Pro-choice supporters say legal abortions save women's lives

DANA DUBRIVNY
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Lillian Adams' words painted a vivid and gruesome picture as she related the tale of a close friend.

This friend had entered the damp, cool basement located on South University Avenue with hesitation. Thoughts of her two children and husband weighed in her mind, but she knew she could not have another child, and this was the only answer.

She handed the man $200 and stared at the unsterilized surgical instruments that lay on the tray next to the chair intended for her, and other women like her.

After half an hour, the procedure was finished. Within months, a serious infection had developed near her uterus. The infection grew, and soon after her ovaries had to be removed. The option of having another child later in life was destroyed.

Adams, co-chairwoman of the Southern Illinois Pro-Choice Alliance, recalls her friend's horrid situation as if it happened yesterday, as well as the time in which it took place here in Carbondale.

"Women would get word of a local back-alley butcher, and go to him for an abortion," she said. "There were many that died from this, many who became sterile. Hospitals were full of women who had illegal abortions and developed infections."

The time in which Adams' friend had her experience was the 1950s, a time of malt shops, bobby socks and rock 'n' roll. It was also a period in which Adams says women were secretly dying and quietly ruining their bodies for fear of public humiliation.

"Terminating an unwanted pregnancy is as old as humanity," Adams said. "Illegal or not, abortions will occur."

But the ruling of the 1973 case of Roe v Wade gave way to new and safer methods of abortion. It declared that statutes banning abortion infringed a woman's Constitutional rights.

This case made abortion legal in the first trimester of a pregnancy, but included restrictions during the second and third trimesters.

In the 25 years since the ruling, much focus has been given to abortions occurring in the third trimester of a pregnancy in the debate between pro-life and pro-choice. In reality, very few occur during this time unless the birth of the child causes a life-threatening situation.

In a 1997 report released by the American Civil Liberties Union, research showed that only 1 percent of all abortions take place after the first 18 weeks, and 0.04 percent are performed in the third trimester.

"Late term abortions never occur unless in drastic cases," Adams said. "There was a situation where the brain of a woman's unborn child was attached to her placenta. Had she followed through with the pregnancy, they both would have died."

Another idea in the debate is that women carelessly get pregnant and use abortion as a means of birth control.

Allison Hile, Education Director of the Hope Clinic for Women in Granite City, is saddened by the falsely publicized outlook of the pro-choice position.

"So many people are afraid to say they are pro-choice," she said. "They think admitting it would be saying that they are anti-life. We don't advocate abortions, we advocate the right for the woman to choose what she is going to do with her body."

Hile believes there is a need for education on birth control, as well as a need for laws allowing women to make their own choices.

Rachelle Stivers is the president of Voices for Choice, a new SIUC Registered Student Organization. She agrees that many people are confused and do not understand the ramifications of overturning the Roe v

Pro-life advocates still fight for unborn life 25 years later

Dennis Lowry places a plastic fetus on top of his brief case. The fetus is a model of what a 12-week-old human would look like: curled up, thumb in mouth and not much bigger than a palm-sized rock.

There are some aspects of a living fetus which are not evident on the lifeless expression of the plastic figure laying before Lowry. For example, no blood flows through the figure, and it can not breathe or cry out.

"Many abortions occur when the baby is in its 12th week of development," said Lowry, a member of the Jackson County Right to Life organization and an SIUC professor of journalism.

In the 12th week of development all the organs and systems of the fetus are functioning. The only major activity from week 12 until birth is an increase in size, according to a publication by the Human Life Alliance of Minnesota Inc.

Alternate pregnancy options available to women are good reasons for women to carry their babies to birth, Lowry said.

"Adoption is not popular enough, but the woman can rely on her family for support. And there are homes sponsored by churches which take care of pregnant mothers at no cost," Lowry said. "If the need arises, people ultimately step up to the plate to help out."

Lowry said the laws governing issues of abortion are inconsistent with laws governing the lives of federally protected animals.

The very federal laws which allow the destruction of human life will levy stiff penalties against the destruction of animal life, he said.

"Damaging the eggs of a bald eagle is a felony offense," Lowry said. "Baby eagles have protection from the law, human babies do not. It's a double standard."

Lowry occasionally participates in peaceful, pro-life demonstrations outside the Hope Clinic in Granite City, Mo. Through protesting he hopes to sway the minds of women before they enter the doors of the abortion clinic.

"Occasionally you will see a woman turn around outside of the clinic," Lowry said.

The U.S. Supreme Court 25 years ago granted women the right to have an abortion in the landmark decision in Roe v Wade, which granted legal access for women to abortion within the first trimester of pregnancy. The case also allowed states to restrict abortions in the second and third trimesters of pregnancy.

Roe v Wade was not tried as a single case; it was a combination of two. The other case was Doe v Bolton.

The Roe v Wade decision included restrictions in the third trimester "except where it is necessary...for the preservation of life or health of the mother."

