Nominations to be taken for GSC election

By Phillip Fiorini
Staff Writer

The Graduate Student Council will be taking nominations for the vice-presidential and vice-president election slated for Feb. 3. At their first meeting of the semester. The nomination period will begin today and continue through Thursday.

The GSC president will make the announcement and distribute the nomination form. The council will also consider a replacement procedure for the student trustee, which was proposed by the Undergraduate Student Organization and President Jerry Cook.

Cook's proposal, which will be presented at the first Student Senate meeting of the year on Wednesday, would allow a student to run for a seat in the Student Senate. The council will discuss this proposal at its next meeting on Wednesday.

Kosierowski out of election

By Phillip Fiorini
Staff Writer

Graduate Student Council Representative Carl Kosierowski has decided not to seek the vice-presidential position. The GSC president, who was elected in November, said he would run if another student would be willing to run for president. Kosierowski did not want to run for vice-president.

The vice-presidential election that Kosierowski won was held after GSC President Paul Matalons had planned on running for his position effective Jan. 1. A five-member student council declared the election invalid because proper voting ballots had not been provided.

Kosierowski said that he had been advised late last semester to concentrate his activities to concentrate on his studies. He said it would be better to run for a more appropriate position as a law student - to make sure to stay in law school.

Students may get greater say in selection of Arena concerts

By James Derk
Staff Writer

Students may get better representation in the selection of entertainment at the S.U. Arena because of a restructure of the Arena Entertainment Advisory Board. The old board was inefficient and ineffective, said Gary Drake, director of the Arena. "It was set up many years ago, and a lot has changed in 20 years."

Clarence Dougherty, vice president for communications, said the board was underwritten by the Undergraduate Student Organization, and is a committee to recognize and recognize the needs of the students. The committee will consist of representatives from community and campus organizations. The new board will consider the whole spectrum. Cook said the old board didn't really do that. The new board will be appointed on Thursday.

Supreme Court to hear city's appeal

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

The Illinois Supreme Court is scheduled to hear the city of Carbondale's appeal of a civil case on Tuesday in Carbondale. The appeal is a preliminary hearing in the case of the city's appeals court decision on the downtown development project.

The ordinance, which was proposed by the downtown committee, was ruled unconstitutional by Jackson County Circuit Court Judge Richard E. Richman on June 15. That ruling delayed work on the project and left the city's own downtown development plan in limbo. The city was ordered to file a new development plan.

A docket clerk at the Supreme Court's office said that there is usually a long delay between the time the court hears a case and the time it hands down a ruling. He said the court often waits up to a year before announcing a decision, but the urgency of the downtown development project will be considered, and a ruling could come within two months.

If the Supreme Court rules that the city acquired the land legally, the city will probably take the rest of the land needed for the downtown project, even though it has not violated the law.

The city could then either look for a new developer for the conference center or use the land for another project. Although the city faces a deadline of Dec. 31 for completion of the downtown project, it wishes to use federal funds. City officials note that such deadlines have been extended in similar situations.

Carbondale attorney James Zinner, whose family owns the property, is a member of the downtown committee. Zinner said the city should work with the downtown committee. The city's appeal is a separate issue.

OPEC meeting ends in total disagreement

By Robert Burns
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — An emergency OPEC meeting collapsed Monday in disagreement over production quotas — a failure that could force down oil prices and prolong a worldwide glut.

OPEC members were unable to settle on a production ceiling of 1.5 million barrels a day, so every price drop of $1 would cost Mexico $1.5 million a day at a time when the country is struggling through its worst economic crisis and trying to pay off an estimated $7 billion debt. Mexican oil officials had no immediate comment on the meeting.

Other economists say it also would mean an improvement of conditions for importing nations, such as Brazil. It also would mean lower prices for gasoline and other products made from crude oil.

"The OPEC nations may have treated America to a refueling of their roads and bridges," said oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg in Los Angeles. He said a predicted 10-cent drop in gas prices would more than offset a nickel-a-gallon tax federal tax for a highway repair and jobs program.

OPEC dispute could mean lower fuel costs for U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — Contract prices for home heating oil fell Monday and one analyst predicted a drop in gasoline prices following the collapse of an OPEC production and production conference. But other analysts predicted that the OPEC countries would not cut their production over prices.

