Economy dominates Bush speech

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush, seeking to rescue the economy as well as his own presidency, delivered perhaps the most important speech of his suddenly troubled administration Tuesday night.

In a State of the Union Address to Congress, Bush offered an economic rescue plan that featured election-year tax breaks for the rich, the middle class and even the poor.

"I know, and you know, that my plan is unveiled in a political season," said Bush, his popularity down. "I know and you know that everything I propose will be viewed by some in merely partisan terms."

"But I ask you to know what is in my heart," the president said in his nationally televised address. "My aim is to increase our nation's good. I am doing what I think is right. I'm proposing what I know will help."

Polls show that Americans believe the nation is worse off today than it was five years ago, and many blame the man at the top, George Bush, and especially his handling of the economy.

A New York Times-CBS survey released Tuesday found a populace more disapproving than ever of his administration and more willing to turn the White House over to a Democrat next year.

The nationwide poll of 1,281 adults found his approval rating at just 43 percent, a stunning 45 percent plunge from last winter when he achieved a record high of 88 percent after the Persian Gulf War.

Bush invoked memories of that war in his prepared remarks to Congress Tuesday night.

"My friends in this chamber. We can bring the same courage and sense of common purpose to the economy that we brought to Desert Storm," he said. "And we can defeat hard times together."

The president called his anti-recession package "common sense proposals." The measures, primarily in the form of tax breaks, are aimed at getting Americans to spend, businesses to expand and the economy to grow.

Mass transit tied in knot

Committee still searches for way to fund proposal

By Teri Lynn Carlock
City Writer

A city mass transit system proposal is facing a familiar roadblock—funding.

A committee of city and University officials is reviewing a feasibility study by a Chicago consultant firm in an effort to resolve a decade-long battle to provide Carbondale with a mass transit system.

But once again the question of funding is slipping into the debate.

"The city is trying to decide whether or not to cut services or raise taxes," said Don Monty, director of community development for the city. "This is a new service, so the city does not have the funds."

City officials reviewed the possibility of bringing a mass transit system in Carbondale in 1975 when they talked with local agencies about helping with funding for a system.

But most agencies had a lot of questions about the proposal, Monty said.

"They asked questions about control, and if the system will be available when they need it," he said.

City officials concluded in 1980 that the city had sufficient need and demand for a system but funding for the system was not available.

A mass transit committee met Tuesday in Anthony Hall.

Representatives from the city administration, SIUC, social service agencies, the

SIUC Hispanic enrollment up despite nationwide decrease

By Sherri L. Wilcox
General Assignment Writer

Hispanic enrollment at SIUC increased by 54 students last fall despite a nationwide 1-percent decrease at colleges and universities, according to the American Council on Education.

Brenda Major, admissions counselor for minority recruitment at SIUC, attributes the small but steady increase at SIUC to increased targeting of recruitment activities, including scholarship opportunities for incoming freshman.

"We target much of our recruitment at high schools and junior colleges with high Hispanic and African-American enrollment," Major said. "We have also increased financial aid opportunities offered by the University for incoming freshman minorities."

In fall 1970, SIUC had 190 enrolled

House panel clears bill to extend jobless benefits 13 more weeks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With full support from President Bush, the House Ways and Means Committee approved a bill Tuesday to provide an additional 13 weeks of unemployment benefits for workers who are unable to find new jobs.

The House and possibly the Senate are expected to pass the bill next week and send it to Bush for his signature.

Late last year, after months of battling over how to pay for it, Congress and the administration agreed on a program providing up to 20 weeks of extended benefits beyond the normal 26 weeks. But those benefits will begin to expire Feb. 15 and millions of workers still are without jobs because of the recession.

Quick enactment of the new extension bill was assured when Democratic sponsors of the measure reached agreement with Republicans to pay for the measure without adding to the budget deficit. The original

Study: College entrants to increase

By Brandi Tipps
Administration Writer

The number of U.S. college students is expected to increase from 14.1 million in 1991 to 16 million by 2002, despite rising tuition costs, according to a study by the U.S. Department of Education.

Donald Beggs, dean of the College of Education, said the number of college students was expected to rise.

The projections are based on live birth rates 18 to 20 years ago. Because a higher number of individuals are in the 18-to-20-year-old age group, more people are available to go to college, he said.

"When doing projections we have to assume the same percentage of people will go

Amaya wins second Player of Week honor in row

By Norma Wilke
Sports Writer

For the third time this season and the second consecutive week, Saluki forward Ashraf Amaya was chosen as Missouri Valley Conference Player of the Week.

The 6-8 junior was selected Monday for his performance in games last week against Bradley and Illinois State. He turned in 25 points and 10 rebounds against the Braves, and 31 points and 14 rebounds against the Redbirds.

Amaya's honor marks the fourth time in the 10-week season that a Saluki has received the honor. Amaya also was selected Dec. 9, and sophomore point guard Chris Lowery was selected Dec. 22.

Head coach Rich Herrin said SIUC played two great games, and the team won both of them with a great effort.

"The Illinois State game was a hard fought victory," Herrin said. "We were pretty excited to win it. Amaya is one of the top rebounders in the nation. He's well lived up to his standings as a premiere player in the Missouri Valley Conference. When an individual has success, a team has success."

Amaya, the preseason choice to gain MVC Most Valuable Player honors, leads his teammates in scoring with a 20.4 average while collecting 10.9 rebounds a game.

He also is shooting 60 percent from the field, which is the highest on the Salukis.

Although many of his shots are form close range on post-up play, Amaya has expanded his shooting range this season and even has canned some 3-pointers.

"I worked a lot with the coaches to improve my outside game this year," he said. "I'm not trying to shoot more, just trying to get confidence in my shot from anywhere."

Amaya topped SIUC's 1,000-point plateau in the second Creighton game of the season.

Jury at 9 for trial of Tyson

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Attorneys fought over the meaning of a woman's response of "yes" and "no" to sexual advances Tuesday as jury selection for the rape trial of former heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson passed the halfway point.

Prosecutors and Tyson's defense team fought doggedly over the wording of questions posed to prospective jurors. In most instances, Judge Patricia Gifford allowed questions with a more general approach.

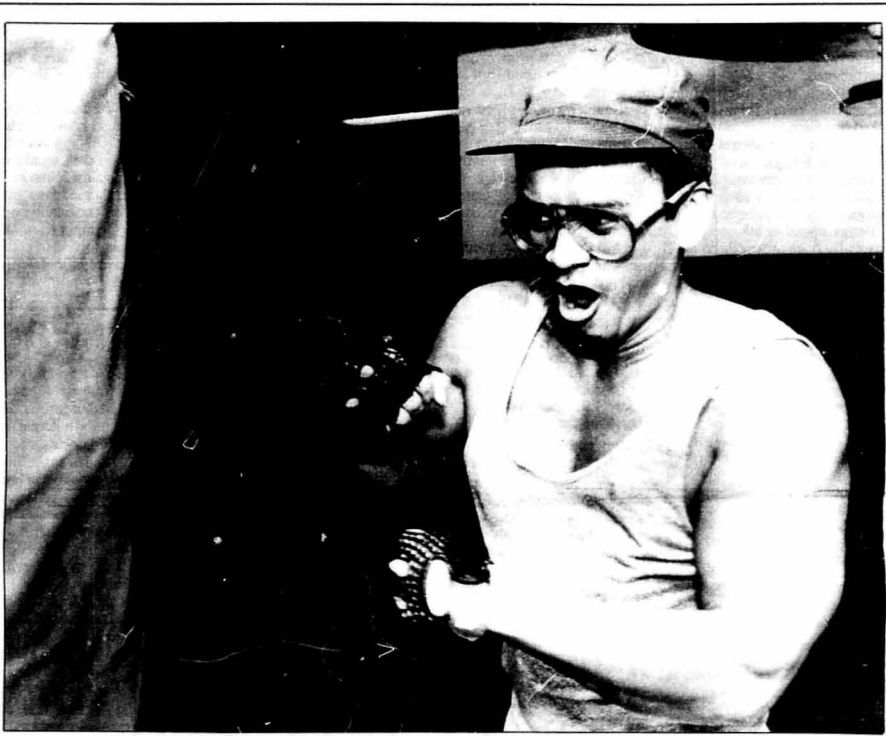

Four jurors were seated Tuesday, bringing the total to nine. Five are white men, along with two white women and two black men. Seventeen people have been excused.

