SIUC Division I status in jeopardy

IBHE proposal troubles officials

By Karyn Viverito
Special Assignment Reporter

The SIUC athletic department fears loss of funds and sports if it fails to raise the $1.2 million in cuts recommended by the Illinois Board of Higher Education, possibly forcing the program to drop to Division II.

Athletic Director Jim Hart said dropping from Division I to a lower level is not what he wants for the department.

"If we don't get our alternative funding, there is a possibility that we will have to drop to Division II or III," he said. "We would try to avoid going to Division III because that would be rock bottom, and we would have no scholarships."

If SIUC athletics drops its Division I standing it would not be a member of the Missouri Valley Conference and would not share in any National Collegiate Athletic Association revenues.

The NCAA currently gives $200,000 to SIUC for being a Division I program and distributes revenue to the University through the MVC from the NCAA men's basketball tournament.

Associate Athletic Director Charlotte West said if SIUC drops its Division I standing, it would be difficult to secure the standing again.

"I feel that SIUC would want to show excellence in all areas and excellence in athletics is Division I," she said. "We don't want to give that up and drop back, because it's real hard to get back into Division I and get going on that level again."

West said she will do everything she can to avoid losing Division I standing.

"I would resist dropping to Division II with everything that I have," she said. "We would be very weak, be less successful, have less prestige and it would gore our program, making us have to cut even more."

The athletic department also has dropped four sports, including wrestling, field hockey and men and women's gymnastics, in the 10 years since the last fee increase. SIUC has 18 sports currently.

West said program cutbacks have been happening for some time.

"With the IBHE cuts, people say 'Cut this and cut that' in order to

Parents urged to accept active roll in education

By Emily Priddy
Administration Reporter

An SIUC education instructor says parents can be their children's most influential teachers, but many do not realize how important parents are to the learning process.

Gail Snively, a curriculum and instruction lecturer, speaking at a public issues forum Tuesday night at Lesar Law Building, said parents often expect schools to handle the entire job of educating children.

"(Parents) consider that the school is primarily responsible for educating their children," she said. "They don't recognize that they're (the) children's first and probably most influential teachers."

Hazel Loucks, an SIUC assistant professor in educational administration, and Karen Freitag, an instructor in curriculum and instruction, also spoke at the forum.

Loucks said parent involvement is essential to children's education.

"Schools cannot do it all," she said. "Schools and parents will have to become partners."

Loucks said children whose parents are involved with their education usually have better behavior, attendance and motivation than other students.

Parent participation shows children the importance of school, Freitag said.

"Parents are setting a good example for their children when they make it crystal-clear that education is important and they are

Child-welfare reform on front burner for Kustra

By Dan Page
Politics Reporter

The discovery last week of 19 neglected children in a roach-infested Chicago apartment has motivated Lt. Gov. Bob Kustra to call for reforms in the state's child-welfare system.

"First, we must terminate parental rights much more quickly in keeping in the best intent of the child legislation passed last summer," Kustra said Friday in a

Parental-rights termination, foster parenting suggested solutions press statement.

Kustra worked with Gov. Jim Edgar to pass legislation last year which required courts to act in the child's best interests and also created the Office of Inspector General to investigate allegations of employee misconduct and foster parent complaints.

"Many have called for a three strikes you're out program against repeat offenders. In cases of abuse and neglect — like these 19 children — I say you are out and the children should be adopted to loving families."

Mary Gailigan, press secretary for Kustra, said the proposals will be followed by action by Kustra.

"He has met with foster parents and groups as well as those who have had a problem with the Department of Child and Family Services and has listened to what they have to say," she said.

"He does recognize the DCFS was short-handed, but he does not share the sweeping condemnation expressed by Mayor Daley, who simply called DCFS 'a mess.' He does plan to follow up with some very specific legislative suggestions in the near future."

Kustra called for state action to LOWDOWN ON HISTORY OF GERMAN ASPIRIN — Aspirin, known chemically as acetylsalicylic acid (ASA), is a century-old workhorse developed in Germany from the same active ingredient as willow bark, used by the ancient Greeks to remedy pain, fever and inflammation. Aspirin was first offered in tablet form in 1899. Aspirin works by blocking formation of prostaglandins, body chemicals that sensitize nerve endings to pain, among other functions.

NATO PEACE PARTNERSHIP SHIELDS MOSCOW — Almost lost amid the impotent anguish over Bosnia at a weekend conference on European security here was an important shift in emphasis in the Partnership for Peace security strategy proposed by the United States in October and adopted at the NATO summit last month. Offered originally as a way to link the NATO alliance with the new democracies of Eastern Europe, including Russia, the program is now being portrayed additionally as a protective grouping against Russia if things go wrong in Moscow.

GAZA STRIP SLIDING TOWARD DISRUPTION — Election day for the Medical Association board, normally a time of polite politicking and chatter for Gaza's educated elite, ended abruptly Friday when armed Palestinian boys ordered the astonished doctors at gunpoint to go home. The teen-agers, claiming to represent the Fatah faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization, were angry because Israeli soldiers had arrested one of their cohorts. "No one should vote while our people are in jail," they shouted. Brushing aside the protests of Gaza's elderly Fatah leader, they overturned tables, ripped down campaign signs and smashed the doctors' ballot boxes with iron rods.

