All-Star thrills
Past, present, baseball heroes honored in pre-game hoopla

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Baseball paused and paid tribute to heroes past and present Monday with fun, games and a little work during All-Star festivities before a packed house at Jack Murphy Stadium.

With the California sun shining brightly, All-Stars from days gone by put on a three-inning exhibition before National and American league players worked out in preparation for Tuesday’s 63rd All-Star Game (8:35 p.m. EDT).

Babe Ruth’s first All-Star game got the ball rolling.

The game happened in 1933 when the entire American League and half the National League converged here for the third annual All-Star Game.

The first big All-Star Game ever became a 7-2 victory over the National League.

The day was devoted entirely to reliving memories as American League Manager Tom Kelly of the Minnesota Twins and National League counterpart Bobby Cox of the Atlanta Braves announced their starting lineups and starters and put their squads through a light workout.

Cox gave the nod to his ace left-hander Tom Glavine, marking the left-hander’s second straight All-Star start. Glavine, 13-3 with a 2.57 ERA, joins Robin Roberts (1954 and 1955) and Don Drysdale (1957) as the only National League pitchers to start consecutive All-Star games.

“Was the Cy Young winner last year and has 13 wins this year he deserves it,” Cox said of Glavine.

Kelly named Texas right-hander Kevin Brown as his starter. Brown, 14-4, is the only 14-game winner in the majors this season.

Brown was impressed to join a rotation that includes Billy Wagner of the Houston Astros, Bob Feller, Whitey Ford, Denny McLain, Jim Palmer and teammate Nolan Ryan as American League All-Star starters.

“We have the best 24 players we could come up with working within the system,” he said. “It’s a tough job, anybody who would like that job is welcome to it.”

No pitching changes were made to the starting lineup will include St. Louis’ Ozzie Smith (ss), San Diego’s Tony Gwynn (rf), Pittsburgh’s Barry Bonds (lf), San Francisco’s Fred McGriff (1b), Atlanta’s Terry Pendleton (3b), Pittsburgh’s Andy Van Slyke (cf), Chicago’s Ryne Sandberg (2b), and San Diego’s Benito Santiago (l) and Glavine.

Cox will be attempting to end a string of frustration for the National League that includes four straight losses and five in the last six meetings.

South Bend new home for college Hall of Fame

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — The College Football Hall of Fame, forced to close this year because of poor attendance, will relocate a few miles from one of the sport’s most storied campuses — Notre Dame.

Major Joe Kemen said at a news conference that the hall will open within two years next to the Century Center downtown convention hall.

The hall first opened in 1978 in Kings Island, Ohio, but attendance has slipped, with less than one-tenth the projected 30,000 annual visitors coming to the shrine before its close in January.

Apart from South Bend, bids for the hall had been placed by Atlanta, Houston, the Meadowlands in New Jersey and New Orleans.

“The city of South Bend, and in fact, this entire region, has a long and rich tradition of support for college football,” said William Pearson, chairman of The National Football Foundation and College Hall of Fame, the hall’s parent organization.

Pearson cited such Notre Dame greats as Knute Rockne, George Gipp and Paul Hornung and such Hall of Famers as Jay Berwanger of Chicago, Leroy Keyes of Purdue, Buddy Young of Illinois, John Tavener of Indiana and coaches Amos Alonso Stagg of Chicago and William Ingram of Indiana.

“It is my sincere hope that the hall will continue to serve as a vehicle that will heighten the awareness of the positive influence college football has had on the history of our country.”

“We believe that the hall will be the facility we have proposed will be the best that today’s expertise in design and technology can create,” he said.

Drechsler wants final leap to be nothing short of gold

Bonn, Germany (UPI) — So much has changed for long jumper Heike Drechsler. She comes to a new Olympics, competing for a new country, with her spectacular career coming to a close. One gold medal remains, an Olympic gold medal.

Drechsler is 27 now. She no longer has double-jump ability and strictures of the East German sports apparatus. She only dreams now come from within. That is how she always competed.

