MELT DOWN: Officials shut down SIUC for only fourth time in 20 years.

HAROLD G. DOWNS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

In scenes reminiscent of an ice-skating exhibition, SIUC students slipped and slid their way along the icy pathways around campus Wednesday and Thursday.

Freezing rain and below-freezing temperatures contributed to the icy mess, which forced the closing of city and county government offices, as well as a virtual shutdown of the SIUC campus, Wednesday. Classes and offices were officially closed and the only sight of students came from the few who had not heard the news.

The closing of SIUC is a very rare occurrence.

"In the last 20 years, it happened four times," said Jack Dyer, executive director of University Relations.

The decision to close is made by Chancellor Donald Beggs on the recommendation from James Tweedy, vice chancellor for administration.

"We normally make those decisions at 5 a.m. as to whether or not we should close the school," Tweedy said.

The decision to close Wednesday was not made at the normal time because of the unexpected change in weather conditions, Tweedy said.

"We were only expecting light precipitation, so crews salted the parking lot and the streets," Tweedy said. "At 5 a.m., everything looked good. But an hour later, it (the situation) began to deteriorate."

The inclement weather forced Tweedy to decide that the streets, parking lots and sidewalks could not be made safe in time for classes on Wednesday.

Dyer said many factors are considered before the school closes, but public safety is most important.

"We consider the main campus first," Dyer said. "Most students are on or near campus. If they can get here, we usually have classes."

Although there are several thousand students living in the resident halls, still thousands of students and faculty live throughout the area and commute to campus.

Tweedy said crews worked throughout the night to ensure that conditions would be safe for Thursday's classes.

Even though other area schools closed Thursday there was no reason to close SIUC's doors again, Tweedy said.

"The streets, sidewalks and parking lots were excellent, and the main highways were in good shape," Tweedy said. "Conditions were safe."

HIV testing expanded to all SIUC students

GRANTED: Southern Illinois Healthcare makes confidential service available.

DAVE ARMSTRONG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC Student Health Services recently has expanded HIV testing to be available to all students, instead of just "high-risk" patients, the assistant dean of the SIUC School of Medicine said.

The expansion, which was made possible by an annual grant of $7,622 from Southern Illinois Healthcare in November, will serve to provide all students with confidential HIV tests for $10. A test at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, 405 W. Jackson St., costs $67, a hospital spokesman said.

TESTING

•The grant will cover the costs of 300 HIV tests a year.

•Students only may be tested once every six months.

•Counseling is required before and after the test.

•Students who want to schedule an HIV test should contact the Student Health Services Clinic, located on Greek Row.

The program will combine funds from the $3 student health fee increase enacted in fall 1995, with the grant from Southern Illinois Healthcare, said Sharon Hull, the assistant dean of student affairs at SIUC School of Medicine.

Melissa Michaels, the community benefit coordinator for Southern Illinois Healthcare, said the grant will allow students greater access to HIV tests.

"We were looking at HIV issues, and we saw that students sometimes couldn't get tests," Michaels said. "It was not a case of this service not being offered off campus; it was more an issue of many students not having transportation to these places (that offer testing). Our mission is to improve the overall health of the residents in the area we serve."

Michaels said the grant is scheduled to continue for five years. HIV testing at SIUC began in late 1994.

Hull said the expanded HIV testing is expected to be widely used by students.

"We hope the students take advantage of this service," Hull said. "I believe we had provided adequate testing before (the expansion), but now it is more readily available. I think that as more people learn about it, we will have more students get tested."

Some students said they had no idea SIUC had HIV testing.

"I do think it is something we need, though," said Andrea Bengston, a senior in social work from Carbondale. "It will be good to have this right on campus. If I thought I was positive, I'd get tested."

Hull said the grant will cover the expenses of a staff increase.

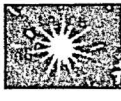

"The grant was a gift to help us provide testing for the students," Hull said. "This is a program which we felt a responsibility to have, and we hope to maintain it."

TRAVIS AKIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

As Leesa Greer intently watched James "Jumbo" Bacon perform some of the patented Harlem Globetrotter tricks at her junior high school, she thought of her own dream of joining the Women's National Basketball Association.

"I liked it when he dunked," she said. "He made it look so easy. I wish I could do it."

Greer, a 14-year-old student from Carbondale, who attends Lincoln Junior High, 501 S. Washington St., said she is looking forward to seeing the Globetrotters at SIU Arena tonight at 7:30.

to go college and succeed."

Greer said she listened to what Bacon had to say and she is disciplining herself to practice hard and study to reach her goals.

The Globetrotters give hundreds of presentations each year to students.

Bacon, a 6-foot-9-inch center, said the students should remember that it takes goals, discipline and good citizenship to succeed.

Bacon said there is one reason he chose to play with the Globetrotters; they make a difference in motivating people to accomplish their goals.

The same is true for Clyde "The Glide" Sinclair, the 6-foot-4-inch guard and captain of the team.

He said the magic of the Globetrotters is that they appeal to children and provide a positive image for them.

"We are the only sports team that sees the children face to face," he said. "We sign autographs after every game. That is something different than anything I know."

Sinclair said every time he plays, he knows he is doing something good for the people who come to watch.

SIZZLIN' BACON: (right) Harlem Globetrotter center James "Jumbo" Bacon signs autographs for the students of Lincoln Jr. High School, 501 S. Washington St., on Jan. 7. After giving a presentation on discipline and good citizenship, Bacon told students to continue having dreams and setting goals.

