Town meeting centers on SIU-C'dale relations

By David Mahman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU and its relation to Carbondale was the major topic of discussion Tuesday night at Carbondale's first "town meeting," but there was a noticeable lack of complaints and suggestions from city residents concerning the operation of the city.

A resident of Northeast Carbondale, Mrs. Ima Valentine, blamed the lack of criticism of city government which was sought by city officials—on a history of no response when complaints were voiced in the past. She said that many people stayed at home, thinking that their complaints would not be heard and acted upon at the meeting.

Norvell Hanyes, director of citizen participation for the Northeast Congress, said that if the Carbondale City Council does not listen to problems when they arise, the people will seek new avenues to solve their problems. He said that to many residents, the town meeting is only a show.

Another city resident, Harold Maines, said that an overwhelming majority of those present at the meeting were young people too polite to air their grievances. He added that

Faculty Council okays change in GPA graduation regulations

By Larry Haley
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Faculty Council approved recommendations Tuesday to change the undergraduate grade point average for graduation requirements and restricted grade averages transferred from other colleges and universities.

The recommendations were made by Harry Soderstrom, a council member representing the Admissions and Undergraduate Requirements Committee.

Soderstrom said the committee proposed that starting summer quarter, transferred grades shall not be used in determining students calculated grade point average. However, transfer students will still be admitted to the University on probation, but will be required to earn a 3.0 average quarter by quarter. He will continue on probation until he has earned a total of 12 quarter hours, Soderstrom added.

The SIU Bulletin states the current requirements for transfer students to be "not more than one-fourth of the work accepted from each institution for application towards the number needed for graduation may be of D quality and any D work not so accepted, however, may be used to satisfy general University, academic unit or specific program course requirements."

In a parallel proposal to transferred grade point averages,

Soderstrom said, the committee also recommended that grade point averages for undergraduate graduations be modified so that "Each student must have an overall 'C' average and a 'C' average in the area of concentration."

Currently, students must have a C average and grades not lower than a C in subjects totalling at least three-fourths of the college work, Soderstrom pointed out.

Further proposals made by the committee to the Faculty Council included a proposal becoming effective with the 1971-72 academic year, that undergraduate graduation requirements regarding total hours be changed to eliminate the 64 senior college course requirement.

The committee recommended changing the Undergraduate Catalog for the Carbondale Campus to read: "Each candidate for the degree must complete a minimum of 152 hours of credit in approved courses. Students transferring from accredited two-year institutions must earn at least 96 quarter hours required for the degree at SIU or at any other approved four-year institution, except that these students must meet the residence requirements for a degree from the university."

The current catalog states that each candidate for graduation must complete the 152 hours of credit in approved courses and 90 hours in general studies. The candidate must also have at least 64 hours in senior 300 or 400 college courses, Soderstrom said.

The committee also advocated that the 36 senior college level requirements be eliminated from the residence requirements as currently stated in the Undergraduate Catalog.

The Faculty Council also approved the committee's recommendation to amend the requirements for a second bachelor's degree. Soderstrom said the committee recommended that students desiring a second bachelor's degree must complete 48 hours in addition to those required for the first degree and must fulfill the requirements for the second degree. Of these 48 hours, a minimum of 16 must be taken in residence at the University and a maximum of 16 may be taken through correspondence courses.

"If a student received his first bachelor's degree from another university, however," the recommendation states, "then 48 hours in residence are required to fulfill the requirement for the second bachelor's degree."

James N. BeMiller, chairman of the Faculty Council, said the council's approval of the proposed changes for graduation requirements would be passed on to Chancellor Lauer for approval.

The council also approved the committee's recommendation that the Spring Average Deficiency policy, which has become outdated, be eliminated, beginning spring quarter, Soderstrom added.

Brewton faces murder charge

CAIRO, Ill. (AP)—Alexander County officials today issued a murder warrant for the arrest of James P. Brewton, 29, of Chicago in connection with the Nov. 7 shooting of Wiley Anderson of Cairo.

Brewton, a former SIU student, has been charged in Jackson County for the shooting of Carbondale policeman Larry Davis in September. Brewton has also been charged with armed robbery in connection with a hold-up during the summer at Trueblood Hall in University Park.

Jackson County State's Attorney Richard Richman said Tuesday that action by the county will depend on Brewton's physical condition and charges pending against him in Cook County.

Anderson died in a Denver,

Colo., hospital several days after he was shot several times in Cairo. The shooting occurred near the Pyramid Courts area, a predominantly black housing project in Cairo.

Anderson, 21, was home on leave from the military at the time he was shot. He was removed from local hospitals to Denver in order to be placed in a military hospital.

Brewton is suffering from gunshot wounds received in a shootout with Chicago police and is hospitalized in that city.

Brewton is charged with attempted murder and possession of a stolen weapon in connection with the Chicago shooting.

The warrant issued today is signed by a state police investigator who has been investigating the death of Anderson.

Study may reduce SIU bus service

The Saluki Bus Service may face a reduction in operation in the future. Carlton F. Rasche, director of Auxiliary Services and Enterprises, said a study of the operation has been made and will be submitted to the Chancellor's Office for consideration.

Rasche said, "We have lost money hand over fist on several of the lines, particularly in the southwest area (of Carbondale). Money has also been lost on the green bus route which operates in the north part of the city, according to Rasche.

The financial loss may cause fewer stops during the day and less service at night, Rasche said.

The Saluki Bus service runs five routes which serve most of Carbondale.

"This was an experiment," Rasche said, "so we have studied it very carefully."

Rasche said that if changes in operation are made, new schedules will be printed and bus drivers will have copies.

Senate to discuss bill on coed study hours

New bills to be introduced at Wednesday's Student Senate meeting include a bill for the extension of coed study hours in dormitories. The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. in Trueblood Hall at University Park.

Nick Fera, student government administrative assistant and sponsor of the bill, said the original coed study hours bill, G17, had restrictions placed on it for a trial period. "We feel that coed study hours have functioned satisfactorily during this period, and it is time to institute the original bill."

Some of the extensions will allow a greater choice of hours and closed doors during the study hours. Other bills to be introduced at the meeting include a mandate to the Community Affairs Committee to study possible uses of the University House, including use as an annex to SIU's Health Service. A bill will be introduced suggesting the placement of a nonvoting student on SIU's Board of Trustees. The student would be selected by the student body Senate president with the approval of the Student Senate. The bill also asks that the feasibility of granting the student voting power on the board be investigated.

The meeting will also feature a community report on the Carbondale Food Cooperative by a member of the group, and a report from Tom Scherschel, student body president.

Bomb call halts talk temporarily

A bomb scare temporarily interrupted a lecture on Buddhism in Vietnam. The lecture, which was sponsored by the Center for Vietnamese Studies, was halted at 8:30 p.m. by security police to search the room. Lawson 121.

An anonymous caller told a Daily Egyptian reporter that there was a bomb set to go off in Lawson at 8:30 p.m. The call came at 7:39 p.m.

During the search several members of the audience left. Classes in the building were informed of the threat and given the option of leaving although the building was not evacuated.

After the meeting resumed at 8:13 p.m. security police continued to search other parts of the building.

Many young seek relevance with the days of yester-year

NEW YORK (AP)—With the 1930s a generation behind, that turbulent decade is coming under scrutiny by the producers of books, records, movies and television.

What began as camp and nostalgia and campus veneration of such antiheroes as Humphrey Bogart is turning into a search by many young people for a contemporary relevance to the period.

