Police release details of SIUC instructor slaying

SIUC associate professor Loyd Yates was beaten in the head with a baseball bat and standed in the chest with a large knife Saturday before being dumped into the trunk of Francis Ambrose Lynch's vehicle, a police official said Monday.

John Sytsma, acting Carbondale police chief, would Carbondale police chief, would not specify the number of injuries sustained by Yates, a 52-year-old assistant professor in the College of Applied Sciences and Arts.

An SIUC student died in his residence hall room Friday, ning because of natural causes, according to the Jackson unity Coroner.

County Coroner.

Bryan A. Hopp, 28, was pronounced dead in his room in Warren Hall because of a cardiac problem.

According to Jackson County Coroner Thomas Kupferer, Hopp's father visited his son daily at the residence hall. His father had come to visit his son but did not receive any response when knocking on his door. Hopp's father then called the roller.

At 10:08 p.m. Friday, SIUC Police responded to Warren Hall on a report of an unresponsive male. The police then called the Jackson County Ambulance service, who pronounced Hopp dead at the scene Kupferer said Hopp's body was found in his wheelchair that was pulled up to a table in the room. The death was sudden, and it did not appear that Hopp was trying to get help. Kupferer said.

In 1989, Hopp received a heart transplant. He was confined to a wheelchair because of his heart condition.

Hopp, born Dec. 25, 1970, in Elgin, had previously suffered from other cardiac problems, including a heart attack, Kupferer said.

Hopp, who was a senior in the College of Business and Administration was on the Dean's List. Hopp was scheduled to Additional information and less complicated wording may aid in Faculty Senate approval of a resolution recommending the SIU Board of tion recommending the Stu Board of Trustees postpone action on a recent Arthur Andersen report, according to Senate President Jim Allen. Allen said the new resolution is a "serious modification" of the old one.

Unanswered questions discouraged Faculty Senate members from aged racing Senae memoers from approving a previous resolution opposing the study at its Jan. 26 meet-ing. That resolution recommended the University postpone adopting a shared service center for purchasing and disbursements functions.

Senate members also were concerned with the complicated wording of the resolution.

The new resolution recommends the board not act on the study until four things are accomplished: a regional economic impact study be completed; issue involving procur-ment and disbursement be resolved; the Oracle computer system and other business-related initiatives are fully operational on campus; and doubts and questions about actual savings through a shared service center are answered.

Allen said the new resolution and information address four areas the Residents of 9th story to pay for damages if guilty parties do not confess.

RHONDA SCIARRA DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

More than $5,000 in repairs, the result of damages occurring in Schneider Hall Thursday night, will be charged to residents of the ninth floor if officials cannot find the person or persons responsible.

According to Dwain Cocke,

mechanical construction superin-

Cocke said such extreme damages are rare in comparison with other incidents he encounters.

"We always have a few minor things — a broken window or spray-painted wall," Cocke said: "We rarely run into this amount of things - damage."

Cindy Perkins, coordinator of residence life for Brush Towers, is responsible for assessing damages to the responsible party. Perkins said if the responsible party is not found the bill will be divided among the approximate fifty residents of the floor.

"According to the Pesidence."

"According to the Residence Life Guide Book, the staff will make a reasonable attempt to determine who is responsible for dam-ages in common areas," Perkins said. "When they cannot be attrib-uted to an individual or individuals, damages may be assessed to a floor or building as the circumstances

The Alumni Association will be raffling off $2,000 of tuition and fees for Fall 1999 this Saturday at the men's basketball game in hopes of bringing more students to the SIU Arena to support men's and women's basket-ball.

To register for the drawing, SIUC students must register between 3 to 7:05 p.m Saturday at the SIU Arena. To qualify to win, the student must be enrolled in at least 12 credit hours and must be present to win. The stu-

must be present to win. The student who wins the drawing must provide proof of identification. Edward Buerger, director of the Alumni Association, said the purpose of the scholarship raffle is to encourage students to go and support their fellow student, athletes. Buerger said the Alumni Association is trying to get back-the 'essence' of student support that 'was present in the '60s and '70s.

