USG to consider housing fee boost

By Richard Hund
Staff Writer

Increase could cost students $144 per year

The Undergraduate Student Government will vote on a proposed 5.5 percent University housing fee increase at its 7 p.m. Wednesday meeting.

Ed Jones, University housing director, said the proposed increase will translate to additional student payments of $144 each year or $72 per semester. Students living in campus housing, Evergreen Terrace, Southern Hills and Greek Row will be affected.

Jones said the increase is being proposed "mainly because of inflation," as well as student wage increases and building renovations. These improvements include future plans to upgrade housing cafeterias and handicap renovations made in 1989 at Thompson Point.

"(University Housing) has been trying to keep housing fees down, but we've got to cover our costs," Jones said.

According to the University catalog, on-campus housing costs are $1,312 a semester plus a $12 activity fee. Cost of housing for married students ranges from $240 to $327 a month with utilities included.

In other business, USG President Tim Hildebrand will recommend that two senatorial seats be opened to "accommodate" students forced to change colleges last semester.

Students previously enrolled in the College of Human Resources and the College of Undergraduate Academic Services, which were absorbed largely by the College of Liberal Arts, need representation, Hildebrand said.

"These seats (are meant to) accommodate those students who had to change colleges because of the abolishment," he said.

Hildebrand said he will recommend that the four seats previously occupied for the abolished colleges be terminated. Two seats would then be created for Academic Affairs and Research and the College of Liberal Arts.

Hildebrand will also propose a University towing service and extended library hours for the weekend.

The meeting will be in Ballroom B at the Student Center.

Pulliam Hall renovation gets boost of $100,000

By Tony Mancuso
Staff Writer

Renovation of Pulliam Hall is expected to be completed in time for the University's summer semester, after the Illinois Capital Development Board approved a $100,000 change order Tuesday.

Mia Jazo, public relations official for CDB, said the board approved the change order, along with an appropriation for Collier Hall and an architectural contract for Wham, Tuesday morning at a meeting in Chicago.

"(The board's approval) will allow us to begin renovation of the third floor of Pulliam as soon as possible. Lately, we only have been able to complete the finishing touches on the first two floors," Allen Haake, supervising architect and engineer for the Physical Plant, said.

The construction is expected to take six to eight weeks, he said, adding that installing a phone system throughout the building will take additional time.

"I foresee no problems. We should be right on schedule," Haake said.

He said the project in Collier Hall involves renovation of the Chancellor's Office reception area. The job, which will cost the state

Carbondale city offices initiated a paper recycling program Jan. 1 and although it is in its early stages, individuals involved are contributing and it seems to be working well, Tom Redmond, city planner, said.

Controversial issues set scene for Bush, Congress showdown

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress went back to work Tuesday, ready to challenge President Bush over a veto and plunge into debates on clean air, Social Security, taxes and a host of other issues left over from last year.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., meeting with reporters just before the House convened at noon, predicted "a very active session."

Party-line differences surfaced in the Senate shortly after the session was gavelled open, provoked both by the clean air bill and Bush's veto of legislation giving Chinese students sanctuary in the United States.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine, in his opening remarks, called for passage of the clean air bill — which the administration considers too costly for American business — and a "prompt" override of the veto.

But Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas said, "There is really no good reason to override the veto unless it's straight out politics."

Dole urged a 30-day delay on a vote, a suggestion rejected by Mitchell even before the session opened.

In the House, however, a group of conservative Republicans said Bush had made "a mistake" in vetoing the bill and that they will vote to override.

Dole also indicated problems for the clean air bill but said it was based more on geographic than on political considerations. He said at least one senator asked that the bill not be considered until he can read the proposals.

Alcoholism costly for nation

Health research identifies genetic and environmental causes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Although Americans are drinking less, alcohol remains the nation's most widely used drug and will cost the country an estimated $136.3 billion this year in lost productivity, disability and death, the government said Tuesday.

The Health and Human Services Department called its "Seventh Special Report to the U.S. Congress on Alcohol and Health" a collection of "state-of-the-art knowledge" on all areas of alcohol-related problems and research.

In releasing the triennial study, copies of which will be available to the public in about six weeks, HHS Secretary Louis Sullivan hailed its account of recent advances in understanding and treating alcoholism.

Research findings collected in the report include:

■ Although per capita consumption of alcohol has reached its lowest level since 1970, alcohol is used by more Americans than any other drug, including cigarettes.

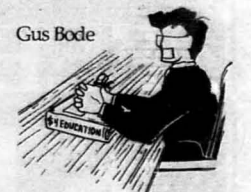

■ An estimated 10.5 million adults exhibit symptoms of alcoholism. An additional 7.2 million abuse alcohol, but show no symptoms of dependence.

■ Despite a downward trend in alcohol consumption by high school seniors in the 1980s, nearly 92 percent in 1988 had tried alcohol, nearly two-thirds were current drinkers and one-third were occasionally heavy drinkers.

■ Nearly half of all deaths in motor-vehicle accidents are alcohol-related. Raising the minimum drinking age to 21 results in "striking reductions" in traffic accidents involving drinking drivers ages 16 to 20.

Gateway coaches grade conference

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

The coaches in the Gateway Conference expected a tough battle for the league championship — up to this point they have not been disappointed.

"I think all of the coaches knew coming into the season that it was a toss up," Southwest Missouri State coach Cheryl Burnett said. "There is no overwhelming favorite."

One game separates the top four teams in the conference race. Defending champion Illinois State and Southwest Missouri State are tied for the conference lead with 6-1 marks. Bradley is one-half game back at 6-2 and Southern Illinois trails the top spot by one game with a 5-2 record.

"We are playing better at this point in the season," Scott said. "But we still have some tough tests ahead of us to prove if we really are a force to be reckoned with."

The Salukis, the preseason pick to win the Gateway according to the coaches poll, finished three points ahead of Illinois State in the balloting. SIU-C received five first-place votes, Illinois State four first-place votes and Southwest Missouri one. Southwest, picked to finish fifth overall, received a first-place vote from Saluki Coach Cindy Scott.

The Salukis play at Southwest at 7:05 Thursday. Southwest finished eighth in the Gateway last season with a 5-13 mark. But a talented group of newcomers and experienced returning players have the Bears looking for their first Gateway title.

"This is a crucial game for us," Scott said. "We want to be No. 1 in the Gateway and the first step is to beat Southwest. They have the best athletes in the conference. From day one, I picked them to win the league. I'm very familiar with their personnel. They are for real."

The game with SIU-C Thursday will begin a four-game homestand for the Bears. Southwest will play Eastern Illinois Jan. 27, Indiana State Feb. 1 and Illinois State Feb.

3. The Bears are 6-0 at home this season.

"These are four big games for us," Burnett said. "Southern, Eastern and Indiana State have been playing well. Then we play Illinois State who I think is playing the best right now."

Illinois State defeated Southwest 80-58 at Redbird Arena Jan. 6. Although Burnett thinks Illinois State is the favorite, she said her thoughts may change after the

Matt Wynn nails
3-pointers; adds
spice to offense

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

If the Salukis' outside game ever falters, head coach Rich Herrin always can look for zone-buster Matt Wynn to come off the bench.

After coming out of Benton High School averaging 19 points per game his senior season, Wynn was red-shirted his freshman year at SIU-C and saw limited time off the bench last season. The 6-1, 174 pound sophomore guard expected little playing time for the guard-deep Saluki men's basketball team as this season progressed.

Wynn was called upon in only three of the Dawgs' first seven games and failed to score a point.

A combination of the Salukis' dire need of an outside threat and an injury to backup point guard Tyrone Bell gave Wynn an opportunity to prove his worth.

Herrin said he knew Wynn was an outside threat but he had to wait for the right time to call upon him.

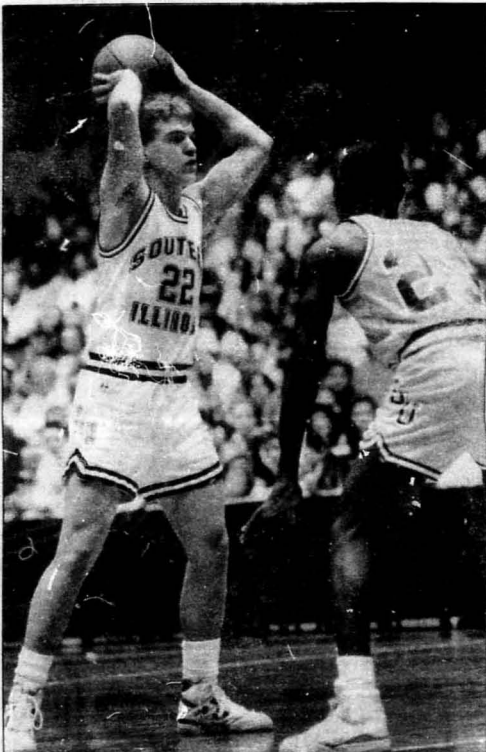

"When we played Evansville and St. Louis, they packed their zones in and we really struggled," Herrin said. "Right then, I made the decision to take our best shooter (Wynn) and turn him loose against a zone."

In the Salukis' first game of a three-game stint in Hawaii, Bell couldn't play because of an ankle injury. That opened the way for Wynn to step into the lineup against Chaminade. Although it is unfortunate that Bell went down, it gave Wynn his chance.