U.S. Olympic Committee: Pepsi aims to capitalize on Magic Johnson

United Press International

Pepsi unveiled a new advertising campaign featuring basketball star Magic Johnson Monday, much to the displeasure of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

The ad — the first to directly address Johnson’s battle with the AIDS virus — will make it’s national television debut during Tuesday night’s major league All-Star Game on CBS. While usoc lauded the ad’s subject matter, it claimed the timing — less than two weeks before the Barcelona Olympics — smacks of ambush marketing.

The problem stems from Coca-Cola’s estimated expense of $33 million to be among the elite Olympic sponsors. That agreement says Coke has the exclusive soft drink marketing rights to the Summer Games, including the ad use of the Olympic basketball team, of which Johnson is a member.

The usoc contends the Pepsi ad is trying to capitalize on Johnson’s Olympic performance without paying for the rights.

“If they (Pepsi) play that ad during the Olympic Games, they are in violation of IOC rules,” said John Krimsky Jr., the usoc’s head of marketing.

But while Coca-Cola’s agreement means Pepsi cannot air ads on NBC during the Games, they can buy times on other networks and local affiliates.

“Even though Coca-Cola has spent over $20 million for exclusive sponsorship to the Games, there is no way to ‘own’ the Olympics,” said Audrey Federowich, an assistant professor at Duquesne University who has studied Olympic marketing trends.

Pepsi says the ad is simply the latest efforts in a longterm relationship it has with Johnson, who is a partner in the company’s lucrative Washington, D.C.

Drechsler has won Olympic gold medals of the world in 1983 and the European Championships in 1986 and 1989. She won the silver medal at the 1991 World Championships and the bronze in 1989. She also captured the 200-meter sprint at the 1986 European Championships.

Drechsler said she signed with another matter. Her hopes were dashed in 1984 when East Germany boycottted the Los Angeles
Unemployment rates soar high; help on its way
By Lynnette Marquardt

Southern Illinois unemployment rates have remained high because of coal mine layoffs, but a local labor market economist said help is on the way in some counties.

The unemployment rate in Jackson County was 8.8 percent in May, up 3 percent from the rate last year.

Mike Vessell of the Illinois Department of Employment Security in Harrisburg, said although the rates are high, new developments in the area may provide some relief.

"The short term outlook would be guarded optimism," he said.

The malls in Carbondale and Marion continue to provide jobs as they expand.

The malls have led to strong retail trade levels in both Jackson and Williamson Counties, Vessell said.

Carbondale has University Mall, which is still expanding. In Williamson program cuts

By Jeremy Finley
Administration Writer

Members of the SIU Board of Trustees announced proposed cuts of 50 programs at SIUC which would result in $3.45 million in savings.

All state universities were asked by the Illinois Board of Higher Education to investigate priorities in each college because of reduced funding from the state.

The UI productivity, quality and priorities (POP) evaluation is the product of a number of SIU's faculty and staff, said SIU Chancellor James Brown.

The tentative draft of POP may be presented in full to the BOTT in September, Brown said. The revised copy will be sent to Illinois Board of Higher Education in October.

The POP requires universities to decide what can be sacrificed, Brown said.

"It is a way to help institutions find their strengths and weaknesses, and how we can save money in doing so," he said.

Jerry Underwood, president of the SIUC Faculty Senate, said the Senate has not yet had input into the document, but soon will be part of the process.

"We will have input," Underwood said. "But it's too soon in the process. The timetable just hasn't gotten to us yet.

Bush halts production of radioactive materials for nuclear arms in United States
WASHINGTON (UPI) — President George Bush said Monday the United States will redouble its efforts to stop the spread of weapons of mass destruction by halting the production of radioactive materials for nuclear arms and denying assistance to countries that violate nonproliferation agreements.

The president's announcement, which came as Democrats began the process of nominating a presidential candidate in New York, was largely philosophical because the United States has not produced weapons-grade plutonium or enriched uranium since 1988.

The grab-bag of nonproliferation initiatives offered by the president did not include a ban on nuclear tests, which Russia and other nations have sought from the United States for several years.

Bush noted that the administration had "fought so hard to stem the proliferation" of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and looked "back with pride on a solid record of accomplishment.

"But, he said in a written statement, "We need to do more.

"Therefore, I have set forth today a set of principles to guide our nonproliferation efforts in the years ahead, and directed a number of steps to supplement our existing efforts," Bush's statement said.

