City preparing for 'last' Halloween

By John Wablay
Staff Writer

To ensure a smooth transition to this year's Halloween celebration, the Halloween Core Committee is trying to enlist the efforts of community and University groups.

The committee, recognizing the 1989 celebration as a pivotal year, decided Wednesday morning to continue its role as an advisory to the Carbondale City Council.

"The bottom line is safety," Carbondale Police Chief Ed Hogan said. "That's what we want and that's what we are trying to accomplish."

The committee suggested pooling with the Carbondale Parks Commission, local civic organizations, church groups, the NAACP and University students to work collectively.

"The thing that we want to attempt here now is paramount to students, but, yet, there are no students here," Hogan said.

The committee agreed to employ the cooperation of Harvey Welch Jr., vice president for student affairs, to gather a delegation of possibly six students to attend a committee meeting.

"We have to say to them, 'If you want alternative activities, what do you want?'" Hogan said.

Joanne Yantis, of University Programming, expressed concern for University students.

"Obviously, Halloween is going to happen this year,"

Yantis said. "We've got to look at this."

"I think it is so critical to get the students," Yantis said. "If they feel they're being dictated to, it won't go over as well."

The committee also said it was important to get word out beyond Carbondale to high schools, surrounding towns

So. Illinois coal miners join striking United Mine Workers

BFNTON, Ill. (UPI) — Some 8,000 Illinois coal miners joined their brethren on picket lines Wednesday in sympathy with striking United Mine Workers members in Virginia and West Virginia, bringing coal production to a virtual standstill.

UMW District 12 President Jerry Jones told a news conference at the union headquarters the walkout was not a strike, but a "grass roots" protest.

"We are viewing it as a work stoppage," Jones said. "We don't have an issue with any Illinois operators."

Gerald Hawkins, UMW international legislative liaison, said about 800 non-union miners remained on the job at the Sahara Mine in Harrisburg, the Marpo Mine in White County, the Shell Mine in Springfield and the Kerr-McGee Mine in Galatia. A union mine owned by Midland Coal Co. in Knox County also remained open.

A spokesman for the Illinois Coal Association estimated there are 12,300 union miners, coal company personnel and non-union miners in the state. Both Jones and ICA President Taylor Pensoneau estimated 8,000 miners failed to show up for work Wednesday.

"My estimate is that they are all out," Jones said. "Miners in Illinois are in sympathy with those miners in West Virginia and Virginia who are attempting to negotiate a contract after working 14 months without one."

"Nobody wins in this kind of situation," Pensoneau said. "A lot of effort has been made in recent years in Illinois to avoid these kinds of situations and we've been successful."

Miners strike will not effect SIU - director

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

The University will not immediately be effected by the wildcat coal miners' strike that spread Tuesday night to Illinois mines, David Arey, assistant director of the coal research center, said.

"As far as I know, we have a substantial supply of coal stockpiled to meet our needs," Arey said.

The University's heating and cooling facilities are entirely coal-operated, most of which is mined in Illinois. Illinois is one of the leading coal producing states in the country and Southern Illinois

New proposal would raise alcohol, tobacco taxes

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Increases in the state cigarette and liquor taxes to raise $170 million annually for education and substance abuse programs were proposed Wednesday in the Senate.

The proposal by Sen. Stanley Weaver, R-Urbana, called for raising the cigarette tax by 10 cents per pack to raise about $100 million dollars annually. The liquor tax would be raised on beer, wine and distilled spirits to raise about $70 million per year, bringing the total new revenues from the proposal to about $170 million dollars annually.

Gov. James R. Thompson gave his support for the plan as an alternative to his proposal to raise the cigarette tax by 18 cents per pack to fund education programs, drug abuse prevention and treatment and technology promotion.

"I think it's a fine plan," Thompson said. "We need $170 million to make the education plan work and to make the alcohol and drug plans work. So if we can do it on a combination of alcohol and cigarette (taxes), that's fine."

The tax increase package was amended by a voice vote of the Senate onto legislation (H2786) concerning local property taxes. The Senate is expected take a final vote on the legislation later this week.

Weaver said he proposed higher liquor taxes instead of relying solely on higher cigarette taxes because of the possible future decline in tobaccosales.

"The state has not raised the liquor tax in 20 years. My thinking was rather than go with 18 cents on cigarettes, which is experiencing a decrease of about $10 million in revenue this year, to bring the liquor tax up to the national average," Weaver said.

The proposal calls for raising the state tax on beer from 7 cents to 20 cents per gallon; raising the tax on wine from 23 cents to 61 cents per gallon; raising the tax on wine with alcohol content above 14 percent from 60 cents to $1.06 per gallon; and raising the tax on distilled spirits from $2 to $3.12 per gallon.

Senate President Philip Rock, D-Oak Park, said the higher state liquor taxes would hit Cook County liquor retailers hardest because of county liquor taxes. Current Cook County liquor taxes are 6 cents per gallon on beer, 16 cents per gallon on wine, 30 cents per gallon on wine with alcohol content above 14 percent, and $1 per gallon on distilled spirits.

Illinois traffic fatalities decrease from last year

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

The Illinois State Police reported Wednesday that there have been 28 fewer traffic fatalities this year compared to last, which one state police official called a "significant" drop for the state.

The May report lists 110 fatalities for the month and 587 for the year through May, compared to 615 fatalities last year through May. The southernmost 14 counties, District 13, reported 2 fatal accidents in May.

Adin Mitchell, special projects officer for District 13, said traffic fatalities in Illinois have been on an upward trend for the past several years.

"Any type of moderation or decline we consider a step in the right direction," Mitchell said of the new figures.

Mitchell attributed the increase in traffic fatalities to a general lowering of gasoline prices which has resulted in an increased traffic flow throughout the state.

Similarly, Mitchell attributes the lower number of fatalities so far this year to the recent rise in gasoline prices. But he also credits initiatives on the legislative and local law enforcement fronts with saving lives on the highway.

"We're more aggressively attacking the causes of fatalities," Mitchell said.

A new law requiring the elderly to take driving tests at shorter intervals, road improvements, more rigid enforcement and penalties for driving under the influence, a greater emphasis on apprehending DUI offenders and enforcement of seatbelt laws are making the roads safer, Mitchell said.

Mitchell said that fatalities See TRAFFIC, Page 5

Demonstrators call for end of Poland's communist reign

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — About 3,000 demonstrators shouted "Soviets go home" as they marched past the Soviet Consulate in Krakow Wednesday and called for the end of communism and the ouster of Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, witnesses said. The protesters, who numbered about 3,000, chanted "Jaruzelski has to go" and "down with communism" as they marched past the Soviet Consulate in the city in southern Poland.

Shamir warns against clashes among Jews

JERUSALEM (UPI) — A day after being called a traitor and robbed by Israeli settlers at a funeral, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Wednesday clashes among Jews must be prevented at all costs. Police have begun an investigation into Tuesday's funeral of Frederick Rosenfeld, which turned into a raucous demonstration against the government's handling of the 18-month-old Palestinian uprising in the Israeli-occupied territories. One settler opened fire on Arab workers following the funeral.

Worshippers, hippies arrested at Stonehenge

LONDON (UPI) — The dawning sun's rays of summer solstice shot through the main arches of Stonehenge Wednesday after 261 people hoping to reach the ancient monument to celebrate the event were arrested 2 miles away, police said. About 800 police from 12 forces prevented hundreds of pagan sun worshippers and hippies from gathering at the circle of stones to celebrate the longest day of the year in the Northern Hemisphere.

Execution of three Chinese men condemned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said the execution of three men convicted of burning a train in Shanghai Wednesday "is totally out of proportion to the crime" and the French National Assembly observed a minute of silence and appealed for clemency for others sentenced to death. The Bush administration said it "deeply regrets" the execution of the three men and was disappointed with the Chinese government.