In Doe v Bolton, the companion case, the U.S. Supreme Court defined "health" to include: "All factors — physical, emotional, psychological, familial, and the woman's age — relevant to the well-being of the parent."

The freedom of choice granted by the court's decision has resulted in countless individuals' premature deaths, and has left an emptiness in world, said Burke Shade, pro-life father of six and pastor of Evangelical Presbyterian Church, 624 N. Oakland Ave.

He said the babies are literally sucked from the life-giving wombs of their mothers.

Shade bases his anti-abortion beliefs on the teachings of the Bible and says that the tremendous value of human life is selfishly cast aside by pro-choicers.

"The pro-choice individuals say to themselves, 'This is my body, my choice, my future here,'" Shade said.

"They completely overlook the baby, and they engage in

City delays community service vote one year

PENALTY: Student leaders outraged at council decision.

SARA BEAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Student leaders were disappointed by action taken by the Carbondale City Council to postpone further consideration of conversion of city ordinance violations into community service.

The council discussed a report prepared by city attorney Paige Smith on the possible implementation of community service as a penalty for city ordinance violations at Tuesday evening's city council meeting. The council moved to accept the report and wait until next year to discuss it.

"The mayor recommended that [the student leaders] put the issue off for a year," said Pat Kelly, SIUC student trustee. "That disappointed a lot of people."

"We are disappointed, but if we have to make our voices heard in the next mayoral election, we will."

In spite of the disappointment, it was apparent that the issue will resurface before next year.

"The best option at this point is to look into cost-effective ways to implement community service; cost-effective in terms of that the program will require minimal additional resources by the city," Undergraduate Student Government President Dave Vingren said. "Rather than forking over a lump sum of money for a fine, it is more beneficial for them to do community service."

"And the socialization that the individual receives when working with other people doing the work voluntarily is very beneficial."

The council expressed various reasons, based on the report, why the issue of community service was not a favorable one.

"The administration of such a program would be very burdensome," City Manager Jeff Doherty said. "The city would have to add additional staff, and that would be at a significant cost to the city."

Police release Dollar General suspect sketch

The Carbondale Police Department is seeking help from the community to identify a suspect in the Friday night armed robbery of the Dollar General Store, 622 E. Walnut St.

The suspect walked through the store, bought a cigarette lighter and pulled a semi-automatic pistol from his pocket, demanding money from the cashier.

After the suspect obtained an undetermined amount of money in a Dollar General Store bag, he ran east toward Fox East Gate Theatre.

He was last seen wearing a hooded blue sweatshirt, dark blue jeans and white sneakers.

The suspect is described as a thin, white male in his 30s, 6 feet tall, with light colored wavy hair.

The department is asking anyone with information regarding this case contact them at 457-3200 or call CrimeStoppers at 549-COPS.

Lee may be extradited from Memphis by end of week

Gary D. Lee of Carbondale has waived extradition and should be turned over to Jackson County authorities by the end of the week, according to Jackson County State's Attorney Mike Wepsiec.

Lee, 30, is charged in the Friday night stabbing murder of SIUC alumna and Unity Point Elementary School teacher Ellen Drake and burglary of her home.

He was arrested Sunday night in Memphis, Tenn., where he is being held at a $1 million bond.

Lee is facing five counts of first-degree murder, one count of robbery, one count of residential burglary and one count of theft over $10,000.

A relative found Drake's body in the living room of her Carbondale home early Sunday morning.

Police arrived at Drake's home at about 3 a.m. Sunday after receiving a 911 call from an undisclosed caller.

Police said it was evident a homicide took place because of the severity of the wounds.

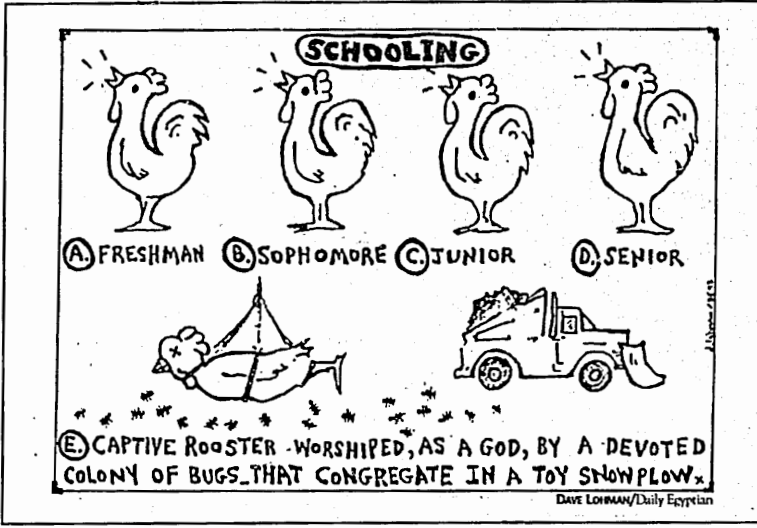

Wepsiec said that there is no point in setting a first appearance date for Lee until he has returned to Carbondale.

