Trustees propose budget for 1982

By Jacqui Koszczuk
Staff Writer

A $4.3 million special request to boost some University salaries and an $11.2 million energy conservation project were approved for the 1982 preliminary budget Thursday by the Board of Trustees in Edwardsville.

The proposed budget for SIUC includes $2.9 million for capital development and $118.7 million for operations for a total of about $142.6 million, a 14.9 percent increase over the 1981 budget.

Faculty and civil service salaries lagging behind those at similar schools and trailing the cost of living would have a chance to "catch up" over a three-year period if the salary proposal succeeds.

And while some employees are beginning to "catch up," Chancellor Kenneth Shaw will be earning $68,250 annually. Shaw was granted a 5 percent raise over his present $65,000 salary in accordance with guidelines established in June.

Acting President Hiram Lesar received a 6 percent raise, to $63,600, also according to the guidelines designed to keep administrative salary increases for 1981 a few notches below the state-determined percentage increase for University employees.

Gov. James R. Thompson Wednesday decided on an 8 percent increase, cutting the Legislature's approved 9 percent increase. Shaw said he was uncertain whether SIU would continue its pursuit of higher salary increases for lower-paid employees by lobbying for an override of that decision.

However, Shaw said that he received word that Thompson favors the "catch up" approach. If the plan is approved by the Illinois Board of Higher Education, it will have to be passed by the Legislature and signed by Thompson.

The plan, lasting three years beginning in 1982, would give faculty a 4.6 percent annual increase over the state-determined percentage increase and civil service employees a 3.1 percent annual addition. It would mean $1.89 million more in salary funds each year.

Also in the preliminary salary outlook is a request for a 10 percent increase for all employees. If that is eventually approved by the state, faculty, under the catch-up plan, would earn as much as 14.6 percent more and civil service employees 13.1 percent more in 1982.

Lesar told the board that

Decade-long enrollment decline troubles SIU-E's new president

By Michael Monson
Staff Writer

Earl Lazerson, unanimously appointed SIU-Edwardsville's third president by the Board of Trustees Thursday, said the retention of students already enrolled at SIU-E is the key to ending the university's decade-long enrollment decline. He also said SIU-E could live with its second straight budget cut, although he said the cut "will hurt."

The board's appointment of Lazerson before a hometown audience in Edwardsville officially ended a search that began in December and drew more than 125 applicants from throughout the country. Lazerson, 49, has been acting president at SIU-E since Sept. 15, when Kenneth Shaw left the post to become SIU system's chancellor. The appointment of Lazerson, whose annual salary will be $59,000, becomes effective immediately.

In an interview after the board meeting, Lazerson said stopping the decade-long enrollment slide at SIU-E will be a major goal of his administration. SIU-E's enrollment dropped more than 25 percent in the 1970s—a period of enrollment stability or growth for most state universities in Illinois.

"Our problem isn't one of enrollment," Lazerson said, "but one of retention. The numbers of incoming freshmen each year is sufficient, but we aren't retaining them their sophomore, junior and senior years."

Lazerson suggested several solutions to alleviate the problem, but he said he will need the backing of the Board of Trustees and the General Assembly.

"The lack of adequate mass transportation from St. Louis to Edwardsville is one problem we hope to address," Lazerson said. "Another is the need for additional housing on campus."

Budget cuts of $719,000 and $660,000 during the past two years are another problem facing SIU-E, Lazerson said. A new formula used since 1978 by the Illinois Board of Higher Education demands rough equivalence (within 2 percent) in funding per student for instruction at public universities.

Is testing enough?

Student competency tests are now being required by the Illinois State Board of Education to assess students' ability. However, many local school administrators and teachers feel that testing alone does not adequately qualify a student to pass or fail a grade.

Do teachers just teach?

Teacher burnout is only one of the many problems teachers say hinder their ability to effectively teach. In response to the Time magazine article, "Help! Teachers Can't Teach," local teachers say the problem is that they "can't just teach."

Storm damage funds needed

By Jacqui Koszczuk
Staff Writer

Of about $255,000 in storm damage to campus property, the University is prepared to cover only about a fifth of that cost, acting President Hiram Lesar told the Board of Trustees Thursday.

Addressing the board at its meeting in Edwardsville, Lesar said $50,000 can be taken out of an account in the president's office, but no source has been identified to cover the remainder of damages sustained during the harsh thunderstorms and hurricane-like winds that hit Southern Illinois in late June and early July.

Available funds, which have accumulated from budgeted faculty positions that for various reasons were not filled, will take care of broken plate glass windows, lost trees in Thompson woods and elsewhere, structural damage to buildings and a general clean-up around campus.

But most of the SIUC property hit hardest—craft and flight training equipment at the Southern Illinois Airport—cannot be replaced until new monies are found, Lesar said. He estimated the total damage at $205,000.

Five Cessna 150 training crafts, all uninsured, carry a repair bill of about $95,000, Lesar said. In addition, damage to two instrument trainers will cost about $110,000. However, Lesar said one of the instrument trainers is insured and so will not be figured in the airport repair bill.

The crippled equipment cut "about 70 percent of our ability to generate required training courses next fall," Lesar said.

"We need to find replacements for these planes," he added, "or else suffer drastic declines in our enrollment."

At a press conference after the meeting, Board Chair William Norwood and Chancellor Kenneth Shaw said they too were at a loss to find funds readily available to help the flight training program.

Open athletics meetings sought

By Jacqui Koszcruk
Staff Writer

The Intercollegiate Athletics Committee may begin holding open public meetings for discussion of ways to increase support for the athletics program, according to Shirley Friend, IAC chairperson.

When it meets Friday, the IAC is expected to decide whether the committee should invite the public to offer suggestions of how more financial support might be generated for the program and of how attendance at athletics events might be increased, Friend said.

The IAC, an advisory arm of Intercollegiate Athletics, is also scheduled to pick up discussion of the men's athletics budget, Friend, associate professor in Comprehensive Planning and Design, said.

At its June 13 meeting, the committee postponed approval of the budget until the men's program submits a contingency plan to go into effect in case the program is in danger of incurring a deficit. The men's 1981 budget showed a $146,000 difference between projected income and projected expenditures last month.

A contingency plan has been prepared and will be submitted Friday, said George Mace, vice president for university relations.

Mace, who heads the athletics program, declined to elaborate on the plan until the meeting. IAC member Tom McGinnis, who says he was "one of the first to support the proposal for open meetings" after it was drawn up in a subcommittee, explained that the meetings probably would not be restricted in topic but that the IAC "would not encourage a bitch session either."

He added, "If someone wants to comment on how the image of the program might be improved, chances are we would listen. But basically we are trying to get input on fund raising and attendance."

Mace, who holds the athletics program purse-strings, said he supports the public meetings plan and will back it financially.

The idea for open public discussions arose last spring during one IAC meeting, Friend said. After "a few people" responded to a newspaper account of the meeting with suggestions and comments, Friend said she felt there may be more people who had something to offer.

McGinnis, also assistant director of admissions and records, said a proposal was drawn up by a three-member subcommittee of the IAC and must now be approved by the full committee.

County may sell unpaid debts to private collection agency

By Diana Penner
Staff Writer

The Jackson County Board may sell $18,000 in outstanding Ambulance Service debts to a private collection agency. That's if a study shows it would be the best alternative for the board.

The board approved the suggestion by the Ambulance Committee Wednesday at its meeting at the Country Kitchen restaurant, near Ava.

Kevin Buenerkemper, business supervisor of the Ambulance Service, told the board that nothing has been heard from the people who owe the $18,000.

"We've received no mail, no phone calls, no correspondence from these people," Buenerkemper said. He said attempts to locate them through the phone book and other sources were futile.

A memo from the Jackson County state's attorney's office indicated it would be legal for the board to sell the debts to a collection agency, but cautioned the board to take into consideration public opinion of such a move.

The memo said "the oc-asionally harassing collection techniques are generally detested," and the possibility exists that a private collections agency would be seen as an arm of county government, although there would be no legal connection between the two.

Buenerkemper said about $135,000 was collected by the Ambulance Service last year, and many people who still owe money have worked out payment plans.

The board told the committee to investigate the collection procedures of several agencies and report recommendations to the board at its August meeting.

The board approved a reorganization of the Ambulance Service, which calls for hours to be added to the current staff. No additional positions will be created, but the reorganization will increase the availability of ambulance services.

Under the restructuring plan, one person will be on call 24 hours every day.

The new plan increases the number of hours each employee will be available each week from about 56 to 67.

Budget for SIU-C approved administrative and professional staff employees should also receive a special salary plan if a pending study shows a need to boost their salary increases above the state level.

