down office that would be intimately involved in White House policymaking, rather than having a simply advisory role.

"The days of photo-op environmentalism are over," Clinton told reporters. Moments before he spoke, an aide had placed leather-bound books behind a White House podium to provide a more photogenic background for television cameras.

If approved by Congress, the shift will help Clinton fulfill two campaign promises: to cut White House staffing and to raise the profile of environmental issues. And it would further expand

Task force to explore rental licensing laws

By Sanjay Seth City Writer

A local property manager said he is eager to explore substandard housing and students' treatment of property as part of a new city task

The tram was formed by the city last week to study the feasibility, desirability and need for a rental property licensing program in Carbondale. The program may propose changing voluntary licensing laws for rental property to icensing an-nandatory. Jeff Woodruff of Woodruff ervices was chosen along with an Schuling Property the wooerty sector in to represent the property sector in the study.

City manager Jeff Doherty recommended the city task force to the City Council at a meeting Tuesday Woodruff said he felt that both behavior problems and bad housing vere the exception, not the rule, in Carbondale.

"I think the biggest concern people have about Carbondale is the quality of student housing and the behavior of college students," Woodruff said. "The licensing program might answer one of the two concerns.

Woodruff said he probably was chosen for the task force because he has 25 years of experience in "I also currently manage

Meadow Ridge, University Hall and a wide range of rental property," Woodruff said. "I make ness decisions that affect over 1,000 students in Carbondale. That's a good reason.'

Under city codes, code inspections on rental property are strictly on a volunteer basis. Landlords reserve the right to refuse to have their property aspected by the city. Student leaders, repre ted by Susan Hall, president of Graduate and Professional Student Council, and William Stevenson of the Undergraduate Student Organization, proposed Jan. 19 a change to make licensing mandatory.

The City Council approved the creation of a feasibility study by a tas's force.

Students, property management rganizations, Carbondale organizations, Carbondale residents and city officials are represented on the 11-member task force.

"I think this (task force) was the appropriate approach to check on whether the program is needed," Dolverty, a task force member, said. The number of people in the task force is not as important as the fair representation of groups that are

Students, nightclub owners plan meeting

Groups want to express concerns on handling customers

By Jeremy Finley Special Assignment Writer

Student leaders are interested in meeting with the management of a local nightclub to discuss perceptions that surfaced following the death of an SIUC student Friday, and the Carbondale police chief is trying to help get the groups together.

William Hall, vice president of Graduate and Professional Student Council, said some students have been pushing for a meeting with the owners of Checkers nightclub, 706 E. Grand St.

A 24-year-old freshman from South Holland, Jose Waight, was found beaten outside the nightclub early Friday morning. Waight was taken to the hospital and pronounced dead.

Hall said students have questions about previous disputes at Checkers and the nightclub's policies on frisking customers, its hiring practices and certification and training of the staff. He said he would like to see a meeting in the next couple of days. Hall said GPSC and the African Student Association were organizing a meeting Monday when Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom called with a similar idea.

Strom said he only can recommend a meeting; he cannot mandate it. He said Undergraduate Student Government also was receptive to the idea.

"I suggested the manager of Checkers set up a meeting with students to discuss the perceptions students have on the way Checkers handles customers," Strom said. "It's obvious some have a negative perception, and it's important to understand what some of the recent events and past events have done to perceptions.

"Any time we can get people talking together, it's within everybody's best interests," he said. Strom said he would attend the meeting if the parties wanted him there

Checkers had no comment.

Strom also said some students have wrong perceptions of the way police handled the situation Friday

Police officers did everything they could in the situation, he said. Strom said he later asked Jackson County Coroner Jerry Thurman whether police could have done anything for Waight, but he was told nothing could have been done.

Thurman said the police did everything they could for Waight. "The police aren't authorized to handle these medical situations," he

With the win, the Salukis improved to 11-8 overall and 6-3 in the Valley. The Sycamores dropped to 6-13, 2-7.

