Council okays liquor lounge

By Nathan Jones
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council approved a new entertainment lounge Tuesday night, increasing the local class A liquor licenses by one.

The liquor lounge, previously approved by both the Liquor Advisory Board and the Economic Opportunity Development Commission, will be called Nubian II and located at 222 North Washington.

Class A liquor licenses allow for both drinks and package liquors to be sold.

According to the owners this type of business was selected because the kind of music and entertainment especially enjoyed by the black community was lacking in Carbondale. The lounge is expected to open about mid-January.

In other Council action, a letter was received from the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce condemning the discriminatory charge lodged against a city councilman at last week's meeting.

A portion of the letter stated: "Reference is made to the unprecedented and unprovoked attack made upon the integrity and honesty of City Councilman William Eaton in implying that he has consistently opposed everything relating to the welfare of the black community and to the poverty white area on the northeast side of this community.

"Councilman Eaton's record of ten years' standing would indicate that such unsupported statements are completely without fact or foundation and such personal harassment coupled with a request for a business boycott of Mr. Eaton's commercial interest carries overtones bordering upon blackmail by such charges.

"The record clearly shows the extent to which Councilman Eaton has dedicated citizen time to the betterment of a greater Carbondale and this Chamber strongly urges the Mayor and the City Council to completely disregard the recent statements uttered by Mr. Simon."

Coed housing system called ideal

Wilbur N. Moulton, dean of students, speaking on coed living, says the housing system at SIU is ideal. Moulton says coed living has many different meanings, and some universities would classify Thompson Point, University Park and Brush Towers as coed living facilities. See story page 11

Weather forecast

Southern Illinois: Variable cloudiness and slightly warmer today, tonight and Thursday. High today in the 40s. Low tonight around 20.

Housing, poverty key issues facing Student Senate tonight

The SIU Student Senate will consider legislation in the areas of student housing and the war on poverty at its first session of the quarter at 7:30 p.m. today in the River Rooms of the University Center.

According to Nick Fera, Student Senate housing commissioner, a resolution will be introduced "declaring the University's policy of filing housing contracts null and void."

Fera explained that the present policy requires all students to register a housing contract except married students and veterans. The resolution which will be brought before the Senate calls this a "basic infringement on the rights of some students and a discriminatory policy."

The policy is discriminatory because it exempts some students from filing housing contracts merely because they have participated in a social experience that other students may not have," Fera said.

According to Fera this resolution is the first in a series to attempt to liberalize housing regulations at SIU in order to attract students to the better housing areas so much of the bad housing conditions will be eliminated.

The resolution will be introduced to the Senate by Mike Bowman for the Student Housing Commission.

Another area to be considered at today's Senate session is poverty.

Dwight Campbell, student body president, said a bill will be introduced calling for a "Moratorium on Poverty" to be held at SIU on March 4.

The bill will ask for the "support of Chancellor Robert W. MacVicar and the faculty in setting aside the day for the discussion of problems of poverty in the nation, the state of Illinois and the Southern Illinois area," Campbell said.

Campbell said "the student's and the University's involvement in the community has been the central focus of the 'Serve the People' Campaign and the student government this year."

This program of student involvement in the community is consistent with our platform of last spring," Campbell said.

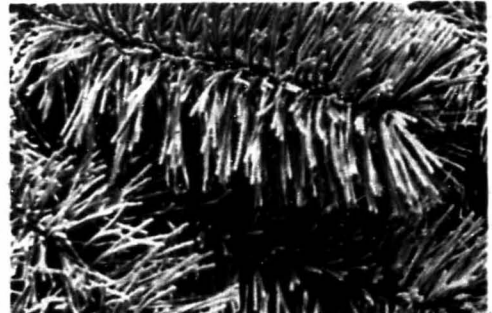

The SIU Student Government's Educational Session on Student Involvement in the Community will begin after the Senate meeting is adjourned.

Discussions on Con-Con by student senators in their respective living areas were to be held last night although at least one area—University Park—cancelled the sessions.

Murray Mann and Dave Legow, University Park senators, gave no reason for the cancellation.

Mann indicated a rap session might be held Thursday night in University Park although "I have a feeling it won't be on Con-Con."

"I think the lack and unwillingness of the student body—including members of the Senate—to become involved in some of their own activities is the reason for the cancellation," Mann said.

Hoffman, Dellinger to rap Chicago trial here Sunday

Abbie Hoffman and David Dellinger, two defendants in the Chicago 7 Conspiracy Trial will speak at 5 p.m. Sunday in the SIU Arena.

According to Steve Danko and Gordon Cummings of the Current Events committee of the Student Activities Office, topics of discussion will include trial, the Yippie movement and related subjects.

The free program is being co-sponsored by the Carbondale Duck Front and the controversial Speakers Program.

Also featured will be Doug Allen of the Department of Philosophy representing the Southern Illinois Peace Committee, and a speaker from the Black Student Union.

There will be a general question and answer period following the speeches. Refreshments will be served.

Keene to speak

SIU Con-Con meets today

By Marty Francis
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The second session of the SIU Student Government's Con-Con Education Week is scheduled for 8 p.m. today in Ballroom B of the University Center.

The discussion will be on the topic, "Student Involvement in the University and the Community."

Dwight Campbell, student body president, said "the whole idea of the student's and the University's involvement in the community will be considered to a great extent."

Speaker's for the session will be Carbondale Mayor David Keene, a representative from the Northeast Congress, Tom Bevirt, co-ordinator of the "Serve the People Campaign", Dwight Campbell, and Ernest Beck, an SIU student majoring in social work.

Friday is the last session of the Con-Con Education Week. The discussion will be concerned with "Students and Faculty Working Together" and "Student Power and the Decision Making Process."

Speakers will be Randall Nelson, professor of government and member of the American Association of University Professors; Willis Moore, professor of philosophy and George McClure, associate professor in the Department of Philosophy.

According to officials of student government, there is a lack of participation and consequently a shortage of delegates for the Con-Con.

One delegate is needed from Small Group Housing, 4 commuter delegates, 5 east side nondorm delegates, 1 Thompson Point delegate, 3 west side dorm delegates, and 4 west side nondorm delegates are needed.

If there are not enough petitions for each delegate seat, there will be no Constitutional Convention at SIU.

Students wishing to run for delegates may obtain petitions from the Student Government Office.

Petitions must be returned to the office by 5 p.m. today.

Zaleski's condition reported better

Joseph F. Zaleski, assistant dean of students at SIU, was reported to be fine and a little bit better than yesterday when his condition was reported to have stabilized, according to a spokesman at Doctor's Hospital, Carbondale. Zaleski has been in the hospital since Jan. 7 when he suffered a heart attack.

Zaleski, who has served at SIU in various positions since 1958, has had three heart attacks since 1961. It is not known if or when he will be able to leave the hospital after his latest attack.

Accident injures three coeds

Three SIU coeds were injured about 5:30 p.m. Monday in a three-car accident on East Main Street.

Phyllis Walker, 22 and Gilda Curry, 20, both freshmen, and Linda Tyler, 21, a sophomore, all of Chicago, were treated for minor abrasions and contusions at the Health Service and released Tuesday.

Geology candidate speaks Wednesday

A candidate for chairman of the Department of Geology will be a guest speaker at 4 p.m. today, in Parkinson Hall, Room 111.