Wynn wasted little time in making his presence felt. Coming off the bench, he went five of six from the field — three of four from three-point range — in scoring 13 points.

"I knew when he put me in that I had to make the most of it," Wynn said. "I thought it was important in that first game against Chaminade that I come out and play with a lot of confidence."

If the Salukis are up against a zone, Herrin said he will not hesitate to call Wynn.

"He gained confidence in his ability and I sure gained a lot of confidence in what he could do in a pressure situation," Herrin said. "We had to get him in and give him some experience when the game's not won or lost. Against Chaminade, he came in and just had a fantastic ballgame."

Wynn leads the team in three-point accuracy at 42 percent. He is averaging 4.9 points per game (sixth on the team) and scored a career-high 14 points against Eastern Kentucky.

Junior forward Rick Shipley knows the value of having a sharpshooter on the bench. He said few people knew about Wynn until the Chaminade game.

"It was a bad thing that Tyrone got hurt but it gave Matt a chance to play and he's made the most out freestyle with a time of 1:40.61. She also was a member of the first-place 200 freestyle relay team that swam a time of 1:40.61.

"Tonia has the ability to contend for that honor each week," swimming and diving coach Doug Ingrain said. "She is consistent and has done a tremendous job."

"I am very surprised to receive this award. I didn't expect it at all," Mahaira said.

Success is nothing new for the native of Greece. Mahaira won the 100 and 200 freestyle at Greece's 1988 Olympic Trials, but did not compete in the Olympics since Greece elected not to take any women swimmers.

Mahaira also has qualified for the NCAA championships to be held in March.

"I hope I can at least place in the top 16 at the NCAA's," Mahaira said. "My chances are fair. My times compare pretty good to some of the times from last year."

Ashraf Amaya
quietly does job
inside the paint

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

At the beginning of the season, freshman forward Ashraf Amaya was referred to by head coach Rich Herrin as a diamond in the rough. It seems as though the diamond is starting to sharpen around the edges.

The soft-spoken Amaya was a highly-touted high school player out of Oak Park (Walther Lutheran) who was named MVP of Chicago's private school league. He posted senior averages of 19.7 points and 10.9 rebounds per game while his team finished with a 24-5 record. Although Ashraf is his legal first name, most of his coaches and teammates call him Andrew, which, more or less, is an adopted nickname.

After coming off the bench in the Dawgs' first eight games, Amaya cracked the starting lineup against Hawaii and has been a starter ever since, with the exception of one game against Illinois State when he was benched for disciplinary reasons.

In a solid first start, an 84-71 loss to Hawaii, Amaya scored six points to go along with 11 rebounds before fouling out. He then went on an offensive tear, 23 points and 10 boards against Hawaii-Hilo, 16 points and nine rebounds against Air Force and 13 points and five cares against Tennessee-Chattanooga. Amaya continued his hot streak against Eastern Kentucky with 16 points and six rebounds. During that stretch he shot a sizzling 73 percent from the field.

"Andrew has been a little bit of a surprise, but he's been a good one," Herrin said. "Andrew Amaya has a great instinct for the basketball. Andrew is a very physical player and very strong player."

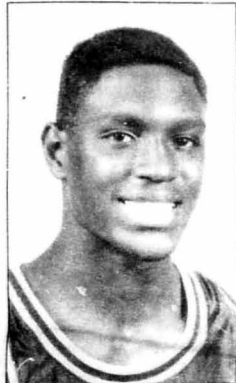

"Amaya isn't going to back down from anybody in the game," Herrin said. "The game is never too physical for him."

Practicing against senior center Jerry Jones does a lot to add to his intensity.

"I think Jerry Jones has helped him tremendously with his development," Herrin said. "Jerry has kind of taken Andrew under his wings and given him some leadership."

On the season, Amaya is averaging 8.3 points and 5.7 rebounds while shooting a blistering .628 percent from the field — best on the team.

"I just want to make the most of it right now and do the best I can," Amaya said. "I knew I would have the chance to play somewhat but I didn't expect it to be this much."

Ashraf Amaya

Junior Rick Shipley summed it up by saying:

"Andrew has really come on," Shipley said. "I knew the first time I saw him play in fall conditioning that he was going to be a good player. It was just a matter of time. He's a strong player and he plays solid defense."

"He's come around a little quicker than I thought he would," Shipley said. "He still has a lot of learning to do, but he's picked up a lot just by playing."

Amaya's statistics midway through season are better than those posted by last season's Missouri Valley Conference "outstanding freshman of the year" Tony Harvey. Harvey decided not to return to SIU-C at the beginning of the fall semester. Many critics thought Harvey's absence (6.9 points and 5.2 rebounds per game, .464 shooting percentage) would dampen the Dawgs' chance of winning the Valley title this year. As the Salukis jumped out to a 15-4 start, it does not appear his presence is missed.

"A lot of people said we'd miss Tony Harvey but I don't think we have," Shipley said.

Amaya might not have the height advantage of the 6-10 Harvey, but he is a shot-blocker at 6-7, 210. He blocked a career-high four shots against Eastern Kentucky.

As with any player, basketball is a constant learning process for Amaya. He receives his share of advice from the Saluki coaching staff and teammates. Moreover, he knows the parts of his game that need improvement.

"My rebounding needs a lot of work," Amaya said. I definitely need to work on my ballhandling and my outside shooting.

"There's always words of encouragement, especially if you get pulled from the game," Amaya said. "They always tell me where I went wrong and what I need to do

Azerbaijani militants mount drive to oust Soviet Army

MOSCOW (UPI) — Azerbaijani militants battled Soviet soldiers Tuesday at a key army barracks in the Azerbaijani capital of Baku after ambushing a Red Army column in a mounting campaign to drive troops from the southern republic, news reports said. The official news agency Tass reported 93 people have died and 715 were wounded since the Red Army stormed into the Azerbaijani capital Saturday.

Schoolchildren protest inferior education

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — Police fired rubber bullets, tear gas and water cannons Tuesday to disperse 5,000 black and mixed-race schoolchildren demonstrating against inferior education, prompting the youths to smash windows in the city center in retaliation. At least two of the students were badly cut when they were pushed into razor-sharp wire erected by police to restrain them from marching to offices of the Department of Education.

Haiti censors press reports of crackdown

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (UPI) — Two more opposition leaders were reportedly arrested by the military government Tuesday but radio and television stations were forbidden to report on the continuing political crackdown. Observers estimate a dozen political opposition leaders have been arrested since Haiti's ruler, Gen. Prosper Avril, announced a 30-day state of siege Saturday in the Caribbean nation.

Military transport crashes in mountains

CARACAS, Venezuela — A Venezuelan air force transport plane with 24 people aboard crashed Tuesday morning in a mountainous area north of Caracas, a spokesman for the rescue team said. The spokesman said no survivors had been found. Officials said the plane was on a routine training mission and was carrying 21 military personnel, including navy enlisted men and marines, and three crew members.

White House taking terrorist threats seriously

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — The White House is taking seriously threats by terrorists to disrupt the drug summit in Colombia next month and is considering alternatives to flying President Bush directly into the country on Air Force One. The Secret Service is looking into reports that a drug cartel has obtained missiles to try to shoot down the president's plane. A senior administration official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said that "there are a number of different islands around there" that presumably could be used to get Bush by boat to the Colombian resort city of Cartagena Feb. 15.

Police, Black Muslims clash leaves 1 dead

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A routine traffic stop Tuesday erupted into a melee between sheriff's deputies and a group of Black Muslims, leaving one person dead and another wounded in the second clash involving the sect in recent weeks, officials said. The clash came one day after representatives of the Nation of Islam and the Los Angeles Police Department agreed to a hold a continuing dialogue designed to ease tension between them.

Blue Angels collide; pilots escape safely

EL CENTRO, Calif. (UPI) — Two Navy Blue Angel jets collided Tuesday while on a training exercise over the Superstition Mountains, but the pilots escaped serious injury, military officials said. One of the FA-18 Hornets crashed, but its pilot ejected safely and was treated for cuts and bruises. The other pilot managed to land his jet. The other two FA-18s in the precision flying team also landed safely at the El Centro Navy Air facility.

State joins federal workers in opposing Chanute closure

RANTOUL (UPI) — The state of Illinois will work with federal employees trying to halt the scheduled closing of military bases instead of appealing it's own suit, Attorney General Neil Hartigan announced Tuesday. "The sense of the community is it would not be in the best interest of the community" to appeal Illinois' federal suit to block the closing of Chanute Air Force Base, Hartigan said. Hartigan's suit filed in federal court failed last year after it was ruled the state did not have standing and could not participate in forming military policy.

Retired machinist and tool specialist reflects on 21-year service at SIU-C

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

One month after retiring from the College of Engineering and Technology, Dwight F. Clampet says he doesn't miss his job.

"I've had the flu for three weeks. I'm glad I didn't have to go in," the 66-year-old machinist said.

Not counting sick days, Clampet refers to his employment at SIU-C as, "a 21-year love affair."

"I started out there as a mechanic, a civil service machinist. Later on, my title became tool and instrument specialist, but I was still a mechanic," Clampet said Tuesday from his home in Murphysboro.

"It was really an ego trip for me, having researchers and professors coming to me for advice. I don't have much of an education myself," he added.

What Clampet may lack in formal education he has more than made up for in practical experience.