If he is returned this morning his first appearance could be as early as this afternoon.

Our Word

Still controversial after 25 years with no agreeable answer in sight

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

This statement is printed at the end of this article each day. It is supposed to represent agreement, perhaps not absolute agreement but some form of unity of belief.

But for the first time in many editorial board meetings, it was agreed Wednesday that a consensus on the issue of abortion could not be reached.

It has been 25 years since the historic Roe v. Wade decision. Since then, many things have changed in both America and the world.

Communism fell in Russia, and with it the Cold War ended. The Berlin Wall came down. Six presidents have been in the White House, and Hong Kong became a part of China again.

But with all the changes in the last 25 years, the abortion debate remains controversial. The lines are still drawn and arguments still occur daily.

As the editorial board met Monday and Wednesday and debated the stance we should take on this issue, the only conclusion reached was we had no stance.

Although it honestly can be said that most of us believed in a woman's right to choose there was no complete agreement.

Some of us were completely pro-choice with no exceptions, while some were pro-life under all circumstances.

Some were pro-choice except for varying factors such as: it should be legal except as a form of irresponsible birth control; it should not be legal except for cases of rape; should not be performed in the third trimester; or there should be parental consent.

Some said it should be left completely up to women, while some stated that they support it legislatively as a whole but do not personally support it.

It's personal differences like this that lead to the conclusion that a national stance on abortion cannot be reached and no one law could satisfy everyone. An issue such as this is full of such emotional content that reason is not used — only the heart.

America is a unique mix of ideas. It is this fact that many find beautiful. We as a society have been given a right that citizens of other countries have not been given — the right to disagree.

Blaming others not always right

Bill Mamer

Are they crazy?

Bill is a junior in English and history. Are they crazy? Bill's opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the Daily Egyptian.

Allow me to introduce Latrina Pixley of Washington, D.C. Of her four children, the two oldest were taken into foster care for their own safety. Her third child, six-week-old Nakya, she smothered and tossed into a large trash receptacle because Nakya was crying too much. That evening, she went out for barbecue with her boyfriend, who learned of the murder and called the police.

Although Pixley pled guilty to second-degree murder, District of Columbia Judge George Mitchell let her go with a three-year term, to be served only on weekends on grounds that she "stay out of trouble." Nakya's father became so distraught by the sentence that he hanged himself.

Pixley recently gave birth to her fourth baby, Cornelius, who soon was taken into foster care as Pixley wound up in jail for credit card fraud. (To the courts, this was apparently a more severe crime than infanticide.)

Upon her December release, Montgomery County Judge Michael Mason returned Cornelius to Pixley despite her record of child abuse and infanticide. Mason justified this with notions of family preservation and racial uniformity. (Cornelius' foster mother is of a different race and somehow incapable of raising him as well as a mother with a record of abusing and killing her children.)

A representative from the Child Welfare Agency claimed Pixley was no more a danger to her children than any mother suffering from post-partum depression. Here lies the frightening effect of this obsession with victimhood that has become so prevalent in American society. By this logic, Pixley is not the cold-hearted murderer of her daughter rather a victim of being poor and black. This insults the millions of mothers of all backgrounds who successfully nurture their children, often alone, in climates of poverty, racism and other adversities.

If Pixley is the victim, what does that make six-week-old Nakya, Cornelius, or the two children she abused? By the logic of judges Mitchell and Mason, the law as written would only apply to middle-class white suburban males, and infanticide is acceptable if one has had a hard time.

Now I'm aware of the effect one's environment can have on behavior, and we ought to be working to improve the quality of life in our nation. However, an individual's environment does not abdicate them from responsibility.

When people see themselves as victims, they see their situations, not as obstacles to be overcome, but as something forced upon them that "somebody" (usually the government) ought to do something about.

Some things do need to be changed, but if you live in a bad neighborhood, for example, you should take an active interest in its betterment, not wait for someone else to fix things for you.

Thinking of one's self as a victim can be attractive. It gives you someone to blame, usually "Them" with a capital "T." It abdicates you from responsibility because, after all, nothing you do is your fault — society forced it on you.

By encouraging this growing notion that everyone is a victim, people like judges Mitchell and Mason destroy hope for disadvantaged people.

Dear Editor:

Kirk Mottram, I usually avoid commenting on writing styles. I realize because I have not undergone rigorous journalism training at this University, my opinion will more than likely fall by your wayside as unlearned.

I am just a graduating senior in political science, spending my past four years studying a topic I assume you have an interest in reporting. So here is my advice.

Watch your words. Your choice of idiomatic expressions to illustrate the debating sides of the abortion issue is VERY skewed.

Using the term "pro-choice" is common and generally accepted. But your use of "anti-choice" ("NOW endorses Schmidt for governor," Jan. 15) is a dead give-away to your personal opinion on the issue. The term "pro-life" has served its purpose and will not confuse the casual reader.