Town remembers slain civil rights workers

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (UPI) — Busloads of civil rights activists rolled into the small town of Philadelphia Wednesday to honor the memory of three workers who were murdered 25 years ago in a drive to register black voters. The slayings opened a chapter in the civil rights struggle that became known as "Freedom Summer 1964."

Supreme Court rules against railway unions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court handed railway unions a major defeat Wednesday with a ruling that federal law gives workers no right to delay the sale of a railroad. The justices, in a 5-4 decision, said federal railroad law does not obligate the railroads to "bargain about the impending sale or to delay its implementation."

Fire causes evacuation of gold mine workers

LEAD, S.D. (UPI) — Fire broke out Wednesday in two shafts of the Homestake Mining Co., largest gold mine in the Northern Hemisphere, forcing evacuation of workers at the 4,100-foot level. Scott Zieske, Homestake public relations director, would not comment on the extent of damage, how many workers were evacuated or if all workers had reached the surface.

Neo-Nazi skinhead leader sentenced to 11 years in jail

CHICAGO (UPI) — A circuit judge Wednesday called a neo-Nazi skinhead leader an "urban terrorist" and then sentenced him to 11 years in jail for attacking a woman who wanted to rescind her membership in his group. Clark Martell, 29, the leader of CASH — Chicago Area Skinheads — was sentenced to 11 years in prison for the 1987 attack against Amy Strickland. Strickland was beaten and her face was sprayed with Mace. Her attackers then wrote "traitor" and "nigger-lover" on the walls of her apartment.

House bill to yield funds for education if passed

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Students, faculty and administrators from Illinois colleges and universities gathered in Springfield to discuss the financial woes of higher education in Illinois.

During this gathering, some of the leaders in education got to voice their opinions about the need for more state funding to the legislators, Lawrence Pettit, SIU Chancellor, said.

The main area of discussion was the Madigan-Rock income tax increase, Tim Hildebrand, Undergraduate Student Government president, said.

A vote is expected sometime this week on the proposal. The outcome of the vote could destroy higher education or keep it afloat for the next two years, Richard Wagner, executive director of the Illinois Board of Higher Education, said.

The Madigan-Rock proposal would increase income tax by 18.4 percent over the next two years, raising $726 million.

Nearly $235 million would go to fund higher education. However, this money would only be available for two years. Many legislators such as Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin, feel this proposal won't be beneficial in the long run.

Members from the Illinois State Scholarship Commission, the Illinois Student Association and the IBHE were present to have their say.

Wagner said passing the Madigan-Rock proposal is the only way the IBHE's budget will be met.

"Higher education advocates have met with members of the Illinois Senate to encourage them to vote 'yes' on House Bill 490 (the Madigan-Rock proposal)," Wagner said.

As the fiscal 80s come to an end on June 30, there is a "promise of a new day, a new era in the financing of education," Wagner said. However, state taxes must be increased for that promise to be realized.

Houseguests in fire asked to come forth

By Micki Delhaute McGowan
Staff Writer

People who fled the scene of an April 1 fire are asked by friends and relatives of Steven Schaefer to come forward.

Steven Schaefer, a University student, died after waking roommates and guests to get them out of the burning house.

When the fire started, Schaefer awakened his five roommates and the guests that had stayed over from a party the night before. The visitors fled the scene of the fire and never returned.

Apparently, no one knows who they are, said Bob Schaefer, Steven's uncle.

"We wish these students would come forward and tell who they are so we can find out more about what Steven did in the fire," Bob Schaefer said.

The more people who tell of Steven Schaefer's efforts in rescuing those in the house, the greater the chance of his getting awards, Bob Schaefer said.

Borner said, "The Boy Scouts called me. They are trying to get Steve the highest medal, but they need people to tell what Steve did to help them."

Steven Schaefer has been nominated for the Presidential Medal and the Carnegie Awards Medal. The Schaefer family is waiting to find out if Steven is going to receive those awards.

Schaefer, who had worked at a Boy Scout camp in Michigan, also is being considered for the Boy Scouts of America Hero Award.

"Close to $4,000 in Steven's name has been donated to Boy Scouts," Bob Schaefer said.

Bob Schaefer said that Steven's parents, Bill and Linda Schaefer, have received an enormous amount of mail from people who knew Steven.

Suicide rates among law students down; support group a life-saver

By Jackie Lay
Staff Writer

Within the last four years, two first-year male SIU-C law students have committed suicide.

After the death of the second law student, a peer support network for law students was established.

"There was never any real evidence that the suicides were directly related to the law school," Assistant Dean and Director of Admissions Scott Nichols said. "I guess they were a little troubled."

Thomas B. McAfee, faculty advisor for the student support network said, "I think that the suicide was a catalyst to get people talking."

"The students approached the administration with ideas and decided, along with the help of the counseling center, that first year law students should have some kind of support group," he said.

While admitting that law school is stressful, Nichols said, "People come here thinking that they have to internalize their problems. The peer support network gives the first year students some upper class shoulders to cry on." Marcus Herbert, 24, a second-year law student said his first year was "about equivalent to the marine core officers candidate school."

Herbert said that there is a lot of classroom pressure. "You're gonna get called on. It takes a lot more studying by far than as undergraduates," Herbert said.

An average of three hours of preparation for every hour of class taken is necessary for a first-year law student to do well, according to Nichols.

The class attendance policy for first-year students allows absence from up to double the amount of credit hours of the course. After that, students can be withdrawn from the course or receive a failing grade, Nichols said.

Richard Fox, 25, a third-year law student said students can receive ethical violations for not being prepared for class.

"There's never enough time to do your work," he said. "The first year is a weeding-out process, academically and emotionally."

McAfee said, "We are trying to normalize the idea that this isn't an easy experience. People shouldn't hesitate to get help if they need it."

Betty Strohl, 43, just finished her first year of study.

"It's hard trying to get 48 hours of study into a 24 hour period," she said. "But the school has different programs to help deal with stress, or you can just talk to other students."

Gale Hillen, 35, also just completed her first year.

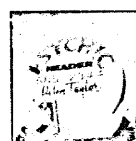

"It was the most stressful two semesters I have ever had," she said. "I'm in a unique situation. I'm married with kids and I can't spend 24 hours a day here."

Hillen said that trying to balance personal expectations together with the school's and her family takes more than 24-hours in a day and is stressful.

Howard Barrett, 33 and a third-year law student, said that a lot of his first-year stress came from financial and personal problems.

"As far as stress goes, blacks tend to be more homicidal than suicidal," he said. "I would be more likely to get rid of the source, rather than the problem."

Fall break decision forgot student views

WHILE IN direct opposition to student opinion polls conducted last spring, University President John C. Guyon's decision to install a three-day fall break and shorten the Thanksgiving break should definitely end the annual Halloween party.

The termination of the annual celebration coinciding with this break, most everyone will agree, is the motivation behind the decision.

Undoubtedly, action to control the celebration that has reached riot-like conditions needed to be taken. The reputation of the school and city, in addition to the public safety, are at stake.

It is unfortunate, however, that the solution to the celebration's problems couldn't have been handled in a way more satisfying to the majority of the students.

In a survey given last April, students voted 2-1 against the fall break. One of the major student complaints included the cost of an additional trip home close to Thanksgiving break. Students living on campus would be forced to leave.

THE END OF the celebration, however, was the issue students seemed to reject.

Halloween, whether it casts a positive or negative reflection, is a tradition at the University; and traditionally, traditions die slow and hard.

Among the factors to be considered by Guyon, were area businesses that had economic interests in maintaining the celebration. John Ryan, president of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, approved of Guyon's decision. He said that because the number of weekends student patrons would leave town remains the same, the concerns of businesses are satisfied.

