Request for prayer

Supreme Court rejects Bush administration's proposal for public schools

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Wednesday retained the strict standard in use for more than two decades to determine the separation of church and state, ruling that official prayer is not permitted as part of public school graduations.

By a 5-4 vote, the court rejected a request from the Bush administration to rule that the First Amendment's "establishment clause" would be violated only if the government were to "coerce" citizens to actively participate in religion.

The court retained the basis of its 1971 Lemon decision, which gives lower courts guidance on how to gauge the First Amendment's mandate of a separation of church and state.

The Lemon test allows a government practice only if it has a "secular purpose," has a principal effect that "neither advances nor inhibits religion," and does not foster "excessive government entanglement with religion."

"The First Amendment's religion clauses mean that religious beliefs and religious expression are too precious to be either proscribed or prescribed by the state," Justice Anthony Kennedy wrote for the majority Wednesday.

"The degree of school involvement here made it clear that the graduation prayers bore the imprint of the state and thus put school-age children who objected in an untenable position," he wrote.

The high court affirmed a decision of the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that use of the word "God" was illegal in an invocation and benediction at a middle school graduation in Providence, R.I.

The government had wanted the court to use this case to fashion a new standard that would have dropped all three protections of Lemon for a simple statement that the First Amendment directive that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion" is never violated "absent some

CSX freight strikes, halting rail system

Amtrak delays strike for 48 hours

Machinists went on strike against the CSX freight system early Wednesday, effectively halting the nation's freight rail system and most of the Amtrak passenger service as well.

However, other unions put a 48-hour hold on any strike against Amtrak, cheering hundreds of thousands of commuters along the Eastern Seaboard and in the Chicago area who had faced massive delays in getting to work.

Only a scattering of commuters in New Jersey and the Washington area whose trains used CSX rails were hit by the strike. Amtrak commuters between Los Angeles and San Diego and in California's Central Valley had to find other ways to work.

Hours after the strike spread across the country, fruit growers, auto parts manufacturers and other businesses called for swift government intervention to end the strike.

Transportation Secretary Andrew Card went before a House subcommittee hearing in Washington to urge Congress to act quickly to halt the walkout, saying it "has already exacted a serious

A strike by employees of Illinois Central Railroad has forced Carbondale's Amtrak station to suspend operations.

Trains will not run out of Carbondale today because the rail lines used by the station are owned by ICR, said Amtrak spokesman John Jacobsen.

ICR employees have walked off their jobs in support of a strike on CSX Railroad.

An agreement could not be reached by the International Association of Machinists union and CSX Railroad, which operates in the southeastern United States, leading to the strike.

Amtrak employees are not on strike, Jacobsen said. Amtrak has made agreements with three of the six unions involved with contract talks. The three unions that have not signed contracts have postponed any strikes until Friday, he said.

911 officials: Financial pact before installation

By John McCadd
Police Writer

An inability to reach a financial agreement with the General Telephone North Company by next month could delay installation of the Jackson County Emergency 911 system, officials said.

The Emergency Telephone System Board wanted GTE to install telephone lines and networking equipment for the system, which would be one of the most updated 911 systems in operation.

The enhanced 911 emergency system is expected to be started by December of this year if an agreement is reached.

ETSB Vice Chairman William Crawshaw said GTE's installation of equipment for a networking system would be important, but footing the bill of over $100,000 would be difficult.

"After meeting with other counties, we've discovered that all of us are having the same problem," Crawshaw said.

The other counties involved are Perry, Franklin, Union, and Randolph.

Perry County Sheriff Sam Hiller said problems such as the GTE disagreement go with the territory of installing a 911 system, mainly because most counties have never had an emergency system.

"It's overwhelming that so many things have to be done," Hiller said. "We have to map the county and buy street signs, which takes a lot of time and money."

It's a very time-consuming process that we had no idea of when we started this out," he said.

"A 911 system will make every telephone in this county a lot more important, which will greatly improve (GTE's) business," Hiller said. "We're actually paying them to enhance their own services."

Crawshaw said negotiation with the company will resume next week.

Orlando Magic adds O'Neal to roster

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Shaquille O'Neal, the most dominating player in college basketball over the last two seasons, Thursday was selected by the Orlando Magic as the No. 1 choice in the NBA draft.

The 7-foot-1, 300-pound center from Louisiana State University is considered the best center prospect to come out of the collegiate ranks since UCLA's Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, then known as Lew Alcindor, in 1970. O'Neal is seeking a long term contract worth $5 million a year, but Magic owner Rich DeVos appears ready to pay it.

In order for the Magic to add O'Neal to its roster, it will have to restructure some existing contracts or make some trades in order to get under the NBA's salary cap.

A "franchise player" who averaged 24.1 points and 14.0 rebounds per game this past season, O'Neal decided to forego his final year of college eligibility to enter the NBA. He was twice voted Southeastern Conference Player of the Year and was UPI's College Player of the Year in 1991.

"Patience is the best virtue," O'Neal said when asked if he would have any problem signing with the Magic. "I'm going to Orlando tomorrow and start negotiations. We'll just take our time."

The Charlotte Hornets selected second and picked center/power forward Alonzo Mourning of Georgetown. The 6-9 1/2, 240-pound Mourning averaged 21.3

points, 10.7 rebounds and 5.0 blocks per game as a senior. Known for his shot-blocking ability, he was the second leading all-time shot blocker at Georgetown with 453 rejections.