He is Russell R. Dutcher, associate professor of geology in the Department of Geology and Geophysics and assistant director of the Coal Research Section at Pennsylvania State University. The SIU chairmanship was vacated by Daniel Miller who left this summer to become director of the Wyoming State Geological Survey.

Highway litter droppers

Each month American motorists drop an average of 1,304 pieces of litter for every mile of the nation's vast network of interstate and primary highways—nearly 16,000 pieces per mile per year.

Thus found the first national survey of roadside litter, sponsored by Keep America Beautiful, Inc.

Woodcuts and prints for rent

Original lithographs and woodcuts, now displayed on the first floor of the Morris Library, may be rented for the quarter for $1 each.

Alan Cohen, head librarian Department of Humanities, acknowledged the opportunity for students to develop their cultural tastes in the works, most of which are by contemporary, "important" artists. Some of the prints are early 20th and late 19th century pieces.

Most of the 26 prints were purchased for SIU by Mrs. Kathryn Kuh, art critic for the "Saturday Review."

In the past, prints have been purchased through art catalogues. Abrams Inc. has been the major source of prints for SIU.

Mounting and framing costs for display have been paid by University funds. Originally, the program was financed by Theta X social fraternity which 12 years ago helped introduce this "new" art program to the students.

The prints are changed at the start of every quarter. The current collection will be displayed until exhausted.

Photographic reproductions of older art works are available free on the second floor. They include a Picasso and many classical works.

Inquest probes death of coed

The Commuter, Married and Graduate Student Office, in cooperation with the Home Economics Education Department, is initiating a series of discussion classes at Evergreen Terrace and Southern Hills.

The classes' purpose is to help SU's married students with some of the particular problems of family living.

At Evergreen Terrace, the topic is "College Born and College Bound," dealing with child rearing. The Southern Hills topic is "Stretching Short College Dollars," which concerns wise buying and budgeting.

The first class will be at 8 p.m. Monday in the Evergreen Terrace Community Building and in the basement of building 128 at Southern Hills. Residents should attend the classes at their own area. The topics will alternate next quarter.

The classes will meet every Monday night for eight weeks. They are taught by members of the Department of Home Economics Education. The first hour of each class will be a formal discussion followed by a coffee hour for material feedback and discussion evaluations.

There is no fee or registration for the classes and anyone in the living units may attend. It will not be mandatory to attend each class

Czech journalist speaks today

Kamil Winter, a visiting professor with the Department of Mass Communications at SIU's Edwardsville Campus, will speak on "The Lessons of Czechoslovakia - 1968" today at 8 p.m. in Lawson Hall 101.

Winter, a former Czech journalist, left Czechoslovakia one week after the Russian invasion of August, 1968. His career in Czechoslovakia included editing a Czech newspaper and serving as a foreign correspondent. After the Communists took control of the country, Winter lost his job and went to work in a factory.

Winter's speech will be sponsored by the European and Russian Studies Committee.

May Day Fest- Why not?

Why not a May Day Fest?

Noise, they say. Traffic congestion, they say. Litter, they say. Declining land value, they say. Damage or destruction of private property, they say. Drugs, they say. Freaks, ("hippies," "longhairs"), they don't say.

What the whole issue of the proposed rock concert boils down to is that the residents of Southern Illinois are opposed to a great influx of undesirable (in their way of thinking) creatures roaming, at will, throughout the area that has been the home of many of them all of their lives.

They are afraid that what has happened at some of the past concerts, the California fiasco in particular, will happen in their own back yard. They are afraid that drugs and sex will permeate the atmosphere, ensnaring their children in a vice-laced net.

Comments at recent meetings of the Concerned Citizens of Southern Illinois tend to show what many of the local residents feel. At the first meeting, one woman commented that she didn't like the idea of "naked hippies running through the woods," while another woman at the second meeting said that if the May Day Fest were to be held, "the Southern Illinois area would become the dope capitol of the Midwest."

These arguments are, at best, a reflection of the false attitudes held by many of the area residents. At worst, they are an indication that people in this area are unable or, more likely, unwilling to open their minds and accept people who are unlike themselves.

At the last meeting of the Concerned Citizens, a young man attired in mustache, long sideburns, bell bottoms and military-like coat stepped to the front of the crowd and was introduced. He began by explaining that he had formerly been living in the Haight-Ashbury district before its commercialization. Many persons in the audience, on the basis of his appearance and opening statement, had acted in a most discourteous fashion and a few boos spread through the crowd.

He continued, however, by telling the assemblage that he was now a local resident and opposed the Fest for various reasons. When he had finished his talk, he was given just short of a standing ovation.

The example was classic. A good hippie, thought the crowd. What an oddity.

Wrong. Persons who will come to the May Fest will not come to run naked through the woods or to turn the area into the dope capitol of the Midwest.

They will come to listen to music.

Discard weak, tighten strong

To the Daily Egyptian:

I have been hearing about the shortcomings of SRU and various proposals to improve the present conditions of poor efficiency. I remember when the Bursar's Office moved over to Woody Hall "in order to speed things up." But how come it takes almost as long to cash a check as it always did. True, the facilities are better, but the manpower? (And I don't mean student employees.)

Friday morning I waited 15 minutes in a single line to cash a personal check. I did notice three check cashing windows, one open, with a frustrated cashier—no doubt underpaid—frustrated possibly because the whole 15 minutes I stood in line there were two non-student employees standing around talking—efficiency—neither lifting a finger to help the working cashier, or for that matter the students standing in line.

These days, people talk about tight money. I think the money office, regardless of how tight it's trade, should either discard its weaker links or tighten them up just a bit.

More power to 'doer' Campbell

To the Daily Egyptian:

Recently there has been a small, ultra conservative, white group of SRU students voicing their opposition to Dwight Campbell, student body president. This opposition, no doubt, is also supported by the school administration, who themselves have come under the criticism of Dwight Campbell because of their placement of priorities in the area of administrative handling of school funds. This opposition can be seen easily, and so, too, can the reasons why Dwight Campbell is the first black student body president to attempt to give the student a greater voice in school politics. Dwight Campbell is a progressive, liberal-minded—what the administration may call radical—type of student leader. These three qualities are in direct conflict with the ultra-conservative and seemingly racist attitude of the student opposition and the administration.

One of the moves by Dwight Campbell that fell under heavy criticism was his stand on the Homecoming Queen. This opposition persisted even with the knowledge that representatives of the students backed Campbell on his decision. This decision in brief was not to have a Homecoming Queen because it would pull the campus further apart racially. This belief of Dwight Campbell's was justified by the events that followed. Therefore, what should have been a joyous occasion for the University became a weekend with periods of strong discontent, hate and racial tension.

The problem seems to lie in a fast moving, young doer opposed to a conservative status quo opposition and administration. We all concede to mistakes and surely Dwight Campbell, in his learning process of educational politics, has made some. But we also concede that Dwight Campbell is a doer. He is a doer, not only for the University student body but also for the seemingly forgotten Carbondale community, in particular those who need things done the most, the poor. Finally, we support the valiant efforts of Dwight Campbell as student body president of SRU. More power to the people, more power to us all!

Influence?

To the Daily Egyptian:

After completing degree requirements at SRU, I wish to make a few comments about the University. In my opinion, Southern has been and is an average education institution with a few outstanding individuals and departments and will remain so no matter how many new buildings the administration and Board construct. During the past four and a half years, I have seen the population and physical plant grow without any improvement in education.

