Med school reviews cadaver procedure

WILLIAM HATFIELD
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

The SIUC School of Medicine is reviewing its long-standing procedure of cutting lower limbs off cadavers to fit the remains into wardrobe boxes following an incident involving an unsupervised student worker.

The incident involved a student working in the cadaver labs of Lindegren Hall who used a bone saw to sever, at the knee, the lower limbs of six cadavers to fit the bodies into wardrobe boxes which are then sent to Elmhurst for cremation. The cadavers are used in SIUC anatomy classes and mortuary science classes for one year before they are packaged for subsequent cremation.

School administrators say this incident, as well as concerns from a faculty member, has prompted the school to review the procedure it has employed since 1987. Traditionally, a School of Medicine lab assistant physically alters the cadavers to fit in the boxes.

Tom Williams, associate provost of the SIUC School of Medicine, said school officials are seeking expert opinions on the ethical and legal issues involved in the procedure. He said until the review is complete, no cadavers would be physically altered.

"Since there have been questions raised about the practice, we are getting legal opinions and ethical opinions, and certainly we'll respond because of the ethical nature of this practice," he said.

"Certainly we want to cease any practice that appears to have any inappropriety to it, even though this is not the case."

The incident was brought to light after an e-mail message was sent from the account of Donna Curtis, an SIUC School of Medicine employee, to area media and the Illinois Board of Higher Education. Williams said the message was "fictitious," and that the school is investigating how the message was sent from Curtis' account.

The e-mail stated that the student was being forced to alter the cadavers. The student, however, said he altered the cadavers because "the job needed to be done."

The message further stated that SIUC employees are cutting the limbs off of cadavers to save money on buying boxes that are proper size.

Williams said the charge is not true. "Reasons of expense are not true at all," Williams said. "It's not an issue."

Williams said the cardboard boxes that the school has used since 1987 were approved by the Jackson County Health Department. He did not know the measurements or the cost of the boxes.

Williams said that neither the Elmhurst crematory nor the Anatomical Gift Association of Illinois, which provides cadavers to research institutions, has objected to the school's procedures.

Richard Clough, a member of the board of directors for the Anatomical Gift Association of Illinois, said the e-mail message was discouraging because it makes the school appear

"I CAME HERE AS A FRESHMAN IN 1959; AND THE THOUGHT OF BEING HERE NOW TO ACCEPT THE CHANCELLOR POSITION IS BEYOND IMAGINATION."

The legacy will live on forever

SHARRIE GLATZHOFFER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A young tree grows outside the Wham Education Building. Planted by students, the October Glory Maple commemorates a couple who has spent more than 30 years sowing the seeds of their own experience into the lives of others.

But what some have called "The Legacy of Donald Beggs" began long before the chancellor or his wife, Shirley, ever set foot on campus. Beggs' grandmother attended SIUC in the 1870s. His mother earned a degree here. Both Mr. and Mrs. Beggs grew up in Southern Illinois, and each earned degrees of their own at SIUC. Even their two children graduated from this University.

The fifteenth leader of the University since its charter in 1869, Beggs replaced John Guyon as chancellor two years ago when Guyon retired for health reasons. Jo Ann Argersinger will succeed Beggs as chancellor July 1.

Chancellor Beggs has seen the University through the eyes of student, alumnus, faculty member, administrator and parent.

"When I came here as a student I came with the understanding that it was my job to learn academically and to get a degree," Beggs said.

As Beggs became more involved with the University he became more intrigued.

"I learned that in every place I gained a better appreciation for the people here and for those that have been here."

More than any other thing, it is their personal interest in others that "planted" Donald and Shirley Beggs deep into the hearts of SIUC students, faculty members and administrators, and Southern Illinois residents.

Students remember the Beggs' concern and encouragement. Kyle Hardwick, a senior in business management from Fisher, first met the Beggs as a server with Chartwells, the campus catering service. Although he thought it strange at first, Hardwick grew to appreciate the personal interest the Beggs' had in his life.

"I remember, when I was getting married," Hardwick said. "Building up to my wedding and after it, they always made sure to ask me how things were going."

"Dr. Beggs always had advice and encouragement for me. The Beggs' are concerned about people as individuals as well as their classes."

Beggs is able to be so personable with students because he sees the University as more than a place to earn a degree or establish a career.

"I view the University differently than probably most people view it," Beggs said. "I view the University as a community of students, faculty, staff and alumni. I personify it not as a workplace, but as a community of people learning, growing socially, learning with other cultures and showing appreciation to other people."

Since their own days as students at the University, Mr. and

USG works on new Student Center services

HAIR SALON? Plans include a post office and convenience store for campus hangout.

JAMES FULLER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Student Center gift certificate cards, an alumni directory and creating an on-line voting system are some of the projects and goals Undergraduate Student Government will work on this summer.