Topping the preliminary list of capital development projects for SIU-C is, once again, the Davies Gym renovation project. The gym was the University's top-priority capital project for 1981. But, Shaw said, that project will be dropped if Davies legislation, worth $3.4 million and passed this spring by the General Assembly, gets Thompson's OK.

The new budget would also mean an 8 percent general price increase, a 15 percent increase for library materials and a 17.2 percent utility cost increase. Excluding the catch-up plan, the operating budget represents a 13.07 percent increase or $13.5 million more for the next fiscal year.

money," Lazerson said, "and the clear indication is that the cuts have hurt. What we're trying to do is to make the cuts in such a way so as to not hurt our central purpose—education. We're also trying to make the Board of Education more sensitive to funding disparities among universities. A 2 percent variance is not realistic."

Lazerson will follow several courses of action to help SIU-E meet the challenges it will face in the 1980s. A mathematician, Lazerson intends to take a major role in shaping priorities for capital development and other budgetary matters. He said the creation of a unified personnel administration system is another goal.

Lazerson said he believes his long ties with SIU-E and his close working relationship with Shaw will serve him well.

Lazerson describes his relationship with Shaw as a good one.

Man found guilty of burglary

A Carbondale man was found guilty of burglary Wednesday in Jackson County Circuit Court by Judge Richard Richman.

Antonio Payton, 19, pleaded innocent to the burglary, which took place April 16 on Ashley Street in Carbondale. Payton had originally been charged with two other burglaries occurring the same night.

Payton's sentencing date was set for Aug. 19.

Also on Wednesday, Richman accepted the recommendation of Anna State Hospital officials to release Vernon Wyatt, found not guilty last spring of a stabbing by reason of insanity.

The official said Wyatt, 31, would not pose a danger to society as long as he remained on medication.

The stabbing incident occurred in January 1979.

City hospital fund-raising campaign is over halfway to $1 million goal

By Dave Powers
Staff Writer

The fund drive for the expansion of Carbondale Memorial Hospital has moved into the second division of a five-division fund-raising campaign, well on its way to a $1 million goal.

The fund-raising campaign will help offset the $5.7 million tab for the addition of two wings on the west side of the hospital. The remainder of the money for the expansion will come from surplus hospital operating funds and the sale of tax-exempt revenue sharing bonds.

Meanwhile, the hospital administration is still progressing through four-step process necessary to gain final approval for construction of the hospital addition.

Hospital Administrator George Maroney said he is scheduled to appear Thursday in Mount Vernon before the executive committee of the Comprehensive Health Planning in Southern Illinois Inc. The executive committee will make a recommendation to the Illinois Health Facilities Planning Board, a division of the state Department of Public Health, which must give final approval.

However, Maroney said he sees no problem with gaining this final approval since no opposition to the expansion was voiced at two public hearings and the CHPSI review committee made a favorable recommendation to its executive committee following a review of the project on June 26.

The Illinois Health Facilities Planning Board is scheduled to meet Aug. 7 and 8 in Chicago, Maroney said.

With the fund-raising campaign progressing on schedule, more than half of the $1 million was raised in the first division of the fund raiser, the Hospital Family Division. According to Eldon Ray and Mrs. Eugene Simonds, general co-chairpersons of the fund drive, most of the $524,000 already raised came from members of the medical staff, hospital employees, hospital board of trustees and the ladies auxiliary.

The fund-raising campaign, which is scheduled to end in mid-September, was boosted significantly in the early stages with a $175,000 donation from the hospital's ladies auxiliary and a $150,000 gift from an anonymous donor.

The Leadership Gifts Division, the public portion of the campaign which began Wednesday, will seek contributions of $25,000 and up, followed by three more phases at three-week intervals.

The other fund-raising campaign divisions now being formed are the Major Gifts Division, the Special Gifts Division and the Community Gifts Division.

Donations of between $10,000 and $25,000 will be sought in the Major Gifts Division, and contributions from $3,000 to $10,000 will be solicited in the Special Gifts Division. The Community Gifts Division will be aimed at contributions of $3,000 and less.

Contributions in the form of three-year pledges will be sought through personal contact with individuals, industries, financial institutions, businesses, foundations and other organizations within the area served by the hospital, according to a hospital spokesperson.

Included in the expansion project will be the construction of two separate wings on the hospital's west side.

Iran announces it will free one hostage

TEHRAN (AP)—Iran announced Thursday it will free Vice Consul Richard Queen, one of 53 American hostages held since Nov. 4, because of illness, and return him to his family.

Tehran radio said Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ordered that Queen, 28, of Lincolnville, Maine, be released "due to the humane teachings of Islam." Khomeini said he learned from militants at the occupied U.S. Embassy, that Queen "has been hospitalized in one of Tehran's hospitals."

The nature of the illness was not described, but the broadcast quoted Khomeini's office as saying Iranian specialists conducted several examinations and "reached the conclusion that he should be transferred to one of the countries enjoying better medical facilities."

State Department officials in Washington could not confirm that any of the hostages would be released, but said they were "urgently checking the report" and had notified Queen's mother.

Envoy shakeup seen for Latin America

WASHINGTON (AP)—Just four months before the presidential election, the Carter administration is planning a major diplomatic shakeup in Latin America, with new envoys slated for eight countries.

U.S. officials acknowledged that tenure of some of the new appointees could be limited to a few months if President Carter loses his re-election bid and his successor decides to appoint his own ambassadorial team early next year.

The eight countries experiencing changes are: Guatemala, Chile, Argentina, Peru, Uruguay, Paraguay, Honduras, and Colombia. Four of the ambassadors being withdrawn are Hispanics and none is being replaced by a Hispanic.

A change prompted by unusual circumstances involves the transfer of Diego Asencio to the post of assistant secretary for consular affairs.

Board won't take resignation

By Diana Penner
Staff Writer

The Jackson County Board has voted not to accept the letter of resignation of missing board member Walter Robinson, and Board Chairman Bill Kelley asked the state's attorney's office to instruct the sheriff's office to look for Robinson.

The board voted Wednesday not to accept the letter, post-marked June 16, until Robinson can be located or the letter verified in some way.

Kelley said he has doubts about the letter because it was postmarked in Carbondale. He said there is also a question about the authenticity of the signature on the letter.

Kelley said he has been unsuccessful in contacting Robinson at his home, as have numerous other people.

Robinson has not been seen for several months. The last county board meeting he attended was in April.

Liberals could make a big difference

George F. Will

WASHINGTON—Say what you will about Stewart Mott—and some colleagues on the left say the rudest things—you must admit he is as unstinting with his advice as with his money. In his 65-point memo to John Anderson, he advises "Avoid Khomeini endorsement." Sound, very sound.

Mott, 42, practices what he preaches. He lives the way he wants government to live, giving away money someone else earned. His father earned it, sacks of it, from GM, so Mott receives about $2 million annually. Those he has favored with cash and counsel include Eugene McCarthy, George McGovern and groups supporting ERA.

He is not one of those fellows who only have eyes for winning causes. He rallied to Anderson early, even before Anderson had lost enough primaries to demonstrate, to Anderson, a national yearning for an independent Anderson candidacy.

In 1960, after John Kennedy did well in Wisconsin's primary and people began scrambling aboard his bandwagon, some supporters donned "FKBW" buttons—"For Kennedy Before Wisconsin." What can early Andersonites put on their buttons, their candidate having an unblemished record of rejection in the few primaries in which he competed? But I digress.

The love affair between Mott and Anderson is, sad to say, not going swimmingly. Mott has been invited to leave the campaign without ever having received a proper invitation to join. This, although poignant, may not seem important, except in a few Manhattan living rooms. But it is more than comic relief in a campaign season that needs much of such. It indicates the hazards of life on the fringe.

Mott doesn't get along with David Garth, the media wizard who is second only to Mrs. Anderson as mastermind of Mr. Anderson's campaign. Garth participated mightily in the transformation of Hugh Carey from a conspicuously ordinary congressman into the governor of New York—Excelsior!—so Carey owes Garth a lot. Carey paid a bit of the debt when he met with Anderson in Garth's office, thereby giving Anderson a boost (and giving Carey the pleasure of annoying President Carter).

Garth also is close to what little remains of New York's Liberal Party. It has suffered the mortification of being fifth (ranking is by recent vote totals) on New York's ballot, behind the two major parties, the Conservative Party, and the right to Life Party, for Pete's sake.

But in a close race, votes cast for the Liberal line could make a big difference. In 1976 Carter was on both the Democratic and Liberal ballots in New York and got Liberal votes totaling more than half his margin of victory in New York.

Now the Liberal Party has served Carter with what you might, if you were very polite, call a detailed policy request. Actually, it is an ultimatum: Comply with our demands or lose your spot on the Liberal line.