"In the '60s and '70s, SIUC was known as the most difficult place to play because of our fans and students," Buerger said. "This was when we were beating the Big 10 (Conference) schools."

Greg Scott, assistant director the Alumni Association, said of the Alumni Association, sau if the winner is an international or out-of-state student, the Alumni Association will pay $2,000 of their bursar bill. If the winner is an in-state student, the scholarship will pay up to 15 hours for the Fall 1999 semester.

The Arena can hold a maximum capacity of 10,014.

Our Word

Peer judgment levels the playing field

Giving greeks the opportunity to be judged by their own members potentially solves a lot of problems if the initiative is taken seriously.

Until now, greek organizations accused of misconduct have been at the mercy of the Student Development administration. The greeks say that, too many times, they are often treated unfairly by Student Development and that only greeks can understand the greek way of life.

This is a valid point. The Student Development administration is greek, but their members are not students. Non-greek students already have something similar in place in the form of the Student Judicial Affairs Board, so it seems only fair for greek mishaps to be reviewed by greek members.

This is a freedom and responsibility that greeks must not take lightly. To aid the process, board members will receive formal training to make them capable decision-makers in the judicial Conflicts of interest will hopefully be eliminatd by the continued presence of Student Development in any final sanctions that will be handed out and the elimination of board representation from the greek organization in question.

In short, this ability to be judged by and receive guidance from their peers must not become a way for greeks to shirk responsibility for their actions when they are at fault. No greek should believe they will get off easier simply because their peers are holding the gavel.

In fact, they should be more fearful of breaking the rules knowing their fellow greeks don't want to be cast in a negative light by their misconduct. The Greek Judicial board is a definitive means to num around the notion that greeks are con-demned simply for being greek. Now if a greek organization believes it's been handed a raw deal the blame can be placed no further than its own peer organizations

Katie Semersheim, assistant director of Student Development, said she expected more involve-ment from the Pan-Hellenic Council. If the Pan-Hellenic Council truly has lacked involvement in the creation of a Greek Judicial board, the DAILY EGYPTIAN also is surprised.

Just last December, various Pan-Hellenic fraternities and sororities met in a Student Center Ballroom and concluded that violent parties and hazing are not an accurate depiction of greek life.

With that in mind and the recent Phi Beta Sigma suspensions, it seems involvement in this peer supervision could only benefit the Pan-Hellenic cause.

If that panel truly believes a negative view of the greek system at SIUC exists and needs to change, then this is a chance to take an active role

All greek organizations have been given a sterling opportunity to show Student Development and the University their leadership ability. The Greek Judicial Board will be a strong step in greek self-destruction if the responsibility is taken lightly. However, with good judgment and fair judicial involvement by greek board members it can also serve as a strong, positive force to turn around a system that has recently been mired in misconduct allegations.

Carbondale drowning in its drinking age

Carbondale bars allowed people ages 19 and older in for business, I thought it was strange.

"If there is no cover," I pondered,
"how will the bars make any money?" Isn't that cute? Daphne thought that bars couldn't make rnoney off of the minors.

Then I took a field trip. You should know that I come from the mean streets of Dallas — a place where proprietors go to great lengths to catch and humiliate underage drinkers. So, we go to a bar. Nameless, of course.

"You guys 21?" asks the door guy.

Now I hate to criticize, but I've been thinking. And it's possible, bear with me here, that a more fool-proof system could be in place. Granted, the guy asked, and I can appreciate

But in this crazy world in which we live, aren't we forever striving to better ourselves?

Those that are over 21 get wrist bands, Those that are under don't. I mention this only because in less-enlightened parts of the world, the youngsters get their hands marked with a big, black X. Those are hard

The place is packed, but at least half of the people there are those non-profitable minors. Crazy thing,

Daphne is a junior in though, in a bar with no band, there are two activities to occupy one's time — drinking and looking for some action. 'Oh!' I exclaim, 'The minors are drinking!'