Sixteen jurors are expected to be seated, with 12 deciding Tyson's guilt or innocence in an alleged attack on an 18-year-old Miss Black America contestant at the Canterbury Hotel last July 19. The other four would serve as alternates.

If the 25-year-old fighter is convicted of rape, confinement and two counts of criminal deviate conduct, he could face up to 63 years in prison.

Most of the defense tactics seemed designed to find jurors who would be willing to believe the accuser consented to sex with Tyson without verbally saying "yes."

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — A leading Australian sports official said Tuesday he was "embarrassed" when basketball players in his country said they would decline to compete in the Olympics against Magic Johnson because he carries the HIV virus.

David Wooley, chief executive of Australia's governing body for basketball, said ignorance about AIDS prompted remarks last week from some players who said they would sit out the Barcelona Olympics to avoid being on the court with Johnson.

Swim coach put in national position

By Norma Wilke
Sports Writer

At age 31, SIUC assistant swimming coach Rick Walker said he did not expect to be the head coach of any national team.

But Tuesday he was surprised to find out he was selected to coach the 1992 United States National Long Distance Team.

Walker, in his fifth season with the Salukis, will oversee the USA team's international meets, including the World Cup Championships July 11-12 in Canada and the National B-Team Competition July 5 in Colorado Springs.

Walker said he was excited about the opportunity.

"I know I have the qualifications to coach the team, but I'm thrilled to death that anyone would think I was qualified to do that," Walker said. "They based the decision on experience and knowledge of the event, which can be complicated."

"You have to give authorized feedings and know the right balance of drink to give the swimmers. You have to know what to do in emergencies. The event lasts several hours and could be dangerous."

Walker was vice chairman of the USA Long Distance Swimming Committee in 1990 and served as chairman in 1991. He was selected for the 1990 U.S. National Team Olympic Festival staff, as well as a coach at the U.S. Distance Swimming Camp at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs.

As chairman, Walker set up a committee to select a new coach when Penny Dean, who holds world records for open water swims, resigned.

All of the swimmers Walker will coach will not be strangers. SIUC senior Stu Patterson will compete for his second time.

Patterson will swim in the national 25-kilometer race June 13 at Philadelphia. If he finishes in the top two he will compete at the World Cup Championships. If he finishes third, fourth or fifth he will compete at the National B-team competition.

Saluki senior freestyler Mahaira first Gateway Swimmer of Week

By Cynld Oberle
Sports Writer

After winning two events and helping win another Friday against Nebraska, senior swimmer Tonia Mahaira was selected as the Gateway Swimmer of the Week.

Mahaira captured firsts in the 100 freestyle with a time of 51.83 seconds and the 200 free with a 1:51.64.

She also was a member of the winning 200 free relay team, which clocked in at 1:36.99.

All three times represent season-best efforts on the Saluki women's swimming and diving team.

Mahaira said she was happy with her times against Nebraska. "I have been swimming okay, but I wanted to go faster," she said, "I think I did pretty good last weekend."

Mahaira is the Gateway Conference's first Swimmer of the Week for the season, and she said she is proud of herself and her teammates.

RACIST SOUTH AFRICAN LEADER ARRESTED

The leader of an extreme right-wing white paramilitary group and nine of his followers were arrested Tuesday on charges arising from a clash with police last summer, in which four men were killed. It was unclear whether the arrest of Eugene Terreblanche represented a crackdown by the government of President Frederik de Klerk, who has been negotiating to include the nation's black majority into the political process.

MIDDLE EAST PEACE TALKS CONTINUE

The third stage of the Middle East peace process began Tuesday with a meeting of 22 delegations from around the world to organize future talks on regional issues, but the Palestinians, Syria and Lebanon boycotted the forum. It was unclear until the last moment if the Palestinians would participate, but when the meeting began, the spot for the Jordanian-Palestinian delegation was occupied only by Jordanians.

HEAD OF ISLAMIC GROUP IN CUSTODY

The provisional head of the Algerian fundamentalist Islamic Salvation Front was taken into custody Tuesday night and brought to a police station for questioning. Witnesses said Rabah Kebir, 36, who became the party's acting president just one week ago after his predecessor was jailed, was taken at the organization's headquarters by about 20 police officers dressed in civilian clothes. Police said they were questioning Kebir.

Security Council session.

U.S. AND CUBA OPEN IMMIGRATION TALKS

The United States and Cuba have opened talks to update an agreement outlining procedures for Cubans to immigrate to the United States and for Mariel criminals to be sent home, it was reported Tuesday. The two sides met for the first round of talks in December and details for a second round are being worked out, The Miami Herald said. The first meeting "went very well," The Herald quoted an unidentified U.S. official as saying.

COURT UPHOLDS HOUSING PLAN

The U.S. Supreme Court, without comment, has upheld a housing marketing plan to lure whites to nine south Chicago suburbs to avoid segregation. The high court Monday rejected an appeal of a 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision issued in June 1990 that upheld a 1983 U.S. District Court ruling. Real estate trade groups had challenged the marketing policy employed to prevent segregation of the suburbs, once all-white, to all-black.

DRIVER FLEES POLICE, HITS COMMUNITY VAN

A car trying to flee pursuing police hit a Cook County Sheriff's Police community service van Tuesday, sending a dozen people to area hospitals and closing the Eisenhower Expressway for a time, officials said. State police Master Sgt. Richard Nichols said the chase began shortly after 8 a.m. in Des Plaines and went through a number of suburbs before getting on the Eisenhower Interstate 290, near Maywood.

SIUC Democrats meet, introduce candidates

By Todd Welvaert
Politics Writer

The SIUC College Democrats launched the first salvo for the 1992 election year with an informal meeting Monday night to introduce local delegates for the Democratic presidential race and to begin building grassroots support for Democratic candidates.

"I was surprised with the turnout. We only had about five or six people here last year," said Ron Garver, College Democrats' president. "This year we had to change rooms to accommodate all the people. That's a good sign that people are interested in this year's election."

The meeting attracted about 35 people to the Student Center. Delegates representing Iowa Gov. Tom Harkin, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, and Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerry, were surprised at the number of people attending the meeting. Some delegates said the meeting was proof that people are tired of a Republican president.

"I think this is the best proof we have that people are concerned with the path their government is taking," said Harkin delegate Dave Madlener. "I think that this is a good indicator that people don't want a Republican president."

Kerry delegate Eleanor "Angel" Beninati said the campaigns are beginning to pick up the pace.

"I was impressed with the turnout," said Beninati. "I think starting now and getting down to the nitty-gritty is what we need to do."

The College Democrats offer support for all candidates but will not endorse one until the Democrats endorse a candidate.

"We will pull behind who ever is chosen,"

Dave Madlener, a graduate student in public administration, talks with some college democrats interested in joining Tom Harkins' campaign for president at the College Democrats meeting.

Garver said. "We think it will be an interesting race, the turnout here really proves that."

All the delegates hoped the political infighting that has plagued the Democratic Party in the past does not resurface in the 1992 race.

"We're Democrats, but at this stage it's been pretty low key," said Max Aud, Harkin's co-coordinator for labor. "I think New Hampshire will be focused on the issues."

Employee sentenced for cash embezzlement from SIUE Bursar's Office

By Scott Wuerz

A Centralia woman has received a 15-month sentence, three years of probation and was ordered to pay full restitution for embezzling $233,319.91 from SIUE.

Candace Wanzo, 29, who was employed as assistant to the vault supervisor at the Edwardsville campus, was convicted on one count of theft and one count of tax evasion for violations that occurred from 1986 until she was discovered by a routine audit in May of 1991.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Cliff Proud said Wanzo was able to embezzle the money by taking cash from the Bursar's Office cash reserve and writing personal checks to the university to cover the amount.

But she took the checks before they could be deposited, he said.