"I think the underlying interest in the '30's now is a fear that we are going into another depression. A fear that we are going to drop off into space," said Jac Venza, executive producer of "The Thirties," a six-part examination by National Educational Television of the dramatic literature and movies of the time.

"A lot of people have lost their jobs and a lot of intellectually prepared young people are for the first time facing the apple-stand-on-the-street thing. It is a fear, not reality, but people are worried."

Venza said, "The key to it is not a bunch of old people turned on by nostalgia. What interests me is that it's the young people who are buying the books and the records and going to the old films.

"For our segments on the Hollywood film I sent the two youngest people on our staff to Hollywood. I thought this was the way to go about it, to make sure it wasn't a memory lane piece."

The series, which is a part of "NET Playhouse" and will be seen on public television stations, opens Thursday, Jan. 28, with Arthur Miller's stark portrait of blue collar life in the '30's, "A Memory of Two Mondays." The cast is headed by Jack Warden and Estelle Parsons, who won an Academy Award for "Bonnie and Clyde."

The following Thursday it will be "Hard Travelin'" by Millard Lampell, a series of acid-toned vignettes about the exploiters and the exploited of the depression. Ralph Meeker stars.

Another segment is "Movie Crazy" and is a blend of interviews with excerpts from such films as "Little Caesar," "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," "Public Enemy," "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," "Captain Blood," "Charge of the Light Brigade," "Jezabel," "Cabin in the Cotton" and "Gold Diggers of 1933."

Ogilvie plays political game

The current furor over the estate of the late Secretary of State Paul Powell has been brought a little closer to home because of the role SIU-Edwardsville Chancellor John S. Rendleman plays in the matter.

Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie recommended over the weekend that Rendleman resign. The far reaching results of this suggestion could prove damaging to SIU for a long time to come.

Gov. Ogilvie is playing political hopscotch with the Powell-Rendleman question. Early last week the governor and Atty. Gen. William Scott said Rendleman is guilty of no wrongdoing. Ogilvie's latest eruption seems to imply otherwise.

Locally, Ogilvie has an important wedge that he could drive into the SIU Board of Trustees regarding this matter. He has three appointments to make to the Board within the next month. The Board's position on the chancellor could play a big part in those appointments. If three new men are tapped, Ogilvie would have a four to three majority on the Board.

There had been speculation, until recently, that Ogilvie intended to break up the "Southern banker" majority on the Board with the appointment of younger, more liberal men, including a black and someone from the Cook County area. This speculation is up in the air now, depending on how hard he wants to push the Rendleman issue.

If the governor were to appoint three political hacks whose sole purpose would be to seek the ouster of Rendleman, SIU could very well suffer a grave setback in terms of future development. The issue of Rendleman's head on a GOP platter versus the future of a major university could hang in the balance.

The best thing Ogilvie could do is lower his voice and let legitimate investigation take place instead of playing judge and jury in the matter. Before the governor becomes too deeply mired in a mud slinging purge, with an eye on the ballot box, he might do well to examine the fate of the state's last GOP candidate for the U.S. Senate. This might serve as a very realistic guide for Ogilvie.

The loss of John Rendleman would go much further than the loss of a very competent university administrator. It would be most unfortunate for the University and the people of the state if a few Board members chose to dance to the tune played by a man who in all likelihood has less than two years in his current position.

Rendleman: victim of advice

John Rendleman seems to have a knack for putting himself on the spot. Maybe this is because in his concern for others he doesn't like to bore the public with minor details about some of the things he does with money.

A couple of years ago it was decided that then President Morris would need a new house because his was in the path of the still-dreamed-of Humanities Building.

This probably wasn't Rendleman's decision but he took on the job like a trouper. Somebody told him it was a relocation and not an original building, which relieved him of the hassle of going to the Illinois State Board of Higher Education for funds or letting bids.

Unfortunately, the tab for that monumental edifice ran somewhat over what is generally spent on a house and there were a few people in high places who couldn't help wishing he had mentioned something about it.

Today all that's left of that fiasco is a President Emeritus, somewhere, and a new building on the campus map. That new building, by the way, is the Humanities Building. . . the house hasn't made it on the map yet although it is nearly done.

It might be expected that the good chancellor from Edwardsville would have learned the error of his ways.

But fate worked against him. Just as SIU's "public relations" men were figuring out a way to uplift our riot-torn image, Paul Powell, secretary of state, died. Bad timing, to be sure, but it couldn't be helped.

Into the fold at a moment of crisis jumped our hero, Chancellor Rendleman. He must have jumped head first because it seemed to give him a slight case of amnesia. As executor of Powell's estate, he forgot for some two months to tell the public about finding some money the late gentleman had stashed away for harder times. Poor soul, when it hit the fan, he must have known that he'd blown it again.

Now a state senator from Murphysboro wants Rendleman out. What he and others don't understand is that he was working on advice, probably given to him in good faith by the same guy who explained the difference between construction and relocation.

University House: home for Stone's lost causes?

To the Daily Egyptian

During your recent series highlighting the ambiguities surrounding the University House, one question was not raised. I would like to know, from Chancellor Laver or from whoever the appropriate authority may be, why the University doesn't turn the house over to its rightful and legal owner, W. Clement Stone or the Stone Foundation?

It seems to me that turning the house over to the man or foundation that paid for it would solve a number of embarrassing problems. First of all, Chancellor Laver would not have to trouble himself with whether or not the University really owns the structure, the University would not have to borrow money to furnish the building and the University would be relieved from what will doubtless become rather substantial maintenance costs during the coming years.

Furthermore, if the University were to cede the house and the surrounding parking lot to the city, Carbondale could obtain a much needed revenue boost by taxing the house at the normal rate for homes in the Tower Road area. Surely the real estate taxes on an unfurnished residence costing over $1,000,000 would be substantial.

Finally, Mr. Stone might put the building to use as something of a half-way home for all the lost causes he has supported in 1970. Doubtless the men involved would welcome the obscurity surrounding the University House.

'Airport' heads Variety's list

Money-makers seldom critics' choice

By Dave Daly
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Oddly enough, or perhaps not so oddly, the motion picture that earns the most money is not always a critical success.

"The Sound of Music" made a fortune but nearly all the critics hated it. "Airport" made money and was soundly panned by many reviewers.

Variety, one of the industry's top trade papers, has compiled a list of 1970's top money making motion pictures. The list is based on films whose domestic earnings (United States and Canada) total at least $1 million during the calendar year.

It is interesting to note that none of the new list's 10 films were X-rated. But perhaps a partial explanation is that an X-rating cuts down the number of people who may see the film, thus restricting the picture's gross.

Producers usually like to have the less restrictive ratings for this reason. That is why, for example, the distributors of David Lean's latest epic, "Ryan's Daughter," appealed the original R-rating and got the less restrictive GP-rating.

Leader of the 1970 money-maker list was Universal Picture's "Airport," an unabashed G-rated family film harkening back to old-style Hollywood pictures which has become producer Ross Hunter's specialty. Hunter is responsible for "Tammy," "Imitation of Life," "Madame X," etc.

"Airport" has grossed more than $37.6 million since its release last March, way ahead of any other picture.

"Hotel," another film based on an Arthur Hailey novel but not so successful at the box-office a few years ago when it was first released, has been reissued in an attempt to cash in on the success of "Airport."

The only other G-rated film in Variety's top 10 was "Hello, Dolly!" This Barbra Streisand musical is actually a failure by financial standards when one compares the cost of the film (over $10 million) with its gross ($13 million) yet it earned its place on the top ten list.