I feel the University system does not provide an opportunity for students and faculty to assume responsibility for action in the conduct of our educational system. Final decisions are made by the administration while students and faculty may only attempt to influence just as if they were the general public. Students and faculty probably have less influence than any other public. Students and faculty take no part in the final formulation of the system they must live and work under. Motor vehicle regulations, housing regulations and, more important, curriculum and programming like General Studies are the decisions of the Board of Trustees.

If the University was a true democratic institution and all its members allowed to take some part in its conduct, I might have seen an adequate Health Service for 24,000 students and an overpass long before an executive mansion. There might have been fewer deans, assistant deans and many others who enforce the Board's housing and motor vehicle regulations, and I might have known a better paid faculty.

I will conclude by saying that the responsibility for change must fall upon the students and faculty. The administration and Board of Trustees have continually placed emphasis and great expense in areas they deem important to themselves and the public's view and appear to have no concept of democratic principles and how a democratic institution might function.

Should police offer political protection?

To the Daily Egyptian:

Right on! Being a cop is a "tough job" (Daily Egyptian of January 6, 1970, page 5). But the relationship of the cop in the street to the average citizenry is grossly underestimated and misinterpreted not only by the coauthors of the article on professionalized police, but by most everyone else, cops included.

Providing "public safety" is the direct and main function of the police force. But does this include and is he supposed to provide "political protection" also? What is "political protection"? If you could, you should ask James Rector or Bobby Hutton or Fred Hampton. They were murdered by cops in various places in a police attempt to provide "political protection." Cops also provided "political protection" during the 1968 Chicago police riots.

When a cop brings his night stick down on the head of an antiwar demonstrator, a draft resistor, a student activist or a Panther, is he providing "public safety" as this article would have us believe? More closely, he is the arm of a system in the United States of America that has become more repressive and oppressive than any country in the world, east or west.

Peace,

Mobile home parks create an unfavorable atmosphere

By Ed Strassenback
Student Writer

Mobile home parks—a dream come true for some persons. Inexpensive living quarters. Spacious. Fairly comfortable.

But for a city, mobile home parks—if there are enough of them—can mean financial problems. In Carbondale there are more than three dozen such parks. And in Carbondale the problems mobile home or trailer parks pose have become serious.

Trailer parks can be found in most sections of the city. In fact, they may be located anywhere—except in residentially zoned sections.

Why so many trailers in Carbondale?

An obvious reason is the increasing enrollment at SIU, now exceeding 23,000. The University provides on-campus housing for only 5,300 students—about 25 per cent of the student body. The other 18,000 students must look elsewhere for living quarters.

A total of 1,104 undergraduate students commute to school, and about 500 graduate students commute from their Carbondale area homes. The other approximately 60 per cent of the student body rent houses, apartments, rooms at off-campus dorms and mobile homes. It is the mobile homes in Carbondale—numbering nearly 350—which produce many of the city's headaches.

Carbondale Mayor David Keene expressed his concern over the great number of trailers in the city when he said in a recent interview: "These trailers have caused the property values of the city to become much lower. Why, these (trailer parks) are our next potential slums."

A report, by the University Housing Office, shows that 1,265 of the 7,312 juniors and seniors living off-campus live in mobile homes.

The mobile home occupants live in 39 different mobile parks in the area as well as nearly 100 individually parked mobile homes. The figures do not show, however, the great number of married and graduate students who also live in mobile homes.

There are many reasons for students wanting to live in trailers. Low cost seems to head the list.

"I like the low cost of living. Where else can you find a place that is furnished, has two bedrooms and costs the price of this place," said Terry Malkby, a senior from Moline living in a trailer at Carbondale Mobile Homes north of Carbondale on U.S. 51.

Many others interviewed agreed about the low cost of living. One student, now living in a trailer, said he could not find a decent apartment in Carbondale at a price he could afford.

An on-the-site inspection by this reporter showed that approximately 1,400 trailers have been placed in various parks or parked separately, in and around a one and one-half mile radius of Carbondale. Nearly 3,500 people—ranging from student residents to permanent residents of the community—live in the 1,400 mobile homes, but only 350 of these mobile homes are in the city limits.

The problem for Carbondale is not where to place additional mobile parks for the city has many tracts of land zoned especially for trailer parks. The problem, explained Mayor Keene, is the high cost of upkeep for servicing each mobile park.

What legally constitutes a mobile park? The Carbondale Mobile Park Ordinance defines a mobile park as any "plot of ground upon which three or more mobile homes, occupied for dwelling or sleeping purposes, are located, regardless of whether or not charge is made for such accommodation."

Two points of concern expressed by the mayor are placement of sewers to suitably service each trailer in a mobile park and low property tax assessments on each trailer park.

Sewer placements may seem trivial. But consider the problems and expenses the construction of a sewer involves. Sewers must run on what is called a down-slope to allow sewage to flow freely by the gravitational pull of the earth.

However, trailer parks are usually placed in land tracts undesirable for home building and other higher class types of construction. Hence, the trailer parks receive a lower class land site for development.

These "second class land sites" are usually in a low or marshy area. Running a sewer into these areas causes many problems, including slope for a desirable sewage flow. The city then must supply the area with a pumping station, resulting in high costs for construction and upkeep.

Second major concern of the city is the tax assessments placed on the trailer parks. Tax assessors may tax only the property of the park owner. Usually this assessment makes up only a small amount of the property placed or parked on the tract of ground. The tax money in turn pays for construction projects, such as the building of a new bridge for the purpose of allowing residents of a trailer park road access to and from the park. Payments for such construction are taken from various funds (money for a new bridge would be taken from the street and bridge fund) set up by the city's fiscal budget.

Tax money raised from trailer parks, however, does not cover the cost allocated by the city for mobile park construction projects. The inability of the city to raise enough money to check the deficit creates a drain on other city funds. Thus, the city takes money from other funds to meet the necessary expenses for construction of sewers, streets, bridges and other projects in the trailer parks.

Nearly 75 per cent of 50 Carbondale residents, asked in an informal poll, agreed with city officials that trailer parks should be removed from inside the city limits. But residents contend that the parks bring an influx of temporary residents which in turn lowers the property values and creates an unfavorable living atmosphere in the community.

Many residents blame SIU for the great influx of temporary residents and growth of trailer parks. However, the growth of SIU over the past 10 years has not brought about a great number of trailers placed in the city. A new school regulation in 1963 and a city ordinance passed in 1964 resulted in a slowing of the development of trailer parks in the city.

In May 1963, a survey by the Southern Illinoisan showed that 1,800 students lived in mobile homes. At that time, students occupied more than 80 per cent of the mobile homes in and around Carbondale. Figures for 1969 show nearly 2,700 living in them.

'Our next potential slums'

The University took the first step in helping solve Carbondale's trailer problem. In April, 1963, University officials approved a resolution authorizing disciplinary action by the University against single undergraduate students who lived in off-campus facilities that did not meet University standards.

The University's action, along with an Urban Renewal Project set up by the city for the southeast section of Carbondale, led to the removal of some trailer parks. Main reason for their removal was that they were "unacceptable living quarters" according to the University.