Yeah, I know I broke the racket wide open, right? Now that the suits know, it's all coming down. People will speak of the day that the silence was broken.

Maybe this is an old topic, but the bars do have a responsibility to identify and refuse to serve minors. This any and retuse to serve minors. This is capitalism, and I'm no longer the innocent, unworldly woman I was at the beginning of this journey.

As long as, it is in the best interest of the bars to look the other way, the other way will be looked. Fine, The true responsibility lies with the city. It is their job to uphold the laws: Now if, for some wild reason, there was some type of conflict of interest — if the city were to, for some rea-son, act on behalf of the bars — that ould be unethical.

Why do we care? Here is a scenario for you: Bob, and Bill, both 19, get trashed on girlie-man drinks at a bar. They get in the car and, as they argue about how many, drinks they had ("No, man, I had at least 10 drinks." "No way, man, wine-spritzers don't count as a whole drink!"), they crash into a carload of disabled children and puppies. Then the soccer moms will dutifully rise up, condemning the bar for letting Bob in with his grand-mother's ID.

This city has clearly taken a laissez-faire approach to this issue, but it's only a matter of time before a car accident or a date-rape or a bar fight bites them in the ass.

So when it happens, and it will appen, let's be sure we know who re blaming.

we're biaming.
You want to know why this doesn't happen in Dallas?
The bars are monitored by secret shoppers. If they are caught being negligent, they lose their liquor license. That'll fix 'em.

You don't like the laws? Change them. You think the drinking age should be 12-and-a-half, run for president. As long as things stay as they are, though, somebody has to be accountable.

GPA not a fair measuring stick for USG involvement

Dear Editor,

In response to the DABY EGYPTIAN'S Friday editorial, I would like to present the facts about USG and its grade-point-average

The policy of requiring a minimum GPA to be involved in USG has historically been a bad policy, which is based on personal preju-dice and used against other students. This also creates a tool for administrators to hand-pack dents. This also your student leaders:
All students who pay their fee to support their student government and meet the University standards have a right to be involved. I must question if GPA is a fai gauge to measure a student's intellectual abili-ty, ethics and leadership skills, which are three valuable assets to possess to be a student three valuable assets to possess to be a smole leader. Many of today's most influential minds are college dropouts (ex. Bill Gates). The USG has worked relentlessly on the issue of academic advisement at our University. Academic advisement has been identified by a number of universities as the identified by a number of universities as the depart ment where students get their first impression of the University Community.

When was the last time you or your roomate was told, "Well, you still need this one class to graduate?" Students that rank lower in their plate are profit. their class are exactly the students who know what the problems are in academic advise-ment that allow them to slip through the cracks.

If the feeling is that there needs to be higher academic standards for our stu leaders, you seriously slap the student body in the face by inferring that the student body is not involved or smart enough to choose the best candidate in a fair election

Elections are exactly how our stude ders should be chosen, not with by-laws.

All I ask for is a fair election, not selection, and the students to stand up for their rights, which is how FAITH is maintained in your student government.

Ben Syfert USG College of Agriculture senator

Lowering GPA for USG positions an excellent idea Dear Editor,

Dear Editor,

On Jan. 29, 1 read with great interest the article about USC, Sen. Ben Syfen's proposal to lower the grade-point-average requirement for being a member of Undergraduate Student Government from 2.5 for the president and 2.25 for all senators, to a 2.0 GPA for president, senator and other USC positions.

As a former member of USC, 1 applaud Mr. Syfen's plant 1 believe that if you can be a member of any other organization with a 2.0 GPA, then you should have a right to run for student government.

I strongly believe that just because one has a high GPA doesn't mean they can be a good student leader.