SIUE spokesperson Sam Smith said the SIUE Bursar's Office has instituted a $25-limit on checks cashed until a permanent solution can be found.

SIUC no place for bickering politicians

SIUC IS NO PLACE FOR BUREAUCRATIC bickering, but student leaders have been throwing daggers at each other recently in a dispute that would have Springfield politicians drooling with jealousy.

Graduate and Professional Student Council squared off against Undergraduate Student Government earlier this month in a dispute about representation to the Illinois Student Association, a body designed to carry the concerns of Illinois universities to the Legislature.

GPSC President Susan Hall, unhappy with the ISA representation her group received through SIUC's representative Michael Parker, successfully lobbied ISA to divide the University's three votes between the graduate and undergraduate bodies. As of this month USG receives two votes on the ISA floor, GPSC, one.

With higher education becoming the annual sacrificial lamb in Springfield, students need all the representation they can get. ISA is made up of representatives from Illinois colleges and universities who voice their concerns and vote on legislation proposed to the General Assembly.

The problem is that Parker is an undergraduate, and an involved one at that. Parker ran for USG president but was defeated by current leader Jack Sullivan. Hall is concerned Parker is not in tune with the needs of graduate and professional students and is not devoting the same effort to their cause as he is to undergraduates.

THE 2:1 SPLIT SEEMS TO GUARANTEE both groups get their fair shake, but USG leaders argue they should receive more. Undergraduates hold an 86 percent majority compared to the 14 percent graduate student minority. In effect, the 2:1 split results in the graduate students being over represented by about 19 percent.

With SIUC getting only three votes, it is impossible to make a better split. Parker cannot be asked to represent undergraduates 86 percent of the time and graduate students 14 percent. The 2:1 split is as close to representative as possible.

Now when SIUC is represented at ISA, Susan Hall will cast a single vote for GPSC concerns and Michael Parker will cast two votes for the benefit of undergraduates.

It is time to quit bickering about a situation that cannot be resolved any better and start representing the students properly. When tuition increases are rumored to be upwards of 20 percent, students are not concerned with who is getting this percent of the vote based on this portion of the campus population. It is easy to find politicians who complain about unfair practices. One would hope SIUC student leaders would try to be more than sniveling bureaucrats.

The new split is as good as the situation currently can get. Rather than continuing to bicker, Hall and Parker should attempt to set an agenda through which they can work together to better conditions for undergraduates and graduates.

'Bush's barf' new-wave attack on Japanese economic war

The general who said that war is hell wasn't entirely correct. We're in a war right now, and it isn't all that terrible. At times, it's even fun.

That's because we're fighting it with bumper stickers instead of bullets, bombast instead of bombs.

I'm talking, of course, about the great war of words with Japan and the growing "Buy American" crusade.

The fighting really broke out in earnest when some crotchety old Japanese politician made sneering remarks about much of our work force not knowing how to read or write and being lazy and greedy.

In other words, he said exactly what Americans have been saying about each other for years.

The war escalated when the people who own Nintendo said they want to buy the Seattle baseball franchise to keep it in that city.

Baseball fans were horrified as they heard this news on their Japanese-built TV sets, to which their Nintendo machines are attached.

With Japan-bashing at its highest level since World War II, we have American companies offering bonuses to workers who buy American cars, gas stations offering American car owners a discount, municipalities rejecting Japanese products, and shoppers pecking at the back of products to see where they're made.

So how will this war end? My guess is that it will just fade away as soon as something livelier comes along. In fact, Gov. Bill Clinton's love life may have already pushed it aside on the nightly news.

The problem with fighting this war is that there's little opportunity for action except for loud talk, sputtering and table-pounding.

It's easy enough to "buy American," as the slogan urges, if you're going down to the corner store for a quart of milk or a box of Twinkies. (I'm not sure about the Twinkies. I know they are made here, but I don't know where the additives come from.)

But if you're buying anything that you have to plug into a socket, turn an ignition key or install batteries, how do you know?

I own two American cars. But are they really American products? I have no idea who made the engine parts, the tape players, the speakers or any of the many things that rattle and squeak.

A friend has a Japanese car. But it was put together in this country by American workers with American-made parts. For all I know, his Japanese car is more American than my American car.

Maybe you are a golfer planning on buying a new set of clubs this spring. But only a couple of American-owned golf companies remain. That wedge might have "Ben Hogan" stamped on it, but the company is owned by some sushi-eater.

So if you seek out those American-owned companies and buy their clubs, you will be able to say with pride that you are buying American, right? Not really, because all they do here is assemble shafts and club heads they buy overseas.

The last night of my vacation, I dashed to a hardware store to buy a wind-up alarm clock so I could be sure to arise early and return here to compose drive.

When I set the clock, I spotted the words stamped on the back: "Made in China." I stared at it. A commie clock. And for all I knew, the words had been put there by someone who once sat in a foxhole in Korea, hoping for a chance to shoot me dead. The clock didn't work, but an American bird squawked with the dawn and woke me up. Or maybe it wasn't an American bird. Could it have flown here from Cuba? You just can't tell.

I suspect that much of the current Japan-bashing is a reaction to President Bush and those overpaid car salesmen going to Japan to ask them to take pity on us. Some Americans found it embarrassing.

On the other hand, when was the last time anyone barfed on Japan's prime minister?

In the Japanese culture, I'm told, it is considered extremely insulting to barf on someone. Especially a prime minister. Of course, it isn't considered proper behavior here, either, unless you are a hockey fan.

So what Bush did may have been a cunning and calculated political move. When the presidential race heats up in the fall, it wouldn't be at all surprising to see a commercial showing the barfing scene, but with Bush's voice saying:

"You won't open your markets to more American products? OK, this is what I think of you. Take this! Barf, barf."

And on the next trip, they can bring Dan Quayle along. He could drool on the shoes.

Quotable Quotes

"I inject myself in the butt three days a weeks for three weeks twice a year." — Actor Sylvester Stallone on his use of Gerovital H-3, an anti-aging drug, as part of his fitness regimen.

When you've been locked up for five years without any fresh air, without any light, a car like this actually has a lot of extra significance for you." — British diplomat Terry Waite, a hostage in Lebanon from 1987 to 1991, on his MGB convertible sports car.

Hispanic students. This number has risen to 469 total students in fall 1991.

SIUC had 415 Hispanic students enrolled in fall 1990. Enrollment includes undergraduates and graduate and professional students.

A strong Hispanic Student Council helps to encourage students to enroll at SIUC, Major said.

"The council is becoming more active, often returning to their high schools to speak with students about coming to SIUC," she said. "Also, when Hispanic student groups come to campus for visits, there are experienced Hispanic students here to serve as peers, which makes the high school students feel more comfortable."

But Carmen Suarez, faculty adviser for the Hispanic Student Council, said the Hispanic enrollment increase is too small to mention.

"As far as I'm concerned, there's been no notable increase," Suarez said. "To say Hispanic enrollment has increased gives a wrong impression."

Hispanic student enrollment at SIUC is 2 percent of the total population. Nationally, less than 16 percent of all Hispanics, ages 18 to 24, are enrolled in college.

The American Council on Education cites low high school graduation rates among Hispanics as the major reason for the decline. In the last five years, the number of Hispanic high school graduates has dropped nearly 8 percent.

"Hispanics do have typically high dropout rates," Suarez said. "They are extremely family-to college that have been going to college for the last three or four years," Beggs said.

"The fact that there are more college-age people means that enrollment is projected to increase, he said.

William Patton, chairman of the Department of Professional Education at the University of Montana, said tuition continues to rise, despite enrollment projections because in most states, the recession has taken its toll.

During a recession businesses fail so no tax is collected, people who are out of work are not going to pay income taxes so the state cuts money from higher education so it can use it in another area, he said. In the meantime universities have to get the money from somewhere so tuition is raised accordingly, Patton said.

In Illinois, the number of college students is expected to decrease during the next three years.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education and the Western Interstate Commission on Higher Education estimate the number of graduating high school students in public and private high schools in Illinois will continue to decrease for the next three years, causing college enrollment in Illinois to decrease.