Upon graduation from high school, he became a telegrapher for the railroad. "Now there's a job that's practically extinct today," Clampet mused.

Clampet saw combat on Iwo Jima as a World War II marine, and he was called back from the Naval Reserves for shipboard service during the Korean War.

He found steady work as a carpenter in 1953, but turned to research-related work after hiring his back in 1960.

It was in his hometown of Tolono, in Champaign County, that Clampet began his 28-year career as a research mechanic.

Dwight F. Clampet, a former machinist at the University, does not miss the hustle and bustle of the work week. Clampet, 66, was employed here making instruments and devices for researchers before retiring last December.

"This fella asked me to come work in his shop where they custom-built scientific instruments, and that's where I learned machinings."

After working in the physics department at the University of Illinois, Clampet accepted a job at SIU-C and henceforth became known as "Jed" around the College of Engineering and Technology.

"Over there, they probably don't know who 'Dwight' Clampet is," he laughed.

Clampet calls his job at SIU-C, "the most enjoyable" of all his experiences.

"Everything we built was a collective effort," he said, adding, "This place is almost like an old man's hobby shop."

In one of his last jobs, Clampet designed and built a six-foot-tall stirring device to make a special ceramic. The ceramic, being tested by SIU-C engineering researchers, could replace the heat shield now used on the space shuttles, he said.

"We get exposed and initiated to a lot of the research, but we're not researchers," he said. "Through the years, we've assisted with a number of designs, but we're not designers."

The chemistry department occasionally commissioned Clampet and his associates to custom-make special incite containers for specific research purposes.

"Anything beyond the world of the microscope, that's a totally foreign world to me."

Clampet's shop is filled with giant saws, drills and lathes. During his 21 years on the job, Clampet hurt himself only once.

"I ran a bandsaw through the end of my finger one time," he said.

His retirement plans include taking his wife Charlotte fishing more often.

Clampet said he'll leave with a sense of a job well done, knowing that a lot of the equipment he's built will be working for researchers long after he's gone.

"I've always felt that if I could give a little bit of help to the research at SIU-C, the work was all worthwhile," he said.

Florida trip slated for mid-March

By Dale Walker
Staff Writer

A trip to a number of Florida's large amusement parks. DisneyWorld included, is being offered to 40 people by the International Programs and Services office.

The trip to Disney World, Epcot Center, MGM Studios, Sea World, Kennedy Space Center and Cypress Gardens begins March 9 and travelers return on March 17, Diane Wissinger, foreign student adviser, said.

The cost of the trip is $360. The cost includes travel by luxury coach, entrance fees to all amusement parks and rooms at the world's largest Econolodge with pool and waterslide nearby, Wissinger said.

The cost does not include meals. There will be four people to a room, she said.

"Even though the trips are designed for international students, anyone affiliated with the SIU community is welcome," Wissinger said.

Accompanying the group on the trip will be Wissinger and Huang Xiaogang, a foreign student adviser.

A place can be reserved with an $180 deposit at International Programs and Services. Full balance is due by Feb. 21. For further information, contact Wissinger at 453-5774.

"It was really an eye tip for me, having researchers and professors coming to me for advice. I don't have much of an education myself," he added.

What Clampet may lack in formal education he has more than made up for in practical experience.

Upon graduation from high school, he became a telegrapher for the railroad. "Now there's a job that's practically extinct today," Clampet mused.

Clampet saw combat on Iwo Jima as a World War II marine, and he was called back from the Naval Reserves for shipboard service during the Korean War.

He found steady work as a carpenter in 1953, but turned to research-related work after hurting his back in 1960.

It was in his hometown of Tolo, in Champaign County, that Clampet began his 28-year career as a research mechanic.

Dwight F. Clampet, a former machinist at the University, does not miss the hustle and bustle of the work week. Clampet, 66, was employed here making instruments and devices for researchers before retiring last December.

"This fella asked me to come work in his shop where they custom-built scientific instruments, and that's where I learned machinings."

After working in the physics department at the University of Illinois, Clampet accepted a job at SIU-C and henceforth became known as "Jed" around the College of Engineering and Technology.

"Over there, they probably don't know who 'Dwight' Clampet is," he laughed.

Clampet calls his job at SIU-C, "the most enjoyable" of all his experiences.

"Everything we built was a collective effort," he said, adding, "This place is almost like an old man's hobby shop."

In one of his last jobs, Clampet designed and built a six-foot-tall stirring device to make a special ceramic, being tested by SIU-C engineering researchers, could replace the heat shield now used on the space shuttles, he said.

"We get exposed and initiated to a lot of the research, but we're not researchers," he said. "Through the years, we've assisted with a number of designs, but we're not designers."

The chemistry department occasionally commissioned Clampet and his associates to custom-make special plastic containers for specific research purposes.

"Anything beyond the world of the microscope, that's a totally foreign world to me."

Clampet's shop is filled with giant saws, drills and lathes. During his 21 years on the job, Clampet hurt himself only once.

"I ran a bandsaw through the end of my finger one time," he said.

His retirement plans include taking his wife Charlotte fishing more often.

Clampet said he'll leave with a sense of a job well done, knowing that a lot of the equipment he's built will be working for researchers long after he's gone.

"I've always felt that if I could give a little bit of help to the research at SIU-C, the work was all worthwhile," he said.

Florida trip slated for mid-March

By Dale Walker
Staff Writer

A trip to a number of Florida's large amusement parks, Disney World included, is being offered to 40 people by the International Programs and Services office.

The trip to Disney World, Epcot Center, MGM Studios, Sea World, Kennedy Space Center and Cypress Gardens begins March 9 and travelers return on March 17, Diane Wissinger, foreign student adviser, said.

The cost of the trip is $360. The cost includes travel by luxury coach, entrance fees to all amusement parks and rooms at the world's largest Econolodge with pool and water slide nearby, Wissinger said.

The cost does not include meals. There will be four people to a room, she said.

"Even though the trips are designed for international students, anyone affiliated with the SIU community is welcome," Wissinger said.

Accompanying the group on the trip will be Wissinger and Huang Xiaogang, a foreign student adviser.

A place can be reserved with an $180 deposit at International Programs and Services. Full balance is due by Feb. 21. For further information, contact Wissinger at 453-5774.

Improvements for directory suggested

Thank you for your Jan. 22 editorial commending the newly combined student-faculty-staff telephone directory and encouraging student government and University staff to make progress toward improvements.

Obviously, those improvements include an earlier publication date, a more accurate listing of students' residence telephone numbers, a list of all student government officers and their titles and other improvements as suggested by students, faculty and staff.

I first proposed combining the student and faculty-staff directories in spring 1987, to USG President

Phil Lyons who, with USG President-elect John Attard, USG Executive Assistant Dave Steck and others attempted to produce one for 1987-88.

Unfortunately, Jean Paratore, the USG fiscal officer and associate vice president for student affairs, firmly said "no," for reasons that the timing was not right, the consent was not there and the faculty did not want students to have their home telephone numbers.

Unwilling, or unable, to overcome these objections, John Attard turned against the proposal. When elected president of the USG, I instructed USG Executive Assistant Tim Hildebrand to inform Paratore that USG would publish a combined directory over her objections, if necessary, and when Hildebrand obtained President John Guyon's consent at my request, the directory was accomplished.

As with any new project, the directory has some flaws to be worked out. With increased cooperation between student government and University staff, along with student suggestions for improvement to USG, the combined directory will continue to improve.—William L. Hall, SIUC Student Trustee.

Student disappointed by musical production

The story of "The Phantom of the Opera" has long been horrifying audiences across Europe and the United States. I find the upcoming February 17 production of "The Phantom of the Opera-the play" particularly terrifying. It seems the nightmare is following me.

I was unfortunately exposed to this very production in Phoenix over winter break. A friend of mine took me to see the show as a Christmas present. We were both very excited to see "The Phantom of the Opera" as she had seen it on Broadway the year before and loved it. What a disappointment! Unfortunately the company didn't advertise as completely and accurately as they did in the D.E. In other words, they didn't warn that this wasn't the Broadway musical by Andrew Lloyd Weber, and they didn't announce the play until after you took your seat.

So I applaud the company for being a little more honest and for dropping the price of the tickets $12.00. Maybe all my complaint letters helped future audiences from making the same mistake I did.

I'm not going to say it was a bad play. Perhaps if I hadn't been under misleading information I would have enjoyed it more. But I will say I was highly disappointed in the acting in almost all of the characters. My apologies to anyone who may go see this production and love it. But for the rest of you and in the Phantom's own foreboding voice "you have been warned." Kim Kofod, Senior, Communications Disorders and Sciences.

Intention unclear in South African party switch

Scripps Howard News Service

From East Berlin to Ulan Bator, communists are redefining what they stand for. It's not surprising, then, to find even the South African Communist Party shedding its Stalinist policies. Less obvious is whether the change is tactical or reflects a true redirection.

Joe Slovo, general secretary of the illegal South African Communist Party, has a long history of loyalty to Moscow. Now, as he calls for pluralism in South Africa, is he doing more than mirroring the current liberal line?

Slovo's party works hand in glove with the African National Congress, the strongest group pressing for an end to white rule in a country whose huge black majority is denied the vote. Slovo was the first white member of the ANC's executive committee. And as chief of staff of its guerrilla army, he has planned terrorist operations inside South Africa.