Carter can promise them anything—"Cross my heart, I'll stop being a Reagan clone!"—but his promises, like the currency, have lost a lot of value in the last three years. Besides, if the Liberals want to swell their vote total, they should be the only party offering Anderson in New York rather than be just the other guys offering Carter.

This fall, Sen. Jacob Javits will be on Liberal as well as Republican ballots. He will attract to the Liberal line many people who will loiter there to vote for others. A Javits-Anderson combination on the Liberal line could produce a substantial drain from Carter. In 1974, Javits (running against Ramsey Clark) got 241,659 votes on the Liberal line. In 1976, Carter carried New York by just 288,767.

Carter is learning how hard it is to live with, or without, some of today's liberals. But there always is comfort in the suffering of one's adversary, so Carter should rejoice that Ronald Reagan, too, is having problems with people who you would think would be his allies.

New York's Right to Life Party is planning to run its own candidate for president rather than put Reagan on its ballot. Reagan will be forgiven for wondering why it is not enough that he favors an anti-abortion amendment to the Constitution. Evidently, Right to Lifers think Reagan's flaw is that he will allow other issues to intrude into his campaign.

Anderson, too, is learning about the perils that lurk at the margin of American policies. If I could add a postscript to the Mott memo, it would be: "Avoid Ramsey Clark endorsement."

Commercial radio serves public

I have no intention of turning this into a long, drawn-out battle, but I can't take Chuck Miller's shallow criticisms of commercial broadcasting lying down. Public broadcasters ranting and raving about the evils of commercial broadcasting remind me of health food people telling me about junk food.

This holier than thou, "We are serving the public" garbage is uncalled for. Opera music and "buckle your seat belts" public service announcements ARE NO MORE of a public service than taking the time to talk to someone on the phone, listening to what they have to say and trying to play a song for them. If public radio is so damn great, why isn't anybody listening?

Recent listening surveys show WSIU way down the list behind WTAO, WCIL-FM, WEBQ and other stations playing those dreaded "hits." You tell me why they keep listening. For most young people, rock music is a part of their life and playing that music IS a public service. A quick look at a trade journal would show that commercial broadcasters also air public service announcements and go out of their way to raise money for many non-profit charities.

Ever drive by a trailer or house or apartment and hear loud music? That's because people enjoy it. And when people buy records and prove to researchers that they want to hear certain music, then we play it. What does Chuck Miller suggest we play? Obscure, terrible, unpopular music that nobody wants to hear? That would be real entertaining radio. I realize some people want to hear other things, but I do not make a point of belittling and taking potshots at those who program to other audiences.

Maybe I'm a little strange, but when I hear a who "jam" or a Beatles set, I think of great tunes, not of commercials. Don't you like music, Chuck? Or do you only like musicians who don't accept money for their songs?

I'm sorry if myself or my colleagues at WIDB, WCIL, WEBQ and all the millions of other radio stations who try to relate to their audience and act like themselves don't impress you. In commercial broadcasting, people would rather hear personality. But then again, I don't suppose public radio disc jockies are lazy, shiftless floaters.

I don't suggest that rock and roll radio is the only kind of radio fit for the "public airwaves," but neither is any other kind of radio station. Being lazy and shiftless may not be much of an attribute, but then again, I'm not too crazy about people who look down their noses at others. We must be pleasing somebody, even if they aren't Rhodes Scholars and business executives. I don't mean to personally attack public radio and the people who staff it, but I wish they would reciprocate and take their heads out of the clouds from time to time and see what else is going on.—

Timmo Cawley, Junior, Radio-Television

Letters

Listen to R-T professor

In regards to the recent controversy about whether or not disc jockeys are "lazy, shiftless floaters," it seems that all of the rebuttals have been nothing more than public and commercial broadcasters taking potshots at one another. Messrs. Cawley, Powell and Miller are arguing one man's opinion, which, by the way, probably isn't too far off the mark.

As far as "public interest, convenience and necessity" go, tell me, Chuck and Kevin, is jazz and opera any more of public interest than album-oriented rock, or country music? Dr. Kurtz has been in the broadcasting business almost since its infancy. And he's seen jocks come and go, so he probably has some justification for making his statements.

Tell me, Timmo, Kevin, and Chuck, how long have you been in broadcasting? How many jocks have you seen rise to stardom, be it in commercial or public broadcasting? Being a disc jockey myself, I don't like what Dr. Kurtz said any more than you. But, how much work does it take to be a jock? No, I don't consider myself lazy either!

I guess what I'm trying to get across is that I would consider a statement from Dr. Kurtz a lot more valid than one from someone who hasn't been involved in broadcasting for more than a few years. Timmo, Kevin and Chuck, I hope you put to rest that false notion of disc jockeys as "lazy." But until you do, I'll listen to Dr. Kurtz. Do me a favor... give me a call in 10 years and tell me who was closer to the truth... you or Dr. Kurtz!—Scott Bertucci, Music Director, WRAJ

GSC okays new guidelines for travel, registration fees

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

New fee allocation guidelines designed to make money available to more students were approved by the Graduate Student Council Wednesday night.

The approval came after an hour-and-a-half of deliberation at the GSC's second meeting of the semester.

After some problems were resolved by the council, the revised guidelines passed easily with 23 votes in favor, one vote against and one abstention.

The main source of disagreement was two tables illustrating how graduate students would be funded for registration and travel for professional development activities.

GSC President Deb Brown told the council that the tables were "the key changes from the current guidelines."

One argument against the revisions was that graduate students received more money for expenses under the old guidelines.

However, Terry Mathias, chair of the ad hoc committee which reviewed the old guidelines and developed the revisions, said the committee wanted to make more money accessible to more students.

Pat Melia, 1979 GSC vice president, said the fee board followed an informal policy permitting one fee request per student, per fiscal year. Melia said since the new guidelines allow two fee requests per student, per fiscal year, the money per student actually increases.

The council will discuss at its next meeting whether to fund social and political concerns under the new guidelines.

In other business:

—The council unanimously passed a resolution supporting a $6,200 supplemental budget request by the Office of Student Development to be used for relocating the Rainbow's End Preschool from Pulliam Hall to Lakeland School. Percy: Japan should hike defense costs

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.S. Sen. Charles H. Percy said Thursday the Japanese should "carry their fair share" of defense costs, adding that if they did so it would help the American economy.

If Japan hiked its defense expenditures — which currently are less than 1 percent of its gross national product — it would be forced to spend less on producing consumer goods that hurt U.S. production of the same items, such as cars, radios and televisions, Percy said.

"It is highly desirable that they carry their fair share of self-defense and common defense," the Illinois Republican told reporters. "I think it is only right."

"You can see the impact on our country, economically, when they devote most of their facilities to commercial development, taking market after market, field after field. Which field will be next? They'll be making wide-body planes out there soon."

Percy, the second-ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is in Geneva for discussions with delegates to the permanent United Nations Committee on Disarmament.

The senator said spending more on defense would be in Japan's "own interests." Percy said threats to peace in Asia increased with the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and that with U.S. Navy ships redeployed from the Pacific to the Persian Gulf, "Someone has to take up the gap."

Supreme Court's Hyde verdict offers hope to pro-life groups

CHICAGO (AP) — Still basking in his group's victory in the Hyde Amendment case, Patrick Trueman is looking to a federal appeals court for more success in the struggle against abortions.

The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has been asked by the American Civil Liberties Union to declare Illinois' new abortion law unconstitutional. The court heard the case in January but has not yet issued a decision.

Trueman, 31, of Arlington Heights, is executive director and general counsel of the Chicago-based Americans United for Life Legal Defense Fund, a full-time group that provides legal support for the anti-abortion movement.

Trueman and his group have been involved in dozens of abortion-related cases. The organization's most successful effort by far was in connection with the Hyde Amendment case, in which the U.S. Supreme Court ruled June 30 that the federal government can cut off welfare funding for most abortions.

Another of the fund's major projects within the last year has been the defense of Illinois' abortion law, which Trueman describes as "the strictest law enacted in any state."

"The entire right-to-life movement considers this a very important case," he said.

The law was enacted by the General Assembly last year over Gov. James R. Thompson's veto. The ACLU challenged the law in U.S. District Court. Last November, Judge Joel Flaum upheld parts of the law but prohibited the state from enforcing other sections.

The judge said the state could enforce a provision requiring a woman to wait 24 hours after requesting an abortion before the operation can be performed.

Trueman and his group did not contest Flaum's ruling.

Reagan stars in 32nd GOP convention

DETROIT (AP)—Ronald Reagan, cast at last as the leading man of the Republican Party, claims his star billing Monday night at a national convention scripted as carefully as any movie he has ever made. And he made 55 of them.

The former governor of California, long a champion of Republican conservatism, is unchallenged for the nomination, and his lieutenants are in control of the proceedings.

