Iraqi exploit of POWs condemned

United Press International

With U.S.-led forces claiming air superiority in the skies over Iraq, world leaders condemned Saddam Hussein's use of captured pilots as human shields and propaganda tools.

President Bush urged that the men "be treated properly, that they be given the treatment that is accorded to them under the international conventions. And they are not being (treated properly) and America is angry about this...."

With the Persian Gulf war ending its fifth day, U.S. military officials said they were trying to destroy Iraq's remaining Scud missile launchers but were "nowhere near" completing the task. A new Scud launch was reported Monday evening but it landed harmlessly in the Persian Gulf.

So far the Scud attacks on Israel and Saudi Arabia have caused no deaths and little damage or have been shot down by U.S. Patriot missiles.

Air Force Maj. Gen. Burton Moore, briefing reporters in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, said the United States lost another plane — a Navy F-14 Tomcat with two aboard — in recent attacks. So far, nine U.S. planes have been downed with one confirmed dead and 14 missing. Other allied combat losses include five planes and nine missing.

U.S. military officials continued to be very upbeat about the allied successes in the air and the lack of effective Iraqi response. Moore said in his briefing another two Iraqi aircraft had been shot down for a total of 17 during 8,100 allied sorties since the war began Thursday morning.

In an interview on Cable News Network, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Saddam has "been unable to do very much because

Airports see no decrease in local flights

By John Patterson

The threat of terrorism has not affected the number of people flying the friendly skies from Southern Illinois, but local airports are taking necessary precautions.

The number of flights going in and out of Williamson County Regional Airport has remained constant, and airport officials stress maximum convenience with maximum cooperation for passengers while following federal airport security requirements resulting from Operation Desert Storm.

At 12:05 a.m. Jan. 17 the Federal Aviation Administration raised the threat level of all airports to Level 4, which is the highest security level.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has threatened to use terrorism as part of his arsenal, thus raising security concerns at airports throughout the United States.

Level 4 requires a 100-foot perimeter around the airport terminal, no unattended luggage in the area, 24-hour armed security, no curb-side loading, hand search of all carry-on luggage and restricted entry to the airport terminal and airport grounds, said Bill Keller, assistant director of

Terrorism threats quash programs

Overseas study cancelled by some U.S. universities

WASHINGTON (UPI) — While a handful of U.S. colleges have canceled their study-abroad programs as a result of the war in the Middle East, most of New York's colleges are taking a less panicky approach to keeping their students safe.

Fear of terrorist reprisals against American students last week led officials at Duke University, Trinity College and Georgetown University to drop several of their spring semester programs in Western Europe.

But most New York-based universities are working with students, their families and the State Department in order to keep the programs running without interruption — and without risk.

"We've been in constant contact with the (State Department's) counter-terrorism desk, the police and consulates in Italy," said Robert Hill, spokesman at Syracuse University. Just two years ago, 35 Syracuse students were killed returning from their semester abroad programs when a terrorist's bomb exploded aboard Pan Am Flight 103.

"Everyone, including the State Department, has essentially told us not to panic, to continue with our program, but to be watchful," said Hill.

With about 200 students enrolled in overseas programs, officials at Cornell University in Ithaca have been also closely monitoring world events. "We have been saying for some time that students and their parents must look at the problem themselves," said Urban DeWinter, director of Cornell Abroad, which has programs in most countries in Western Europe and in Israel.

Hundreds praise King for visions of unity, peace at SIUC breakfast

By Jefferson Robbins
Staff Writer

Community and African-American leaders and about 500 members of the Carbondale public crowded into the Carbondale National Association for the Advancement of Colored People breakfast to honor Martin Luther King Jr.

The NAACP's 8th Annual Memorial Breakfast, held Monday morning in the Student Center Ballrooms, paid tribute to a man called "the prophet of the century" by Loyd Sumner, president of the NAACP's Carbondale chapter.

Sumner, SIUC President John C. Guyon and U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carterville, emphasized in their introductory speeches the themes of spiritual unity and world peace envisioned in King's philosophy.

"We've come a long way and we have a long way to go," Poshard said of the struggle for equality of black Americans.

Daraell Wheeler, assistant coordinator of the SIUC Black Affairs Council, said the ceremony was moving and touching.

"I saw something today I've wanted to see for a long time," Wheeler said, "the coming together of campus and community."

Otha Davis, executive vice president of the Springfield Urban League and keynote speaker of the breakfast, praised King's heroism in the face of establishment opposition.

"(King) was a great man, almost mythological and legendary in stature," Davis said. "He stood for love and compassion for all, even one's enemies."

While recognizing the need for national heroes such as King,

Davis, a former Carbondale resident, pointed out that heroism of one kind or another is required at all levels of the black community.

Local heroes and role models, Davis said, can be immensely valuable to growing young people.

In his own youth, Davis said, parents and African-American leaders in Carbondale served as "a buffer against those negative elements who sought to injure us."

"We cannot shirk our responsibility to our young people to act as their buffer," Davis said.

The shadow of war in the Persian Gulf hung over the proceedings as speakers expressed their hopes for peace in that region.

Gary Wolf, a graduate student in journalism and member of the Coalition for Mideast Peace, read portions of a letter from King's widow, Coretta Scott King, that expressed a strong hope for peaceful negotiation to end the war.

Stamp prices increase today

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

It will not be official until 1 p.m. today, but U.S. postal rates are scheduled to go up.

The cost of a first-class stamp is expected to be raised to 29 cents, upon notification from the Board of Governors of the Postal Service, said Bonnie Dawe, postmaster at the Elkville Post Office. Dawe said the increase will go into effect Feb. 3.

Postal customers can buy an "F" stamp once the official price has been announced, she said. The "F" stamp will be used temporarily until stamps bearing the price can be printed, Dawe said.

The Board of Governors last raised the price of stamps on April 3, 1988 from 22 cents to 25 cents.

UNLV atop poll again

NEW VEGAS (UPI) — Nevada-Las Vegas made a clean sweep of the United Press International college basketball ratings again Monday, remaining the unanimous No. 1 pick for the sixth straight week.

The Runnin' Rebels, who own the nation's longest winning streak at a school-record 24 games, earned all 40 first-place votes cast by the 42-member Board of Coaches to finish with 600 points.

Arkansas remained No. 2 with 548 points. No. 3 Indiana and No. 4 Ohio State swapped places for the second consecutive week, coming just hours before their Big Ten showdown in Bloomington, Ind.

UNLV, trying to become the first school to win back-to-back national titles since UCLA's seven in a row from 1967 to 1973, improved their record to 13-0 last week with routs of 117-76 over Cal-Irvine and 114-63 over Long Beach State.

"I've seen for 30 years now all the good teams, and (UNLV) is one of the best," said Santa Barbara Coach Jerry Pimm, whose team was to face the Runnin' Rebels late Monday night. "They cannot be distracted. They don't have any weaknesses."

Nevada-Las Vegas is averaging 103.9 points a game on offense and allowing opponents an average of 71.8. The last time the Runnin' Rebels were not the unanimous No. 1 pick was Dec. 10, when UNLV received 41 first-place votes and Georgetown got the other one.

Before this year, the last unanimous No. 1 choice was Arizona in the next-to-last week of the 1988-89 season. North Carolina was the last team to be a unanimous No. 1 in consecutive ratings, sweeping the vote for three straight weeks in 1985-86.

Indiana, which was leapfrogged by Ohio State a week ago, jumped back over the Buckeyes after victories over Purdue and Iowa.

Giants look to even score

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — In a season filled with paybacks, the New York Giants are looking to settle one last debt when they face the Buffalo Bills in Sunday's Super Bowl.

The 49ers defeated the Giants 17-13 on Dec. 15, a game in which both Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly and New York quarterback Phil Simms were injured. Kelly has returned and seems in top form. Simms watched last Sunday's 15-13 last-season triumph over the two-time defending Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers from the sidelines on crutches.