SUDAN OPENS OFFENSIVE AGAINST REBELS — The Islamic fundamentalist military government in Sudan has launched an offensive against rebels in the largely Christian and animist south in what diplomats and relief workers here said may be an all-out effort to wipe out the costly, decades-old rebellion. Fighting across the south is said to be the most intense in years. Sudanese troops, backed by warplanes and tribal militias, reportedly have advanced from the garrison towns of Juba and Wau to attack the guerrilla fighters of the Sudan People's Liberation Army (SPLA) along the Kit River.

COURT CLEARS WAY FOR PENNSYLVANIA — Pennsylvania got permission from Supreme Court Justice David H. Souter Monday night to begin enforcing its laws restricting abortion. The laws have been on the books since 1989 but never put into effect. In a six-page opinion issued about an hour before midnight EST, Souter said he believed the state laws might put a burden on women's right to abortion, but that a federal appeals court in Philadelphia was right in refusing earlier this month to postpone enforcement of the laws any longer.

COURT EXPECTED TO RULE ON MILITARY GAYS — The Supreme Court eventually will decide the dispute over gays in the military, but lawyers on both sides of the issue say they expect a decision will come later rather than sooner. In recent weeks, Clinton administration lawyers have signaled that they do not want to contest cases begun under the previous Pentagon policy that demanded a total ban on homosexuals. Instead, the administration apparently prefers to wait for a test case of the new Pentagon policy, which takes effect this month. That policy can be more easily defended in court, government attorneys say, because it is based on conduct, rather than on evidence or indications of sexual orientation.

COLD WEATHER LEADS TO BOY'S SURVIVAL — Last February, a 6-year-old boy fell into an icy alpine river near Innsbruck, Austria, and was swept away before he could be rescued. Firefighters pulled his body from the water four miles downstream. The air temperature was 25 degrees, the water 36.5 degrees. The boy was submerged for 65 minutes. A year later, he's fine and back in school, according to a report in the New England Journal of Medicine. Ironically, one reason for his miraculous survival was the sudden and extreme cold.

New year brings celebration, fun to SIUC

By Jeff McIntire
International Reporter

More than 1.3 billion Chinese people will observe the beginning of the Chinese New Year festival Thursday, a celebration seen as important as Christmas in the United States.

The celebration, also known as Ch'un Chieh, or Spring Festival, is celebrated by 243 SIUC students from Taiwan, 28 students from Hong Kong, and 180 from the People's Republic of China, International Programs and Services officials said.

Wei Xu, a graduate student in accounting from Suzhou, China, said the celebration begins with the Ch'u Hsi, the Chinese New Year's Eve, and ends with the Yuan Hsiao Chieh, or Lantern Festival, which is on the 15th of the first month of the Chinese calendar.

"During the Ch'u Hsi, Chinese people stay at home and watch festive television programs with concerts, skits, dances and comedians from about 8 p.m. until about 2 a.m., staying up to bring in the new year," he said.

Xu said the Spring Festival is a family holiday and is celebrated differently in different regions in China.

For example, Jiaozi, or Chinese dumplings, is popular in Northern China and Happyfamilies, a combination of Chinese vegetables and seafood, is popular around Shanghai, Xu said.

David Tien-Wei Wu, president of the SIUC Chinese Student Association, said passing "lucky money" in red envelopes to Chinese children also is a popular Ch'u Hsi tradition.

Another popular tradition, pasting "spring couplets," red banners embroidered with Chinese characters around doors, was started by a legend, Wu said.

According to the legend, the Chinese monster Nien lived in the mountains of the Chinese Mainland long ago, and destroyed villages and ate their people, Wu said.

He said one family was not attacked because it had couplets around its door, so other villages followed suit to prevent themselves from being attacked.

Wu said Nien is the Chinese word for "year," and hanging "spring couplets" is a popular new year's tradition.

Many people also dress up in dragon costumes and emulate the monster Nien, while others throw firecrackers at the figure to ward it off, Wu said.

He said the Chinese year is based on the lunar calendar, which is about 353 days long, with four 29-day months, seven 30-day months, and one 27-day month.

Diversity studied, understood

By Angela Hyland
Minorities Reporter

Fifteen people watched as a young man blatantly was discriminated against Monday in the Newman Center, but they did nothing to stop it.

At the first of a four-part session called "Beyond Tolerance: Exploring Multicultural Diversity," participants viewed a 1991 investigative report by Diane Sawyer in which two men, who were alike in almost every way but their skin color, took part in a test to see how much prejudice still exists in the United States.

The test was conducted in St. Louis, but similar conditions exist throughout the country, Sawyer said.

The two men applied for the same jobs, asked to rent the same apartments and inquired about the same cars. The African-American male was quoted a higher amount for a downpayment on a car, was lectured about laziness when applying for a job, and was told an apartment, which moments before the Caucasian male had been encouraged to rent, was taken.

Landlords also expressed concern to the Caucasian male that blacks were starting to move into the neighborhood after the African-American male inquired about an apartment.

After viewing the film, several Caucasians said they were upset people are treated this way, while African-American viewers affirmed incidents of racism still exist.

Marvin Long, a junior in accounting from Chicago, said regardless of how hard African Americans may work, there is no guarantee they will be treated equally. "Blacks have assimilated a lot into the culture," Long said. "The only thing we can't assimilate is our color."

Although discrimination is rooted deeply in U.S. history, students can work to overcome it by questioning discrimination whenever they see it, Long said.

Anne Patti, a psychology intern at the counseling center, said African-Americans often are excluded from mainstream culture in ways Caucasians do not even think about, such as the way flesh-colored bandages are a peach shade.