USG has created a Student Center gift certificate card that can be purchased by SIUC students to purchase anything sold in the Student Center.

USG Vice President Jackie Smith said the card will increase Student Center revenues and ensure students spend their parents' money on school related items.

Kristie Ayres, USG president, said plans for additional Student Center services, such as a full-service post office, convenience store, hair salon and a declining balance card for off-campus students, are going to be presented to incoming Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger for consideration.

Ayres said offering a variety of services within the campus community will aid recruitment because students without transportation will not have to wait for the bus or find a ride to get what they need.

Another recruitment tool being developed by USG is an alumni directory. The directory, which will be broken down by job areas and region, will aid students in job and internship searches.

"I feel we are neglecting our alumni for support here, not financially, but as a networking tool," Ayres said. "If we're not placing students, which is something that we're seriously lacking now, then we're not doing our job."

Ayres said the directory may be in the form of an interactive CD-ROM.

USG also plans to take advantage of student input potential by creating an electronic voting system.

By following a link on the USG home page, students will be able to use an identification and password to vote on current campus issues.

In response, USG has created a technology commissioner position to monitor

ON THIS DAY IN 1976:

- A Carbondale city councilman brought new life to a council meeting when he reported that he saw "several dogs and people swimming in the nude near the public boat dock at Cedar Lake, the city's water supply." The councilman was looking to implement a "skinny dipping" city ordinance, when the city attorney informed the councilman that there is no law saying anything about "dogs wearing clothes when they swim." The councilman said he did not mind so much the swimming as much as "sunbathing on the rafts."
- Shawn Colvin was playing a free show at Kilo's, located near the Big Muddy River on Illinois Route 13.
- An Associated Press story, "Vigil group awaits Christ's arrival while facing possible home eviction," detailed the plight of twenty-four people in Arkansas waiting for the second coming of Christ who were not worried about a threat to repossessing the home they are living in. They believe they will be gone — along with the rest of the world — before marshals come to evict them.
- In Los Angeles, black market babies were becoming a lucrative business, charging $5,000 for an illegal adoption and $50,000 for a custom made child. Healthy white infants had become such a high-profit commodity that law enforcement officials feared the Mafia would soon get involved.
- A busar's bank deposit bag was found underneath the drive-up window at the First National Bank and Trust Co. The bag was said to contain roughly $2,000 in cash.

Emergency Call Boxes

New phones to aid students

PHONE TAG: Installation of three new emergency phones will help students engage in more services.

ASTARIA L. DILLARD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC Parking Division and SIUC Police are in the process of installing three new emergency call boxes in addition to the 10 that are already located throughout campus.

The new emergency call boxes were purchased for lot 44 north of the Communications Building, lot 62 near Wright Hall in University Park and lot 59 northwest of the Greek Row Playfield.

There have been no reports of crime in these areas and the emergency call boxes are being installed to make sure this continues, Vice Chancellor for Administration James Tweedy said.

"Emergency call boxes are a strong deterrent for criminal activity," Tweedy said.

The emergency call boxes serve other purposes as well as preventing criminal activity. The emergency call boxes are helpful if a person is stranded, lost, or if his or her car will not start.

"It's nice to know that if it's cold outside and your car won't start that you can just use the emergency phone," Tweedy said.

The box that students should look for is yellow, square-shaped and has a red button. There also is a blue light on top of the pole that comes on after dark.

"The emergency call boxes are a proactive measure to allow people to engage in emergency service if needed," SIUC Police Sgt. Nelson Ferry said.

After pushing the red button, the police are contacted within two rings. It should take no longer than two minutes for police to arrive on the scene.

"We are simply trying to prevent a problem," Marilyn Hogan, Parking Division coordinator, said.

Unlawful uses of the emergency call boxes are a felony offense, and unnecessary usage is discouraged.

Students' bodies needed to fill USG vacancies

Undergraduate Student Government is currently accepting applications for commissioner positions. USG represents the student body of SIUC in matters that pertain to students activities, student welfare and student participation in University planning and administration.

Six positions are available: housing commissioner, governmental affairs commissioner, academic affairs commissioner, technology commissioner, minority affairs commissioner and financial aid, tuition, and fees commissioner.

Students interested in applying for a position can obtain an application in the USG office located on the third floor of the Student Center. USG's office number is 536-3381.

Young sculptors to fire up furnaces this weekend

Artists from around the country will create cast-iron sculptures at the SIUC Foundry for the popular "Iron Pour" from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday.

Organizers expect more than two dozen artists to pour 6,000 pounds of molten metal. SIUC's "Iron Pour" is the largest sponsored by any American university.

If there is sufficient demand, a second pour will be held on Sunday.