A number of GP-rated films have achieved box-office favor.

The war biography "Patton," which starred George C. Scott proved financially rewarding. Despite the country's anguish over involvement in war, "Patton" managed to do well thanks to Scott's incisive portrayal of the military mind at work.

"Cactus Flower," "On Her Majesty's Secret Service" and "The Reivers" all reached the top ten in earnings.

The more "relevant" films which caught the eye of the under-30 paying audience and received R-ratings were "M-A-S-H," "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice," "Woodstock" and "Catch-22" yet "The Landlord," "The Baby Maker" and "The Strawberry Statement" failed financially.

Many of these films were released early enough to be considered for last year's Academy Awards. They cannot be in contention again, which would explain why many of them were not mentioned on the New York Film Critics Award list released recently.

Only "Patton" appeared on both lists and George C. Scott was responsible for that, earning him the Best Actor award from the critics.

The N.Y. Critics gave the Best Picture award to "Five Easy Pieces," Jack Nicholson's film which also made Bob Rafelson Best Director and Karen Black Best Supporting Actress.

For her role in "Women In Love," Glenda Jackson was named Best Actress. Authentic Indian Chief Dan George received the award for Best Supporting Actor for his work in Arthur Penn's "Little Big Man," the truth behind Custer's Last Stand.

With so many "big" pictures released at Christmas, it is difficult to predict which films are destined for success—either financial or critical. But it now seems obvious that "Love Story" is going to follow closely behind "The Graduate."

Right up at the top of recent high grosses is Barbra Streisand's R-rated "The Owl and the Pussycat." The big-budgeted "Tora! Tora! Tora!" is also doing quite well.

These films are sure to be considered for Academy Awards but once again, there doesn't have to be any connection between popular profitable films and the award winners.

Walt Disney Studios can tell you all about that.

An editor's outlook

'Not-Now Generation' works ahead

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones
Los Angeles Times Syndicate

They finally got the first towboat up the $1.2 billion Arkansas-Verdigris waterway to the Port of Tulsa and maybe this is the time to pay a little tribute to the Not-Now Generation.

The Not-Now Generation can be defined as those people who work their hearts out for things they may never see or enjoy. This is in contrast to the Now Generation which wants its kicks now.

Sen. Bob Kerr wasn't along on that triumphant ride up the 440-mile chain of lakes, locks and canals from the Mississippi to Oklahoma. Nor was Newt Graham, nor Congressman David Terry of Arkansas. They are all dead.

Whether the navigation project is a gigantic boondoggle, as its opponents charge, or whether it will open up new horizons of prosperity for a whole area of America that has sat upon a high freight-rate plateau, it represents 35 years of planning, promotion and agitation. And in 35 years a lot of people die.

So most of the gray heads are gone who gathered in little groups even before World War II to throw their weight behind what seemed the remotest hope. They'll never see the gates open or hear the whistles.

The majority of them knew they never would but they worked anyway.

The great projects of humankind are built by people who struggle for what they'll never see.

Eighteen popes died between the beginning of St. Peter's Basilica and its completion. So did five of the chief architects.

When Pierre Charles L'Enfant, the French engineer who laid out Washington, D.C., died in 1825, his dream of noble vistas and broad malls was still a dream. Coaches and wagons bogged down in the bottomless mire of Pennsylvania Avenue. Pigs rooted around the domeless Capitol.

In 1840 Charles Dickens scoffed at Washington as a "city of magnificent intentions." Few of the handful of patriots who set out to raise money for the Washington Monument in 1848 lived to see it completed 36 years later.

John Roebling, incurably ill, sat swathed in blankets at the window of his Brooklyn home and watched the first cables spun for his Brooklyn Bridge. But he had been in his grave 14 years before it became a wonder of the world.

Great ideas achieve momentum slowly. Seven hundred years ago Friar Roger Bacon grew disgusted at the witchcraft and necromancy that passed for science and medicine. He advocated that things be tested, the results noted and spread abroad so that worthless theories could be discarded and promising clues followed up. This was to be, of course, the scientific method.

Yet centuries after Bacon was buried men were still trying to charm base metal into gold and even today in our universities some professors are starting with rigid premises and trying to find facts to fit them. But no one in history did more to lead man out of futility than this medieval monk.

A school is not a Now thing. It is a Not-Yet thing. It pays no quick dividends. It merely hopes to prepare a generation so that it can produce dividends. Elderly couples with no school-age children who pay taxes or make gifts to support schools cannot possibly personally benefit from these outlays. They are contributing to a future they will not see.

Contrast this behavior with the character who thinks he has a right to burn down a school because it doesn't meet his standards. Whatever it is he wants, he wants it Now.

Any given graveyard contains the corpses of three kinds of people—those who counted, those who by reason of early death, long disability or ignorance could hardly have counted and those who could have counted but didn't.

Of the three, the latter group is the deadest. Drive among the tombstones. Read the names of the people you remember who ate the rubber chicken and sat through the long committee meetings and panhandled for good causes and schemed for things that would improve the community.

Think of all the projects they worked for that lagged behind the undertaker or that still remain a future hope. Yet there lies interred the salt of the earth. There lies the Not-Now Generation.

Old Louis Pasteur, having yanked medicine into the modern age and having pointed out the way to defang the epidemic beast, had no time for self-congratulation. On his deathbed at Saint Cloud he murmured:

"So little time. So much to do."
Not now. Not for me. But for someday.

Clay sculptures by Nicholas Vergette frame this spectator at the Faculty Art Exhibit which opened Monday at Mitchell Gallery. The exhibit features 60 entries produced by 24 members of the SIU Department of Art. The exhibit is open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and will be presented until Feb. 8. It includes sculpture, paintings, mobiles and other objects created by the faculty members. (Photo by Dave Fitch)

Applications can be obtained to compete in Tournery Week

Applications are available in the Student Activities Office for students wanting to enter Tournery Week competition sponsored by the University Center Programming Board.

All the events—which range from chess to table tennis—will be held the week of Jan. 18-22 in the University Center. Any SIU undergraduate or graduate student is eligible to participate if the student has a 3.0 grade point average.

Winners of the Tournery Week events will advance to the regional tournament Feb 11-13 in Macomb. Winners there will go to national finals.

The events include bowling, three-cushion billiards, pocket billiards, bridge and table tennis.

'Just don't care'

Soldier morale droops as pull-out nears

SAIGON (AP)—The U.S. soldiers are clustered around something they found near their armored personnel carriers. It looks like a mine, and the lieutenant wants his men to scatter.

"Break it up there! Move! I said move..."

The men ignore him. The officer is frantic.

Finally a GI turns and gives him a cool stare. "Go to hell, lieutenant. I found this mine. It's mine. I gotta right to be here."

The men continue poking at the object with bayonets and discover it's just a harmless fragment from an illumination flare. They drift away.

"I can't figure out those guys," mutters the lieutenant.

"Morale is so bad they just don't care what happens to them."

Back at Fire Base Charlie 2, not far from the demilitarized zone, a captain thinks morale is "pretty damn good." But many of his men wear "FTA" signs on helmets and flak jackets or around necks. The initials stand for "F—the Army."

Everywhere in Vietnam you can find signs of insubordination in the line units, hopelessness in the rear and general disgust with the war—the way it's being fought, the way it isn't being fought, the reasons for its being fought at all.

Isolated pockets of high morale still exist in some elite combat outfits such as Marine sappers, volunteer Rangers, the pilots of helicopter gunships, and crack reconnaissance teams that take pride in being "swift, silent, deadly."