Illinois high schools had 116,539 graduates in 1991. This figure is

SIUC Undergraduate Student Government and Graduate and Professional Student Council form the committee.

Carbondale, SIUC and the Illinois Department of Transportation have hired DeLeuw, Cather and Co. consultants of Chicago to construct a report determining the city's need for a mass transit system.

The committee eventually will decide on whether or not Carbondale should start a project for a mass transit system. If the committee votes in favor of the project, then the consultants will design a system.

The city's contract with DeLeuw, Cather and Co. is for $67,530. IDOT is paying 60 percent, SIUC and the city will each pay 20 percent of the cost.

Steve Berkshire is one of two representatives from the SIUC Graduate and Professional Student Council serving as a committee member.

Berkshire is in favor of a mass transit system in Carbondale, he said.

"All I have is a bicycle, so I would like another way of transportation," he said. "But the transit system is not just for the students, it is for the entire community of Carbondale."

Parking problems on campus is one of his main reasons for wanting a transit system, Berkshire said.

"We have had parking problems here for four years and this could be the solution," he said. "At the University of Illinois, their mass transit system has helped alleviate their parking problem."

Jamie Dees, a senior in plant and soil science from Genoa, is one of two representatives from the SIUC Undergraduate Student Government serving as a committee member.

Although he feels Carbondale would benefit from a mass transit system, there is one problem, Dees said.

"If having the mass transit system come to Carbondale means too much of an increase in tuition, I will not vote for it," he said. "I know students do not want another increase in tuition."

The City of Carbondale will not help SIUC with the mass transit system financially, Dees said.

"They are backing us on the student fee increase and will allow us to use the city streets, but we have to purchase the system ourselves," he said.

version of the bill called for Bush to declare an emergency and exempt the measure from the pay-as-you-go requirements of the 1990 Budget agreement.

The bill cleared by Ways and Means covers the $2.7 billion cost of the program with surplus money raised by last year's bill, along with a change in procedures for collecting estimated taxes from corporations.

Bush, in a letter to Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said he planned to propose "a fully funded extension" of the jobless benefits during his State of the Union address and in his budget.

Bush said he was pleased Rostenkowski and House Republican leader Robert Micheli had reached an agreement on funding that allowed "quick action" by the committee. Bush said.

"Given that there are American workers whose benefits are expiring, I hope the bill will be on my desk to sign prior to the congressional recess scheduled for Feb. 7," Bush told Rostenkowski.

Last year, Bush blocked two Democrat-sponsored extension bills before finally agreeing in November sign the third measure.

oriented, and many dropout to begin working and support their families.

"There's a lot of students graduating that just aren't going on to college," she said. "The problem isn't a lack of desire or a lack of opportunity. It's a lack of knowledge of what education is all about."

Society tends to condition Hispanics to de-emphasize educations, Suarez said.

"When you come from a low income area there's generally no real estate tax base because families live in apartments and public housing," she said. "You end up with inadequate schooling, no computers, and poor outdated text books. It's a very complex issue."

Wellness Center provides advice to help students enjoy 'difference'

By Joyce Combes-Small
Wellness Center

Diversity is a buzz word around many campuses today and SIUC is no exception. This powerful nine-letter word simply means "different."

Even though the definition of diversity is simple, being exposed to diverse cultures in residence halls, classrooms, or on basketball courts can be a complex experience and even lead to health problems.

Stress-producing thoughts come up, such as: "I wonder if they think I am different?," "What will happen if I don't speak clearly?," "Will I be able to get along with my roommate?" The stress these worries produce lowers self-esteem and raises susceptibility to illness, including the inability to concentrate on studies.

This destructive chain of events can be stopped by a campuswide

Lawyer cautions of lurid testimony in Dahmer's trial

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Court officials Tuesday searched for more jurors willing to hear the sanitary trial of mass killer Jeffrey Dahmer, warning the case will include testimony about "human carnage, mutilation, cannibalism, everything you can possibly imagine."

Jury selection is expected to last at least through Wednesday. Four potential jurors were selected Monday and sequestered for the night.

Dahmer, 31, pleaded guilty but insane Jan. 13 to 15 counts of first-degree intentional homicide for the slaying of 15 young males. The lurid nature of his killings caused a furor that was further inflamed because of the way police handled a run-in with Dahmer on May 27. Officers confronted Dahmer on the street with one of his victims, Konerak Sinthomphonhe, 14, only to let him go in the belief that Dahmer and the boy were quarreling homosexual.

Dahmer later admitted killing that young man shortly after being questioned.

When Dahmer's stayings were uncovered in July, authorities found a horror chamber in his apartment, complete with severed heads in the refrigerator and photographic evidence of the dismemberment.

District Attorney E. Michael McCann warned jurors they would hear testimony of Dahmer "having sex with a dead body" and "dismembering a body."

McCann said the jurors would have to consider Dahmer sane unless defense attorney Gerald P. Boyle can prove otherwise.

McCann warned the group that Dahmer could not be found insane merely because of "the enormity of his acts."

"This is not a prosecution for having sex with a dead body," McCann said. "This is not a prosecution for dismembering a body. No one's being charged with using a human body to see what it tastes like."

Boyle told the potential jurors that, if picked, they would hear graphic details about Dahmer's lurid behavior.

When Boyle asked if anyone felt Dahmer's insanity plea was an attempt to skirt justice, five people raised their hands.

Caroline Sears, sister of Dahmer's victim Anthony Sears, attended the first day of the trial wearing a large button bearing a picture of her brother. She said she finds Dahmer a "cold, conniving, evil, sadistic man."

To Your Health

commitment to seeing differences as powerful opportunities for building bridges to sharing commonalities which can produce a healthier academic environment. Here are some steps to help in the diversity commitment process:

- Decide to differ with and challenge years of accepted norms; be aware of stereotypes — just because someone is from another town, state or country, or has a disability, doesn't mean he/she will act in a certain way.

- Become educated about challenges others face: economic problems, disability issues or racial injustices they may have experienced.

- Personalize by thinking about instances where you were the minority or the one who was "different." Recall those feelings.

- Set a goal this semester for getting to know one person from another background or culture.

- Track feelings generated when a cultural joke is told.

- Remember the campus community will benefit from and enjoy a greater measure of health by being open to differences and affirming the special qualities that make each person unique.

Support group offers help, assistance to survivor group

By Trumier Camphor
General Assignment Writer

St. Louis resident Charlie Ilse's hands are red and sore. The skin on his knuckles is cracked and peeling from several grafts done on joint areas of his hands to allow adequate movement.

SIUC student Teri Ference's pale complexion is marked with surgical scars left from a sanding procedure called durma brasion.

But Ilse and Ference are both alive—and that is more than enough for them.

The two are burn survivors, not victims as Ference is quick to note.

Ilse has suffered third degree burns to more than 80 percent of his body. Ference, 33, was badly burned when she was 6 years old. She suffered third-degree burns to her face, shoulder, back and hands.

Today, both Ilse and Ference are happy with the quality of life they have and spend much of their time working with the Phoenix Society Burns Recovered Support Group, Inc.

Ilse, the president of the St. Louis group, and Ference are coordinating an extension of the group in Carbondale. The support group acts as a patient advocacy group when the patient is in the hospital and then works as an emotional, financial and legal support when the patient is released, Ference said.

"Sharing is a large part of our support system," she said.

Ilse said the group helps burn survivors when they leave the hospital.

"When burn survivors leave the hospital they are not fully recovered. They must go through rehabilitation and endure different surgical procedures and we are here to help them through it," he said.

After Ilse was burned, he spent 13 weeks in the hospital, one and 1/2 years in rehabilitation and had five different surgeries.