We understand that a situation like Halloween cannot be solved to the satisfaction of everyone, and we appreciate the responsibility Guyon has shown to control it.

IT IS OUR hope that, in the future, the University population, from the students to the president, will remember the predicament at which we have arrived. Somewhere along the line mistakes were made in controlling the celebration while other universities have handled similar events successfully.

People other than University students have been responsible for much of the adverse conditions surrounding Halloween. It's too bad that students were not given enough of a voice in Guyon's decision. Hopefully something can be learned so that other events, in which University students participate, are not abolished.

THE LAST Springfest celebration, with 60 arrests for underage drinking, fights and can throwing may be on its way to joining Halloween.

The University should address these problems now, before they too become uncontrollable. While the fall break may subdue Halloween without much opposition, Guyon can't send students home everytime an event gets out of hand. In the future problems should be stomped in their infancy, before they have grown so large, driving students away from the University and their educational endeavors.

Food supply needs further regulation to rid 'safe' levels of harmful pesticides

Much information has come out recently about the Environmental Protection Agency doing an inadequate job protecting our food supply. Here is a sample of some of that information and important questions that need to be asked.

The majority of pesticides now available were licensed for use before the EPA established requirements for health-effects testing. In 1972 Congress directed the EPA to re-evaluate all these older chemicals by modern testing methods. By 1986, however, EPA still had not completed a final safety reassessment on any of these chemicals.

Why hasn't this testing been completed, and why have these chemicals been allowed to be on our food when health effects are not known?

The Delaney Clause of the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act prohibits the use of cancer-causing additives in food in any amount. However, the EPA will allow the use of carcinogenic pesticides on our food. Even though most experts believe there exists no safe and unsafe level of exposure to carcinogens.

Why is there a double standard when it is clear that carcinogenic pesticide residues in food are no less dangerous to human health than other carcinogenic substances added to our food?

The EPA tests for "safe" levels of pesticide residue. These levels are based on a 132-pound adult eating a diet which drastically underestimates the amount of certain foods eaten — especially fresh produce, (for example 1.2 pounds broccoli per year, per person.) It would be likely for many people to consume that yearly quota in one meal.

Since federal pesticide residue standards are based on an adult diet, it does not take into account that children receive a greater exposure to pesticides due to their greater consumption of produce compared to adults. In addition existing standards do not reflect the young's increased vulnerability to toxic chemicals. This is because children can retain a greater portion of a given dose, because the gastro-intestinal tract is more permeable and also is not capable of keeping toxins away from organs in the body or excreting toxins out of their body.

Why aren't pesticide standards based upon a realistic diet of the most vulnerable members of our society?

Because these questions, and others like them, need to be answered, a new group, Mothers and Others for Pesticide Limits, has formed. They have organized a public meeting on pesticide usage in foods. It will take place at 7 p.m. today at the Carbondale Public Library. Come and learn how to create and maintain a safe food supply. — Patrick Sweeney, Carbondale.

Past U.S. record indicates military forces used against striking railroad and mill demonstrators

In a recent editorial you implied that the capitalist government of the United States does not use its military against those who dissent and, or protest. Anyone who has a knowledge of U.S. labor history knows better.

In 1877, railroad workers went out on strike in Pittsburgh. These were joined by workers from the mills and factories as an act of support. In an effort to put down the strike, the Philadelphia militia was called in, (it was feared that the members of the Pittsburgh militia would not fire on their own townspeople.) After a few confrontations, the Pennsylvania National Guard was called in and, ultimately, federal troops were used to put down the strike. During these confrontations, which spread to other industrial cities, workers and their supporters were killed by gunfire and by having their "skulls smashed" by clubs. Then, after having terrorized the general populace, the police rounded up the organizers, who were imprisoned and, or blacklisted.

Since we receive enough "disinformation" already from the "mainstream" capitalist press, I would request that the editorial staff of the D.E. refrain from reinforcing such propaganda. Ralph Steven Newbill, graduate student in linguistics.

House rejects spending bill; asks for further compromise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House, torn by partisan divisions over money for the war against drugs, rejected Wednesday a $3.5 billion emergency spending bill and returned it to House-Senate negotiators for new efforts toward compromise.

The 218-201 vote on the fiscal 1989 supplemental spending bill was unexpected because the section triggering the most divisiveness — House demands for an extra $822 million in anti-drug money — was not included in the bill on the floor at the time.

Most House Democrats want to keep the extra anti-drug money in the bill but President Bush has threatened to veto the measure if that provision remains in the final bill.

That issue was to come up on the House floor later — and it was unclear when the whole spending measure would again come to the floor.

A total of 52 Democrats voted against the bill and 196 supported it. All but five of the 171 Republicans voted opposed the bill, which would provide additional money for certain "dire emergency" programs until the end of the 1989 fiscal year, Sept. 30.

Among the programs affected are veterans health care, student loan programs, payments to states for foster care programs, repayment to agencies for the cost of fighting fires in the West last year and money for U.N. peace-keeping.

Assistant House Democratic leader William Gray, D-Pa., blamed the defeat on Republicans, who he said voted almost unanimously against the measure to skirt a tough vote later on the anti-drug money exclusively.

The bill's most dire emergency, both sides agreed, was $340 million needed for veterans' health care services.

are increasing on two-lane highways but decreasing on interstates, indicating that the raised 65 mph speed limit, has not contributed directly to highway deaths.

But Mitchell speculated that the increased speed limit might have an indirect impact on two-lane highway fatalities.

By allowing drivers to go 65 mph on an interstate, drivers feel they can do the same on more narrow, and therefore more dangerous, two-lane highways.

and other universities that the Halloween celebration was going to be curbed.

"We have to get word to the people who have been coming in and have been taking advantage of this town," Sam McVay, chairman of the Halloween Core Committee, said.

"It's these thugs that come in from other places," McVay said. "I'm not worried about the students of the University here, most are very responsible."

Hogan said the public should know sanctions will be imposed on those who invade the street, throw beer cans and consume alcohol in public.

"People have to accept the fact that we can no longer have this event in our town," Hogan said.

"If anyone has alcohol open in the public they will be arrested and they will be sent to court."

The Carbondale City Council voted earlier this year to ban public consumption of alcohol during Halloween.

McVay agreed that next year's fall semester break will help in controlling the amount of students on campus during Halloween.

University President John C. Guyon declared a fall break to run from Oct. 26 to Oct. 30. Students will have to leave University residence halls.

The decision came without the support of students who in an April Undergraduate Student Government election voted 2-1 against the break.

Many students also are against the fall semester break because of the expense of traveling home twice in one semester.

USG President Tim Hildebrand said he thinks many students are behind the fall semester break because they believe Halloween is getting "too wild."

"My main concern is for those people who can't afford to go home," Hildebrand said. "You just can't put them out in the street."

He said Guyon has assured him that some accommodations will be provided for those students who wish to remain on campus during the fall break.

STRIKE, from Page 1

Pensoneau said there are about 8,000 miners and about 35 mines in the state.

The mines affected by walkouts include four Old Ben Coal Co. mines in Franklin County near Sesser, Benton and West Frankfort; three Peabody Coal Co. mines at Pawnee, Marissa and Baldwin; several Consolidated Coal Mines; the Crown Mine near Virden and the Wabash Coal Mine near Keensburg.

The 655 miners at Wabash walked off the job Monday, in the first job action in the state.

Old Ben spokesman Jim Spiller said the company was informed early Wednesday that 1,500 to 1,600 miners failed to show up for work at the Franklin County mines.

Gordon Cook, general manager of operations-Illinois division of Old Ben, said the company will seek relief through the National Labor Relations Board. But Paul Kvederis, Consolidated spokesman at the company's Pittsburgh headquarters, said the company would go to court to force the workers back into the mines.