In the mid 1970s, Slovo wrote a book called "No Middle Road" arguing that there was no alternative to military victory. In recent years, though, he has advocated negotiations between Pretoria and the ANC. Now, with communist governments humiliated by popular uprisings in more than half a dozen countries, he says his party must win support by argument and persuasion.

Communists have to face up to their failures in Eastern Europe. Slovo told a reporter the other day, "We have to recognize that these were popular revolts against unpopular regimes. It's no good complaining that this was some kind of capitalist conspiracy. We did it all on our own."

And in a 27-page paper circulating among party members, Slovo argues that the venerable communist goal of one-party rule should be replaced by multi-party democracy.

This is certainly good marketing in the age of Gorbachev. It may also be the only course open to a party receiving reduced material aid from the Eastern bloc and under pressure from the Soviets to negotiate. It probably does not mean that Slovo and his colleagues have given up their lifelong goal of seizing power.

Yet there are imponderables here. The son of Jewish refugees from Lithuania, Slovo could have undergone a change of heart, as he observed the passion to throw off communism unleashed in the land of his forefathers.

Whatever his sincerity, his party's new moderation is welcome in a country oversupplied with young radicals convinced that only war will set them free.

California senator attempts to cure S & L woes

Scripps Howard News Service

Has Sen. Alan Cranston no shame?

After helping Lincoln Savings and Loan Association gain more time to peddle worthless junk bonds to customers, the California Democrat now proposes that American taxpayers cover the bondholders' losses.

Cranston's political money-man, Charles Keating Jr., bought California-based Lincoln in 1984 and used it as a money tree to finance real estate ventures. In early 1987, federal banking investigators recommended that the U.S. government seize Lincoln because of its risky operations.

But Keating appealed for help from Cranston and four other senators to whom he also had made large campaign contributions:

Dennis DeConcini and John McCain of Arizona, Donald Riegle Jr. of Michigan and John Glenn of Ohio. The heat these five put on federal regulators helped keep Lincoln in business for two more years, until April 1989, when it was placed in receivership.

Paying off depositors who held government-insured accounts in Lincoln is expected to cost taxpayers about $2.5 billion.

But about 23,000 holders of the junk bonds, mostly Californians, have no insurance. These pieces of worthless paper, with a face value totaling more than $200 million, were issued by the Keating-owned American Continental Corp. of Phoenix, Ariz., and were sold through Lincoln offices. Some buyers have testified they were led to believe the bonds were government-insured.

Cranston's popularity in California has sunk like a rock since the Lincoln scandal broke. Now he is mounting a public relations campaign designed to restore his image. Part of that campaign is to find a way to make financial amends to the holders of Keating's junk bonds.

He is introducing legislation in Congress that would allow the bondholders to sue the federal government to recover their losses if they can't recover them from Lincoln, American Continental or Keating. Cranston says the federal government is at fault because it let Lincoln and American Continental peddle the bonds.

In other words, the senator who pressured government regulators to stay off Keating's back now blames the regulators for causing the financial fiasco. That takes gall.

Barry asks media for peace; key witness testifies in case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The man who lured Mayor Marion Barry into a cocaine sting operation failed before a grand jury to ask that he be allowed to continue his healing process in peace.

Rafaela Hazel Moore, 38, testified before a federal grand jury in Washington for more than two hours. It was not known what Moore, who was working as an FBI informant when Barry was arrested Thursday night, said in her secret testimony.

He sounded like he was ready to go ahead and move forward with the program there," she said. "He's ready to roll."

Barry later issued a statement asking the media to "allow me to travel the road to wellness without constant hounding. ... My family and I are going through a demanding and painful ordeal. I ask you not to make it any worse for us."

The government remained in the hands of City Administrator Carol Thompson, whom Barry named Friday to run the city in his absence.

Barry has not ruled out running for a fourth term in this year's mayoral election, but the Greater Washington Board of Trade, a powerful regional chamber of commerce representing 1,500 businesses in the city and its suburbs, issued a letter urging Barry publicly Tuesday not to seek re-election.

The group said that "events have shaken confidence in your leadership and have raised troublesome questions of general governance of the city."

Barry, whose administration saw a revival of downtown Washington, has long enjoyed the support of the powerful business community, from which he has garnered much of the money needed to carry on successful campaigns.

Barry, 53, was videotaped buying and smoking crack cocaine Thursday evening inside a downtown hotel, where he was lured by Moore, according to an FBI affidavit filed in court.

After his arrest Barry tested positive for cocaine, U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens said. If convicted of cocaine possession, Barry could face a year in prison and a $100,000 fine. His lawyer, R. Kenneth Mundy, has said Barry will plead innocent and seek a jury trial.

Moore's testimony is part of a year-long grand jury investigation. Barry testified twice last year, and has repeatedly denied drug use.

Moore appeared before the grand jury at U.S. District Court at about 9:15 a.m., and was behind closed doors for more than two hours before leaving the courthouse without speaking to reporters.

Former city worker Charles Lewis, convicted of cocaine charges in the Virgin Islands and Washington, has testified he used drugs repeatedly with Barry.

If Moore, a former top model who served six months in prison after being convicted in 1984 of illegal use of a motor vehicle, can corroborate testimony that Barry allegedly used drugs in Washington or the Virgin Islands, the mayor could potentially face felony perjury charges.

But her testimony theoretically could lead to further charges against Barry, who now faces one misdemeanor count of crack cocaine possession.

Barry spent his first full day Tuesday at the Hanley-Hazelden Center, an in-patient substance abuse program at St. Mary's Hospital in West Palm Beach, Fla. He entered the 28-day treatment center Monday for what his attorneys said was an alcohol problem.

Reporters continued to camp outside the treatment center, and Barry, through his spokeswoman in Washington, issued a plea to be left alone.

"He asked the media to please back off the center for a while ... to please allow him to get into his healing process in peace," said Barry spokeswoman Lurma Rackley, who talked to Barry by

I'm renewing the spirit of cooperation," Bush said.

The lawmakers have been away from the Capitol since Nov. 22, when the first session of the 101st Congress ended. The new session is expected to end in October, in time for the members to go home for their re-election campaigns.

Many observers feel the election-year session has potential for major accomplishments as well as bitter political battles over Social Security and other issues.

Bush has made clear he will insist that Congress vote soon on his proposal to lower the capital gains taxes, something that eluded him last year.

The Senate, equally determined to pass a new clean air bill, planned to begin debating the measure on opening day, but a final vote may be far off.

An overhaul of the clean air act is backed by the administration as well as Democrats in Congress, but they differ on how far to go with new rules to clean up the air.

On Monday, Mitchell rejected White House charges that the Senate bill is too expensive. He told a news conference the bill's health benefits far outweigh its pollution control costs.

The only item on the House agenda Tuesday was the swearing in of Houston lawyer Craig Washington to replace the late Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, who died in a plane crash in Ethiopia last August.

On Wednesday, however, the House is scheduled to vote on whether to override Bush's veto of the bill to extend the visas of more than 33,000 Chinese students who fear they will suffer persecution if they return home. Supporters of the bill were confident they can muster the two-thirds vote necessary to pass the bill over the president's objections.

The outcome of a Senate vote is less certain.

Bush vetoed the bill Nov. 30, but issued an executive order to extend the students' visas. He objected to the bill on grounds that it interfered with his foreign policy responsibilities and threatened to worsen the split between the U.S. and Chinese governments.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater acknowledged Monday the president faces an uphill fight in trying to sustain the veto. He said the administration has been trying to make members of Congress aware of the steps already being taken to protect Chinese students in the United States.

"We are hopeful that members of Congress now have a better understanding of the assurances that have been given to students and that they will have some impact (on the veto override vote)," Fitzwater said.

Reagan attempts to dodge testimony in Poindexter trial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge said Tuesday he wants to see a list of "specific questions" Ronald Reagan would face before ruling on whether the former president must testify at the Iran-Contra trial of ex-White House aide John Poindexter.

Poindexter, who was Reagan's national security adviser, sat in court as his lawyers argued that the former president's testimony is critical to Poindexter's defense.

The retired rear admiral, the last defendant currently under indictment in the Iran-Contra scandal, is accused of five felonies.

Reagan's lawyer asked the federal judge not to require the former president to appear at Poindexter's trial, scheduled to begin Feb. 20.

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene already has privately examined excerpts of Reagan's diaries that Poindexter's lawyers want to use at the trial.

Without ruling on requiring Reagan's testimony or diaries, Greene issued an order Tuesday telling Poindexter's lawyers to give him a list of "specific questions that counsel expect to ask the former president" at the trial.

"Until such focused questions are submitted, the court will not be in a position to decide whether, and the extent to which, President Reagan must testify," Greene said, emphasizing, "I want specific questions."

"As justification for requiring Reagan to testify, Poindexter's lawyers produced a list of 67 categories of inquiry involving Reagan."

Four sets of attorneys appeared in court Tuesday, representing Poindexter, Reagan, special Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence Walsh, and the Justice Department, on behalf of President Bush.

Legislation to illegalize 'backhauling' practice

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Illinois could become the first state to pass legislation preventing trucking companies from transporting food and garbage in the same truck.

Legislation introduced by Rep. Jim Stange, R-Oak Brook, would prevent truckers from carrying trash in one direction and food in the other direction in the same trailer without thoroughly cleaning it.

This process, known as backhauling, causes food contamination that can result in serious health problems, Marilyn Koscianski, an employee of the Environmental Protection Agency, said.