There'll be moments of dissent but it is, in fact, a convention without contest, the ritual beginning of the Republican campaign to regain the White House lost to Jimmy Carter four years ago.

The 32nd GOP convention opens on Monday, with song ceremony and speech after speech after speech. All told, there are 33 speakers on the program, and that doesn't count introductions.

Among the speakers are Reagan's vanquished presidential rivals, the former president who narrowly defeated him for the 1976 nomination and the 1964 nominee in whose campaign service Reagan began shaping his political credentials.

The show begins on Monday at 11 a.m. EDT, in cavernous Joe Louis Arena, decked in red, white and blue bunting, carpeting and fresh paint. The final gavel is scheduled to fall at 11 p.m. on Thursday.

It will be a performance without suspense, save for the selection of a vice presidential nominee. That's up to Reagan, and he is expected to announce his choice next Thursday, for ratification at the final convention session that night.

The lineup of orators is dotted with vice presidential prospects: Sen. Richard G. Lugar, of Indiana, Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, former United Nations Ambassador George Bush, Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., former Ambassador to Great Britain Anne Armstrong, former Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld, Rep. Guy Vander Jagt of Michigan, former Secretary of the Treasury William Simon.

There are other names on the guess-list, too, including those of Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, the Reagan campaign chairman; and Rep. Tom Evans of Delaware.

But Reagan will make the decision, and he hasn't hinted at his choice.

An Associated Press survey of Republican delegates showed more of them—about 20 percent—favor Bush than any of the other prospects. But unless Reagan wants him, that makes no difference.

Bush still has 178 delegates pledged to support him for the presidential nomination, but he quit the contest on May 26, last to concede the nomination among what once was a big field of Reagan challengers. He's releasing his delegates to Reagan as the convention opens.

Reagan himself ends a two-week campaign vacation on Monday, flying to Detroit for a nominee's brass-band welcome to the convention he commands.

His appearances prior to accepting the nomination will be rationed; Reagan doesn't plan to work delegate caucuses as he had to four years ago when he was challenging then-

President Gerald R. Ford. Instead, Republican leaders will come to him, by invitation to his Plaza Hotel suite, while representatives of the campaign tour the delegations to urge peace, harmony and an all-out effort to elect the GOP ticket.

The Reagan teams have a lot of territory to cover. There are delegations housed as far as 30 miles from Detroit, where hotel rooms are in short supply. The Massachusetts delegation is in Plymouth, in the far suburbs. Bush won the Massachusetts presidential primary. Republican-turned-independent John B. Anderson ran second, and Reagan was third.

It is Detroit's first national political convention, and Republican leaders say they are here to demonstrate that the party is concerned with the woes of the cities and the minority Americans who live there.

Vander Jagt, the convention keynote speaker, said the choice of Detroit "was meant to symbolize our party's interest in and concern for elements in our society from whom our party was seen to be estranged."

Ban on Gacy book contract continued through July 22

CHICAGO (AP) — A Circuit Court judge extended again Thursday an order that bars a Texas author from signing book contracts with convicted mass murderer John W. Gacy Jr.

The extension granted by Judge George A. Higgins was the fourth issued. It was sought by the parents of Robert Piest, one of Gacy's 33 victims. It expires July 22.

Author Clyde Burleson of Houston, Texas, and the Lewis Goldfarb Agency of California have approached Gacy to acquire the rights to his life story.

The court order resulted from a $10 million wrongful death suit filed after Gacy was convicted in March. Gacy is awaiting automatic appeal of his death sentence for conviction of killing the young men and boys.

Attorneys Robert Motta and Sam Amirante, who represented Gacy during his trial, reportedly have been contacted by literary agents but have agreed voluntarily to inform the judge if they intend to accept any offers in regard to Gacy.

Teachers don't just teach anymore

By Andrew Zinner
Staff Writer

Test scores of students keep dropping and many high school graduates go through twelve years of school without gaining enough knowledge to fill out a job application. Some have gone so far as to sue the school system for their lack of skills.

The most obvious targets of blame for this situation are the lone figures in the classroom—teachers. They have been criticized by parents and students alike, and some states now require teachers to pass competency tests to prove that they belong in education.

In the June 16th issue of Time magazine, it was estimated that up to 20 percent of teachers have not mastered the basic skills that they are supposed to teach—reading, writing and arithmetic.

But according to several Carbondale teachers, both on the elementary and high school levels, teachers are better than ever and wrongly take the blame for poor student performance.

Mary Sasse, an English teacher at Carbondale Community High School, said that there is a fine staff there. "In our department, almost all the instructors have master's degrees. I wouldn't be afraid to take a competency test, but it would be foolish to weigh teachers on one test," she explained.

Another CCHS English instructor, Theodora Bach, indicated that the problem of teaching is now a multi-pronged one. "School was the center of a child's social life in the past, but not now."

Both Sasse and Bach said that more students work now than ever before, adding another obstacle to the education track. "School has become secondary to work and not enough time is devoted to homework," said Bach, who has taught in Carbondale for 13 years.

Sasse concurred, saying that work has created a conflict of priorities, with school often taking a back seat. She added that teachers are able to accomplish less now than 10 years ago when less students worked. "Though students won't agree, the evidence is not strong that they can handle both school and work," she said.

Mildred Largent, a CCHS English teacher for the past 13 years, agreed. She said that students don't do their assignments as they did in the past because "learning is not the first priority anymore."

A large factor in educational development is the attitudes of parents. Several of the teachers expressed concern about parental interest.

Dorothy Ramp, an 11-year-veteran of elementary education and a fourth grade teacher at Parrish Elementary, said that parents' attitudes have changed. "Teachers now must enforce and encourage discipline rather than teach. We're doing things that should be done at home," she said.

She explained that a lot of parents are against teachers no matter what and added that unlike in the past, teachers are now not allowed to touch a child without first contacting the parent.

Sasse pointed out that a major cause of teacher stress is the frustration resulting from working hard with a student who gets no encouragement from home. Bach agreed, explaining that non-caring parents are a prime reason for seasoned teachers to quit.

"Parents don't want to blame themselves for their child's poor performance, so they blame teachers instead," she said.

Joanna Blackstone, who will be a student teacher at CCHS in the fall, said that parental pressure forces teachers to pass an otherwise failing student.

"Parents don't realize that school means more than getting a diploma. Often parents are not as interested in their kids' education as they should be," she maintained.

Another common complaint from area teachers is that the general public doesn't understand all the extra time they put in. "Parents don't know that teachers knock themselves out," Sasse lamented. "By the end of the year, I'm used up from the stress."

Bach said that teacher stress, both mental and physical, drives out the best teachers, even at CCHS.

Largent said that teacher stress—referred to as teacher burnout—is a reality. "There are terrible pressures on us. We must be counselor and teacher at the same time. We must also worry about kids with emotional problems.

"We can't just teach anymore," she said.

Marjorie Bryson, a fourth grade teacher at Thomas Elementary, said that it is very difficult to deal individually with children when "25 kids want to talk to you at the same time." She also pointed out that discipline must constantly be stressed in order to keep control of the classroom. "Teaching is constant work," Bryson concluded.

Another gripe among teachers is low pay. Betty Portz has been teaching for 22 years, mostly on the sixth grade level at Winkler Elementary. She pointed out that the low pay scales drive out good male teachers since their income is not enough to support a family. She also said that though teachers work for only nine months, many take classes and present lectures in the summer.

Sasse indicated that the low pay will cause a teacher shortage in the future. Top-ability students will go into different endeavors. "Teaching is not attracting the most able students, particularly because of the low starting salary," she said.

CCHS beginning teachers earn $10,250 per year if they have a bachelor's degree and a starting teacher with a master's degree earns $12,068, according to Don Yost, business manager for CCHS.

Starting elementary school teachers in Carbondale earn $9,000 annually if they have a bachelor's degree and $10,100 if they've attained master's degree status.

Despite all the hassles involved in teaching, teacher competency tests may still become a reality in Illinois if legislature follows other states' course of action.

Most of the teachers' responses were against the tests. Sasse said she wouldn't be afraid of such a test, but admitted knowing little about the concept.

Bach expressed concern over who would set the standards for the exam. "I don't fear a competency test, but I do fear the whole idea of it," she maintained. "There is a problem of who will make the test."

According to Largent, such a test is not the answer. She said a good, strong administration, not a test, is the way to weed out poor teachers. Grade school teacher Bryson agreed, saying that teachers are doing better now than in the past.

"It all depends on who's reading the statistics and how they're being interpreted," she explained.

The schoolhouse illustration appearing in this week's Focus was drawn by Linda Ivarie, 6, during Story Hour at the Carbondale Public Library.