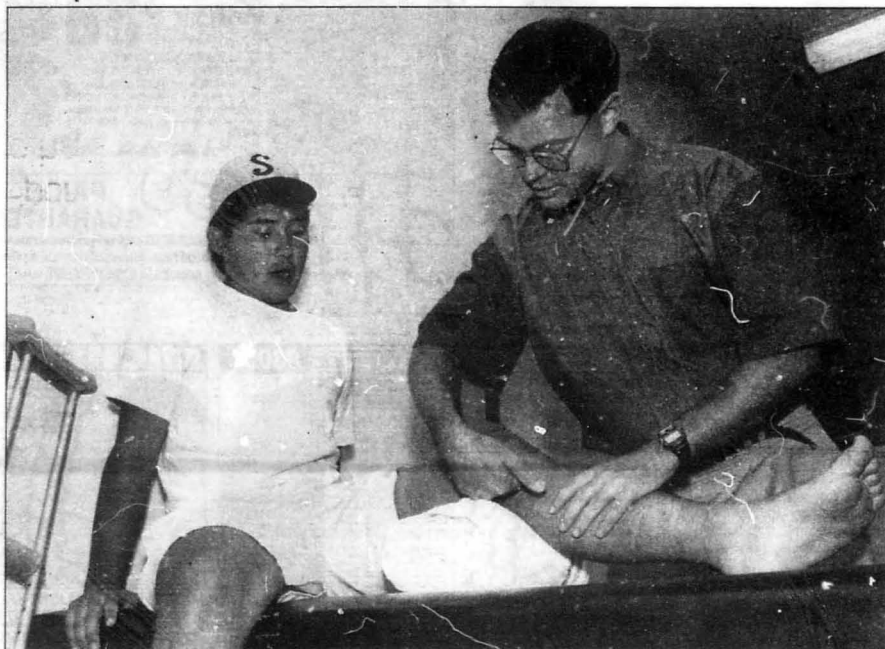

The Minnesota Timberwolves used the third pick of the draft to select 6-11, 235-pound forward Christian Laettner of Duke. Laettner, a versatile player, averaged 21.5 points and 7.9 rebounds per game for the NCAA champions. He was the only college player selected for the U.S. Olympic basketball team.

Laettner impressed scouts with his mental and physical toughness as well as an ability to play close or away from the basket.

Jim Jackson, the UPI College Player of the Year this past season, was the choice of the Dallas Mavericks. The 6-foot-6, 220-pound guard from Ohio State is an outstanding all-around player who

Sports Medicine provides evaluation, treatment, exercises to help rehabilitate twist, sprain, break sporting injuries

By John Bolger

Michael Conley spent Tuesday in the Sports Medicine Office flat on his back with his leg in the air and his ankle swollen to the size of a softball.

The senior in physical education twisted his ankle Monday night playing basketball.

"It's nice to come here and get this treatment," Conley said. "It would be so expensive to have to go somewhere else."

John Massie, coordinator of Sports Medicine, said that Conley will be treated for pain and swelling and then will be given a range of exercises to strengthen his ankle.

Massie said such facilities are not offered at all college campuses.

Massie said some universities, like the University of Florida, offer similar programs, but SIUC's program is one of the few that are for recreational and intramural athletes.

The Sports Medicine Office, a service at SIUC since 1980, was first started by Robert "Doc" Spackman when he retired as head athletic trainer of the Intercollegiate Athletics Department.

Massie said the number of students

WIMBLEDON, England — If Arantxa Sanchez Vicario could hang a sign on her tennis game, it would read: "Keep Off the Grass."

Her game better suited for clay than the grass courts at the All England Club, Sanchez Vicario Wednesday became the first women's seed to fall at the Wimbledon Championships. The No. 5 seed from Spain lost 3-6, 6-2, 7-6 in the second round to Julie Halard of France.

"She's less confident on grass," Halard said. "She is one of the best players on clay and it's easier to beat her on grass courts. On a clay court she can win as she did at Roland Garros in 1989."

As for Monica Seles, the court surface mattered not. The top seed, pursuing her third straight major championship, stuck to her powerful baseline game, needing an hour to oust Belgium's Sabine Appelmans 6-3, 6-2 on the third day of Wimbledon.

"It was exciting to be out there on the Centre Court and I felt a little nervous," said Seles, who mysteriously withdrew before last year's Wimbledon. "I think I am playing a pretty good game all around except by my returns weren't going in as well as I wanted to, but it's going to take some time to adjust. I definitely have to return a lot better than I did today."

On the men's side, No. 2 seed Stefan Edberg advanced to the third round with a 7-6 (7-3), 6-3, 7-6 (7-4) triumph over Gary Muller of South Africa. Edberg's next opponent is another South African, Grant Stafford.

"I knew I had to work hard, serve very well," said Edberg, the champion in 1988 and 1989. "I thought I played a solid match and two good tie-breakers. It was a good match for me today. I had to push myself a bit. I am feeling pretty good."

No. 3 Michael Stich, the defending champ, rallied for a 4-6, 7-6 (7-4), 6-3, 6-3 decision over Amos Mansdorf of Israel; No. 5 Peter Sampras won a four-set struggle over Australia's Todd Woodbridge, 7-6 (7-2), 7-6 (7-4), 6-7 (7-9) 6-4; and No. 10 Ivan Lendl, seeking his first Wimbledon title, struggled past Arne Thoms of Germany 7-5, 7-6 (8-6)

Plab, Williams to compete in U.S. Olympic trials

By Jay Reed
Sports Writer

Friday Darrin Plab and Ed Williams begin a weekend that will determine if they have a Spanish summer.

Plab and Williams are in New Orleans preparing for the U.S. Olympic track and field trials, which will determine the 1992 U.S. Olympic track and field team headed to Barcelona.

Plab, a two-time NCAA champion in the high jump, is scheduled to compete in the first round of the high jump 7:50 p.m. Friday.

If Plab advances as one of the top 12 competitors, he is scheduled to jump in the finals 4:30 p.m. Sunday.

The top three finishers qualify for a spot on the U.S. Olympic team.

Twenty-four high jumpers will be competing to clear the starting bar of 7-2 1/2. Plab jumped 7-8 to win the 1992 NCAA high jump championship.

SIUC track coach Bill Cornell is optimistic about Plab's chances to make the cut.