"I know I bring happiness to people," Sinclair said. "When the lights come on, everybody's happy."

Sinclair said playing for the Globetrotters takes a great deal of work, and even after nine years, he is still learning. He said it takes about two years to learn the basic skills.

"You don't come in as a Globetrotter; you come in as an athlete," he said. "You practice the moves about two hours a day, but it is hard to practice because we are playing everyday."

At the game tonight, the Globetrotters will play against the International All-Stars.

"The International All-stars are people fresh from college, and they want to play ball," he said. "It is a little more competitive, and that keeps it more upbeat, which is good for everybody."

Bombs explode inside Georgia abortion clinic

A pair of explosions shook a suburban Atlanta abortion clinic Thursday.

At least seven people sustained minor injuries and were being treated at local hospitals.

The first blast, at 9:30 a.m. EST, was triggered by an incendiary device that had been placed either inside the Atlanta North Side Family Planning Services or on its window sill, officials said. Forty-five minutes later, a second, more-powerful bomb went off inside.

The attack came six days before the 24th anniversary of the Supreme Court ruling legalizing abortion.

U.S. Attorney Kent Alexander said anti-abortion sentiment was a likely motive but would not rule out domestic terrorism unrelated to abortion.

Transit could act as stop-gap until escort service is funded

WHILE UNIVERSITY OFFICIALS LOOK HIGH and low for funding sources for the proposed late-night escort service, they are overlooking the untapped resource of the Women's Night Safety Transit service. The Undergraduate Student Government has not yet explored all the alternatives to an escort service, nor has it looked at itself as a possible funding source.

SAFETY IS AN IMPORTANT ISSUE ON campus — an issue that concerns every aspect of this campus.

The transit service already escorts people via car and van from on campus to off-campus locations, but has yet to adopt a policy to transport students from buildings on campus.

This would be an ideal time to adopt such a policy until USG and the University can compromise on the creation of and payment plan for an escort service.

ALTHOUGH THERE HAS BEEN A PROBLEM in the past with delayed pickups because the transit service only has two vehicles, officials say that more cars and vans are available if there is an increase in ridership.

Students should utilize the transit service enough that officials will be forced to increase the number of cars and vans and also expand services to on campus.

Even though the Saluki Express buses already provide services to students around campus, they stop running at 9 p.m., leaving students at the libraries or at the Student Center without a ride back to their cars or their dorms.

The transit service already picks up when the buses stop.

THIS BOARD IS NOT OPPOSED TO THE proposed escort service, which has been an idea for the last six years, but it will take a while for officials to find adequate funding for the pilot escort service program.

In the meantime we should use the services we have available.

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

Ebonics not like a singed cat

Corinne Mannino

Politically Erect

Corinne is a freshman in journalism and administration of justice. Politically Erect appears every Friday. Corinne's opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the Daily Egyptian. Corinne can be reached at opinior@siu.edu

Most major generation gaps throughout time have been easily distinguished and pinpointed by a difference in the language spoken. The most recent division that is progressing is being fixed by Ebonics — the language that has been labeled as "black English." This change is being brought on mostly because of the difference in styles in the teaching of the basics.

Changes are from the time you learned how to talk you have had people, namely your parents, correcting your language and grammar with the excuse that if you speak proper English you sound more intelligent — as if sounding intelligent makes you so. Nonetheless, you made your way through the education system fighting the urge to say "me and her" and replacing it with "she and I." No matter how much you insisted that it does not matter how one speaks, you were forced by the schools to speak as if you were a professional. Somehow being forced to talk like that became a habit, and you had no choice but to learn how to speak proper English.

With the upcoming generation, however, teachers decided to give up on the constant correcting. Does it stop there? Of course not! Not only will future generations be speaking Ebonics, but they will be taught it as a second form of English — a dialect, if you will. It is the hope that with this, an association will be made between Ebonics, a language they will be most familiar with, and standard English, assisting in the development of proper English speaking skills — something that apparently has not been emphasized with them as much as it was with us.

I think teaching Ebonics in school is a wonderful idea. It is great because eventually Ebonics will have to be taught in all of the schools, and once everyone understands how to speak it, it will break down some of the communication barriers between the races.

But why stop there? In case you have not noticed, people from the South have their own ways of saying things. I think the schools should teach everyone how to speak as if they were from Tennessee, too. I am not suggesting that people merely know that an "icebox" is a refrigerator and "soda" is "pop. They need to take it as far as knowing that if someone says that something is like a singed cat, they will know that it means that it is better than it looks. This way, those people would have a chance to participate in the business world of Chicago and New York if they so choose. But wait! They say things differently in Chicago and New York, too, so we will have to educate everyone on that as well. And people from California have their own language, so we need to be knowledgeable of those terms, too.

Even more importantly are those whose first language is not any form of English, especially those "fresh off the boat," so to speak, who have their own ways of interpreting English. Therefore, we need to establish a form of English for Asian Americans, Italian Americans, Hispanic Americans and Indian Americans (those actually from India). And these are only the basics. We could eventually offer English as a second through ninth language with these alone.

The fact of the matter is when foreigners come to this country, they are expected to learn the language. If they can do it, and all previous generations can do it, there is no reason why future generations should be insulted by insinuating that they cannot do it as well.

Faulty logic may be reason for denial of God's existence

Dear Editor:

Did you know that you don't really exist? Some reason that because they haven't seen or heard from a certain One, therefore that One does not exist.