"These steps include a decision not to produce plutonium and highly enriched uranium for nuclear explosive purposes and a number of proposals to strengthen international actions against those who contribute to the spread of weapons.

Bush, vacationing in Kennebunkport, did not deliver his statement personally but directed the White House staff to distribute it to reporters in Maine and in Washington.

Democrats begin convention for Clinton, Gore in New York
NEW YORK (UPI) — Democrats hung the last red, white and blue streamer Monday and prepared to open their national convention to nominate Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton and Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore as the party's presidential ticket this fall.

With the descending of the opening gavel Monday night, the Democrats hoped to begin four days of the most harmonious party meeting in decades.

The opening night was set aside for housekeeping chores, speeches and an usual keynote address presented by three different people — Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey, Gov. Zell Miller of Georgia and former Rep. Barbara Jordan of Texas.

SERBIAN FORCES LAUNCH ATTACK ON TOWN

Serbian forces pressed their assault Monday to capture the entire town on Bosnian-Hercegovina's eastern flank yet to fall to their offensive as shelling and gunfire in Sarajevo prevented residents of a besieged suburb from reaching newly delivered U.N. food aid. SECURITY CLASHES WITH KURDISH REBELS

Twenty-five people were killed in southeastern Turkey during the week when separatist guerrillas attacked police bases and a bus and clashed with security forces, the state radio said Monday. The toll included 21 guerrillas affiliated with the outlawed Kurdish Workers Party, three civilians and one security officer, the radio said. The heaviest clash occurred Sunday at Elmadag, a village near Silmlik.

Award-winning artist donates work to library

Najjar Musawir, a SIUC graduate and award-winning artist, donated one of his favorite works to Morris Library.

"Knowledge Seeker," a mixed-media painting, is now located in the Humanities section of the library by the Music Room following a ceremony Friday.

Musawir wanted to do something to show this appreciation for the library.

"I spent a lot of my time in this library because it has so many works on art," Musawir said. "I can't make a large cash donation, so I gave one of my very expensive pieces of art."

"Knowledge Seeker" relates to Musawir's Islamic way of life, he said. The painting has the youthful face of a man with silvery hair and a headdress. Musawir said it symbolizes many things.

"It relates to the idea of freedom," he said. "The man is seeking knowledge from the cradle to the grave."

Musawir said including the headdress was necessary. It protects the head, which is a "free zone." It symbolizes the protection of freedom. He said it is his trademark.

The mixed-media texture that Musawir used was created in an experiment. It is very sturdy, he said.

In the ceremony, Musawir thanked community leader Imam Abdul Haqq. Musawir said Haqq made it possible for him to network between college and the community.

Musawir, who was a 1992 recipient of the Rickert-Zebold award, received his bachelor of arts degree in May and is plans to continue his studies in Atlanta. He has not decided which school he will study at.

During the time he spent in Carbondale, Musawir worked with children.

He won an NAACP award for outstanding achievement in working with children in the community through art.

The children's program Musawir was involved with is centered in the Fireeiah Arts and Crafts Center.

Grad seized second in graphic design contest

By Lynelle Marquardt
General Assignment Writer

A SIUC graduate received second place in the Great Student Designer Awards Competition for his graphic design.

Geoff Story said he believes that what made his entry stand out was the concept behind it.

"Two many designers are only concerned with making something that looks nice instead of something that has an idea behind it and is practical," he said. "I think what made my design a winner was the concept behind it."

"I wanted to give people a way to think critically about the objects they buy," he said. "The concept was 'Do I really need this?'

Story designed a logo for "Toasty." He now plans to develop a logo for his own business venture called "The Mustangs." He is working on a logo for his band called "The Mustangs."

In addition to receiving the money, he now has the opportunity to interview with some of the judges who are all art directors in their own advertising agencies.

Assistant Professor Ann Saunders was Story's instructor for Visual Communications.

"He made the contest into a class project," she said. "All eight of the students entered a design. "The strength behind his entry is the concept behind the idea," Saunders said.

"We try to encourage the development of great ideas and solutions to problems," she said. "In this competition, it's not just the question of developing a great idea, but executing it as well."

Saunders said Story truly deserved this award.