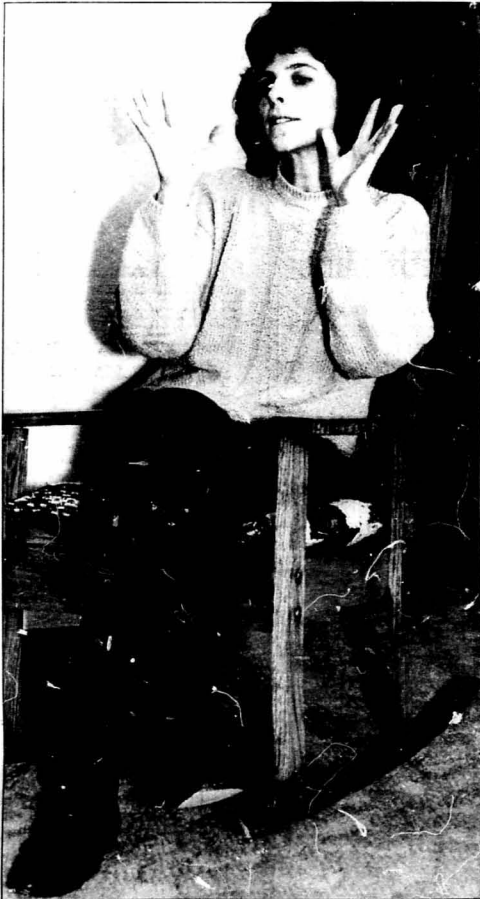

"Each surgery affects you emotionally because every time you have scarring and you have to go back to rehabilitation," Ilse said.

In the last two years, Ilse had the calcium removed from his elbows to help the movement in his arms, but because the burned skin is not flexible like the original skin, he had to have releases so the skin would move.

A release is a skin graft put in place of burned skin tissue that has healed in knots.

Ference said most people who are badly burned have releases.

"It takes a burn scar approximately a year to heal," she said.

Teri Ference

But the emotional scars are not so quick to heal, Ference said.

"The recovery phase is very draining emotionally," Ference said. "I didn't attend my first support group meeting until about four years ago. I didn't have the courage at first, but after I went it really felt good."

People who are burned often think of themselves as victims, but Ference said this is not true.

"A victim is someone who has had something thrust upon them. A burn survivor takes that experience and moves forward. And turns it into a positive experience," Ference said.

By establishing a support group that allows new burn survivors to share with experienced burn survivors, Ference has made her own experience positive.

"A burn survivor can be living proof that life goes on, and depending on your outlook, it can even improve," she said.

The Carbondale extension of the burn support group will begin meeting Feb. 15 every third Saturday of every month at Morris library.

For more information contact Ference at 457-7989.

Skin growth among new techniques to help in treatment of fire victims

By Trumier Camphor
General Assignment Writer

Burn technology has come a long way since SIUC student Teri Ference became a burn survivor 27 years ago.

One of the newest technological improvements is the ability to grow skin.

"We can literally take a two by two inch square of skin and grow it," said Tony Powell, head nurse at St. John's Mercy Medical Center. "We recently grew enough skin to cover half a woman's back."

When Ference was burned, the Jobst garment, the pressure garment worn by burn patients to decrease hypotrophic scarring, was a heavy uncomfortable fabric.

The newest jobst garment are made of more durable synthetic fabrics, Powell said.

"This is especially important for people who have had a lot of skin grafting," he said.

Skin grafting techniques also have improved for burn patients with the invention of a new synthetic burn dressing called Biobrane.

Ference said the new synthetic dressing has made the healing process much better for her.

Researchers at burn facilities on the East and West Coasts also are working on a growth hormone that could be used to replace burned skin.

"Within the last 10 years the new technology has provided the opportunity for more than 50 percent of burn patients to survive," Powell said.

The average cost for treatment of a burn patient can be as much as $100,000, according to figures from St. John's.

St. John's Mercy Medical Center in St. Louis has provided burn care to 672 burn survivors and their families for 25 years.

Southern Illinois has 158 burn survivors.

IPS helps internationals find financial assistance

By Fatima Janvekar
General Assignment Writer

A list of financial aid sources compiled by the Office International Programs and Services allows international students seeking financial assistance to go through the proper channels to obtain aid information.

"For the majority of international students, financial aid is very limited, and usually is available mostly from their departments, by way of academic scholarships or assistantships for graduate students," said Carla Coppi, assistant director of IPS.

"With the number of scam agencies that have been set up to supposedly provide students with financial help for, say, $50, students can be misled very often," Coppi said.

"For that reason, because international students do not deserve to have to pay for information which is very necessary to them, IPS decided to provide it to them for free," she said.

The list cites a number of source books that serve as guides to the students to obtain assistance.

IPS itself grants 33 tuition scholarships to students, 25 of which are available to undergraduates on campus.

Students must have completed a year of study at SIUC before they can apply for the scholarships.

A minimum grade point average of 2.75 for undergraduate applicants and 3.0 for graduate applicants also is required.

Grantees are selected on the basis of their academic merit, involvements in campus activities and financial need.

"The selection process is a very rigorous one, as can be imagined for a very limited number of scholarships when there are at least 2,000 international students on campus who want to apply for one," Coppi said.

Student-to-student grants also are awarded each semester to 12 undergraduate students on the basis of their financial need, Coppi said.

"The International Student Council was instrumental in the idea of administering these awards," Coppi said.

"Since students pay STS fees every semester, and some of them don't collect it later, the ISC president gave the idea that perhaps this money could be taken together and awarded to a selection of international students who really need the money," she said.

In order to apply for an STS grant, students must have completed one semester of study on campus, be enrolled full-time, have a minimum 2.0 grade point average and have paid their STS fee for the semester in which they are applying.

In addition to the grant, short-term loans and on-campus work referrals also are available.

For further information on IPS scholarships, contact IPS at 453-5774.

Women in communications reactivate local organization

By Jeremy Finley
General Assignment Writer

Women in communications have something about which to talk.

A local organization for communication majors is making a comeback after a seven-year lapse.

The SIUC chapter of Women in Communications, Inc., a national network organization, will have its first meeting of the semester at 6 tonight in Room 1016 of the Communications Building.

Deborah L. Allen, president of the SIUC chapter of Women in Communications, Inc., said the organization is open to all communications majors.

"Though the name suggests that only women are welcome in the organization, we urge men to come and see what we're all about," Allen said.

WICI is the second largest professional communications organization in the United States with more than 12,000 nationwide chapters.

"The organization was founded in 1909, its main purposes being to unite members for promoting the advances of women in all fields of communication, working for the First Amendment, recognizing distinguished professional achievement and promoting students in the communication fields," Allen said.

WICI was activated last year, after a six- or seven-year lapse in which several women in the journalism school who headed the organization left the university, thereby disbanding it, said Walter Jaehnig, director of the School of Journalism.

SIUC's WICI chapter faculty adviser Phylis Johnson helped start the organization from her own experience with another chapter at Glassboro State College in New Jersey.

"WICI serves as a good role model because it supplies students with a lot of information about the communication field and gets students involved with all fields within the communication field," she said.

U.N. agency: Livestock husbandry not suitable for developing world

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Efforts to adapt native livestock in the developing world to Western methods of animal husbandry threatens certain breeds with extinction and urgent action is needed to preserve them, a U.N. agency warned Tuesday.

The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization, also said half of all European domestic animal breeds that existed in 1900 have become extinct and over 200 more could disappear within 20 years.

"Most of the animal resources that exist in the developing world have been in stable production systems for hundreds of years," said Edouard Saouma, FAO director-general.

"Now they are coming under competitive pressure from imported stocks," he said.

"A breed can be completely changed genetically in 10 years without a full understanding of what will be lost," he said.

The agency is calling for the establishment of a genetic data bank for animal breeds and the storage of frozen semen and embryos of endangered livestock breeds. Mapping the genetic makeup of livestock also would enable researchers to identify what causes certain breeds to fare better in certain environments and could further efforts to improve existing breeds.

Part of the project also would address the legal and ethical issues, such as whether an individual or a government could "own" a particular breed's genetic framework.

'Duchess' honored for life-long writing talents

Pioneer journalist wins induction into Chicago Journalism Hall of Fame

By Christine Leninger
Special Assignment Writer

Strike up the band once again for the Duchess.

Southern Illinois native Virginia Marmaduke will be inducted Feb. 7 into the Chicago Journalism Hall of Fame.

"I feel like a kid again with all this recognition and I hope it will go on for as long as possible," Marmaduke said.