So according to their reasoning, if they haven't seen or heard from you, you don't exist.

That's exactly how millions of people feel about God via Jesus Christ.

What about Lincoln, Washington, et al historical figures? Why do we believe that they existed? Historic accounts were recorded by witnesses ... right?

That's exactly how the Bible was written. Extraordinarily speaking, the Bible gives historic accounts of future events (i.e. prophecies).

Whether we believe in God or not does

Whether we believe in God or not does not matter ... God's existence does not depend on us believing that he does exist.

not matter, or God's existence does not depend on us believing that he does exist. He exists and so does his Son Jesus Christ. Acts 2:38/Romans 10:9.

Some people did manage to "glide" their way to jobs Wednesday. Maintenance workers and vehicles drove around campus, providing some of the only signs of life. They worked to try and clear the pathways and roads to get the school functioning again for Thursday.

The ice-covered campus did provide students a chance to imitate clumsy ice-skaters. Unfortunately, it created a hindrance for others.

"It is inconvenient," said In-Sang Jeong, a first-year Center for English as a Second Language student from Kwang Ju, South Korea. "CESL students are a little bit different from undergraduate and graduate students because we are international students, so I thought we had class."

Jeong said he was confused because the signs posted in his dorm did not specify which classes were canceled, so he trekked to class.

However, the cancellations did not totally disappoint Jeong.

"I will go back to my dorm room and rest," Jeong said. "I need it anyway, so it is good there are no classes today."

While Jeong was able to return to his room, others had to journey to campus Wednesday.

The Student Center remained open, providing services to very few customers. In the bowling alley and billiards hall, a grand total of two people were playing Wednesday at a time normally much busier.

"It is pretty slow today due to the weather," said Jason Green, a student from Bensenville, who works at the bowling alley. "Normally, there are three to four pool tables filled by now."

While many students took their day off for granted, one student looked at the closings as a precaution.

"It is a safety issue," said Gary Austen, a junior in aviation management from Cary.

"I would rather have classes canceled than a busted leg from trying to get to class."

Austen, like many students, chose to keep himself busy during his time off.

The cancellation of classes did not force students to decide whether or not they should try to brave the elements and attend class. But for some students, the weather would not have been a factor.

"I probably would not have gone to class anyway if the weather had been like this," Austen said, smiling.

MEGA SPACE

WALKING INTO THIS PUB, SOME MIGHT THINK THEY HAVE STEPPED INTO A BREWERY IN MILWAUKEE, OR MAYBE EVEN A SIDEWALK CAFE, POSSIBLY A NIGHTCLUB, OR A FANCY RESTAURANT. BUT, THE TRUTH IS, IT IS ALL OF THESE THINGS ROLLED INTO ONE.

To most people, bars are not an experience, they are just a place to unwind after a long day. This is not the case at the Copper Dragon, 720 East Grand Ave. The doors swing open and right in the front of the bar sits a brewery, a real brewery, with everything you need to brew a beer, including a copper colored brew kettle, hence the name—Copper Dragon.

There are outside lamp posts, and patio furniture that looks like it should sit on the best of patios. Also, a house front and windows that make it seem like you are looking from the outside in. A cobblestone floor that could be compared to the "yellow brick road" directs people through the building.

Ann Karyannis, part owner of the establishment, said she wants the Copper Dragon to give people the feel of an outside cafe without really being outside.

"We're aiming for a decor of a street-side cafe," she said.

The construction for the Copper Dragon began in March, and by the time the venue opened on Dec. 9, expenses exceeded $1 million. The Copper Dragon will have its official grand opening in February.

Although the bar has opened, Ann Karyannis said they are not finished decorating.

"We will bring in a dragon with a 14-foot wing span that is 18-foot long," she said. "We already have a dragon in the (Pinch Penny Pub) beer garden that breathes fire. This one will breathe smoke and have light coming out of its eyes."

"If people come for the decor, they just might want to stay for the beer. James Karyannis, a brewer for the Copper Dragon, said the brewing that is done in the bar is an attractive quality in itself.

He said brewing locally helps the bar to become an immediate tourist attraction because of the control the brewers have over the beer.

"We have better quality control over the beer, and it's fresh when people drink it," he said.

Ann Karyannis said through consumer reaction surveys, they adjust the recipes of the beer for what the people want.

"The beer is different than a Budweiser or a Miller," she said. "Our beer has more body so you can savor the flavor."

Ann Karyannis said the Copper Dragon offers a sampler tray of all of the four to seven beers they offer so people can taste all of them.

Along with house-brewed beer, James Karyannis said the Copper Dragon offers live entertainment such as bands. Local bands play there, as well as out-of-town acts. An occasional dinner theater will be offered, and typical bar recreational games such as pool and darts are available.

The Copper Dragon also provides a wide variety of foods that are new to many people.

"Our menu is designed to give something to everyone," Ann Karyannis said. "We tried to serve food at a good quality with large portions at good prices."

Ann Karyannis said that one of the menu items that is unique and a high seller is the ostrich.

"Ostrich is the meat of the future," she said. "It is definitely a red meat and has the fat and cholesterol of boneless, skinless turkey breast."

The Copper Dragon is unlike any other restaurant or bar in Carbondale, Karyannis said.

"We want people to feel like they could come in a long evening gown, or jeans and a T-shirt," she said. "We are expecting to have a regional draw for the food and the beer."