The Giants have not missed a beat without Simms. Backup Jeff Hostetler has led New York to four straight victories and eased the sting of a 7-3 loss to the 49ers on Dec. 3.

But that's been the story of New York's season — settling debts with the other NFL teams. New York ended a four-game losing streak against Philadelphia in the opener, ended a three-game losing streak against the Los Angeles Rams at mid-season and defeated the Chicago Bears for the first time since 1969 in the playoffs.

The Giants left San Francisco on a charter flight immediately after the NFC title game, arriving at Tampa shortly after 2 a.m. EST. The Bills, who played home Sunday, were scheduled to leave at 6 p.m. Monday.

The Giants, listed as 6-point underdogs by Nevada oddsmakers, are now one step from their second Super Bowl title in four years.

"Everybody can make their own history," said Hostetler, who has yet to throw an interception in a postseason game. "I never dreamed I'd be taking the team to the Super Bowl. So many people have been doubting me, doubting the Giants ... We want to make them all believers."

New York made believers out of the 49ers in the NFC championship game. While the Giants did not manage to score a touchdown, they controlled the flow with a balanced offense and a stifling defense. New York picked up 152 yards on the ground and 176 yards in the air, shutting down San Francisco's anemic running game.

Buffalo administered a 51-3 rout of the Los Angeles Raiders, who relied late in the season on the running of Marcus Allen and Bo Jackson. The Bills gained 202 yards on the ground and 300 in the air in advancing to their first Super Bowl.

"We knew we had it, but I think we surprised L.A. a little bit because maybe they didn't think we'd be that tough," Kelly said. "Nobody thought we could score 51 points on this team."

The Giants are aware of how dangerous the Bills can be after losing to them at home six weeks ago.

"They sure looked awesome today," Giants Coach Bill Parcells said Sunday of the Bills. "Fortunately, we're familiar with them, and they with us."

SIUC diving team drowning in injuries

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

Last season the SIUC women's diving team was breaking records. This season all it's been able to do is break bones.

Diving coach Dave Ardrey has seen all three of his divers go down with injuries—two with broken bones, one with a severe sprain.

"It's extremely frustrating," Ardrey said. "We're down to a point where we have no one to compete. It's even more frustrating because two of the injuries are not related to the sport."

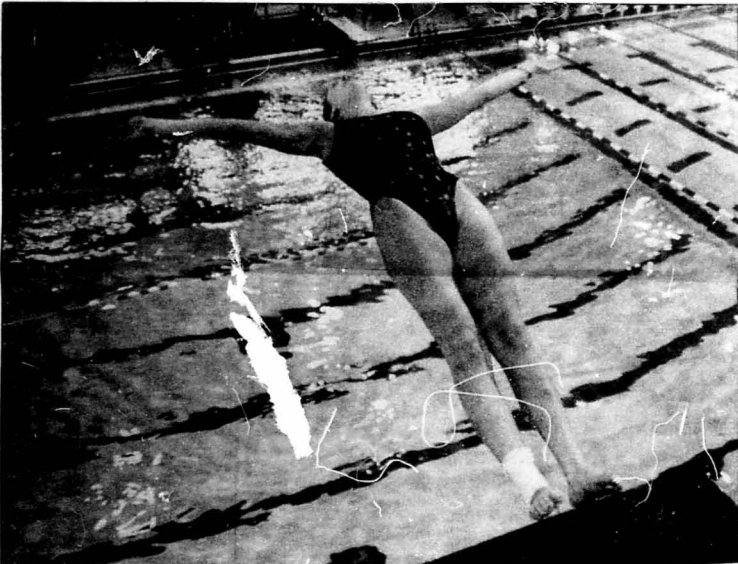

Junior Michelle Albrecht, an NCAA zone qualifier a year ago, has been out of action since last March when she jumped from her loft, landed wrong and broke her foot. She had surgery during the holiday break and is in rehabilitation now.

"My foot feels the best it has since I broke it," Albrecht said. "I really didn't want to have to go through the surgery, but I think that was the best thing for it."

Junior Kristi Kerrill is suffering from a second-degree sprained foot from when she did a front jump entry into a shallow pool Nov. 16 at the University of Missouri at Columbia.

"I'm still a little sore, but I've been able to walk on it," Kerrill said. "I've been getting treatment and I hope to be back for the conference meet."

Freshman Donnelle DuBois, who Ardrey expected to be able to compete at the NCAA level right away, broke her foot when she fell down a flight of stairs. DuBois has been injured before and is making a quick recovery. Ardrey said she could possibly return to action this weekend against Arkansas.

Added to Ardrey's problems is the fact that NCAA zone qualifier and team captain Laine Owen left the team at the end of the fall semester for personal reasons. Owen suffered a broken hand, but returned to the boards late in November.

Last summer Owen finished 24th at the Senior Nationals in Dallas, Texas. An eighth-place finish or better was needed to qualify for

San Francisco 49ers begin anew

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Gustly winds whistled through the streets of San Francisco Sunday night, but they came far too late to help the two-time defending Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers.

The breezes, fed by geography and the Pacific Ocean, have long been a 12th man for the 49ers' defense at blustery Candlestick Park. They make it nearly impossible at times for opposing quarterbacks and kickers to perform at the top of their game.

On Sunday afternoon, the flags were still at Candlestick, allowing New York kicker Matt Bahr to connect on an NFC Championship Game record five field goals, the final one as time ran out, to lift the

New York Giants to a 15-13 victory. The loss left San Francisco stunned and ended the team's attempt to become the first club to win three consecutive Super Bowl titles.

"It's the kind of loss that hurts now, but one that's going to hurt more in a few days," said coach George Seifert, who suffered his first-ever playoff setback in five post-season contests.

It was also the kind of loss that leads to soul-searching and changes. The game may have been the last for a host of veterans. Linebacker Keena Turner, cornerback Eric Wright and wide receiver Mike Wilson — who have played for the 49ers in all four Super Bowl victories — Pete Kugler, Fred Smerlas and Jim Fahnhorst may have all played their last game in a San Francisco uniform.

"A lot of things are going to happen in the off-season to make this team better," said safety Ronnie Lott. "It's going to be a lot of changes. It's inevitable. There would be a lot of changes on the team if we had won it all. You have to expect that they're going to make some changes to try to improve the team."

The 49ers rolled to an NFL-best 14-2 mark during the regular season, but it was a very deceiving record. San Francisco was a single-faceted offensive team in 1990 because of a lack of a running game. That Achilles' Heel became exposed under the pressure of the Giants' pass rush.

Singletary wins Starr award

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — Chicago Bears middle linebacker Mike Singletary is this year's recipient of the Athletes in Action Bart Starr Award.

Singletary, an eight-time All-Pro selection and a member of the NFL Team of the Decade, will be given the award at the Jan. 24 NFL-sanctioned 1991 Super Bowl Breakfast in Tampa.

The recipient of the Bart Starr award is considered the NFL player who best exemplifies outstanding character and leadership in the home, on the field and in the community. Candidates are nominated by NFL players and the winner is chosen by a selection committee.

Singletary makes his eighth consecutive Pro-Bowl appearance in February. The 10-year veteran out of Baylor University has led Chicago's defensive unit in tackles for eight years.

Singletary speaks to youth groups and charities such as the Hemophilia Foundation of Illinois and Drug and Substance abuse. He also is associated with Fellowship of Christian Athletes and Pro Athletes Outreach.

Fewer oil tankers travel Suez; reports of mine sweep denied

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — The chairman of the Suez Canal Authority said only one oil tanker from the Persian Gulf had navigated the canal Monday, a much lower figure than normal. Usually about 50 ships a day transit the canal and of those about five or 10 are oil tankers. The Suez Canal is a strategic waterway for navigation in the Middle East, especially for tankers carrying crude oil to Europe, Japan and the United States. Adet also denied a news agency report that the Suez Canal Authority had swept the canal for mines that might have been planted.