Using a variety of defenses, including a 1-3-1 zone, to confuse the Sycamores, the Salukis raced to an early 14-6 lead. The lead was extended to 49-33 at the half as the Saluki defense forced 12 tumovers, Senior Anita Scott said the change in the Salukis' defensive

While Hawaii's shark problem

appears genuine, attacks on surfers are not unique to the tropical islands, and in fact seem to be on the rise elsewhere

Incidents in California, Oregon, Australia and Florida over the past few years prompted Surfing Magazine, in its March issue, to seek answers as to why "more and more surfers are being attacked by sharks worldwide "

For starters, there are more surfers than ever, they tend to surf in the quiet hours of dawn and a tsk and often seek that perfect wave in areas where sharks are known to feed

Financial aid available for studying overseas By Candace Samolinski

emational Write

A year ago, studying in Japan seemed impossible for Angie Taylor, a senior in speech communication from Florida, but with a little help it became a reality.

"I'm putting myself through school and had never really looked at the brochures closely because I thought the costs would make it impossible," Taylor said. "The financial aid office was really helpful, though. I was able to get my full loan amount in one semester because I was going to study in Japan.

Thomas Saville, conference coordinator for International Programs and Services said, "I have found that many students don't realize how important it is to be versatile in the business world today."

"It no longer matters whether your major is business, foreign language, international trade or engineering everyone needs to be able to deal with another culture," he continued. Beverly Walker, director of overseas programs, said although Japan is an expensive country, the ogram offered by SIUC seems to be the most economical

Walker said the 1992-93 costs for a year are $6,094, which includes instructional fees and personal expenses

Taylor said she was the first UC student to receive a SIUC International Institute of Education scholarship scholarship. "It was for $1,000 and that nearly paid for my flight," she said. "With the he'p of pell grants, loans and scholarships I was able to go. "I spent about $1,000 extra on personal expenses, but the amount you spend depends on you," she continued.

Taylor said the experience she gained was invaluable and she recommends the program to anyone. "I believe the most interesting thing I saw there was a traditional Buddhist funeral ceremony when, unfortunately, one of the Japanese students died," she said.

An informational seminar on the study abroad in Japan program will be at 4 p.m. on Feb. 11 in the University Museum auditorium.

The nine city primary candidates have been invited to present their platforms Monday at SIUC in a candidates' forum. John "Mike" Henry, a local businessman who has run a printing company in the city for 12 years, said the forum is a good opportunity for the public to meet the candidates. He plans to present his thoughts for economic development

"I'm the only businessperson in the campaign and therefore favor economic development in Carbondale," Henry said. Candidate Barry Ancell also is running for the first time. He said he wants a position on the council so he can make changes. "Most people agree on the major Ancell attended SIUC as an undergraduate in the 1960s. He came back in the 1980s to complete his doctoral degree and remained in the area as the assistant director of a special education

Ancell said that many recent elections are decided by a narrow margin, and students can make a diffe rence.

State pension fund needs long-term fix

PEOPLE JUST STARTING TO WORK as state employees this year may not get what they expect when they retire in 25 years. They may get nothing at all.

Estimates say the State University Retirement System will have no funds to offer those retiring in 2020. Pension systems for teachers, judges, General Assembly members and other state employees also are expected to run dry at about the same time.

Eleven years ago, the state fully was funding its pension systems, but a budget crunch caused then-Gov. James R. Thompson to reduced the amount paid into the systems to 60 percent of what it had been paying.

Thompson promised to pay back the 40 percent with interest when the state could afford it.

SINCE 1982, THE STATE HAS continued to fund the pension systems at less than 100 percent. An audit report shows that the systems now have a $12.9 billion deficit.

Gov. Jim Edgar has made a token effort to alleviate the stress with the issue of $51.5 million for the five pension funds, $13.6 million of which will go to the university fund, He further has promised to increase that amount of reimbursement every year he is in office.

But officials from the State University Retirement System expect Edgar to budget in about $89 million - or about 46 percent - of the $194 million needed to meet funding requirements.