"I am delighted that Geoff won the award," she said. "He is a very talented and creative designer. It really attests to his talent and creativity."

Election may decide future of Roe case

Abortion foes hoped 1992 would be the year of the fall of the 19-year-old Roe vs. Wade decision recognizing the constitutional right to abortion. But it did not happen.

Presidents Reagan and Bush appointed six justices in their mandates with the hope that the law of the land would take a conservative turn, providing a majority for overturning some of the previous courts' more liberal decisions like Roe and cases on school prayer. The appointment of Justice Thomas to the court last year gave a definitive conservative edge to the Supreme Court.

But the new court has consistently proven to be a vote short of the expected conservative control. What has happened is that three of the new appointees, Justices O'Connor, Kennedy and Breyer, have come to comprise a bloc that crossed ideological lines to form a centrist decision group.

This bloc has tilted the balance of the court in several decisions during the last year, including "Planned Parenthood vs. Casey," the Pennsylvania case that brought Roe back to the marble temple last spring.

For the first time since her appointment, O'Connor, considered the more conservative of the three centrist justices, voted more consistently with the liberals of the court than with the conservatives.

Some analysts have argued that the lack of definition of the new court is rooted in the 1987 confirmation battle in which former conservative candidate Robert Bork was defeated. Since then, and to ease the candidates' Senate screenings, judges presented for confirmation have been known for avoiding opinions on certain issues—especially abortion—who were still alive in Democratic politics will be coming to New York anyway, so he thought it would be a good chance to get together.

Besides the campaign workers, they are expecting such media and liberal luminaries as Gloria Steinem, Jesse Jackson, Norman Mailer, Hunter Thompson and maybe—hold your breath—Warren Beatty and Shirley MacLaine.

Unfortunately, I can't avoid it. And I regret it because I would like to see how the years have treated the people who managed to screw up the Democratic Party almost beyond repair.

Two years ago. That's when the McGovernites decided to purge the party convention of those Democrats who had been found guilty of being governors, mayors, sheriffs and members of Congress and state legislatures. In other words, people who had actually campaigned for and been elected to public office.

Relations, said POP is a driving force for SIU. It is a decision about priorities and an efficient use of resources," Dyer said. "We have to make a decision since we will not be receiving any money from the federal government."

Similar plans are in action for SIUE, said SIUE President Earl Larson. "The purpose for POP is making the university a better place for students," he said. "It is about meeting the needs for the kind of caliber students we want."

The proposals for POP include:

- The elimination of the instruction stipend of a specialist professor in Curriculum and Instruction, a specialist professor in Educational Technology, a specialist professor in Career Education, a specialist professor in Nursing, a specialist professor in Social Work, a specialist professor in Educational Media, a bachelor's degree in Business Administration and the elimination of Religious Studies and the B.A. Degree Program in Religious Studies. The estimated long-term savings for the elimination of Instrucional Units is $666,000.

- The abolition of the Civil Engineering Technology specialist program. Where faculty members involved will be transferred to the Department of Engineering and Mechanics. Estimated savings: $300,000.

departments and functions is a nationwide trend. Public Works last was moved to the Marion Police Department in 1986, and Reeder said the changes have taken some adjustment.

"It will take some time to get used to things," Reeder said. "The people in the division have all cooperated. It is a smooth transition."

City Manager Jeff Doherty said the changes resulted from a more streamlined government that will respond to the needs of citizens better.

"In the long run, the changes will improve the quality of service we provide to citizens in a more cost effective manner," Doherty said.

In addition, four city departments have been eliminated:

- The Emergency Services and Dispatch Agency (ESDA) and the Illinois State Police (ISP)
- The Community Development Department has been moved to the City of Marion Health Department
- Code Enforcement has become the Building and Neighborhood Services Division
- Street Maintenance and Sanitation is now Mining and Environmental Services

Doherty said the name changes give an indication of the positive image and identifies their purpose better.

"We're trying to be more descriptive of what is going on with the departments," Doherty said. "We're also trying to give them a friendlier title."

In addition, seven management personnel were transferred to different management positions.

A senior administration official who briefed reporters at the State Capitol on the condition that he not be named conceded that stopping production of plutonium and uranium was nothing new.