Soviet minister: says attack on Latvia not ordered

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet Interior Minister Boris Pugo said Monday he did not order the attack by Soviet "black beret" troops on the Latvian Interior Ministry in which five people were killed. Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Vitaly Churkin expressed regret for the assault Sunday night in the Latvian capital of Riga, but he indicated it was at least partly justified by nationalist policies of the local government.

Persian Gulf oil deliveries meeting expectations

Oil deliveries from the Persian Gulf have run according to script just as the U.S.-led allied air attack against Iraq last week exceeded high expectations, U.S. oil industry sources said Monday. Prior to the attack early Thursday morning local time, industry sources had expected Saudi Arabia would shut down oil fields in the north near the guns of the Iraqi army occupying Kuwait and cut daily oil output by 2 million to 3 million barrels.

War optimism decreases; so does stock trading

United Press International
 Stocks slipped in cautious trading on major global markets Monday as investors lost some of last week's optimism about the possibility of a quick end to the Persian Gulf war. Oil prices drifted higher in calm trading while the U.S. dollar eased. Analysts said that while the successful weekend defense against Scud missile attacks on Saudi Arabia was encouraging, Iraq's announcement that 20 captured allied pilots will be sent to "scientific and civilian" installations to be used as "human shields" undercut enthusiasm among participants in the markets.

Classmate remembers missing pilot as a joker

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Classmates of Air Force Col. David W. Eberly remember him more as a good student with a penchant for practical jokes than as a risk-taker, remembers Phil Ireland, a childhood friend and a fraternity brother of Eberly's at Indiana University. Eberly's F-15E fighter jet did not return from a mission over Iraq or Kuwait, the Department of Defense confirmed Sunday.

State responds to Gulf War by donating blood, money

United Press International
 Illinois continued to respond to fighting in the Persian Gulf region Monday but the activity shifted away from demonstrations and toward donations. A blood bank said contributions have doubled since the conflict began and Jewish groups said they raised more than $1 million during the weekend to help support Israel.

Old cooling-system parts sit outside of Morris Library after their removal.

New air conditioners prepare library for summer weather

By Amy Cooper
Staff Writer

A walk by Morris Library could get a little muddy as construction prepares the library for future warm days.

The walkway by the south entrance of the library, which is currently blocked off due to construction, is forcing students to walk through the mud. The concrete walkway should be clear within two weeks, said Allen Haake, supervising architect at the SIUC Physical Plant.

Workers are replacing the air conditioner in the basement and the cooling tower on the roof as part of a $740,000 project allocated through the state capital budget, Haake said. The old system, which cools the basement and the first and second floors of the library, was getting old and many of the repair parts were no longer being manufactured, Haake said.

"It (construction) has been disturbing because of the noise, but beyond that it hasn't affected us," said Kenneth Peterson, dean of Library Affairs. "The project was supposed to be finished by April 1, but it probably won't be done until the 30th," Haake said.

H & H Mechanical and Electrical Contractors of Carbondale are doing the construction on the three air conditioners.

First non-alcoholic nightclub successful on opening night

By Karen Radius
Staff Writer

The Funky Pickle's first weekend, though successful, had a few unexpected surprises. The first non-alcoholic bar on the Strip opened Jan. 18, and co-owner Steve Olsner said the opening went overwhelmingly well. Olsner said he estimated more than 1,700 people came into the club over the weekend. Olsner said because it was the opening night, he and his partner, Rob Emmel, had no idea what to expect.

"People really did not care that there wasn't any alcohol—they didn't seem to mind," he said.

But early Saturday morning when the teen-age crowd had cleared out, he said an estimated 1,200 to 1,500 people waited in line outside the bar. Olsner said the bar did not have enough security to handle such a large number of people.

"At 12:10 a.m., it appeared that the huge mob was going to 'bum rush' the door,"

Olsner said. "Although we advertised to be open until 5 a.m., the crowd was too uncontrollable."

He said someone called the police, who came to the bar and gave them two options. Funky Pickle! could close its doors or handle the crowd themselves.

"Handling the crowd ourselves was not an option," Olsner said.

The unruly crowd caused the club to close at 2 a.m. But, despite the trouble with the crowd, Carbondale Police Sergeant John Sysma said there were no other problems at the Funky Pickle! during the weekend.

"The teen-age crowd was absolutely fantastic," Olsner said. "More than 400 teens showed up from Carbondale, Murphysboro, Marion and Cartersville."

"We want to create a club that is completely integrated," he said.

On Jan. 25, the Funky Pickle! will have its grand opening and "We will start a line of promotions (nightly specials)," Olsner said.

GPSC to vote on surcharge

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

The Graduate and Professional Student Council will vote Wednesday night on a resolution to limit Illinois' temporary tax surcharge.

Passed two years ago by the General Assembly, the tax surcharge is due to expire this year. Money collected from the surcharge goes to Illinois universities, school districts and local governments, said GPSC president Charles Ramsey.

Ramsey said repercussions from the loss of revenue would be felt all over campus, in the form of program cuts, decreases in new equipment purchases and losses of graduate assistantships and student work positions. The Illinois Board of Higher Education reported a 24-percent increase in tuition would be necessary to replace the money provided to colleges and universities by the surcharge, Ramsey said.

He said the loss would have an immediate effect on campus. "It's obviously going to be, outside of the Persian Gulf war, the biggest issue on campus this spring," he said.

If the resolution passes, Ramsey said he would send copies of it to Undergraduate Student Government, the Faculty Senate, the Graduate Council, the Administrative and Professional Staff Council and the

IT'S PRO-CHOICE OR NO-CHOICE

Eighteen years ago today the Supreme Court ruled that it is legal for women to choose to have an abortion. We, the undersigned, today celebrate this decision because we are Pro-Choice.

We are not pro-abortion -- we are pro-choice. We have different reasons for being pro-choice. Some of us believe that no politician has a right to dictate what women do with their bodies. Some of us remember all too well the dangerous and demeaning conditions before Roe v. Wade made abortion safe and legal. Some of us believe that nobody has a right to impose moral and religious beliefs on everyone else. And some of us are unsure of our feelings about abortion.

But we all believe that abortion is an intimate and painful decision that people have every right to make for themselves. So on this special day, we urge you to decide for yourself -- It's Pro-choice or No choice.

Rolled-up sleeves show local support for troops

AMERICAN TROOPS need more than care packages and letters—they need our blood.

Local residents rolled up their sleeves last week at the Carbondale Wal-Mart in a war-effort donation drive. The goal of the week-long drive was to collect 65 units of blood.

The community more than answered the military's call for help with 116 units being collected by the end of the week.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS was the first region in the nation to be called upon to help raise blood supply stocks.

Regional Red Cross blood drive coordinator Vivian Ugent said that more than 375 units from Carbondale, Herrin and Mt. Vernon have already been shipped to the gulf.

Because military personnel make up a large group of donors during peacetime, it is only fair that new donors step forward to take their place and help ensure the supply will be stocked if it is needed in the gulf.

THE ANNUAL UNIVERSITY SPRING blood drive is scheduled to begin Feb. 10 and end Feb. 16. In the past, students were motivated to donate blood by the ongoing challenge between SIUC and the University of Missouri to establish a college donation record.

This year, the challenge lies in making sure the troops in the Persian Gulf have enough blood in the event of heavy casualties.

THIS COULD BE ONE of the most important blood drives at this University. It could also be the most vital act of support from civilians that will directly help the troops.

Quotable Quotes

"Nobody is yet speaking of reinstating the draft but if the war goes beyond 90 days, it would be seriously discussed, if not necessarily adopted."—said Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., on Congress' options in case of an extended war.

"Where do they get the audacity to say if the state governments have to tighten their belts?"—said Wisconsin Gov. Tommy Thompson in response to a request from Congress that ask states to be ready to make financial sacrifices for the war.