But their gung ho seems overshadowed by a general malaise among 335,000 U.S. troops who know they're going home and want to do it now. Washington says they can't so they take their rage out on officers, non-commissioned officers and sometimes themselves.

So many men smoke marijuana that Gen. Creighton W. Abrams has ordered a search and destroy campaign against it. Other men lose themselves, and sometimes die of hard drugs.

"Discipline is our biggest problem," says Sgt. I.C. Gene B. Tingley, 37, Madrid, Iowa.

"Discipline has got to be maintained and we're not maintaining it—and we haven't been for the past four years that I know of."

Tingley's men tried to frag him with five pounds of C4 explosive. They wounded two other men by mistake. The sergeant escaped unscathed.

"How can you discipline a man who feels he has nothing to lose?" asks medic Craig Osborne, Easton, Pa. "What can they do, send you to Vietnam?"

Osborne arrived as a private first class and now he's a private, period.

"Sure I was busted and I'm proud of it. I'm a civilian, I don't care about rank. I joined the Army because a judge told me to. It can't do nothing to me, man, except give me a bad-conduct discharge and send me home. I'd do anything to go home."

Some don't wait for discharge. Several hundred deserters hide in Saigon's back alleys, living a hand-to-mouth existence on black-market earnings. They have little chance of going home, but they seem to prefer living on the run to being a cipher in the green machine.

Abrams issued a staff order last September calling for a full-scale review of all factors affecting morale. Senior officers in his command are reluctant to discuss the problem, or tend to minimize it.

No panel comment on SIPC charge

By Paula Musto

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Members of the Blue Ribbon Panel investigating the Center for Vietnamese Studies said they would not comment on the statement Monday by the Southern Illinois Peace Committee (SIPC) which discredited the panel until their report is completed.

The SIPC statement charged that the panel, whose report is scheduled for completion later this month, merely serves to legitimize the Center.

Lewis Edwin Hahn, a faculty member and coordinator of panel material, said the charges that the panel did not listen to adequate testimony from critics of the Center are false.

"We listened and studied for many hours testimony from Center critics," Hahn said.

Hahn said the panel spent a great deal of time studying an extensive file of material on the Center prepared by the SIPC.

H.B. Jacobini, director of the Center, did not reply to criticism of the panel.

"I do not feel it would be appropriate for me to say anything while the Blue Ribbon Panel is still deliberating," Jacobini said.

Hahn said he hoped the report would be completed before the end of the month, but the recent "restatement of purpose" of the Agency for International Development grant, which funds the Center, has caused an additional factor to be considered.

WIDB's 'Anodyne' program lets listeners express opinions

"Anodyne" is not the latest cold remedy but rather a new approach to campus radio programming, according to Lew Wright, musical director of "Anodyne" at WIDB radio. Each Monday from 10 p.m. to 1 a.m., "Anodyne" gives students an opportunity to express their opinions on the air and ask questions of speakers featured on the program.

Wright said suggestions for speakers are welcome and should be directed to Nancy Petersen, Bruce Whiteside or Wright by calling WIDB at 536-2361.

WIDB is a carrier current radio station located in the basement of Wright 1 at University Park and serves campus dormitories in the area, Wright said.

Dorm conversion discussed

if more meetings are held the young people will give their ideas. "I'm with them," Maines said. His remark was followed by long applause, which was about the only response given all evening by the audience of about 100.

Jack Liebowitz, a senior at SIU, and former resident of Pyramids dormitory, asked what the city could do about obtaining refunds from Plains Leasing Co. Inc., allegedly due residents because of the early closure of SIU last spring. He asked if political pressure had been placed on the Council to deny students due process under law.

Councilman Hans Fischer said no pressure had been placed on him. He added there was no relation to the legislative function of the Council and court process, which must ultimately decide if a refund is due the students.

Liebowitz asked if it were wise for the Council to allow SIU to take over other dorms managed by Plains Leasing with court action pending.

Communists unable to mount Tet offensive-U.S. Command

SAIGON (AP) — U. S. Military sources said Tuesday the Communist command is unable to mount a Tet offensive this month against either Saigon or the heartland of South Vietnam.

They saw no enemy buildup of significant size for a drive at Tet, the lunar new year which starts Jan. 27, or even for a dry season offensive later in the spring.

Any new North Vietnamese campaign, military men say, is more likely to come in Cambodia or in Laos.

This appraisal, based on later intelligence reports, also was more generally expressed by Defense Secretary Melvin Laird.

On his departure from Saigon Monday after a four-day visit Laird said the enemy threat is less in South Vietnam than it was a year ago, the threat continues at about the same level in Cambodia, but has increased in Laos.

Adm Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff who accompanied Laird to Saigon, visited Cambodia. He said the situation there is deteriorating "but I don't think it is deteriorating as much as has been reported in the press."

Moorer conferred with Cambodia's premier, Lon Nol, in Phnom Penh, the capital, before returning to Saigon. He praised the morale of young Cambodians he watched taking military training at a camp near Phnom Penh.

Intelligence reports indicate that the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong number only about 13,000 combatants spread thinly in the 11 provinces around Saigon.

This is 25,000 less than the Communist command could muster in the region a year ago, U.S. military sources say.

In battle action, South Vietnamese headquarters reported a series of sharp clashes on both sides of the Vietnamese-Cambodian border Monday. North of Saigon, headquarters claimed its ground troops, artillery and air strikes killed 124 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong while suffering light casualties. Field reports put South Vietnamese losses at 7 killed and 18 wounded.

U.S. forces engaged in only sizeable action in the northern part of the country. A U.S. Marine patrol of less than 10 drove off an attack by an estimated 50 Viet Cong 20 miles south of Da Nang. The Marines, helped by air strikes, reported 16 enemy killed and suffered one wounded, spokesmen said.

Between House and Senate

Nixon's top bills in crossfire

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's two top legislative projects for the new Congress—family assistance to reform the welfare program and sharing of federal revenues with the states—are caught in a potentially deadly Senate-House crossfire.

H.R. 1, officially the first bill introduced when the House reconvenes Jan. 21, is expected to combine the family assistance plan with a 10 per cent boost in Social Security benefits. But last year the House passed similar legislation only to see it die in the Senate adjournment pile-up. And just before the Senate adjourned Jan. 2, Finance Committee Chairman Russell B. Long, D-La., told his colleagues: "My only regret for the last year is that I cooperated with the family assistance scheme to the extent I did...If they send that back to us again next year, I am going to fight it as hard as I know how."

Nixon has been promised a hearing on his proposal to deal the states in on billions of federal revenues on a no-strings basis.

But Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., of the House Ways and Means Committee, who will be in charge, reiterated that he is still firmly opposed to the plan—both in principle and because starting it now would increase government deficits already estimated at $15 billion a year.

And Mills added, in a telephone interview from Searcy, Ark., that Nixon's new tax break for business in the form of eased depreciation rules makes it harder than ever to accept revenue sharing.

The depreciation changes announced Monday are estimated to reduce revenues—presumably increasing the deficit—by $2.7 billion in the coming fiscal year.

They were put into effect by administrative action and not submitted to Congress. The Treasury's asserted right to proceed in this way is being challenged in a suit filed by lawyers associated with consumer advocate Ralph Nader

Miss Clairol film techniques

Youth films fail to impress critic

By David Dohy
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Several weeks ago, following a somewhat sarcastic review of "Move," one reader telephoned me demanding to know what I did like. Dutifully I listed Bergman's "The Passion of Ann," Chabrol's "This Man Must Die," "Catch-22," "Goin' Down the Road" and a few other pictures. Although this seemed to satisfy him, I'm convinced now it wasn't the sort of answer he had sought.