James Karyannis said the Copper Dragon can compare to other bars in major cities.

"We are an amusement park of nightly entertainment," he said.

Ann Karyannis said that it is important that the people of Southern Illinois have a nice place where they can go and have fun.

"People go to other cities and see nice places and they come home and are disappointed," she said. "We don't feel the citizens of Southern Illinois are second class citizens. They should have everything everyone else has."

Although the Copper Dragon may seem to have everything people want, they plan to keep expanding the brewery in the near future, James Karyannis said.

"We are planning expansions to our brewery because it seems like people are buying the beer faster than we can brew it," he said.

Ernest Taylor, a visitor from East St. Louis spent time in the bar and said he was impressed.

"The Copper Dragon is jazzier and more relaxed than other bars in Carbondale," he said. "The place is real laid back. Its not the type of establishment where you would see a bar fight."

Ray Pugh, a Carbondale resident, said he would not say the Copper Dragon is better or worse than other bars, just different.

"The Copper Dragon offers more in terms of providing lunch and dinner but the entertainment ranks about the same," he said. "The other thing that is really unique is that they make their own beer, and you don't see that in any places around here."

Copper Dragon's brewmaster Jim Reh, from Cobden, has been a brewer for two decades. The Copper Dragon Brewing Co., 720 E. Grand Ave., uses an all-grain brewing process that uses barley, hops and yeast to produce a quality beer.

OF RELICS AND REMAKES

Films like "The Relic" are like Volvos: decent cars without much flash or design, but just enough to get you from point A to point B.

The film tries its damndest to add some punch to the standard monster movie formula, and it occasionally succeeds.

The story revolves around a string of murders occurring in the Chicago Field Museum. The murders include death by decapitation, brain-snatching and various other nasty means. The homicide cop on the case (a gruff Tom Sizemore) teams up with an evolutionary biologist (Penelope Anne Miller) when they begin to realize that the killer just might not be human.

All the credible benchmarks of a good monster movie can be found within the context of the film. The characters ramble on about evolutionary theories and DNA strands, but you know you're in a monster movie when the police hold to the notion that your average human being can punch through someone's head, and guys with average names like Fred or Joe wind up, as canons fodder: quicker than you can get to the concession stand.

The clichés aside, the film actually is fairly good. Director Peter Hyams ("Outland," "The Star Chamber") fills the museum with plenty of dark corridors and an ominous pace that reaches full blast halfway into the film. Sizemore's acting breaks through the cop clichés, while Miller shows crafty intelligence in her role.

Of course, the true star to any respectable monster movie is the monster itself, and "The Relic" has come up with a doozy. Created by monster maestro Stan Winston and VFX computer graphics, the creature is a blitzkrieg of terror that refreshingly bears no resemblance to the usual template for movie monsters, that of Giger's "Alien" monstrosities. Hyams wisely keeps the monster out of full view with his dark, atmospheric photography and plenty of jarring scares.

Yet, these high points are all the more disappointing. Had Hyams tossed away the basic conventions of the story that we have all seen before and come up with something fresh, there just might have been something special.

No car owners in their right minds would want souped-up Ferrari engines under the hoods of their station wagons. With "The Relic," it may not be the fastest car, but at least it runs decent.

VIDEO PICK: "NARROW MARGIN"

Any filmmaker with the moxie to even attempt a sequel to Kubrick's "2001" had to be either stone crazy or stupid. Peter Hyams strikes me as neither, and with an impressive list of credits, he has already proven to be talented and capable. His remake of the '40s noir "Narrow Margin" moves with the velocity of a well-aimed bullet.

The film concerns an intense deputy district attorney (Gene Hackman) trying to keep a witness (Anne Archer) alive on a commercial train filled with assassins.

Hackman radiates a calm, harrowed charm akin to Cary Grant or James Stewart, while James B. Sikking does a sinister turn as a cunning, steel-toed hatchet man out to get Archer at any cost. It is a Hitchcockian thriller that is definitely good viewing.

Toni Braxton
Arista Records, 1996

An artist's second album usually tells people if the artist has staying power in the music industry. Well, Toni Braxton's second album, "Secrets," definitely puts her on the list of people who will be around for a while.

Braxton has stepped into the music scene with a new look and a new attitude. While her first album consisted mostly of sad love songs, Braxton's new album lets people know she is on top of things. And with LaFace records behind her, it was difficult to go wrong.

With Braxton's first hit single from

"Secrets," titled "You're Making Me High," she introduced a fast upbeat sound that normally would not be associated with Braxton.

The rest of the album has a blues sound and shows Braxton getting in touch with her sexuality through her music. The strong sound of the saxophone and piano are prominent in many of the songs on the album, which makes it the perfect album to relax with and enjoy. Unlike many rhythm and blues artists these days, there are no re-makes on this CD.

- by tracy taylor

Jesse Powell
Jesse Powell
MCA, 1996

With his hit single "Gloria," a 1972 remake, Jesse Powell has put himself on the charts as a rising young star.

While there seems to be a new artist coming out with a record every day, Powell's freshman effort with MCA is one of the few rhythm and blues albums of 1996 that can hold its own.

Powell uses a mix of soulful music, rhythms and lyrics that people of any age will find appealing.

Songs like "All I Need" and "Looking for Love" have the kind of music and beats that qualify as hip-hop dance music.

Others like "Spend The Night" offer the kind of jazz that is relaxing and laid back.