"And until recently, it was very difficult for African Americans to go into a card shop and find a card that depicted someone of their race — it's still hard to do that," she said. "These are things we just don't realize as the white majority in our culture until somebody points it out to us."

Patti said the sessions, offered at 6 p.m. every Monday this month, are designed to encourage discussion about how issues such as race, gender and sexual orientation affect all people.

Adversity leads to understanding

SIUC student Jema! Powell deals with his concern about the social understanding of what it truly means to be blind by opening people's eyes to reality.

Bridging a gap of understanding between blind and sighted individuals was the theme of the National Federation for the Blind seminar Powell attended earlier this month in Washington D.C.

Powell, a registered member of the federation and vice president of the Illinois Association of Blind Students, was the only SIUC student to attend the seminar. The association is the Illinois student chapter of the federation.

Powell said he and other seminar participants lobbied congressmen on funding for books for the blind, blind literacy instruction and blind equality of business conditions and income.

His first national seminar with the federation, Powell said it was a great opportunity to support the blind by speaking with Congress directly.

"It was a wonderful experience," Powell said. "To be actually in their (congressman's) offices and speak to their staffers about current blind issues was a wonderful feeling of accomplishment."

Powell said the seminar also dealt with ways to educate sighted individuals on blind

Senator gets high ratings for business voting record

By John McCadd
Business Reporter

Based on his advocacy to business, State Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin Monday was awarded a perfect rating from the Illinois Chamber of Commerce.

Dunn received a 100-percent rating from the Chamber of Commerce because of his voting record on business issues during 1993.

Chamber officials said the rating exemplifies Dunn's dedication to crucial business issues, including proposals for new commerce laws and tax incentives.

Pat Evers-Alvarez, vice president of government affairs for the chamber, said all 59 senators and 118 representatives were rated, and 27 received perfect scores.

Evers-Alvarez said although Dunn received a perfect rating in 1993, he was rated lower during 1992 (82 percent) because of his abstention in a vote to abolish the Illinois Board of Governors of State Colleges and Universities.

Otherwise, Alvarez said Dunn is one of the most business-aligned legislators.

"He has shown that he really has a commitment," she said. "In 1993, he voted favorably on 10 out of 10 issues."

Dunn said because he previously has owned several businesses, he felt inclined to promote commercial stimulation.

"My background is in business — my brother and I owned several businesses," he said. "We had Dunn Apartments in Carbondale, a Pontiac dealership in Pinckneyville and a ready-mix concrete business in Murphysboro."

Dunn said the most controversial proposal to which he voted was the tort-reform bill, which would have placed a ceiling on the amount of damages an injured worker can collect.

After passing the Senate, the bill was defeated in House, he said.

Equally controversial was the tax cap, which would have placed a limit on the amount of property taxes a government could collect. This bill also was rejected by the House, Evers-Alvarez said.

Evers-Alvarez said the most helpful Dunn-approved bill was a

Award winning director honored

By Bob Chiarito
Entertainment Reporter

Robert Cerchio, director of Shryock Auditorium, says he believes success is the result of hard work — and Tuesday night his achievements were recognized.

Cerchio was presented with the 15th annual Service to Student Affairs at SIUC award at a dinner held in his honor in the Old Main Room in the Student Center.

The award gives recognition to those outside SIUC's Student Affairs office who have contributed to the unit, earned the respect of students and colleagues, and who have impacted students' lives.

Cerchio was nominated by SIUC Housing Programming Coordinator Paulette Curkin.

"Cerchio has gone above and beyond just running a facility. For instance, his work on the Black History Month Committee has consistently been very good, very positive programming for students," Curkin said.

The award came as a total surprise for Cerchio, who learned he had won only a week ago.

"I knew nothing about it, in fact I didn't even know the award existed," Cerchio said.

Although Cerchio was not aware of the award, he said being recognized means a lot to him.

"Sometimes people outside of the Student Affairs Committee can lose sight that we're all here to help the students. Every person on this campus from groundskeeper to president contribute to the students," Cerchio said.

Cerchio has been director of Shryock Auditorium since 1980. He came to the auditorium as a graduate assistant in 1976 and became assistant director in 1977.

Within professional ranks, Cerchio has served as a panelist or presenter for numerous workshops and conferences for non-profit arts councils.

For nine years he has served as president of the Illinois Presenters Network, a state-wide group that he founded that presents the performing arts.

Cerchio also has won a variety of awards, including the Jo Mack Dance Award for outstanding contribution to dance at SIUC, honorary membership in SIUC's Sphinx Club for contributions to the University and community and honorary membership in the Ra Ribbon Society for contributions to SIUC's Greek system.

Although Cerchio does not have a particular work motto, he said he grew up with a Protestant work ethic.

"Work hard and you'll succeed," he said.

Cerchio refuses to speculate on his future, but his colleagues believe he will keep up the good work.

SIUC Student Center Director John Coker commented, "He's done an outstanding job every year he's been here, and I'm sure he'll continue on."

We are very pleased he was selected for the award."

"His work has been very good for a long time, and I don't expect it to change," Curkin said.

Stronger sanctions needed for da Silva

AS ALMOST ANYONE CAN ATTEST, IGNORING a problem will not solve to it. The lack of a response by SIUC's athletics department over the recent troubles of men's basketball player Marcelo da Silva, shows such ignorance. Neither allegations that da Silva shoplifted from a local supermarket nor his eventual guilty plea have resulted in an explanation by da Silva or condemnation by the department.