Western Water report stresses U.S. cities' needs

A massive, congressionally mandated study of water supplies in the western United States has recommended that the federal government put more emphasis on restoring watersheds, encourage water transfers from farms to cities to accommodate soaring population growth and charge full-market value for water from new irrigation projects.

The report broke ground by embracing the idea that agricultural needs should give way in the years ahead to the needs of cities and the demands of environmental activists eager to preserve waterways for wildlife and recreation.

Oil producers cut output

OPEC agreed Wednesday to slash output for the second time in three months in an attempt to curtail a world oil glut that has sent prices plunging to the lowest levels in more than a decade.

The cartel's member agreed to cut production by roughly 1.38 million barrels per day. If successful, most OPEC producers would remove at least 2.5 million barrels of oil a day from the saturated global market and put upward pressure on the price of oil.

Train railroads the music scene with style

IT'S FULL SPEED AHEAD FOR THE YOUNG ROOTS-ROCK BAND

NICOLE A. CASHAW
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Roots rock band Train will glisten the steps of Shryock Auditorium tonight as they enter the string of Carbondale's popular Sunset Concerts.

The Aware Company, popular for discovering up-and-coming bands, adopted Train as one of its new prospects. Train will be tour six weeks, go home for a week and then beginning another five-week tour.

Guitarist Jimmy Stafford said the band played in Carbondale about a year ago and because of their success, they were invited to play at the annual Sunset Concerts.

The album, self-produced by Train, was later picked up by Columbia Records. Train will release their second single off the album, "Free," next month.

"I think the song is going to do really well," Stafford. "We keep the songs simple." "We're not a real flashy band. We try to play to the songs and not overplay them. We allow the songs to be the songs and that way people can appreciate them and can get a grip on them." Train has been together for four years and are much in tune with each other's personalities, which are reflected in the songs. The variety of their personalities are accentuated in the songs, helping the audience feel familiar with the band. "I think our personalities come across to the audience when we're on stage," Stafford

A fond farewell to Chancellor Beggs

The best leaders always have been the ones who have led from the heart. Such is the case with departing Chancellor Donald Beggs. When Beggs took the position of Chancellor in August of 1996 he made in abundantly clear where his priorities were with the students. Since then he has dedicated and put all that he has into making SIUC the best that it can be for students, faculty and administrators.

Beggs' commitment to SIU began long before he was ever appointed Chancellor. His name has been associated with Southern Illinois for 38 years. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from this institution in 1963 and 1964 respectively. He began teaching here as an assistant professor in 1963 and 13 years later became dean of the College of Education in 1981. His record of dedicated service from then on speaks for itself. Beggs has approached issues of education as an art, as was always apparent in his activities surrounding whatever position he held.

As the dean of the College of Education he authored four books on educational testing and measurement as well as served on several state and national education panels and committees geared toward developing appropriate curriculums. He also helped put the College of Education's teacher certification program into the top 500 in the nation.

When Beggs was appointed chancellor he knew that the position was not permanent. He did not even want to hold the permanent position, but the position did allow him to pursue and tackle problems in a way that he was not allowed to before.

After taking the position he said that his main concerns were student retention and recruitment. Those two issues encompass so much that it is impossible to achieve one or the other without giving your full and undivided attention to the University as a whole.

As chancellor, he helped to improve the image of SIUC as well as achieve the two main goals he had set out to do. One of the most important accomplishments that he made was turning the enrollment around. Last fall enrollment was up 45 students with no slowing down in sight. During the time he served he actively participated in all facets of university life. He constantly went out and spoke with students and faculty about what was on their minds in the hope of incorporating their views into programs that he was developing. The 110 percent that he put into his job as chancellor prompted many faculty and students to urge him to stay as his date of departure neared.

Every semester this editorial board sits down and develops a platform of ideas and beliefs that we would like to stress to the public. Those ideas and beliefs are represented with this editorial. During the time that Beggs served there was no other individual that personified what we felt should have been the direction of this University. We at the Daily Egyptian hope that we speak for the entire University community when we benevolently say thank-you to Chancellor Donald Beggs for his commitment to Southern Illinois University.

Good luck in your future endeavors.

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

The world's brand new nuclear reality

Remember that Genesis video for "Land of Confusion," when an animated puppet version of Ronald Reagan accidentally pushed the "nuke" button and destroyed the earth.

That video probably came out in 1986, near the end of the Cold War. Now in 1998, the nuclear threat is hovering over our heads again. There is no telling what this threat might lead to in the future.

At the end of May, Pakistan answered India's detonation with nuclear testing of its own. The Indian nuclear test on May 11 contained on or more blasts totaling about 25 kilotons with a magnitude of 5.3. The Pakistani nuclear tests on May 28 contain one or more blasts totaling about 12 kilotons with a magnitude of 4.8.