Unlike many artists these days, Powell's style is so versatile that every song on the album has its own unique groove.

There are songs on the album that are sure hits and others that may end up in the archives of Classic Rhythm and Blues.

If Powell's first album says anything about his ability as an artist, he is sure to be around for a long time.

Bush
Razorblade Suitcase
Radioactive Records, 1996

In their sophomore attempt, Bush's "Razorblade Suitcase" picks up exactly where their debut album "Sixteen Stone" left off. While retaining their radio friendly persona, Rossdale and the other Brits prove that in these days of super-pop-rock-loving youngsters, a pretty face will carry you a lot further than a creative mind. Their philosophy seems to have been, "If it isn't broken, don't fix it."

The only surprise on: can expect is that rock guru Steve Albini lent his name to this recording. The band's debut "Sixteen Stone" earned them plenty of respect in the music scene for its fierce sound and fresh lyrics, and one can only assume that all those pats on the back dug the band into a rut.

Although the song "Swallowed" will undoubtedly provide all the radio exposure this album needs to become a status quo favorite, it would be surprising if the record store clerk is not still laughing as she counts my cash. If there is anything positive about this album, it is that at least the band definitely catered to their MTV-loving fan base, so it seems someone other than a music store owner is happy.

Gravity Kills
Gravity Kills
Epitaph, 1996

In their self-titled debut album, Gravity Kills proves that St. Louis actually can contribute something notable to the international music scene.

Gravity Kills released one track, "Gully," on 105.7 FM's local music compilation, Point Essential. The listener reaction was so large that it was on the radio constantly. People were scurrying everywhere trying to snatch a copy but it sold out a bit too quickly for most.

"Gully" caught the attention of several major record labels including Nine Inch Nails' former tyrant T.V.T. Records. The band signed T.V.T. and soon afterward began recording. The product has given the music scene a full-length album that is destined to become a classic in the industrial music genre.

As soon as the intro, "Forward" ends, a non-stop layered guitar extravaganza begins with "Gully" and screams to the closer "Hold." The highlight of this album definitely is the adrenaline rush of "Enough." It is beyond me to think of something about this album that is not what it promises — pure heart attack rock.

Rolling Stone's artist of the year winds up its last leg of the tour in Carbondale.

WHO: SMASHING PUMPKINS AND FOUNTAINS OF WAYNE
 WHEN: JAN. 21
 WHERE: SIU ARENA
 WHAT TIME: 7:30 P.M.
 HOW MUCH: $25

T H E P U M P K I N S

THOSE WHO SAW THE SMASHING PUMPKINS WHEN THEY QUAKED SIU ARENA WITH TUNES FROM THEIR HARD ROCKING "GISH" AND "SIAMESE DREAM" ALBUMS IN SPRING 1994 MAY BE SHOCKED TO WITNESS THE IMMENSE MUSICAL VARIETY "MELLOM COLLE AND THE INFINITE SADNESS" OFFERS. THE PUMPKINS, ALONG WITH THEIR OPENING CRONES, FOUNTAINS OF WAYNE, WILL MAKE THEIR SOPHOMORE VISIT TO CARBONDALE TUESDAY.

The "Infinite Sadness Tour," which will bring the Pumpkins back to SIU Arena, was a magnet for controversy in July. The heroin overdose of touring keyboardist Jonathan Melvoin and the drug-related expulsion of drummer Jimmy Chamberlain caused the band to pause its tour.

However, in August, Matt Walker of "Filter" replaced Chamberlain; Dennis Demion, founding member of "The Frogs," replaced Melvoin; and the paused tour began rolling again. The tour is now on its fourth and final leg, and it is on its way to town.

Despite their inter-band catastrophes, the Pumpkins' musical success was phenomenal in 1996. Their 1995 offering, "Mellon Collie and the Infinite Sadness," sold band several times, and he does not believe it is worth the money to repeat the experience.

"After seeing them three times, they're just not worth $25," he said. Alvan Caby, a senior in cinema and photography from Cutler, said he, too, has seen the band several times, but he plans to attend the approaching concert.

"They've improved since last time they were here, and their new drummer is really good," he said.

Caby said he saw the Pumpkins play in October at the Klef Center in St. Louis, and aside from the band's reluctance to play older songs, he was more than satisfied with the band's performance.

"It was a really good show," he said. "But I would have liked to have heard stuff from Gish (The Pumpkins' 1990 debut album)."

Opening the Carbondale show will be Scratchie Records' New York-based pop rockers Chris Collingwood and Adam Schlesinger, better known as Fountains of Wayne. The group's self-titled debut album promises concertgoers plenty of soaring melodies, countless rock clichés and an abundance of hilarious lyrics. If you like

They've been selling a lot of tickets in a lot of markets.—gary drake, siu arena director millions of copies and is the source of six of the Pumpkins' seven recent Grammy nominations, including the song "Tonight, Tonight."

The album's attraction undoubtedly is its veritable cornucopia of sounds. From the graceful love ballad "Cupid De Locke" to the soothing pedal guitar and lap steel guitar in "Take me Down," the Pumpkins experiment with mellow instrumentation.

Of course, for the traditional fan, there are plenty of cutting guitar attacks in "Bodies" and "Tale of a Scorched Earth." With this release the Pumpkins undoubtedly put their blossoming popularity on the line and let everyone know that it is a band that is not afraid of change.

Some students are all revved up about the Pumpkins' return to Carbondale, but everyone is not wetting their pants in anticipation.