Marmaduke is one among five journalists being inducted into the Chicago Journalism Hall of Fame, sponsored by the International Press Club of Chicago.

"In all 83 years of my life, today is my day and I really feel important," Marmaduke said.

"I can't retire now because it seems I'm needed now more than ever to help young journalists achieve their goals and go out into that world of newswriting that I loved so well," she said.

SIUC grants three scholarships in Marmaduke's name and Marmaduke says she is considering a fourth.

Former Dean of the College of Communication and Fine Arts Keith Sanders remembers working with Marmaduke.

"She always gave good information and worked as an adviser in fund-raising events," said Sanders, who now is chancellor at the University of Wisconsin at Stevens Point.

"She is very deserving of it in respect to her accomplishments of succeeding mightily in a field of work that in her heyday was mostly populated by men," he said.

Marmaduke was a pioneer in an all-male newsroom during the early part of the century and through her life-long dedication to journalism, both print and broadcast, she has been showered with awards and honors.

Walter Jaehnig, director of the School of Journalism, said Marmaduke never forgot her beginnings.

"She will always be remembered as clearing the path in big city journalism for young reporters, but those of us at SIUC respect her as a person who never lost interest in the student of journalism," Jaehnig said.

Marmaduke was born in a two-bedroom apartment in Carbondale on June 21, 1908,—the longest day of the year.

"My mother used to always say I must have known it was the longest day of the year so I made my arrival," Marmaduke said.

The daughter of an Illinois Central railman, her family was transferred to Chicago in 1918 where she realized her love of the written word and decided to become a newspaper writer.

"In school I was always better at essays than anything else. In the eighth grade, a teacher of mine told me I had a knack for writing and should develop it, so I told my father I wanted to be a newspaperman.

"He supported me and helped me pick a college. At the time the University of Iowa at Iowa City was the best in the field," she said.

Working for the Herrin Daily Journal, she got needed experience in writing for all aspects of the newspaper.

"I covered everything in Herrin because when you write for a small-town newspaper, you have to be ready for anything—to cover a story at a moment's notice," Marmaduke said.

When in Chicago, Marmaduke worked for such papers as the Chicago Sun, the Chicago Sun-Times and the Tribune Sunday Magazine, where she covered stories from an early 1950s visit from the Queen of England, to tracking mobsters in gambling establishments.

Dubbed "The Duchess" in the 1940s by her editor at the Chicago Sun, Marmaduke is noted as one of the major figures in Chicago newswriting.

Her radio and television debuts came in the form of two shows called, "Coffee with the Duchess," and "Date with the Duchess."

The Duchess claims she is not a city girl nor is she a country girl. "I like to call myself an Illinois girl," she said.

Japanese automaker blasts the 'Big Three'

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca said Tuesday he is not surprised to be called "outrageous and insulting" by the president of Nissan, but disappointed to find Japanese automakers reluctant to continue the trade dialogue begun this month.

"It's time to follow up the words we heard in Japan with some deeds," the auto chief said in a statement issued in response to comments made Monday by Nissan Motor Co. President Yutaka Kume. "We're still waiting for their response."

"If they are really for free trade, let them treat American companies the same way America has treated the Japanese companies entering this market," Iacocca said.

Kume lashed out at the chairmen of America's Big Three automakers for criticizing the results of President Bush's trade mission, and said he had no intention of meeting again with his U.S. counterparts.

Although Kume had said during the summit American and Japanese carmakers should meet regularly, Kume said he now takes a dim view of further gatherings, contending they would pose antitrust problems.

Iacocca said he was disappointed that the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association "is reluctant to continue the top level dialogue begun in Japan."

"As far as Mr. Kume's comments about me are concerned, I'm not surprised," said Iacocca, responding to Kume's comments.

Astronauts voice support for space station

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The Discovery astronauts marked the sixth anniversary of the Challenger disaster Tuesday by carrying out a full slate of experiments, saying their voyage provides a glimpse into the space station era.

The six-man, one-woman crew of Discovery, circling the globe every 91 minutes at an altitude of 186 miles, is working around the clock in two shifts to study the effects of weightlessness on industrial materials, human physiology, plants, insects and other biological subjects.

On board are commander Ronald Grabe, 46, co-pilot Stephen Oswald, 40, Norman Thagard, 48, William Readdy, 40, Canadian neurobiologist Roberta Bondar, 46.

German physicist Ulf Merbold, 50, and David Hilmers, who turned 42 on Tuesday.

In an orbital news conference, both Grabe and Readdy voiced strong support for NASA's space shuttle program, saying the spaceplanes are a critical link to the agency's planned space station and eventual flights to the moon and Mars.

Scientists: Hair samples effective for drug tests

CHICAGO (UPI) — U.S. businesses are expressing heightened interest in a new tool for keeping drug users off the payroll — hair analysis.

A low-cost hair analysis process developed by Chicago-based Psychomedics Corp. detected six times as many drug users as conventional urine testing in one corporate study. And that translates to big bucks for employers.

The National Institute of Drug Abuse estimates that each drug abuser on a company's payroll costs the company $7,000 a year.

The FBI has used hair testing to detect drug use for several years, and government studies show it to be five times as effective as urine testing. The big advantage is that hair testing detects drug use over a period of months while urine tests cover only a few days.

But the hair-testing process used by the FBI costs $1,000 to $1,500 per test — far too much to make it feasible as a screening tool for businesses.

Psychomedics, however, has developed a method for analyzing hair using a chemical process. Called RIAH — a trademarked acronym for radio immunoassay of hair — it is similar to the process used to test urine samples for drug use.

When a sample tests positive, Psychomedics does a second test, using the same process employed by the FBI to confirm the initial finding. But Psychomedics has a new method of preparing samples that makes its confirmation process less costly than the FBI system.

RIAH testing, including confirmation of positives, costs clients only $40 to $65 per test, depending on volume. That compares with $25 to $30 for urinalysis.

Steelcase Corp., a Grand Rapids, Mich.-

based manufacturer of office furniture, compared the results of urine tests and hair tests for 774 job applicants.

The company said urine-test results showed 0.5 percent of the applicants tested positive for cocaine. Another 0.5 percent tested positive for marijuana and 1.7 percent tested positive for other drugs — opiates and PCP. Overall, urinalysis showed 2.7 percent used drugs.

But the study showed that using Psychomedic's RIAH process 8.4 percent of the applicants tested positive for cocaine, 3.5 percent for marijuana and 7.1 percent for other drugs for an overall drug-use rate of 18 percent.

"For all drugs tested, RIAH was substantially more effective in identifying drug use in pre-employment screening, yielding an 18 percent positive rate in comparison with an overall rate of 2.7 percent for urine," the Steelcase study concluded.

It also showed RIAH to be accurate in determining drug use.

"In a followup interview," the study said, "over 90 percent of all applicants who tested positive for cocaine or marijuana by RIAH but negative by urinalysis admitted (drug) use when confronted with the RIAH results — providing clear evidence that these individuals had 'beaten' the urine screen."

Applying the National Institute of Drug Abuse estimate that each drug user costs the employer $7,000 a year, the study concluded: "This company could save $105,000 (a year) by pre-screening applicants with RIAH."

"The big difference with using hair is that we are looking at a significantly longer period of time than urine tests," said Psychomedics President Ray Kubacki. "Urine tests only determine if drugs have been used in the past two to four days. Our test that provides a 90-day history."

Consumer confidence slides at start of 1992

NEW YORK (UPI) — Consumer confidence, which leveled off in December after plunging the preceding two months, fell to 50.4 in January from a revised 52.5 in December, the Conference Board reported Tuesday.

Economists had forecast little or no change in the private business research organization's Consumer Confidence Index and interpreted the renewed downturn as a sign people are still worried about the economy and job security despite recent interest rate cuts.

The bearish report came out just hours before President Bush was to deliver his State of the Union message. Expectations were running high he would unveil a fiscal stimulus package to give the economy a boost.

"The president clearly has quite a task before him," said Chemical Banking Corp.'s chief economist, Irwin Kellner. "It's a very important speech from an economic standpoint. He has to somehow impart confidence to the people."