Many people argued, after passage of the new regulations, the standards were a move "to depreciate the value of property in the southeast section of Carbondale." The move did just that—land depreciated in value by nearly 50 per cent. The University has since bought the land, thus bringing some relief to the financial drain of the city's budget.

The second action which helped the city of Carbondale relieve its tax drain was an ordinance providing that no mobile homes be replaced or new ones parked in the city unless neighbors grant written permission.

The ordinance authorized owners who wished to replace trailers or to park trailers in new locations to get written permission from all neighbors within 100 feet of the property boundaries and 60 per cent of all living within the next 100 feet.

The ordinance specifically stated that maintenance on the mobile homes is prohibited. That is, any trailer parked in the city prior to the passing of the ordinance may not be improved.

The financial problem for Carbondale is lessening somewhat. But the problem of finding living facilities for students continues to create concerns for city officials. Trailers seem to be one answer for low cost living for students, but not in Carbondale.

Students involved in telephone fraud

Several SIU students have been identified by the security division of the Pacific Telephone Company of Los Angeles as participating in a widespread fraudulent use of a telephone credit card number.

In a memorandum, Wilbur N. Moulton, dean of students, said the telephone card reportedly was issued to Sammy Davis Jr.

"Fraudulent use, apparently somewhat deliberate and somewhat innocent, arose from a report that Davis had authorized the use of his credit card number by university students throughout the country," Moulton said.

He said the facts of the case are that Davis was not involved. The credit card number did not belong to him. It was assigned to another customer.

Moulton said, "Operators around the country have been alerted to the fraudulent number and persons attempting to use it will be reported to the central investigating unit in Los Angeles."

The Daily Egyptian contacted a security agent for the Pacific Telephone Company of Los Angeles and was told that several SIU students will be contacted by letter and asked to pay for the calls they made using the credit card number. They will also be advised that it is a violation of state and federal statutes to tamper or make fraudulent calls against a telephone company.

The agent stressed that the telephone company does not want to prosecute but they will be forced if the telephone calls do not stop, or if the involved persons refuse to cooperate with the telephone company concerning payment for the calls.

If legal action is taken, the security agent said those persons who are convicted could be sent to prison, made to pay a fine, or both.

The agent advised those persons who are contacted by the telephone company to "comply with whatever is asked and stop making calls using the credit card number."

"We are just trying to save kids a lot of trouble," he said.

TV show features "God Squad" author

Charles Johnson, former Daily Egyptian cartoonist, will host a new television program produced by the SIU Broadcasting Service every Friday at 5 p.m.

The program, "Charlie's Pad," will feature an informal discussion of different aspects of cartooning with many illustrations by Johnson. The show, to be aired over channels 8 and 16, is expected to be nationally syndicated.

Johnson, now staff editorial cartoonist for the Southern Illinoisan, has a long history of cartooning experience.

He spent the summer of 1969 as a cartoonist for the Chicago Tribune. He has published more than 500 drawings around the country.

At 16, he studied under Lawrence Lariat, then cartoon editor of Parade Magazine.

Johnson introduced Daily Egyptian readers to two comic strips, "God Squad" and "The Trip," in addition to his many editorial cartoons.

Johnson's first complete book of cartoons, "Black Humor," is expected to go to press in February and his second book, "Laugh On," is near completion.

LISBON, Portugal — Gen. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu, who left Biafra Saturday as his 30-month insurrection crumbled, was reported in Lisbon Tuesday hoping to find eventual asylum in the Ivory Coast of West Africa. A reliable Biafran informant said Ojukwu was in hiding inside the Biafran mission.

WASHINGTON — The space agency announced Tuesday it plans to lay off employees, cut back saturn rocket production and stretch out moon mission schedules.

BOSTON — Republican Josiah A. Spaulding, 47, announced his candidacy Tuesday for the GOP nomination to oppose Sen. Edward M. Kennedy. He said he hopes the senator's auto accident on Chappaquiddick Island will not be a campaign issue.

TEL AVIV — Israeli planes bombed military positions deep inside Egypt Tuesday for the second time in a week, the military command reported.

NEW YORK — Favorite hymns of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. filled the air outside a Brooklyn antipoverty agency Tuesday, setting the tone for memorial services and tributes across the nation of the late Negro leader's birthday Jan. 15.

SAIGON — American troops, pursuing a North Vietnamese force in foothills west of Tam Ky, captured a freshly built base camp Tuesday in an area where enemy troop concentrations have been reported.

SPRINGFIELD III — A proposal that any persons holding office (created by the Constitution or by law) make full financial disclosure came Tuesday before the Illinois Constitutional Convention.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — The U.N. Children's Fund UNICEF made an emergency appeal Tuesday for public contributions of $2 million for aid to Biafra.

Activities and finances eyed

Panther party probed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A team of Justice Department lawyers operating under sealed orders from Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell is aiding a federal grand jury here in a broad-scale investigation of the national Black Panther party.

The scope of the inquiry has been expanded significantly since it began last May, according to government sources who would not allow use of their names. They said it centers at present on the party's finances and activities of its members.

Agnew jeered by protestors

CANBERRA, Australia (AP)—Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said Tuesday some Asian leaders criticize for public consumption the U.S. presence in their nations but privately say they want the Americans to stay.

"Most of the general impressions that come out of the Asian governments are not as forthcoming as their private consultations," Agnew told reporters on the 5 1/2-hour flight to Australia from Bali, Indonesia.

"They privately in official discussions indicate a very strong desire for continued American presence and assistance.

Small numbers of antiwar protesters and a group of supporters met Agnew as he arrived in Australia. He brought welcome news of a new meat import agreement and a warning against withdrawal from "the turbulence and uncertainties" of Asia.

Five persons were arrested during a round of heckling and shouting by about 100 demonstrators as Agnew laid a wreath at Australia's War Memorial. Some demonstrators later showed up at Agnew's hotel as he left for a dinner with Prime Minister John Gorton. He was welcomed at the Australian leader's residence by a small pro-U.S. demonstration.

Students and other antiwar protest groups concentrated their energies on a planned protest Wednesday when Agnew goes to Parliament House for meetings with Gorton and his Cabinet. Buses were reported bringing in some demonstrators from Sydney, 180 miles away.

WRAJ backs smut bill

ANNA, Ill. (AP) — A radio station manager who started a nationwide write-in campaign in support of a federal anti-smut bill says letters are coming in at the rate of a hundred a day.

Don Michel of radio station WRAJ in Anna, population 4,286 mailed a recording on Dec. 1 to the nearly 5,000 AM radio stations in the nation.

The stations were asked to play the record which in turn asked listeners to show their support for a bill introduced by the late Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois. It would allow U.S. District Court judges to have the final say as to what is obscene. It is still in committee.

Michel said more than 1,600 letters have been received at "S.O.S. for I.V. Washington, D.C."

He said the response picked up after the first of the year and letters have been received from 44 states.

$12 million gift banned by Nigerians

Biafran relief stalled by politics

LAGOS (AP)—A massive international effort to rush food to millions of Biafran tribesmen was stalled Tuesday despite the war's end as relief officials waited for approval of the Nigerian government.

The hitch in the relief program developed as 6,000 Biafran troops surrendered to the federal army as the first step toward abolishing Biafra as a political and geographic entity.

Nigerian troops moved in slowly to occupy the remains of Biafra, and Biafran leader, Maj. Gen. Philip Effiong, appealed to federal commanders to stop them, claiming that they were frightening civilians into fleeing.