Jones said, "Who knows," when questioned about the length of the walkout.

"I wouldn't begin to try to answer that question," he said.

produces 85 percent of Illinois' coal supply.

"My guess is that the strike will not be long enough to matter, but if it were to go on for some time, it could hurt us," Arey said.

The nationwide wave of wildcat strikes began last Monday when miners in Indiana and Pennsylvania struck as a measure of support for miners in Virginia and Western Virginia, who walked off the job three months ago.

Since then, thousands of miners in Kentucky, Missouri and Illinois have failed to show up for work, paralyzing the coal industry.

"It's obviously an outgrowth of the labor disputes in the eastern coal fields," Taylor Pensoneau, vice president of the Illinois Coal Association, said.

Pensoneau said his organization does not have any specific plan of action to resolve the strike.

"It's very difficult to speculate in situations such as these. We're just going to take it one day at a time," he said.

"I think it has been a positive thing for the image of the industry," he said.

Beginning of semester insomnia can be helped

By Christine Broda
Staff Writer

For many people sleep does not come easily.

The beginning of the semester may be a time of much anxiety, adapting to new schedules, new living arrangements and sleeping conditions.

Chris Labyk, coordinator of Student Health Assessment Center, said insomnia can be a major problem for people beginning a new routine.

"Short term insomnia is common and everyone will experience some trouble sleeping," Labyk said.

There are two basic types of insomniacs — people who cannot fall asleep and those who fall asleep quickly. Symptoms of the second include the inability to stay asleep and waking up early.

Of the two types, there are four major classifications of insomniacs. Tension insomnia is caused by worry, fatigue insomnia is usually cyclical and occurs in individuals who nap during the day and then cannot sleep at night.

Discomfort insomnia occurs in people who experience pain and wake up frequently. Light sleep insomnia is common in people who believe they never slept. Usually they have slept, constantly waking up. This is more common in older people.

Labyk said that sometimes insomnia is more of a self-fulfilling prophecy, people don't think that they can sleep so they are unable to.

Labyk also said insomnia is not related to weather conditions.

She suggests people experiencing sleeping disorders watch their diet for caffeine, exercise earlier in the day and do something quiet before going to bed.

Among the list of substances that can prevent a good night's sleep are: asthma remedies (which can trigger the nervous system), alcoholic drinks of all kinds, nicotine, marijuana, cocaine and many other illicit drugs, beverages with caffeine and appetite suppressants.

There is also some evidence showing that at some dosage levels alcohol reduces REM sleep, according to the Department of Health and Human Services.

"The problem with drugs and alcohol on sleep is that they may allow you to fall asleep, but the sleep will not be restful because they mess up REM sleep," Labyk said.

Irregular times of going to bed and awaking may make sleeping more difficult because the body gets used to sleep at certain times.

Labyk suggests that nothing else be done in bed besides sleeping.

"Many people eat, watch TV and read in bed which allows you to associate activities that you do when you are awake with your bed. This takes away from the idea that the bed is for sleep," she said.

Methods to help induce sleep are guided imagery, visualization and meditation, Labyk said.

Sleeping pills, sedatives and tranquilizers should be used as a last resort. When pills induce sleep, the quality of rest is generally poor.

Often people who use who use pills wake up feeling sluggish and hungover.

Another aid is relaxation tapes that are available to be checked out at the Student Health Assessment Center and the Wellness Center.

Simon circulates draft bill asking for better civil rights commission

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., is circulating a draft bill to create a new civil rights commission, convinced the current panel is too embroiled in controversy to carry on the anti-discrimination agency's work.

The draft has been shown to political and civil rights leaders, getting a quite favorable reception, and Simon will hold hearings on the proposal Thursday. The current commission is scheduled to go out of business Nov. 30.

Simon, chairman of the Senate Constitution subcommittee, has been wrestling with the future of the Civil Rights Commission, which was created in 1957 as part of one of the first of the civil rights measures enacted.

For two decades, the commission was viewed as a champion of civil rights but during the Reagan administrations, the panel was rendered virtually inactive. Clarence Pendleton, who President Ronald Reagan selected to head the commission, angered civil rights groups by repeatedly suggesting that the panel itself was not needed anymore.

A source said, "In the last several years, former supporters and critics agree, the commission has had no credibility. It's now called the laughingstock of the civil rights movement."

The commission's 1983 extension, which had to be fashioned to suit the Reagan administration, virtually neutralized the panel. The revamping Simon proposes would cut the commission's membership by one and give the Senate, rather than a president, final control over appointments.

Student's trial for burglary to be Sept. 9

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

A University student charged with battery in a residence hall last March is also charged with six counts of burglary, according to police and Jackson County Court-house records.

Court records charge Michael True with a burglary spree on December 14, 1987 in which he allegedly gained entrance to six vehicles "with the intent to commit a theft" parked in municipal parking lots on Washington street and north of the Route 51 pedestrian overpass.

SIU security reports say police apprehended True after noticing a "suspicious white male" in the parking lot north of the overpass. Reports say True fled from police and was overtaken on the railroad tracks.

True is set to face a jury trial for the burglary charges September 9, while August 8 is the pretrial hearing for the charge of battery.

True was charged with battery for allegedly knocking down a Felts Hall residence assistant, Eric Frazier, when Frazier arrived at a dormitory room to investigate a party and a semiautomatic rifle that was supposed to be in the room.

Police later found the rifle and 108 rounds of ammunition and charged Garth Mantke with possession of a semiautomatic rifle without a firearm owner's identification card.

Administration plans no further actions on China

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush's administration said Wednesday it "deeply regrets" the execution of three pro-democracy protesters in China but is not contemplating further U.S. sanctions against the Chinese government.

"The statements we have made and the actions we have already taken... speak fully to our concern about the tragic events in China," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said in a prepared statement. "We will continue, to the best of our ability, to deal appropriately with the extremely troubling situation and unfolding events in China."

While the United States does not consider it "business as usual" with the Chinese government, "we are not inclined to take actions that are harmful to the Chinese people," Fitzwater explained. He added frankly, "The internal convulsions continue in China despite world opinion."

The statement came after Bush passed up several opportunities to comment personally on the executions Wednesday, leaving it to Vice President Dan Quayle and Secretary of State James Baker to express U.S. dismay. "We urge restraint, we urge compliance with human rights and we're very disappointed,"

Quayle told reporters in the Capitol. "We hope that they will seek restraint and we hope that China will move in a direction that will improve our relations rather than let them deteriorate."

Baker, speaking after an Oval Office meeting between the president and West German Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich-Genscher, added, "I would simply say that we deeply regret the fact that these executions have gone forward despite international appeals for clemency."

Bush believes his actions to date "are the appropriate response," Baker said, because "there is an important relationship" between the United States and China "that we seek to preserve." Baker concluded, "The United States is not contemplating any additional action at this time."

Fitzwater said Bush has not continued efforts to contact Chinese officials because his "judgment is that it's best not to pursue direct contact" now.

Several congressmen who met with the president on other matters Wednesday praised the steps he has taken so far. Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., told reporters that Bush has been "making tough statements" while keeping the lines to China open.

He said the United States should continue to ensure that dissident Fang Lizhi, who is being protected in the U.S. Embassy in Beijing, "remains free."

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said Bush should make it clear the United States "is not going to force (Chinese) students to go home. Those students are the cream of the crop."

Late Tuesday, Bush announced the United States was barring high-level contacts between Cabinet-level American officials and moved to urge international financial institutions to deny some $1.4 billion in pending loans to China.

Defeat of federal pay raise forces Heller to resign as Fed governor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal Reserve Board Governor H. Robert Heller Wednesday announced his resignation after less than three years of service, saying the recent congressional defeat of a pay raise for federal employees was a key factor in his decision.