Yamani quoted by the Gulf News Agency in Bahrain as stating that if the OPEC member nations could not agree on any point, that Saudi Arabia could carry out its plan to cut production to reduce its price if there was no agreement, which could touch off a series of price cuts around the world and undermine OPEC's street value over prices.

Deans to discuss hiring freeze

By Vicki Olsgard
Staff Writer

Implications of the University's hiring freeze that took effect Monday will be discussed at a special deans' meeting, Vice President for Academic Affairs and Research John Geyon said Monday.

"While it was an emergency meeting it might be a stronger line than one would like to use, it is an important session," Geyon said. The meeting, scheduled for 9 a.m. Tuesday, is not a regularly scheduled meeting. The deans meet every two weeks.

Geyon said the deans would discuss the implications of further cuts in the University's fiscal year 1983 budget.

Gov. James Thompson has already recalled 2 percent of the University's budget, and further cuts are possible.

The hiring freeze covers vacancies in civil service, faculty and administrative positions throughout the University and will last until the state revenue situation becomes clearer or until June 30, the end of fiscal year 1983.

Geyon said the freeze will affect administrative, professional and civil service vacancies more than faculty. Turnover in faculty positions tends to be tied much more closely to the academic calendar than that in staff positions. "Presumably vacant faculty positions would probably not be filled until fall," he said.

Geyon said he anticipates that procedural questions about the hiring freeze will be discussed at the meeting. "We could structure a situation where there is one person in an office," he said. "If that person were to leave, who would be there to answer the phones?"

Police continue search for Oliveira

By Jennifer Phillips
Staff Writer

Although the Carbondale Police Department's investigation is essentially completed," the search continues for Michael Oliveira, charged with murdering marketing professor John Raveed last March, said Tom McNamara, police spokesman.

An unlawful flight warrant was filed against the 22-year-old former marketing student in October, allowing federal authorities to enter the search. Oliveira, who had taken Raveed's classes and traveled with him on European marketing seminars, was charged on Aug. 3 with his murder.

McNamara said two Carbondale investigators are still on the case but the investigation is "not as intense." Although his name would not comment on whether or not Oliveira, from Geneseo, has possibly fled the county, McNamara said murder is an extraditable charge" which another country would honor. If Oliveira was picked up by foreign authorities for some reason, his name would be available in the National Crime Information Center's computer.

Raveed, 35, was found stabbed in his Carbondale apartment at 412 W. Oak St. March 9.

Business and economics experts from American University in Washington, D.C., and the University of Nebraska at Omaha, will participate in a conference on 'Productivity in America' during a national video teleconference from 7:30 a.m. to 8:30 a.m. Friday at the Student Center. The teleconference is the first of the year for the National University Teleconferencing Network, made up of 18 universities in 35 states, including Herbert E. Striner, professor of economics at American University and a management and productivity consultant to the IBM Corp., 505 Fifth Avenue and other major American firms. There will be a keynote speaker during the daylong program. Striner will discuss critical factors affecting productivity and solutions to productivity problems.

Sang M. Lee, Fred Lushans and Richard J. Schodberger, management experts from the University of Nebraska, also will address the teleconference. The program will be beamed to about 30 other universities across the nation via satellite hook-up.

Included in the program will be a panel discussion involving the University of Nebraska participants and a question-and-answer session that will enable SIUC participants to ask questions by telephone, according to Judy Fauri of the Division of Continuing Education.

Woman has no job, but she's got money

WEST ALLIS, Wis. (AP) - A woman who joined the ranks of the jobless three weeks ago has won $100,000 in a state lottery.

Twice.

Patricia Meldonian of West Allis said her husband, John, bought 20 Illinois State Lottery tickets Monday at a store in Zion, III. Eight tickets were for her, 10 for a daughter, and two for a friend.

She learned Monday night that the ticket was worth $100,000 and entitled her to try for a second $100,000 - which she also won.

"It's beyond my thinking," she said. "I'm quivering inside.

Mrs. Meldonian said she had been out work since the end of the year. She had been a merchandise marker at a department store.

To get away from all the excitement, the Meldonians went to a nearby church for a bingo game Friday night.

She won $30, she said.

"Club' covers various themes

"Do You Really Want to Hurt Me?" asks a lusty Boy George, in the hit single from the hit energy Culture Club's first LP, "Kissing to Be Clever.