If you are indeed a reporter-hopeful, you should have been taught this. Although I have heard that journalism schools have become a travesty, merely serving as institutions of inculcating political views of the writing professionals who teach — creating liberal larva, if you will.

The structure of your article would also lead readers to believe that you must adore the candidate about whom you write. This is not good.

It is fine to support a politician, but do you believe reporters should glorify candidates?

Come to think of it, the love apparently thrown at the Chicago Democrat could be negatively received in Southern Illinois, causing the opposite of your assumed desired affect.

For example, I am sure you are weary, as I am, of reading professional journalists either vilifying or lionizing President Clinton when reporting Washington goings-on.

Basically, someone someday may decide your opinion matters and give you the appropriate position.

Until then, do the American people some justice. Please practice the reporting of unbiased facts.

SIU Police trying to find cause of misplaced reports

CORINNE MANNING
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC Police Department is interviewing its staff to determine who is responsible for the December misplacement of SIUC Police crime reports, which were found on a table at the department's annual auction.

SIUC Police Chief Sam Jordan said Wednesday that the department interviewed 14 people and will question three or four others before it can determine how the reports turned up at the auction in the Carbondale Civic Center.

"I'm still at that point of gathering information," he said.

Georgiana Hoffmann, a Carbondale resident, found the reports on a table next to items set to be auctioned. She said she took the reports to the Carbondale Police Department so someone could take responsibility for them. Carbondale Police said they turned the reports over to SIUC police, but Jordan said last week that he had no knowledge of the reports until a Jan. 13 letter to the editor in the Daily Egyptian was published.

Both departments have been unable to provide a clear timeline of when the reports were transferred between departments.

"Whoever was responsible for the documents was grossly irresponsible," Hoffmann said.

Jordan is trying to find out what documents were found, who is responsible for their misplacement and what possible action will be taken.

Jordan was away last weekend, which delayed investigations, but said he is doing everything he can to figure out what exactly happened.

"Before I shoot from the hip I want to make sure that I have my ducks in a row and I understand that I have as many facts as I can," Jordan said.

Pot activist feeling the burn

LOS ANGELES TIMES

AUGUSTA, Maine — Don Christen, who wears a white sweatshirt emblazoned with images of marijuana plants over his heart, said he herniated a disk when lifting a manhole cover while working as a laborer in 1982, and hasn't really been able to work since. Pot, he said, eases his discomfort.

In 1989, he said, his father told him to stop complaining about the fact that marijuana was illegal and do something about it. So Christen wrote a letter to the local paper, advocating legalization, and hasn't looked back since.

He's been busted for trafficking — authorities seized his marijuana and what he described as his gun collection — in 1993. He spent seven months in jail. He spent another three months in jail for passing out marijuana-laced brownies from the steps of the Somerset County courthouse to whoever said they needed medical attention.

Christen figures he still owes about $10,000 in back fines and 1,000 hours of court-ordered community service. "I'm basically broke," he says.

Style is important to Jason Dansby. To keep up with the latest fashions, he spends an enormous amount of money to enhance his wardrobe.

In Dansby's closet hangs a number of colorful shirts with the Nautica logo that cost $55. To compliment the shirts are Guess jeans for which he paid $65. He also has a $70 blue and green Nautica jacket. Across the closet floor lies a half dozen pair of shoes, including a pair of Nike Air Max gym shoes that set him back $120.

Maintaining a wardrobe of name-brand items costs Dansby, a senior in administration of justice from Chicago, nearly $200 a month. The prices of these clothes are worth the expense to him.

"My appearance is important to me," he said. "I want to keep up with the times, and I want to look good. Just because it's expensive doesn't mean I'm not a smart shopper."

While some students spend big bucks keeping up with popular fashions, others choose to save a few.

For Ryan Skidmore, name brand clothing is not important. He avoids leaving a shopping mall with an empty wallet and accommodates his style with the low prices of local thrift stores.

Striped acrylic sweaters, white dress shirts, and even Levi jeans all for about $3 each, pack Skidmore's closet. Hanging on his trailer walls are bright paintings, and beside his stereo is a collection of his favorite albums, including Herb Albert and Sade — all from thrift stores.

From bath towels to spatulas, Skidmore, a recent SIUC graduate, saved cash for the last seven years by shopping at thrift stores.

"It's amazing," he said. "They have so many different clothes. Sometimes I'll go in to buy a shirt and I'll find a painting, too. I don't mind spending a dollar or two."

Long Branch Vintage Clothing, 100 E. Jackson St., Thrift Shop, 215 N. Illinois Ave., and Reruns Clothing Exchange, 212 W. Freeman St., are three local thrift stores.

Betty Black, manager of Thrift Shop, said people like Skidmore are smart shoppers. Thrift Shop prices are as low as $1. The most expensive items are wedding gowns that range from $25 to $100.