"If Darrin can repeat what he did in the NCAA's, he has a damn good chance," he said.

Williams, an Olympic trials qualifier in the 110-meter hurdles, will run in the preliminaries at 6:00 p.m. Friday.

If he advances to the quarterfinals he will run at 2:15 p.m. Saturday. The semifinals are scheduled for 3:50 p.m. the same day, with the finals at 6:10 p.m.

Sunday.

The top three finishers in the 110-meter hurdles advance to Barcelona.

Cornell, who is in New Orleans attending NCAA Track and Field Rules Committee meetings, said he will attend the events, but merely as a spectator.

"I don't have to tell them anything," he said. "They have the talent and they know what it takes."

National report: 25 percent of chemistry profs women

By Lynelle Marquardt
General Assignment Writer

The lack of female chemistry professors at SIUC coincides with a recent report that women comprise only 25 percent of all chemistry professors.

Steve Scheiner, the temporary chairman of the chemistry department, said the only female chemistry professor at SIUC is Pirooska Huvo, a visiting professor who occasionally teaches in the department.

She is hired on a term basis and has not applied for a tenure appointment, Scheiner said.

Chemistry departments across the nation have very few women on their faculties and are trying to recruit and hire more women, he said.

"There is a lot of competition for the women who do apply for these kinds of jobs," Scheiner said.

There have not been many openings for new faculty members, but when there are, women and men both are considered, he said.

"All things being equal, we would hire a woman," Scheiner said.

The last faculty opening in the chemistry department was for a molecular biologist.

Associate professor Ramesh Gupta was the chairman of the search committee.

"We made every effort to hire a woman, but we couldn't attract one," Gupta said.

Over half of the offers for this job went to

USG hopes to rally, register students for November presidential election

By Jeremy Finley
Administration Writer

The Undergraduate Student Government has hopes of rallying students in a mass voter registration for the national presidential election in November.

Brad Cole, USG president, said USG's reasons for holding the mass registration in September are to lessen student apathy and lack of information about voting.

"We want to clear up any misconceptions about voting," Cole said. "I think why we have low student voting turnout, even in our own student elections, is because of apathy or lack of knowledge."

It is really important for students to be informed about candidates and have their voices heard," he said. "The registration has always been a goal of mine when I became chief of staff in 1990."

A similar registration was held in 1990 for the election of main state officials and for the U.S. senator.

In the 1990 election, 600 to 700 students were registered to vote, Cole said. In September, it is hoped 1,000 to 1,500 students will be registered, he said.

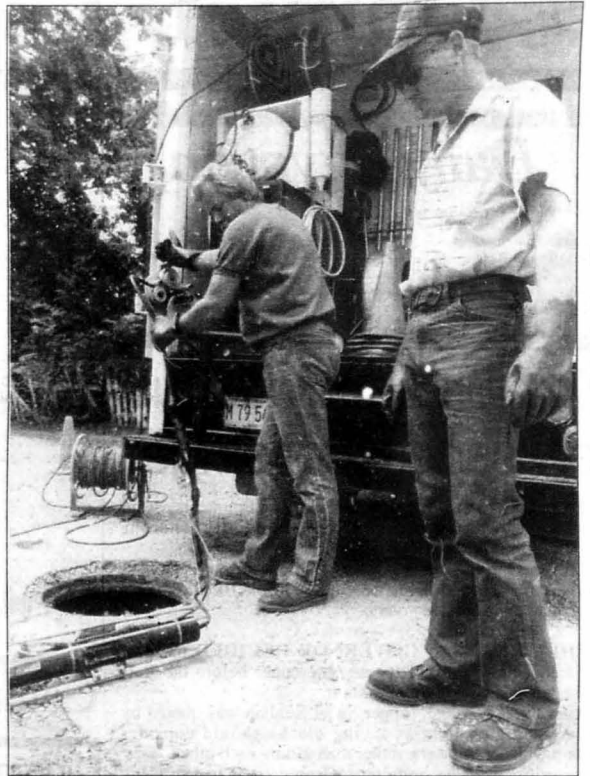

Cole said by holding the registration in the Hall of Fame in the student center, more students will become involved.

"The Hall of Fame has a lot of student traffic," Cole said. "Now what remains to be seen will be if they will take five minutes to stop and register."

We have to register the students 30 days before elections so they can vote," he said. "We are holding the registration for two or three weeks in September. We have to be done by the first week of October."

Cole said for students to vote, they must have lived in their residence areas for 28 days.

Clinton should focus on issues, not singer

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE Bill Clinton hit a sour note with the African American community when he criticized the words of a rap singer.

Clinton, who is jockeying for positions in a race that is being run without him, needed to look like a strong candidate to undecided voters.

THE ARKANSAS GOVERNOR DECIDED to show his leadership by criticizing an entertainer before the Rev. Jesse Jackson's Rainbow Coalition.

After the L.A. riots, Tapper Sister Souljah was quoted by the Washington Post as saying blacks should consider killing whites for a week rather than killing each other.

By criticizing the comment Clinton tried to show his independence from Jackson while appealing to white voters.

AS MUCH AS CLINTON needs to score points in a race he is losing, he should go beyond condemning a statement that nobody in their right mind would support. He should concentrate on the serious problems that the African American and the white community are facing today, from housing and education to health insurance.

IN AN ELECTION YEAR WHEN voters are showing discontent for the system at the polls and the voting booth, candidates should base their campaigns on substantive issues.

IF CLINTON WANTS TO STAND as a strong candidate he should be more critical of the political problems that racially divide the American people and prove that he can be a better president than he is a saxophone player.

Opinion from Elsewhere

Los Angeles Times News Service

"Let there be no mistake," wrote U.S. Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia, "... burning a cross in someone's front yard is reprehensible."

We couldn't agree more. Burning a cross in someone's yard also is illegal, a violation of criminal trespassing and vandalism laws.