"It was exhilarating.. My blood was really pumping."—1st Lt. Gregory Anderson said about his first experience of flying into a dangerous situation in Iraq.

"Either they're really bad shots or they have no idea where everything is."—said an observer on the inaccuracy of Iraqi missiles hitting Saudi Arabia.

"What I'm worried about is that Saddam will do the old rope-a-dope...He'll take punches, lean back and then hit us when we come in."—Maj. Tim Timmons said in reference to Muhammad Ali's fighting style.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors. The letters space will be a forum for discussion of issues of public interest. Open, civil dialogue is the aim. Letters may be edited for length and content. Letters of fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Letters will be limited to 300 words. Letters that the editors deem objectionable because of potential libelous material or because extraordinary bad taste will not be published. Access to the letters space will be afforded to as many writers as possible to encourage diversity of points of view. Editors may impose, at their discretion, a limit on the frequency of publication of letters by an author. When a multitude of letters on the same subject are received, editors may select a few letters that are representative of those letters for publication.

Every letter must be signed by its author. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department, others by address and occupation or position appropriate to the nature of their letters. Letters for which authorship cannot be verified will not be published.

Development of minorities page threatens appropriate coverage

I am dismayed to find the announcement of the 1990 National Book Award winner relegated to the Minorities page.

A development of the controversy evolving from poor coverage of this year's homecoming queen and king, the Minorities page threatens to become a once-a-week receptacle for all news of anyone black. Potentially addressing an earlier racial homecoming controversy, folk balladeer "Donovan," the featured 1969 homecoming concert entertainer, provided the lyric: "I'm in love with the homecoming queen, whether she's black, white, yellow or green..."

National recognition of Book Award winner and alumnus Charles Johnson (1971, 1973) should be a source of pride and celebration shared by the entire student body, faculty and alumni of this institution.

This news belongs on the front page with a picture and an interview.

Instead, Mr. Johnson's race has moved front-page news to the "privileged" spot at the back of the paper.

Would the National Basketball Association Hall of Fame induction of N.Y. Knicks super star Walt Frazier (ex 1967) or the political career of Roland Burris (1959) be noted similarly?

Should the internationally known humanitarian Dick Gregory (ex 1956, hon 1987) win a Nobel Peace Prize, would the news be withheld for the Minorities section? Are we not reupholstering the back of the bus?

I will avoid liberal "melting pot" rhetoric and quote a prominent contemporary black American writer as he appeared on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley": "I think we, as a nation, are hyperconscious of race." (Charles Johnson.)

Amen, brother.

I encourage our campus community to examine our own racial "hyperconsciousness".

I urge the Daily Egyptian to rethink the Minorities page and get back to reporting the news about all of us, to all of us.—Thomas E. Kelley, senior, administration of justice.

Protesters too busy destroying flags to have realistic perspective on war

All the anti-war protesters in the United States today seem to think they have a better grasp on things than the rest of us, that they are nobly sacrificing their time to save the world. I'm here to tell you to lose the exaggerated sense of importance.

You people are trying to recapture the former place in the spotlight you had during Vietnam, and that time has passed. Check the polls, almost 70 percent of the people support resident Bush.

Your pathetic minority claims to be anti-violent, yet in San Francisco and elsewhere, you attack police, deface federal buildings and destroy squads to make your point. You want us to give peace a chance.

You fail to realize this is the only language Hussein understands. Would you talk sign language to a blind man?

This man, called the "Bully of the Middle East" has had six months to stop this, and he has given no indication he wants to.

If you are so concerned about the human race, think about the Kuwaitis, so desperate for freedom that one of them stated, "Let us take the Iraqi bullets. Just let the Americans come and save our souls for our children."

Maybe you have been too busy burning flags to read your history books, but this is just how World War II started.

It's the same stuff, different day, except we're not going to let that many people die this time.

John Stuart Mill once said, "War is an ugly thing, but not the ugliest thing. The decayed and degraded state of moral and patriotic feeling which thinks that nothing is worth war is much worse..."

Face it, your time has past. No one wants to see your sit-ins and peace marches today. This is a just war and your glory days are over. Put down your pickets and go have a tie-dye session.

Leave the running of this country and the world to people who have a firm grasp on reality.—Robert A. "Sgt. Rock" Lindholm, junior, administration of justice we've in effect established air superiority over Iraq. We've done a significant amount of damage to his strategic military capability. We're continuing to do that and now we're beginning to work on his forces inside Kuwait itself."

Cheney also said he was convinced the allies "had a very significant impact" on Saddam's capability to produce nuclear, chemical and biological weapons. But he would not say the task — one of the prime early objectives of the U.S. forces — was complete until he could see all the information.

The mood among the military men and women on the ground in Saudi Arabia — now numbering 472,000 — was equally optimistic, especially after the continued success of U.S. Patriot missiles at shooting down incoming Scud rockets.

"We picked 'em up and knocked them out of the skies," said 1st Lt. Quinton McCorvey, 26, of Pensacola, Fla., a former strong safety on Alabama A&M's football team. "Actually, I knocked it down. I'm a former athlete, so I've definitely been on some highs. But last night took me quite high."

"Biggest interception of his life," added Capt. Joe Deantora, 28, of Scranton, Pa.

But the enthusiasm over the war effort was dampened by Iraq's use of captured allied pilots — first by parading seven of them on Iraq television to give probably forced statements and then by announcing they would be used as human shields presumably at nuclear and chemical plant sites.

"Because the scientific and civilian centers are being targeted by the hostile air forces, it has been decided to deploy the captured enemy pilots, who number more than 20, around such centers," an Iraqi spokesman said in a Baghdad Radio dispatch monitored in Cairo. U.S. and other leaders immediately protested the threat as a war crime and a violation of accords signed in Geneva on the treatment of prisoners of war.

British Prime Minister John Major told the House of Commons, "Such action would be inhuman, illegal and totally contrary to the Third Geneva Convention." The French Foreign Ministry proclaimed "indignation" over the act and called in the Iraqi ambassador to lodge an official protest.

Expressing deep anger, Bush said Saddam's threat would not change the U.S. conduct of the war. "I've said that when he brutally held hostages that numbered up into the thousands and it's not going to make a difference," Bush said.

The Iraqi charge d'affaires, Khalid Shewayish, was summoned to the State Department to receive the U.S. letter of protest.

Saying Iraq "obeys all international conventions," Shewayish said he told U.S. officials of "our deepest concern about the civilian casualties — old women and old men — targeted by the brutal bombardments of the Americans and their so-called allies."

U.S. military officials said they have gone to great lengths to minimize the chances of civilian casualties in the bombing raids that began last week.

aviation at the Williamson County Regional Airport in Marion.

Keller said cars left for more than two hours would be towed away if not parked in long term parking.

The FAA also has other regulations involving the operating procedures of the airport, Keller said.

"We're trying to prohibit an attack or threat of an attack as much as we can," he said. "The regulations are instituted across the United States."

The Southern Illinois Airport in Carbondale also is increasing security, said Airport Manager Gary Shafer.

"There is an increased awareness of airport security needs," he said.

The Southern Illinois Airport has increased both building and field patrols in compliance with FAA regulations.

During normal operation at the Williamson County Regional Airport, security guards patrol from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m.

The security force includes two full-time guards along with two additional guards in the evening.

The airport has hired one additional security guard and the other half of the expanded security comes from the Williamson County Sheriff's Department. An escorted attack dog, also from the Sheriff's Department, prowls the airport grounds every other day, Keller said.

The FAA security level requires airport security and officials to do certain things that may inconvenience the public, but Keller said most people have responded favorably to the increased security measures.

"People appreciate the fact we're looking out for their safety," Keller said. "The people I've talked to have had favorable reactions. Some people are curious, especially of the dog."