What had bothered this interlocutor was my attitude toward an entire category of movies, which, for want of a better name, one might call youth films. "Getting Straight" is a member in good standing of the group as are "Move," "The Strawberry Statement," "The Magic Garden of Stanley Sweetheart," "Alice's Restaurant," "Medium Cool," "The Activist," "The Landlord" and "Zabriskie Point." With these and other films made by or for the young, I am not impressed.

What many moviegoers on either side of the generation divide tend to forget about the new cinema is that adoration of youth is no recent development; young people as subjects have been a screen staple since the Twenties. What has changed since the early days, however, is Hollywood's point of view. No longer is the young hero rebellious in the first reel and submissive in the last. He doesn't grow "older" and he doesn't come to realize that his elders are his superiors. He starts off as a rebel and ends up as a "revolutionary," idealistic all the way.

What has happened, say since "The Graduate" three years ago, is that the image of youth in the movies is now shaped either by young film-makers or by older film-makers to the specifications of a new young audience. Older film-goers, meanwhile, no longer able to count on having their opinions propagated in the neighborhood cinema, have either adjusted to the new system or stayed home to watch television.

Basically, youth films share two characteristics. They concern themselves with contemporary subjects and their treatment of these is filled with the latest camera and editing techniques. The new topics seem legitimate enough; the cinema has simply caught up with the time. But the new techniques provide us with an important clue to what went wrong. Zoom-shooting, shock-cutting, slow-motion pastoral romps, whirling pans, halted exposures—all of these are techniques pioneered or perfected by television commercials.

We are being sold something. And contrary to what Spiro Agnew and many otherwise perceptive critics have argued, what we are being sold is not revolution but its opposite. What such films as "The Strawberry Statement," "Getting Straight," "The Activist" and "Medium Cool" have done is to have their cake and eat it too. On the one hand they flaunt their "commitment" to political progress by considering important contemporary issues, particularly police brutality and campus unrest, and on the other hand they drown any revolutionary message these issues may contain beneath tidal waves of cinematic display.

When Elliott Gould jumps up onto the examining table and director Richard Rush frames a violent demonstration through his legs, we are made aware not of the real injustices against which the students are protesting outside but the clever camera angle Rush has discovered inside. At best his camera work reminds us of similar devices used to advertise Pontiac or Budweiser. The scene where Gould wanders through a sea of out-of-focus bashed heads to melt into Candy Bergen's arms is worthy of Miss Clairol.

There is no doubt that the makers of "Medium Cool," "The Activist" and "The Landlord" are able craftsmen with sincere intentions. But then so were the directors of the Forties and Fifties, and where did that get them?

There is no conspiracy. No one is deliberately reducing revolution to an exercise in romantic movie-making; it's just that the result has been the same. While "permissiveness," "the new freedom" and radical catch phrases have occupied center stage, scenes with zoom lenses and Rod McKuen soundtracks have emasculated potential critics or coated their bitter pills with a thick layer of insoluble schmaltz.

The other side of this coin is a consistent cringing before the new audiences. In the past, when the image of youth was created by middle-aged men for consumption by adults, it flattered the middle-aged. Now that the consumers are under 30 and the image controlled by the young, it flatters the young.

Partly this is due to the pleasure an audience takes in being recognized. This was the attraction of "The Graduate" and, in another way, it was what made "Woodstock" (the movie as well as the event it recorded) so popular with the young. Identification is what sold tickets also to "Alice's Restaurant," "Getting Straight" and "John and Mary."

As for flattery and image-manipulation, what could top "Easy Rider" in which a pair of incoherent drug-pushers suddenly became martyrs for a generation? I liked "Easy Rider." I liked it for its style and for its brilliant evocation of certain American myths. But to many kids who were leaving theaters all over the country last year, the film was little more than skillful flattery and a confirmation of their prejudices.

It may seem, then, that the promises of "The Graduate" have been betrayed, that for all the high talk of critics and Hollywood publicity men "youth films" are just another show business gimmick. As my caller insisted, "How can anyone find fault with a youth film if many young people themselves like it?"

Well, the picture is not quite so black as painted above. There are many fine youth films (after all, isn't "M+A+S+H" one?) and even the worst of them contain elements of genuine inspiration. Then, perhaps, our hopes were too high. Movies are an industry as well as an art. When the new cinema broke down the barriers surrounding serious subjects, did we expect only serious film-makers to rush in?

The fact remains that the barriers are down. We may complain of license and abuse. We may wonder pessimistically about the intelligence of audiences so willing to accept shoddy goods. Yet, when all the subtracting is done, several small but distinct achievements are left. "The Landlord" was about a 29-year-old white boy who buys a tenement in a black Brooklyn ghetto. "Medium Cool" included real footage of real cops brutalizing real kids. "Woodstock" spent three unflinching hours in the mids of nudity, grass and four-letter music. If these films didn't quite tell it like it was, they certainly were headed in the right direction.

And which of them could have been made ten years ago? The truth is, the territory of American films has been extended.

While optimistic forecasts may sound a little hollow right now, there is evidence that the excesses of youth-cult films are beginning to abate. "Five Easy Pieces," starring Jack Nicholson (the boozy small-town lawyer of "Easy Rider") has earned high praise around the country and has just been named Best Picture of the Year by the New York Film Critics. "The Revolutionary" with Jon Vought ("Midnight Cowboy") is a film about a student radical which just may not top-out. "The Great White Hope," based on the hard-hitting Broadway play, promises to live up to its title.

This moviegoer has his fingers crossed.

Peace Committee to hold film fest

The Southern Illinois Peace Committee (SIPC) will present a Yippie Film Festival Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Newman Center.

Three films will be shown: "Chicago," "The Streets Belong to the People" and "Yippie." Admission is 75 cents.

SIPC will also show "The Battle of Algiers" on Jan. 21 at 7:30 p.m. at the Newman Center. Admission will be 75 cents.

54 international students honored

Fifty-four international students from 22 countries have been named to the Dean's List for academic achievement during the fall quarter at SIU.

The Deans' List is extended to undergraduate students compiling grade averages of 4.25 or better while carrying class loads of 12 hours or more. Averages are based on the point system in which five is equivalent to A.

Some 800 international students are enrolled at the University, which has a two-campus enrollment of 35,000. More than half of those from foreign countries are graduate students.

Free clinic needs volunteer helpers

Volunteers are needed for work at Carbondale's free medical clinic at 114 E. Jackson. Joel Lee, a worker at the clinic, said work days will be Saturday and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.

Lee said that work of all kinds needs to be done on the clinic, including construction, electrical and clean-up jobs.

"We don't care if you don't have a special skill," Lee said. "We just need people who can help."

He also encouraged workers to bring tools and cleaning equipment.

The free clinic is located between Mr. Natural and the Thrift Store.

Draft director estimates limit for 1971 lottery call at 195

WASHINGTON (AP)—Draft Director Curtis W. Tarr has estimated that lottery numbers up to 195 may be called in 1971, applying to men born in 1951. Two warnings are in order: —Tarr said his estimate was only a guess—the numbers could end up higher or lower. —And the upper limit, whatever it is, may not be reached by all 4,067 local draft boards; only the number reached by an individual's own board is significant for that individual.

With those warnings in mind, here is a list of those birthdates among the top 195 drawn in July for the 1971 lottery.