ALTHOUGH THE GOVERNOR has shown an interest in revitalizing state pension funds, efforts so far have not been adequate.

Less than two weeks ago, Edgar was telling the people of Illinois that the state was improving economically. He outlined some new plans and programs that would help those in need.

But he must not forget state employees - many of which work in education, his high priority area. If the future is not secure for retirement, quality educators will decide not to risk working for the state.

BECAUSE THE STATE ECONOMY is improving, it is time to improve the present standards in education and other social services by starting new programs

But even more important, it is time to ensure the future of these services by giving state employees the confidence to stay on the job.

The government must begin to pay the state pension funds in full - and it must repay the debt it already owes - so its employees will remain effective and so state programs will continue to help the people.

Christianity a way of life for all people

We are writing in response to some assertions made concerning Christianity in "African-Americans Turning to Islam for Guidance" in the Jan. 21 DE.

First, Christianity is a way of life embracing all people. Christ commands that we love our neighbors as ourselves. The doctrine does not "condone

The blame for racism lies with those who practice racism, not with Christianity. Christianity is mistakenly called the "white" religion by those who wish to dismiss its importance in the lives and history of African Americans.

The scriptures are replete with African presence. Those truly in search for their roots should search the scriptures. They will find Simeon called Niger and Lucius of Cyrene helping to lead one of the largest churches of the time, and many more such persons.

Second, Christian men are charged to love their wives as Christ loved the church. Christ was willing to die on its beh. If. Those with an understanding of Christianity know that mutual respect between the sexes is promoted, not sexism.

Third, Christianity has never maintained a certain level of church attendance as a requirement for entering heaven. The only way to receive eternal life is to accept Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior.

This is a hard truth to accept salvation cannot be legislated or earned, but it is God's truth nonetheld

This does not free Christians to live unclean lives, however. God tells us to be holy, for He is holy and that if we love Him we will keep His commands. Last, we invite the DE to write an article on Christianity in the lives of African Americans. We, along with numerous others, can certainly testify to the wondrous change that Christ has wrought in our lives.— Wilhelmina Lewis, senior, med-prep; Verlonda Davis, graduate, undecided; Teresa Bennett, senior, engineering technology

Clinton loses focus as homosexual issue outweighs economy

President Bill Clinton's first 100 days should be retitled his first 100 daze. Clinton's promise to focus on the economy "like a laser beam" failed miserably on the contonly like a lace to call indication instead focused if on a dysfunctional special interest group. Clinton's new slogan should be: "Engage brain before operating mouth." Clinton's insistence of open homosexuality in the military is all part of the payoff to gay privileges special interest groups. Clinton pandered to them and they voted for him in a block. I thought this was going to be a " new kind of president," who didn't pander to special interest.

Of course, I knew this, but the four out of 10 Americans who voted for him didn't. I don't know if Allicitatis who voted to finite durit 1 four Filow them they Clinton voters were stored, stupid or senile when they voted, but now I can say I told you so. How a draft-dodging, womanizing, compulsive liar ever got elected 1'll never understand. Clinton broke four promises before he became president, including back-sliding on the 25 percent reduction in White House staff, the Haitians, the middle class tax cut and deficit reduction.

As for the homosexuals, serving in the military is not Constitutional right but a privilege. People are rejected for height, weight, age, health problems and criminal records, drug abuse. Isn't this also discrimination? The military is not a social laboratory, it is there to defend the country.

It is there to defend the country. Clinton stated, "Da main issue ought ta be caunduct." What's next, ex-cons as cops, sado-masochists as doctors, pedophiles at day care centers? Sound crazy? The New York Times book review just published a favorable review for a book that praises adult-chiid sexual relations.

Our morality is sliding dangerously, reminiscent of the ancient empires before their fall. In Clinton's "anything goes" administration, just what is right or wrong? -- Demian Welgle, senior, marketing

Alumni for life need to adjust to vote, abortion coverage

Every time we have a political election, I am reminded again how great the United States is.