Prices are low because clothes are donated by individuals in the community and local stores and malls, but these clothes have style potential.

"We have the current fashion and vintage clothing," Black said. "They can get what everyone else does, but at a lower price. People like to save money."

Selling various items such as antiques, furniture, sleds and bicycles has increased Thrift Shop's business among college students over the years. The shop makes about $400 to $500 daily on average and about $900 on busier days.

"Thrift stores are very popular now," Black said. "I don't know if more people are learning about us or if we are getting better donations."

Aaron Foust, manager of Longbranch Vintage Clothing, said sales among college students have increased drastically over the last six months.

With the exception of stereos, refrigerators and couches, nothing in the store is more than $50.

"Our sales have increased about 30 percent, he said. "Students really don't have the money, so a thrift store is the ideal place."

Even as thrift stores become popular among college students, expensive name brand clothing continues to cash in on the fashion-thriving students.

In 1997, the Tommy Hilfiger Corporation, which designs and sells men and women's sportswear, made $661 million, while Nautica International's men's sports line made $373.8 million. These company clothing lines are targeted toward young adults.

Amey Cox, a Famous Barr sales associate, said wearing popular fashion such as Tommy Hilfiger and Nautica gives students a sense of status.

"That's the hip stuff right now," she said. "Anything with a name is hip. The quality is better as well as the fact that when people see the logos they know how much you've spent."

Skidmore said racking up at the thrift stores beats shopping at a mall any day. He walks out of a thrift store with seven items totaling about $18 compared to the $175 Dansby usually spends on a single outfit in a mall.

"It's basically the price," Skidmore said. "I don't really care for name-brand clothes, but you can find some stuff from the Gap or somewhere at a thrift store. Just because it's from a thrift store doesn't mean that it's less quality."

Dansby said there is no quality in thrift store clothing. Second-hand clothing does not fit his style.

"I believe in buying a few cheap things too," he said. "But I don't like wearing people's hand-me-downs."

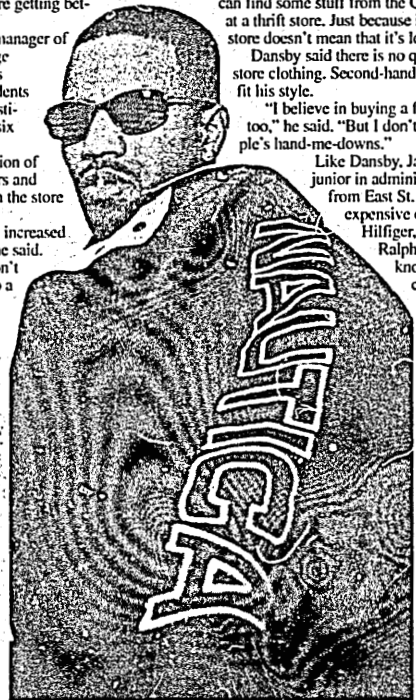

Like Dansby, James Sanders, a junior in administration of justice from East St. Louis, sports expensive clothing like Hilfiger, Nautica and Ralph Lauren Polo. He knows some of his clothing may be found in a thrift store, but it is less in value as well as quality to him.

"People can tell when you have on cheap clothes," he said. "If you wear cheap clothes and look good that's cool. But why settle for less when you can have the real thing?"

Ryan Cummins, a junior in geography from Tinley Park, said his attraction to thrift stores is not a matter of price or quality. He likes the unusualness thrift stores offer.

"It's just the odd stuff you find here," Cummins said. "It's definitely unique. Sometimes it can be entertaining to find the cool stuff they sell — like a True Value chair — stuff

Clinton denies intern affair

COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — President Clinton says allegations that he had an affair with a former White House intern and then asked her to lie about it are "not true."

In an interview to be aired tonight on PBS's NewsHour, the president said there was no improper relationship and he never asked anyone to tell anything other than the truth.

The latest bombshell accusation hit the White House today when the Washington Post reported that Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr has obtained tapes that allegedly describe the affair and efforts by Mr. Clinton and his adviser Vernon Jordan to persuade the woman involved, Monica Lewinsky, to lie about it.

The president says he will cooperate fully with the Starr's investigation.

Wade decision.

"The same people who are trying to keep abortion illegal are the same people who are trying to keep condoms out of schools," she said. "People are not going to stop having sex if abortions are outlawed."

Stivers also believes that people who are trying to enforce legislation, preventing abortions interfere with a woman's right.

"How can I control my life," she asks, "if I have to surrender control of my body?"

self-dedication."

Shade annually prepares a sermon about abortion during the anniversary of Roe v. Wade. He reminds members of his congregation of his belief that abortion is a form of murder.

"It's selective murder," Shade said. "And in 1973, the Supreme Court removed abortion as an area of punishment by the state."