Administrators ask: How competent are the competency tests?

By James G. O'Connell
Staff Writer

Johnny is a bright, articulate and active fifth grader who has narrowly failed a school board-imposed minimum skill competency test. Should Johnny be flunked for his own good? This is just one problem faced by many teachers when minimum competency tests are imposed.

Area administrators have almost invariably placed teacher evaluations of a student above test scores in decisions to pass a child. But, the public outcry for minimum skill in elementary and high school graduates has created a problem.

George Edwards, superintendent of Carbondale Elementary School District 96, called minimum competency tests "politically motivated and ill-conceived." He added that one test can not measure an individual's academic growth.

However, in response to concern about minimum competency, the district will be instituting a test composed of questions taken from all tests a student takes over the year. This test will be given in the fall and if a student fails to score at least 70 percent, he or she will have to take remedial classes during the year and then take the test again in the spring.

Edwards added that such tests should be only one tool in the total assessment of the individual child. This view coincides with Illinois State Board of Education guidelines that suggest assessment of each child twice during elementary school and once during high school.

James R. Patton, superintendent of Unity Point Community Consolidated Dist. 140, said test scores are one tool in the total assessment that includes age, potential, background, effort and native language. Patton pointed out

WUSI gets $420,000 grant to upgrade local programming

By Andy Strang
Staff Writer

More local programming will originate from WUSI-TV, SIU's public television station in Olney, thanks to a $420,000 grant from the National Telecommunications and Information Administration.

The grant will be combined with $340,000 in equipment and cash recently supplied by SIU and an expected $100,000 grant by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting. The money will go towards purchasing equipment that will include a new transmitter, portable cameras and a new studio complex, said Kenneth Garry, director of development for SIU Broadcasting Service, which operates both WUSI-TV and WSIU-TV.

Most of the locally-produced programs will concern agriculture and management of oil wells because the station is in a large agricultural community where many oil wells are located, Garry said.

"This new gear will let them get out into the community and do more coverage of the area around Olney," he said.

The new programming will begin after the new equipment is received and installed, probably by the beginning of 1981 if no problems arise, Garry said.

WUSI-TV started operating in 1968. It previously relied on WSIU-TV in Carbondale for most of its programming. Interest in the station had declined until recently, but a new commitment by SIU has led to the grants, Garry said.

WUSI-TV is the only television station within a 55 mile radius of Olney, and 875,000 live in the area covered by the station's broadcast signal. Of that number, only 6.9 percent receive cable. No students work at WUSI-TV, but "we are hoping to get some summer interns up there soon," Garry said.

Man arrested in $250,000 scam

WHEATON, Ill. (AP) — Thomas F. McKenna of Glen Ellyn has been charged with five counts of forgery in allegedly swindling 56 Chicago area institutions and several persons out of $250,000 in a credit-card and bad-check scam.

McKenna, 58, was arrested Thursday in his home, it was disclosed Monday.

Police said they found 30 credit cards bearing various names, fake driver's licenses and police badges, a .38-caliber revolver, a disguise kit, $2,000 in cash and three check-printing machines, when they searched McKenna's home.

Wheaton police alleged that McKenna has an accomplice who works in a post office and steals credit cards and canceled checks.

Authorities were alerted to McKenna's activities when a clerk at a health-food store in Downers Grove reported his license number to police.

Illinois schools are in good shape despite busing and financial woes

By Carol Knowles
Staff Writer

Illinois schools are faring quite well despite controversy over desegregation, finances and teacher competency testing, according to several members of the Illinois State Board of Education.

Bob Lyons, deputy superintendent of the ISBE, said that busing is a tool used to get students to school and is only called into question when desegregation is involved.

"Only 2 percent of the $160 million used for busing during the 1979-80 school year in Illinois is used for desegregation purposes," Lyons said. "The rest of the nation spends anywhere from 2 to 5 percent of their total transportation budget on desegregation."

Lyons said he thought people were too worried about the fact that their child may be bused to a lower quality school and added that he would rather see a concern that all schools be raised to a higher academic level.

"In my opinion, desegregation is constitutionally required, morally appropriate and educationally desirable," Lyons said. "Desegregation does not cause the educational level in schools to decline."

In a report to the ISBE in June, former State Superintendent of Education Joseph Cronin said state aid to schools has increased by $600 million in the period 1975-79. But, according to an ISBE spokesman, the financial burden falls on the taxpayers and during the present period of inflation it can often be a heavy burden to bear.

The average salary for teachers in Illinois is $17,743 a year, according to Don Corrigan, statistical researcher at the ISBE. The range goes from a high of $21,600 a year for teachers in Chicago, to $16,431 for all other areas in the state. Multiplied by 1,011, the number of school districts in the state and then further multiplied by the number of teachers, the total reaches a phenomenal amount.

Probably the largest problem facing Illinois schools today is that of teacher competency, according to Sue Bentz, assistant superintendent of professional relations at ISBE.

Bentz said that there is presently a move in Illinois to require teachers to take a competency test. Two bills were introduced into the House last session, but have not yet been assigned to a committee. She added that she wasn't really in favor of competency testing because there are many variables involved in deciding what makes a good teacher.

"A competency test may prove that a teacher can pass a test, but it still doesn't tell us how well a teacher can teach, his ability to communicate or his ability to carry on an understanding relationship with students," Bentz said.

A more favorable approach, according to Bentz would be good supervision on the local level by administrators.

Contrary to an article in the June 16th issue of Time magazine, the test scores for college board exams are not dropping at a drastic rate, an ISBE spokesman said. In fact, in Illinois SAT test scores are 40 points higher in math and 30 points higher in verbal skills than the national average. Test scores for the ACT exam are around the national average and haven't varied by more than two-tenths of a point in four years.

According to Jerre Pfaff, director of admissions at SIU-C, SIU test scores for incoming freshmen for the 1979-80 school year are above the national average by one-half point.

Sammy Hagar's latest effort proves loud and fast as usual

By Ken Mac Garrigue
Staff Writer and
Jeff Calvert

(Knock, knock)
"Can you turn that music down a little? It's killing the plants on my wall."
"Okay, I'll turn it down. But that's an injustice to Sammy Hagar."

"Oh, is that who it is? I thought it was a recording of a car wreck."

"It's Sammy Hagar's newest album, 'Danger Zone!'"

"Yeah, it sounds real dangerous—to my mentality."

"Look man, when I'm cruisin' down the street in my rod, drinkin' beer with my chick, the only thing I want to hear is Sammy Hagar crankin' out the tunes."

"Why is that?"

"Cause, man, when he says 'Mommy says, Daddy says' I just feel like rippin' those tires off at a stop sign. Sammy Hagar plays guitar like I drive my car—loud and fast!"

"Yeah, I've heard your car. It sounds a little like Sammy Hagar."

"Thanks man."

"Tell me, what is the 'Danger Zone'?"

"That's when you're tackin' over 9,000 RPMs, man. Sammy Hagar really knows. He's really deep. He identifies with the average guy."

"Yeah, I know. You're about as average as you can get."

"Thanks man. You're an all right dude."

"Are Sammy Hagar's fingers as fast as his Trans Am?"

"You bet man! He plays so fast you can't even tell what note he's playing!"

"You know, that's the first thing I've agreed with in this conversation. This song, 'Miles From Boredom,' what does it mean?"

"When you're cruisin', man, you're never bored. You just get into your street machine, pop a beer, stick in Sammy Hagar and you're 'Miles From Boredom,' man."

"Uh-huh, I read in an interview that Big Sammy says he's inspired by Pablo Picasso."

"Who?"

"You know, he's a 20th

A Music Review

century painter of abstracts."

"Oh, you mean the dude paints pictures!"

"Yeah."

"Hey, I want you to meet somebody. This is Bunny—my chick."

"Hi, Bunny. What do you think of Sammy Hagar?"

"Pardon?"

"Sammy Hagar. You know, the guy who plays guitar."

"Oh, is that the one we always listen to? Well, I don't know too much about music, but he does have nice hair."

"Yeah, man. His hair's cool."

"Oh I get it. I can see buying an album by the way a guy's hair looks. The only decent song that I've heard so far that's halfway entertaining—if you turn your stereo volume down to '2—is 'Love Or Money.' But songs like '20th Century Man' and 'Mommy Says, Daddy Says' remind me of my preschool days watching Romper Room."

"Look man, Tom Scholz of Boston helped arrange this album."

"Yeah, that's true. Whatever happened to that band he was in?"

"And Steve Perry of Journey sang background vocals."

"Yeah, I know, but they couldn't hear him—they stuck him by Sammy's amp."

"Man, I sat front row center at 'Grand Slam Super Jam' in St. Louis, man. Sammy Hagar was great—my ears rang for four days! I could see him sweat I was so close."