Da Silva's previous history, including misuse of scholarship money, warrants that some type of disciplinary action be taken. The department's options, under the University's Student Conduct Code, include censorship, a statement by basketball coach Rich Herrin condemning such activity, probation or even suspension.

MEMBERS OF THE MEN'S BASKETBALL TEAM voluntarily place themselves in high profile positions by representing the University throughout the region. As such, they disappoint members of the University community when they fail to live up to these higher expectations.

Da Silva's crime was not great, and stealing $6.74 in groceries should not jeopardize his budding career. However, the department's inaction in this case sends younger, impressionable fans the message that irresponsible behavior does not result in a loss of privileges.

What happens in this matter provides a litmus test for the activities of future SIUC athletes. Obviously, stealing by players does not concern the athletics department.

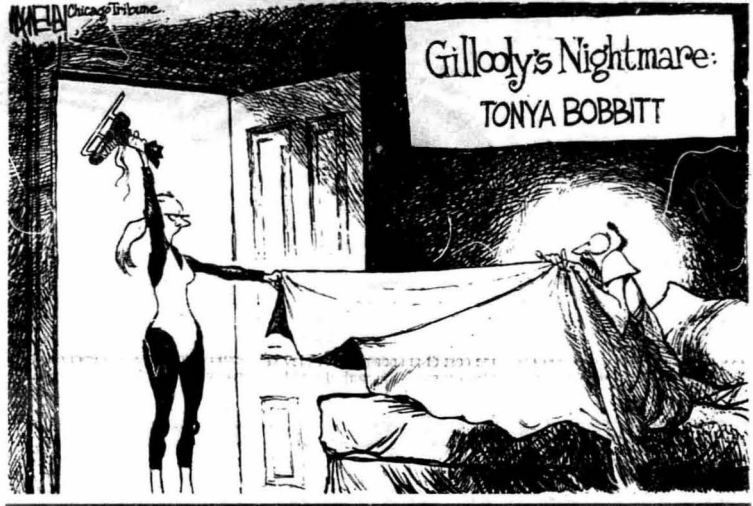

THIS RETAIL THEFT INCIDENT MARKS DA SILVA's second violation of the University's social conduct code within the last year. Last November, da Silva received a five-game suspension from the National Collegiate Athletic Association for the misuse of scholarship funds. The NCAA found that da Silva had used his scholarship money to purchase books and software for others.

According to SIUC's Undergraduate Catalog, the University reserves the right to initiate disciplinary action against any student apprehended for violation of a law. The code also states that the full history of a student be considered in levying any sanction.

In light of this, da Silva certainly would not be playing were he a member of a team like Michigan, where two players received one-game suspensions last weekend for violating unspecified team rules.

IN THE FINAL ANALYSIS, BASKETBALL IS JUST another extra-curricular activity. But, there is no question that those playing the sport receive more recognition and are the subject of more idolatry than students in most other activities. When these individuals violate the public trust, questions concerning their privilege of representing the University need to be raised.

The athletic department's failure to even recognize da Silva's aberrant behavior, let alone take administrative action, shows students as well as other athletes that the University will not hold them accountable for their actions.

Letters to the Editor

Real Saluki fans back da Silva

As a Saluki basketball fan and a person who believes in people's ability to change behaviors, I am writing to remind the so called die-hard Saluki basketball fans Timothy Singler and Michael Swistowics that basketball players are not disposable toys you throw them away once they don't function the way it pleases you. They are real people who deserve to have a chance to stand up, even if they fall for the second time.

I don't approve da Silva's incident of trouble. I am also upset with his behavior and it frustrates me as much as any Saluki basketball fan that he didn't learn his lesson the first time. Behavior can be changed though. What is hard to change is people's presumptuous belief that they can judge other people and condemn them with ultimate decisions.

It is as a loyal fan that I applaud coach Rich Herrin as he supports da Silva playing for the rest of the season and being a recipient of the scholarship from the Southern Illinois basketball program. This is precisely what makes me proud of being a Saluki basketball fan — the team gives its players a second and if necessary a third chance.

Allow me to question here if what constitutes an embarrassment and shame for you is the same for me as we all belong to the same University student body. What about the shame of being part of a whole student body who witnessed the killing of six SIUC international students and didn't demand further criminal investigation once proved in court it was arson? And even if there is an investigation going on, isn't it embarrassing we are not making the effort to update ourselves with its progress? Yet isn't it embarrassing for one to try to play the role of a judge when one has no authority or competence to do so? It is not for you, nor for me or any other fan to decide what to do with da Silva's incident of trouble.

Finally, just look up to coach Herrin, to the basketball program staff and to the team players and learn what loyalty is all about. And if you think that you guys are die-hard fans because you claim this kind of selective and self-convenient loyalty... think again!!

Saluki athletics must cut costs

This letter is in regards to all of you who believe that the student fee hike is ridiculous.

What many of you do not understand is that many of the athletes that represent SIU are here to get a college degree. A majority of those athletes, would not even be able to attend college if it weren't for their athletic scholarship. I do agree with Mr. Poppen (DE Feb. 2), that there are other alternatives instead of the student fee hike.

What many of the SIU students and staff do not realize is of the "extra-privileges" that some of the sports do receive. Basketball for instance, even though they bring in the majority of the athletic money, they also receive more than they need to. They receive up to three pairs of basketball shoes a season, they fly to places when they can drive, they leave the day before a 7 p.m. game the next day only to stay in hotels and eat off of the athletic funds. They also receive breakfast and pre-game meals even when they are playing in Carbondale! The football team has unnecessary "sideliners" who do nothing but use up the money in the funds. The baseball team flies to Florida for spring break when other sport teams drive.