Currently, there is no law in Illinois mandating that a trailer be completely cleaned out before it is loaded with produce, Stange said.

"It's hard to believe, but no state has legislation concerning the process of backhauling," Stange said.

Stange said there has been a considerable amount of support in the Illinois House of Representatives to pass the bill.

"This whole process of backhauling is just disgusting," Stange said. "Sometimes the trucks, which have been backhauled have maggots crawling in them and the smell can knock you out."

Because of the potential risks of contamination, it is important for the government to protect food products transported by trucks, he said.

Koscianski said the salmonella outbreak of 1985 in Illinois, which resulted from contaminated milk, was a result of backhauling.

"After the outbreak, the procedures of milk handling were re-evaluated," Koscianski said. "As a result of that evaluation, tank trucks for milk are prohibited to carry other substances. It is unfortunate that no such rules exist for trucks that carry solid produce or citrus."

Stange said he did not want to hurt the trucking industry, but "we can't wait for a health crisis before we take action."

Stange, who serves on the board of directors of the Illinois Truckers Association, said certain companies have already prohibited types of backhauling.

The Keebler Company, in Elmhurst, sent out letters stating the company would not tolerate trash hauling by any of its carriers and all trucks must be inspected before they are loaded.

Matt McElhinney, manager of transportation planning for Keebler, said the proposed legislation is "a good idea that needs to be followed through" and Keebler's carriers would strongly support it.

Keith Gibbs, co-manager of Kroger in Carbondale, said they have their own truck hauling company and all foods are kept separate.

"The dry goods are hauled in one truck, the frozen foods in another and the produce in yet another," Gibbs said. "We do not haul garbage at all."

The bill will be voted on in April and several hearings concerning backhauling would be scheduled in the near future.

"I think we may find out things about backhauling through these hearings that we may not want know," Stange said.

Stange said the specifics of the bill have yet to be worked out.

"As the bill now stands only Illinois trucking companies will be affected if this becomes a law," Stange said. "I don't know what will happen to trucking companies in other states which transport produce into Illinois. That will have to be worked out in the spring."

Donations from taxpayer refunds could benefit Alzheimer research

By Marlo Millikin
Staff Writer

If you are old enough to pay taxes you are old enough to help researchers in Illinois work to understand the degenerative brain disease known as Alzheimer's.

Through the tax "check-off" system, Illinois taxpayers can contribute to the state's Alzheimer's research effort by simply filling in line 11c on their state income tax forms.

Illinoisans responded to last year's program by donating $169,540.85, Kevin Johnson, public information officer of the Illinois Department of Revenue, said.

Contributions on line 11c will decrease the taxpayers refund or increase the balance due for those paying on taxes.

Alzheimer's is a degenerative brain disease that causes gradual memory loss, personality change and physical deterioration.

Mary Huck, public information officer of the Illinois Department of Public Health, said Alzheimer's affects 10 percent of the American population over age 65. In Illinois alone, 150,000 suffer from the disease that has no known cure or preventive measures.

Alzheimer's is a degenerative brain disease that causes gradual memory loss, personality change and physical deterioration.

"The only hope right now is to support the research," Huck said.

Huck said that Illinois is the first state to implement the tax "check-off" system and the program has brought in more than $600,000 over the past four years.

Mark Raber, assistant manager of public information for the SIU School of Medicine in Springfield, said support for Alzheimer's research is growing in importance as the number of people with the disease continues to increase.

"Funding research is a major strain on the resources of the state," Raber said.

Raber said the "check-off" system was part of a packet of laws passed by the state legislature in December of 1985. The laws, which went into effect Jan. 1, 1986, were aimed at assisting Alzheimer's victims and their families. In addition to these laws, the legislature allocated funds to establish two regional multi-disciplinary Alzheimer's centers.

The SIU School of Medicine in Springfield and Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago were selected to receive funding for the establishment of the two regional centers. Raber said SIU-C's strong research team in the neuro sciences contributed to the school being selected as the site of one of the centers.

Responsible for 92 counties across the state, the center in Springfield provides various services such as treatment, referrals, educational programs and counseling, Raber said.

Raber said he expects to see a trend in this kind of treatment center as an aging population is steadily increasing the number of Alzheimer's victims.

"We have more than 500 patients in the program here," he said.

The minimum donation that can be made through the "check-off" system is $1.

Czech uranium plant draws fire from environmentalists

VIENNA (UPI) —The environmental organization Greenpeace said Tuesday it is urging Czechoslovak President Vaclav Havel to shut a uranium processing plant in southern Bohemia that it claims is spewing out radioactive waste.

Tests conducted on samples of waste water discharged from the Mape plant in southwestern Czechoslovakia, near the Austrian border, contained radiation "significantly higher" than acceptable levels, said Greenpeace spokesman Florian Faber.

Greenpeace presented data on the radiation Monday to plant managers, who denied that a problem existed, Faber said. But he said they promised to conduct their own tests and share the results with Greenpeace before Friday.

Faber said the group also contacted regional environmental officials and planned to make a direct appeal to Havel, the former dissident and new Czechoslovak president, urging him to close the plant. "The incidents around Mape are simply unbelievable," said Michael Underl, a member of Greenpeace's anti-nuclear division. The health and safety of the Czechoslovakian as well as the Austrian populations has been simply ignored."

Based on reports given the delegation by several different Czechoslovak scientists, it became clear that "something was wrong at Mape," Faber said.

Greenpeace members visited the plant earlier this month and collected samples of waste water being discharged from a pipe. The samples were then analyzed at the Austrian Institute for Ecology in Vienna, the spokesman said.

Tests showed the water contained radiation "significantly higher" than allowable levels, Faber said.

He said the waste water was being dumped into an abandoned coal pit adjacent to the plant, but Greenpeace learned that, until 1985, the water was discharged directly into the Vltava River, which flows through Prague.

of lust, murder and trial testimony

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

There are books that can write themselves. A recent piece of journalism chronicling the 1983 Hendricks quadruple murder case in Bloomington-Normal lent itself to this process.

Not to say that Steve Vogel, the author of "Reasonable Doubt" (Contemporary Books), didn't have to do any work. Vogel, a veteran Bloomington radio journalist covered the murder trial from its grisly beginnings.

In writing about the murder case, Vogel used transcripts from the trial and police recordings. When transcripts weren't available, he used recollections from interview subjects.

Most of the book is simply dry recitation of the examination and cross-examination of witnesses. However, don't let the word "dry" connote boring — because it isn't. As Mr. Spock would say, it's "fascinating."

The case concerns an unlikely murder suspect, David Hendricks, who is described as a deeply religious, loving father of three children, a devoted husband and a respected businessman.

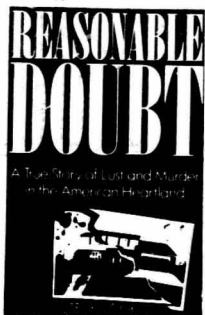

It is unbelievable to think that Hendricks murdered his wife and three children while they slept in their home in a quiet middle-class Bloomington neighborhood. And to this day Vogel and many others don't believe Hendricks was the murderer.

But McLean County State's Attorney Ron Dozier built up a prosecution that convinced a jury to find Hendricks guilty of the ax murders. Dozier contended that Hendricks committed murder and staged a fake burglary to throw investigators off the trail.

The motive: Hendricks' uncontrollable lust for the buxom models he employed for advertising a back brace he invented. Hendricks' Brethren religion prevented him from divorcing his wife. Murder was a way out of marriage and a way to keep his good standing in the community and the church, prosecutor said.

Hendricks, who is now serving his natural life sentence at Menard Correctional Center in Chester, had the full support of his family, both his own parents as well as his former wife's.

Book Review

The judge in the trial case, Judge Richard Baner, also was not absolutely convinced of Hendricks' guilt, stating at the sentencing: "Based upon the evidence admitted on the trial against the defendant, I am not personally convinced that he has been proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt."

Besides the account of the discovery of the mutilated bodies of Hendricks' former wife, Susan, and three children, possibly the grossest aspect of the case was the testimony dealing with the stomach contents of the victims. The prosecution sought to use the stomach contents of the children to determine the time of death.

On the evening of Nov. 8, 1983 Hendricks took his children, nine-year-old Rebekah, seven-year-old Grace and five-year-old Benjamin, to Chuck E. Cheese pizza restaurant. In the autopsy, the medical examiner would find this pizza and scoop it out of the children's stomachs for further tests — tests that would establish the time of death judging from the amount and condition of the food in the stomachs.

As in most murder cases, a large part of the prosecution's strategy hinged on the time of death, established at about 9 p.m. Nov. 8, at which time Hendricks would have had the opportunity to commit the crime. Hendricks admitted during police questioning that he left for a business trip at about 11:30 p.m.

In a brilliant defense, Hendricks' lawyers sought to discredit the use of the stomach contents as a valid way of determining the time of death. For all purposes it could have worked, but the jury didn't buy it.

Page after page, the discussion about the stomach content goes on. At first it is sickening, but after awhile the reader is galvanized so that nothing is any more sickening than the actual act of murder.

Hendricks was so hopeful that an appeal would overturn his sentence, that he remarried Dec. 20, 1988. That next day, however, the Illinois Supreme Court upheld the sentence, leaving Hendricks separated from life with his new family.