But the Supreme Court was correct Monday in its unanimous decision to strike down a St. Paul, Minn., hate-crime ordinance.

The ordinance, which banned behavior that specifically "arouses anger, alarm or resentment in others on the basis of race, color, creed, religion or gender" is an unconstitutional limitation on First Amendment guarantees of free speech and expression, the court held.

Two years ago, members of a black family awoke to see a cross aflame on their lawn. St. Paul officials charged a white teen-ager with violating state and local laws against bias-motivated conduct. The juvenile challenged the local ordinance as unconstitutionally broad and vague.

In recent years, 46 states have enacted statutes to address hate crimes, and as many as 100 colleges and universities now have codes prohibiting speech and behavior deemed to be racial, religious or sexual harassment.

Many of these laws are more narrowly drawn than St. Paul's and some permit enhanced penalties for crimes when motivated by bigotry.

This may be a wiser approach to curbing intolerable crimes of hatred.

Digging dirt a part of contemporary politics

President Bush, a sensitive guy, is angered that Ross Perot once had a private eye snoop into his business practices and those of his family. That was back when Bush was vice president.

Bush's indignation is understandable. Nobody likes the idea of someone poking around his or her closets for skeletons.

But that's the way politics is today.

Sleaze, sleaze, sleaze.
Gossip, gossip, gossip.
Dirt, dirt, dirt.

I'm sure Bush's nostrils would quiver with disdain if he knew what was going on in an office not very far from the White House.

In this office, several dozen people work full time pumping tons of material into a big computer.

The material is fed to them by hundreds of operatives all over the country.

The computer swallows the material, then sorts it out.

And when someone wants something nasty about this person or that, they punch in the victim's name and out pops the dirt.

But maybe Bush knows about it already. He should.

The office is part of the Republican National Committee. It's sort of Sleaze Central.

It's said to be a very efficient operation. Any Democrat who aspires to national office goes into the computer. And anything he says or does that can be used against him is snatched up by the national network of peepers and snoopers and fed to the main office.

Naturally, the Republicans deny that they're in the dirt business, heh-heh. They say they merely track the voting records, public utterances and political positions taken by potential opponents.

Sure. But they haven't let any outsiders give the computer a few pokes to see what it burps up.

So you can bet that if you typed Perot and hit the enter key, the printer would clatter for the rest of the day.

By now, they have done everything but have Perot's fingernail scrapings analyzed.

And as this campaign goes on,

Mike Royko

Tribune Media Services

whatever they have on Perot will come out. Of course, they won't hold a press conference and announce that their computer has spit out a goody. They'll do what any self-respecting political operative does: leak it to some media outlet so they can stand in the background and say, "Tsk, tsk, how shocking."

The same goes for Bill Clinton and whoever is suicidal enough to be his running mate.

But none of this should be a surprise to Bush. After all, he was once head of the CIA, so he should be familiar with all sorts of snooping. If he isn't, what was he doing as our top snooper?

And as a Republican and the ultimate Washington insider, he should know that his party is far more expert at this sort of thing than the Democrats.

Remember what Watergate was all about: Republican snoops breaking into Democratic headquarters to bug telephones.

Sure, the Democrats try the same thing, and wish they were as efficient as the Republicans, but they aren't.

They are such bumblerers. Why, when the blond bimbo surfaced in Clinton's life, the jaws of Democrats dropped in amazement. But the Republicans weren't surprised. They knew all about her. She probably occupied at least one megabyte in their computer.

What probably bothers Bush and the Republicans about Perot's alleged snooping is that he appears to be far more efficient than the Democrats. Worse, he appears mean enough to match them trick for trick.

Or it could mean that Bush and his people are apprehensive about a magazine article out this month that is sure to be the talk of Washington. Which means that it will find its way into the tabloid press and into the mainstream media, and finally out here to the boonies.

Yes, we might as well say it because it will soon be common knowledge.

There will be a magazine article that alleges that Bush has, from time to time, been something of a romantic fellow, if you know what I mean.

And I'm sure Gary Hart catches the drift.

This will be a first in modern political history.

For some reason, it's the Democrats who are always accused of such hanky-panky, never the Republicans. It makes you wonder why the Republicans haven't become extinct for lack of a reproductive urge.

One explanation might be that any suggestion that Gerald Ford or Richard Nixon had an eye for the ladies would have made people giggle.

And with a terror like Nancy watching him, Ronald Reagan probably felt nervous smiling at Margaret Thatcher.

But Republicans think of themselves as being more proper than Democrats, and their candidates like to reflect that propriety.

Family values, as J. Danforth Quayle puts it.

Even Spiro Agnew, grafter that he turned out to be, was a grafter with family values.

And when a conservative Republican congressman from Illinois was revealed to have been bedding a teen-age congressional page, the first thing he did was appear with his family to weep and express remorse.

Actually, Bush should feel fortunate that he's been snooped by Perot.

If he was a Democrat and the Republicans had been looking through his laundry hamper, by now he'd probably be living in a YMCA and ducking a process server.

form of government coercion."

Such a standard would have significantly expanded the degree to which governments from the local to the federal level could have allowed religion into daily life.

"We can decide the case without reconsidering the general constitutional framework by which public schools' efforts to accommodate religion are measured," wrote Kennedy. "Thus we do not accept the invitation of ... the United States to reconsider our decision in Lemon v. Kurtzman."

President Bush said in a statement he was "very disappointed" by the ruling.

"America is a land of religious pluralism, and this is one of our nation's greatest strengths," said Bush. "While we must remain neutral toward particular religions and protect freedom of conscience, we should not remain neutral toward religion itself. In this case, I believe that the court has unnecessarily cast away the venerable and proper American tradition of non-sectarian prayer at public celebrations."

Justice Antonin Scalia, writing for the dissenters, called Kennedy's ruling "conspicuously bereft of any reference to history."