Heller, 49, appointed to the board by President Ronald Reagan and sworn in Aug. 19, 1986, will become executive vice president of Visa International in San Mateo, Calif., and will receive what he said will be a "pretty substantial" raise.

His departure will give President Bush his first chance to fill one of the seven slots on the Board of Governors, subject to approval by the Senate. Heller filled an unexpired term that runs until 1996.

He denied he was leaving because of policy reasons, describing the board as united in the fight against inflation. In his resignation letter to Bush dated June 20, Heller called his tenure a time of "unprecedented economic prosperity" and "significant" changes in banking regulation.

He told reporters Wednesday his decision to leave took "a lot of soul searching" and that financial concerns were a "key reason." Heller added that his children, ages 14 and 11, will be starting high school and middle school, respectively, this year, making it easier to move now than later.

"Financially, it gets tougher and tougher. As you know there have been long debates about pay in the federal area and (that) certainly hasn't come to any fruition," he said. "I certainly wouldn't go if pay wasn't an issue."

A proposed 51 percent pay increase from $89,500 to $135,000 for the federal judiciary, Congress and most senior members of the executive branch was defeated in February as legislators buckled under public pressure, fearing voter retaliation for the hefty increases at a time of budget austerity.

Reagan proposed the raise in his final days in office. Bush has said he backs an increase, but has not made a specific proposal.

Heller's resignation will take effect July 31. But Heller said he would not participate in the July 5-6 meeting of the Federal Open Market Committee so he would not be leaving the Fed with inside information on interest rates.

Born in Cologne, Germany, Heller came to America shortly after high school and was known during his time on the board as an expert on international economics.

Chicago company recalls tainted meat from 26 states

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — The discovery of tainted beef at seven Kansas institutions led Balter Packing Co. Inc. of Chicago to voluntarily recall 331,000 pounds of beef and turkey products from 26 states, officials said Wednesday.

"We haven't had any complaints of illness, at least to my knowledge," said Ben Ackerman, in charge of U.S. Department of Agriculture compliance inspections for Kansas and Missouri.

Balter has "totally reimbursed" Kansas for the approximately $19,000 worth of meat delivered on March and April contracts, said Jay Oyler, state purchasing officer.

Besides Kansas, the USDA said Balter voluntarily recalled meat it delivered to Alabama, Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

Inspectors with the Kansas Board of Agriculture notified the USDA of problems with the meat delivered to Kansas state prisons and hospitals.

"As a result, it got looked into all the way around the country" and Balter began a voluntary recall May 18, Ackerman said.

Ackerman said the meat was delivered to colleges, prisons and other state and federal institutions between Jan. 1 and May 4.

"It doesn't smell right and it doesn't look right," Pete Wannamaker, administrative officer for the Kansas Agriculture Board's meat and poultry inspections, said of the ground beef delivered to Kansas.

"So probably what we had was a high bacteria load on that product. We didn't have any reports of anybody getting sick," he said.

The meat looked normal while frozen but turned a whitish or tannish color as it defrosted and smelled bad when cooked, Wannamaker said. Meat that Balter Packing buys from a variety of packers is blended at its Chicago plant, said Vice President Stewart Balter.

"We buy meat from all over ... and then we grind it up and somehow the bacteria count got high or was higher than it should have been and the government destroyed it," Balter said.

He said the plant has instituted more testing to prevent a repeat of the problem.

Wannamaker said he suspected "temperature abuse" after the meat was processed. Kansas sent the 19,000 pounds of bad meat to rendering plants, where "they'll process that probably into animal food," Wannamaker said.

"At this point in time, everything appears to be under control at the plant," Ackerman said. The federal government has taken over from Illinois the meat-inspecting responsibilities at Balter, however, Ackerman said.

Group seeks to ease public's produce fears

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's produce growers and members of a House panel called Wednesday for an independent scientific group to balance public fear of chemicals and the farmer's need to use pesticides on fruits and vegetables.

"People are going to have to continue to eat vegetables," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif. "What we have to do is eliminate the fear surrounding it."

Panetta told members of a House Agriculture subcommittee that an independent group using the latest scientific data on agricultural chemicals is needed to quell the fears of consumers and producers about pesticides.

"It is not in the best interest of the public ... to have to make decisions based on fear," Panetta said. "There has to be a credible group that both the consumer and the producer can turn to."

Subcommittee Chairman Charles Hatcher, D-Ga., said the recent public alarm over use of the apple-ripening Alar and the discovery of traces of cyanide on a few Chilean grapes has meant the loss of consumer "trust in fresh fruits and vegetables generally."

Producer groups have called for an independent group to rule on chemical safety in the wake of the Alar incident. As a result of a citizen group's claim that Alar sprayed on apples could cause cancer, apple growers suffered market losses, even though the EPA originally said the chemical was safe.

Alar has since been voluntarily removed from the market by its sole manufacturer, Unionroyal Chemical Co. of Connecticut.

Court rules flag-burning legal as political protest

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that burning of the American flag as a political protest is protected by the First Amendment of the Constitution.

The court's action came in a case brought by the state of Texas, which was seeking to reinstate a one-year prison sentence and fine given to a man who burned a U.S. flag during a protest of Reagan administration policies.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled on April 20, 1988, that the action by Gregory Lee Johnson was protected under the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of speech.

The high court affirmed that decision on a 5-4 vote in an opinion by Justice William Brennan, the court's oldest and most liberal member, who was joined by the two newest conservatives on the bench, Justices Antonin Scalia and Anthony Kennedy, as well as Thurgood Marshall and Harry Blackmun.

Brennan said that Johnson's burning of the flag during a demonstration related to the 1984 Republican National Convention in Dallas made the act an expression and therefore enabled him to invoke the protection of the First Amendment.

"We do not consecrate the flag by punishing its desecration, for in doing so we dilute the freedom that this cherished emblem represents," Brennan wrote.

He concluded, "Nor does the state's interest in preserving the flag as a symbol of nationhood and national unity justify his criminal conviction for engaging in political expression."

Dissenting were Justices Byron White, Sandra Day O'Connor and John Paul Stevens, as well as Chief Justice William Rehnquist, who used an array of historic and patriotic references to buttress his arguments.

Rehnquist cited "The Star-Spangled Banner," referred to the World War II flag-raising at Iwo Jima, and quoted John Greenleaf Whittier's Civil War poem "Barbara Frietchie" — "Shoot if you must this old gray head, but spare your country's flag, she said."

Kennedy, while praising Brennan's ruling, said in a separate concurrence that he agreed with the dissenters that the "flag holds a lonely place of honor in an age when absolutes are distrusted and simple truths are burdened by unneeded apologies."

But he added, "With all respect to those views, I do not believe the Constitution gives us the right to rule as the dissenting members of the court urge, however painful this judgment is to announce."

"It is poignant but fundamental that the flag protects those who hold it in contempt."

In other action Wednesday,

the court:

—Refused to rule on the constitutionality of a Massachusetts pornography law that made it a crime to photograph a child in the nude. The court said that since the law has not been changed, there was no longer a controversy.

—Affirmed a ruling upholding the Justice Department's relationship with the ABA Standing Committee on Federal Judiciary.

Dissenting in the flag case.

Rehnquist wrote acidly, "The court decides that the American flag is just another symbol, about which not only must opinions pro and con be tolerated, but for which the most minimal public respect may not be enjoined."

"The government may conscript men into the armed forces where they must fight and perhaps die for the flag, but the government may not prohibit the public burning of the banner under which they fight."

Court favors newspapers in rape case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that damages could not be imposed on a newspaper for the truthful publication of a rape victim's name.

