Restatement reactions mixed

Chancellor Robert G. Layer said Tuesday the Agency for International Development's (AID) acceptance of the restatement of purpose of the AID-SIU grant has satisfied at least one recommendation made by the Review Panel which investigated the Center for Vietnamese Studies.

The Review Panel, which released its report two weeks ago, proposed that the original AID grant be renegotiated to assure the academic nature of the center and provide a clear separation of the center from technical assistance.

The restatement of purpose of the AID grant, which Ralph W. Ruffner, University Grant Officer, presented to AID officials in Washington, D.C., Monday, emphasized the academic character of the center and stated that SIU is not required to provide any specific service for AID.

Layer said the approval of the restatement gave the panel exactly what it asked for in making the center independent and research oriented.

Layer described the issues surrounding the center as concerned with its academic integrity, faculty approval and financial support.

"Ruffner cleared up the first problem in Washington this week," Layer said.

Douglas M. Allen, philosophy instructor who has been an outspoken critic of the center, however, said Tuesday he thought the restatement did not erase the intentions of AID for using the center for technical assistance programs.

"The restatement is full of loopholes which allow for technical assistance programs in the future," Allen said.

"We are not committed to any specific technical assistance programs, but in the long run all AID funds must lead directly to technical assistance," Allen said.

"It would be illegal for AID to provide a purely academic center," Allen said.

Allen said AID could be charged with misuse of funds if it funded a purely academic center because the AID funds have been earmarked for technical assistance programs.

Top U-Senate posts filled

Derrell Aherin
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The five remaining executive committee posts of the Provisional University Senate have been filled, according to William E. Simeone, temporary U-Senate president.

The Senate's executive committee is composed of a representative from the seven constituencies in the Senate with the president and vice president representing their respective constituencies.

Representatives chosen for the committee include Gola Waters, assistant professor in the School of Business, representing the Carbondale faculty;

George Camille, a junior from River-ton, representing the undergraduate students; Donald Gladden, an accountant for the Learning Resources Service, representing the nonacademic employees; Clarence Dougherty, director of the University Center, representing the administrative and professional staff; and Robert McGrath, Registrar, representing the Office of the Chancellor.

Simeone, as Senate president, will represent the graduate faculty and Pete Nelius, temporary vice president, will represent the graduate student constituency.

Keene afraid sharing plan may cut aid

By David Mahsman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Carbondale Mayor David Keene Tuesday expressed some concern over President Nixon's plan for revenue sharing.

In a letter to Rep. Kenneth Gray, D-West Frankfort, Keene said that he was disturbed to read that Nixon has sent a plan to Congress "that would apparently run our Model Cities and Neighborhood Development programs. This plan is under the guise of revenue sharing," Keene's letter said. Keene asked Gray to forward a complete copy of the proposed legislation to Keene's office.

The letter said that Keene doubts that under Nixon's plan Carbondale would receive anywhere near the $2.7 million received this year for the two programs. Keene asked whether he could be guaranteed of the $2.7 million in the future if Nixon's plan is accepted.

"In the case of Carbondale, where our need is for more money not less, lumping our Model Cities and NDP funds together at a smaller amount would place the city in the position of having to mediate claims from other sections of the community for portions of that money," Keene wrote. "Clearly that money is most desperately needed in our Model Neighborhood and must continue to be earmarked for that neighborhood."

Keene wrote that if Model Cities funds are cut, both city and federal government will be in the position of promising help to the poor, then abandoning them.

"I don't think I have to draw a picture of what happens when expectations are raised and then promises are deliberately broken," Keene's letter said.

Keene and City Manager William Schmidt will be in Washington, D.C. March 21-23, to discuss Nixon's revenue sharing plan with Gray. They will be attending a Congressional-City Conference sponsored by the National League of Cities and the U.S. Conference of Mayors to give mayors an opportunity to convince their congressmen to support revenue sharing. Among the speakers at the conference to support the plan will be Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and HEW Secretary Elliot Richardson.

Rendleman releases costs

SIU spent $1 million on MRF

By Rich Davis
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Edwardsville Chancellor John S. Rendleman released a financial report Tuesday on the Mississippi River Festival (MRF) which shows SIU spent $862,418 to develop the MRF site.

The release came after State Rep. Philip Collins, R-Chicago, announced he would head a special higher education subcommittee investigation into University funding of the MRF. A hearing is scheduled March 18 in Edwardsville.

Announcement of the $862,418 figure brings the total to more than $1 million the University has spent for the MRF. The SIU Board of Trustees entered into a $150,000 contract agreement with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra in 1969 to cosponsor the summer festival. In 1970 the Board approved a $75,000 contribution. The Board in February refused to fund the festival this summer.

Collins, in an Associated Press story, charged that the money, which is believed to be from SIU's overhead funds pool, should have been used for educational purposes and to aid students.

Collins said, although the money was from federal funds, schools should be held accountable for expenditures, whether they are from state or federal funds.

Collins headed a similar investigation into the controversial University House in 1969. SIU had planned to use overhead funds to construct the house.

Official comment is expected from the SIU Board of Trustees Wednesday. James Brown, chief of Board staff, declined to answer questions Tuesday, but said the Board office was investigating the situation.

Rendleman expressed surprise Tuesday about "everyone being so defensive about the whole thing." Rendleman said the MRF site is multi-purpose and is used for much more than the summer festival. The 45-acre site has driveways, parking lots, toilets and electrical facilities and is used for graduation exercises, spring and fall festivals, the National Inter-collegiate Music Competition, in addition to the MRF.

Rendleman declined comment on Collins' investigation, saying he would have a lot to say at the hearing. "Representative Collins delights in criticizing SIU," he said.