Although the Williamson County Regional Airport is not very large, security is important, Keller said.

"We're no O'Hare, but we are part of the transportation system," Keller said.

Fitting into the transportation system is what makes security important, Keller said. Many of the airport's passengers travel to St. Louis, where the same security measures are being taken.

"Passengers in St. Louis and around the United States must be aware of the regulations," he said. "This stretches far and wide."

The State Department has not, however, issued any safety advisories against travel in Western Europe.

"The targets (terrorists) tend to go after are highly visible, symbolic targets, like embassies, United States Information Agency offices ... or places that are known American hangouts," said an official in the State Department's Office of Combating Terrorism. "But the problem in giving any definitive answer is, who knows where they're going to hit?"

Like officials at Cornell and Syracuse, most educators are advising their students abroad to keep low profiles, to refrain from boisterous behavior, dressing conspicuously, speaking English loudly, or traveling in large groups of Americans.

Some students have been cautioned against excessive travel and warned that airports, train and bus stations have been previous targets of attack.

After war broke out last Wednesday night, Trinity College officials called 40 students to tell them the program was cancelled.

And Georgetown University students in Florence, Italy and Alanya, Turkey, are either back in Washington, D.C., or enroute, said university spokesman Gary Krull.

"I know that Trinity cancelled in Rome, and they may have their reasons to do that," said DeWinter of Cornell, which has just over a dozen students now enrolled in its Rome program, as well as a few students studying in Israel. "We are now looking at all of our sites and trying to determine where it's advisable to remain."

"I can think of no better tribute to (King's) memory," King's widow wrote.

"I pray our troops come home safely," Wolf said. "I pray that innocent (Iraqi) lives be saved from militarist governments, theirs and our own, who give them no say."

Poshard also reminded the audience of the Gulf war.

"The young men and women there deserve our support and our respect," Poshard said. "God bless them."

Davis appealed to African-Americans to be unified in their goals and be remembered as heroes by their children.

"Apathy on our part is helping to destroy our children's future,"

Davis said. "If we fail to come together, 20 years from now we'll still be talking and complaining about the same things."

"President George Bush vetoes the 1990 civil rights bill," Davis said, "but has no problem dispatching troops, a disproportionate number of them poor or people of color, to the Persian Gulf."

Civil Service in order to get support from students, faculty and staff.

From there, he said the University should lobby support from the law makers when the surcharge comes before the legislature this spring.

Ramsey said he expects the surcharge won't be discussed until late June, towards the end of the General Assembly session. The deadline for a new state budget is June 30.

Other business on the GPSC agenda includes the in-house election of three members of the executive board and nominations for the SIUC award for outstanding contribution to the graduate and professional student organization.

The meeting is at 7 tonight in the Student Center Mississippi Room and is open to the public.

Returning to school helps adults find better jobs

By Rennie Waiker
Staff Writer

Dollie Faye Nelson is a single mother of seven. She has pride for her oldest son, who is deciding which college will be the cheapest and easiest choice for the family.

Although Nelson is happy with her son, she is dissatisfied when it comes to her own education.

About 20 years ago, Nelson dropped out of high school. Next month, at age 38, she is planning to take a general equivalency diploma test. If she passes, Nelson will receive a degree equal to a high school diploma.

Nelson has been preparing for the test for the past three months by taking general education developmental courses at the Evaluation and Developmental Center, 500-C Lewis Lane, Carbondale. The EDC is housed by the University and receives funding from the state.

"With all my kids in school, I figured it would be a good time to go back and get on top of things,"

Nelson said.

"I want to better myself by getting a better education and a better job."

Nelson has lived in Carbondale for five years, and works three days a week at the Carbondale Manor Nursing Home. She draws public aid to pay for medical expenses.

"My kids and I—we're doing just fine," Nelson said. "My girls, they want to be just like their older brother."

Nelson has worked as a nurse's aid for 18 years. She said she is determined to get off public aid and obtain a job in data processing.

Maggie Flanagan, an EDC counselor, said Nelson is like 64 other area residents attending classes at the center, all working their way to high school diplomas.

Classes are free, and students work at their own pace, Flanagan said.

Each student dropped out of high school for unique reasons, but all share a common goal: Pass the GED examination offered through University Testing Services.

The center has many success stories. Mary Lynn Smith, teacher at the center, said 80 percent of the students earn their degree, enter job training or find a job.

"We take them through a step-by-step process, showing them that they can achieve, they can get off welfare and they can make a living," Smith said.

Flanagan said it can be tough for students at the EDC to make the commitment necessary to succeed.

"These are adults. They have families, responsibilities and problems, but the people who come here want to make their lives better in an area where there aren't many resources to do so," Flanagan said.

"They are willing to do their part, which is get an education. But it is really a long haul."

The fight is not over as soon as the students obtain their degrees, said Flanagan. She added that not enough jobs exist in this area for everyone who wants to work.

The center also tries to help the students when they go job hunting, she said.

This semester, the center offers GED classes at three sights in Jackson County. Classes are offered at Murphysboro High School, East Campus of Carbondale High School and the EDC. Flanagan has days and times at 453-2331.

Smith said the EDC is the only adult education center in the state working in conjunction with a university. She said college students are good role models for the GED students.

"Students at the EDC interact with the student workers, and that kind of exposure really motivates them," Smith said.

James Taylor, 24, said he has attended classes at the center for two years, and hopes to attend junior college and obtain a certificate in computer science.

Taylor is the victim of hydrocephalus, or "water on the brain." The disease is progressive, and limits his ability to walk. He gets around by mobie, a combination of a wheelchair and a bicycle.

"I was in and out of the hospital with surgeries that kept me out of school," he said.

"I ended up quitting."

Taylor never saying when he will be ready to take the GED test. He will attend GED classes until he and EDC counselors believe he is prepared to take the test that will put a high school diploma in his hands.

Attention on war fails to silence abortion debate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — On the eve of the 18th anniversary of the Supreme Court decision legalizing most abortions, foes and supporters of the ruling squared off yet again Monday, predicting another year of bitter political battles at the state legislative level.

But the war in the Persian Gulf — taking the bomb rather than the unborn — may overshadow the anniversary observations this year.

"Certainly people's attention is turned to the Persian Gulf but we have not seen any lack of interest or any groups canceling or that kind of thing as the result of the Persian Gulf situation," said Michael Warsaw, a spokesman for the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

"I think that people who support the pro-life cause are very strong in their beliefs about that issue and this is the one time of year that they do gather in Washington to make their point, so I think despite the obvious concerns about the Persian Gulf those people are still going to be here," he said.

Supporters of the Roe vs. Wade ruling are not silent. The National Abortion Rights Action League predicted fights at the state legislative level in the coming year.

Kuwaiti couple pray horrors in war-torn home end soon

By Tiffany Youter
Staff Writer

A Kuwaiti couple living in Carbondale said they support U.S. military action in the Persian Gulf but are saddened by the great loss of life on all sides of the war.

Hana, a Kuwaiti resident, fled from Kuwait with her family Sept. 30 and now lives with her husband Adel, a graduate assistant in business administration and a member of Citizens for a Free Kuwait.

The couple said they preferred not to have their last name printed because of threats they have received as a result of talking to the media.

Adel said he had planned to return to Kuwait in early August for his wedding.

He had his bags packed when he received a phone call from his brother, who told him Iraq was invading Kuwait.

He said he thought his brother was kidding and was shocked when he turned on the news and found out his brother was telling the truth.

"I didn't know about my wife. I didn't know about my family. I didn't know whether they were alive or not, or what was happening to them," Adel said.

He said he was reunited with Hana and her family soon after that but learned that his family had opted to stay in Kuwait because it was their country.

Adel said his family decided to leave later because they would lose their national identity and his two brothers would be taken into the Iraqi military.

Even though Adel's and Hana's families are safely out of Kuwait, he said he has many close friends and relatives there and fears for their lives.