It was, he said, an effort by the administration to codify a principle. "It is true we have not produced plutonium for a long time," the official said. "What we have done as a matter of practice, we are now saying we are making a matter of policy. We are saying that we are giving up the option to return to a production of plutonium."

"The officials said, however, that the United States would not dismantle its facilities for producing weapons-grade plutonium and uranium and that stockpile of the key elements for nuclear bombs were sufficient to answer any future contingency."

as the party’s, presidential candidate Wednesday night, made a brief stop at a community center on the lower East Side before returning to his hotel to work on his acceptance speech to be delivered Thursday night.

He told an enthusiastic crowd that he understands the country’s needs because he grew up “not in the best of circumstances” with a widowed mother and a poor family. “I’m for those things because they grow out of my life experience,” he said. “I’m going to do whatever I can to do turn this country around,” Clinton said.

Gore, Clinton’s hand-picked choice to be his running mate against President Bush and possibly Ross Perot in the fall, said the day preaching unity at state delegations and on television shows.

“We need everybody’s support,” Gore said on the NBC “Today” program. “I would like to ask Republicans and independents who are fed up with the kind of approach the Bush-Quayle ticket has been taking in getting us to join our team, regardless of party.”

The last major holdout from the Clinton-Gore ticket is Florida, where Gore has been trying to involve California Gov. Edmund “Jerry” Brown, whose own presidential campaign faltered short of the mark but still provided him with about 400 delegates to the convention.

Asked if Brown will be given an opportunity to address the convention if he does not endorse the ticket, Gore said “naturally the people who speak at the national convention are people who support the ticket and I am assuming that he will be supporting the ticket and I expect that he will.”

Another lone holdout, civil rights leader Jesse Jackson, said he would do his share of campaigning for Gore.

“I made a commitment to vote, to support the ticket,” said Jackson, who didn’t announce until Saturday that he would vote for the ticket. “I submitted to you that when the fall campaign comes, I will travel as much as any other senator....I will do my share of the work.”

The unusual move of having different party leaders was designed to highlight the thinning segments of the party.

Brown, the former New York Knicks basketball star, will lead off the trio in the building where he would make his professional athletic career — Madison Square Garden.

Once considered a good possibility for either of the top two spots on the ticket, Bradley decided not to run this year although he said he would still be a strong candidate in a future year.

The White House address is an opportunity for a rising party star to grab the national limelight but it is not without price.

The 1984 keynote speech by New York Gov. Mario Cuomo in which he focused on national prominence but a lackluster speech by Sen. John Glenn of Ohio in 1976 is often cited as a reason his laser presidential campaign never caught fire.

The picking of Miller was seen as a reward for his strong backing of Clinton in the Georgia primary and a chance to recognize a speaker from outside the Washington circle. Miller also helped give Clinton a crucial victory in Georgia on Super Tuesday after he had failed to win in the early primaries and caucuses in the Northeast and Midwest.

Butterworth, who was歧云’s sister, said she was stunned by the phone company’s billing practices.

“Any attempt to start a consumer information program in an attempt to get all Southern Bell to take a hard look at their bills,” said Tom Hillstrom, a special assistant to the company. “We recommend that customers contact Southern Bell and do what we have always been doing, which is charge for services and who owes us money.”

A Southern Bell spokesman said he was stunned by Butterworth’s charges. “We have never before made an announcement of the company’s billing practices,” he said.

Southern Bell has denied any corporate conspiracy to discriminate against customers, saying it took steps to make refunds and has fired the employees responsible for the billing practices.

“We’ve been cooperating with the attorney general for the past seven or eight months on all our concerns and we have tried to answer any questions. Many of the things that Butterworth has already been changed,” said Southern Bell spokesman Spencer Crotzer.

But Hillstrom said investigators for the phone company had shortchanged or denied refunds to customers who should have gotten them.

Butterworth decided to draft the civil lawsuits after negotiations stall. He attempted to settle the investigation if Southern Bell paid customers $14 million and promised to institute “management reforms” to prevent fraudulent billings in the future, Hillstrom said.

Canton, however, said, “Any type of negotiations come as a surprise to the phone company.”

Butterworth also will join a 3-year-old federal lawsuit filed against the phone company by a group of plaintiffs residents, Hillstrom said.