Effiong urged military leaders not to forget the tension among his people that could easily turn into panic.

"The federal advance is contributing to this fear," he said.

Nigerian officials, plainly annoyed by what they regard as outside interference in their affairs, said the government has all the food it needs, but the problem was getting it to the stricken areas.

An estimated four million Ibo and other tribesmen in the bush are believed in need of food and medical aid.

Maurice Foley, Britain's minister for Africa, arrived to discuss the relief situation as refugee centers were set up to cope with the flood of refugees expected to pour out of the backwoods area. European advisers, helping the Nigerian Red Cross, said the agency could handle the relief problem, if their contingency plans are followed without interference.

British officials in London said Nigeria has temporarily banned flights of British military aircraft carrying mercy supplies into its territory.

The announcement came as Prime Minister Harold Wilson announced a government gift of $12 million for relief and rehabilitation work in Nigeria. This is in addition to the regular British commitment to Nigeria of $16.8 million in this current two-year program.

The ban was reported to have stemmed from annoyance of Nigerian authorities over publication of a secret assessment of the military situation in Nigeria recently made by Col. Robert Scott, military attache to the British High Commission in Lagos. The Nigerian government has ordered Scott to leave the country.

Julian Bond testifies at Chicago 7 trial

CHICAGO (AP) — Julian Bond, a member of the Georgia legislature, testified Tuesday that two men, charged in connection with the Democratic National Convention week disorders, told him several months before the convention that they feared violence in Chicago.

Bond, who was first elected to the legislature in 1965 but not seated until 1967, was not permitted to answer many of the questions asked by a defense lawyer, William M. Kunstler.

Bond said he met with Thomas E. Hayden and David T. Dellinger, two of the seven on trial, in Nashville, Tenn., the week of Dr. Martin Luther King's assassination. He said both men expressed to him their fear of violence at the time of the convention the following August.

Judge Julius J. Hoffman of U.S. District Court repeatedly upheld government objections that questions asked Bond were irrelevant. Bond said he talked with Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago about the violence in the streets during the convention but he was not permitted to repeat the conversation.

Later, Bond told newsmen, "I talked steadily to the mayor for 15 minutes... When I finished, all he said was, 'We have to keep the party together.'"

Bond said he was disappointed at the refusal of the court to allow him to answer questions.

"I've never been in a courtroom like that before," Bond said. "I've never seen a judge like that. They don't act like that in Georgia."

"I think the things I wanted to say, I should have been allowed to say," he added. "I didn't think they were irrelevant."

Bond said he has known Hayden, Dellinger and Kunstler a long time, "but that wouldn't prejudice me. I just happen to think they are right and the government is wrong."

Many of the questions which Kunstler asked concerned the alleged throwing of ash trays from the Conrad Hilton Hotel into Michigan Avenue. He tried to elicit from Bond testimony about occurrences on the 15th floor of the hotel where Bond said he was visiting the headquarters of Sen. Eugene McCarthy, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Many of the defendants laughed at the judge's rulings during Bond's testimony and defendant Rennie Davis muttered: "This trial is a joke."

Finch chirps

WASHINGTON (AP)—Welfare Secretary Robert H. Finch accused Congress Tuesday of preparing to scuttle the Nixon administration's welfare reform proposal.

Finch also assailed organized labor for not supporting the President's family assistance program more strongly.

Finch challenged Democrats in Congress to produce their own welfare reform plan and get to work on what he termed the pressing issue.

The administration wants to replace the present patchwork welfare system with a federally controlled family plan that would guarantee a family of four a minimum federal payment of $1,600 a year. Such a family would also receive $720 worth of food stamps.

Police say:
never used guns before

CHICAGO (AP) — Two policemen who participated in a raid in which two Black Panther leaders were slain said Tuesday they had never fired guns in the line of duty before the Dec. 4 mission.

Sgt. Daniel R. Groth and Patrolman Lynwood Harris testified at a coroner's inquest into the fatal shooting of the two men.

Fred Hampton, 21, Illinois leader of the Black Panther party, and Mark Clark, 22, a Peoria organizer for the Panthers, were killed.

In response to a question by a juror, Groth said he had never fired a weapon before in the line of duty during his 13 years with the Chicago police force. He said he fired two shots in the mission and believes he hit a woman occupant of the apartment.

Harris told Deputy Coroner Martin S. Gerber that he too had never fired a weapon during an assignment in his 14 years on the force. He did not say whether he fired any during the raid.

Groth, who is white, led 13 other Chicago policemen, detailed to the Cook County Chicago state's attorney's office, in the raid. Five of the officers, including Harris, are black.

Harris testified he was stationed outside the two-story apartment building on the West Side and helped to transport some of the illegal weapons allegedly confiscated to a special police truck.

Harris said he did not see anyone leave the building through a gangway on the side. There has been speculation that an unknown Panther member escaped the raid through an air vent.

Groth, concluding five days on the witness stand, was questioned by Dr. James Hicks, a physician and foreman of the jury, as to whether police weapons used in the raid were later tested ballistically.

Groth said no such tests were made.

hit the deceased?" Dr. Hicks said. "I don't know," Groth replied.

The jurors also heard a tape-recording confiscated at the apartment which allegedly contained instructions from a Panther leader to party members to resist with force policemen attempting to serve warrants.

Monday, Groth testified that police crime laboratory tests indicated some medical supplies seized in the apartment were illegal drugs.

X-rated films make money; quality and content blasted

NEW YORK (AP) — The controversial X-rating for movies is proving both a bonanza and a burden to the people who operate the nation's theaters.

The bonanza is obvious from the box-office success of the sex oriented films, both the ineptly made ones that make up with sex scenes what they lack in quality, and the fine film efforts which were given the rating because of what was considered excessive nudity or obscenity.

The burden is primarily one of moral responsibility. In enforcing the industry-devised rating system—an X-tag bars youngsters under 16, with local variations in age, from attending the movie under any circumstances.

For the theater owners and managers, the responsibility often conflicts with commerce, as they are faced with an overabundance of sex films, major productions as well as cheaper "nudies," and a lack of others.

Some of the nation's movie exhibitors have voluntarily refused to play X-rated films, but for the most part, circuit owners have opted in favor of commerce.

A recent survey by the Young National Association of Theater Owners (Young NATO), a small group of second-generation movie house owners, showed that between 1,000 and 1,500 theaters have declined to show X-rated films. In a questionnaire sent out last September to 13,000 theater managers, 47 per cent of the 3,164 who replied said they would not play X-films.

Of those who did play X-films, 70 per cent said they enforce the ratings restrictions and exclude all underage patrons.

Don Durwood, chairman of Young NATO, who runs movie houses in Kansas City, Mo., and other cities in the Southwest and West said he thought the number would be less now, because since the survey—in October and November, "there was not much else to play."

Durwood noted that most of those who declined the X-films were from cities of less than 100,000 population. "They're playing them in the larger cities," he said, "but these smaller situations have a lot of sensitive pressures."

The Young NATO members, as a result of the survey, recommended that the ratings system be modified to distinguish between X-rated pictures made strictly for exploitation and those made with serious artistic intent.

One of the pictures Durwood Theaters bypassed in Kansas City was "I Am Curious, Yellow," a sexually explicit Swedish film which has caused theater owners the greatest concern and still is the subject of court disputes in numerous cities.