He said his friends have told him the situation in Kuwait is so bad that if a man leaves his house to get bread for his family, he will say goodbye to them as if he would never come back.

Hana said one of her neighbors, a middle-aged man, had a pregnant wife and an 18-year-old son.

The son responded to verbal abuse from Iraqi soldiers so they asked the woman if she wanted them to take her son or her husband.

The wife chose her son because she thought they would only take him in for questioning.

The next day she found him dead on her doorstep, and she miscarried her baby, Hana said.

Adel said he has countless stories to tell about things Iraqi President

Saddam Hussein has done to the Kuwaiti people because he receives information on what is happening from contacts at the main headquarters of Citizens for a Free Kuwait.

"Hussein has done to my people what we aren't expecting to see even in a horror movie," he said.

Adel said he feels President Bush made a wise decision in attacking Iraq because the sanctions put forth in order to prevent war were hurting the Kuwaiti people as well as the Iraqis.

During the five months sanctions were in effect, he said, the feeding of the Iraqi army was on the shoulders of the Kuwaiti people.

"The Kuwaiti people are paying the bill for peace," he said.

Adel said he hates war and prays every night that each American and allied soldier will survive to return home to his family and that Hussein will be killed so Kuwaitis may live in peace and enjoy life again.

"We (Kuwaiti people) believe in peace," he said. "We were stabbed in the back by the Iraqis and we are trying to solve this problem by calling on our friends in other nations. We have gotten a very positive response."

Scuds 'nowhere near' razed

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Allied warplanes are "nowhere near" eliminating all the Iraqi missile launchers that President Saddam Hussein has used to fire Scud rockets against Saudi Arabia and Israel, a military official conceded Monday.

"We continue to aggressively pursue (Saddam's) fixed and mobile Scud capabilities," Maj. Gen. Burton Moore, director of Operations at U.S. Central Command, told a news briefing. But "results of his effort to launch ... have been very ineffective."

Iraqi forces fired 10 Scud missiles into Saudi Arabia late Sunday and early Monday, six at the capital Riyadh and the rest at the coastal city of Dhahran. Nine were knocked out by U.S. Patriot air defense missiles. The tenth landed in the Persian Gulf.

There were no casualties, but in Riyadh there was some damage to a building near the airfield. Moore said officials were not sure if it was caused by falling debris or an errant Patriot, the U.S. missile that has been very successful so far in intercepting the Iraqi-launched Scuds.

Another 11 Scuds have hit Israeli cities since U.S. and allied jets attacked Iraq Thursday, the start of Operation Desert Storm, aimed at forcing Saddam to withdraw troops from Kuwait.

The Scud was used effectively by Iraq against Tehran in its eight-year war with Iran. The original Soviet-made weapon has a range of about 185 miles, but an Iraqi modification can hit targets up to 550 miles away.

Military officials have said Iraq has between 30 and 50 permanent Scud missile launching sites and about 20 mobile ones.

"We have taken some of them out, but we are nowhere near completing our campaign objectives," said Moore.

The official also blasted Iraq's treatment of allied pilots and crewmen apparently now held as prisoners of war.

He also said the allies have downed two more Iraqi aircraft for a total of 17 and lost a Navy F-14 Tomcat, which carries a crew of two, in the most recent round of attacks.

Allied planes flew another 1,100 sorties against Iraqi targets, bringing the number of sorties to 8,100. Nine U.S. aircraft and five allied planes have gone down to hostile fire.

Moore declined to say if terrorist targets in civilian areas of Baghdad might be the target of allied weapons. But, he added, it "is not and will not be our policy to attack innocent civilians."

He said that the attacks have "set back" Iraq's nuclear capability and "we continue to make strides against his chemical capability." But he said the weather "has impaired our ability to get damage assessments."

Bad weather has also grounded the Hercules transport planes ferrying north the 2nd Brigade of 82nd Airborne Division. Flights resumed Monday carrying men and equipment. Other elements of the brigade were moving by convoy.

Avoid injury—exercise slowly

By Chris Labyk
Wellness Center

We have all heard how important exercise is for us, but unfortunately many well intended get fit plans fail because of impatience. Injuries can result from preparing inadequately, buying into various fitness myths and not knowing what safety precautions to take for particular activities.

Beginning a new exercise program or even returning to an abandoned one requires a slow start. Work up gradually and, most importantly, set realistic goals. Many of us may know the weekend warrior who gets injured because he or she plays football or basketball after not having played for a year or more.

To Your Health

John Massie, coordinator of the sports medicine program at the Recreation Center, said most injuries which occur among beginners are overuse injuries. Shinsplints are a common injury which can lead to stress fractures if the symptoms are left unheeded. The best treatment for shinsplints is to decrease activity temporarily, ice the area several times a day and use anti-inflammatory drugs such as aspirin or ibuprofen.

Pain and swelling is your body's way of saying, "Stop. Take care of me!" How soon you can return to an activity depends on the extent of the injury and what condition your body was in when the injury occurred.

Massie said one of the major mistakes people make at the Recreation Center is not warming up before exercising. Walking, using a bike and stretching are some activities to help warm up muscles. Also, Massie said only 50 percent of racquetball players use eye protection even though the sports medicine program sees two to three severe eye injuries a semester.

The best way to prevent overuse injuries is to determine how fit you are before you begin the activity. The sports medicine program offers individual fitness assessments that will give a baseline, and help you get started on your goal.

To make an appointment for a fitness assessment call 453-3020.

Traffic deaths at record low

CHICAGO (UPI) — State traffic fatalities fell in 1990 to the lowest point in Illinois history, according to state transportation statistics released Monday by Gov. Jim Edgar.

Saying he had "good news for a change," Edgar attributed the drop, from 2.2 deaths per 100 million miles of travel in 1989 to 1.9 deaths per 100 million miles of travel in 1990, to state and private efforts to increase awareness of driver safety.

The 1.9 rate is nearly 10 percent below the national average, Edgar said.

Much of Edgar's work as Illinois Secretary of State was aimed at lowering traffic fatalities through driver safety campaigns and stricter laws for drunk drivers.

He added that the statistics indicate a continuation in the decline of Illinois traffic fatalities in the last decade.

In 1990, 1,568 people died in traffic accidents in Illinois, a reduction of 140 from the previous year, according to the Illinois

Department of Transportation and state police statistics.

The data also showed a drop of approximately 9 percent in the number of traffic deaths from accidents in which drivers had a blood alcohol concentration above the legal limit of 0.1 percent.

Edgar, who has been working to lower the blood alcohol limit in Illinois from 0.1 percent to 0.08 percent, said he remains in favor of lowering the limit but added the number of traffic deaths can be reduced further in 1991.

City, resources promoted by new video release

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

It can't be rented at a local video store, but "Carbondale: People...Pride...Progress" soon can be seen all over the city.

The 12-minute video, which cost $14,500 to produce, promotes Carbondale's residents, activities and resources, City Clerk Janet Vaught said.

The cost is reasonable, said Philip Bankester, owner of Bankester and Associate of Carbondale, which produced the video. Most producers will charge more than $2,000 a minute for videos.

If calculated this way, the Carbondale video would have cost more than $1,200 a minute.

"People don't have any idea what it costs to produce a video," Bankester said.

A great deal of the money pays for renting the most current video equipment and the post production process, Bankester said, which includes putting the credits and captions on the video.

What Carbondale residents have are plays, farms, low crime and one of the most handicapped-accessible cities in the nation, according to the video. SIUC, various medical facilities and the area's natural resources also are featured.

The idea for the video came last May from the Community Marketing Task Force, which is made up of city administrative staff members, Vaught said.

About 40 agencies, groups and individuals sent samples of their work, including commercial spots and videos promoting businesses.

Bankester and Associates was chosen because of its previous work, Vaught said.

"(The video) is a motivator," Bankester said. "It leaves the viewer with the feeling of... that's a neat place to live or do business."