Another aspect I would like to point out is the fact that there is no obvious need for the shakers and cheerleaders. Athletics sends cheerleaders to games, provide uniforms for both shakers and cheerleaders, and personally (along with the opinion of other fellow classmates), I have more fun watching the halftime shootout at a basketball game than I do the shakers.

What I have said may upset other athletes, cheerleaders, and shakers. What I am trying to get across to the students and staff is that the athletic department needs to cut down on spending by reducing these "extra-privileges" that the players are receiving. Also, to cut out the shakers and cheerleaders from the athletic program all together.

What the students need to do is support those who do represent SIU, who are also here of run education and want to learn. For many of us, an athletic scholarship is the only way to an education. I should know! Therefore, as a former SIU athlete, I ask you to vote YES and rely on the athletic department to take other measures in reducing costs.

— Karrie Irvin, senior, physical education

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian staff.

Letters to the editor must be submitted in person to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 300 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

How to submit a letter to the editor:

Academics supercede sports

In the February 2, 1994 issue of the Daily Egyptian, Associate Athletic Director Charlotte West pointed out that our athletic fees are currently the lowest in the state. Apparently her comments were intended to justify the proposed $40 fee increase which the students will vote on Feb. 16. As far as I am concerned, our associate athletic director will have to do better than that to justify this at emptied robbery of my very limited and hard earned funds.

As a graduate student, I am paid a monthly stipend. Each time my fees come due, 2/3 of that month's income is sucked up by these fees leaving me without the means to purchase my textbooks, pay the rent, or buy food. I eventually get these things paid for by taking out rather large loans. Meanwhile, the athletes enjoy the luxury of getting their food, textbooks, and housing paid for with our fee money!

Why should I finance their careers, hobbies, and dreams when I'm struggling with mine? Although it has not been easy, I've found jobs from frying chicken to washing buses to get me through the hard times as an undergraduate. If these athletes really want to play these sports, I suggest they find their own money for it by getting jobs or creating their own fund raisers—a point well made in a letter by Neil Romney's in the Feb. 2 issue.

We are not Notre Dame, and if we don't get our priorities straight, we'll never be in their class either academically or athletically.

—Steven L. Estes

Few things are as exciting to me as watching a great sporting event, but I can barely afford the time or the cost of attendance after they've already stuck me with the bill so the athletes can play in the first place! Besides, there are better athletes on T.V. from the professionals to college teams like Notre Dame—which can actually afford a top-notch athletic program as well as a top-notch academic program. We are not Notre Dame, and if we don't get our priorities straight, we'll never be in their class either academically or athletically.

No what should our priorities be? In no particular order, I submit to you a small list of things that I hear cries for on a daily basis: more money for the library, more lights for the campus, more computers, more parking lots and people to scoop the snow from them. I would consider paying more for some of these things because they benefit all students at SIUC, not a small supposedly-elite group of students.

With the referendum on Feb. 16, the students of SIUC have the chance to make a stand and establish this university's first priority as academics. Freezing the athletic fee (or better still doing away with it completely) is clearly the right thing to do if SIUC expects to continue attracting hard-working, academically-oriented graduate and undergraduate students. If our associate athletic director thinks that our relatively low athletic fee justifies the proposed increase, she is totally missing the point.

Raise bar entry age to 21

I am disgusted and appalled at the Carbondale City Council's paltry decision to raise the bar entry age to 19 and not 21. The decision came after several speakers at the meeting, including parents of teenagers who died while driving under the influence, and MADD representatives encouraged and in one instance, begged, the Council to raise the entry age to 21. These people were slapped in the face by Mayor Dillard, Councilman Mills and Morris, who voted 'no' in a flagrant display of indifference towards an issue that literally has lives at stake.

In his comments, Councilman Mills hammered USG President Spiwak, demanding why SIUC hasn't done anything. The fact is that if you look at today's DE, there's probably somewhere listed the activities that SPC and USG are sponsoring. These programs include Friday night comedians, weekend films, and music concerts as they become available. All these things provide alternatives for students. What more do you want from the University?

Perhaps a policy where a student's academic department is notified by the Carbondale Police when he or she gets caught violating underage drinking laws. Maybe the departments could implement a "three strikes, you're out" program of it's own. First a warning, then academic probation, then, after three run-ins with the law concerning illegal alcohol abuse, the student would be bounced out of the University.

The problem with this idea is that it would burden the already overworked and underpaid academic department employees, and would be a long, slow process to bring about such a program.

Everyone knows that if people want to drink, they will find a way to do so. Prohibition taught us that. So raising the bar entry age to 21 will not in itself stop the problem. But it will reduce the amount of underage drinkers simply because there will be nights where Joe Freshman, try as he might, cannot get anyone to buy alcohol for him. He goes to bed bloated on pizza, Pepsi, and "USA Up All Night," but he is sober, and didn't hurt himself or get hit by a drunken motorist coming home from the strip.

Now, I'm no saint. When I was underage I did more than my fair share of drinking. But where I was, the entry age was 21. So we stayed home and drank, or walked to a friend's house, or slept over if we drove. The point is, we didn't get behind the wheel of a car and drive home, or to a bar that's open for a few more hours. If we'd gone to a bar, we would have had to drive home that night.