"In holding that the establishment clause prohibits invocations and benedictions at public-school graduation ceremonies, the court -- with nary a mention that it is doing so -- lays waste a tradition that is as old as public-school graduation ceremonies themselves, and that is a component of an even more longstanding American tradition of non-sectarian prayer to God at public celebrations generally."

Kennedy was joined in the majority by justices Harry Blackmun, John Paul Stevens, Sandra Day O'Connor and David Souter.

Scalia's dissent was joined by Chief Justice William Rehnquist and justices Byron White and Clarence Thomas.

Four days before the 1989 graduation of eighth-grader Deborah Weisman from Nathan Bishop Middle School in Providence, her father, Daniel Weisman, sought a temporary restraining order banning invocations and benedictions at Nathan Bishop and all public schools in the city.

A district court denied the motion, and Rabbi Leslie Gutterman performed a non-denominational invocation and benediction that began with the word "God," and ended with "Amen."

The next month, Daniel Weisman sought a permanent injunction against prayer at graduations in the school district, and a federal court granted it, ruling that the Providence schools had "in effect endorsed religion in general by authorizing an appeal to a deity in public school graduation ceremonies."

The 1st Circuit affirmed the decision, as did the high court Wednesday.

toll." White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said President Bush monitored developments in the rail strike throughout the day, and said in a statement that Card was "prepared to work through the night with members of Congress...to bring this matter to a speedy conclusion."

But Ronald Wiggins, head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said Congress should stay out. "Let the process work by not intervening," he said.

Democratic House leaders appeared reluctant to intervene immediately. Rep. Al Swift, D-Wash., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on transportation, said Congress "is very uncomfortable in the role of picking winners and losers in labor disputes...we are legislators. We are not labor negotiators."

Officials for CSX and Amtrak said negotiations were continuing in Washington, but there was no immediate indication on whether there had been any progress.

Amtrak reached contract agreements with three unions Tuesday, but it remained at odds with three others. The new strike deadline is 12:01 a.m. EDT Friday.

CSX Transportation is the largest freight carrier in the United States, carrying about 20 percent of the freight in terms of value. It operates a 19,000-mile system in 20 states and has about 6,700 employees.

A spokesman for CSX said machinists went on strike "at about 20 locations" at 12:01 a.m., a deadline the union had set in parallel negotiations with CSX and Conrail.

Amtrak said it was forced to close down most of its passenger service because it uses lines owned by CSX and other freight lines.

"We will not be able to handle anything" outside of the Boston-New York-Washington corridor, said Amtrak spokesman Howard Robertson.

Frank Wilner, assistant vice president of communications for the Association of American Railroads, estimated the strike would cost the United States $50 million a day in lost goods and services after the first week.

Wilner said that although the strike was only against CSX, all freight service was affected and forced to shut down "because of the interlocking nature of today's railroad system."

"It is impossible to operate a rail system if a major segment is shut down," he said.

Some union officials accused other freight rail lines who stopped operations of conducting a lockout. But Conrail spokeswoman Chris Wagner denied it.

"We take it as a strike action against all of us," she said. "You cannot stop one portion of the system without shutting down all of it."

In California, the Western Growers Association, representing 85 percent of the fresh vegetables grown in California and Arizona, said it faced potential losses of millions of dollars.

"Fresh fruit and vegetables simply cannot sit by and wait for the rail companies and the unions to resolve their issues," said David Moore, WGA president. "These commodities are extremely perishable and will rot in the fields and the docks if Congress and the administration don't take immediate action."

General Motors Corp. workers in Fort Wayne, Ind., were sent home early Wednesday because of parts shortages. Company spokeswoman Toni Simonetti said GM had expected to feel the effect of the rail strike "within 24 hours" but said, "I think Fort Wayne indicates it didn't even take that long."

Simonetti said other GM plants were operating normally. However, Dave Perdue, president of the United Auto Workers local representing the 3,700 employees at the GM plant in the Dallas suburb of Arlington, said if the strike lasts longer than a week, the plant could face serious parts shortages.

An Amtrak strike would have closed Pennsylvania Station in New York City and affected thousands of commuters in the metropolitan area who ride the Long Island Rail Road, New Jersey Transit and Amtrak trains.

In New England, an Amtrak shutdown would have affected 430,000 rail commuters, including 70,000 coming in to Boston every day.

In the Chicago, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington areas, thousands of commuters depend on Amtrak or lines that run on Amtrak rails.

President Bush was briefed by Transportation Secretary Card early Wednesday. Afterward, Fitzwater said, "If this strike is allowed to continue, the impact on the economy will be severe."

"Congress and Congress alone has the power to prevent that."

railways have shut down in response to the strike on CSX, Jacobsen said.

It is standard practice for railroads to use lines owned and operated by another railway, he said.

Because railroad companies have shut down nationwide, Amtrak cannot run on rail lines operated by other companies, Jacobsen said.

ICR spokeswoman Ann Thoma said striking railroads are not forcefully keeping other railroads from using other lines, but there is no one to control traffic on the lines.

"We are not acting as an obstruction to Amtrak," she said.

Although students who use the railroad to get to school may be affected by the strike, Nathan Tonarelli, a radio-television major, said he understands the reason for the strike.

"Workers need to be able to stand up against management if they feel an injustice has been done," he said.

Nelson Miesner, Amtrak ticket clerk, said most people have either cashed in their tickets, or are just waiting to see what happens.

Thoma said no one is sure how long the strike will last.

"We hope it (the strike) will be short lived, but it's pretty hard to tell now," she said.

"There are so many variables," she said, "but, the longer the strike, the greater the effect."

The Association of American Railroads has set up a 24-hour hotline to keep people up-to-date on the strike situation.

An AAR spokesman said a lack of coal could be a problem for electric companies, which burn coal to produce electricity.

"They could run out of coal if it (the strike) goes on long enough," he said.

Thoma said ICR transports 19 to 20 million tons of coal a year out of Southern Illinois.