That pending civil suit already has derailed Bell South’s strategy of systematically charging by billing them up to $2.50 a month for a “wire maintenance” program that customers never ordered.

The charges cover phones wired and jacked in customers’ homes and brings in more than $32 million a year in revenues to Southern Bell.

Guns N' Roses lead singer arrested, charges linked to riot during '91 tour

NEW YORK (UPI) — Axel Rose, lead singer of the heavy metal rock band Guns N' Roses, was released late Sunday on $3,000 bond after being held for seven days on an outstanding extradition warrant to Missouri on charges related to a riot in 1991 at a concert in St. Louis.

Rose was arrested earlier Sunday as he passed through customs when he arrived at John F. Kennedy International airport, according to Port Authority spokesman Raymond D'Alena.

His representative said he will turn himself in to the St. Louis prosecutor's office on Tuesday. "For several weeks now Ax has wanted to deal with the charges before the U.S. tobacco trials during which his manager, said in a statement, "He's flown back to New York to drop off his girlfriend and was planning to come back to Los Angeles before flying to St. Louis. We're hoping he'll be free in our lawyers are confident this matter can be resolved quickly,... so there is no risk to the tour," — Bob Goldstein

"Our lawyers are confident this matter can be resolved quickly,... so there is no risk to the tour," — Bob Goldstein

She said Rose has been in and out of the United States several times since the warrant was issued.

"There was no need for all of this," Bribental said. "The procedures were done properly and spokesman who he returned, he would come to St. Louis to turn himself in to face the warrant this week."

The group flew to New York Sunday after a short trip to a European tour, said the July 2, 1991 riot at Riverfront Amphitheater in St. Louis began after Rose jumped into the audience to seize a camera. Authorities say security guards failed to confiscate it and the band then walked off the stage.

During the riot that followed, about 60 people were injured, 16 people were arrested and the amplifier he suffered an "humerus." He reportedly said the police officers estimated that some 3,000 of the 15,400 people present were arrested.

Rose and his lawyers blame it the melee on inadequate security.

Columbia's "League" a hit in second week of release

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The women's baseball comedy-drama "A League of Their Own" scored a hit at the Friday through-Sunday weekend box office, taking in $11.7 million at 2,606 screens in its second weekend.

Columbia's "League" has now taken in a solid $38.9 million in its first 12 days of release, giving a strong indication that it may gross as much as $100 million this summer. The movie, which cost about $40 million to make, is drawing big crowds and a strong rating hit from Columbia, "City Slickers," which wound up taking in $12 million at 1,940 screens pushing its 45-day total past $89 million.

The film has clearly become the summer's surprise hit and already raked past original expectations.

The debut of Paramount's animated comedy, "Cool World," took in a decent $5.6 million, 1,446 screens in sixth place, but that was a sharp drop from the first weekend.

The opening of Fox's romance, "Parenthood," took in $5.7 million at 1,514 screens, $5.2 million in 17 days.

For Disney, "League" is also an "out of "Aladdin," their sleeper hit from Columbia.

"League," starring Geena Davis, Tom Hanks, Madonna, lost just 17 percent of its audience during the weekend from its debut weekend and should take in notable numbers from the adult audience for several more weeks.

"League" topped the debut of Tristar's explosion-laden "Universal Soldier," which grabbed a strong $10.1 million at 1,517 screens, strong growing box office appeal of Belgian martial arts star Jean-Claude Van Damme's "The Expendables."

The film, also starring Dolph Lundgren, will probably drop off sharply this weekend.

The weekend represented a strong for Sony Corp., which owns both studios and has been the target of criticism for spending too much on box office duds such as "Random Hawk" and "Radio Flyer." "League" and "Universal Soldier" will face strong competition from Fox's new film, "The Admirable Crichton," which will start playing in on Friday.

Clinton outlines wide range of issues while campaigning before convention

N Y (U P) — Bill Clinton took his campaign to the streets of Manhattan's Lower East Side Monday, telling an enthusiastic crowd at a community center he understands the country's needs because he grew up "not in the best of circumstances."

Just hours away from the start of the convention that will crown him as the Democratic presidential nominee, Clinton appeared confident and ebullient as he spoke to the culturally diverse audience at the century-old Henry Street Settlement.