Peace vision echoed on King day

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As combat continued in the Persian Gulf, Americans on the homefront paused Monday to remember the nation's foremost apostle of non-violence, Martin Luther King. But the war was never far from mind.

Across the nation, federal and most state offices — with some exceptions, such as New Hampshire and Arizona — were closed. Prayer breakfasts, vigils and small memorial marches were held in numerous communities.

King, born Jan. 15, 1928, came to national prominence as the leader of the 1955 bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala., and then as the premier leader of the civil rights movement. In 1967, he also broke with other black leaders to denounce the war in Vietnam.

He was shot and killed in 1968 as he stood on a motel balcony in Memphis, Tenn., where he had gone to support striking sanitation workers.

Coretta Scott King, widow of the civil rights martyr, set the tone for many of the gatherings when she opened weekend observances to a capacity crowd of 700 people Sunday at King's old pastorate, Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta.

In a "State of the Dream" speech, Mrs. King reaffirmed her late husband's plea for a world where ambassadors, not missiles, settle international disputes.

And, as he spoke out against the war in Vietnam, then sapping energy from the struggle for civil rights, Mrs. King criticized the Persian Gulf war, which is diverting resources for the fight against poverty and racism.

"Let us be clear that we are not fighting for democracy, for there is no genuine democracy in the Persian Gulf," Mrs. King said. "This war is yet another misguided attempt to make the United States the world's policeman."

At the same time, Mrs. King praised Israel for its restraint in not militarily responding to Iraqi missile attacks.

"It takes courage and wisdom to refuse to be sucked into the cycle of retaliation, and I hope and pray that Israel will be able to continue to exercise restraint," she said.

In San Antonio, a crowd of 30,000 marched 3 miles through city streets before stopping to sing and pray at a rally on the city's east side.

Speakers criticized President Bush for choosing to veto the civil rights bill, even though a large portion of U.S. troops stationed in Saudi Arabia are black.

TV technology has great impact on public's view

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — The modern technology of television is having a profound impact on the way the public perceives world events, according to an Indiana University expert.

"Television and only television could have bridged the minds across geography in the years since the Viet Nam War," said Robert Wicks, IU professor of journalism.

Recalling coverage of the war that became unpopular and the women's and civil rights movements, Wicks said that newspapers didn't have the same emotional impact as television.

"Clearly what has been going on is a kind of learning curve because of the images TV can bring. People can much more quickly identify with an event or a development," he said.

The IU professor believes that attitudes toward the Viet Nam War took a long time to develop because Americans were challenging the precedent that the president — right or wrong — should be supported.

"The pictures didn't exist before. We didn't have dead people in our living rooms every night at the dinner hour," he said.

Wicks noted that advances in electronic journalism have made it possible for us to see events at the same time they are happening.

Kelly said the Bills want more from their trip to Tampa than warm weather.

"Everybody's is saying we're going to the Super Bowl now," he said. "But my goal is not going to the Super Bowl. My goal is winning the Super Bowl."

To do that, Buffalo's defense will have to contend with a Giants offense that is often criticized as conservative. But they were willing to gamble against the 49ers.

On New York's opening drive, Parcels called a halfback option pass that would have worked except Maurice Carthon dropped the ball in the end zone. The Giants then set up a key fourth-quarter field goal when Gary Reasons, the upback, ran 30 yards off a fake punt.

"We've been running the same kind of game plan all year," Hostetler said. "We're going to the Super Bowl with it. I just hope it works for us another week."

Hostetler injured his knee in the fourth quarter against the 49ers and was replaced by Matt Cannanough for three plays. The Giants had no update Monday on the injury.

After both championship games, players from both teams met at midfield and knelt in a prayer for peace. The display was not lost on President George Bush, an avid sports fan.

"The president has said that the nation must continue its business and that includes the need for recreation," Martin Fitzwater, the president's press secretary, said Monday from Washington.

"In the case of the NFL, certainly they have been a leader in showing support for the troops. You all know the steps that they have taken to demonstrate that through the emblems on their uniforms and helmets and the statements that have been made during the game."

Although minor demonstrations against the war occurred at both stadiums Sunday, there were no reports of violence. Inside the stadiums, American flags dotted the stands. A similar display is expected at the Super Bowl.

the Olympic Trials.

Ardey had been anticipating a very good year with his experienced divers and highly touted prospect.

"Without the injuries I think we could have done well," Ardey said. "With the injuries, considering it's near the end of January and only one of the divers is back on the board at only about 70 percent, I'm not sure what we can accomplish. At this point, I'm just taking it by day. I'll be happy just to get them back in the pool."

The loss of all three divers poses a problem for the entire swimming and diving team. With no one fully prepared to compete in upcoming meets, the Salukis stand to lose valuable points in the diving competitions.

"This will affect the team very much," Ardey said. "We'll have to make some decisions whether to risk competing a diver in a dual meet or continue to train and rehabilitate and focus our attention on the conference and zone-qualifying meet. The bottom line is the team will lose points, but if there is an opportunity to rest an athlete and still move towards the championship season, that's what we'll do."

All three divers are seeking rehabilitation, but Ardey said it is a tough road for many athletes.

"These girls have had to learn to rehabilitate and that's not an easy process," Ardey said. "Pain is a real difficult thing to overcome."

Albrecht is in the training room every day striving to strengthen her foot and return in time for the Gateway Conference meet Feb. 28 at the Recreation Center.

"I hope to be ready to dive at the conference meet," Albrecht said. "It will help me since the meet is at home and hopefully I can still qualify for the (NCAA) zones."

The Buckeyes, the only other undefeated team in the nation at 15-0, defeated Illinois 89-55 in their only game last week.

No. 5 Arizona took advantage of North Carolina's loss to Duke last week to move up one position, while the Blue Devils improved three spots to sixth. No. 7 Syracuse slid up one place and North Carolina wound up eighth.

St. John's improved one place to ninth after victories over Providence and Pittsburgh, and No. 10 UCLA dropped three positions on the heels of its 89-82 loss to Stanford.

No. 11 Oklahoma remained unchanged, while No. 12 Nebraska moved up one place heading into their Big Eight showdown Saturday against the Sooners. No. 13 East Tennessee State and No. 14 Louisiana State each improved three spots from last week.

No. 15 Southern Mississippi jumped five places and No. 16 Pittsburgh slipped two spots after losing to St. John's. No. 17 Utah, tied with Arkansas for the most wins in the nation at 17, vaulted up five positions.

Michigan State jumped back into the ratings at 18th after a one-week hiatus, while No. 19 Connecticut plummeted seven spots after losses to Syracuse and Providence. No. 20 Georgetown dropped two places after falling to Villanova.

Clemens' agent discounts police report

HOUSTON (UPI) — The agent for Boston Red Sox pitcher Roger Clemens Monday disputed a police report alleging his client placed a chokehold on a uniformed officer.

Clemens, a two-time Cy Young winner, and his older brother, Gary, were arrested Saturday and charged with aggravated assault resulting from an incident at a Houston nightclub.

"We vehemently deny the charges stated in the police report ... and we have several witnesses willing to come forward to speak the truth," Clemens' agent, Alan Hendricks, said Monday. "The fact, Roger was even jailed completely baffles me."

Clemens and his brother are scheduled to appear before state District Judge A.D. Azios Tuesday on charges of aggravated assault, a third-degree felony. If convicted, each could face two to 10 years in prison and/or fines up to $10,000.

Edberg struggles through five sets to advance

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — Top seed Stefan Edberg was extended to five sets by American Jim Courier Monday before earning a berth in the quarterfinals of the $4 million Australian Open.

"I wouldn't put money against him," Courier said after Edberg defeated him 4-6, 6-0, 6-1, 5-7, 6-2, in 4-1/2 hours. He said a consistent serve finally gave Edberg the edge, even though Courier, the 16th seed, boasts a fearsome return.