The court, in a 6-3 decision by Justice Thurgood Marshall, said that imposing liability on a newspaper does not serve "a need to further a state interest of the highest order."

The court, in a case concerning a Florida law, said that punishing the publication of a rape victim's name is "too precipitous a means of advancing" the state interests in protecting the privacy and safety of victims and in encouraging victims to report crimes.

Marshall was joined in his ruling by Justices William Brennan, Harry Blackmun, John Paul Stevens, Anthony Kennedy and Antonin Scalia.

The court's ruling is a victory for the news media, which has been concerned about facing lawsuits — and thousands of dollars in damages — for the accurate publication of information supplied by the police.

However, the court cautioned it was not accepting the newspaper's "invitation (in its appeal) to hold broadly that truthful publication may never be punished."

The court left open the possibility that, "in a proper case, imposing civil sanctions for publication of the name of a rape victim might be so overwhelmingly necessary" as to meet constitutional safeguards.

In dissent, Justice Byron White, joined by Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, said, "If the First Amendment prohibits wholly private persons from recovering for the publication of the facts that she was raped, I doubt that there will remain any 'private facts' which persons may assume will not be published by the newspapers, or broadcast on television."

The case concerned a Florida law that made it a crime to publish or broadcast the "name, address, or any other identifying fact or information of the victim of any sexual offense."

Prize winning 'South Pacific' to start Summer Playhouse

By Carrie Pomeroy
Staff Writer

McLeod Theatre will come alive with song, comedy, romance and a hint of social commentary when Rodgers and Hammerstein's classic musical "South Pacific" premieres at 8 p.m. June 30.

Director Mike Morris describes the musical, which is set during World War II, as a story of "people thrown together by tumultuous events."

The play focuses on Nellie Forbush, a Navy nurse from Little Rock, Ark., who learns not to judge people by outward appearances through her love for a widowed French planter, Emile Debecque.

Other main characters include Lt. Joe Cable, a Marine who falls in love with a native girl named Liat; con man Luther Billis; and Bloody Mary.

"South Pacific," which opened in 1949 and ran 1,925 performances on Broadway, is one of the few musicals that has won a Pulitzer Prize. Although it is familiar to many musical theater fans, the McLeod Theatre production has a few surprises in store, according to Morris.

For example, Morris said it was necessary to change the play's traditional set design to accommodate the McLeod Theatre stage and the production's budget.

The original production of "South Pacific" had five full stage sets. This production creates the illusion of many different sets with an innovative design by master of fine arts candidate Mark Parrott.

The set change required some consolidation of scenes and music played between scene changes, which was done by Morris. The result, Morris says, is a more fast-paced show.

Despite these minor changes, audiences can expect to hear all of the classic songs popularized by the musical, including "Some Enchanted Evening" and "I'm Gonna Wash That Man Right Outa My Hair."

Among the show's cast members are Linda Moshier from the University of Kansas, who plays Nellie, and John McGhee, prospective music graduate student, as Emile. Joe Cable is played by Clay Hulse, a music graduate student. Rob Hurst as Luther Billis and Pam Burns as Bloody Mary round out the cast.

Performance dates for "South Pacific" are June 30, July 1, 2, 6, 7, 8, and 9. All Thursday, Friday and Saturday performances begin at 8 p.m. Sunday performances are at 2 p.m. Tickets are $8 for adults, $7 for senior citizens, $6 for children under 12, and $4 for students with a valid I.D.

Baryshnikov retiring after 10 years as American Ballet Theater director

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mikhail Baryshnikov, who is exploring new theatrical worlds to conquer, will retire as artistic director of the American Ballet Theater at the conclusion of its 1990 season next August, it was announced Wednesday.

"I will have given 10 years to the company, and it has always been a true challenge," said the 41-year-old Russian-born dancer who currently is starring on Broadway in a play, "Metamorphosis." "I'm relinquishing the position in order to pursue other professional options."

Baryshnikov has danced less and less in recent years, due to serious leg injuries and increasing non-dancing responsibilities that go with the artistic direction of one of the great ballet companies of the world, now in its 50th season.

He took leave of ABT last February to appear in "Metamorphosis" performances at Duke University. The play came to Broadway May 7 and played through June 12, when Baryshnikov returned to ABT for the New York premiere of his newly choreographed "Swan Lake" at the Metropolitan Opera House.

He resumed performances of "Metamorphosis" June 12 for a limited-run ending July 15. The play is a dramatization of Franz Kafka's novella of the same title about a traveling salesman, played by Baryshnikov, who turns into a beetle. The play has attracted large audiences since its opening in spite of mixed reviews.

Baryshnikov was nominated for a Tony Award for best actor in a play, but lost to Philip Bosco, star of "Lend Me a Tenor," when the awards were announced June 4.

The Kirov-trained star, who defected while dancing with the touring Bolshoi company in Canada in 1974, has made no secret of his plans for an acting career after his dancing days are over. He made his acting debut in a film about ballet, "The Turning Point," in 1976.

His finest acting performance was in the semi-autobiographical 1985 film, "White Nights," released in 1985, the same year he appeared in the film "That's Dancing."

Baryshnikov made his debut with ABT one month after his defection, partnering Natalia Makarova in "Giselle."

Matuszak eulogized as family man, great athlete

OAK CREEK, Wis. (UPI) — Former Oakland Raider John Matuszak was remembered Wednesday as a caring family man and great football player whose wild image belied the real demeanor of the man.

"In three memorable decades, we had the greatest players, the greatest coaches," said Al Davis, owner of the now-Los Angeles Raiders. "During the '60s, '70s and '80s the Raiders had the best record in pro sports. And John Matuszak was one of those great players."

Matuszak died Saturday at the age of 38 in Burbank, Calif. The cause of death had not yet been determined.

About 500 people including friends, family and former teammates of Matuszak crowded into St. Matthew's Church for the 90-minute funeral.

"John will be remembered for more than just his accomplishments as a professional football player," said the Rev. Joseph G. Sukup. "He will be remembered for more than his accomplishments in television or in the movies."

"It was this unheralded side of John, the side of John that didn't hit the headlines that became very clear to me when I talked with his family the last couple days," Sukup said. "He kept his family uppermost in his mind and his heart. Even when they were separated by great distances, his family was No. 1 in his life."

Mickey Marvin, a former teammate and Matuszak's roommate, said many people thought they knew Matuszak, "but they don't really know him."

"I know him because I lived with him," he said. "The times I remember are not the victories, the times that I remember most were the tears."

He recalled the time Matuszak came to North Carolina to help out at a children's football camp Marvin was running.

"My whole family loved that big guy. You can tell a lot about a man by how he deals with children," Marvin said. "That camp might as well have been the John Matuszak football camp instead of the Mickey Marvin football camp. He was so precious with those kids. They were just hanging all over this big giant of a man. But he wasn't just a big man physically, he had a big heart. 'I've lost a great friend,' Marvin said."

Other former teammates in attendance were Ted Hendricks, Phil Villapiano, Rod Martin and Gene Upshaw.

Upshaw, now head of the NFL Players' Association, said after the service that the team always has been a family.

"This is when we really pull together," he said. "That's what we've always been able to do. Just to be here was a shocker, but regardless of what our schedules are, we have to come and say goodbye to a friend and a teammate."

"We all loved him and that's all part of the Raider tradition," Upshaw said. "A lot can be said about the silver and black, the pride and poise and commitment to excellence, but that commitment goes on, even through something like this."

Matuszak, a Milwaukee native, grew up in Oak Creek. He attended Oak Creek High School, the University of Missouri and the University of Tampa before becoming the No. 1 pick in the 1973 NFL draft, going to Houston.

He was traded to Kansas City and Washington and then was signed by Oakland in 1976. He played as a defensive end with Oakland until 1981, during which time the team won two Super Bowls, and was on injured reserve during the 1982 season. He retired at the end of 1982 and pursued an acting career.