I think that City Council needs to get out of the back pockets of the bar owners and take a stand. Why should they wait for the University, or the cities of Champaign, or Charleston to act?

Animal rights facts inaccurate

This letter is in response to your article on Animal Rights in the January 25th issue of the DE. I think you at the DE should check the statements your sources give you before printing them so wholeheartedly.

Fact 1: Milk cows do not "spend their entire lives hooked to a machine". A milk cow spends only three to five minutes, twice a day, hooked to a milking machine. Most of the rest of their lives are spent on pasture.

Fact 2: The best of milk cows produces only 125 lb. of milk (about 15 gal.) of milk a day. Forty-nine gal. of milk would mean a production of 392 lb. of milk a day. It is physically impossible for a cow to produce that much milk in a day.

Fact 3: Even with a 20 to 25 percent increase in production due to Bovine Growth Hormone an exceptional milk cow would produce around 20 gal. of milk a day.

Fact 4: Beef, with the highest grain to meat conversion percentage only requires 6 lb. of grain to gain 1 lb. of meat. Furthermore this grain is not likely to be used to feed people if not fed to these animals. Since farmers must charge money for this grain and people who need the food can not afford to buy it, in reality the grain would probably rot if not fed to these animals.

—Bo Donaldson, junior, animal science

Natural law takes rights from beasts

I couldn't help but notice the pedagogic liberal guilt trip over "animal rights" which was printed in the January 25th edition of the DE. I would like to state for the record that "animals have no rights."

Rights are either God given or evolve from democratic processes. Rights are based on the ability of humans to agree on a social contract and their commitment to keep that contract. Animals don't have the ability to make and keep such an agreement. In addition, animals don't respect anyone else's rights. Because of this, they can't be said to have rights.

Webster's defines a "right" as "a capacity or privilege, the enjoyment of which is secured to a person by law."

Notice the word "person." This word denotes humans. It doesn't denote animals. Inherent in this concept is the ability to assert a claim to those rights. Implicit to this concept is that in order to have rights, one must know they've a just claim to them. Animals are capable of neither.

Animals solve problems when confronted with a biological need by finding a way of getting what they need, but no animal sits down and ponders about a problem the way that man does. Animals may make sounds, but they don't communicate thought. Men transmit ideas, institutions, and traditions of culture. What animal does this?

Animals tear each other from limb to limb. Humans do too, but it's not the accepted norm. Humans think about right and wrong. Animals don't! Animals exist in an anarchical state of nature. It's called survival of the fittest.

New SIUC fraternity sets standard

By Katie Morrison
Special Assignment Reporter

They came from University of Indiana, Western Kentucky University and Southeast and Northeast Missouri State to help their brothers.

Lambda Chi Alpha, a new fraternity at SIUC since October, called down 120 brothers from the tri-state area last week to give the fraternity's extremely selective nationals a better picture of the quality of the Carbondale chapter's members, a Northeast Missouri State Lambda Chi Delta said.

Brian Dooley, a junior from Northeast Missouri State who coordinated the conference, said he saw quality members at

"There is a good nucleus of leadership (at SIUC)," Dooley said. Asking a specific national is not the traditional way of becoming colonized as a fraternity, but Todd Hillman, the local Lambda Chi Alpha chapter president, said he and other members are interested only in this particular fraternity.

Fraternity members said they set themselves apart from other Greek organizations by having associates instead of pledges, ethnic diversity and no hazing, Dooley said.

Joe Gibson, a junior from Southeast Missouri State, said associates are not expected to do anything that an active member would not do.

High grade-point averages and solid academic standards have Lambda Chi Alpha above at the Greek systems at other schools, Gibson said. "Greek systems' at other universities, such as SEMO, change their standards to compete with Lambda Chi Alpha and then the system prospers, Dooley said.

Low enrollment in Greek systems at universities usually is the result of a bad system, Gibson said.

"We want guys who are individuals," Gibson said. "We don't want c'ones."

Other fraternities at SEMO had to change their practices to meet Lambda Chi Alpha's, Gibson said. Students fed up with traditional fraternity rituals, such as hazing, turned away from other fraternities and to Lambda Chi Alpha.

"To compete, other had to raise their standards to meet ours," he said.

Wu said Nien is the Chinese word for "year," and hanging "spring couplets" is a popular new year's tradition.

Many people also dress up in dragon costumes and emulate the monster Nien, while others throw firecrackers at the figure to ward it off, Wu said.

He said the Chinese year is based on the lunar calendar, which is about 353 days long, with four 29-day months, seven 30-day months, and one 27-day month.

Wu said farmers adopted the Chinese lunar calendar thousands of years ago, basing the calendar on the moon's orbit around the Earth.

The moon's gravity controls tide flow, so watching the moon can help farmers predict tide patterns of the Yellow and Yangtze rivers of Eastern China, Wu said.

The Chinese Student Association will show traditional new year costumes, arts and crafts at the International Arts and Crafts Exhibition, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Friday in the Student Center International Lounge.

Starz cable network offers new option for TV viewers

By Kyle J. Chapman
Entertainment Reporter

For all those couch potatoes out there, TCI of Illinois is bringing Carbondale its latest channel addition called Starz! Encore 8.

Starz! will feature new movies from Universal Studios, Touchstone Pictures, Hollywood Pictures and New Line Cinemas.

Starz! is an addition to the Encore channel, which features movies from the 1970s and '80s. Starz!, channel 43 on most cable systems features many movies that have never been shown before.