January 1, 2, 4, 5, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 30 and 31.

Sailing Club launches new membership drive

The SIU Sailing Club will hold a special introductory meeting for new members Thursday at 9:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Home Economics building as part of its winter quarter membership drive.

Although the club is unable to sail now because of weather conditions, weekly dry training sessions will be held in addition to social activities, including possible ski trips.

Club members will man an information booth in University Center Monday through Thursday.

Equipment available to the club includes five Flying Juniors and a 26 foot E scow. A pavillion for boat storage is in progress.

Wheelchair students cite problems: lack of communications scores most

By Bryce C. Rucker
Student Writer

Lack of communication is probably the greatest problem handicapped students face on campus, wheelchair students said in an interview.

Patrick Gibson, a senior majoring in industrial technology believes non-handicapped students do not understand his problems as a wheelchair student. Gibson says the problem could be classified as lack of compassion for the wheelchair student as a person.

Another student, who did not want her name published, said attitudes of others toward wheelchair students may be a problem, but attitudes appear more sympathetic on campus than in town. The reason is that people in town have little opportunity to meet wheelchair students, she says. Therefore, without exposure to wheelchair students, Carbondale residents can not understand or appreciate the problems of a wheelchair student. Professors on campus are especially sympathetic to the problem in comparison to professors on other university campuses, she said. The attitude on the SIU campus is "basically good," she said.

The problem of lack of understanding is not easy to solve. Gibson offered education as one solution. According to him, education helps one attain influence through a higher position in society. By attaining such a position, Gibson may show people his ability as a handicapped person, which could cause people to reevaluate their stereotype of wheelchair students.

Ken Barbee, freshman majoring in marketing and finance, said organizations may be the solution. He said, wheelchair students should join organizations to show their diversity of talents.

Mobility is another problem. Norman Foster, sophomore majoring in sociology, cited steep hills. Barbee added bad weather—both in getting to and from campus.

Student registration to open for local, township elections

Arrangements for students to register at the Student Christian Foundation for the Carbondale and township elections have been made by student government, according to Tom Bevirt, administrative assistant to the student body vice-president.

Students can register there Jan. 20-21 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Bevirt said. Persons can also register at the City Hall in Carbondale and at the Jackson County Courthouse in Murphysboro. The registration deadline for the Feb. 23 Carbondale city elections is Jan. 23.

To be eligible to vote, a person must have lived in Illinois for one year, in Jackson County for 90 days, in the same precinct for 30 days and be 21 years of age by the time of registration.

Award applications available

Applications are available for the Service to Southern Award in the Student Activities Office and at 114 Small Group Housing.

The award, presented to an outstanding male and female SIU student, will be given Feb. 5 at the Theta Xi Variety Show.

Applicants must have a 3.0 grade point average and will be judged on their participation in extra-curricular activities. A faculty committee will select the winners.

CTU strike idles half-million

CHICAGO (AP) — School officials hoped for a quick settlement Tuesday as they resumed talks with the Chicago Teachers Union (CTU) whose second walkout in 20 months idled more than a half-million school.

The CTU called a strike early Tuesday after negotiations with the Board of Education broke down. Late Monday, the (CTU) House of Representatives rejected the board's latest offer of a 4 per cent salary hike.

Chicago's 533 elementary and high schools were closed and 577,000 children stayed home.

The school board said 8.4 per cent of the teachers in the system are crossing picket lines and reporting for work.

Swimmers off to Oklahoma, Gonzalez to remain at home

By Ernest J. Schmitt
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The SIU swimming team, minus freestyle and relay man Fernando Gonzalez, have resumed double training sessions with an eye on the Sooner Invitational Collegiate Championships to be held at the University of Oklahoma Thursday through Saturday.

Coach Ray Essick said that Gonzalez' injury, which he calls recurring headaches, will hurt the Salukis' chances in the 1,650-yard freestyle as well as relay events.

"I really don't want to take a chance with him," said Essick.

In Evansville tonight

Freshmen pull out win

By Ken Stewart
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

It's on to Evansville for the freshman basketball team after a hard fought win over Rend Lake Junior College Monday.

The young Salukis will face the Purple Ace yearlings at 6 p.m. tonight in a preliminary game before the varsity clash between SIU and Evansville.

Rend Lake gave SIU a hard fight in Mt. Vernon before the Salukis could pull out their first win after six losing starts.

After two overtimes, SIU won 99-92. The game was tied 77-77 at the end of regulation play and 88-88 after the first overtime.

A balanced scoring attack and excellent rebounding was the winning formula with the help of a fast break for the Saluki frosh.

Intramural games scheduled today

The following basketball games have been scheduled by the intramural office for Wednesday night in the SIU Arena.

6:15 p.m.: Phi Sigma Kappa "C" vs. Alpha Gamma Rho B, court one; Sigma Pi Old Heads vs. Phi Sigma Kappa B, court two; TKE Trash C vs. Kappa Alpha Psi B, court three; Thompson Point Tightens vs. Six Floor Schneider, court four.

7:15 p.m.: Seventh Floor Ballers vs. Felts Fungus, court one; Jackson's Five vs. The Family, court two; Jive Mothers vs. Warren II Mafia, court three; Mob vs. Brown III Gods, court four.

8:15 p.m.: Felt's Raiders vs. Smack Shooters, court one; Boomer III Celtics vs. Dohr's Pains, court two; Wright Brothers II vs. Warren Wizards, court three; Southern Comforters vs. Warr-En Peace, court four.

9:15 p.m.: Abbott Universal Lifers vs. Allen I Golds, court one; Cardinal's Commandos vs. Allen I Blues, court three; Abbott NOD's vs. Free Schneider, court four.

"so he will stay home."

The rest of the Saluki squad is healthy following its heart-breaking 58-55 loss to the University of Michigan last Thursday night in the University School pool.

In that encounter, five meet records, one pool record and three varsity records were washed away.

The Saluki record setters were Bill Tingley, 1:58.7 in the 200-yard backstroke, Rob Dickson 1:50.2 in the 200-yard individual medley and Dale Korner who set a SIU and a meet record with a time of 2:12.6 for the 200-yard breaststroke.

There is no question that I was happy with the meet," reflected Essick. "You must understand our training. We gear ourselves for the championship meets at the end of the season and we were very fortunate to have such a large percentage of people perform at that level already."

Essick also had praise for divers Cliff Andrews and Don Cashmore who finished third and fourth against the Wolverines.

"I think the divers did an excellent job," he said. "In fact, the diving against Michigan was the best we have seen from SIU divers ever."

With the meet with Michigan now history, Essick and his tankers can now look forward to inaugurating the Sooner Invitational Collegiate Championships to be held in Norman, Okla.

The meet, which Essick calls "a real fine one for a first-year event," will be held on a three-day championship format. Essick said that this type of meet has definite advantages as far as the Salukis are concerned.

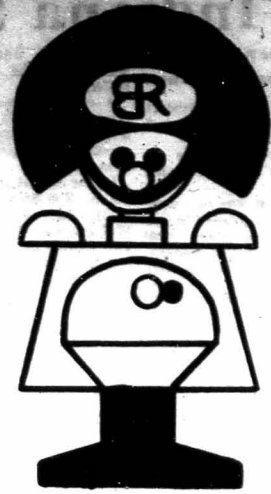

"Since we gear our training to this type of meet this should provide us with a good indication of what we can do."

Essick said that since the tankers won't be in training while in Oklahoma he expects them to improve with the rest.