"If I was getting reviews like him, I'd be sweating too!"

"Man, all I know is—you pinhead—is Sammy Hagar plays great guitar, writes cool songs, drives a Trans Am and wears red, man. You're talkin' class here. This cool dude wears red, man."

"Red. Kind of reminds me of his music—loud and obnoxious."

"Man, just listen to this. You can't tell me it's not great!"

"Personally, I think it lacks creative insight, it's definitely musically inept and the lyrics are something off Howdy Doody."

"Howdy Doody! Man, he's talkin' about my life here! When I'm at the line—when they say go—I think of Sammy Hagar. I say '1-2-3-4!' and I let 'er rip!"

"Say, I really like the sound of those speakers. I've never heard such a high grade of distortion before."

"You really don't like him, do you man?"

"Well, not really. Personally, I find him kind of distasteful."

"Well what do you know about music?"

"Yeah, that's true."

"By the way, I didn't catch your name."

"Pete."

"Pete who?"

"Pete Townshend."

"Never heard of you. Come back some time, man. Say, by the way, you going to the Who concert?"

SIU defends teacher training program

By Andy Strang
Staff Writer

The quality of American school systems is being seriously questioned by many people these days. Much of the blame of the alleged failure of the schools is falling on teachers, who these people claim are receiving inadequate training in college.

The teacher education programs at SIU-C, however, are prepared to defend themselves against both the claim of bad college education for would-be teachers and the claim that education is one of the easiest college majors, thereby attracting the lower quality students.

"People who come in to teaching are dedicated and apt to be better students," said Frances Giles, coordinator of the teacher education services at SIU-C. "Our admission and retention standards (for the teacher education program) are higher than the University as a whole."

A 2.15 grade point average is needed to be admitted into the teacher education program, while most other programs require only a 2.00 GPA. "Most of our students graduate with a grade point considerably higher than a 2.15," Giles said, although she would not estimate how much higher the GPA's were.

The teacher education students must bring their GPA up to a 2.25 in order to student teach, which is a requirement for the state certification that is needed to teach in Illinois.

"We expect progress in our program," Giles said.

Allen Woodson, director of personnel for the Springfield, Illinois, public schools, said SIU-C's teacher education program is as good as the programs at other schools in the state.

"If we have an 'A' student from SIU and a 'B' student from the University of Illinois, we will hire the 'A' student from SIU."

The University of Illinois School of Education was ranked as third best in the nation by the Gourman Report in 1978. The report rated 150 universities across the nation; SIU was not rated.

The quality of the teacher education program at SIU is increasing, Giles said.

"The state is supporting increasing the quality of teaching," she said. The lowered demand for teachers has caused the state to put pressure on the schools to increase the quality of teacher education programs. This, in turn, has eliminated some of the lower quality students from teaching.

Carbondale high school teachers who have had experience with student teachers from SIU agree that the teacher education program here is turning out good teachers.

"I've had fantastic student teachers," said John Stangle, math teacher at Carbondale Central High School. "They come in with lots of enthusiasm and fresh ideas."

Stangle said that he has had between 20 and 25 student teachers from SIU, and he added that "I've only had one that would be considered bad. They know their subject matter well. I'm even jealous of them, they know so much."

Graduates from the teacher education program feel that they received a good preparation for the job at SIU.

"SIU gave me a lot of theories and a lot of ideas," said Monica Grabowski, who graduated in 1976 and has been teaching at Tamaroa, Illinois, High School since then. "I learned a lot of creative ideas, such as things to do in the classroom. They gave me a lot of background."

Elmer Clark, dean of the SIU-C College of Education, believes that teachers cannot be blamed for the supposed decline in education quality.

"Teachers are getting to be the scapegoat of society," he said. "People want schools to do all things for society. Schools can't replace the family or help the economy. Schools are there to provide the best education possible. Schools get negative credit when actually other elements of society are at fault."

He believes that schools can be improved, but he also added that the "best teachers are teaching now. I haven't lost confidence."

However, some people have lost confidence, based on competency tests given to teachers in some states. Tests given in Louisiana resulted in only 53 percent passing in 1978, and 63 percent passing in 1979. The results of competency tests in other states have had equally low results.

Presently, 12 states have approved some form of competency testing for their teachers, and Illinois is one of nine states with proposals for competency tests in the legislature.

Illinois now requires state certification of teachers based upon their having completed certain classes which includes 12 credit hours of student teaching.

Clark does not support teacher certification by examination. "Competency tests will only eliminate people who don't do well on tests," he said. "I don't know of any test that can measure people's abilities as teachers."

"We have physicians and lawyers who can't spell and write. There would be difficulty in proving teachers less are competent than people in any other profession."

Clark added that people should not get too upset about the controversy of "teachers can't teach." "I heard these same arguments when I began teaching in 1941."

Illinois nuclear reactor tests delayed

CHICAGO (AP) — Commonwealth Edison has postponed precautionary tests on nuclear reactors in Illinois because of the hot weather and great demand for electricity.

Linda Scott, a spokeswoman for the utility, said Tuesday that Commonwealth Edison probably will conduct the tests on the weekend when the demand for electricity is not as heavy.

The tests are part of a nationwide safety check of 24 nuclear reactors.

Edison has five reactors that need to be tested, three at the Dresden plant near Morris and two at the Quad Cities plant near Cordova.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission ordered the check of the 24 reactors after an unusual malfunction at the Browns Ferry plant near Decatur, Ala.

Control rods that halt the nuclear reaction — failed to drop into a full-stop position. As a precaution, utilities operating similar reactors must be tested to make sure their "brakes" are functioning.

Economists measure impact on state if Chrysler folds URBANA (AP) - Two University of Illinois economists say the collapse of the Chrysler Corp. would cost Illinois 33,900 jobs and nearly $100 million in sales and tax revenues.

Robert Resek, director of the Bureau of Economic and Business Research, and graduate student J. David Diltz reported on the possible effects of a Chrysler collapse in the current issue of the Illinois Business Review.

Their data comes from a mathematical model that estimated the effects on the state and on Illinois firms supplying goods and services to Chrysler plants.

"The results of our simulations show that there would be substantial adverse effects on the Illinois economy in the short run as a result of a Chrysler collapse," said Resek and Diltz.

"The long-run implications are less clear. It seems that some rebound would occur, but it is doubtful that complete recovery would happen anywhere in the near future."

Beck's long-awaited album arrives; potential blockbuster is short of goal

By Andrew Zinner
Staff Writer

It's been a long, long time—four years—since Jeff Beck has gotten up the drive and energy to cut a new studio album. And so, his long awaited new work, "There and Back," should be a real blockbuster with Beck displaying his renowned rippin' and screamin' licks in a new, refreshing style.

Right? Wrong. Or at least partially wrong. "There and Back" sounds very much like the four-year-old "Wired." Beck's first venture into jazz fusion. His continued love affair with synthesizer whiz Jan Hammer is again evident, especially on "Star Cycle." This tune is dominated by Hammer's hoggish keyboards and sounds much like the live version of the old "Freeway Jam." Hammer plays drums here, too, in a thumping, heavy way. If you close your eyes, you'll swear it's off the most recent live album.

The problem with "There" is that Beck revives the same old licks and, especially with the Hammer tunes, there is no new stuff. Three of the eight tunes on "There" include the talented keyboardist but the non-

A Music Review

Hammer songs are the better cuts on the album.

Much has changed over the years for the volatile Beck. He's gone through more band members than Rod Stewart, a former Beck associate, has gone through beautiful blondes. His current backup is excellent, with Simon Phillips on drums, Tony Hymas on keyboards (when Hammer isn't butting in) and Mo Foster on bass. But if history repeats itself for Beck, he'll have a new supporting cast in the future.

The top selection, "Space Boogie," offers excellent drumming from Phillips and is combined with nice acoustic piano from Hymas. Beck wakes up here with some of the old mean guitar and the entire upbeat number rises above the rest.

Another hot one is "El Becko," a rocker receiving some radio play. As the title indicates, the tune showcases the controversial axeman at his smokin' best... but the listener should expect more from the master. It is a hot tune with a good drum beat and Beck does "get down," but not like he could.

A true Beck fanatic might have to admit that the legendary rocker is going stale after listening to some of the tunes on "There and Back." "Too Much to Lose," a slow and funky jazzier, features Beck with easy and flowing guitar but nothing exciting emerges. The same goes for the moody and eerie "Final Peace," the finishing song which lulls the listener to sleep right before having to get up and turn it off.

Other cuts, like "You Never Know" and "The Pump," show off the post "Blow by Blow" Beck and his fusion style. The former cut is a funkied-up Hammeresque special, with the keyboardist playing bass on his synthesizer.