Nate Denny, a senior in computer science from Freeburg, said he has seen the Weezer at all, you will be able to stomach these guys.

Schlesinger, who co-founded Scratchie Records with James Iha and D'Arcy of the Smashing Pumpkins, is better known for writing the title track in Tom Hanks' movie "That Thing You Do."

SIU Arena Director Gary Drake said the Pumpkins were invited back not only because of the students' response to the first visit, but also because of the Pumpkins' tremendous popularity.

"I thought it (the first show) was a show that the students liked," he said. "They've been selling a lot of tickets in a lot of markets."

Drake said Friday that more than 5,000 tickets for the show have been sold, but a number of seats are still available. Unlike the April 1994 concert, there will be chairs on the main floor.

96 Revi in i

By Lisa M. Pangburn

When Jason Morris looks back on the past year, three issues come to the top of his head. He smiles, then mentions that he got engaged. He also comments about the summer blockbuster, "Independence Day" and about The Reverend Horton Heat's musical debut at SIUC.

Morris, a senior in accounting from St. Charles, said that 1996 seemed to be a good year for entertainment.

"I mean, so many things happened last year," he said.

"Just think, the Olympics were in the United States, Madonna had a baby and then there was that dance—the Macarena."

Looking back on 1996, the Macarena was not the only thing that humankind grasped, over-did and then became sick at the sight of.

Jennifer Simms, a freshman in engineering from Mt. Vernon, said she got tired of seeing Dennis Rodman and Jenny McCarthy.

"Rodman is a good basketball player, but he gets too much attention from the media when it comes to his stupid tricks," she said. "At first, I thought it was fine that he got a little attention, but then I just turned the channel whenever he came on. I guess in a way he's a pioneer. I mean, how many cross-dressing basketball players do you know?"

"As far as Jenny McCarthy goes, get a life. That girl has graced every magazine from Playboy to People."

Eric Sigler, a junior in University Studies from Urbana, said SIUC had a plethora of entertainment for all different types of people in '96.

"Maybe I just got out more last year," he said. "But, it seemed that there were a lot of things to do on campus. I know that the bar-entry age went up to 21 last year and that really put the University in a spot to supply entertainment."

"There were some really great bands that came, along with the wide spectrum of art showcases that were offered. I thought it was awesome when Bobby Seale came to speak in the ballrooms. On the other side of the spectrum, Garth Brooks sold out three concerts at the Arena. That's a wide range."

Along with Seale and Brooks coming to town, Carbondale had many other events occur in the last year.

The former blues bar, A.C. Reeds closed down to only open up again as a techno dance bar, Daddy Warbucks, 213 E. Main St.

Michael Peter Goetz, the principal in the sitcom "The Faculty," visited McLeod Theater to perform in the play "Love Letters."

Also, a fiddler from Oklahoma created a Grateful Dead type of following. Randy Crouch played at a packed Booby's beer garden, 406 S. Illinois Ave. only to be asked numerous times to come back to Carbondale. Crouch has packed every place he has played since that night.

Jessie Collins, a junior in radio and television from Rockford, said he thought the November closing of Detours, 760 E. Grand Ave. would really put a lot of people out of a good time on the weekends.

ew

"I used to go to Detours all the time," he said. "I didn't think I would go when it changed to Smilin' Jacks (in November), but I really like that place. It still has good dance music, but now, once in a while, really good bands play there as well."

In the past year, many changes have occurred both locally and nationally. Positive and negative events occurred, but all in all, 1996 was a good year for entertainment, Sarah Schmidelkofer said.

Schmidelkofer, a senior in elementary education from Spokane, Wash., said she can look back on 1996 and smile.

"If you just look at the entertainment side of things, there have been many changes," she said. "There was an explosion of daytime talk shows, but Rosie O'Donnell now has her own show that is worth watching."

"Tiny Tim died, and Kiss went back on tour. Finally, small budget films are being noticed by the masses, and Eddie Murphy is finally back in business. You take a look at those things, and you have to admit that 1996 was a good year."

A six-and-a-half-minute 1947 silent pornographic film, reported to be starring Marilyn Monroe has been confirmed as authentic by the American Film Institute, reports Reuters. The black-and-white film shows a chubby Monroe stripping and then performing a sex act with a man, says the news service. The film will premiere at a Madrid film festival Feb. 1.

"So far, so good," a judge overseeing the drug rehabilitation of actor Robert Downey Jr., 31, told the actor in court recently. Downey, sentenced Nov. 6 on drug and weapons charges, must continue to pass periodic drug tests and attend self-help programs as part of his three-year probation, AP reports.

On Jan. 20, the night of President Clinton's inauguration, Rage Against The Machine guitarist Tom Morello will host Radio Free L.A., a two-hour radio show beginning at 8 p.m. that will combine music and "confrontational politics." Artists who are scheduled to perform include Rage Against the Machine, Beck, Cypress Hill and members of Pearl Jam. The program also will feature interviews with Michael Moore (Roger & Me), Mumia Abu-Jamal and Leonard Peltier, among others.

Marilyn Manson has stirred up controversy in Oklahoma where Gov. Frank Keating has condemned the band and is urging residents to stay away from Manson's Feb. 5 date in his state. "From what I have learned of the content of their lyrics and message as well as their conduct on stage, they are clearly bent on degrading women, religion and decency, while promoting satanic worship, child abuse and drug use," said Keating.

Live Music Every Saturday Night!