Boy George has a rich jazzy voice, and he gives his most delicate utterances at the opening of this, the first and one of the strongest songs on the impressive new LP. Actually, more of this kind of soft singing would add variety to his otherwise funk ska album.

Album covers, especially for a group's first LP, are a vital marketing tool. Culture Club's first cover, featuring a suit faced with vogue adornments and an intimidating expression, jumps out of the racks, especially with its purple and black splashed frame and male and female entertwined symbols.

On Wednesday at 8 p.m., the University Wind Ensemble will present a concert featuring all students. Students from all majors will perform, with the exception of the education students and feature either sides or ensemble of students backed by the Wind Ensemble.

Mel Sienor, director of bands at the School of Music, usually conducts the ensemble which is made up predominantly of music majors. He will step down this year to give the students about to graduate a chance to conduct something besides a reel-to-reel tape.

"This concert," said Sienor, "will be the only chance most students get to conduct a live group in performance. It's a great opportunity for them and I'm very pleased with their progress." The works to be presented come from a variety of composers and feature a variety of movements. Composers featured will be Jager, Reed, Handel, Wier, Bartok, Bencreeputo and Gershwin.

Other soloists will be Erin Stevens on baritone horn and Carolyn Miller on tuba. Feature in small ensemble will be Jean Madden and Ron Ford on flute with Martha Antoinette on clarinet, and Dan Kiser on trumpet. Simon Muhleber on trombone and David Henderson on tuba.

The student conductors will be Cathleen Stanc, Dan Kiser, Craig Ryterski, Robert Cohlmeier and Carolyn Miller.

Writers exhibit creative work

By Cynthia Reeder
Staff Writer

Artists at SLC's Head openings for shows, manuscript readings, recitals. But where do creative writing find accomplished living writers at SLC?

Poet Carol J. Pierman thinks that the Creative Writing Reading Series, which usually starts short story writing, and Phillip Graham initiated, will fill that void. The idea emerged in September when the two English professors were sharing lunch at the Student Center's Ronald Room. Both were pleased at the eagerness of other writers in the department to share their work with the public.

One of the purposes of the series is to let creative writing students know that their professor doesn't just grade papers and offer criticism—they're writers as well.

"We want students to see what teachers do with their own work," said Graham.

The series will offer evening readings in the Oglesby Lounge throughout the semester. Pierman and Graham will start things off on Wednesday, reading their poetry and short fiction.

Pierman, who joined the SLC English department in Fall 1989, has written three books of poems, and has had poems published in over 80 publications. Her most recent work was published in the Centennial Review and Sablehorse. She's also written an essay on the poetry of Ted Callis and has collaborated with composer James Romey to provide lyrics for three songs.

Graham has authored a compilation of 19 short stories called "The Vanishing," and is currently working on his second such collection. He has also published a series of short stories in The New Yorker, Virginia Quarterly Review, the Paris Review and many other magazines.

According to the creative writing program, each reading program will feature two English Department writers who work in the genres of poetry, fiction or drama. The writers for a given evening will always work in the same genre; poetry and fiction authors will present their own work while drama will be presented by professional interpreters in a reader's theater style with musical accompaniment.

Graham says the series isn't designed to compete with already existing groups like the Poetry Factory, the New English Department's group which hold open poetry readings, but to complement them. The in-house English department reading series differs from other groups since it combines genres which will expose writers to forms other than their specialization. A poet may come to the series to hear poetry and will hear a short story as well. Many previously limited to the reading of fiction and poetry will be introduced to their oral presentations.

Although history attests to the oral roots of literature, Pierman is concerned most of his students don't consider the acoustic value of their poems. Their emphasis may be with imagery or conciseness, he says. "They may never read the poems aloud."

However, when Graham, experienced in oral presentation, sits down to write, he also sits down to listen to his sounds. "I always imagine my audience in the room with me when I write," he confided.

Pierman also imagines he's writing to a sound-conscious audience when he writes, "a general but exacting" one, he says. "If they don't like it, it won't work."

Graham thinks listening closely to his voice will help him stay close to the conversational richness of the language and away from a pretentious literary style. During readings he will sometimes change a word or phrase because he knows it "sounds too foggy. There's a pressure knowing 25 to 1000 are listening."