Kellner said the survey showing a decline to 50.4 from a revised 52.5 in December "is at a 12-year low, but the economy is not in as bad shape as the survey says. Bush has to remind the people the glass is half full."

Lyle Gramley, a former Federal Reserve governor and now chief economist for the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, said the January downturn was too small to be considered anything but a continuation of December's steady trend.

But he said, "People are worried about whether anybody in Washington knows what's really going on with the economy and can do something about it."

The survey sampled 5,000 U.S. households on how they felt about present and future conditions and on plans for such big-ticket purchases as houses, cars and major appliances.

Only 6.4 percent of respondents in January said conditions were good and 51 percent called them bad. Both figures were more negative than in December.

Just 5 percent saw jobs as plentiful and 47 percent said they are "hard to get" — a slight improvement from December.

But people were more pessimistic about the future than a month ago.

Guitarist finds musical fulfillment combining classic, modern styles

By Kristi Rominger
Entertainment Editor

STUC student Gregg Goodhart is a classic—or at least, his music will be for one night this week.

The senior in music from Naperville will give his junior recital in classical guitar at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Old Baptist Foundation Recital Hall, next to Faner.

Goodhart will perform works that range from the Renaissance Era to the 20th century, including pieces by composers Alonso Mudarra, J.S. Bach, Francisco Tarrega, Niccolò Paganini and Heitor Villa-Lobos.

But Goodhart's music is not always classical.

He performs with a heavy metal band called Dissident Aggressor, which has performed at night clubs such as Gatsby's, Hangar 9 and Thrifty Whales in Chicago.

Goodhart, 24, said he likes to write heavy metal music, compose with his band, and play his electrical guitar in his spare time.

"My spare time is music," Goodhart said. "I think about it all the time. I just love it."

Goodhart also said that by learning the compositions of the masters from 300 years ago, his music has more meaning and it helps his skills develop.

He began playing guitar at the age of 12 in basement bands near his home, but only during the last

"I will be glad for the rest of my life that I learned to play classical guitar. There really is a lot of good music from the Renaissance to the 20th century."

—Gregg Goodhart

three and one-half years has Goodhart concentrated on classical guitar.

He also is part of a classical guitar ensemble that meets two hours each week and gives recitals each semester. This is a requirement of all classical guitar students, he said.

"It is a valuable skill to work with other musicians," Goodhart said. "But it is also a lot of fun."

Wilfred Delphin, a piano instructor at the School of Music, said guitar is very popular right now.

"He will probably have a large turnout," Delphin said.

Goodhart said his interest in classical guitar has developed with inspiration from his School of Music Instructor Joseph Breznikar.

Goodhart has met with Breznikar one hour each week to prepare for the recital and said he has learned valuable skills from him.

"I will be glad for the rest of my life that I learned to play classical guitar," Goodhart said. "There really is a lot of good music from the Renaissance to the 20th century."

Goodhart said he plans to continue his education and possibly teach someday.

Women running 'puppy mill' face felony charges

COLLINSVILLE (UPI) — Authorities said Tuesday they will seek felony charges against an Indiana woman accused of operating a "puppy mill" that police said resulted in badly treated canines in at least three states.

Patricia Rumph, 35, and her sister, Teresa Davis, both of Brownstown, Ind., already have been charged with misdemeanors for selling animals without a license and keeping more than five dogs without a kennel permit.

Authorities Friday seized a mobile home Rumph and Davis had rented in Caseyville in southwestern Illinois and found 48 dogs in terrible condition.

"They were defecating and urinating on one another. They were stacked up. It was a horrible scene," said Collinsville Police Chief David Niebur, who said the animals were being sold in his community.

The 48 dogs, including five female breeding dogs, were taken to an animal clinic in Belleville. However, four already have died and four others were clinging to life.

"Almost every one of them is suffering from an expanding stomach, worms and blood in their stools," Niebur said.

Rumph posted $102 bond late Friday to get out of jail. She is likely to face additional accusations of cruelty to animals and Madison County authorities were weighing whether to charge her with felony theft by deception.

Niebur said Rumph promised to provide American Kennel Club registration papers showing the puppies were purebreds, including Pekingese. However, at least a dozen people have called Collinsville police to say they were deceived because she never gave them the proper papers.

In nearly all of the cases where dogs were sold in the Collinsville area, residents complained the canines got sick within 72 hours after their purchase.

THE EPICUREANS are here! Southern Illinois' Best Places to Dine

They're housewives, secretaries, business executives, and professional people. You'll see them every night at the finest restaurants. What all Epicureans have in common is their "GOOD TASTE".

It all began back in 306, B.C. Athens, Greece, that's when Epicurus founded a school of philosophy which made an impact that would earn him a place in world history. Along with Epicurus teachings of the value of high moral and ethical standards he believed and taught the importance of the relationship to a healthy body and a healthy soul. Epicurus believed that good food in moderation was good for the body, therefore, good for the soul.

Epicurus students were called EPICUREANS. In later years the word Epicure was adapted to the English language to mean, "to dine well" therefore an Epicurean is one who dines well.

June 1977 A.D. in Pensacola, Florida a modern EPICUREAN Movement was launched under the direction of W.F. Johns, a native Floridian known to his friends as Bud.

The Epicurean Club would provide a recommended list of Pensacola's best places to dine and discount dining privileges for card carrying members referred to as Epicureans.

As club popularity grew, membership increased to 5,000 in the first year.

Not to be confused with dining discount punch cards nor coupon books, the EPICUREANS Club is America's ONLY true discount dining club. Records of members names, addresses, and telephone numbers are kept on a computer "confidential" file for member correspondence, restaurant updating renewal notification etc.

EPICUREANS pay a nominal fee for a one year membership. Proof of membership is a prestigious plastic identification card.

When a member and guest dine at an EPICUREAN sponsored restaurant they may each select any entree from the regular menu, they identify themselves to the waiter or waitress as EPICUREANS and when the meal ticket is presented for payment one of the entrees will be "paid for by the restaurant." The meal entree that is paid for is the lowest priced, or equal if both entrees are the same. When more than two parties are dining only one meal is deducted for each membership card. Members receive a list of local restaurants with a daily schedule (7 day week) of restaurant participation. Several restaurants will honor a member's card each night of the week allowing members a choice of restaurants every night. The schedule is repeated each week.

Along with local restaurant information, members receive lists and schedules of participation restaurants in other cities. All restaurants honor valid member cards of local and traveling EPICUREANS.

Local residents will be happy to note that EPICUREAN endorsed restaurants are Tom's Place, Mugsy McGuire's, Oriental Foods, Ferris Steakhouse, Grand China, Antonettes-airport Restaurant, Fiddlers Restaurant & Lounge, Stuarts Restaurant & Lounge, Southernaire (Holiday Inn), and Prime Time. There are also many fine restaurants in Paducah, Cape Girardeau and many other cities.

EPICUREANS are always proud to show their card because it "Shows Their Taste." Through this program the EPICUREAN Club had developed an image of growth and vitality which attracts people who enjoy fine dining, good company, and special customer treatment.

EPICUREAN member enrollment since 1977 number more than 500,000 most of whom were contacted by telephone about joining after being recommended by a friend who was a happy EPICUREAN.

For information the local club chapter office is located at 103 S. Washington St., Carbondale, IL 62901. Telephone no. 549-0500

Theater students take satirical look at drama

By William Ragan
Entertainment Writer

Sometimes life can be a soap opera.

But for a group of SIUC theater students, a satirical look at the exceptionally over-acted and often drawn plots of Hollywood's soap operas also makes for a good show.

"The Dumb and the Dying" is an improvisational live soap opera written, directed and acted by theater students. It debuted this week at the Laboratory Theater.

The Monoxide family manipulates the fictional city of Carbon, Ill., in the soap.

The Monoxide clan is ruled by Alfredo, played by David McKay, whose idiot first son Skip, played by Derek Hasenstab, feels a "hatred or intense dislike" for him, but wants to remain in his father's will.

His soon to be ex-wife Candide, played by Heather Currie, makes their daughter Chastity, played by Raina Morgan, a recent college graduate, uneasy through her constant requests to see a movie.