George Sheppard, public affairs representative for Central Illinois Public Service Company, said the strike will not have an impact on CIPS.

"In our situation, the strike would have to be long term to affect electrical service," he said. "We normally carry a 90-day inventory of coal on the premises."

Also, CIPS has the ability to truck coal in, and can receive coal by barge at some of its plant, Sheppard said.

Cigarette warning labels still leave companies liable

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court said Wednesday federal health warnings that have been on cigarette packs since 1966 do not in many cases exempt tobacco companies from false advertising lawsuits if they continue to tell consumers that smoking is safe.

By a 7-2 vote, the court handed a major setback to the nation's tobacco giants, who now could face multimillion-dollar lawsuits on behalf of smokers who died or became sick due to tobacco use.

Federal courts have said Congress pre-empted all such lawsuits beginning in 1966 when it required that cigarette packs carry a "Surgeon General's" warning about the dangers of tobacco.

But the high court in large part disagreed Wednesday, siding with public health groups who claim the federal warning did not give the tobacco industry the right to lie to consumers by claiming its own research showed no conclusive link between tobacco use and disease.

The court did say that amendments adopted by Congress in 1969 offer more protection to the cigarette makers, pre-empting certain lawsuits.

But even those amendments, the court agreed, should not halt lawsuits in state courts claiming the tobacco firms engaged in "intentional fraud and misrepresentation" or a "conspiracy to mislead consumers."

Cigarette makers will be relieved of facing suits based only on claims that advertising since 1969 was a "failure to warn" consumers or an attempt at "neutralization" of government warnings.

Attorney Laurence Tribe, who argued the case against the tobacco firms, called the ruling "a massive victory for principles of accountability and for consumers," which could prompt thousands of new lawsuits.

"You can sue for intentional fraud, misrepresentation, and conspiracy to deceive," he said, regardless of whether those claims are based on actual advertising or other industry statements. "You also can sue for omissions of the industry," he said, such as a failure to tell government agencies and consumers "what they knew about smoking and health."

The American Medical Association called the ruling "another nail in the coffin of 'Old Joe Camel' and the Marlboro man."

But tobacco company Philip Morris issued a statement calling the ruling a "significant victory," saying the avenues of suit allowed under the ruling "should have little practical effect."

In addition to the implications for the nation's tobacco giants, the ruling is expected to expand the range of allowable lawsuits in other product liability cases where federal warnings exist, such as pharmaceuticals.

The case involved a suit by the family of Rose Cipollone, a New Jersey woman who died in 1984 of lung cancer.

Most escape-proof federal prison: Marion to house mafia chief Gotti

MARION, Ill. (UPI) — John Gotti, the nation's most powerful Mafia chief, was transferred early Wednesday to the nation's toughest federal prison in Marion, Ill., less than 24 hours after he was sentenced to life for five murders.

Gotti arrived at the country's most escape proof high security prison at 7:35 a.m. and immediately began processing for cellhouse assignment, said Fred Apple, executive assistant to the prison warden.

There are nine cellhouses with 332 prisoners.

The "Dapper Don" was issued military surplus khaki trousers and shirts to replace his impeccably tailored wardrobe and flashy ties.

He will receive five visits per month from individuals on an approved list and make a maximum of three phone calls a month, and possibly a minimum of only one every 90 days. He may or may not be given a work assignment, Apple said.

"He is receiving no special treatment," Apple reported. "He is being processed very routinely as any arriving inmate."

Word of Gotti's life sentence Tuesday morning triggered a demonstration by up to 1,000 friends and supporters who tried to rush the federal courthouse in Brooklyn, screaming "Free John Gotti!"

They overturned a car belonging to a federal marshal and smashed windows on other cars.

U.S. District Judge Leo Glasser sentenced Gotti, 51, and his former underboss, Frank Locascio, to life without parole and fined each man $250,000.

Gotti remained silent when asked if he wished to speak but Locascio insisted he was innocent and said his only crime was being a friend of Gotti.

"If there were more men like John Gotti in America, this would be a better country," he added.

Gotti was found guilty April 2 of five murders, including the gangland slaying of Paul Castellano, his predecessor as head of the Gambino organized crime family, and seven racketeering charges.

Locascio was convicted of one of the murders and most of the other charges.

Castellano was killed in 1985 in a barrage of bullets as he stepped out of his black sedan outside a Midtown Manhattan steak house. The murder lay at the heart of the prosecution's case.

Gotti won acquittals in three prior trials in the past six years, winning him the name the "Teflon Don."

At Marion, Gotti will spend his first night in prison in a temporary unit until he goes through an initiation program and screening, including a thorough review of his background, Apple said.

"That could take several several days and then it will be determined in what type of unit he will be housed."

"We have issued him four pairs of pants — three pairs of walking pants and a pair cut off at the knee for walking shorts and three shirts," Apple said. "And we issued him toiletries, undershirts, underwear and socks. Those items are always issued to any new arrival."

Legislators crack down on sex crimes, child pornography by passing new bill

By William Ragan
Politics Writer

The State Senate recently passed legislation to crack down on child pornography and sex crime offenders, and a local police officer says the bill would make it easier to convict child molesters.

House Bill 2736 was passed by the Senate last week and would require first-time offenders convicted of felony sex crimes against minors to register with local law enforcement agencies.

Current law only requires second or subsequent offenders to register with the police.

The convicted offender's name would be entered into a database shared by law enforcement agencies statewide.

Police would be able to identify possible suspects as soon as a crime had been committed, said Mark Gordon, spokesman for Sen. Ralph Dunn (R-Du Quoin).

"A convicted sex offender could move into a new community and become a repeat offender without being detected," Gordon said. "This could go a long way towards helping (police) solve cases."

Detective Bob Conway, youth officer for the Carbondale Police Department, said the legislation would make it easier for police to track down those suspected of committing a sex crime against a minor.