Randy Brown, general manager of TCI of Illinois in Carbondale, said Starz! is an attempt to expand their regular audience to people who would not ordinarily watch premium cable channels, such as HBO and Cinemax.

"What we were looking to do with this product is appeal to a wider audience," Brown said. "We were looking for something a little different and more affordable to increase its appeal." Brown said he is excited about having the channel himself, because it shows a lot of old blockbusters, as well as new releases.

The channel will be broadcast free throughout February to let customers get a taste of the new films.

Starz! will package new movies such as "Carlitos Way," "Mad Dog and Glory" and "Leaving Normal." Brown said Starz! is trying to gain exclusive rights to many new movies that will come out this year.

Webb Ward, general manager of Galaxy Cable, said HBO and Showtime cable television services have not yet responded to the incoming Starz! channel as a competitor.

Webb said his service provides cable to 24 communities and he had no knowledge of the arrival of this new station.

"I would say that if the Starz! Encore 8 is going to be a premium cable channel, it probably will be in competition with the major networks such as HBO, Cinemax and Showtime," Webb said.

withhold public assistance from unmarried mothers age 18 or younger and live outside their parents' homes.

Currently in Illinois, these young mothers can receive the full AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children) benefit if they live on their own. Kustra's suggestions are modeled largely by the Clinton welfare reform ideal. He believes that requirements for young mothers must change.

Similar policies are in place in five other states so far.

Kustra said foster parents present the best option for many children in neglected homes.

"Foster parents are the best option for children who need to find a better place to live temporarily, but too many children are coming into our child welfare system every day and we are burdening our foster parents," he said.

Kustra, who increased his presence in child-welfare issues after the publicized brutal death of a young Chicago boy, Joseph Wallace, by his mother's boyfriend last April, said race should not be the first concern in these cases.

"We have to get beyond the issue of race in finding the best homes for these children. Too many children in Illinois are losing valuable days, months and years of their lives," he said. "What's best for the children should come before the race of the foster parents."

reallocate, but they are 10 to 15 years behind us," she said. "I hope people will remember that we were downsizing and reallocating before it became the mode on campus."

Other state schools, Illinois State and Northern Illinois, have raised their athletic fees over the years to keep Division I standings and will raise fees again because of IBHE recommendations. ISU now charges $152 and NIU charges $145.

Hart said it is difficult to stay on a competitive level with schools such as ISU if they keep widening the gap.

"People will start to ask us, 'Why can't we hang in with those schools?' but you can't hang in there if you don't have the funding," he said.

A student vote on the $40 athletic fee proposed to raise the $12 million will be Feb. 16.

working within the schools," Freitag said.

Parents do not interact with schools for many reasons, such as scheduling problems, lack of confidence or bad childhood experiences, Loucks said.

But these problems can be overcome if teachers and administrators are willing to work with parents for the good of the students, she said.

"We have to have a new mindset toward partnership," Loucks said. "It must be well-planned and systematic. Parent involvement is not an event, it's a process."

Some parents lack the educational skills they need to become involved, Snavely said.

"We have parents who are lacking basic skills themselves and that is a big problem," Snavely said.

For example, parents may be unable to read the notes children bring home from school or may not know how to help their kids with math assignments, she said.

By providing general equivalency diploma opportunities, literacy tutoring and similar programs, schools can help parents gain confidence and skills, Snavely said.

"I think that if we're willing to experiment with some different ways of involving hard-to-reach parents, we will be successful," she said.

Loucks said it is important for schools to tailor parent-involvement programs to changing family situations.

"Only 16 percent of American homes include a father out working and a mother staying at home," she said. "We need to think about how (to) start reaching this new group of families. Parents aren't available on our schedule from eight to three because most of them are out trying to earn a living."

Army Corps offering jobs

By Stephanie Moletti
Environmental Reporter

Soaking in the sun and enjoying outdoor activities could earn qualified SIUC students money this summer.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers at Rend Lake is accepting applications for summer jobs as a seasonal park ranger, seasonal clerk/typist and summer aid positions.

Park ranger, Ray Zoanetti, said about 90 percent of students hired for summer employment in the past have been from SIUC.

The seasonal park ranger position is a job which requires a uniformed assistant to help park rangers with a variety of visitor services and natural resource management programs, Zoanetti said.

Salaries range from $6.61 to $7.21 an hour, depending on students' qualifications.

Zoanetti said consideration will be given to students with related experience, educational background, creativity, strong writing and speaking skills and knowledge of natural science and resource management.

"This is an excellent opportunity for students majoring in forestry or biological science, but it is not restricted to these students," Zoanetti said.

Students majoring in subjects such as law enforcement, education, recreation, U.S. history, archeology or social sciences with an interest or background in some science also are eligible, Zoanetti said.

Five seasonal park-ranger positions are available and one position is available as a seasonal clerk/typist, Zoanetti said.

"The seasonal clerk/typist position requires good office skills," Zoanetti said. "The person needs to deal effectively with people and have some typing and computer skills. This is a good summer job for a business major."

Applicants must be full-time students enrolled in an accredited college or university and must be 18 years or older, Zoanetti said.

Students who wish to apply for one of the two positions need to send the following:

- A completed and signed application for Federal Employment, SF-171, which are available at any federal office, such as the U.S. Post Office;

- A current college transcript complete up to the end of the fall 1993 semester. Student must have a cumulative grade point average of 2.0 or above;

- A letter from the university or college stating the student is in good standing and full-time status for the spring semester; and

- A certificate of eligibility from the Illinois Job Service Office stating the student has met the income criteria for the Stay-in-School Program. The office is located in the Illinois employment Office.