India and Pakistan have fought three wars in the last 50 years. As stated, both countries detonated nuclear devices. Each has the missile technology to deliver a devastating nuclear attack.

Obviously, everyone is now saying that it is time for the West (always led by the United States) to put an end to all this. This is (to use a cliché) easier said than done. It is also very hypocritical. But then again, so is politics and other things in life (I won't mention these yet).

There are many other countries beside India and Pakistan that have nuclear capabilities. Among them are the United States, Russia, Great Britain, France, Israel, Iraq, Iran and Libya.

The Western World really did not have that much of as reaction when France tested out its nuclear weapons recently. The United States did not tell Israel to get rid of all of its nuclear capacity for the sake of a peaceful world.

The same logic must be applied to the India-Pakistan situation. India and Pakistan have been in conflict for nearly fifty years over territory (Kashmir) and religious differences (predominantly Muslim Pakistan and a Hindu majority in India). Pakistan faces a threat from a bigger and more populous India. India, in turn, faces a threat from China (Pakistan's ally and nuclear supplier). These threats are similar to the threat that Israel faces from its neighbors.

Are sanctions and various treaties going to work? I do not think they will. The Western world should be more concerned with safeguarding these nuclear sites. The real danger of a nuclear exchange between India and Pakistan may not be so much as an authorized exchanged of missiles. Each country is deterred by the other's arsenal. The real danger is in an unauthorized or accidental launch. The United States should help both countries stabilize their arsenal.

This may be only the beginning of the nuclear arms race on the Indian subcontinent. It should take us back in time to the Cuban Missile Crisis, and the crisis in Berlin and Korea.

There is no simple answer to this nuclear reality. The United States can discourage nuclear weapons by getting rid of some of its own weapons, or it can stabilize the nuclear threat by making sure that other countries operate their nuclear sites safely.

It is also very ironic that it is up to the only nation that has used the atomic bomb to try to calm everyone's nuclear fears.

Mrs. Beggs have worked together as a team.

"Shirley and I teamed our education. We worked together," he said. "She made a major commitment to my getting my doctorate at the expense of continuing her own education."

Beggs said he and Shirley also have made the chancellor position a two-person job.

"The two of us spend 5 to 6 evenings a week working together socially, attending student events and getting caught up in the office," he said. "For us, it's been very much a team effort. We wanted it that way."

"It could have been different."

Shirley has been instrumental in organizing fund-raising events for the SIU Symphony Orchestra. She helped form a committee of symphony patrons to draw interest in the orchestra and helped set up a symphony orchestra scholarship fund.

"I have always been very involved with students," she said. "Don and I have always been with others from the very beginning. Without students there is no university."

Colleagues will remember Beggs for his integrity, his interested concern for others and his humility.

Steve Jensen, associate professor in radiologic technology, has known Beggs for 10 years. As Faculty Senate President last year, Jensen has seen Beggs experience the stress of dealing with situations that were out of his control.

"I was able to watch him go through a lot of public adversity," he said. "I learned how to handle adversity through him. He always had a smile. He was always willing to admit when he was wrong. I saw the anguish he went through over the last year in dealing with the faculty union. He made the best of things that were out of his control."

Beggs is able to make the best of situations because he keeps them in perspective. He understands that disagreements and undesirable situations come along with the Office of Chancellor.

"Disagreement is expected," he said. "But you have to be sure you understand why other people disagree before you make decisions. Most of the time you are able to do that in this job."

"In this job you have a plan today, but it never goes that way. One thing you learn—there are things that have to get done."

Beggs recalls the time he made the decision to close the University during ice storms in January, 1997.

"I remember how hard it was for me the day I had to make the decision to shut down the University because of ice," he said. "How do you tell 19,000 people they are not going to be doing what they had planned to do that day? And you tell them at six in the morning because you've been up since three trying to see what the weather conditions are. I'd never done that before."

Although he has been chancellor for two years and

College of Education dean for 15 years, Beggs considers himself an educator rather than an administrator.

"Most people don't know me academically," he said. "They only know me administratively. I enjoy being an administrator. I take pride in what's happened in the college and the University, but those are not personal accomplishments. Those are group accomplishments. The personal accomplishments are in research and teaching."

Beggs keeps a hanging tree of the doctoral students he has had over the years. With it he can track five generations of students since the first.

"By far, the best accomplishment that I've had here at the University is to have students who have learned in my classes and gone on and been successful by using what I was able to present in the classroom and through my research efforts," he said.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Beggs said they receive the most enjoyment out of seeing others succeed, but although Mr.

If Beggs were to leave one message with the University it is that, "The University is as good as you are."

"Those who choose to use the University make it better," he said. "Those who choose not to use it hurt the University."

Looking back on his experiences, Beggs considers the chancellorship the "crowning opportunity" of his career.