"We should be getting stronger as the meet progresses."

Helping the Salukis initiate the Sooner Invitational will be host school Oklahoma, Kansas, Oklahoma State, Missouri, Texas, Nebraska, Arkansas and Texas A&M.

The tankers next home meet will be against Ohio State University at 2:30 p.m. on Jan. 23.

Indiana State knocks Butler, 98-90

By Fred Weinberg

Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

There are, in the Midwestern Conference, some very, very good basketball teams.

Unfortunately, they are not always good on the same nights.

Monday night was no exception as the MC's answer to Cinderella, Indiana State, beat longtime rival Butler soundly, 98-90 but Northern Illinois dropped a heartbreaker to Cincinnati, 87-86... which means the conference as a whole is still playing .500 ball.

Indiana State spotted Butler a 2-0 lead in the opening seconds and that was as close as Butler ever got. Largely due to the efforts of 6-2 forward George Pillow who scored 11 of the next 12 points to get ISU to a 12-2 lead which later went to 17-3.

From there, the game tightened a bit but at the half, the Sycamores still enjoyed a substantial 36-42 lead.

Butler pulled itself together at the half and came out to close the lead to five in the opening minutes of the second frame but ISU opened the gap every time until, with 47 seconds on the clock, Butler pulled to 55-49.

A comeback was not to be, however, as ISU's Pillow pulled a three-point play off with 30 seconds remaining to ice the game at 98-90.

Pillow led all scorers with 30 points; Bob Barker got 17; Dan Bush got 16 and Howard Williams had 13 in the balanced ISU scoring attack. Pillow also led all rebounders with 15—which is not bad for a 6-2 forward.

Butler, however, did outboard the Sycamores 49-33 but the winners canned 29 of 68 from the field for a 57 per-cent mark while Butler was only able to connect on 37 of 76 for 48 per-cent.

Butler's Ken Ehret led the losers with 28 points and their leading scorer, Billy Shepard was held to 14 by the ISU defense. He averages 24.

"It was a good game," said ISU head coach Gordon Stauffer who may be enroute to the best season of his four year tenure. "We shot 64 per cent in the first half and I think it was the best half we've had all season.

"We did a pretty good defensive job too," he added.

Northern thought it had its game against Missouri Valley Conference dropout Cincinnati when the Huskies bulldozed their way to a 45-37 lead at the half but Cincinnati, now 8-5 on the season, is not noted for playing dead before their home crowd.

And, in customary Bearcat fashion, the hosts came back to tie the score at 67 apiece with 10 minutes left in the game.

The winners moved to a four point lead at 83-79 after the teams traded baskets for several minutes and then, with 2:47 remaining, NIU reeled off seven straight points to take an 86-83 lead on Cleveland Ivey's three-point play, Don Hamel's two free throws and a driving layup by Jerry Zielinski.

Derrick Dickey put the Bearcats within one when he tipped the ball in with 53 seconds left.

With 25 seconds left, Cincinnati's Dave Johnson stole an NIU inbound pass and was fouled by Zielinski when he attempted to drive the baseline.

Shooting a one-and-one situation, Johnson—who shoots free throws underhanded—canned both to put Cincy on top for good.

NIU inbounded the ball with 20 seconds showing on the clock and attempted to work for the best shot but Ivey's 12-footer with four seconds remaining fell short and time ran out while he fought for a rebound.

Cincinnati's "Mr. Everything" Steve Wendefer, a 6-4 senior forward led all scorers with 24 points and Ivey tied Zielinski for NIU scoring honors with 22 apiece.

Cincinnati held a 49-29 rebounding edge and Wendefer tied Zielinski for game rebounding honors with 12. Wendefer's 24 points equalled his career high and his 12 rebounds was his career best.

The Bearcats connected on 32 of 58 from the field for a 55 per-cent shooting average while NIU made 36 of 70 for 51 per-cent. The game was won at the free throw line where NIU fouled Cincinnati 24 times while the winners managed to foul only 13 times.

The loss gives Northern a 6-6 record and it neutralizes Indiana State's win to give the MC a .500 won-loss percentage with 27 wins and 27 losses.

Unknown takes indoor track win from Crockett by a horse's nose

By Ken Stewart

Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

With swimming trunks and a little bit of luck, a 28-year-old doctor stole the show at the National Invitational Indoor Track Meet over the weekend.

Against some of the top sprinters in the country—including SIU's Ivory Crockett—Delano Merriweather won the 60-yard dash in the Cole Fieldhouse on the University of Maryland campus.

Merriweather, in the first meet he has ever entered, crossed the finish line abreast with Mel Pender, a three-time Olympian Army officer and Crockett.

Judges awarded the meet to the cancer research physician from Washington while Pender was given second and Crockett third place.

All three men finished the dash in six seconds flat—one-tenth of a second off the world record of 5.9.

Merriweather's upset win became more baffling after he disclosed track was not in his past.

He graduated from a high school without a track program and didn't compete or try out for the Michigan State track team where he received his bachelor's degree.

"It was the strangest thing you ever saw," said SIU indoor track coach Lew Hartzog recalling the doctor's feat.

Merriweather said he was watching a track meet one day on television and decided he could run just as well as they could. That's how he became interested in track.

"He probably worked out for a year, but his was his first meet," Hartzog said.

Crockett, who finished second in the dash last year, had two bad starts, but came on strong in the end.

"I'm quite pleased with Ivory's performance," Hartzog said. "He came pretty close to passing Pender—not many men can do that."

"It was a real good field this year. Probably the best that can be thrown together in an invitational meet."

Usually there are only about three good runners in an event," according to Hartzog.

Besides Pender and Crockett, other outstanding sprinters in the dash included Charles Greer, two-time Olympian, Don Quarrre, Jim Vaughn and Ken Merrit, a Virginia freshman Hartzog calls a real tough competitor who finished in fourth place one-tenth of a second behind Crockett and the other two leaders.

Deer at Crab Orchard prosper since hunt

It's been 28 years since the first white-tailed deer were released on an 18,000 acre tract of Williamson County that was later to become the Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge.

The forerunners of the Crab Orchard herd—four does and two bucks—did famously. After the U.S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife took things over from the old World War II Illinois Ordnance Plant, the deer herd flourished under maximum protection.

By 1963, deer watchers from Southern Illinois University's Cooperative Wildlife Research Laboratory figured there were 2,250 white-tails living on the 27-square-mile "inviolate" portion of the Refuge.

The herd had never been hunted but game management theory suggested now was the time to open season.

When a herd of animals gets too big for the habitat supporting it, standard practice says you thin out the animals. Otherwise they're going to die anyway.

For the refuge staff, shooting or trapping 1,000-plus deer on 18,000 acres would have been a difficult if not impossible job. So Fish and Wildlife decided to conduct a 10-day controlled hunt, hoping it would result in the twin benefits of necessary herd reduction and recreation for Illinois hunters. Not too many of Illinois' licensed hunters ever bag a deer.

Eight thousands of them applied for permits to get a crack at one during that first-of-a-kind controlled deer hunt on the Crab Orchard Refuge in January, 1966.

They had to shoot from stands and they had to leave via check-out stations. During the 10 days a total of 3,232 hunters from all but four of the 102 counties in Illinois took part in the harvest.

They fired 5,677 shots and killed 1,073 deer. In addition, hunt officials collected another 36 dead or crippled deer.

More than a third of the hunters took home a deer, a success percentage far above the average for open seasons in the state. Not a single shooting accident was reported.

Most hunters thought it was a success and the management goal of a 50 per cent herd reduction was attained without conflict.