After some brief opening remarks, Clinton spent about a half-hour taking questions from children, seniors and others who had waited more than an hour in sweltering heat.

Dealing with a wide range of issues, Clinton outlined much of his domestic agenda, including health care, education, crime, and homelessness.

When a young man asked how he would pay for the new or expanded programs, Clinton agreed "that's the rub," but said the money would come from savings in defense, cutting inflation in health care costs, and raising taxes on wealthy Americans — those making over $200,000 a year.

Clinton used the question to touch on a theme being increasingly emphasized by his campaign to stress his humble, character-building origins.

Clinton urged his audience to believe his commitment to the programs he advocates, "because I grew up not in the best of circumstances," with a widowed mother and poor family and had to work his way through school. "I know what it's like."

"I'm for those things because they grew out of my life experience, I know what we need to do to turn this country around," Clinton said.

Of the need for a tax increase for wealthy Americans, Clinton said, "It's not because I'm against wealthy Americans. I'd like to be wealthy myself someday."

He explained that over the last 12 years, the wealthy have seen their income go up and their taxes go down, while middle-income families have had their income go down and taxes up. "So the wealthy have to pay their fair share again."

Clinton began the day with an early morning jog and, after his visit to the Henry Street Settlement, was to spend most of the rest of the day at his hotel working on the speech he will deliver when he accepts the nomination Thursday night.

Communications director George Stephanopoulos said Clinton had read all previous acceptance speeches as far back as Franklin Roosevelt's in 1932. "I think he was particularly impressed by Kennedy in 1960," he said.

Stephanopoulos also sought to paid an encouraging picture of the Clinton campaign's efforts to reach an understanding with Jerry Brown, who has yet to give Clinton his endorsement and is pushing for changes in the platform.

He said their had been discussions with Brown over the past few days on the platform and Brown's support.

"I think things are moving in the right direction. And I hope something can be worked out," Stephanopoulos said, but acknowledged "some differences in details."

Senate candidate Braun prepares speech for Democratic National Convention address

NEW YORK (U P) — Senate candidate Carol Moseley Braun Monday put finishing touches on her Democratic National Convention speech — the first of six women Senate candidates scheduled to address the gathering.

Braun, the Cook County recorder of deeds, gained nationwide fame when she unseated veteran Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., in the March primary, putting her in line to become the first black woman in the nation's higher chamber.

Braun, in a speech she wrote, was to use herself "as a metaphor for the Democratic Party," campaign spokesman David Eichenbaum said. "Her message will be that the American dream is still alive if Carol Moseley Braun can be here.

Also addressing delegates at the convention at which Illinois has 195 representatives — the fifth largest delegation — are Senate candidates Barbara Boxer and Dianne Feinstein of California, Lynn Yeakel of Pennsylvania, Gloria O'Dell of Kansas and Jean Lloyd-Jones of Iowa.

Of the 195 Illinois delegates, 168 are committed to Bill Clinton, 46 to Paul Tsongas and 10 to Jerry Brown.

One of the Brown delegates is Robert Romanowski, an 18-year-old political science major at DePaul University and the youngest member of the delegation.

"I'm not really interested in the system of politics. I'm more interested in helping people," Romanowski said. "When something's wrong, we have to fix it, and politics is our vehicle to do it."

Most of the delegates are elected state, county and city officials.

Illinois House Speaker Michael Madigan said he remembers 1972 when opponents of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley engineered the ouster of the Illinois delegation because it failed to include enough minorities.

Madigan said the party is coming to the realization that it cannot be "exclusive mainstream Democrats."

"You can't win an election without the people who live in the 13th Ward or in the suburbs. It appears that the national party is finally understanding that with Clinton," Madigan said.

State Democratic Party Chairman Gary LaPaille said the agenda this convention emphasizes harmony.

"We want to make sure that our delegation is not involved in small warfare with each other. We've worked too hard to get this thing together to let one or two persons pull it apart," LaPaille said.

Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley is chairing the delegation and is scheduled to give a speech Tuesday on crime and drugs.

Other members of the delegation include the mayor of Du Quoin, the Morgan County clerk and the Vermilion County treasurer.