1992 election for example: Clinton Take the was voted in and Bush out, and everyone adjusted. We don't have major uprisings, coups, wars; just transition teams. And the losing side waits calmly for the next election, in which it can try again. In the United States, we know how to be good losers.

Why, then, do I have to ser, ads like the one in Thursday's DE from the 'SIU Alumni for Life?

In their ad, they offer us five recommendations that, in their opinion, will help promote respect for unborn life at SIUC.

These recommendations suggest that alumni withhold gifts from SIUC, try to reduce funding to the Health Care Service and protest SIUC promotion of the killing of unborn habies babies. Oh, great. I'm sure that tsking alumni scholarships away from financially needy students will help promote "life." I'm sure that taking Health Service away from people needing treatment for colds and broken legs will help promote "life." I'm sure that SUUC is pleased to hear that it is promoting baby-killing. Alumni for Life, please listen. That question of whether to allow Student Health Insurance to cover abortion costs has been voted on. It cover abortion costs has been voted on. It passed. Be good losers and try to adjust, OK?

You can wait until the next election to try again. Meanwhile, transition. — T. Moore, graduate, English

"Congressman Dingell told the vice president he'd take a look at the proposal, but there's no commitment," said Dingell spokesman Dennis Fitzgibbons.

Leaders of environmental groups were generally supportive. Some, however, said that Clinton should have kept the council and restored its clout.

"This basically returns the number of White House environmental staff back to the levels of the Reagan administration." when it went from 60 workers to 16, said World Wildlife Fund Chairman Russell Train, the council's first chairmon from 1970-73.

The Graduate and Professional Student Council is sponsoring the candidate forum with the Jackson County League of Women Viters. Susan Hall, GPSC presidem, said the forum is one of two this spring. The second forum will be after the primaries but before the elections on April 20.

The format for the first debate has already been decided. Before the debate begins, the audience will hand in questions they would like the candidates to answer. Each condidate will then be given five minutes to present an opening two hours.

"As a student I'd like to see students involved because for many of us, Carbondale is our home."

-Susan Hall

Hall said students can gain a lot from these forums. "As a student I'd like to see students involved because for many of us, Carbondale is our home,"

Tuxhorn has participated in a amber of candidate forums since first running for city council. "I wish we had time to hold an actual debate, but time is limited with so many candidates," Tuxhom

"T base my work on quality over quantity," he said. "I would like to continue to help Carbondale evolve into a town that fits its character."

Tuxhom said he has tried to get as many people's opinions at the council table as possible.

The other four candidates are not on the city council and may be new

L voters. They are Margaret "Maggie" Flanagan, Frances Gilman, Philip Nelson, Roxanne Hall and Jerry A. Stanford.

The forum is scheduled for 7 m. on Feb. 15 in the Student Center Auditorium

A reception will be afterwards in the International Lounge where the public will have an opportunity to eet the candidates

The second forum will be off campus. The date has not yet been announced

uthor's work inspired by turbulence of 1960s

By Thomas Gibson oritige Writer

When author Charles Johnson thinks back to his days at SIUC, he remembers marches sit-ins and the violence of the 1960s

He also remembers being caught in tear gas thrown by National Guard troops, who were trying to restore order to a campus that was in disarray.

Johnson was a student at a time when the campus was disrupted by riots protesting the Vietnam War, said Lewis Hahn, former director of graduate studie

Hahn said students threw rocks at the ilniversity president's house, and eventually the school was closed by the vice president for the safety of the students and faculty. All of this later may have helped shape Johnson's perceptions, he said. "At that period of time during the '60s Johnson, as a future novelist, was picking up a great deal of information," Hahn said. And now the former cartoonist for the Daily Egyptian and the Southern Illinoisan is a successful

He did not receive national attention until 1990, when he won the Naioral Book Award for his novel "Middie Passage." Johnson said the novel is a sea-faring tale that is an updated version of the traditional slave narrative. It can be seen as a mediation on the clash between Eastern and Western values, or even a parable about the identity of the United States. While attending SIUC, where he major... in journalism, he met the visiting playwright and essayist Amiri Baraka, whose advoccus of

Amiri Baraka, whose advocacy of black nationalism inspired him to treat the issues of race and politics in his cartoons

Johnson said Baraka told him that a black artist should bring his talent home

"I cut class s for a week and j drew, all day and all night, Johnson said.