"John Matuszak will not be enshrined in the (pro football) Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, because he did not have all the years of glory so necessary to be enshrined there," Davis said. "But I say this to you, in the Raider Hall of Fame and in the hearts of the Raider family, his name is enshrined and will live on in perpetuity for his great contributions to the greatness of the Raiders."

Despite his contributions to two Raider Super Bowl victories, many felt the 6-foot-8, 260-pound Matuszak never fulfilled the expectations of him as a football player and instead focused attention on his documented problems with alcohol and drugs and several brushes with the law.

Emblematic of his sometimes contradictory career and lifestyle, Matuszak's memorial service closed with the playing of a tape of the Rolling Stones' song, "You Can't Always Get What You Want."

and is excited about our position."

Scott said Fishback would be a boon to the program's recruiting.

"Myra will be involved in all aspects of our program, but a primary focus will be recruiting."

"(Fishback) has a wealth of contacts in Tennessee and Georgia, which will help us expand our recruiting base," Scott said. Before she arrives in Carbondale, Fishback will be scouting for recruits at the AAU National Women's Basketball Tournament in West Virginia.

Fishback just completed work on her master's degree in education at Tennessee Tech. She got her bachelor's from Tech in 1985, and then coached two years of girl's basketball.

Olympic medalist, Western coach dies

MACOMB, Ill. (UPI) — Two-time Olympic gold medalist Lee Calhoun, the first man to win successive Olympic high hurdle titles, died Wednesday at Hamot Medical Center in Erie, Pa., from complications relating to a stroke he suffered earlier this year.

Calhoun, 56, who had been in ill-health the past four years, was the head track and field coach at Western Illinois University in Macomb since 1980. Prior to that, he served as an assistant and head coach at Yale (1970-80) and Grambling (1967-70).

"Our hearts go out to Lee's family and friends," said Gil Peterson, director of athletics development and men's athletics at WIU. "Lee touched the lives of all his athletes and colleagues at Western Illinois. His own tremendous accomplishments in the sport carries over in all that he did."

Virtually an unknown runner at the 1956 Melbourne games, Calhoun surprised U.S. teammate and race favorite Jack Davis in a photo finish in the 100-yard hurdles and set a new Olympic record.

Pete Rose Jr. making own reputation in baseball

ERIE, Pa. (SHNS) — It will not happen like this every night. Pete Rose Jr., 19, has been around baseball long enough to understand that. He is worldly enough to have expected the reception he got in his first at-bat with the Class A Erie Orioles. Any sports fan could guess what happened.

"Hey, Pete!" one fan yelled within earshot of Pete's mother, Karolyn Rose. "Bet you 10-to-1 you don't get a hit!"

It never figured to be easy to be a baseball player named Pete Rose Jr. Still, he couldn't have picked a harder year to start. Young Pete's first summer of pro ball is his father's most trying time. But, Pete Jr. can't be concerned with that. He has a career to begin, a career off to a less-than-auspicious opening. He grounded out weakly to second in that first at-bat.

WHEN HE CAME to bat in the fourth inning, the hecklers were back, feeling just a bit more bold.

"You know, some of the things they say, you have to laugh at," said Karolyn, divorced from Pete Sr. for nine years. "I really don't mind it, as long as it's not vicious. The vicious stuff is not fair to him because he knows nothing."

He silenced the hecklers in

—Erie Orioles Manager Bobby Tolan

his second at-bat. He drove a 3-2 fastball over the right-field wall for his first New York-Penn League home run. It was an impressive clout, clearing the fence near the 365 marker and bouncing off a school building.

WHEN ROSE CAME up the third time, heckling was replaced by spontaneous rhythmic chants of "Pete! Pete!"

If that sounds too much like a movie script, so be it. In this summer of baseball movies, what's wrong with a sequel, Pete Rose II. Only he's not coming soon to a city near you, unless you live in Elmira or Pittsfield.

Young Rose figures to be an attraction in the league that launched Warren Spahn, Wade Boggs and, yes, even Pete Rose Sr. Nobody knew how famous they were going to be until they were long gone. Rose II is the reverse. He's more famous now than he might be later. Actually, Rose has been famous so long, attention figures to be the least of his worries as he works his way up the minors.

"THIS STUFF IS sort of old to me," he said of the burden of carrying his father's name. "Guys have been saying a lot of stuff since I was in Little League. I just go up to the plate and tune it out."

Rather than hide from comparisons with his famous father, he seems to welcome them. He wears his father's No. 14 and generally carries himself in a way that invites the "hot dog" description. Over his locker and inside his cap he has written the words, "It's Showtime."

"This is what I want to do. This is what I've always wanted to do."

Baseball fans can pick him out without a scorecard, even though he is two inches taller (6-1) than his father and his hair is a more distinctive red. Unlike his father, he bats strictly left-handed.

"MY FATHER WANTED me to hit one way till I learn to do it well. Then I can switch.

But I'm still learning."

His crouch at the plate is much less exaggerated than his father's was. Pete Jr. holds his hands high, near his head. It is the stance of a power hitter. Pete believes he has more power than his dad.

"He hasn't really shown power yet," said Don Buford, hitting instructor for the Baltimore Orioles. "Extra-base power, yes, but not home-run power. Like a lot of young kids, he still has some bad habits from hitting with aluminum bats. They all need to be re-trained. His swing is very good, but he still has a tendency to swing off his front foot. But as he gets more at-bats, the home runs should come."

ROSE HAD TROUBLE earlier at Frederick, Md., another Class A team in the Orioles' organization. He struggled so badly at bat, he was sent back to extended spring training and even spent some time in Cincinnati working out with his father. He also became superstitious.

"He's always worn No. 14," said his mother. "He's been 14 since he was born. But when he was at Frederick, he wore 21. When he was sent back down, he switched back to 14."

Rose is a rarity who might take longer to get adjusted to the minors than the majors.

"I've been in just about every clubhouse in the National League. I feel real comfortable there."

"I remember Pete when he was just a snot-nosed little kid," said Bobby Tolan, his manager here and a former teammate of his father's at Cincinnati. "Now, he's just a bigger snot-nosed kid."

APART FROM SPRING training, Tolan has seen very little of Rose. He plans to use him at third base, but promises no special treatment.

"If he does a good job, he plays. But all of the kids here need to play. It's unfortunate, but some have to sit on the bench. Nobody on this team is going to play every day. He'll miss 10-15 games, just like everybody else does.

"To me, he's just another kid. If he messes up, I'm going to chew him out. I can't be worrying what his dad might think of it."

Pete has a plan for dealing with the media and questions about his father's gambling. He accepts all interviews and simply chooses not to discuss matters involving his father's case. That's similar to the way his father is handling things.

"I THINK HE'S handled the pressure really well," said Mrs. Rose. "Of course, he's used to pressure. He told me down in the Carolina League, some fans were waving dollar bills at him and taunting him. I told him he should have told them to throw the money at him. He could use it, he's only making a minor-league salary."

was secretly taped by an FBI informer. The report states that a transcript of the recording has been turned over to investigators for Commissioner Giamatti.

The Plain Dealer said Hamilton County court records contain excerpts from the transcripts of a conversation April 4, 1988, between Mike Bertolini and Paul Janzen. Bertolini operates Pete Rose Hit King Inc., an autograph and memorabilia business he owns with Rose, and Janzen is a bodybuilder and former friend of Rose who says he placed bets for the Reds' manager.

Janzen was working for the FBI when he made the tape.

"Did you already get settled up with Pete?" the transcript said Bertolini asked Janzen.

"He still owes me about 12 grand," Janzen replied.