Somewhere in the midst of the staggering numbers of abortions,

C. David Jones is chilled by the fact that one of those abortions could have been his.

Jones, a graduate student in cinema and photography from Jacksonville, N.C., participates in the annual Life Chain. The Life Chain is a celebration of life where pro-lifers join hands hoping to span the continent.

Jones said that while his mother did not consider abortion, it is possible she could have.

"The chilling fact here is that it could have been you or it could have been me," Jones said with a distant look in his eye.

Volunteers in the program are not required to commit to strict schedules with students, and Harre goes far beyond his duties as a Faculty Associate.

"I'm not doing this for praise," he said. "I'm looking out for what is best for the kids."

The Faculty Associates Program was intended to help students by building a stronger relationship between students and faculty. The program matches faculty members with different residence hall buildings or floors, so volunteers become mentors for students.

The program began in 1995 at

Ear-Relevant consists of his 16-year-old daughter, Kerry, on vocals and Becki Dielfield, who plays the tambourine and also sings.

Continuing a family tradition, Bowden has been playing with a variety of bands since the '50s. All members of his family bring their musical talent to family gatherings. Together they make music.

"I was really inspired by relatives and uncles ever since I was little," he said. "If it wasn't for my uncle I would have never gotten involved in music."

Music has always been a large part of Bowden's life.

He was stationed in England for three years with the Navy in the early '60s and was exposed to the Beatles before they appeared in the United States.

"British music was more intricate and interesting," he said. "When I came back to America, people thought that I was nuts because they had never heard that style of music before."

The joy of playing music took its toll on Bowden. After years of playing bass in rock 'n' roll bands, he feared hearing loss.

"I had so much damage to my ear due to the drums and screaming guitar," he said. "I thought I'd lose my hearing."

But giving up music was not an option for Bowden. Fate served him an offer he could not resist when Dielfield, of Cobden, gave him a call.

"I was asked to sing at a wedding," she said. "The person I was going to sing with was sick, and I was told to call Billie. We had the same taste in music, and we sounded really good together."

Dielfield saved his music and his hearing.

In their search for a more mellow sound, Bowden and Dielfield fell into playing classic acoustic rock like the Everly Brothers, Fleetwood Mac and Crosby, Stills and Nash.

But the band was not complete.

And six months ago, while Dielfield and Bowden practiced in his living room, Kerry shyly stepped up to the microphone.

"One evening Kerry started singing along with me," Dielfield said. "And we've been together ever since."

It was only fitting that Kerry started to sing with her dad, to continue the family tradition of being a musician.

"I was intimidated to play with him at first," Kerry said. "But I have always sang with my family and have been influenced by them."

While Bowden plays the guitar with perfection, Kerry and Dielfield blend their voices to make Ear-Relevant successful.

As all the pieces fell into place, the new band was able to take their music to local coffee houses and bars.

The three member band fit all of Bowden's needs.

"It felt almost like destiny," he said.

Playing different types of music is what keeps Ear-Relevant's sound unique, but sometimes they come across a song that touches their hearts.

"Sometimes the songs have a lot of personal significance," Bowden said. "I can't help but to get choked up."

But making music means more than lyrics, Bowden says, as he fondly pats his guitar.

"It's all beat up," Bowden said. "It's been all around with me. It was one of the greatest gifts that I have ever received."

finances would be a loss of revenue to the city also."

The primary opposition to the implementation of community service was financially driven. The cost involved in imposing and enforcing such a penalty, which would require additional man power, along with the loss of revenue for the city from the fines, was the primary concern expressed by the council.

"It would be a significant burden on the city, with the people power and the staff time necessary, in addition to the loss of revenue the city would see," Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan said.

The report considered a number of factors involving community service and the positive and negative impacts of the system.

Not all were in agreement with the report, though. The general consensus of the representatives of the student government, was that this was an issue that deserves more consideration.

"I thought the report was biased," Kelly said. "They (the council) were not taking a lot of things into account.

"I have had many community service workers work for me, and it had been a good experience. Presently, there are some workers registering students to vote on campus."

Although the council does not plan to discuss the report again until next spring, the possibility that the issue will come before the council again is probable.

"If the student leaders were to present a feasible, cost-effective plan that would not place such a burden on the city, it would be welcomed," Flanagan said.

Chief U.N. inspector leaves Iraq

WASHINGTON POST

CAIRO, Egypt — The chief of U.N. weapons inspections in Iraq left Baghdad Wednesday for New York after failing to persuade the Iraqi government to provide access to presidential palaces and other sites thought to harbor evidence of illegal weapons programs. Richard Butler, chairman of the U.N. Special Commission on Iraq, told reporters in the Iraqi capital that he had been asked by Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz to postpone discussion of the issue until April. Butler said he told Aziz that the Iraqi request "flies in the face" of U.N. Security Council demands for unfettered access to suspect facilities, which Iraq considers sovereign territory. Given the importance that Washington has attached to Butler's two-day mission, Iraq's apparently unyielding response appeared to deepen the prospect of confrontation with the United States and Britain.

you just can't get from the mall." For Mario Miller, a first-year graduate in business administration from Chicago, the sizes are most important. He has considered shopping at thrift stores, but his body type leaves him at a disadvantage. "I wear all my stuff baggy," Miller said. "Plus I have short arms and wide shoulders. Thrift stores don't have much of a variety of things. If I'm looking for some jumpers for basketball, there will be a 99 percent chance I won't find any."