"Readings can be a good source of income for a writer," he says. "I sometimes earn between $200-500 and some make as much as $1500 for one reading."

Of course, it helps if the writer is well known and appreciated. Graham compares oral reading to reading radio. He at Oglesby Lounge when he and Pierman air.
Royal Winnipeg Ballet to appear at Shyrock

On Tuesday, Feb. 1, Canada's "world-class" ballet troupe will bring their dazzling and versatile repertoire to SIUC as they perform at 8 p.m. in Shyrock Auditorium.

The Royal Winnipeg Ballet is internationally recognized and well-known to audiences for its wide range of performances and the technical excellence of its dancers. The company is the oldest existing professional ballet troupe in Canada. Founded in 1950 by Gwendolyn Lloyd and Betty Farley, the company received its Royal title in 1962 under the reign of Queen Elizabeth II. Since 1958, the ballet has been under the artistic direction of Arnold Spohr and has continued to grow and develop to take its place as one of the premier ballet companies in the world.

The company will be the largest production to perform in Shyrock this season, bringing 25 dancers, a fourteen-member orchestra, seven resident technicians, plus 17 local crew members, and 22 tons of instruments, scenery and lighting equipment.

Tickets for the performance are $13.50, $11.50, $9.50, and $7.50 and are available at the Shyrock box office on weekdays.

Agency mixup endangers grouse

By Lisa Nichols
Staff Writer

About 120 ruffed grouse, which were released in southern Illinois County last spring, stand a slim chance for survival because of poor communication between the U.S. Forest Service and the Illinois Department of Conservation, according to Alain Woolf, professor of zoology at SIUC.

Woolf said an alternate location could have been chosen for the birds if Shawnee National Forest Officials had informed the DOC that a mining permit was pending for the site where the birds were to be released.

Woolf is concerned that dry-summer mining would "disrupt critical areas of habitat and reproduction," and "could lead to a dramatic reduction in the size of the population.

According to Woolf, the Illinois Mineral Co., which plans to mine trips for the location, is an innocent party in the matter.

"The bottom line is the failure of one agency to cooperate with another," Woolf said Friday. Woolf said the grouse, which had nested in Southern Illinois in the past but later became extinct in the area, were brought from the Wayne-Hoosier National Forest in Indiana.

Woolf said if the reintroduction of the birds fails, it would be a waste of a lot of time, money and effort for the DOC.

Woolf stressed this point in a letter to Forest Supervisor Kenneth Henderson. Woolf said he wrote the letter as "a concerned citizen" and that he is not directly associated with the DOC.

Henderson contends that the information on the mining plans was not withheld from the DOC.

Woolf said it is probably too late to do anything about the situation now. He said it would be unfair to the mining company to ask them to delay mining for trips, a substance used to manufacture computer chips, because that would cost the company time and money.

It is not feasible to try to recapture the birds. Woolf said, because in capturing them, there is a risk of harm to them. Only time will tell what is to become of the grouse.

But Woolf is confident that, in part, because of his letter, "the situation like this isn’t going to happen again."

San Jose State University have launched the Fiction Contest, now in its second year and open to the public for the first time.

The competition seeks the person who has written the best short story of the year. All entries must be written by an entrant and previously unpublished.

It was inspired by Edward Bulwer-Lytton, a writer of the early 19th century, who began his novel "Paul Clifford" this way: "It was a dark and stormy night..." The staff was really great to us here."

The USO was assisted in the co-op by the Society for the Advancement of Management, the Sigma Kappa sorority, the American Marketing Association and the College of Business and Administration.

Lough said the University administration was very helpful with the co-op, which is a small, but fast-growing, company. Since the co-op could ultimately take profits away from the University Bookstore.

"We see the co-op as an alternative to the bookstore, rather than a parallel service," said Lough. "I don't think we will be stealing profits from the bookstore. There will always be people who need the cash right away and will have to use the bookstore."

Stan Irvin and Paul Panno have been working as the new first assistants to the Jackson County state's attorney for about two weeks now.

They replace attorney Mike Carr, who left the office to become assistant United States attorney in St. Louis and William J. Klukis, the new Jackson County sheriff.

Panno is a 1982 graduate of DePaul University, College of Law and a 1979 graduate of the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana. He and his wife moved here from Oak Park, a suburb of Chicago. He has always wanted to practice law in Southern Illinois before he got the job.