When I was in the senate, it was my experience that many of my former colleagues; who had a higher-end GPA were among the worst senators; while those who had a middle-of-the-pack or lower GPA did the most for their constituents.

There are those who argue individuals who are involved should have a higher GPA because of the positions they hold. While I respect those who would argue this position, I feel that such arguments are misguided and

It has been my experience GPA require-ments can and have been used to keep certain people out of USG for political reasons. It is ly speculated the main reason for the GPA change was to keep Rob Taylor from

THE JOB INTERVIEW: shocking truths that can help you nail your dream job

Let's face it. Nobody looks forward to job interviews. A total stranger stares you down for an hour while you sit there uncomforably in your pantyhose, trying to sound super-intelligent while also remembering to keep your legs crossed correctly. While youd prefer to avoid thinking about the whole thing and just get through it when the time comes - Don'tl Here are a few "insider" insights about the whole process that may shock you, but can help you better connect with your Interviewer and distinguish yourself from the competition.

RESUMES ARE OBSOLETE

rey're not really obsolete, but they are only one piece of the job well, they're not reasy obsolete, out they are only one piece of the y puzzle. Most people spend much more time on their resume than they do preparing for each interview. That's a huge mistake, says. Bruce Tulgan, the author of Work this Way, a book about how to that in your first few jobs. Teople can easily be on resumes. The intervie is much more important, which is why recruiters. spend so much time doing them – and why you should spend time getting ready.

Most people spend time preparing answers that will show case their intelligence, savvy and interest in a company. This is important. But

AVORK EXPERIENCE NOT REQUIRED

Okay, so you may not have a ton of real work experience. But that's not what recreaters are really looking for when they are hiring new college grads. Believe it or not, the very fact that you are young car be worth a lot to many companies. They're in search of a 22-yearolds energy and fresh perspective. YOU CAN KNOW EVERYTHING ABOUT A COMPANY

Many people look at prepping for an interview like studying for an exam. They read all the obvious material to make sure they know and where. This is a great start, but it's just the tip of the iceberg. Reading a company's recruiting brochare and spitting it back in the interview won't impress anyone. To really stand out you need to arm yourself with current and substantive information about the comparry and industry. Thanks to today's technology, this does not have to be a daunting or time consuming proposition. You can learn a lot with minimal effort and make a great impact because most other under-grad candidates won't take the extra step.

12 reasons to have a good time

These are the 12 best—the elitist critic code for the 12 movies I enjoyed the most in 1998.

A prejudiced movie-goer, most people tend to gravitate toward the films I like: westerns, crime films. science fiction, horror, French musicals, Hong Kong films and the occasional Goddard.

So for what it's worth, this dirty dozen is what I consider the best.

• The Truman Show: I walked out in a daze, confident that I had out in a daze, continent that I had not only seen the finest film of the year but the finest film in years. Perfect writing, perfect direction, perfect acting. You know it's good when throughout the length of the film you simply shake your head in amazement—a true masterpieze. azement — a true masterpiece.

American History X: Despite amazement.

turnoil about the creative powers behind the film, it's tough to imag-ine a finer one emerging. Witness Edward Norton's flawless transfor-mations from awkward teenager to angry neo-nazi to tired ex-con, establishing Norton as the best actor of his generation. No one even touches him. The single film of this year whose ending truly breaks your heart.

• The Thin Red Line: Out of

two great WWII movies. Terrance Malick's return to film rises the highest. Haunting and real, it takes the realm of combat into emotional areas and questions never before presented on film.

 There's Something About Mary: For every Omaha beach opening, I think the one image that will remain in the consciousness of fillm audiences is Ben Stiller's, well, zipper shot. A triumph of low-brow comedy establishing the Farrelly brothers as the modern kings of the genre. Stiller and Matt Dillon are great, but Cameron Diaz:

shines. By the end of the film, we can see why.

an see wny.
• Pleasantville: Though not the best film of the year, hands-down this was the greatest movie-going experience of my life. Great performances, writing, and the most beautiful images I've seen this year.