"When Don was named chancellor, we never expected that to happen," Shirley said. "He had been dean 15 years. We were thinking of retiring. There was no purpose to stay."

Colleagues and friends see it differently.

Robert Buser, an emeritus professor of education administration and higher education, worked under Beggs' leadership when he was dean of the College of Education.

"Their departure is a real loss to both the University community and the area," Buser said. "They are great friends and professionals."

Don said that although he and Shirley have plans to rest and travel, he has mixed emotions about leaving the University. He said he will miss the daily contact he had with students and colleagues.

"I've met people who have had a job to do and I have a job to do," he said. "But outside the job they are also people. I've really enjoyed the friendships."

Shirley feels the same way. She said she and her husband want the people to know how much they all have meant to them.

"They are our whole lives," she said. "They are in our hearts."

What is the legacy of the Beggs' at SIUC? Beggs has his own answer.

"I would hope that it would be it was somebody who learned at the University, shared with others and tried to make it a better place for everybody."

Mrs. Beggs said in response, "It's been demanding but we have loved every minute of it. SIU is the center of our lives."

When Don was named chancellor, we never expected that to happen. He had been dean 15 years. We were thinking of retiring.

SHIRLEY BEGGS
WIFE OF OUTGOING SIUC CHANCELLOR DON BEGGS

and Mrs. Beggs call the University "the center of our lives," they also find other sources of enjoyment.

The Beggs' both enjoy reading. Shirley enjoys exercise Don is an avid sports fan. His favorite baseball team is the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I've taken a great deal of ribbing about the Cardinal and Cub game this year," he said. "I threw out the first pitch on SIU Day, and the person who caught the ball was Kerry Wood, the outstanding pitcher for the Cubs who the very next game struck out 20 people and set a major-league record."

There is little that people do not know about Chancellor Beggs.

"I've led such a public life," Beggs said. "People know the emotions, they know the interest in students and they know a lot of things."

Beggs said one thing people may not know is that he is "probably more rigid" than most people perceive him to be.

"I have a set of values that cause me not to step over a line," he said. "I stay flexible on both sides of it but will not step over. I've tried hard over years not to let that be visible but rather to live with it as the basic structure of my life, whether I'm making decisions here in the office, professionally or at home."

like they are not practicing in "good faith when in fact they bend over backward to."

Clough, an associate professor of anatomy, said it is illegal to mutilate a cadaver, but that the law does not apply in the areas of anatomical study or morticians' work. Clough further said that altering a cadaver is not mutilation.

Clough said there is a sharp contrast between cadavers and corpses. He said that after a year of dissection, cadavers can best be described as "disintegrated." He said almost every part of the cadaver is dissected by students, leaving nothing but remains that are boxed and shipped for cremation.

The incident that in part prompted the school to investigate the practice of altering cadavers occurred more than two weeks ago. In one afternoon, an SIU School of Medicine student worker saw off the legs of six cadavers, just above the knee, to fit them into the boxes.

The student made the decision to alter the cadavers because his full-time supervisor was absent on vacation while cadavers accumulated in the gross anatomy lab in the Lindgren

Hall basement. The laboratory houses six tanks that each hold one cadaver. The student said the tanks were full and more cadavers were scheduled to be delivered.

The student said he altered the cadavers because it was "a job that needed to be done."

"It wasn't my job to cut up the cadavers. I just did it," the school, and there were a lot of unhappy people about this, that I had done it.

"I didn't know there was going to be a whole fire-storm about it."

The student's parents further became upset with the situation and telephoned the School of Medicine to object when they were made aware of the incident.

The student said the School of Medicine offered counseling and was helpful when the incident became troubling for him.

"It upset me for awhile, but I think I'm stronger than most people," the student said. "I had a few [nightmares], but no psychological damage."

Williams and Clough said that messages like the fraudulent e-mail damage the school because such messages discourage potential donors. They said anatomical gifts are invaluable training tools for students.

"It simply misrepresents the philosophy of the school of medicine in this particular area of operations," Williams said. "We make every effort beyond that which is required to handle this material with the utmost respect and consideration."

When School of Medicine faculty discovered that the student altered the cadavers, the anatomy department chairman arranged a meeting and apologized to the student.

Supreme Court rules on sexual misconduct

CPX

WASHINGTON — School districts cannot be held responsible for a teacher's sexual misconduct unless officials were aware of it and did little to stop it, the U.S.

Supreme Court ruled Monday. The 5-4 decision will make it more difficult for students at all levels of education to hold institutions responsible for their instructors' sexual advances. Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, writing for the majority, set a tough standard for holding schools responsible for teachers' misconduct. Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justices Antonin Scalia, Anthony Kennedy and Clarence Thomas joined her.

said. "There is a song on the album called, 'I Am.' That song is a personal song about singer Pat Monahan. When the audience realizes the song is personal, they can relate to it more."