The secret of why you like country music
 (Even If You Don't Realize It)

The secret is simple - country music is simple. The bass beat is not subtle yet not intimidating. Country music forces your feet to dance. And the lyrics are straight forward, unlike the rock song I just heard. It referred either to the existential meaning of life or bestiality with a chicken. The country song writer is upfront. He likes Montana. He doesn't like hippies. His wife is sleeping around and he's bummed.

Country music puts you at ease. Thus it's easier to socialize. Rock music may give you the ability for free individual expression, but country music allows you to press the flesh - especially with the slow "Mother Hugging" ballads.

Shaman, priestess titles available on Net

By CHRISTOPHER MILLER

<http://ybi.com/ulc/>

The Universal Life Church promises "It will not stand between you and your God."

In keeping with that promise, the church offers to ordain anyone as a minister for life without a fee. (Special titles like Shaman, High Priestess and Yogi also are available.)

For those who wish to perform marriages and other religious rites with their new reverendships, the site includes a link to low-cost legal advice. (Always check with the local county government prior to performing services.)

Visitors to this site also learn about doctoral programs in divinity and religion offered through correspondence courses by the church.

<http://www.paranola.com/coel>

The members of the Church of Euthanasia have such strong feelings about humankind's destruction of earth they advocate killing yourself as a viable way to save the planet.

The church operates what it claims to be the first Suicide Assistance Hotline. (Learn how to go out like a celebrity.)

The site has a link to another site offering emergency contraception for those who may have broken the church's one commandment, "Thou shall not procreate," within the last 72 hours. Of course, the Church of Euthanasia includes a form for pledging disgusting sums of money to the fight against humans, as well as links to other information for those interested in eating people, not animals.

<http://sunsite.unc.edu/subgenius/>

"Eternal salvation or triple your money back" is the promise made by the Church of the Subgenius.

Clicking on the nose of church icon, J. R. Bob Dobbs (the middle-aged man smoking a pipe), sends the user into the Slacktime Funhouse.

There, the visitor can download a host of sacred files, including a virtual replica of the pipe of Dobbs, "which one may meditate on for hours." The site also offers a Short Duration Marriage allowing visitors to enter the bonds of holy matrimony with any person or object they choose, for just a few nanoseconds. Dissatisfied couples may opt for The Short Duration Divorce. Those who can not seem to make sense of the church doctrine may be enlightened by the E-Z Quick-Implant Brain Wipe.

<http://jubil.westnet.com/hyperdiscordianism/>

Hyperdiscordianism may be the only religion that dictates everyone belongs to it whether or not they want to. Losing oneself in hyper links more than 30 deep increases one's appreciation for chaos, the driving force behind the hyperdiscordian faith. Visitors learn hyperdiscordians worship Eris, the Greek goddess of chaos and hope to communicate with her through their pineal gland. Hyperdiscordians sometimes seem more interested in giving themselves arbitrary titles and adding random letters after their name. For instance, hyperdiscordians encourage visitors to append the word "Fenderson" to their name. Don't have a holy name? Borrow Lord Omar Khayyam Ravenhurst's. After committing heinous acts in the name of Ravenhurst, find out "how to be elevated to the status of divinity without straining yourself or your credibility."

she said the team may have lost its chance of a regular season conference crown.

Yet despite the loss, Hasheider said the team believes the MVC crown is still within reach.

"We still think we have a shot at the conference," she said. "We know we have to win every game on the road. We have no margin of error, but we can do it."

Scott said even though the Lady Bulldogs are a young team, they have a threat in the 6-foot-4-inch freshman center Tammy Blackstone.

"She could have gone anywhere in the country," Scott said of Blackstone. "Blackstone is very threatening. She is awesome. We have to keep her away from the basket."

The task of keeping Blackstone away from the basket will rest on the shoulders of junior Theia Hudson, the Salukis' 6-foot-2-inch center. Blackstone, who has started in 10 of Drake's 13 games this season, has averaged 14.3 points and 6.2 rebounds per game.

Meanwhile, Hudson is averaging 15.3 points per game, and pulling down 6.3 rebounds per game.

Scott said the Salukis need to keep an edge on the Lady Bulldogs if they want to win the game.

"We need to control the tempo of the game," she said. "We also need to control the rebounding on both ends, and use our experience."

The Salukis and the Lady Bulldogs tip-off at 2:05 p.m.

49ers dump Seifert

THE BALTIMORE SUN

When the San Francisco 49ers push a coach out the door, they do it with so much finesse that it's easy to think he just got a promotion.

George Seifert, who has the highest winning percentage in NFL history and won two Super Bowls in eight years, resigned as San Francisco 49ers coach Wednesday after the club declined to give him a long-term extension, but he left with words of praise from team executives.

"George is the ultimate professional," team President Carmen Policy said. "He is one of the smartest men presently active in the NFL."

Seifert's departure overshadowed the New York Giants' decision to hire Jim Fassel, the offensive coordinator of the Arizona Cardinals, to replace fired Coach Dan Reeves.

Seifert's departure and Fassel's hiring left seven vacancies in the NFL coaching ranks, but the 49ers are expected to cut that to six Thursday by hiring University of California Coach Steve Mariucci.

Seifert, who turns 57 next week, is the 10th NFL coach to leave since the end of last season.

"There was a time for it to end. It's the best thing for myself and the San Francisco 49ers," Seifert said.

"It's a time for new blood, but I'm not saying my blood is stagnant. Let's pass this on to somebody else."