"Today I served pretty well," Edberg said. "I hit a lot more aces than I usually do. I hit a lot of first serves today when I needed to. He had a lot of break points and I hit my first serves on those."

"But Jim returns really well. He sort of steps in and tees off. It's hard to volley of his returns."

Courier was able to capture the first and fourth sets with breaks in the final game of each of the sets.

Edberg, the Australian champion in 1985 and 1987, managed to get his advantages earlier, which he said was key, especially in the deciding set, when he broke the American at 15 in the first game.

"I think it's always important when you're playing a five-setter to get ahead early in the fifth set," said the Swede, who carries the world No. 1 ranking. "Especially since I struggled a little in the fourth set."

Courier said the first game of the fifth was the turning point of the match.

"I didn't play a particularly poor first game, but he played a pretty good one," Courier said. "I kind of dug myself into a hole there. That was really the key for the set."

Along with Edberg, three other men's seeds have reached the quarters, including defending champion Ivan Lendl, the third seed. Lendl overthrewed No. 13 Aaron Krickstein of the United States, 6-2, 6-2, 6-1, and next meets unseeded Yugoslav Goran Pripic.

No. 2 Boris Becker of Germany, who earned his berth Sunday, will face No. 10 Guy Forget of France.

Peru's Jaime Yzaga earned a place in the round of eight with a five-set victory over Swede Mats Wilander. The win was Yzaga's best since 1985, when he burst on the scene by winning the French Open junior title, and took a set from Lendl in the fourth round of the U.S. Open.

Yzaga, ranked No. 86 in the world, stunned the 13,300 fans by carving his way past Wilander, 7-5, 2-6, 6-1, 3-6, 6-1. It was the first time Wilander lost a five-set match in any of his eight appearances in Australia.

Wilander, a three-time Australian champion, fighting to come back from a two-year slump, fell into a string of serving errors and started to fade badly after the first two sets.

Yzaga went to the net more often, and racked up points with his backhand volley. Wilander was forced to throw up lob after lob in a bid to keep the Peruvian back.

The win was even more satisfying since Yzaga, who admits he has trouble with concentration, downed a man known for his tenacity in five set encounters.

"When it went to five sets, I thought Mats would win," said

Edberg, who faces Yzaga in the next round.

Pripic needed four sets, and three tie-breakers, to down Dutch qualifier Jan Siemcrink, 7-6 (7-3), 6-7 (4-7), 6-0, 7-6 (9-7).

Pripic, 28, is enjoying his best run in a Grand Slam event, despite suffering a slight fever and an old knee problem that requires him to wear a brace on court. Pripic has undergone two operations on the knee, the last in 1987. Since then he has always worn the brace when playing.

"I have no cruciate ligament at all. I don't have it," he said, adding that when he was recovering from that operation he would never have imagined himself in the quarters of a Grand Slam.

"It's hard to believe. I was thinking about leaving tennis," he said.

Wheelchair racer looks to Barcelona

HOUSTON (UPI) — Wheelchair racer Kenny Carnes is motivated to succeed by a simple motto.

"No pain, no gain, no Spain," Carnes explains.

Carnes, the top-ranked wheelchair marathoner in the nation, handily won his division in Sunday's Houston-Tenneco Marathon, and believes he is moving closer to his goal of competing at the 1992 Barcelona Olympics.

There will be a Para-Olympics in Barcelona a week after the regular Olympics, but there will be an exhibition for men and women in the main Olympics for wheelchair athletes competing in the 1,500 meters for men and 800 meters for women. Six men and six women will be invited to compete.

"I guarantee I'll make the Para-Olympics, but I want to be one of the six that makes it to the main Olympics," Carnes said. "Now, I'm an Olympic hopeful in a wheelchair."

Carnes, of Morningside, Md., finished Sunday's 26.2-mile course in 1 hour, 42 minutes, 32 seconds, more than eight minutes ahead of his nearest competitor.

Carnes, 34, has now competed in 27 marathons, including 13 last year when he was ranked No. 1 in the nation.

The top ranking is a long way from where Carnes spent much of his life, which was changed nearly 17 years ago on an Easter Sunday in Virginia. He broke his back in a motorcycle accident and spent 14 years abusing alcohol and drugs.

"I could not come to grips with my disability," he said. "I was in a dark cloud with my life. Alcohol and substance abuse destroyed my life. I ended up with three DWIs."

"Finally, I got into a 12-step program. Alcoholics Anonymous, and my life is 180 degrees different. My black cloud has left me and it's been a fairy tale ever since."

Carnes stopped using drugs and alcohol in 1987, and in October of that year competed in his first 10K race. A month later, he competed in his first marathon and finished in 3:01.

He spent 14 years working as a dental technician before quitting last year to concentrate on racing.

"It was just too demanding," he said. "I was mentally and physically exhausted. I said, 'Look, I'm this close. Let's just give it an honest effort, train for one year and see what happens.'"

Cuomo faces political football

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The dream Super Bowl for many New York fans on Monday became a political football for Gov. Mario Cuomo.

With the Buffalo Bills and the New York Giants to play each other next Sunday for the NFL championship, Cuomo was asked to choose sides.

In the past, Cuomo termed the Buffalo Bills New York's "only" team.

After all, the Giants may have once played within New York City's five boroughs, but now they play in New Jersey, practice in New Jersey, headquarter in New Jersey and pay taxes in New Jersey.

In short, they are New Yorkers in name only.

But finding himself in a brisk current of controversy that could turn either upstate (Buffalo Bills country) or downstate (New York Giants country) against him, Cuomo began backpedaling like a free safety.

Setting aside his ardent pro-Bills stance of the past, Cuomo set the stage for a football flipflop by refusing to take sides.

He called both teams "New York born." He said with both teams in the Super Bowl "New York cannot lose now."

"Either way ... New York is the big winner," Cuomo added.

"I've been invited by the Buffalo Bills," he said. "So far the Giants haven't invited me. I'm not sure that'll affect my judgment. It might."

Then he offered kind words for the Giants.

"Look, the Giants have thought enough of their roots to keep New York in their name," said Cuomo, whose sports background includes a stint as a minor league baseball player in the Pittsburgh Pirates' organization.

"On the other hand, (for) the guy who stayed home there's a special feeling there too," he said.

He also refused to commit himself on whether a Giants victory would bring a Manhattan ticker-tape parade.

Cuomo's press office, ever wary of the cloud hit by football fans, promised to issue a statement further clarifying the governor's position on Sunday's game.

Skiing Championships open with somber start

SAALBACH-HINTERGLEMM, Austria (UPI) — With the opening ceremony abandoned for security reasons, the 1991 World Ski Championships began Monday more with a whisper than a joyous shout.

Mayor Peter Mitterer will give a welcoming speech just before the first race (men's slalom) Tuesday and Austrian President Kurt Waldheim will attend. This will be the only official opening for the championships, now overshadowed by the Gulf War.

Organizers Monday were still unable to confirm if the Americans will take part.

"We have not had a cancellation, so we have to assume they will be coming," an information officer told United Press International.

The U.S. ski team left the World Cup circuit after last week's outbreak of fighting in the Gulf.

A security force of 500 — many with training from the elite anti-terrorist Cobra corps — are in town to watch over the national teams.

Austrian slalom racers, coaches and members of the ski federation will be airlifted from the finish area of the slalom race Tuesday to Jerzens in Tirol for the funeral of Gernot Reinstadler.

The 20-year-old downhiller died Saturday from injuries following a crash Friday. He was attempting to qualify for the Wengen World Cup downhill.

The downhill squad will travel to Tirol Tuesday morning for the afternoon funeral, where team veteran Peter Wirsnberger will speak.

A memorial service will be held in Saalbach-Hinterglemm that night. The Austrian Ski Federation called off its welcoming party scheduled for Monday night.