Stafford, who considers their style similar to the Counting Crows, said the album is a coherent whole that compliments one song after another and all are evenly favored by the band.

"Our songs are like our babies," he said. "You don't favor one baby over the other. We like them equally. We put together a piece of art that is continually together."

Train's acoustically inclined songs are not targeted to a specific age group, Stafford said.

"We attract all ages with our music. It's weird to perform at a show and see 10-year-olds to 50-year-old adults singing our songs," he said.

Train truly values the importance and the connection they have with their fans, and after most performances they take time out to talk and get acquainted with them.

"[The fans] get as much out of the music as we do when playing it. We spend hours sometimes signing autographs and meeting people after shows," Stafford said. "It's fun for us to meet these people and it really is an overwhelming and wonderful thing for us."

technological developments on campus.

USG will also be working this summer to improve the Registered Student Organization funding process. Smith said USG will survey RSO presidents to determine what they want to see changed.

"Basically we're asking them if you had total control, how would you do it?"

Ayres said she thinks the current process used to fund RSOs is unfair and hurts academic RSOs.

Ayres said she would like to see a set of guidelines that the Finance Committee would have to follow when allocating funds so that specific reasons can be given when an RSO does not receive all of the money it requests.

Ayres said she hopes to have the survey completed by the end of September.

USG is also coordinating a voter registration campaign that will take place while freshmen are moving into the dormitories during the fall semester.

The registration effort will involve 10 to 15 people walking up to students and parents and explaining the voter registration process while notifying them of the upcoming November elections. USG hopes to register no fewer than 1,000 students.

"We can get a ton of students involved that will be here for four years," Smith said.

Ayres pointed to the city's increased interest in campus due to the large student voter turnout for the last Carbondale City Council election two years ago.

"Part of being a member of the SIUC campus is being a member of the Carbondale community," Ayres said. "If we've got to register and carry up a couch while we're doing it, that's great because we're getting our job done."

Rios' early departure marks day of discord for men

LOS ANGELES TIMES
WIMBLEDON, England — The European vacation of accidental tourist Marcelo Rios has quickly gone from bad to worse.
 He lasted three days into Wimbledon, and that was only because of the rain. The second-seeded Rios lost in five sets to Francisco Clavet of Spain — not exactly a grass-court guru himself — and sounded like a disgruntled tourist Wednesday, complaining about Wimbledon and such issues as transportation.

 It was one of those dissonant days on the men's side.
 Action started with Canadian-turned-Brit Greg Rusedski pulling out because of his injured left ankle, and then his coach, Tony Pickard, dumped him later in the day in an acrimonious split. The fourth-seeded Rusedski tried to play his opening match against Mark Draper of Australia on Tuesday and rain interrupted play in the third set after the two split the first two.

 Pickard, who once coached Stefan Edberg, said Rusedski quit listening to him and that he never should have played on his injured ankle. Rusedski practiced Wednesday and realized he could not continue.
 The day ended in the fading light with 13th-seeded Andre Agassi leaving the court firing angry words at chair umpire John Frame, who failed to overrule a bad line call in a third-set tiebreaker.

France stays perfect by beating Denmark, 2-1

LOS ANGELES TIMES
LYON, France — The hand-lettered sign high up in the south stands at Stade de Gerland here Wednesday afternoon read: "French Dynamite."
 It was one fan's twist on a favorite Denmark chant: "We are red, we are white, we are Danish dynamite."
 Well, the fuses must have been damp in both camps on a hot, sunny afternoon because the game between France and Denmark never exploded to life. There were moments of artistry, but overall it was a pretty dull affair.
 The record books will show that France won, 2-1, to keep intact its unbeaten and untied record after three World Cup '98 games in Group C. The fact that Paraguay is next in line to try its luck indicates that a 4-0 start and a place in the quarterfinals beckons Coach Aimé Jacquet's team.

 Especially since the lineup he sent out Wednesday contained no fewer than eight second-choice players in the starting 11. The key player missing, of course, was captain and playmaker Zinedine Zidane, who was serving the first game of a two-game suspension.
 But the second string held its own.
 "The team was remodeled for very precise circumstances, but we still played with a lot of composure and confidence," Jacquet said.
 But it was not all that easy for the French.