Dick Smith, state manager of National General Corporation Fox Theaters, resigned his job to protest a Phoenix, Ariz., booking of "I Am Curious." Its American distributor, Grove Press, does not subscribe to the rating code of the Motion Picture Association of America, but has self-imposed an X restriction on the import.

"I feel anyone over 18 should have a right to see what he wants to see," Smith said at the time. "But that leaves us with the responsibility for using good common sense in what we present. There are places this type of picture can be played, but I don't feel the type of theaters our company operates should play them."

The man who runs the company disagreed, however. Irving Levin, president of the circuit parent, National General Corp., told a recent meeting of his company's theater division: "In these changing times, public tastes dictate.

We really do not set the standards. The people who come to be entertained do. If we do not play the pictures, our competition will. The sky's the limit when it comes to selling pictures to draw patrons," he said.

The public made successes of many X-rated films last year. "I Am Curious" grossed $6.6 million since it was released in the U. S. a year ago, more than $1 million of it in New York alone.

According to Variety, it was the 12th highest grossing film in the nation.

Another X-rated film, "Midnight Cowboy," ranked seventh, with an $11-million gross since release—last March.

The top-grossing film, however, was Disney's "The Love Bug," followed by the musical, "Funny Girl."

The majority choice of cash over cautious use of X-rated films by theaters was sharply attacked by Walter Reade, New York-New Jersey theater owner and head of a film distributing company that released the film version of "Ulysses."

"The X-classification," Reade said recently, "has inspired the production and release of trash the likes of which was undreamed of five years ago, even 18 months ago..."

"We all know how many times the X has been used to add to, rather than to restrict, the potential audience," he said.

Moulton: housing at SIU is coed

Most students do not think the housing system at SIU allows for coed living, but Wilbur N. Moulton, dean of students, does.

"Most of our facilities are coeducational, but other people don't look at them that way," Moulton said. Moulton said that coed living "means a lot of things to a lot of people." He said that a discussion of the issue was "complicated" because of the varying conceptions of the term. "I don't use the term because I don't find it meaningful," he said.

"Our situation (at SIU) is ideal," Moulton said. "What we have at Thompson Point, University Park and Brush Towers in terms of some universities is classified as coed living."

Moulton said that Brush Towers and the other residence areas named could be considered coeducational because they have living facilities for women and a commons building for dining and recreation.

He used the following example to explain his statement: "Schneider Tower is in a coed living facility. The men who live in Schneider Tower live in a coed living facility, but the building they live in is not a coed living facility."

"In my judgement," Moulton said, "Brush Towers constitutes a coed living facility."

Moulton said the University of Illinois has some living facilities where both men and women live in the same building, but are separated by floors. He said that in a high-rise complex, women live on the bottom floors and men live on the top floors. The elevators for use by women do not stop on floors where men reside and vice versa, he explained.

Moulton said that even though this building is being shared by men and women, he could not find much difference between this arrangement and the system used in living facilities at SIU.

"I don't feel that physical structure is so important," Moulton said, comparing housing systems of the two universities. He said the Brush Towers and University Park housing complexes "you have a facility for men, a facility for women and a commons building. If connected by brick and mortar, they make one building. If not, they make three separate buildings."

Moulton said many people feel that coeducational living is the practice of a man and woman living together in the same house or apartment, sharing the facilities.

When asked if this situation was in accordance with off-campus housing regulations, he said "No, this situation would be in violation of the off-campus housing regulations for undergraduates under 25 years old."

Moulton said the concept of coed living varied according to where a school is located. "Some southern universities feel that our situation is one of coed living," he said. He explained that some southern universities separated men and women's residence halls by placing them on opposite sides of the campus. In many of these universities, men and women do not share dining or recreational facilities," he said.

At one time, SIU was considered a great pioneer in coed living, when Thompson Point was built," Moulton said.

He also said "there should be closing hours for residence halls for security purposes, if nothing else."

"Residence halls are run primarily for people who live there," he said. "The lounges in these halls are not student unions—they are living rooms for residents and their guests."

Asked if he felt open visitation privileges would be extended at SIU, Moulton said most residence halls set their own requirements concerning the privilege. "Women's residence halls usually cut hours of open visitation. The privilege is much less extended in women's halls than in men's."

Dean Moulton and Chancellor Robert W. MacVicar turned down a proposal last week for coeducational study hours. The proposal, made by the SIU Student Senate, would have allowed each residence hall to submit a plan including times, regulations and procedures to their assistant area deans.

Moulton said he and the Chancellor had "some reservations" about the proposal.

Moulton was also asked if he felt any future residence halls would house both men and women.

"There has been some discussion of possible new residence facilities," he said. "If and when they are built, they will probably be of apartment-type." He said apartments are in "great demand."

Occasional coed studies

Harold Bloom, sophomore majoring in education, and Georgie Sitkoff, a freshman majoring in art, study together during an open house at Brush Towers. This is one of the few times males and females are allowed open visitation in dormitories.

Birth control crusader will speak

Bill Baird, director and founder of the New York Parent Aid Society, a non-profit birth control, abortion and narcotic center, will be the Convocation speaker at 1 p.m. Thursday in the SIU Arena.

Baird, known for his crusades to remove restrictions on birth control, is responsible for bringing the nation's first mobile clinic, the Plan Van, which assists mothers in poverty stricken areas, into Harlem and the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn. He is a consultant to the New York State Senate subcommittee on health and mental health as well as an adviser on birth control to the New Jersey Legislature. He also set up the only abortion referral clinic in New York, which last year helped 3,000 women.

Baird has been arrested several times for distributing birth control pills and information, but these arrests have led to revisions in birth control laws in several states. His latest arrest resulted in a three-month prison term for giving a birth control device to a Boston University coed, in violation of the Crimes against Chastity Laws.

This decision was appealed to the Massachusetts Supreme Court, where it was upheld, and is now pending before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Population worries students

"From SIU, ZPG to the world," is the motto of a campus organization concerned with the problem of overpopulation. The SIU chapter of Zero Population Growth became an official campus organization in July, and is becoming one of the most popular organizations on campus, said Bruce Petersen, an assistant professor of zoology and faculty adviser for the group.

Zero Population Growth (ZPG) was started at SIU by Mark Hansen, a graduate student in health education, who is also president of ZPG.

"The purpose of ZPG is to stabilize America's population by 1980," Hansen said. "If we don't, America will face mass starvation in our time." Hansen stated that ZPG does not want to discourage people from having babies, but "to discourage them from having unwanted babies."

"Research indicates that most people don't want a lot of children but do have a lot. We plan to educate as many as possible to the different birth control devices."

Hansen announced plans to send three busloads of students to a teach-in called "Project Survival" at Northwestern University Jan. 23.

"The teach-in will be divided into 21 different study sections devoted to the problems in overpopulation," Hansen said. "Among the speakers to be hosted are Dr. Paul Erlich, national chairman of ZPG and author of "The Population Bomb," Adlai Stevenson III, and Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott."

Hansen characterized "Project Survival" as a free program with a crash course aimed to detour our deteriorating environment. The cost of the trip will be under $15 and a person does not need to be a member of ZPG to attend, Hansen said.