The Illinois Job Service Office places students in categories according to annual income. The Stay-in-School program requires employers to hire the in order of the most needy, he said.

The third job, available as a summer aid, does not require applicants to be students, only 18 years or older.

"Summer aids do more hands-on work with natural resource management and general park maintenance," Zoanetti said.

Summer aids are paid minimum wage, he said.

A certificate stating that the applicant has met the income criteria of the Illinois Job Service Office and a completed and signed application for Federal Employment, FS-171, should be sent, Zoanetti said.

The seasonal park ranger and clerk/typist will work from May 2 to Sept. 30. Summer aids begin work on May 16.

Paper work for all positions is due by March 1 and students hired will be notified before April 1, Zoanetti said.

"This gives students the opportunity to gain experience for their resume," Zoanetti said.

"Protective employers will look at experience in your field before your experience working at McDonald's or a gas station."

Craft shop offers instruction, inexpensive hobby sessions

By Jamie Madigan
Entertainment Reporter

People who take courses at the Student Center. Craft Shop can have fun and save money at the same time, the coordinator says.

Debra Johnson-Jones, said although the classes do cost from $10 to $45, many of them can pay students back in the long run.

"They save on expenses in learning how to do things themselves," she said.

For example, she said, students who take the matt cutting or picture framing classes can do it themselves rather than paying a professional.

The classes, which vary in date and time, are in the craft shop in the lower level of the Student Center.

Craft shop employee Ron Dunkel said some people take these classes as a diversion.

"People take them for relaxation," he said. "Sometimes we have people who have already taken a class use the facilities. After the classes end, they can use the shop the rest of the semester."

Dunkel said some of the five-week classes offered in the craft shop are in woodworking, clay and guitar. A new course offered this semester is primitive clay, he said.

"This class is more like the American Indians do it," Dunkel said. "The pieces are fired in an open pit outside."

Other classes offered are in jewelry design, stained glass and bead weaving.

Counseling beneficial to students

By Jean Cunningham
Student Health Programs

To Your Health

"How can a counselor help me any better than friends and family can?" "Does it mean I am mentally ill if I go see a counselor?" People have many worries and concerns about seeking professional counseling. It can be scary to say "I have a problem I am having trouble solving" and even scarier to go to a stranger for help. However, most college campuses provide counseling services for students because problems are a part of everyday living, and because talking with a professional counselor can be helpful in ways that talking with other people may not be.

One major advantage of talking with a professional counselor is that he or she is not part of the person's everyday life. This allows the counselor a more objective view of their situation, and may also mean that the counselor feels more comfortable giving them direct feedback than a friend might be.

A professional counselor can hear all of someone's feelings without judging their appropriateness of feeling hurt or upset. Another advantage is that these services are confidential. Counseling agencies cannot give out any information about clients without their written permission. This means that no one else in the university, and no one in a student's family, can call up and find out whether or not they are seeing a counselor. Seeking counseling services does not mean that a person is mentally ill. One important purpose of counseling is the prevention of more serious problems in the future. Many people who seek counseling do so for help with the kinds of problems that everyone faces at one time or another: relationship break-ups, problems making decisions, needing to understand oneself better.

Of course, a professional counselor is trained in evaluating more serious problems when they are present. On the SIUC campus, counseling services for students are available free of charge at the Counseling Center in Woody Hall and the Clinical Center in the Wham Building. A call to either place will set up a first appointment to talk confidentially with a counselor.

Chain's album rocks nation

By Bob Chiarito
Entertainment Peapo tar

Music Review

Although the electric chords and heroin-laced lyrics may be abandoned temporarily, the anger of Alice In Chains lives on.

After the band's platinum album "Dirt," the 1993 Lollapalooza tour and then their own club tour, the Seattle band released a seven-song EP titled "Jar of Flies."

"Jar of Flies" is the group's second EP; in 1992 it released "Sap," a four-song EP. Alice in Chains was one of the first bands to emerge from the Seattle scene in the early '90s with its 1990 release "Facelift."

Many fans were turned on to Alice in Chains when the group opened for Van Halen on their 1991 tour. MTV airplay also caught the attention of rock fans with videos for songs "Man in the Box" and "We Die Young."

But it was the band's 1992 follow-up, "Dirt," which brought them critical acclaim from across the country. "Dirt" stung listeners with lead singer Layne Staley's spooky vocals and guitarist Jerry Cantrell's wicked cords. It was dark-theme lyrics which commanded the attention of fans and critics alike.

The sharp, biting guitars and Staley's vibrating voice helped listeners feel the pain of heroin addiction, suicide, war and other horrors haunting Generation X.

On "Jar of Flies," Staley and company do not narrate the horrors of drug addiction, but they have not stopped singing about the dark side of life, either. Their sound is more mellow. They included harmonica and violins this time, but it is doubtful if they will receive much air play on mainstream radio.

Alice in Chains has not strayed from their roots and ironically have received critical acclaim because of it. All songs on "Jar of Flies" are written by Staley and Cantrell, whose credits include the group's acclaimed hit "Rooster."

"Rouen Apple" kicks off the EP with lyrics describing one's loss of innocence.

"Jar of Flies" is the album that once again confirms Alice in Chains place among today's best bands. In fact, once you start listening, all other bands will turn into a faded memory.