 They took the lead in the 13th minute after attacking from the opening whistle under the prompting of midfielder Youri Djorkaeff, the creative leader in Zidane's absence.
 French defender Vincent Candela started the move, stealing the ball in his own half and sprinting down the left sideline before passing to forward David Trezeguet, who was clumsily bundled over by Danish defender Jes Høgh.
 Italian referee Pierluigi Collina awarded France a penalty kick and Djorkaeff beat goalkeeper Peter Schmeichel, playing in his Danish record 103rd international, with a shot into the lower-left corner that Schmeichel got a hand to but could not stop.

of the individuality of the sport. Melrose said he never was interested in team sports growing up and started weightlifting at the age of 11.
 "It's nice to have a good career at the age of 28," Melrose said. "I've always done well but sometimes you have to take your lumps."
 Melrose credits his success to his wife Amy, his parents, and his numerous workout partners.
 The favorite part of competing for Melrose is getting in better shape than the previous competition and the crowd reaction.
 "It's a very empowering feeling," Melrose said. "You feel very good on stage and especially if you can relax and enjoy the crowd."

 Melrose was also the president of SIU's Weightlifting Club during the 1997-98 year. The club helped set up the Mr. SIU contest and promote the show. Melrose said the club tries to promote weightlifting itself and staged a power lifting show this past year.
 "We also try to educate competitors in how to get in shape and welcome anybody interested in weightlifting to join," Melrose said.
 Melrose said the show was unique because all the competitors train together at the Recreation Center.
 "I've never had the camaraderie at a show like Mr. SIU," Melrose said. "At open shows you hardly speak to people."
 The biggest disappointment of the show for Melrose was the lack of women competitors. The number of women competing have declined in recent years and no women competed for the title of Miss SIU this past year.

 Melrose said the competition consisted of many qualified competitors worthy of mention.
 "Terry Lamont was a first-time competitor and won the tall class," Melrose said. "Patrick Wong was the best poser for the show and was the most improved body-builder in my mind."
 Melrose is keeping his options open for the future in the job force but plans on competing for a long time.
 "My ultimate goal in body building is for my kids to see me compete."

Minnesota's Carter offered reported $22 million

The Minnesota Vikings have offered five-time Pro Bowler Cris Carter a $22 million, four-year contract extension. The deal's $5.5 million average would top the $4.2 million average of Tennessee Oilers wide receiver Yancey Thigpen. Thigpen is the highest paid wide receiver in the NFL.

Carter is seeking a deal that includes substantial guaranteed money. Carter has indicated he would give the Vikings the option of buying out the last two or three seasons of the deal.

Dodgers' pitcher Martinez dodges most likely over

Los Angeles Dodgers right-hander Ramon Martinez will undergo season-ending surgery on Tuesday to repair a torn rotator cuff and torn cartilage in his pitching shoulder.

Martinez was put on the 60-day disabled list and is expected to miss the remainder of the season. The 30-year-old pitcher was 7-3 with a 2.83 ERA in 15 starts this year. He had 91 strikeouts and 41 walks in 101 innings.

Sosa ties record hitting 18th home run of month

Sammy Sosa tied the major-league record for home runs in a month Wednesday night, hitting his 18th of June in the first inning of the Cubs' game against the Detroit Tigers.

Sosa, who has 31 homers overall, matched the mark set by Detroit's Rudy York in August 1937, and broke the National League record of 17 by Mays.

Diet, discipline wins student title

MR. SIU: Body builder wins first overall title after nearly two decades of dedication to his sport.

SIUC student Don Melrose was happy that his dreams did not come true before the Mr. SIU body building show last semester. Melrose started having visions of being unprepared for the contest. Melrose, a fourth-year doctorate student in Exercise Science, did not have to worry as he won the overall title at the competition.

Melrose also won the short class competition and beat out tall class winner Terry Lamont. Melrose placed second in the overall and the short class in last year's Mr. SIU contest.

"I made some positive changes in my diet this year," Melrose said. "My diet was rigorously calculated and my discipline was much better."