Despite his personal beliefs, Judge Baner respected the opinions of those who believed Hendricks did indeed murder his family. The public must be protected, he said.

"I do intend to leave with him the ability and the burden of agonizing daily for the rest of his life, over his part in the waste of four innocent lives, each of whom loved him and each of whom hopefully, never consciously learned of the brutally dark side of his nature," Baner said.

"Reasonable Doubt" shows us this dark side, not only of human nature, but of the criminal justice system.

Rickert-Ziebold recognition boosted by SIU-C professor

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

The Rickert-Ziebold Trust Awards mean many things to many people.

For graduating seniors in art and design, it means a chance get an extra boost into the ways of the working world. For instructors, it's a chance to review some of their students' best work.

But for Sunand Bhattacharya, professor in the School of Art and Design, it's a chance to spread the Rickert-Ziebold name nation-wide through designing posters and flyers.

Last year, Bhattacharya's Rickert-Ziebold brochure cover design was featured in Print magazine's regional design annual edition. The entries were broken down by region and critiqued by a panel of judges. Out of 41,000 entries, Bhattacharya's cover was one chosen to be displayed in Print's annual.

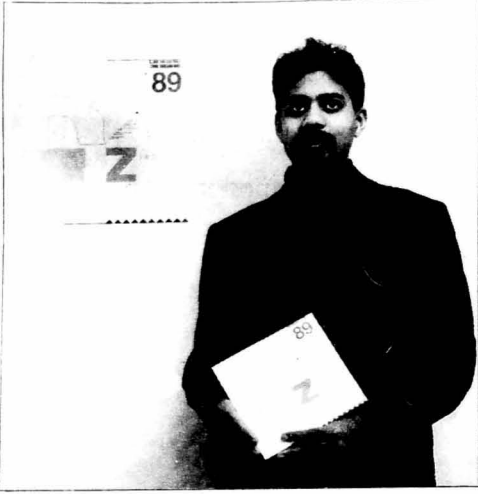

Bhattacharya said it was an honor to have his work published nationally. This year he has entered his Rickert-Ziebold material in several international design magazine contests.

Bhattacharya has designed three-dimensional invitations, posters and brochure covers for Rickert-Ziebold. Some of his recent work also includes posters for the Big Muddy Film Festival and the 1990 Visiting Artist Series. Bhattacharya's work is characterized by color, use of grids and typography.

Typography, or the use of creative lettering and text, is one of Bhattacharya's favorite applications of design. He said he enjoys the techniques of designing posters and publications.

"I love making compositions through typography," Bhattacharya said. "There is a geometric logic to it and it used effectively, it can be a good medium for communication."

Bhattacharya explained that the Rickert-Ziebold award poster is a special kind of design. It is not just a poster, but a piece of art that is meant to be displayed in a museum.

Sunand Bhattacharya, professor in the School of Art and Design, stands next to the poster he designed for the Rickert-Ziebold Trust Award.

information should be presented directly, and not in a confusing manner."

Bhattacharya said the first thing in conceiving a design is to think about the ways of conveying the message.

"First, I focus on the main message. What am I going to communicate? How am I going to get that across to a reader?" Bhattacharya said. "The goal of a poster is to get the reader to remember the information."

Bhattacharya said he likes to combine working with a grid and the elements of typography. When the poster is complete, the grid takes on a more subtle and subdued part of the poster.

"I really like to work on a grid," Bhattacharya said. "I try to get away from the restrictions of the grid and play around with the elements of design that are not on the grid."

Bhattacharya was a 3-D invitation card for the Rickert-Ziebold he designed last year. The card is an adaptation of a game played by children. It is an origami paper and finger game.

"I don't believe that invitation cards for something that involves art and design should be plain," Bhattacharya said.

Bhattacharya said the most satisfying part of designing informational art is the recognition received when the design is implemented.

"It is very satisfying when something of mine gets produced and printed," Bhattacharya said.

The Rickert-Ziebold competition is held every year for graduating seniors in art and design. Once the final entries are thinned out, the best of the work is displayed and awarded in the final competition. This year, a winning student or student group will receive a prize of $20,000.

White male suspected in sex crime

By Jeff Stoerber
Staff Writer

A 22-year-old Carbondale woman reported to Carbondale Police that she was sexually assaulted in the 300 block of West Chestnut Street at 10:20 p.m. Monday.

The woman told police she was waiting at the Amtrak train station when a man approached her saying her boyfriend had sent him to pick her up, police said.

The man took the woman to the 300 block of West Chestnut Street where she was sexually assaulted, police said. The woman told police she managed to break free and run. She was found by police who responded to a report of a hysterical woman walking in the street.

The suspect is described as a 5-foot-11 white male with a medium build driving a yellow vehicle, police said. No arrest was made. The incident is still under investigation, police said.

Farm bill to provide extended policies on agriculture, food

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

The proposed 1990 farm bill, simply an extension of the 1985 farm bill, is good for the agriculture industry, said Jeffrey Beaulieu, associate professor of agribusiness economics at SIU-C.

Beaulieu said the farm bill is a comprehensive piece of legislation that sets direction and policy for a variety of farm and food policies.

Beaulieu added that the bill is a way to adjust farming legislation that has been in place since 1938 and will completely affect agriculture in the United States from the family farmer to international trade.

He said a look back at the costs to the federal government to keep agriculture healthy in the past shows the farm bill is effective. In 1986, Beaulieu said the cost to operate the farm programs was $26 billion. The cost estimated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture for this year is $10 to $12 billion. He said the costs in the 1980s were so high because of the "worldwide recession."

The 1985 bill expires in September, but Beaulieu said Congress can extend that date if the final details of the complex bill aren't settled by then.

The 1985 bill called for the limitation of commodity production by:

- a long term conservation program to retire 30 million acres for ten years.

- a provision to prevent new, untilled land from being row-cropped.

- a minimum set-aside of 15 percent by farmers if deemed necessary by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Beaulieu said, "The legislation works perfectly."

The 1985 bill offered incentives to farmers to protect highly erodible land through a number of different programs, he said. The bill required farmers with highly erodible land to have a soil conservation plan on file with the USDA by this month.

"Response to this has been good, almost great," Beaulieu said.

Despite the fact the cost of farm programs has decreased in the past years, Beaulieu said, cost is still an issue. The cost is worth it, he said.

"It seems to be the benefits outweigh the cost," he said.

Though not much in the new bill will be new, Beaulieu said, environmental concerns are becoming evermore prominent.

One part of the bill Beaulieu admits needs some consideration is the requirement for farmers to establish a "base" crop. He said corn is the primary base crop in this area. Farmers who plant something other than their base crop can lose part or all of their benefits and this discourages rotation of crops, which can damage soil quality, Beaulieu said.

The Environmental Magazine, published bi-monthly by Earth Action Network, Inc., addressed the requirement in the most recent issue. The contention of the article was that not rotating crops promotes weed and insect growth as well as erosion on land planted in corn and soybeans. The article quoted a Wisconsin farmer lamenting that obeying the requirement, while potentially harmful to the environment, is the only way to "survive" in farming.

Mighty Lemon Drops slated to play Shryock

By Stephanie Steirer
Staff Writer

The Mighty Lemon Drops are coming to SIU-C for a performance that is sure to be sweet.

The Mighty Lemon Drops, with special guests The Ocean Blue, will perform at 8 p.m., on Feb. 7 at Shryock Auditorium.

Formed in Wolverhampton, U.K., in 1985, The Mighty Lemon Drops, who have dominated the Top 40 charts in the U.K., have quickly become a favorite among college students throughout the United States.

Since the debut of their independently-released single, "Like an Angel," which gave the Drops their first big hit, bidding wars broke out between nine record companies with Sire Records coming out on top.

Their debut album, "Happy Head," produced by Stephen Street of The Smiths, features many of the Drops' performance favorites including "Other Side of You" and "My Biggest Thrill."

On the Drops first U.S. tour,

During late 1988 and early 1989, the Drops spent most of their time touring the globe, playing over 120 concert dates, including sold out performances in the U.K., Europe and the United States.

Most recently, the Drops have been busy working on their third album "Laughter."

Mailman denies blasting dog

SAN FERNANDO, Calif. (UPI) — A postman pleaded innocent Tuesday to charges he shot and killed a family's dog while delivering mail on his route.

Floyd B. Sterling, 34, of Pacoima, appearing in Municipal Court for arraignment, denied one count each of cruelty to animals, carrying a concealed weapon and discharging a firearm with gross negligence, all felonies.

Municipal Court Commissioner Gerald Richardson allowed Sterling to remain free on $5,000 bail and ordered him to return to court Feb. 6 to schedule a preliminary hearing.

If convicted of cruelty to animals, Sterling could be sentenced to state prison for up to three years and fined $20,000.

Sterling is accused of shooting to death Skippy, a 2-year-old mixed German shepherd owned by Tammie Brody and her family, while on his postal route Dec. 26.

Brody, 27, said Sterling "freaked out" and shot the dog just as she was about to give the postman his Christmas present, a bottle of vodka. She said Skippy was not menacing Sterling at the time.

Police said an autopsy revealed that Skippy was shot while running away from the mailman.

The Brody family buried Skippy during an elaborate funeral service at a Calabasas pet cemetery Jan. 3.

Police Blotter

A University student was struck by a vehicle headed east on Lincoln Drive Tuesday afternoon, SIU Security Police said.