Beck needs to get away from the domineering Jan Hammer, as the non-Hammer tunes are much more refreshing. With the talent and past performances of Jeff Beck, a better album should have resulted. (Album courtesy of Plaza Records.)

Stone's musical smorgasbord not great, but still enjoyable

By Edward R. Berry
Student Writer

Yesterday's bad boy of rock 'n' roll, Mick Jagger, has been known for putting down women and with the addition of the Rolling Stones' newest album "Emotional Rescue," Jagger once again accomplishes his goal.

"Rescue" is a combination of the Stones' old melodies, reggae, punk, country and blues. The end result of this musical smorgasbord is an album that won't knock you off your feet, but also one that is nonetheless enjoyable.

The first song on the album, "Dance," and the title song "Emotional Rescue," both tend to reflect slight similarities from the title song on their last album, "Some Girls."

But although the "Some Girls" melody does bleed through the lining of these two songs, each also offers some nice variations. The combination of various instruments on "Dance" produces a nice ensemble that is accented by the blare of a very impressive horn section.

"Rescue" begins with a discarding beat that picks up with the aid of a nice saxophone sound from Bobby Keys. Jagger seems to exploit his sexism role when he mimicks a woman's voice and preaches about "her" need for an emotional rescue. By changing back to his normal voice, Jagger is able to offer himself as a "knight in shining armor."

Two of "Rescue's" more raucous songs are the traditional Stones' sounding "Let Me Go" and the punk-energized song "Where the Boys Go."

As Jagger sings about the girl of his dreams, bass player Bill Wyman pounds out a series of heavy chords, triggering off the loud battling lead guitar sounds of Keith Richards and Ron Woods.

The combination of Jagger's voice and the band's efforts reminds the listener of when the band was in its primal stages. Jagger has been noted as saying that the Stones' were the original punks of the music industry and the jamming force behind "Where the Boys Go" certainly exhibits this origin. The choppy sounding lyrics of "Boys" bestows a certain British-punk aura and as usual, Jagger's voice dominates the song while the lead guitarist supplies the up and down drive behind this tune.

The oddity songs on "Rescue" are the country-based "All About You," which drags to same pace of "Far Away Eyes," and the reggae influenced "Send it to Me." The Jamaican beat of "Send" features a series of repetitious guitar riffs, the sounds of a steel guitar and the all-so-concerned words of Jagger—"She could be Australian, Ukranian or Alien, just send her to me."

The prettiest song on the album is "Down in the Hole." Although the words are depressing, as most blues' songs are, the addition of harmonica player Sugar Blue helps to tell Jagger's story about having nowhere to go.

The meaning behind "Down" could be used to convey the impression people have been adapting towards the Stones' music. There's really nowhere for them to musically go anymore. Their success over the years has set a standard of greatness so high that it's almost impossible for them to surpass that peak.

Music camp participants to perform in recitals

By Colleen Moore
Staff Writer

Illinois high school students are combining work and fun this week while participating in the 19th annual Music and Youth at Southern camp.

Selected students from the band and choir will perform in a recital at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Home Economics Auditorium. On Saturday, piano students will have a recital at 10 a.m. in the Home Economics Auditorium, and the band and choir will have a concert at 1 p.m. in Shryock Auditorium. All concerts are free and open to the public.

The music will vary in style from heavy to light, according to assistant director Art Schmittler.

The 120 students have been rehearsing for two-and-a-half to three hours a day in Altgeld Hall and Shryock Auditorium, Schmittler said.

The music groups have been attending classes in music appreciation, theory, class voice and history of jazz. Selected students are participating in a jazz band and swing choir.

Students have also had the option of taking private lessons from SIU-C professors. Schmittler said about 50 percent of the students have taken advantage of the private sessions.

Each student was charged $97 for the music camp. The cost included room and board, class instruction and membership in music organizations. Although the program is publicized nationally, no out-of-state high school students participated this year.

Most of the students have been housed at Neely Hall under the supervision of counselors who are Illinois music teachers, and 22 have been commuting.

Camp director Melvin Siener, associate professor of music at SIU-C, is the originator of the program, Schmittler said.

The Music and Youth at Southern camp for students in junior high school was offered in June at SIU.

Clay skulls cast of nine of Gacy's unidentified victims

CHICAGO (AP) — One of the last chapters in the John W. Gacy Jr. story may be written in clay.

The faces of the nine unidentified victims of the man convicted of more murders than anyone in the nation's history are being reconstructed by a specialist who uses modeling clay to mold facial features on the skulls.

When the reconstructions are completed, photographs will be distributed to the news media in the hope that people who see the pictures in a newspaper or magazine or on television will recognize the victims.

Betty P. Gatliff of Norman, Okla., who reconstructs skulls on a free-lance basis for law enforcement agencies around the country, was hired by Dr. Robert Stein, Cook County medical examiner, to restore features to the skulls.

Seven of the victim's heads were reconstructed in Miss Gatliff's office in Norman, but she came to Chicago to complete restoration on the final two so reporters could watch her work and interview her.

Most of the work on one of the two skulls had been completed.

Agriculture company donates equipment for teaching use

By Bill Torpy
Student Writer

The School of Agriculture has received equipment and materials from International Harvester to aid teaching programs.

The equipment, valued at more than $6,000, includes the hydraulic systems and an axle from International Harvester's new two-plus tractor.

"This is the latest, most up-to-date equipment available," said Robert Wolff, associate professor in agricultural industries. "You can't find things like this in a textbook. This will be an invaluable aid to our program."

Wolff said the new equipment will be highly beneficial to the practical knowledge of the students.

"Textbooks are principle orientated. Principles are good, but a real world knowledge is most important," he said. International Harvester has been working with the school for a few years.

"They have made a sincere attempt to renew contact with SIU by recruiting our grads and assisting our programs," Wolff said.

International Harvester has kept SIU up to date on their changes.

Worth of competency tests questioned by administrators that testing handicapped children, or children for whom English is a second language, for competency would be unfair. He added that any test score evaluation must be tempered with common sense.

Jerry Dunn, a Carbondale parent, said he is in favor of competency testing if such testing results in alternative programs for the children who fail the test. Dunn said that while school boards are not qualified to devise and administer tests, he does favor testing to determine a child's grade placement.

Dunn's 12-year-old son Butch attends Giant City School which has used standardized testing, along with teacher evaluations, for the past year to determine placement rather than whether a child graduates.

This system is also in line with Board of Education guidelines that suggest the test results should be followed by changes in the programs in order to help those who do not meet the standards set by the district.

ISFE guidelines suggest each district determine its own testing policy but will require, if the proposed bill currently in the General Assembly passes, each district to file a competency assessment plan by 1983.

Carol McDermott, a member of the Carbondale Community High School District 165 School Board, said she favors testing to insure that each child can achieve minimum skill levels. "We have a plan," she said, "which will be instituted this fall or next, which will include testing, teacher evaluation, and remedial class placement if necessary."

Charles Lenert, a member of the Board of Directors of the Carbondale New School, said, "Of course competency is mandatory. Who could be against competency? The problem," he stated, "is whether these tests adequately measure the child's educational achievement in all its complexity."

The frustration that many teachers feel when faced with the question of whether or not to pass a student who has failed a competency exam is illustrated by Wes Crum.

The New School uses only one standardized test at the end of each year and then only to facilitate transfer to another school if requested. Despite the open classroom approach and the emphasis on emotional and social growth as well as academic, standardized tests have revealed that students at New School score consistently above the national average. This is not unusual, however, for schools in this area. Many other schools also report standardized test results above the national average.

This is caused, according to school administrators, by the abundance of graduating teachers provided by SIU.

"Every time we have an opening we are flooded by applications," one school official said. This helps area schools maintain a high level of competency among teachers.

Some schools, as in the Murphysboro School District 136, have engaged outside evaluators to assess teachers. If inadequacies are found, the teacher must submit a written report describing how he or she will correct their deficiencies.

According to Edwards, the schools' administrations must strengthen their teaching standards by carrying out a commitment to fire inadequate teachers.

Junkyard sought for space debris; scientists worried about collisions

WASHINGTON (AP) — One year after Skylab tumbled spectacularly from the Western Australian sky, at least 4,700 manmade objects still orbit Earth, a vast space junkyard whirling at 17,000 mph.

Scientists worry that one day the debris will start colliding, breaking into smaller orbiting fragments, and create a potentially serious hazard for astronauts, satellites and space stations.

"If the current trend continues, collisions between orbiting fragments and other space objects could be frequent," says D.J. Kessler, an astrophysicist with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

There's even talk about capturing some of the larger pieces and parking them in a safe place in orbit.

"With the space shuttle, it may prove beneficial to retrieve old payloads and rocket bodies, and the designation of an area of space as a 'garbage dump' may be useful," Kessler said.