ZPG plans to establish a birth control clinic in Carbondale made up of volunteer workers who would give advice and aid to couples desiring to limit their number of children, Hansen said. ZPG also plans to send complimentary copies of "The Population Bomb" to parents who recently have had birth notices published in the Southern Illinoisian.

The cost of becoming a member of ZPG is $4, which entitles every member to a monthly ZPG newsletter.

Mobile Museum to be shown

SIU will unveil its new Mobile Museum here Jan. 26 before University dignitaries and officials of the Illinois Central Railroad which is furnishing the "piggy-back" trailer housing the display.

Darrel Harrison, curator, said the trailer will be stationed first at University School on the campus and will be open for tours by school children and general public Jan. 27-30. The following week it will be taken to Lewis School and then to Thomas School, both in Carbondale.

It will then start its tour of Southern Illinois schools spending several days to a week at each location, Harrison said.

The current display is on science and technology. In succeeding years, completely new displays will be developed on agriculture and business, behavioral sciences, expression and communication, and higher education. Each is geared to the successive themes of the University's centennial period.

Ribbon-cutting ceremonies will be at 1:30 p.m. on Jan. 26, Harrison said. Invited guests will tour the Mobile Museum, inspecting its 15 mini-exhibits. Many of them are backed up with slide shows, film and other informative and instructional materials. A luncheon at University Center will precede the ceremonies.

Male glee club recital scheduled for Sunday

The University Male Glee Club will present a recital at 3 p.m. Sunday in the University Center Ballrooms.

Robert Kingsbury will conduct the program featuring selections by Luboff, Hassler, Poulenc and Schuetz.

Peace committee to elect officers

The Southern Illinois Peace Committee (SIPC) will hold a meeting at 9 p.m. Wednesday in Browne Auditorium to elect officers for the quarter and to discuss the Feb. 20-21 protest of the Center for Vietnamese Studies and Programs.

According to Dorothy Dillon, persons who wish to take an active part in SIPC may pay $1 at the Wednesday meeting which will entitle the person to vote in all elections.

Lab coat infected

The Department of Microbiology announced Tuesday the lab coat reported missing Monday from the Life Science building was not exposed to radiation, but was infected with a virus which may cause illness to the wearer.

The coat, size 42, bears a red SIU emblem. Anyone having information concerning the coat should contact the SIU Security Office.

Urban Semester program

Los Angeles new USC classroom

By Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES—Interested in earning a Ph.D. in smog? Or in the mathematics of water pollution?

Student demands for relevancy in education, uttered amid the flames of burning buildings and in a time of war, have inspired a new educational program at the University of Southern California.

USC has taken Black Panthers, authors, film-makers and mayors and turned them into a heady educational brew.

What they've done, in effect, is to turn the city into a schoolroom.

USC students have reacted enthusiastically to their little-publicized program, the Urban Semester.

Students receive 14 units of credit for attending the Urban Semester. It is not necessary—nor recommended—that they take any other classes.

At the heart of the program is a two-week period that students have nicknamed the "Plunge."

Students go into the city and examine it in terms of their own fields of interest. One mathematics major, for instance, did a mathematical analysis of water pollution.

A USC coed became so enthusiastic about smog after her two-week Plunge (she is not a native) that she decided to go for her Ph.D. in it.

She is now studying at the University of Pennsylvania.

And a third USC student went to San Francisco and followed the San Francisco Chronicle's city hall reporter around on his beat.

The program, now in its third year, is a "twofold effort," according to Meryl Ruoss, director.

"It is a response to student unrest," he said, "through the educational process, and an experiment in undergraduate education—and it really is an experiment. We approach it differently each semester."

The purpose of the semester, according to Ruoss, is to give the student an understanding of the urban environment.

Ruoss hopes the program "will bring a new and dynamic dimension to whatever field he (the student) would like to specialize in."

Protesters invade British sports world

By Copley News Service

LONDON—The tour of Britain by the South African Rugby team, the Springboks, has aroused more domestic passion and controversy than Vietnam, Nigeria and most of the other critical world issues of 1969.

Many Britons feel that left-wing protest has gone too far; whatever the principle involved it has invaded sacred turf to prevent a man from enjoying his favorite sport—and a traditional one, at that.

For the protesters themselves—mainly students—the tour has provided a welcome opportunity to blow a hole in South Africa's hated apartheid (racial separation) policy and what they regard as British hypocrisy toward it.

For the government, the affair presents something of a quandary: though naturally committed to maintaining law and order and protecting the Rugby fan's rights, they cannot very well crack down on a protest movement which supports Britain's official condemnation of apartheid.

The result is that after running head-on into adverse government policy on other major issues this year, the demonstrators are for once running with the government against a huge belt of popular feeling. And sport in Britain may never be quite the same again.

The all-white Springboks have been touring Britain and Europe for many years, and even those people who regard Rugby football as simply a display of brute force would admit that their strength, speed and skill on the field are really something to watch.

Yet it has been argued constantly that they represent apartheid in a nutshell; the black majority in South Africa cannot play football with the whites and cannot get on the Springboks' team, so how can the Springboks represent the nation of South Africa?

And how can British officials condemn apartheid on one hand and invite segregated all-white teams to play here?

The South Africans, and certain British sporting groups, argue that politics should be kept out of sports.

But South Africa itself drew attention to apartheid sport last year when it refused to accept Basil D'Oliveria, the England Cape black cricketer, in an M.C.C. team about to go over on a test tour. D'Oliveria was dropped from the team, but a storm of protest led to the tour being canceled.

The students have taken up that protest and turned it into a full-blooded campaign aimed at forcing South Africa to integrate its sport—thereby weakening its racial policy as a whole—or withdraw from international Rugby football and cricket. Their tactics have been to demonstrate with banners and placards and shouts of "Seig Heil!" at Springboks' matches here and to invade the pitches in an attempt to halt the matches altogether.

Because there is a wide social and intellectual gulf between radical students and the average Rugby football enthusiast, it was natural from the moment the Springboks set foot in England on this tour that there was trouble to come. Things finally got out of hand at Swansea, at the heart of traditional Welsh Rugby, when dozens of demonstrators poured onto the pitch and halted the match.

Despite the fact that there were 1,000 police on hand to keep the peace the demonstrators—staging sit-ins in the middle of the pitch—were attacked by 100 Rugby club "stewards" backed up by what The Times described as "unnecessarily rough, self-appointed strongmen."

The result was some of the most disturbing violence seen in Britain since the anti-Vietnam clashes around the U.S. Embassy in London two years ago.

Live television broadcasts showed the "stewards" and some police pushing the demonstrators into crowds of spectators who set about beating them up.

In the aftermath, a police spokesman commented that "it might have been preferable if they (the 'stewards') had left it all to us. We are, after all, trained for this sort of thing." Daily newspaper reaction was divided along liberal and conservative policy lines—the reporter from The Times writing: "I came away from an unhappy occasion convinced that to use ordinary people to discipline fellow members of the public sets a dangerous precedent."

If the aim of the demonstration had been to force the government to call off the Springboks' tour for fear of further violence, it failed.

But the demonstrators won moral support from the Home Secretary, Jim Callaghan, who told the House of Commons that he himself was not planning to watch any of the Springboks' matches because of his opposition to apartheid. And he called a conference of police chiefs at which it was decided that the police, not the Rugby club "stewards," would control future demonstrations.