"I like the courtroom trial experience. You have to be prepared and think fast," Irvin noted.

Irvin said his main goal is to get as much trial experience as possible to gain competence in that field.

State's Attorney John R. Clemens said he selected Panno and Irvin from 40-50 applicants. "I tried to select the most qualified people for the job," Clemens remarked. "It wasn't easy."

Non-kosher beliefs save pig in a pickle

TEL AVIV (AP) — Can a wayward pig overcome the Jewish prejudice against killing non-kosher and find happiness on a kibbutz?

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals hopes to find out. The group plans to give the boar named Piggy a home in its second annual animal adoption event.

The event will be held at the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in Tel Aviv on Saturday, Dec. 18.

Kibbutz member of the group searching for a communal home, said it was the first time a kibbutz had agreed to take in a pig.

However, the group was not without its challenges. The pig had been found wandering around the kibbutz, and had been tied up and left there.

A kibbutz resident, who rarely sees pigs, said Piggy was well-behaved and seemed content in its new environment.

The SPCA has successfully adopted several animals, including a dog, two cats, and a guinea pig, since its founding in 1959.

One bad day isn't stopping gymnasts

By JoAnn Marchlewski
Sports Editor

Someone watching the men's gymnastics team Friday night and then again Saturday afternoon might not have believed it was the same team. The Salukis, who scored 272.75 last week against Ohio State last week, and who are capable of being a 275-plus team according to Coach Bill Meade, dropped back to 261.30 Friday but bounced back to score 276.80 on Saturday.

SIU-C did come home with three wins, but the victory was the 1,000 free meet in the nation's top 10 list.

Men swimmers among nation's top

Keith Armstrong leads the list of several members of the men's swimming team with times that rank among the top in the nation. Armstrong's time of 49.92 in the 100-yard freestyle is the fastest time in that event this season.

Armstrong is second in the 50 free, 20.32, and Anders Grithhammer is second in the 1,000 free with 9:12.15. Also on the list is the 400 medley relay team's time of 3:32.53, which is third.

The Salukis, ranked 13th in the Collegiate Swimming Coaches Association poll, have this weekend off and host Missouri Feb. 5.

Friday night was not something the team is particularly proud of, Meade said.

"It was a humbling experience," he said. "Afterwards I had a little heart-to-heart talk with them, and I was very bothered. In reality it did not do a good job because they came back the next day." Meade couldn't explain why practically the whole team had a bad outing.

"Maybe they took the meet too lightly," he said. "It was just one of those horrible, depressing moments." Less than 24 hours after bottoming out in Kalamazoo, the Salukis were in East Lansing and back on the route they hope will earn them a spot at the NCAA's April 7-9.

Teams on top of each of the four regions qualify for nationals, and six receive at-large berths. The Salukis are 4-4 in dual meets, and all opponents have been Midwest region teams.

SIU-C will look to gain some advantage Sunday when it hosts Houston Baptist and Illinois-Chicago Sunday at 2 p.m.

Bowl game a match out of the past

Los Angeles (AP) — Ten years after his father had coached him to a perfect season, this time it could be called the perfect day.

In 1972, the Miami Dolphins were the unbeaten team in a 14-game season, scoring 480 points in that year’s team.

A loss to the Washington Redskins in Super Bowl VII in nearby Pasadena, the Dolphins go running for the Redskins in Super Bowl XVII, the climax to a strike-swept season. Miami is starting left guard Bob Kuechenberg, one of the two remaining active Dolphins from that championship season of a decade ago, the other being reserve defensive end Vern Den Herder.

The Redskins began 1982 against Washington with a 2-6-1 record, still looking for their first Super Bowl victory. They would like nothing more than to end it that way.

“I remember Miami’s balanced offense,” Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said. “That 3-peat of theirs with all those receivers really killed us last year.”

Washington Passing 300 yards, they were well coached and have a toughness about them that makes them hard to beat.”

Athletes need injury awareness, according to sports doctor

By Mary Price

In the book of 800, according to Dr. Mary Lynch, a partner with the Center for Sports Medicine in Wichita, Kan., one of 800 things people can do is figure out why an athlete is injured, and then to find out what to do about it.

"With your body, you don't get cures, you have to work on what is wrong. The injuries are a result of what we do," said Lynch, who treats injuries everyday.