Kuki Etsuko, 36, of Carbondale, was admitted to Memorial Hospital of Carbondale and listed in stable condition Monday night, a hospital spokesperson said.

According to police, Terry L. Johnson, 31, of Herrin, was driving east on Lincoln Drive and struck Kuki, who was walking south across Lincoln Drive from Mill Street, at about 4:45 p.m.

Police did not issue any tickets at the scene, but officials said the accident is under investigation.

Wait and see' attitude of editors

CHICAGO (UPI) — It's not that the editors of the World Book Encyclopedia didn't admire the job James Hayes, captain of the United Airlines flight that crashed last year in Sioux City, Iowa, did. It's just that they don't think his contribution to society was of enough "lasting significance" to merit inclusion in their revised reference work.

On the other hand, the microwave oven, Jack Nicholson's carpal tunnel syndrome cut the mustard and are in the revised edition.

"It's no easy task to get into the World Book Encyclopedia," said Hayes, Editor A. Richard Harmet. "You can't be a passing fancy or a flash in the pan."

Harmet said Hayes' feat "will fade with each passing year. A person must have made a major contribution to his or her field; or, an event or subject must have lasting significance. We often take a wait-and-see attitude."

The "wait-and-see" attitude led the World Book staff to wait until the 1990 edition to add articles on such subjects as Hispanic Americans and the women's movement. In previous editions, the publication said, those subjects were "covered in other articles."

Among the other people included for the first time in this year's World Book were 1920s and 1930s

Other newly included subjects include the American Association of Retired Persons, biotechnology, computerized tomography, the Hubble Space Telescope, microwave ovens, positron emission tomography and the surgeon general of the United States.

State program to recycle old telephone books

CHICAGO (UPI) — A statewide telephone book recycling program is the latest step in the effort to cut down on paper waste, officials announced.

The first of the program's directions is to encourage offices, schools and other users to use paper. Nearly 6 million copies of telephone directories and property tax assessor instructions were made from recycled paper.

The program is part of the state's initiative with the directory publishers to use recycled paper in their publications. Gov. James R. Thompson's office said Tuesday, "These initiatives will help protect our natural resources and reduce the lives of our rapidly diminishing landfills."

The state Central Management Services Department is overseeing the voluntary program, collecting the 34,000 1989 state government directories and any older phone books left from previous years.

At 50, Nicklaus to compete in first seniors tournament

Scrrips Howard News Service

As golf legend Jack Nicklaus undergoes the transformation from Golden Bear to Golden Oldie, he is struck by a difficult question.

What does he gain by playing on the Seniors Tour, which is filled with players he regularly defeated but who are now loaded for bear? Nicklaus, who turned 50 Sunday, will compete in his first seniors tournament this weekend, the $450,000 Seniors Skins Game in Hawaii. Arnold Palmer, Lee Trevino and Gary Player are in the field.

"THAT'S A GOOD question," Nicklaus said. "I suppose there are two or three things that would fall into that category. No matter what I am, I'm a golfer first. I love competition more than anything I do. I get really charged up. It's the ego factor that I'll go out. That's what kept me out after I won the Masters (in 1986), figuring lightning might strike again."

But lightning hasn't struck since, though Nicklaus doggedly insists he still belongs on the regular PGA Tour. He will test that resolve extensively in the next few months. Commitments to 30 under-construction golf courses will take him back to the business world in June.

"FINANCIALLY IS certainly not the reason I'm playing," said

Nicklaus. His Golden Bear conglomerate reportedly makes up to $400 million a year.

"Golf has ceased to be my way of making my living for the last 15 years. I think the majority of golfing people are looking forward to me and Trevino and others coming out. I think I would be kicking them in the face if I didn't do that."

BUT HE would be admitting defeat if he fled the regular tour. He isn't ready to do that. He may never be. If he thought like that, he might have changed direction in 1980. He became 40, a more traumatic milestone than 50, he says. He also was coming off what he called a terrible year. At 39, he won a mere $59,434 after winning at least $244,000 the previous eight seasons.

He dealt with the disappointment and rallied boldly to win the 1980 U.S. Open and PGA Championship.

FOR MUCH of the 1980s, as business became so many sand traps and back problems hindered his backswing, his attention turned from golf. Playing an abbreviated schedule last year, he won $96,595. His best showings came where his best showings have always come — in majors. He has won 20 in his career.

This year, he says, is the first since he was 40 that he set concrete golf goals — winning a tournament on each tour.

"I HAVE NOT decided in my own mind that I can't play on the regular tour. If you look at the majors (last year), which are the ones I really get ready for. Only about five American golfers beat me.

"When I tee it up, I play it as a game. It doesn't make any difference whether it's for 10 cents or a million dollars. You go out, pull the club back and see if you can do it better than anyone else. But I just can't do it as well as I used to. I want to be competitive. I don't want to go out there and embarrass myself."

NICKLAUS HAS been characterized as someone who, when he reached the top of a mountain, immediately started looking for another mountain. He longs to regain that passion.

"I haven't looked for many of those mountains for about 10 years. That's been a problem for me. I suppose this year, the one thing that has happened is I'm physically better than I've been in the past few years. My back has been very good. I've been able to do some of the things I want to do, running, lifting weights. I'm in pretty darn good shape for someone my age, even for someone younger."

Boilermakers surprising in surge to top of volatile Big 10 Conference

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Purdue's 13th-ranked Boilermakers, known for over-achieving in Gene Keady's 10 years as coach, have outdone their most optimistic expectations this year.

Rising from their first losing season in 23 years, the Boilermakers can match their best Big Ten start in 46 years with a victory Thursday at Ohio State. Purdue is 13-2 overall and alone atop the conference with a 5-0 league mark.

"We're surprising some folks. Maybe we're even surprising ourselves a little bit," Keady said. "I never dreamed we would be 5-0. But this thing is a long way from over. We're taking what we get right now."

"I keep thinking we're going to get ours anytime, but I've always believed you can win the next game. When a player or two comes through who people aren't counting on, you can move up a few notches. That's what we've done," Keady said.

Tony Jones, a senior guard, leads the Boilermakers with 16 points and 5.3 assists a game. But Keady has been most pleased with Jones' defensive work.

"One of the things everybody underrates Tony on is defense," Keady said. "He's played the best guards in the nation and played well. He's the best defensive guard in the Big Ten."

Center Stephen Scheffler has hit 23 of his last 24 shots and leads the Big Ten in shooting percentage. The 6-foot-9 senior from Ada, Mich., averages 14.9 points and 6.5 rebounds. He is the team's strongest player, bench pressing 350 pounds, and highest leaper, with a 33-inch vertical jump. Together with Jones and Ryan Berning, he has provided the senior leadership that pulls Purdue together.

"Last year we had some problems because we lacked character," Keady said. "At the beginning of this year, our three seniors were determined to be great leaders and they've done that. We wanted to come out of the block fast. We've got kids good enough to win with if they continue to play together. So far they've done that."

Chuckie White, a junior forward who sat out last year with a shoulder injury, also has sparked Purdue with his play, averaging 7.8 points and 22 minutes of play a game while alternating with Jimmy Oliver. The former Arkansas Mr. Basketball said he dreaded going to practice last season because losing had depressed the team.

"I'm feeling more comfortable now," White said. "Early on I felt like the team didn't need me to score. Now I'm contributing more and it comes from crashing the boards hard, running the floor and being scrappy. I hate to lose. I want to win so bad I can taste it. That's why I'm here, to get everybody pumped up."

Super Bowl Picture Day like 'sizing up livestock in a pen'

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Only the hog auctioneer was missing.

The NFL Tuesday held what it likes to call Picture Day, when Super Bowl players met Super Bowl reporters in the Superdome, a gathering less suited for the sports pages than the commodity exchange.

To be sure, there were cameras and mimicans, but this was strictly a day for sizing up livestock.

The players from both teams were herded into a pen, their numbers branded to their chest and back. The finest slabs, with name tags identifying their breed, stood on podiums for inspection by the press — as crude and as slovenly a bunch of hog farmers as you will find anywhere.

The other players, less desirable sides of beef, grazed off to the side. Occasionally, a stray hog farmer came along, poked a microphone in the side, looking for tender meat in the belly.

Sometimes the hog farmer found what he wanted, sometimes not. He moved on. By the end of the day, everybody was scraping manure off his shoes.

The Denver Broncos faced the hog farmer, first. Moving counterclockwise around the pen, it went like this:

No. 26, Bobby Humphrey. He makes the Broncos' running game go. He is wearing sunglasses and sitting on a platform, fenced in by a wooden guard rail. He cracked two ribs against the Browns in the AFC championship game. Humphrey insists he will play Sunday. Scores of hog farmers approach, inquiring about his ribs. Nobody asks if the ribs will be barbecued.

Dan Reeves. No number for him. He is the coach and head hog. People keep saying his hogs are headed to the slaughterhouse. Reeves shakes his snout and says this isn't so. "As soon as someone says you can't do something, that makes you more determined." This is one omerly hog.

No. 7 (John Elway). We're talking blue-ribbon hog here. The hog farmers can't raise the bidding high enough. Elway sits with arms folded. His voice is hoarse. "We've got nothing to lose," he tells the hog farmers. "They're the dynasty with the pressure." This is a hog to believe in.