DNC Chairman Brown battles opposition while quieting heated convention debate

NEW YORK (U P) — National Democratic Party Chairman Ron Brown met Monday with the minority delegates and hangers-on pledged to the failed presidential campaign of former California Gov. Edmund "Jerry" Brown.

Although Brown, an African-American himself, stayed cool and smiled a lot, it was not his most pleasant moment on the first day of the Democratic National Convention.

Some of the delegates got as hot as the temperature in the small, crowded meeting room and, before the meeting ended, Brown was assaulted from almost every side and called a flat-out liar.

Finally, Julia Harris, a member of Jerry Brown's group, scolded her loud and shouting colleagues and said, "The chairman came here in good faith and I am sorely disappointed at some of this behavior."

But after Brown left, Ricardo Jose, the Latino outreach director for Jerry Brown in New York City, dismissed Harris and other who were trying to keep the meeting under control. He called them self-appointed campaign leaders.

" Everybody is self-appointed in this campaign," Jose said. "I'm also self-appointed. The long knives are coming out.

While the chairman wanted to talk about electing a Democratic president and his hopes for the party, the hecklers had other thoughts on their mind.

One man twice jumped up to loudly deride Brown for backing free trade legislation. He also carried a banner calling for the end of the death penalty.

After the second outburst, he was escorted out of the room.

In addition to complaints on the issue of trade, the national chairman was berated for calling for an early decision on a nominee, enlarging the number of congressional super delegates and refusing Jerry Brown a chance to offer amendments to the platform.

"Not so gently, Brown, the chairman is, & the delegates布朗 you've not thrown out, you lost the primaries."

Under the control. He called them self-appointed campaign leaders.```

Defending champion zips past rivals to take lead of Tour de France

LUXEMBOURG (UPI) — Miguel Indurain, the 3rd Tour de France defending champion, zoomed past his competitors Monday by winning the ninth stage to take the lead into second place in the overall standings.

By capturing the 41-mile time trial, the Spaniard pulled within 21 seconds of the leader for the last seven days, Pascal Lino of France, Indurain closed to 120th place.

He completely outclass his main rivals, winning the stage in 1 hour, 19 minutes, 31 seconds, to add 17 seconds to his lead in the overall race as he finished in the stage in sixth place, 4:06 behind Lino.

Indurain's teammate, Armand DeCesaris, took second in the time trial.

Youngster Capriati preaches patience

MAHWAH, N.J. (UPI) — Patience doesn't always come easily for a 17-year-old tennis star.

Jennifer Capriati already has the fame and the fortune, but she is still waiting for her first Grand Slam title in her game.

Despite all the pressure that has attended her two-year professional career, Capriati, who will turn 18 on September 27, continues to suffer anxiety feelings about when she will make her big breakthrough.

"I just don't know when my time is, if ever," she said Monday at the Panharm Tennis Classic, where she is the defending champion.

"I'm patient, and hopefully I have a lot of years on me still. I'm not in a hurry, but I know when it is time to..."

After creating a stir by reaching the French Open semifinals in her Grand Slam debut last year and the U.S. Open quarterfinals this year, Capriati clutched the US Open trophy to her chest Monday.

She was expected to face the expectors of the public and the media, Capriati said:

"It's unfair, but I have to deal with it. I don't listen to everything. I go out and do my own thing.

"I am going to win a major, because I have been doing things for everyone else. If I do better it should be because I want to, and I know I can't think about it. I'm more than happy just to be here where I am now. It hasn't turned out as fast as I thought, but it hasn't been too slow.

"Capriati, ranked sixth in the world, played her opening match Wednesday afternoon.

China turns to free market, recruits new soccer players

BEIJING (UPI) — In an effort to build up its soccer teams, China is turning to the free market and the former Soviet Union.

The official Chinese Sports Journal reported Monday that the Chinese Football Association (CFA) had considered one of China's most competitive soccer regions, will import players from the Commonwealth of Independent States.

The introduction of foreign players will fill the vacuum of fine forwards and halfbacks on China's national teams, the newspaper said.

Two Chinese shipping companies (Ferry Lines) are ready to receive Russian and other CIS players. Each is to earn at least $1,200 per month, an emperor's wage in China.