• He Got Game: A film that seems to be all but ignored on recent lists, yet remains Spike Lee's best work since "Do The Right Thing." The film crucifies the NBA drafting process, yet every frame permeates with Lee's love for the game of basketball, reminding us that Lee is not only visual master but also a great writer.

• Saving Private Ryan: I constantly rib my best friend, a Spielberg fan, about the faults of this film, but I gotta come clean and admit the film is a great achieve-ment. Spielberg took his clout and made the uncompromising vision that true combat is, and yes, the opening sequence is, stunning. If only those cemetery bookends could be lost:

could be lost:

Dark City: The one film that I enjoy more with every viewing. If Fritz Lang, John Huston and Ridley Scott conceived some unholy cinematic offspring, "Dark City" would be it. Stunning visuals coupled with the potential of a real science-fiction story that engages you. I'll wager that Lucas won't come up with anything this cool come May.

• Your Friends and Neighbors: don't know who's writing the next Bond film, but they should get Neil LaBute to do it. He writes the most LaBute to do it. He writes the most villainous bastards ever to populate a film 'screen. Following up the great "In the Company of Men" with this Wycherley-inspired sexual drama, LaBute hits new lows. The most chilling moment of the year? Jason Patric's character reminiscing on the best sex he ever had.

• Out of Sight: On the opposite end of "Friends and Neighbors" is George Clooney and Jennifer, Lopez in this crime caper. Forget "Get Shorty" and "Jackie Brown" — Steven: Soderbergh and Scott Frank have created the best Elmore

Leonard adaptation yet. Not only does the film have the single funniest guesome moment of the year, but witness the scene where Clooney and Lopez go on about, '70s flicks in the trunk of a car.

• John Carpenter's Vampires: I love horror movies — even more from my favorite director of all from my favorite director of all-time. An unapologetic tough guy pastiche. of Sam Peckinph and Hammer vampire films, Carjenter, gleefully guides us through the film in all its 2:35:1 glory. There may be Wesley Snipes, and TV might have. Buffy, but neither can scream "Die, you bloodsucking motherf***er!" quite like James Woods can: ... Wild Thines: Really sleavy wild Things: Really sleazy, and I mean that in the most complementary way possible. Mixing Jim Thompson and "Melrose Place" into a crime blender, Mait Dillon, Denise Richards, Neve Campbell and a scene-stealing Bill Murray do their dirty deeds in this steamy Florida noir. Bar none, the best b-movie of the year.

Master of horror's latest aimed at keeping viewers from sleeping

Horror-meister Stephen King

Horror-meister Stephen King never has been interested in making people comfortable. Creating night-mares is the prolific novelist's idea of a good time. So it's not too surprising that when King sat down to write his first original miniseries; "Storm of the Century," deliyering a high-voltage, spine-tingling shocker was just what he had in mend. "People sort of come into TV with that warm and fuzzy feeling that they are going to be fed something that is going to put them to sleep," says King, who is an executive producer of the six-hour thriller that begins Sunday on ABC. "I don't want to put them to sleep," says King. "I want to wake people up. I hope that happens. I hope people tune in and watch."

Most important, King says, he

Most important, King says, he hopes "Storm of the Century" makes viewers think.

"Storm of the Century" is, literally, a chilling morality tale about a remote Maine island community isolated by one of the worst snowstorms ever to hit there. But some-thing more deadly arrives on Little Tall Lland — a mysterious stranger named Andre Linoge (Colm Feore), who appears out of thin air and mur-ders one of the town's aldest residents. Upon his arrest, Linoge tells the townspeople that he has one simple request: "If you give me what I want, I'll go away."

Timothy Daly stars as the town's earnest constable; Debrah Farentino is the constable's wife who operates is the constable's wife who operates the island's day-care center; and Dyllan Christopher, plays their young son, who is attracted to the evil Linoge.