Johnson received his bachelor of science degree in journalism in 1971 and obtained his Master of Arts degree in philosophy in 1974. Johnson said he wrote six apprentice novels during the time he was a undergraduate and graduate student.

"To write my seventh novel, I sought one of SIUC's creative writing instructors, John Gardner," he said

Johnson said Gardner adopted him as his literary son. He said Gardner had a projound impact on him, widening his aesthetic scope to include medieval and classic Greek literature.

"Under the tutelage of John Gardner I published my first novel 'Faith and the Good Thing," Johnson said.

The novel's protagonist, Faith Cross, is sent away by her dying mother in search of life's good th

Johnson said although his works reflect the black experience, he is not a spokesman for black America-

"The American public has expectations for black writers that I have no intentions of fulfilling," he said.

"I find it very difficult to swallow the idea that one individual, black or white, can speak for 30 million people."

"I think the perception of the white world is that black issues are so simple that one person can articulate them," he said.

Johnson has signed a contract with Atheneum Books for his next project about the fictionalized account of Dr. Martin Luther King's life titled "Dreamer."

"I'm interested in what would have happened if King had lived," Johnson s hie

He said King is not the protagonist of the story — man ting as King's double is.

The narrator of the novel will be martial arts expert; a King bodyguard employed by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, he said.

Johnson said he got the idea for a double from watching a person in a crowd who looks just like King, and it occurred to him that a double could appear at minor functions

"This is a novel that will allow me to take a look at King and the " he said. 60s

Johnson said since King's death people have been liging through a black power legacy. "I see a world that is far more polarized than the usery that King worked for," he said. Johnson is a professor at the University cf Washington in Seattle.

He was named Journalism Alumnus of the Year in 1981 by Southern Illinois University.

Cruzinsky started to move. He thought he had drifted over a reef, a shallow coral head.

"Then I saw some colors an swirls under me and I thought 'Oh my God, that untle's under me, what's that / ning doing?' ' Gruzinsky recalled recently from his bome

It was no turtle, but a 14-foot tiger shark, one of the most dangerous fish in the sea.

In one motion the shark used its ad to lift Gruzinsky's board, wi from the first of the second s

"And then it latched in whit its "And then it latched on," Gruzinsky said. "I remember it trying to get a good bite; it was trying to adjust its bite."

Gruzinsky held on while the shark shook its head. "The board snark shock its nead. The board was kind of like a lever between us," Gruzinsky said. "All I could think about was getting pulled under because I didn't know where the body of the shark was. My main concern was to stay above water

The shark shook again. There was a loud snap and Grezinsky held onto what remained of the board. The shark had bitten off a chunk of fiberglass and foam the size of half a manhole cover.

looking into its mouth. It looked looking into its mouth. It looked like it was trying to spit the piece out, but the piece got stuck in its mouth because I remember seeing the edges getting caught in the soft white part of the mouth and it had already passed its jaw." Then the shark sank slowly out

Gruzinsky climbed onto the board, but it was upside down, a chunk missing from its rail. Gruzinsky tried to paddle toward shrz, but there was a brief tug on his leash, perhaps from the body or tail of the shark catching it as it the unwaxed bottom of the board, paddling precariously for what seemed an eternity. No waves rolled in to help him along. But he made it, with only a few scrapes from either the fins of the board or the exposed fibergless where the shark had taken its bite. Convincience couldn't remember. A Gruzinsky couldn't remember. A crowd gathered to greet him on the

A tour bus stopped and soon everyone knew the story of Rick

And it appears to be a story that won't go away, happening time and again not only in Gruzinsky's mind but to other surfers.