Callaghan also ruled that it was "not the duty of stewards to dissuade demonstrators from shouting. Everybody," he said, "is entitled to demonstrate against the government or anybody else." He also lifted the blame for violence off "genuine groups deeply opposed to apartheid" and onto "the usual job lot of anarchists tagging along creating trouble and fomenting violence."

Frosh cagers illude Bradley with narrow 66-65 victory

SIU's freshman basketball team came up with the necessary one point to win Saturday's contest with Bradley in Peoria.

The frosh snapped back from a four point deficit with one minute remaining to tie the score at 64-64 on a basket by guard John Marker at the 40 second mark.

Bradley was called for a charging violation with 14 seconds remaining. Forward Charles Johnson put in both free throws to put SIU up by two points.

A foul at the buzzer gave Bradley an opportunity to come back but they seized only the first of two opportunities to put the game into overtime.

The hard earned win came on the second leg of a five game "away" schedule. Frosh coach Jim Smelser, worried about the effect of a poor performance against Missouri Baptist on their first road trip, saw his crew raise their record to 4-1.

The freshmen shot at a .532 rate, an improvement over their .296 rate achieved against the Missourians—and took a 31-26 edge into the dressing room at halftime.

The Saluki frosh again sported the balanced scoring attack that has become their watchword as all five starters came through with solid performances. Larry Lingle led the frosh with 16 points; Don Portugal followed with 15; and Nat Hawthorne and John Marker both added 11 points.

Tournament week registration ends

The University Center Programming Board is sponsoring a Tournament Week January 18-23. Events are bridge, bowling, billiards, table tennis and chess. There is no fee. Deadline for signing up is today. All undergraduate and graduate students with at least a 3.0 overall average are eligible to enter.

Sign-up sheets are available in the University Center at the Information Desk, in the Student Activities Offices, T-39, at Thompson Point, University Park and YTI.

Pairings will be ready Friday. Anyone wishing to officiate at the games may contact the Student Activities Office.

Salukis hope for victory at Evansville

By Mike Klein

Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

The road back to victory and the winner's circle will hopefully be followed tonight as the Salukis play their third of five consecutive away games in a contest at the University of Evansville. Like the Salukis, the Purple Aces have had good and bad moments in a season that has thus far given them a 5-6 record.

Highlighting the Purple Ace schedule to date have been a 80-78 victory over Purdue and a 75-73 victory over St. Joseph's of Pennsylvania. The trend was reversed when the University of Colorado, last year's Big Eight winner, dumped the Purple Aces 97-66.

Layne Holmes, a holdover from the 1968-69 squad, is the leading Purple Ace scorer and rebounder. The 6-5 forward has a scoring average of 15.1 points per game with an 11.1 per game rebound average.

Sophomore Don Buse "is definitely a key to our ballclub at guard," according to sports publicity director Bob Hudson. The 6-3 first year varsity player is averaging 12.6 points as the Evansville playmaker.

The Purple Aces employ a basic patterned offense and a man to man defense. Hudson said Evansville would "play our regular game and let the chips fall where they may."

The Salukis must correct their rebounding deficiencies because they face extremely tough teams in Evansville, Tulsa and nationally ranked Marquette over the next three contests.

Center Juarez Rosborough doesn't have the height or muscle power to compete adequately, but his experience and .591 shooting average make it hard to keep him out of the lineup.

Conversely, Rosborough has shot only 67 times. L.C. Brasfield leads the team with 157 attempts.

One possible, but as yet publically unmentioned or tried solution, would be to put Brasfield and John Garrett at guards, Bruce Butchko and sophomore Stan Powles at forwards and Rosborough at center.

This would leave the Salukis with a strong bench led by Rex Barker, Bob Eldridge and Greg Starrick.

This combination would provide the Salukis with the added rebounding punch but the offensive playmaking might suffer without Barker.

Coach Jack Hartman said early in the season that he would have a hard time settling on a starting five that could play all phases of the game successfully and it seems he will continue to have the problem for some time.

Rebound recovery

L.C. Brasfield made a complete turnabout from his scoreless performance against Georgia Tech by scoring 16 points and grabbing five rebounds. The junior forward grabbed this rebound in the Texas University game. Rex Barker, no. 13, watches in the foreground.

Swim team prepares for weekend meets

By Bob Richards
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

SIU swimming coach Ray Essick began sending his team through two workouts a day Monday in preparation for dual meets with Oklahoma and Cincinnati this weekend.

The step-up in workouts is part of a six-week hard training period designed to prepare the Salukis for their dual meet Jan. 31 against Ohio State and ultimately, the NCAA championships.

"We swam a lot better than usual for right after Christmas," said Essick following SIU's 66-38 loss to Michigan and fifth-place finish in the Big Ten Relays.

Essick was pleased with Rob Dickson in the Wolverine dual match. "Dickson swam a great double, swimming the individual medley and the 200-yard butterfly with only a fifteen-minute interval," said the Saluki coach. Dickson's time in the 200-yard individual medley 2:01.92 broke a six-year-old school record of 2:02.6 in the event.

Against the Wolverines, SIU's 400-yard medley relay team finished second, just two seconds off the school record. The contingent of Bill Tingley, John Holben, Steve Dougherty and Vern Dasch finished in 3:39.76 to Michigan's 3:38.11.

Tim Hixon and Bruce Steiner were second and third in the 1000-yard freestyle. Hixon had his best competitive time of the season, turning in a 10:16. Steiner has the flu and was being fed intravenously Tuesday at the SIU Health Service, according to Essick.

Bob Schoos and Fernando Gonzalez combined for SIU's only sweep against the Wolverines in the 200-yard freestyle.

Dasch was second in the 50-yard freestyle with a time of 22.67, SIU's fastest competitive time in that event this year.

Diver Don Cashmore took a third in his specialty on the Michigan one-meter board. His point total was 194.95.

Schoos placed third in the 100-yard freestyle although the winner, Bob Zann of Michigan, finished less than a second before him.

Tingley set a school record in the 200-yard backstroke as he churned his way to a 1:59.41.

Gonzalez came back to win the 500-yard freestyle in 4:54. It bettered the Ecuadorian's losing time Dec. 12 against Indiana, by over a second.

Breast-stroker Graham Edwards was second in the 200-yard event in 2:16.88, improving from the Indiana meet by almost two seconds.

The 400-freestyle relay team of Bruce Windast, Schoos, Dickson and Dasch lost to the Wolverines in 3:17.98.

Intramural basketball schedule

The following games are scheduled for play today in intramural basketball action.

Games to be played in the SIU Arena are:

6:45 p.m., 69ers vs. Abbott Rabbits, Court 1; The Coming Thing, vs. Tower Ten Terrors, Court 2; Brown III Gods vs. Bruskies, Court 3; 9:15 p.m., Shawnee Hall vs. God Squad, Court 1; Mob vs. Pogo Buskeds, Court 2.

Last day to sign up for trip

All persons wishing to travel to Milwaukee Saturday to watch the basketball game between SIU and Marquette, must have their reservation made tonight for the charter bus trip.

Buses are being chartered from the Gulf Transport Company for the trip. Cost for the trip, a game ticket and over night lodging will be $23-$25 per person according to a spokesman for the Saluki Loyalists, sponsors of the trip. All interested persons should contact the Saluki Loyalists at 457-2169 or 549-6828.