Although Skidmore's dark Reebok running shoes are worn out, they come in handy, and they only cost him $1. One of his most comfortable blue jean overall bibs has a hole at the knee, but they only cost about $5. "You know it's hard to find shoes," he said. "They're not in great shape, but there's no holes in them. I've worn these [bibs] lots of times, and they just got a hole in them." Dansby refers to thrift store shoppers as tightwads. His expensive clothing remains practically new for a long time because clothing can remain in fair condition if a person takes care of it. "Clothes will last as long as you maintain them," he said. "I just don't feel comfortable shopping in a thrift store. Maybe for a hat or something, but not for clothes."

making a difference in the students' lives." When Harre visits Wright II, he spends his time in the building's third-floor study lounge to make himself available to students. Rebecca Bunk, a freshman in administration of justice from Fossiland, visits with Harre often and finds him to be a valuable resource. "It makes help more accessible," she said. "Otherwise you have to go to an office. He has been able to help me with my minor questions about school." There are nights when no students appear in the study lounge for Harre's assistance. But Harre diligently keeps coming week after week, leaving Bunk impressed by Harre's determination. "I think a lot of people would have given up by now," she said. "He keeps coming just in case one student wants to see him." Harre keeps coming to his assigned dorm and tries to answer as many questions as students may have. "I don't know all the answers," Harre said. "But I can point them in the right direction to someone who can help them with their problems." Harre is just as helpful to his own students by giving them his home phone number and keeping regular office hours. But he still feels the need to reach out to other professors' students because he feels it is his role as an educator. "In education, we have put out a lot of products," Harre said. "There is a little bit of me in many states, even different countries. Many of the skills and values that I have taught to students are taken with them. Other people see that. "I'm here for the students. It's a good feeling when you know that you have helped someone."

Preseason poll places Salukis to finish third in conference PLAY BALL: SIUC baseball team looks to heat things up after disappointing '97 season.

RYAN KEITH
DE SPORTS EDITOR

The 1998 season is quickly approaching for the SIUC baseball team, but the Salukis and the Missouri Valley Conference are already gearing up for hardball.

After a disappointing 1997 campaign, an early start to the 1998 season and a place in the Missouri Valley Conference's top three in the preseason conference poll are just what coach Dan Callahan and his squad have been waiting for.

SIUC earned 43 points and third place in the MVC's baseball coaches preseason poll announced Wednesday. The Salukis also placed three members on the league's all-conference team.

Starting pitcher Jason Frasor, third baseman Matt Dettman and designated hitter Brad Benson earned preseason all-conference honors after solid 1997 seasons.

Wichita State University captured the top spot in the poll with 62 points, followed closely by Southwest Missouri State University with 57, Illinois State University (42), Creighton University (36), the University of Evansville (35), the University of Northern Iowa (20), Bradley University (19) and Indiana State University (10) complete the rankings.

The Salukis are looking to rebound after struggling to a 23-32 overall record and a 13-15 mark in conference play, finishing fifth in the MVC.

Despite the loss of first baseman Aaron Jones and shortstop Jerry Hairston to professional baseball, the three all-conference selections lead a talented returning group for Callahan.

Frasor, a junior from Oak Park, emerged as SIUC's No. 1 starter as a sophomore. The 5-foot-11 hurler appeared in 21 games and earned a 7-2 record with a 3.59 ERA and 82 strikeouts in 87.2 innings pitched.

Dettman, a senior from Rockford, made an immediate impact after transferring to SIUC from Kishwaukee Community College. The 6-foot-2 third baseman belted a team-high 14 home runs and notched 57 RBIs to go along with a .310 batting average.

Benson, a senior from Tempe, Ariz., also made a name for himself with a standout start after transferring from Arizona Western Community College. The 6-foot-1 lefty finished second behind Jones in batting at .378 with 13 homers and 52 RBIs.

The Salukis will get the chance to prove themselves earlier than in past seasons. SIUC opens the regular season with a road trip to the University of Nevada-Las Vegas Feb. 13.

After trips to Oklahoma State University and Southeast Missouri State University, the Salukis make their home debut with the Best Inns Classic at Abe Martin Field Feb. 27 to March 1.

the field in conference games. Shooting has been a major factor in the Salukis' 2-5 conference record.

"I think there are two things we are not doing very well," Scott said.

"We don't shoot the ball very well, and we don't rebound very well. I think those things translate into difficult situations."

Turning the offense around will not be an easy task, but Bardley believes that if the Salukis play up to their potential, they can be like Drake and Creighton — hard to beat.