"This gives us a starting point," Conway said. "The biggest part of police work is always knowledge. This shows the legislature is willing to give us additional information in the hope that it would aid us in law enforcement."

The bill was created after a 6-year-old girl was kidnapped and murdered last year in Spring Valley. Gordon said the man convicted of the crime was a repeat offender.

House Bill 3461 would expand the law governing child pornography to include penalties for a third party involved in the crime.

"This shows the legislature is willing to give us additional information in the hope that it would aid us in law enforcement"

—Bob Conway

The solicitation by a third party to provide a child for pornographic exploitation would be a Class I felony, punishable by a possible prison sentence of four to 15 years and a maximum fine of $50,000.

The current law allows for the prosecution of the solicitor only if that person also was involved in the production of the pornographic material in question.

The bill would allow local law enforcement agencies to prosecute those who otherwise would have escaped prosecution, Gordon said.

"This sends a message to the person who makes the arrangements for a child to be involved (in pornography) and allows the police to go after them," he said.

The bills have been passed by the House and the Senate, and are awaiting approval by Gov. Jim Edgar.

Cop Killer

Violent lyrics draw criticism

By Ronn Byrd

Entertainment Writer

A recent release by rapper Ice-T and his band Body Count has joined the ranks of several other rap songs that have drawn strong criticism for violent lyrics.

"Cop Killer," a song with lyrics that describe police murder, has been commented on by officials from U.S. Vice President Dan Quayle to Carbondale Police Chief Donald Strom.

When Quayle addressed the National Sheriff's Association in San Diego last week, he criticized Time Warner for releasing the "Cop Killer" recording.

"Let me reiterate how strongly I feel about one particular issue," Quayle said in a UPI release. "It is wrong for a corporation like Time Warner to make money off a record that says it's OK to kill cops. It is impossible to believe the entertainment industry would produce something so revolting and outrageous."

Strom said the the Warner Bros. release is a reflection of society.

"I think it's a sad commentary on the state of our nation that a group could advocate violence and death in the name of entertainment that some people would be motivated to buy," Strom said. "We have police officers all across this nation who daily risk their lives in order to protect the rights of groups such as Ice-T and their freedom of speech."

Mike Royko, syndicated columnist for the Chicago Tribune, received a letter from the Chicago Police Department directed towards Time Warner that read, "We, as members of the Chicago Police Department and members of their families, are appalled and offended that you and your company are willing to promote the Ice-T song called 'Cop Killer.'"

"We are urging you to remove this song from the record and the media. Until such time, we intend to boycott any and all products, movies and amusement park such as your Six Flags, that are owned and operated by Time Warner."

With all the turmoil in the world today, this song promotes more civil unrest.

"If you continue to promote this song rest assured that you will be held liable and accountable for officers that are killed, as a result of subjects using this song as a plea for their defense."

The partial example of the lyrics that have police officers and community leaders upset are as follows:

"I got my black shirt on/I got my black gloves on/I got my ski mask on this s--- been too long/I got my 12-gauge sawed off/I got my headlights turned off/I'm about to bust some shots off/I'm about to bust some cops off. (Chorus) Cop Killer, it's better you than me/Cop Killer, f--- police brutality/Cop Killer, I know your family's griev'n/f--- 'em/Cop Killer, but 't'night we're even."

In riot-torn Los Angeles, the city council Tuesday formally asked Time Warner to pull the songs from record store shelves.

The motion was approved on a 10-4 vote and also asks radio stations to take the single from their play lists.

This decision came one day after the Supreme Court struck down a Minnesota law that made it illegal to engage in speech that could bring about "anger, alarm or resentment in others on the basis of race, color, creed, religion or gender."

The response from Time Warner's Warner Bros. Record Division has been in defense of the album. Spokesman Bob Merlis said in a UPI statement that "the song is a dramatic slice of life, like a movie. It is not a call to arms."

Merlis also said the song had not been released as a single and had not received any air play. He added that Warner Bros. would continue to market the album despite the request from the LA city council and similar calls from government officials around the country.

"Cop Killer" is not the first song to promote violence. Other artists such as N.W.A., Ghetto Boys, Public Enemy and Ice Cube have released albums containing material that describes violence against police, women and homosexuals.

Tony Waitekus, program director for WCIL-FM, said Ice-T may not be aware of the message he is sending.

"I think some artists have more power and influence that they really understand," he said. "They are very impressionable upon young people, more so than they really believe. I think that music can be like the movies. You can have adults go into R-rated films and understand the ramifications. But little children don't always understand. Their minds aren't as developed as some adults."

When asked if he would pull the song from the air if requested by Carbondale's City Council, Waitekus said he would not play the song.

"I wouldn't put a song like that on the air," he said. "I think children are impressionable and all kinds of people listen to us. I think I've got some kind of responsibility for what goes on the air here. I would not be putting a song like that on the air."

Strom also said he found the advocacy of police deaths "outrageous" and urged parents to pay more attention to the music their children are listening to.

"I would encourage parents to listen closely or obtain lyrics of the songs their children listen to and assist them in making decisions about the appropriateness of music."

Mark R. Sheldon, a freshman in philosophy at SIUC, said he believed Ice-T was writing about what he saw.

"He wrote it because that's what he sees," Sheldon said. "From police brutality, a lot of people have formed the perspective that the police are a symbol of evil. So blacks have decided to be their own police force. From recent events, (Ice-T) is just reflecting what the people are thinking."

Sheldon also said the reason this song is getting so much attention is because police officers feel threatened. Because of recent events of police brutality, a lot of people are angry at the police, and the song may fuel their anger, he said.

Strom said there are thousands of police officers who are doing "an honorable job," and the whole of the police force should not be judged by a few officers.

"Occasionally, some step over the line," Strom said. "And we in law enforcement feel they should be held accountable. But the solution to that is not killing police officers."

Sheldon replied to Strom's remarks by saying you cannot judge an entire group by one or two people, when the group takes care of its people.