King doesn't remember the genesis of the project. The story, he says, came to him simply like the ideas for all of his best-selling novels such as "Carrie," 'The Shining, 'The Stand,' "It" and the recent "Bag of Bones."

'It was very visual and it wanted to be a screenplay from the very beginning," explains King, who has seen many of his books adapted for film or television. "I just sat for three months in late 1996 and wrote it. I had the best time like I do with the novels. It had three major parts of it, so I made it a six-hour minis-

"I knew that he wanted some-thing, but I didn't know what he wanted or what he would do... I can't remember what, was going through my mind."

King knew, though, he wanted Linoge to commit murder as soon as he arrived on the island. "Not because he had anything against that person," King explains, "but it is a way of saying, "Now that I have your attention."

The storm. King suggests, is

The storm, King suggests, is something that Linoge conjured up for his own convenience to cut the town and its residents off from the town and its residents off from the rest of civilization. "I said to myself, I want to put him there and see what he wants and what they do."

King, who always has a cameo in his miniseries, appears as a TV newscaster in "Storing,"

"The last two of three times I have picked who I wanted to be," he says: "I like to act, but I am not very cood at it. So I have to be very care-(U-WIRE) EVANSTON, III. - About two weeks ago, len Blanchard killed her roommates.

The Music senior found herself sharing her room in Sigma Alpha Iota with a pair of mice. Three days later, thanks to a mousetrap and a midnight strike, the mice were evicted.

"It was pretty bad the first day they were there," Blanchard said. "I spent the night in the lounge and at a friend's apartment." I'm still afraid of them."

Blanchard's mice may have passed on, but plenty of their cohorts remain. Several domnitories and houses across campus have been afflicted with mice this year.

"They're not the cute little white things you'd expect," said SAI resident Erin Jinks. "They're dark brown and gray."

SAL TESIGENT ETH JIMES. They be dark brown and gray."

The unwelcome visitors have been particulally partial to SAL "We've had a major mouse problem here since last year," said resident Carlssa Kett. "You wake up at 3:30 in the morning hearing the sounds of paper tearing — that's when you know you have a problem. We have to keep everything in plastic containers."

But the mice know their turf.
"I've had mice open Tupperware," said Jinks, a Weinberg senior. "Some people are plugging holes in the wall with socks and duct tape. At this point, it's not just the mice — it's unclean with all the mouse droppings around."

Residents of SAI aren't alone in their struggle. Mice have also taken up-residence at 710 Emerson, 1856 Ornington, Hobart House, the Communications Residential College and rocan tross; or Continuous Research and Congruints the College of Cultural and Community Studies at various points during the year.

"It took the university a while to respond," said Twala Jones, the resident assistant at 710 Emerson. "When we went away for Winter Break, they tried to trap the mice. It seems to be partially resolved. The residents haven't complained about seeing mice in common areas or rooms, but you can still hear them in the waits.

Affirst, the university responded to SAT's pleas for help withboxes of poison. "The mice just laugh at the poison," said SAI.
House Manager Anne Howard. "All year long we've been putting out raps of our own accord/using peanut butter or chocolate as bait. It would be nice not to have the mice eating:

One of the all-time test-selling game consoles is the Sony PlayStation. So why not combine the two? Enter Connectix's new product, Virtual Game Station, which emulates a PlayStation on a Macintosh.

But Sony doesn't seem to think that emulation is the highest form of flattery. Last week, the company filed suit against Connectix in

District Court of San Francisco, claiming that Virtual Game Station

circumvents the PlayStation's anti-piracy protection (which) is designed to inhibit the illegal sale and distribution of counterfeit soft-

The odd thing about Sony's lawsuit, as Connectix CEO Roy McDonald sees it, is that "There's much more money to be made on the software side of the console game industry than on the hardware side" and a product like Virtual Game Station should increase the number of people looking to purchase PlayStation titles. McDonald denies that his company's product lets people use illegal copies of PlayStation games and expresses hope for working with Sony in the future. "I love my

Names of students involved in campus crime made public

COLLEGE PRESS EXCHANGE

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. - Student journalists at Southwest Missouri-State University have won the right to inspect the results of the campus' judicial proceedings.