Later in the conversation, Janzen told Bertolini, "So he's (Rose) in to me for about anywhere from ... I don't know, once you figure out all the autographed stuff, he probably owes me anywhere from like 10 to 12 thousand."

Rose was not involved in the conversation.

Bertolini, who has denied any knowledge of Rose's alleged betting, appeared in Cincinnati last month before a federal grand jury reportedly investigating Rose's income tax returns.

One of Rose's lawyers, Roger Makley, said he listened to the entire tape, but called it inconclusive.

The tapes and transcripts also are raised in Rose's lawsuit, with the suit charging Giamatti's investigators obtained FBI and Justice Department material in violation of Rose's constitutional rights.

On Tuesday, Rose's lawyers filed a notice of deposition — similar to a subpoena — requiring Giamatti to appear in Cincinnati Monday with all documents and other material obtained from federal prosecutors. The notice specifically asked for material supplied by William Hunt and Robert Brichler, two assistant U.S. attorneys handling the grand jury investigation into Rose's taxes.

The Plain Dealer said court records in Cincinnati show John Dowd, a former federal prosecutor and Giamatti's principal investigator, has given Rose's lawyers six tapes made by Janzen. The records do not say how Dowd obtained them.

In a May 15, 1989, letter to Dowd, Makley said, "It is obvious from our conversations during the course of this investigation, as well as your report and from other sources, that Janzen has made and/or been involved in the making of a number of taped conversations by telephone and otherwise, either on his own or in cooperation with the government.

Rose's lawyers have 5 witnesses set for hearing

CINCINNATI—Lawyers for Pete Rose and Major League Baseball have lined up five witnesses to testify Thursday on whether the baseball commissioner's hearing into the Reds manager's alleged gambling activities and his future in baseball should be blocked.

Sources close to the Rose gambling investigation said

Pete Rose Jr. making his own name in minors
—Page 15

Wednesday that Rose lawyers Reuven Katz, Robert Pitcairn Jr. and Roger Makley are to testify at a Thursday hearing before Hamilton County Common Pleas Court Judge Norbert Nadel. Nadel is considering a request to delay Rose's hearing Monday before baseball Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti and to remove the commissioner from deciding his future in baseball.

Special investigator John Dowd and baseball's security chief Kevin Hallinan are also expected to testify, a source said.

Neither Rose nor Giamatti are expected to testify, the sources said. The Reds will be in Atlanta playing the Braves Thursday and Rose may not attend the hearing.

At the heart of the gambling accusations is a tape recording of a telephone conversation between two associates of Rose, which allegedly detail the gambling debts of the embattled Cincinnati manager.

According to a report Wednesday by the Cleveland Plain Dealer, the conversation

Rec Center addition near completion

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

Finishing touches are being made on the $6.2 million Fitness Center addition to the University's Recreation Center, which puts the project on schedule to open in the early fall semester, according to William P. McMinn, Recreation Center assistant director.

"It has taken about the time we expected," said McMinn. "We are close to being on schedule." When the project broke ground last July, it was estimated that the addition would be completed in 14 to 16 months.

Allen A. Haake, the University's supervising architect, said the addition is about three-quarters complete. "It's completely enclosed now, and crews are painting the interior," said Allen A. Haake, SIU-C's supervising architect.

Crews also need to finish floor surfaces, complete electrical work and finish installing the heating and cooling system, before joggers can make use of an indoor track and racquetball players start hitting balls.

The Fitness Center, which is being built onto the northeast corner of the existing Rec Center, will add 63,000 square feet. Its features include an NCAA-standard running track, with room for jumping vaulting events, three maplewood gym floors, a multi-purpose playing court, a 3500 square-foot weight room with machines and free weights, two squash courts and six racquetball courts. A carpeted three-lane jogging track will be suspended above the running oval. SIU-C women's track and field coach Don DeNoon said the addition of the indoor running track will be a boost for his program.

"It will mean everything to us because now we will have a consistent place to train, especially in the winter months," said DeNoon. "We will have a home atmosphere for competition and it will also help our recruiting."

Although the Saluki women have won three consecutive Gateway Conference indoor track titles, training for the competition has been difficult.

"It was difficult because we had to train outside during the winter months," said DeNoon. "Sometimes we could train in the Davies Gym Arena to get away from the weather. This addition is going to mean everything to our track program."

McMinn said the addition also should alleviate the overcrowded conditions that occur in the aerobics classes during the fall and spring semesters.

"This addition will certainly enhance the quality of the Rec Center," added McMinn. "We will have greater flexibility. Before this addition, we were so overcrowded here that we didn't have time for casual use. We will be able to do that now."

The money for the Rec Center comes from student fees. A portion of the $53-per-semester fee goes towards the new addition.

"We actually started the process for this addition about three years ago with the undergraduate and graduate student organizations," said McMinn. "We received almost unanimous support from the undergraduate student organizations."

"The students have been very gracious and it looks like the dream is becoming a reality," McMinn said.

Mahan, Fitzpatrick get first Iubelt award

The George Iubelt Award, recently established by Intercollegiate Athletics at SIU-C to honor top defensive players for the Salukis in men and women's basketball, goes this year to Sterling Mahan and Dana Fitzpatrick.

The award will be bestowed annually in recognition of Iubelt's 25 years of coaching service to SIU-C men's and women's basketball. Iubelt, a native of Orient, Ill., and a 1949 University graduate long noted for his defensive expertise, recently retired from the sidelines. He was an assistant with the Saluki men from 1959 to 1977 and with the Saluki women from 1982 to his retirement.

"Coach Iubelt has had a tremendous influence on men and women's basketball at SIU," said Scott, who came up with the honor. "The award shows everyone's appreciation of his many contributions over the years. He was a great teacher and his main emphasis was always defense.

Iubelt has said the overall strategy of the women's team has always been defense. He has been engrained with his defensive strategy since first assisting men's coach Jack Hartman in 1959. Hartman, and Iubelt, would lead the Salukis to the 1967 National Invitational Tournament title.

Dana Fitzpatrick

The defensive strategies have survived the years and are used by Mahan, a sophomore guard from Maywood, who was a valuable sixth man for Coach Rich Herrin and the Saluki men this season. Despite starting only seven of 33 games, he averaged 8.9 points and was third for SIU in assists (64) and steals (31).

"Sterling is a very aggressive, unselfish player," Herrin said. "He's always ready to do anything possible to make the team better. It doesn't matter to him that good defensive play often goes unnoticed. That kind of thing never affects his performance."

Mahan helped spark SIU-C to a 20-14 season, which included a second place finish in the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament and an NIT bid. The latter marked the school's first post-season appearance since 1977.

Fitzpatrick, a senior guard from St. Louis, is described by Scott as "SIU's best defensive player ever." She led the Saluki women in assists (116), steals (61), and minutes played (944), while starting all 29 games.

The Saluki women finished 19-10 overall and second in Gateway Conference play with Fitzpatrick ranked 9th in the league in assists and steals. With five steals in back-to-back wins over Indiana State and Drake, and three or more steals in nine outings, her season total ranks fifth best all-time at the University.

"I can't think of a player we've had more deserving of the first Iubelt Award," Scott said. "Dana's defense all season long was a thing to behold and her outstanding leadership keyed the team's success."

Assistant to aid women's recruiting

The SIU-C women's basketball team Wednesday named Myra Fishback as a replacement for recently retired assistant coach George Iubelt.

Fishback, a 27-year-old native of Shelbyville, Tenn., just finished a graduate assistantship at Tennessee Tech in Cookeville. She begins her job as a Saluki coach July 1. She was one of 46 applicants for the job and joins Julie Beck as an assistant on Head Coach Cindy Scott's staff.

"What impressed me most about Myra is that she comes from established, quality programs at both the high school and college level," Scott said. "She's extremely professional