No. 82 (Vance Johnson). He is also wearing sunglasses, although sunlight cannot penetrate this concrete pen. Johnson says Sunday's 12-point spread is "ridiculous." A few days ago in Colorado someone called a hair salon and made a threat on his life. Johnson says he is not scared, but is not likely to get a trim there.

Moving down the pen, No. 32 (rookie Melvin Bratton) talks about being drafted in the seventh round. (No. 84) Ricky Nattiel stretches by himself.

A cluster of hogs — No. 64 (Billy Bryan), No. 74 (Andrew Provence), No. 51 (Marc Munford), No. 58 (Scott Curtis) and No. 57 (Mike Ruetter) — have only themselves for company. No. 83 (Michael Young) is talking country music.

No. 27 (Steve Atwater) has the hog farmers captivated with musings on zone defenses. No. 36 (Mark Haynes) is reading a newspaper. No. 92 (Alphonso Carreker) recalls growing up in Columbus, Ohio.

Toward the middle of the pen is Mike Shanahan. Former head hog of the Raiders, he is now an assistant hog with the Broncos. He talks about life, and notes, "it goes on."

No. 8 (Gary Kubiak) is not prime stock. He backs up Elway and the Broncos pray he will not have to waddle up behind center. "Elway's leadership," he says, "comes from his desire to win."

On a platform stands No. 80 (Mark Jackson). He says the team is not here to have fun. No. 54 (Keith Bishop) lies on his stomach with a business card in his hand.

Nearby is No. 90 (Ron Holmes), who insists you must rely on your football instincts. No. 49 (Dennis Smith) reflects on a "miserable" 8-8 season in 1988. No. 71 (Greg Kagen) lectures on blitzing.

The Superdome clock begins to count down. The hog farmers are nearly out of time. They are shuffled into another room where they chow down on biscuits, eggs and ham.

Another shipment of hogs is to arrive shortly — the 49ers. The hog farmers return to the pen, awaiting this pedigree stock. The new hogs are late. The hog farmers are in a lather and begin interviewing each other.

The hogs, outfitted in red and gold, finally take their places. No. 80 (Jerry Rice) is there. So is No. 16 (Joe Montana), No. 42 (Ronnie Lott) and No. 53 (Roger Craig), all Grade A selections.

The hog farmers marvel over their size and the meat on their bones. All agree, these are as fine a group of hogs anyone has ever seen.

Rabbi cards rivaling baseball cards at Hebrew schools in Miami Beach

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Rabbi cards are the latest collecting rage among young scholars at Miami Beach Hebrew schools, rivaling baseball cards in popularity.

Similar to baseball cards, the 4-by-6-inch rabbi cards feature color photos of revered Orthodox rabbis on one side and basic religious statistics, in Hebrew and English, on the other.

Among students at Yeshiva Elementary School, Rav Yisroel Abuchatzceirah, or "Baba Sali" as the children call him, is the Don Mattingly of rabbi cards.

He "made very good miracles happen," explained Shmuel Selmar, 10, who rates the rabbi card with his prized Mattingly baseball card.

Abuchatzceirah is one of 1 Jewish leaders featured on rabbi cards manufactured by Torah Personalities Inc. of Baltimore. Other smaller, black-and-white rabbi cards are also on the market but the color cards seem to be the most popular, store owners said yesterday.

Teachers and administrators use the cards as rewards for students who recite their prayers well or excel in schoolwork.

of it," Shipley said. "He comes in and gives us a good three-point shooter. That's something a lot of people said we didn't have."

The Salukis lost their second Valley game in a row by losing to Drake 79-71 Jan. 13, a game in which the Dawgs collectively played their worst game of the season. Wynn suffered a dismal game from the field, going 0 for 6 and failing to score a point.

"I thought about that game a lot," Wynn said. "That's always in the back of your mind when you have a frustrating game like that. You just have to forget about it — confidence is the thing, you gotta bounce back."

Bounce back he did. In the Dawgs next game, a 62-60 victory over Indiana State in Terre Haute Jan. 18, Wynn took only two shots, but connected on one of the biggest buckets of the game in a must-win situation for the Salukis.

The score was tied at 53, the Salukis were struggling and Indiana State was trying to take control of the game. The Dawgs' leading scorer, Freddie McSwain, went down with a knee injury. Wynn entered the game and nailed a three-pointer to give the Dawgs some breathing room.

"I just wanted to make sure I concentrated and put enough arch on the ball," Wynn said. "That's the key to my whole game. If I can come out with confidence, my shot looks pretty good. If I don't, it's going to be a pretty dismal day for me."

Indiana State battled back and eventually tied the score at 60-all with :09 remaining, setting up Sterling Mahan's winning shot at the buzzer. But head coach Rich Herrin knows that Wynn's shot was important in keeping the momentum away from the Sycamores on their home floor.

Herrin referred to that shot as a "big time three-pointer."

"They're not going to play a zone when Wynn comes in," Herrin said. "They (Valley teams) know he can hit that shot. He is known in the league now. Matt Wynn is not a secret weapon anymore. I'm sure he believes in his ability and I sure believe in it."

Although Wynn won't take his playing time for granted, he would like to continue to contribute to the team's success.

"I'm just happy I can come in and play a role — shoot the basketball and bust up a zone," Wynn said. "If I can come out with confidence and shoot the ball well, I'll be pretty effective."

Bears' home stand.

"Right now I think Illinois State is the team to beat but my opinion may change after we play Southern and Eastern," Burnett said.

The Salukis, Illinois State and Southwest Missouri were expected to compete for the conference title, but the Bradley Braves may be the dark horse in the Gateway.

Bradley made its presence known in the Gateway title chase with a 68-66 upset victory over Illinois State Jan. 17 at Robertson Fieldhouse in Peoria.

The Braves took SIU-C into overtime Jan. 6 before losing 73-67.

Bradley finished seventh in the Gateway with a 6-12 mark last season and were picked eighth in the preseason coaches poll.

"Apparently we have surprised some people," Bradley coach Lisa Boyer said. "We had a poor showing at the end of last season. We are happy with our record, but the season is young."

While it may be a surprise to others, Boyer expected her team to be competitive this season.

"I think we have talented players and a balanced scoring attack," Boyer said. "But we need to keep going out and doing it. This is an even conference. Even the teams not doing that well are playing competitively."

Boyer expects the Gateway to remain close.

"I don't know what to think," Boyer said. "Southwest is playing pretty well. Southern had two crushing losses to be in the season but Cindy Scott brought them back. They are well-coached and talented. Illinois State is a confident, veteran team that knows what it takes."

Eastern Illinois, Drake, and Indiana State are not far out of the hunt with 3-4 records.

"I assume they are waiting to explode because they are proven winners," Boyer said.

Western Illinois (2-6), Northern Iowa (1-6) and Wichita State bring up the rear in the Gateway.

With an 18-game conference schedule, first-year Wichita State coach Linda Hargrove hopes her team can make a run in the Gateway.

"There is a lot of parity in the conference and we're not out of it yet," Hargrove said. "We would like to at least be competitive against everyone and surprise some people."

Moon named NFL Man of the Year

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Houston quarterback Warren Moon Tuesday chastised the media for publicizing players who present a negative image.

"There's a small number of players in the NFL that get into trouble and a lot more guys in our sport doing positive things," said Moon, who came to the Super Bowl city to receive a $25,000 check for his selection as the NFL's Man of the Year. "But that's not what you read about. It seems like we're always looking to knock people off their pedestal instead of raising people up that need our help. "I make a lot of money and I have a lot to give," Moon said. "By me giving, it shows I'm putting my money where my mouth is. Fortunately, I am in a position to make a big impact on young people. We are role models whether we like it or not."

Illini-bound Calvary star making mark with fans

United Press International

Springfield Calvary Academy basketball Coach Jim Drew likes to recount what happened earlier this season in a game at Lewistown to illustrate the popularity of his star Rennie Clemons.

"We're in the lockers dressing and 35 Lewistown students barge in to get his autograph," Drew said Tuesday. "It's like traveling on the road with Bruce Springsteen everywhere we go."

Clemons, a 6-foot senior guard, has already signed with the University of Illinois. He's averaging 29.3 points per game after netting 33 last season.

"Part of his appeal is going to Illinois but he also happens to be a tremendously exciting player and a nice kid," said Drew, whose team is 13-2 and ranked No. 2 in Class A by the United Press International Board of Coaches.

Clemons' strengths are penetrating, dishing off to an open man and his 42-inch vertical jump.

"This season he's working more on his 3-point shot because that's where Illinois wants him to improve," Drew said. "I think he'll help Illinois right off because I know he can play defense in the Ten."

Clemons has scored more than 2,600 career points and has scored 50 or more points three times in his career in a single game. In a game this season against Pontiac he scored 25 points in one quarter.

Mind you, this is not a one-man team. The No. 2 scorer is 6-5, 265-pound Herb McMath, a Division I prospect in football and basketball who is averaging 20 points and 14 rebounds. McMath is the son of Herb McMath, a former player with the Oakland Raiders.

"Those are our two main men," said Drew, whose team is favored by many to win this season's state Class A title. But that was the case last season, too, when the Saints were upset by Tuscola.

to improve." Herrin said Amaya's physical abilities will not be limited to the post position in the future.

"We'd like to move him into the year, Herrin said. "He can shoot the basketball, but he needs to work on his ballhandling and his passing to move away from the goal a little bit. He just needs to know his perimeter game."