Following a state judge's order, university officials released on Jan. 29 the names of five students found guilty of sexual or violent offenses. The disclosure was a direct result of changes last fall to federal studentprivacy laws that now require ceedings involving criminal mis-

In his Jan. 26 ruling, Missouri Circuit Court Judge Henry Westbrooke ruled that the university must reveal the "final results" of any disciplinary proceeding against a student who is charged with violent crimes or non-forcible sexual ses. Westbrooke defined "final results" as the name of the studen charged, the crime committed and any sanction imposed by the school. The court battle started in assignment editor for the campus newspaper, The Southwest Standard, asked for a copy of cam-pus judicial actions taken from 1997 through November of 1998. He cited the state's open-meetings law, but school officials turned down his request, claiming that releasing the information would violate the federal Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act. The law, commonly known as FERPA or the Buckley Amendment, restricts colleges from releasing information contained within educational records that could be easily used to identify a student without that student's permission.

However, the university lost some ground on that stance last fall when Congress reauthorized the Higher Education Act, crafting legrigher Education Act, cratting leg-islation that specifically says col-leges may no longer refuse to dis-close the results of campus proceed-ings involving crimes of violence or sexual offen

In light of that change, Nolan and attorneys for the university struck a deal in early January, agreeing that the school would release the students' names, the charges against them and the resulting sanctions both before and after the reauthorization went into effect. Westbrooke's ruling merely ratified

On Feb. 3 The Standard printed the names of five student-offenders two of whom were suspended for an academic year for non-forcible sexual offenses, and two were put on probation for assault. None of the are still enrolled at the universi-

Salukis reload with new recruits

NEW BREED:

Volleyball team signs five players after losing I four seniors.

PAUL WILEKLINSKI Daily Egyptian Peporter

SIUC volleyball coach So Locke refuses to call the 1999 fall volleyball season a rebuilding year she prefers to call it a reloading

The Salukis reloaded Monday with the signing of five high school seniors to national letters of inten-for the 1999-2000 academic year.

The signees include two middle blockers — 6-foot-1-inch Amber Britton of Louisville and 6-footer.

Britton of Louisville and 6-100ter. Lindsay Schultz of Valparaiso, Ind. The Salukis also attracted two outside hitters — 6-footer. Tara Cains of LaPorte, Ind., and 5-foot-11 Kristie Kemner of Quincy. Marengo native and 5-foot-11-inch setter Britten Follett completes the 1999-2000 recruiting class.

The five recruits have their work cut out for them to fill the vacancies left by seniors Marlo Moreland, Lindsay Resmer, Laura Pier and Monique Galvin. The four account-

"If there is one element about this new class that I like is their height," Locke said in a press, release. "It's probably the phagest class that we've recruited."

PITCHERS: continued from page 16

Losing their top three sluggers from last year's squad; the season's offensive output is unlikely to match last season's amount. A healthy Frasor and Heuring and solid production from newcomers like freshman Jake Alley are essential to overcome the loss of offensive power.

Fortunately for coach Dan Callahan, the outlook for his top pitchers is a good one.

"They have progressed well," Callahan said of Frasor and Heuring. "Scott Barefield (Saluki trainer) did a very good job working with those guys.
"They stuck with the program very diligently and they pro-gressed ahead of schedule."

Frasor, a preseason All-Missouri Valley Conference selection last season, posted a team-bat 3.80 ERA prior to his injury. Who was second best? Yep, Heuring, with a 5.12 ERA in five starts. To say these two will be welcomed back with open arms is an understatement.