"If an athlete is injured, you must cure him fast, but then you have to do something right for the athlete to participate in what the way he feels, and not to be the way he feels.

I remember watching a basketball game and seeing one gettaken long strides with her left leg, but kind of dragging her right leg. After the game I asked about it. Lynch said, "The girl was starting to get a stress fracture in her right leg, and thought it was supposed to hurt to be an athlete as well."

"When it hurts it's too late, and when it's time to find out why it happened," Lynch continued. "You have to do the research. You look at the problem. You look at the way you did it, and instead it's the place that has helped to get you to the place you are at.

Once an athlete knows what caused his injury, Lynch believes, that rest alone isn't enough. The athlete has to stretch frequently to increase flexibility of the muscles at the area of the injury.

"Change is what causes injury, and it's totally to increase the level of conditioning," she said, "If an athlete isn't satisfied with his present level of conditioning, he must build up the muscle groups to plan to work harder or has injured.

Lynch believes that an athlete must look at the way his entire body works together. For it to work well, she said, flexibility is essential.

"Stretching has to be done often to be effective," said Lynch. "After the first two or three minutes of stretching, the athlete is no longer working on flexibility, but is warming up, which is also important, but not the same thing."

Frequent cold stretches are the only way to improve exhibition Lynch recommends doing a stretch for an injury 10 times a day.

"The problem is when a person needs it most, he isn't doing his stretches. If it doesn't hurt anymore, he stops doing it, but he still needs it," she said.

"The best time to stretch is before the problem happens, because it will help in the morning, throughout the day, and at night."

Coach Barry Switzer

The Miami Dolphins faced the San Francisco 49ers in Super Bowl XVII last Sunday, in nearby Pasadena, the climax to a strike-swept season.

"Traveling to all our meets doesn’t limit us unless weather leaves us stranded,” said Lynch. "It also doesn’t affect the runners.”

On occasion, the runners get gym space in the jump.

Blackman feels it is not a disadvantage not having an indoor track at SUU.

Blackman has been at SUU since 1966, and has been coaching women’s track since 1972. Her optimism for this year’s team is more than she’s ever had.
Birthday Blues

Dan Weiss drives to the basket during the Salukis’ 62-50 loss at Indiana State. Weiss, a freshman guard from Cincinnati, brought a reputation as a great shooter to SIUC, but has seen limited action so far. He celebrated his 18th birthday Saturday and after the loss, SIUC’s fifth in six games, he said, “It was the worst birthday of my life.”

Team travels to Indiana State

Women cagers hope to extend streak

By Brian Higgins
Staff Writer

The calm in the eye of a hurricane

That’s how the SIUC women’s basketball schedule reads for Tuesday’s 7 p.m. matchup with Indiana State. After successfully weathering a Wichita State storm Saturday night, and before waiting head-on into a Drake and Illinois State tempest later in the week, the Salukis must face a seemingly milder Lady Sycamores club in Terre Haute.

The Indianaans, sporting a respectable 6-5 overall record, have been only mediocre in Gateway Collegiate Athletic Association games, losing 23-24, 19-21, 52-69 over the conference doormat, Western Illinois last Thursday. ISU’s record stood at 1-3.

The Lady Sycamores pressure the ball hard in their half-court defense, making it very difficult for teams to get the ball inside. The Salukis need to develop their inside game to compete against the Lady Sycamores in the post, where they have one of the best centers in the conference in George Dogan.

Every opponent, however, doesn’t bring a tense-game-winning streak into the Lady Sycamores’ home court. Neither does every opponent bring with them the top scorer in the nation SIUC will do both.

“I don’t play it that way,” Myers said when asked if her squad would key on field-goal leader Connie Price. “We’ll just treat her as one player. If you key on her, someone else will burn you. We figure she’ll get her points.”

The Salukis offense, which seemed to go inside, found that it could survive when forced into an alternative situation, as witnessed in the Salukas’ 72-70 win over the Indianaans Thursday.

The Salukas are led by six-foot-four forward John Myers and five-foot-11 center Colleen Luther.

Harper waiting for NFL draft day

John Harper ended his playing career at SIUC as a bona fide pro prospect. His coach, Rev. Dempsey, predicted that he would be selected in the first three rounds of the National Football League draft. Since then, Harper has done nothing to damage that assessment.