"It is a combination of a lot of things," Bardley said. "I think the most important things we need to figure out are our effort and our execution, which we haven't done this year in the 15 games we have played. We have so much talent, but we just haven't put it together."

Salukis to face challenging opponents at Purdue Invitational

ROAD TRIP: Men's and women's teams travel to West Lafayette, Ind., to meet tough Indiana universities.

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The tough competition the SIUC women's track and field team defeated at the SIU Booster Club Invite Saturday is no comparison to the field it will compete against Friday at the Purdue Invitational.

The SIUC men's and women's track and field teams travel to West Lafayette, Ind., for the meet.

The women's team, fresh off a home upset of NCAA foes Georgia Tech University, Mississippi State University and Southeast Missouri State University, will now be challenged by highly touted Purdue University and Ball State University.

Ball State is ranked 11th in the U.S. Power Ratings in track and fields, while Purdue is ranked 12th.

Women's coach Don DeNoon said he hopes his athletes can continue to compete at a top level of performance.

"We are up against two of the strongest comprehensive track programs in the country," DeNoon said. "Purdue tends to really perform well at home."

Another obstacle is the meet will not have the 5,000-meter run or the distance medley that the Salukis performed so well in at Saturday's meet.

Sophomore Jenny Monaco finished second in the 5,000-meter with a time of 17 minutes and 56.40 seconds, while the distance medley team, comprised of freshman Becky Cox, sophomore Leah Nolden and seniors Mindy Bruck and Raina Larsen, also finished second (12:24.97).

DeNoon said he does not know if his team can keep up with this caliber of competition. "Somehow we won it last week," DeNoon said. "I don't know if we can stay in that mode and continue to step forward."

Freshman Caryn Poliquin, who won the 20-pound weight throw in Saturday's meet (50 feet 10.75 inches), said the team will have to compete at the same level it did Saturday.

"We want to try and carry that momentum all through the season," Poliquin said. "The first meet of the season (a third-place finish at Illinois State University Dec. 6) wasn't that great. But we had a nice Christmas break, and we came out like a rock. We'll try to do that all season."

The men's track and field team is only taking 19 athletes to the Purdue meet because of injuries and a lack of preparation.

Senior Orlando McKee (foot injury), junior Ryan Lovelace (illness), sophomore

Andy Bosak (stress fracture) and a group of other athletes who men's coach Bill Cornell said he wants to work into better shape will all miss the meet.

Cornell said it will be difficult to compete with the low number of athletes.

"It's going to be a tough meet," Cornell said. "Purdue tells me they have the best team they've had in a while, and Ball State always has a tough team."

Cornell said the men's side does not have its rankings out yet but Purdue likely would be near the top.

Along with Purdue and Ball State, the Salukis will have to deal with North Central College of suburban Chicago. North Central College won the Division III Cross Country National Championships in November.

Cornell said it will be a matter of time to see when everyone is ready to compete.

"I want to try and shape them up with some hard training," Cornell said. "It goes week by week to see who is ready to go on the road."

Salukis hope to dodge 1-2 MVC punch

SHOWDOWN: SIUC women cagers prepare to match up against finest in conference.

TRAVIS AKIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC sophomore center Melaniee Bardley can hardly believe the Salukis are still in contention for a spot in the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament.

The Salukis are holding onto the eighth and final MVC Tournament spot, and Bardley knows what the Salukis need to do this week as the two toughest teams in the conference are on their way to Carbondale.

"We must win games, that's all I can say," Bardley said. "We have put ourselves in a bad position with our record and how well we are playing. We put ourselves in a little hole. These next two games are must-win. That's all I can say about it."

But it will be difficult to turn things around against Creighton University tonight and Drake University Saturday.

Drake is undefeated and in first place in the conference. Creighton comes to SIUC second in the conference with a record of 5-2 and 9-6 overall. The Lady Jays also have a three-game winning streak.

Beating the Lady Jays at home is particularly important because so far this season the Salukis are winless in conference contests at home.

Coach Cindy Scott said there is some comfort in the fact that the Lady Jays and the Bulldogs will be coming to the SIU Arena, but admits both teams will be hard to beat.

"We have two tough opponents, but at least we are at home," Scott said. "We need to come ready to play because this is a real turning point for us. I think we all feel a great amount of pressure to start playing better and to get a win."

"I think we are all very frustrated. The kids are trying hard and we just to hang tough and try to get through this."

The Salukis will face one of the better forwards in the MVC, senior Carrie Welle. Welle leads the Lady Jays with 18.4 points per game and 5.5 rebounds per game. She also leads the Jays in shooting percentage by shooting 49 percent from the field. Welle is the only Lady Jay with a double-figure scoring average.

The Salukis are led by senior center Thea Hudson, who averages 14.3 points per game. As a team, however, the Salukis are struggling offensively. They shoot just 40 percent from