"If you don't want anybody to come and take care of your business, then take care of your own," he said. Sheldon referred to the Rodney King trial, saying that

Public Enemy, NWA songs also anti-system

By Ronn Byrd

Entertainment Writer

Ice-T's "Cop Killer" has created a stir throughout the nation, but is not the first song to bring protest and anger listeners. Other rap acts have been releasing for some time albums with controversial lyrics:

Public Enemy's "911 is a Joke" angered police by saying in no uncertain terms that calling 911 Emergency is a waste of time. "By the Time I Get to Arizona," also by Public Enemy, attacked the state of Arizona for being the last not to legally celebrate Martin Luther King's Birthday.

Ice Cube's "Death Certificate" includes two songs attacking Koreans and at least one Jew with the lyrics, "oriental one-peeny mother f---er...pay respect to the black fist/or we'll burn your store right down to a crisp."

Billboard magazine ran an editorial in 1990 urging its readers to "strongly protest the sentiments expressed on that album" and

"F--- the Police," performed by N.W.A., caused the F.B.I. to send a letter to the group's label, Priority Records, and the Fraternal Order of Policemen voted to not provide security at the group's concerts.

N.W.A. also has been widely criticized for their continual use of derogatory remarks towards women.

women, but they all turned down the job. Although family is often a common concern, it was not the deciding factor for these women, he said.

"Fortunately, for the people to whom the offer was made, family was not a consideration because they were not married yet," Gupta said.

Donna Janes, a master's student in biochemistry from Carbondale, said that it is impossible for a woman in this field to have a marriage and a family.

"I think part of it is that women don't have any mentors, and a large part is just the way society is structured, women take care of the children and the house," she said.

She also said that one professor at SIUC asked her why she was going to graduate school because her husband would take care of her when she got married.

"However, there are some men in the department that are very supportive and very encouraging," she added.

Family concerns are not the only deterrents for women in the field.

It also is hard for women to get grants, she said.

"The grant issues that women are interested in are considered feminist instead of just issues," she said.

"More funds are diverted and women get discouraged."

For example, prostate cancer is researched much more than breast cancer," Janes said.

Another reason women do not enter the field is the long hours that are necessary for research, she said.

"Some professors work from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and come back and work from 7 to 11 p.m.," Janes said. "I don't know if women have to work harder, but there isn't a feeling of a place being made for them."

Janes also said that another reason for the lack of female professors is that many women stop at the master's level instead of going on to get a doctorate.

The survey, which was done by the American Chemical Society, was mailed to 4,200 chemists, half of which were women.

Seventy-two percent of the women and 64 percent of the men responded. The survey covers the years from 1975 to 1991.

the police officers did not take care of their own.

"They got off," Sheldon said. Sheldon and Strom both represent strong sides of an issue that may have no middle ground. Where one side may try to express themselves in reference to the violence they see every day, another may accuse them of propagating that same violence.

"People have become very callous to violence and death," Strom said.

"It doesn't have the impact. We've got kids growing up in the inner cities or other areas and they don't see any out for themselves. They treat death and violence very casually. That's something we've got turned around in this country."

Sheldon said he thought the press has made more of the issue than anyone, but that artists are right to speak out against what they see.

"I think it's time for artists to step up and say what they believe," he said. "If the Supreme Court says I can walk up to your house and burn a cross in your yard, then I should be able to write a rap song and say what I want."

Residence halls and other areas of student activity also will be targeted for the registration, he said.

College-age students make up a very low percentage of voters in state and local elections, Cole said.

Bob Harrell, county clerk, said although college-age students have low turnout in overall elections, they make up for it in presidential elections.

"In the presidential elections, students tend to have a high percentage of voting," Harrell said.

"This has been obvious in several elections."

In the 1983 election for mayor, 1,373 individuals in Carbondale district 23 were registered to vote, and 440 were registered to vote in Carbondale district 25.

District 23 is 100 percent student population.

Dan Clifton, a senior in history from Salem, said mass registration on campus is an excellent idea.

"A lot of students think registration is a lot of trouble," Clifton said.

"If a student can do it right there quickly, they will go ahead and do it."

Clifton said he thinks if students knew they could make a difference in elections, they would vote.

"If they come in large numbers, or even small numbers, they can make a difference," Clifton said.

Hollie Shaver, a junior in education from Centralia, said a major problem with voting is taking the time to register.

"I am not a registered voter myself, it is too much trouble," Shaver said.

"But I know that students are looked down upon because we do not vote."

The registration at SIUC will be handled by USG with help from the college Democratic and Republican organization, Cole said.

The county clerk will make members of USG deputy registrars so they can register other students or vote, he said.

"It is non-partisan, we will not be handing out buttons or brochures," he said.

"Anyone who wishes to help is more than welcome."

Shuttle Columbia on track for takeoff if weather holds

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Rocket engineers monitored threatening weather and swarmed over the shuttle Columbia Wednesday, making last-minute repairs and gearing up for launch Thursday on a marathon 13-day science mission.

Columbia and its five-man, two-woman crew were scheduled to blast off on the 48th shuttle flight at 12:07 p.m. EDT Thursday.

But with a 60 percent chance of stormy weather that would delay liftoff, engineers were not especially optimistic.

"I'd have to put two dollars on Mother Nature, I'm afraid," shuttle forecaster Mike Adams said when a reporter asked what his gut feeling was about an on-time launch.

But NASA engineers pressed ahead with Columbia's intricate countdown and scrambled to complete a few last-minute repairs.

Late Tuesday, engineers climbed into Columbia's engine compartment and replaced a faulty liquid oxygen temperature sensor on main engine No. 2.

The new sensor worked flawlessly Wednesday and the engine compartment was closed for launch.

Technicians also replaced two of Columbia's three TACANs, electronic "black boxes" located in the crew cabin that feed guidance data to the shuttle's flight computers during landing.