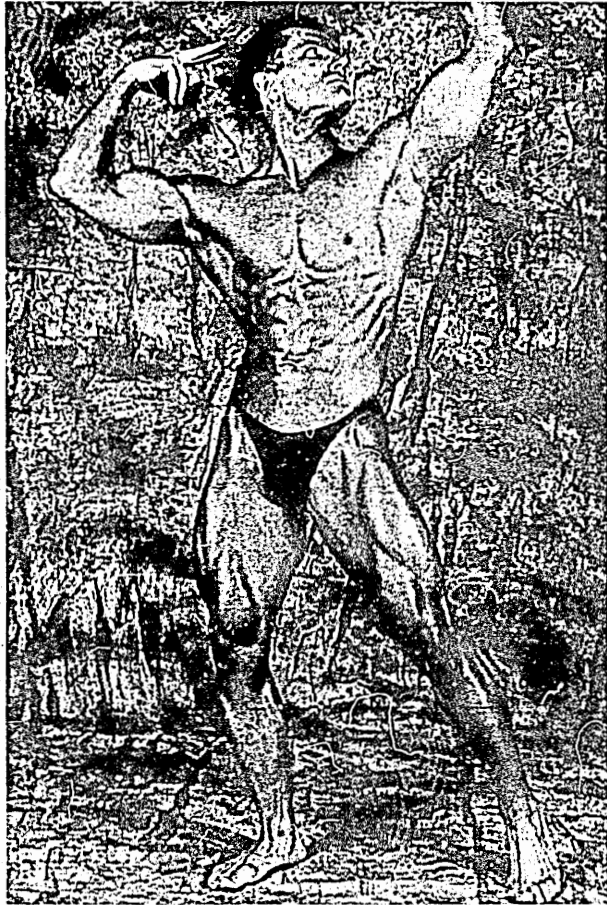

The success formula Melrose calls "my cosmetic diet" was the key to victory. The diet consists of six to seven small meals a day with a precise balance of protein, carbohydrates and fats Melrose said. The uniqueness of the diet is the lack of variety in foods.

"It is not always the perfect diet because you learn to eat the same foods all the time but it performs the function and is not necessarily for pleasure," Melrose said.

Melrose's trained for the show by weight lifting and doing aerobic exercise six days a week for almost three hours a day.

Melrose is a veteran of body building competitions but this was his first time winning an overall title. Melrose said he has competed in 13 contests since 1987. His highlights include placing second in the Teenage Mr. Illinois contest in 1987 and 1989, and winning the middleweight title in the Mr. Illinois State and Midwest Collegiate competition in 1992.

Cubs try to avoid traditional June swoon

And a few key trades could help them catch Houston

BRANDON LEWIS

SPORTS REPORTER

After winning 10 games in a row and at the same time sweeping the Atlanta Braves and hated Chicago White Sox, the Cubs have lost 10 of 14 and fallen five full games behind the Houston

Astros. It's obvious a major move needs to be done.

However it's not panic time, yet. The Cubs schedule is about to get easy once again with a two game series against Detroit followed by a three game series in Kansas City, and then a trip home to face the hapless Arizona Diamondbacks. The Cubs should — and need to — go on a long winning streak. They don't need to mortgage their entire future like they almost did to acquire Mike Piazza. But help does need to be pursued, at the right price.

Ed Lynch, the Cubs general for the last four years, has made several trades that have helped the Cubs in small ways but it's the trades he didn't make that have kept the Cubs home in October. Lynch has hinted that he has several trade options available and he needs to make at least two.

Three names that have been rumored coming to Wrigley Field are Phillies pitcher Mark Leiter, Cincinnati catcher Eddie Taubensee and Mets catcher Todd Hundley. Oakland southpaw Kenny Re — has also been mentioned as a possibility. None of the three would cost the Cubs too much in trade value.

Throw Hundley's name out, he's coming off a serious elbow injury and he doesn't want to be traded anywhere, not even to his father's former team.

Leiter would be a great addition to the Cubs bullpen. He's having the best year of his career with an earned run average of 3.00 and 14 saves as well as an era of 2.13 during the day. He would greatly help out Mark Fisciotta and Terry Adams, who have logged a lot of innings this year, facing the right-handed hitters and setting up the saves for Rod Beck. He could also serve as an insurance policy against a late season Beck collapse, which is a distinct possibility. Besides, anytime you have Dave Stevens as a reliever, you could use help in the bullpen.

Taubensee would help the lower part of the order immensely. He is currently batting .310 with five homers and 40 runs batted in, those numbers are better than all three Cubs catchers combined. He's no great defensive catcher, but Scott Servais doesn't exactly remind anyone of Charles Johnson. Taubensee's left-handed bat behind Jeff Blauser and Henry Rodriguez in the line-up would also provide much needed support at the bottom of the order and give the Cubs a deadly line-up from top to bottom, not just in the top four batting positions.

Nothing could be asked from Brant Brown, Mickey Morandini, Sammy Sosa and Mark Grace. All four have contributed mightily at the top of the order. Kerry Wood is the new ace in the rotation stopping several losing streaks during the season and sparking the team to victories with his competitive fire on the mound and even at the plate. Wood hit a 400-foot homer that started a five-run inning Saturday against the Phillies. Wood's best friend Terry Adams has anchored the bullpen and it's middle relievers were picked for the all-star game. Adams would be a shoe-in.

After these six guys, Lynch needs to examine the rest of the team. A second-place finish and a 10 game winning streak early in the season isn't enough to keep Cubs fans happy anymore. Ownership is already saying that both Lynch and manager Jim Riggleman will be given contract extensions because of the team's success thus far. Nothing short of a World Series-caliber team should be necessary for Lynch and Riggleman to be brought back. Ninety years between World Series titles is obviously too much and those two haven't shown enough in their four years to earn new contracts.

Whether or not the Cubs take advantage of their current opportunities to become a contending team, Cubs fans can always be happy about one thing, at least they are having a better season than the White Sox.