Will there be another controlled hunt? Nobody's saying right now. But there is evidence that the population has, in fact, stabilized itself at these numbers; that there's a bleed-off of surplus deer into other parts of Williamson County and the herd growth rate on the Refuge itself is extremely low.

The inviolate area may well stay that way for some time to come.

Salukis at Evansville tonight

Powles: Scoring in the lane needed

By Mike Klein
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Stan Powles has some very fond memories of Roberts Stadium in Evansville, Ind. Last season, he connected on nine of 15 field goal attempts for 18 points there to lead the Salukis to a 66-59 decision over Evansville, SIU's last road win. That was the only win of a five-game road series that spelled eventual disaster for Southern. The Evansville win followed defeats by Georgia Tech and Kentucky while preceding losses to Marquette and Tulsa.

Now, one year later, there are few smiles on the SIU basketball scene as coach Paul Lambert takes his 3-4 ballclub to Roberts Stadium to face the Purple Aces.

With Greg Starrick and L.C. Brasfield experiencing problems putting the ball through the hoop, more scoring responsibility may fall on Powles.

Tuesday, Powles said Lambert "seems to think if we have some more scoring in the middle it will take some of the pressure off Greg and L.C. That's why I put up a few more shots against Lamar Tech than I usually do. We've got to get that scoring in the middle whether it's from me or Nate (Hawthorne) or anybody."

His few more shots still totaled only eight against Lamar Tech but he connected on four of those and added 10 of 11 free throw attempts to lead all scorers with 18 points in SIU's 102-83 loss.

Powles admits the Salukis "are going to have to get our confidence back. We've sort of lost it recently by not hitting the baskets very well and I think the rest of our game has suffered, too," the 6-9 center said.

During Christmas break Lambert said he thought the SIU defense was improving but poor showings against St. Louis University Lamar Tech game may prove Powles' point about SIU's entire game suffering because of poor shooting.

How long the slump will last can only be a matter of conjecture.

"We've been running the plays right and taking plenty of good shots but they're just not falling," Powles said.

"But I think one of these days they're going to start going in and then everybody will have a great game.

"If we can get this game at Evansville, I think we might be able to run off about five in a row," he added. That would encompass a home stand beginning Saturday with Indiana State. Rounding out the four following home games are Ball State, Kentucky Wesleyan, Texas and Georgia Tech.

He also thinks "It's going to be easier to get up for those conference games where we have a little pride at stake."

Saturday, the Salukis host the class of the conference, Indiana State, followed by the cellar dwellers, Ball State, next Tuesday night.

Evansville presents a fairly well-balanced offense and "runs a real pesky defense, doing a lot of little stuff the fans don't really catch," Powles said. "They fall down a lot when you're trying to drive and do a lot of acting."

In Don Buse, the Purple Aces have their best guard since the departure of the Chicago Bulls' Jerry Sloan. John Wellemeier, a 6-3 forward, leads the Aces with a 19.0 scoring mark while Steve (Whale) Welmer is the top rebounder with a 7.2 mark.

Powles and Welmer fought it out last year and the gimpy-kneed Evansville center came out on the short end. He scored only six points with two field goals and two charity shots.

Cold shooting the culprit

Six weeks ago, the Saluki cagers opened their first season under Paul Lambert with great expectations and equally strong pre-season fan support.

A season opening come-from-behind win over Winston-Salem seemed to just underline an optimistic future. This was to be the year: almost certainly a Midwestern Conference crown and possibly a third trip to the National Invitational Tournament in Madison Square Garden, New York.

Almost every criteria pointed to ultimate success: two great shooters in L. C. Brasfield and Greg Starrick; at least average rebounding from Stan Powles, Marvin Brooks and sophomore Nate Hawthorne; and exciting playmaking by John Garrett.

Best of all, Lambert would employ a fast-break offense fans seemed anxious to watch after a long and successful era of controlled offense under Jack Hartman.

Victories should have mounted steadily. They did for a while; but haven't recently.

After rushing to a 3-1 record, the Salukis have hit a streak of cold field goal shooting that has carried them to the depths of three consecutive losses.

That's the longest streak since 1967-68 when SIU lost five consecutively enroute to a 13-11 record.

When they take the court tonight at Evansville, the Salukis will try to improve on a 3-10 road record compiled over the last two seasons: SIU hasn't had a road victory since stopping Evansville 66-59 last Jan. 14. Since then, they've lost four under Hartman and three under Lambert.

A victory tonight will again be almost impossible if Starrick and Brasfield can't shake the icy shooting percentages they've shouldered through the losing streak.

At Lamar Tech, they combined for 11 of 42 from the field, 15 of 36 against St. Louis University and 13 of 37 on the road at Texas Tech. The composite is 39 of 115, 33 per cent.

SIU's offensive production is reliant to a great extent on Brasfield and Starrick because the Salukis don't have an inside attack. They didn't have one last year and it probably will remain that way until Billy Perkins is eligible next fall.

The 6-11 transfer from Louisville of the Missouri Valley Conference is the closest SIU has to someone who can play with his back to the basket.

Hawthorne has the ability and strength but not the size. Powles is more effective from the outside and Brooks has worked his way onto the bench after an early season splash of glory against Northern Iowa.

Powles' 18 points against Lamar Tech could be an omen of better things to come. If he can maintain his pace as an offensive threat, some of the pressure Brasfield and Starrick now feel may begin to disappear. But it had better happen soon. Conference play starts Saturday in the SIU Arena against Indiana State. They've won 19, lost three and haven't been beaten in eight games.

Doubleheaders coming

Saturday night will be the first of four basketball-gymnastics doubleheaders held in the SIU Arena this season. While the cagers entertain Indiana State, Bill Meade's gymnasts will follow with a meet against defending NCAA champion Iowa State.

The dates of the remaining doubleheaders are Jan. 30, Feb. 15 and Feb. 27. In order, the cagers will host Georgia Tech, Illinois State and Evansville while the gymnasts entertain the University of Illinois-Chicago-Circle, Indiana State and Kansas State.

Buffalo drops football

The University of Buffalo, a 1974 SIU football opponent, announced Monday it is dropping the sport for financial reasons.

NBA may take Sonics to court over Haywood

SAN DIEGO (AP)—National Basketball Association owners voted 15-2 Tuesday to consider bringing charges against the Seattle SuperSonics for signing Spencer Haywood.

Commissioner Walter Kennedy, after a day-long session of the NBA Board of Governors owners, told a news conference:

"The commissioner is directed, with the aid of counsel, to consider bringing charges against Seattle before the Board of Governors in connection with the Spencer Haywood matter and to advise the board of the most drastic penalties lawfully at its command."

Seattle owner Sam Schulman said through a spokesman that he had no comment but Kennedy said Schulman gave no indication that he would give up the 6-foot-8 Haywood, the American Basketball Association's most valuable player as a rookie at Denver last year.

Kennedy said further that the NBA owners also voted, unanimously, with Schulman absent, to reaffirm its Nov. 18 decision that there would be "no merger and no common draft" between the two professional basketball leagues.

He said the 1971 college draft will again be a telephonic conference on Monday, March 29.

All worked up

Swimming may well be one of the most grueling sports existing—for the coach. Ray Essick, SIU head coach is shown here getting all worked up at last Thursday's SIU-Michigan meet which the Salukis lost, 58-55. Essick had some nice things to say about his swimmers and you can read them by flipping to page 13 of today's Egyptian. (Photo by Fred Pfeifer)