"Prior to last year, we didn't have a history of guys getting hurt," Callahan said. "Last year

Piazza's surgery was for a congenital problem in his shoulder. In addition to the rebound of Frasor and Heuring, the Salukis are looking for some of the lessexperienced pitchers to step up.

One new face who will be looked to early is freshman Jake Alley, a member of USA Today's high school "All-USA" team in 1998.

Alley said he and the rest of his teammates are making steady progress as the start of the season

"We're all about where we want to be two weeks before the season starts," Alley said. "Hopefully, I can pitch a lot, maybe get a few starts. But I've never played college baseball, so I don't know until we start play-

Alley is one of several candidates for two undecided slots.

"I think Alley's got the ability to be a closer, and he's talented enough to be a No. 4 starter, but that's asking a lot for a freshman to be a closer," Callahan said. "We to be a croser, can get by with three starters for the first three weeks, but a fourth starter is one thing we're trying to

Some other pitchers the Salukis will be counting on this season are last season's closer junior Jim Pecoraro, freshman Pat Hon, sophomore Mike McMahon and senior Dave Condon.

Alley said he and his teammates have set a few objectives for the new season.

"We want to make it to the conference tournament and definitely have a better season than they did last year," he said.

Callahan has a seemingly sim-ple goal for his pitching staff heading into the season—stay off of the nainer's table.

"I'd just like to keep everybody healthy," Callahan said: "That's a good start."

what we did last year, but we have more options on what we can do."

With a solid outfield crop of Schley, junior Marry Worsley and transfers Scott Boyd and Steve Mazzola (Jefferson, Mo., Junior College), the Salukis might have the consistency Callahan is looking for from his new look/old look team.

"As the season progresses, I think there will be a clearer picture as far as what we are doing," he said. "But right now there are a lot of question marks. In time we are going to have to look for some consistency from our players

Another problem area is power SIUC hit 73 home runs last season, thanks in part to Matt Dettman (14), Carl Kochan (12) and Brad Benson (11). The Salukis will not see nearly as many dingers this year, as the three power hitters have graduated. Leading candidates to fill the void are Houston. Stanek and freshman infielder Anthony Jones.

"I don't know if we have the same mashers that people would like to see," Callahan said. "But we will have a few home runs this season. I think we are a little bit quick-er, and I think we might be forced to play the short game a little bit more while also using the hit-and-

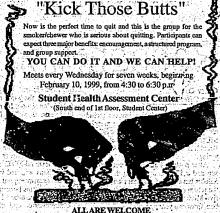

For the Salukis to contend in the MVC with the likes of powerhous es Wichita State University and Southwest Missouri State, the Salukis will need to mature quickly and take their game to the next level which Ruggeri feels might not be within reach at this time

"It's going to be tough," he said "We are going to have to have a lot of players step up, The good thing is our pitchers are healthy and that is going to help out a lot. But people are going to have to step up big time this year."

While returning all of its starters, including three pitchers and gaining national recognition, it is the "little things" that SIUC head softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer wants to focus on this spring.

After posting a 32-17-1 record last season and a 17-2 record during the fall, the Salukis have gained national attention with the return of a solid lineup, which includes five Missouri Valley Aii-Conference mem-

Leading the way for the Salukis this spring will be a solid pitching staff composed of juniors Carisa Winters and Tracy Remspecher and sophomore Erin Stremsterfer.

Winters was nationally ranked in three different categories last season with a 16-9 record and a league-leading 0.72 ERA to go with 234 strikeouts in 185.1 innings.

Remspecher, who endured nagging houlder injuries last season, still managed a 5-2 record with a 2.93 ERA.

Stremsterfer posted a 11-6 record with an ERA of 1.42 while also posing a threat with the bat, slugging out a .315 average as

"Fresno State should be really exciting. We've never really played a west coast team, and it will be interesting to see how the girls out there play."

you are a freshman, a junior, whatever. We are going to throw guys out there, and if they get the job done—great. If they don't, then we have to make some adjustments."