Their son Jessie, played by Scott Philyaw, is an aspiring rock star who suffers from migraine headaches.

His girlfriend Amber Grains, played by Andrea Washburn, declares that her love for Jessie is "as big as the recession, whatever that is."

The half-hour performance is the brainchild of director Robert Kennitz, a senior in cinema and photography from Palatine.

Kennitz also is the director of the improvisational comedy troupe Gig Street. He came up with the idea after the group decided to go on hiatus this semester, Kennitz said.

"I thought it would be a nice idea to do something in 'improv' this year that would get a real audience," he said.

Kennitz contacted J. Alden McMaster with the idea for a half-hour, weekly serial. McMaster, a graduate student in playwriting from Florence, S.C. and an avid soap opera viewer, was interested.

McMaster began writing the script for the first performance as a foundation to which the actors build their characters. When writing, she said she starts with the plot, then breaks the story down into scenes and gives each character an objective for the scene.

The actors are given a first line and last line for the scene, and they are left to fill in the blanks themselves.

The flexibility of the script lets the actors explore their own capabilities, McMaster said.

"I think it gives actors a chance to use some of the raw material that they learned in class, rather than going right to a written script," she said. "They, get to play around a little, see what they can do."

Cast members take their places for the debut of the soap opera "The Dumb and the Dying." The play runs weekly on Mondays at 4 p.m. in the laboratory theater in the Communications building. The play's setting is in the fictional city of Carbon, Ill. and features a large cast.

She said working with improvisational theater has allowed her to see playwriting from a new perspective.

"It's been very good for getting my imagination to open wide up," McMaster said. "Anything can happen."

"The Dumb And The Dying" will operate just like a real soap opera, with a revolving cast of characters Kennitz obtained by casting everyone who auditioned.

Because the performance is also satirical, the actors sometimes find themselves wanting to play overblown characters, said David McKay, a senior in theater and speech from Chicago who plays Alfredo Monoxide.

Kennitz and McMaster said they plan on continuing "The Dumb and the Dying" on a weekly basis for the rest of the semester.

"As long as we have the audience for it, we'll continue," Kennitz said.

"I think we'll get some people (in the audience) who are just curious," McMaster said. "Hopefully we can hold on to them and get them to come back."

Washington hails Redskins with rally at Capitol

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About 75,000 fans, many dressed in burgundy and gold, saluted the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins at a rally Tuesday on the Mall in front of the Capitol.

Players, coaches and executives thanked the fans for their support and displayed the Super Bowl trophy at the 45-minute ceremony.

The Redskins went 14-2 during the regular season, won both NFC playoff games on their home field and defeated the Buffalo Bills 37-24 Sunday at the Metrodome in Minneapolis.

"We in Washington, D.C., have a chance to let the world we are winners, we are the champs," said Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly, proclaimed Tuesday "Washington Redskins Day."

City government workers got the day off and the city's entire federal work force was given three hours off to attend the rally.

"Our team fought all year, knowing that if we could be in front of our home crowd for the playoff games, we'd be hard to beat," Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs told the crowd.

"I'd like to say a personal thanks to all of you, for helping us get this trophy," Gibbs added, waving the Vince Lombardi Trophy over his head as the fans roared.

Receiver Art Monk also thanked the fans, then added, "We'll see you here next time." Other players on the platform repeated that sentiment. Next season the Redskins will attempt to become only the fifth team to win consecutive Super Bowls.

The crowd of 75,000 was smaller than anticipated, as city officials had expected up to 500,000 people.

At least that many people attended parades after the Redskins Super Bowl wins in 1983 and 1988, and police were concerned crowd control problems at those events would be repeated.

questions posed by prosecuting attorney Greg Garrison, who asked if poor judgment by a crime victim relieved the perpetrator of responsibility for the criminal act.

Defense attorneys Kathleen Beggs and James Voyles objected to Garrison's relating questions to sex crimes or to any crime at all. But Gifford allowed Garrison to continue as long as he used a specific example — that a person walks into a bad neighborhood and gets mugged.

"Do you think their poor judgment excuses the crime in any way?" Garrison asked one juror.

The prosecution several times successfully protested Beggs' line of questioning. Garrison twice prevented Beggs from asking about situations that have faced other sports heroes revered by prospective jurors.

Beggs started to ask one juror, a longtime baseball coach whose hero is all-time hits leader Pete Rose, how he felt Rose was treated when accused of tax evasion and gambling on the sport. But the prosecutor cut the question short, claiming she was asking about issues that had nothing to do with a juror's ability to decide this case.

That prospective juror eventually was seated.

Beggs also started to delve into a juror's view of basketball star Magic Johnson's recent disclosure that he is infected with the HIV virus that causes AIDS.

"It's unfortunate something like that happened, but with the information out there, he knew what could happen," said the juror, a black man eventually seated on the panel.

When Beggs tried to ask the juror if pro athletes are more likely to get into situations where they are accused of bad judgment or wrongdoing, Garrison objected.

Deputy prosecutor Barbara Trathen objected when Beggs asked jurors if women who accuse men of rape should be believed initially, claiming the questions related too closely to the upcoming trial. Gifford sustained the objection.

"We are very disappointed and obviously very distressed and embarrassed by several of the comments that have been made by players," Wooley said. "Because of the program that we have been undertaking for the last five years — an awareness program — really it begs the question of how much of this has been taken in by the players."

Wooley also invited Johnson to captain the U.S. team scheduled to play in Australia in July. Other Australian players also have said they would be honored to compete against Johnson.

Johnson, who has dazzled fans with both his skills and his personality, was named to the U.S. Olympic team last summer. But he was forced to retire from the Lakers in November after he learned he had tested HIV-positive.

"The Gateway is not all that fast of a conference," Mahaira said. "We have a really good team this year, and our times are some of the best in the conference."

Mahaira holds the SIUC record in the 200 free with a time of 1:48.31, which she set in 1990.

Rick Walker, SIUC assistant coach, said Mahaira has contributed more than anyone could have asked of her.

"She came in when the team was growing," he said. "She has given completely of herself, and her leadership guided the team to where it is now."

Mahaira said she likes to help out the younger swimmers.

"The only seniors are me, Julia Hosier and Nancy Schmidtkofer, and we like to help the others out," she said. "I hope they look up to us."

The Salukis are 6-6 for the season and next compete 1 p.m. Saturday at the Recreation Center against the University of Kansas.

Patterson said, having Walker as his coach, will not give him that much of an advantage.

"He's able to coach me every day to prepare for the swim," Patterson said. "He might have to distance himself to pay more attention to other swimmers."

Patterson said he expects to finish better than last year. He finished fourth last year in the 25-kilometer in 5:13.

"I have more experience this year and more time to train," he said. "Last year was a learning experience, and I got into it and found out I was good. I plan to pack my bags for Canada."

Walker said his new position will give SIUC recognition.

"I'll be exposed to other countries' programs and sometimes we recruit from their teams," he said. "People may recognize my name quicker. If I could take a step up and take SIUC with me that would be all the better."

becoming the 25th player in SIUC's basketball history to do so. He has since moved up to 15th place with 1,107 points, and trails No. 14 Larry Whitlock, who played in the 1950s, by 13 points.

Amaya leads the Valley in rebounding and is second in scoring.

He is currently 11th in the nation in rebounding, and has led the Salukis to a national rank of 11th in rebounding margin as well.

Amaya said rebounding is a matter of pride, both for himself and for the team. Freshman forward Marcus Timmons (7 rebounds a game), sophomore center Marcelo da Silva (6 a game) and Amaya make up three of the Valley's top five in boards.

"We like to rebound our opponents," he said. "It's a very big part of our game."

"We have to rebound and get the outlet pass so we can play a running game."

Amaya said the Salukis have been successful against most of their opponents on the boards, but the game Monday against Northern Iowa was an exception.

The Salukis were outboarded 40-36, and dropped to 14-3 with an 80-69 loss to the Panthers. In all three losses of the season, the Dawgs have been outboarded.

"Basically it is a matter of execution," he said. "If we don't get the rebounds, it is hard for us to win."