CREIGHTON

Jenkins chipped in a season-high 23 points.

In the end, Creighton's free throw advantage proved to be too much for the Salukis to overcome. Creighton outscored SIUC 29-5 at the free throw line, and also forced Saluki centers Jamie Veach and James Watts into foul trouble early on.

The Salukis played without junior forward Rashad Tucker Wednesday, who was suspended by the team after his action in Sunday's 76-70 loss to Illinois State.

Tucker also will not play in Saturday's game at the University of Northern Iowa, but Herrin said Tucker will probably play against Southwest Missouri State University Wednesday.

Saturday afternoon's tipoff in Cedar Falls, Iowa, is at 3:05.

Rodman in trouble again

Chicago Bulls forward Dennis Rodman is once again in the news, this time for his actions during the Bulls' win over the Minnesota Timberwolves Wednesday night. Rodman kicked a cameraman in the groin after tripping over another man in the third quarter. Rodman, who said he kicked the man in the leg, later apologized to cameraman Eugene Amos, while Amos was writing in pain on the sidelines. Amos was later carried off the court on a stretcher.

NCAA BASKETBALL

UConn players suspended

The University of Connecticut declared two starters ineligible pending clarification of all questions related to a possible NCAA infraction within its men's basketball team. Forward Kirk King and guard Ricky Moore allegedly accepted an impermissible extra benefit in violation of NCAA rules. Neither player will be eligible for Sunday's game against No. 1 ranked Kansas. Published reports Thursday said Moore and King had accepted airline tickets in 1995, however, the Big East conference did not identify the gifts. The school anticipates an internal investigation.

Salukis in for Drake dog fight

AMY STRAUS/Daily Egyptian

LEADER OF THE PACK: Saluki's assistant basketball coach Kristi Kinne, a graduate student in social psychology from Jefferson, Iowa, looks on as Saluki's women's basketball team prepares for the game against Drake on Saturday.

DIFFERENT BREED: Ex-Bulldog Kristi Kinne is now assistant coach for the Saluki basketball team.

DONNA COLIER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Two seasons ago SIUC women's assistant basketball coach Kristi Kinne was the leading scorer for Drake University. This season she is coaching against them.

"It will be an unusual feeling," Kinne said. "I have moved on to a new level, but it will be interesting to see if I go and sit on their bench."

The Salukis, who are 7-5 overall, and 3-2 in Missouri Valley Conference action, travel to Des Moines, Iowa, Saturday to take on the Lady Bulldogs. Drake is currently 7-6 overall and 2-4 in the MVC.

Kinne, who is serving the Salukis as a graduate assistant coaching the post players, was named MVC Player of the Year in 1995, after completing a successful senior season at Drake.

Kinne still holds her alma mater's field goal record with 63 percent from the field.

She said even though Drake is her alma mater, she will show no favorites Saturday night.

"I want to beat Drake just like I want to beat any other team," Kinne said. "I played with a lot of the girls who are still on the team (Drake), so it is unusual."

Drake has traditionally been strong at the post position, but Kinne said the team will be taking a different approach to defend the post Saturday.

"We have worked on descending on the post as a team effort, not individually," she said. "The team needs to get the box-out and the rebounds. Drake loses when they get out-rebounded, so we have to take the second and third shots away from them."

The Salukis are coming off a 63-59 loss to the University of Evansville Saturday, but coach Cindy Scott does not believe the team is in a slump.

"I don't want to say we are struggling, because we are not," she said. "We had a bad game against Evansville, so we are looking forward to the game (against Drake)." Junior co-captain Beth Hasheider said the Salukis are bouncing back well from their loss to the Aces.

"Practices have been going pretty well," she said. "We are more focused, and we know we have to have a better effort than what we had against Evansville."

Scott was so upset about Saturday's loss to the Aces.

BLUEJAY BLITZKRIEG:

Depleted Saluki basketball squad gives up halftime lead in 76-67 loss to Creighton.

RYAN KEITH
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A two-man offensive show was not enough to give a shorthanded Saluki men's basketball team a win at Creighton University Thursday night.

Junior guard Troy Hudson and sophomore forward Monte Jenkins combined for 53 points, but the Salukis fell to the Bluejays 76-67 in Omaha, Neb., dropping SIUC to 8-overall and 1-3 in the Missouri Valley Conference.

SIUC, who dressed only nine players for the game and played six, took a 38-35 lead into halftime, led by Hudson's 15 points and Jenkins' 14 points.

But Creighton used defensive pressure to wear down a depleted Saluki squad and made 29 of 33 free throws to overcome a poor offensive first half for their second straight win, improving to 7-8 overall and 3-2 in conference play.

The loss increases the Salukis' losing streak to three games after losses to the University of Evansville and Illinois State University.

Saluki coach Rich Herrin said the Salukis' effort was good, but fell short in the end.

"We had a good effort, we just got beat,"

Herrin said in his postgame show. "We fouled too much, but that's part of the game. We played a good game, we just did not win it."

After a fast start to the first half, in which the Salukis took an 18-8 lead, Creighton stayed in the game by outscoring SIUC 16-1 at the free throw line. The Bluejays then opened the second half with a 5-0 run and never looked back as the Salukis could not overcome Creighton's solid defense to mount a comeback.

Hudson and Jenkins kept the Salukis in the game during the second half, scoring 33 of the Salukis' 38 points. Hudson scored 30 points, including six three-point field goals, while