All the debris will eventually fall to Earth, most of it burning up harmlessly in the atmosphere, NASA says.

But Skylab was a special case. At 77.5 tons, the space station was the largest satellite ever sent into orbit, and sections of it were big enough to survive the searing heat of re-entry.

People watched for months as its orbit slowly decayed until it made a final fiery dive through the atmosphere on July 11, 1979. It broke into thousands of pieces, scattering over the Indian Ocean and the desert of Western Australia.

NASA says nothing that big made by the United States will be allowed to make an uncontrolled re-entry again. It will be kept in orbit or be guided to re-entry over an ocean.

Kessler, a member of NASA's Space Environment Office, said only 5 percent of the orbiting objects are operating satellites, while 12 percent are non-functioning. Another 18 percent are rocket stages, bolts, cables, separation springs and other devices that accompany the payloads.

Most of the remaining pieces are fragments of space explosions — the unplanned blowups of 11 U.S. rockets after they boosted satellites into orbit, and the deliberate detonation of eight Soviet payloads during tests of anti-satellite weapon.

So far there have been no space collisions, but in 1965 two American payloads brushed together briefly without causing any damage.

Kessler said a 1976 study indicated a collision might occur only once every 17 years. A new study indicates that by 1998 there could be as many as four a year.

"These collisions, Kessler said, 'could become the major source of Earth orbiting objects, resulting in a self-propagating debris belt. The resulting environmental hazard to other spacecraft may exceed the hazard from the natural meteoroid environment ...'"

Kessler estimates that when America's manned space shuttle begins flying next year, its chance of a collision is very slim. It can maneuver away from objects, and even if hit by a fragment will be protected by a thick skin designed to guard against meteoroids. But the odds increase as space debris increases, he said.

34 INJURED IN FIRE

PONTIAC, ILL. (AP) — Thirty-one Pontiac Correctional Center inmates and three prison guards were treated for minor injuries after a fire, authorities said Thursday.

Prison spokeswoman Dorothea Green said Wednesday night's blaze in the North Cell House segregation unit was extinguished quickly by guards.

Deaf basketball player enjoys camp

By Carol Knowles
Staff Writer

Lonnell Turner will never hear the applause when he sinks that winning free throw.

Turner, a 15-year-old from East St. Louis, has been deaf since birth, but that hasn't prevented him from loving and participating in sports. He is attending the summer basketball camp at SIU this week.

Like most teenage athletes, Lonnell has sports injuries. Thursday he was in the training room taking care of a blister he received from his busy workout during the week. The injury was painful, but it wasn't enough to keep him down.

A few minutes after the trainer wrapped his foot in a bandage, he was back on the court going through more drills.

Turner's only means of communicating with the coaches and his fellow campers is by pencil and paper, which he said is difficult at times because he has trouble letting people know exactly what he means. He doesn't speak and doesn't know sign language. But the barrier between Lonnell and the rest of the campers appears small once he takes the floor. Basketball Coach Joe Gottfried said Turner is a very attentive player.

"He is a very observant boy," Gottfried said. "He watches what everyone is doing so we don't even have to write down instructions for him. He knows what we are going to do next and he follows right along."

"Most of the coaches at the camp wouldn't even realize Lonnell is deaf unless it was pointed out to them."

Gottfried said that on the first day of camp Lonnell had a few problems understanding what was going on, but from that point, everything went smoothly for the boy.

"The coaches have spent extra time with him and the campers have helped Lonnell in every way they could," Gottfried said.

Turner attends the Illinois School for the Deaf where he plays on the school team. He has started for the squad for the last four years and has been playing basketball since he was nine.

The hardest part in playing basketball, Turner said, is that he can't hear directions when his coach shouts them. He said the rest is easy.

Lonnell has no plans to become a professional basketball star when he gets older. Turner said he is still young and doesn't really know what he wants to do with his future.

Green fills Saluki assistant baseball coaching post

By Paul Reis
Staff Writer

Head baseball coach Itchy Jones has named Ohio native Jerry Green to fill the position left vacant since the May resignation of former assistant Mark Newman. Much as Newman was, Green will primarily serve as pitching coach and chief recruiter.

The 31-year-old Green comes to SIU from Cincinnati's LaSalle High School, where he served as head baseball coach for four years, fashioning a 65-23 record, supplying Jones with lefthanded pitching ace Bob Schroek over that span. He spent the six previous years as an assistant at LaSalle.

Green, an Xavier University graduate, has also acted as an assistant for the Cincinnati Storm summer baseball team, which finished second in the national Babe Ruth tournament in 1977 and 1978. Former Salukis Schroek and Rick Keeton, now both affiliated with the Milwaukee Brewers' farm system, played for the Storm under Green.

Green feels accepting the Saluki assistant post represents a very positive career step. "Southern has one of the most respected baseball programs in the nation, and I've heard a lot of people say SIU has the finest program in the Midwest," Green said.

Green went on to identify Jones, the nation's third-winningest collegiate coach as the major reason for SIU's national image.

"I feel, and I'm definitely not alone in saying this, that Itchy is one of the finest baseball men in the country today," Green said. "I feel very fortunate to have the opportunity to work with him."

Green, who has also been working for the Major League Scouting Bureau for the past four years, feels the key to successful recruiting is honesty.

"In order for an athlete to really trust you, you have to be honest with him about your program from the start," he said. "Once a recruit finds out you've been lying to him about one thing, he'll wonder how much else you've told him isn't the truth. "And trying to erase the reputation of being even a little bit shady is a hard thing to do."

At the moment, Green feels less certain about his plans for the Saluki pitching staff. "I really can't make any judgement on our pitchers until I have the chance to see them do a lot of throwing," he said. "I'm not going to come in to make changes just for change's sake."

Green will start his first SIU recruiting trip when he attends a 32-team Connie Mack tournament in Ohio next week.

Randolph takes All-Star blame

By The Associated Press

Scapegoats are back in fashion.

Surely there had to be somebody at fault for the American League's ninth consecutive All-Star embarrassment at the hands of the National League this week.

Responsibility had to be assigned for such a catastrophe. Pin the blame on someone and somehow it will make the medicine go down a little easier. The No. 1 candidate was Willie Randolph, the AL second baseman. Examine the evidence:

—It was Randolph who got himself picked off first base in the third inning, almost certainly costing the AL an important run, since Rod Carew followed with a double.

—It was Randolph's second error of the game that permitted the deciding run to score. The only other All-Star second baseman to make two errors in one game was Billy Herman, who did it in 1943.

How does the jury find? Guilty. But the verdict is not unanimous. Here's a witness for the defense and one loud vote for innocent.

Randolph was indicted because he plays baseball aggressively, a trait that might benefit some other American Leaguers. He's got the National League approach to this game and if a few more AL players did, they might not be moaning about losing every year.

Randolph got picked off first base because he was thinking about swiping second base. Is that such a crime? "I'm a base stealer," he said. "I get off the bag."

For that, he got indicted. In the fifth inning, after Ken Griffey homered for the Nationals, Randolph made his first error. It came on a grounder hit by Ken Reitz, and actually, Reitz wound up making a bigger error on the play than Randolph.

The ball was hit sharply and Randolph bobbed it first and then threw wide for the error. Reitz tried for second but catcher Darrell Porter, backing the play, threw him out by perhaps 30 feet. So that error by Randolph meant nothing.

Blame Randolph for the loss if you want to, but the fact of the matter is that he is the glue that holds together the New York Yankee infield.

U.S. Olympic track team begins tour in West Germany

By The Associated Press
STUTTGART, West Germany — The U.S. Olympic track and field team, stung by the loss of sprint ace Stanley Floyd, begins its pickup summer tour Friday night in 80,000-seat Neckar Stadium against athletes from some 30 nations.

Floyd, the sensational freshman from Auburn University who is unbeaten in 15 100-meter finals this year, will miss the meet because of a strained groin muscle suffered Tuesday night during a 200-meter race in Stockholm.

The 19-year-old Floyd, one of the top attractions of the somewhat depleted American team, said he would not run in either of the other two stops on phase one of the team's tour, in London Sunday and Oslo, Norway Tuesday. Nor would he be available for phase two, the Liberty Bell Classic in Philadelphia July 16-17, but hoped to be ready for phase three next month in Rome Aug. 5, Berlin Aug. 8 and Zurich, Switzerland Aug. 13.

The American men's team also has been invited to an international meet in Athens Aug. 8-9, a meet that will conflict with the Berlin competition. The gap between the second and third phases of the tour is necessitated by the staging of the Olympic Games in Moscow. The United States is boycotting the games because of the Soviet Union's military invention in Afghanistan, and no international meets are permitted during the Olympics.