CIPS gets complaints about bills

By Cathy Speegle
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Residents of Logan Hall, a women's efficiency apartment house at 511 S. Logan St., will meet with an official of the Central Illinois Public Service Company (CIPS) Wednesday to discuss increases in electricity bills.

Ruby Patterson, a resident fellow at Logan Hall and spokesman for the group, said electricity bills received Wednesday and Thursday by hall residents showed a $6 to $10 increase.

Miss Patterson said the increases were made without respect to whether girls lived by themselves or with a roommate. She said several girls who lived by themselves and had few electrical appliances received bills higher than girls who have a roommate and operate many electrical appliances.

The group of women visited the CIPS office at 24 N. Illinois Ave. at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday to request a meeting with a CIPS official. After an hour's wait, clerks in the office said most of the staff were attending a safety meeting in Marion and were unavailable. The group was given an appointment for 1 p.m. Wednesday to meet with William Newman, superintendent of CIPS.

Miss Patterson said the group, and any other interested persons, met in the Logan Hall basement Tuesday night to gather information for the meeting. She said the residents of Logan Hall are willing to serve as organizers for formal protests against CIPS, if such action is necessary.

"We wish to complain legitimately," Miss Patterson said. "There's no just reason for these increases. Why didn't they increase at the same rate for everybody?"

Miss Patterson said several of the residents had received $25 and $30 electricity bills. One girl present in the CIPS office said she lived at Montclair Apartments and had received a $19.71 bill for 12 days of service.

William Bolby, public affairs officer for the CIPS in Marion, said no official increases in electricity had been made since 1964. He said a fuel adjustment clause, which charges the consumer for the cost of coal, had periodically been raised, but he did not know of any recent raises. Also present Tuesday was Dave Troutman, a junior who lives in a trailer at Glover's Country Estates. Troutman said his bill for service in March had increased about $4, over the usual $7. "The funny part about it is, I wasn't even living in my trailer for that period," Troutman said. "I was away the whole month."

Troutman and other members of the Logan Hall group said they had acquaintances who were faced with similar increases. "Utilities are costing us more than rent," one girl said. "And we don't even know what we're paying extra for."

Miss Patterson said representatives of the local ACLU chapter have expressed interest in the residents' complaints and suggested that they gather bill stubs and document their complaints for possible legal action against CIPS.

Senate plans ruling appeal

The Campus Senate will appeal the Undergraduate Campus Judicial Board's decision on the Scherschel vs. Campus Senate case, according to Dave Maguire, University Park senator.

Maguire said Tuesday he will present a formal writ of error on Wednesday to the Student Conduct Review Board as grounds for the appeal.

The Campus Judicial Board ruled Monday, in a 6-3 decision, that complete student representation mandates representation of minority groups.

It also ruled that the six undergraduate representatives appointed by the Campus Senate to the Provisional University Senate were not representative of the student body as a whole.

Edward H. Hammond, dean of student relations, said the Judicial Board's decision "has really upheld the essence of bill H-35," which makes these Senate appointments temporary until the Senate provides for permanent representation.

"I feel that out of the board's hearing and decision no one came out a loser," Hammond said. Elvis Rowland, chairman of the Judicial Board, said the board's decision was concerned with all minority groups. What was important to the board, he said, was the manner in which the senate chose the representatives.

Tom Scherschel, student body president, commented, "the board acted responsibly." Scherschel brought the case before the board.

Bad blood bill passes

lower house committee

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Legislation to circumvent a Supreme Court decision and remove most liability for bad blood from the agency giving transfusions was endorsed Tuesday by the House Judiciary Committee.

Rep. Robert Juckett, R-Park Ridge, said his bill is designed to protect sick persons who require large quantities of blood as well as protect hospitals.

Bill to curb violence introduced in house

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Rep. Weber Borchers, R-Decatur, introduced legislation Tuesday that he said would give college administrators as much power over their campuses as they have over their "home and castle."

His bill is designed to curb campus violence and unrest by giving administrators "greater authority to protect their campuses as if it were their home—and your home is your castle," he said.

Borchers said that under the proposed law a college president could order removed from the campus "anyone who didn't belong there." He didn't say who does not belong on a campus.

Borchers introduced other legislation to give college presidents the power to dismiss faculty members or expelled students who have been convicted of interfering with the operation of the college.

"This isn't too far to the right," Borchers said. "A professor at the University of Illinois was instructing students in revolution."

Such professors, he said, may "expound all they want so long as it is off the campus."

Borchers, who has advocated that legislators carry guns to protect themselves from violent assaults, said that under his proposal he didn't know whether a university administrator could order from the campus a professor who expounds revolution.

There would be no abridgement of academic freedom, he said, because "academic freedom ceases with malicious destruction of property."

Paul Schilpp to speak

at ZPG meeting today

Paul A. Schilpp, distinguished professor of philosophy, will present the last lecture in a series sponsored by Zero Population Growth (ZPG) during the winter quarter.

Schilpp will speak at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Lawson 151 on "Are One and a Half Children Too Many?"

Paul Armetta, ZPG president, said the organization, which has presented a lecture each week, is planning other activities to publicize environmental problems during the spring quarter. He said the program will be announced soon.

"I think people are tired of being talked to on this subject," Armetta said.

He said he believes the lecture series has been successful in calling attention to environmental problems and possible solutions but that attendance at the events has been dwindling.

8 meetings to be held in state

SIU to host conference on youth

By University News Services

A Southern Illinois regional segment of the Governor's Conference on Youth will be held at SIU on March 31.

The conference is one of eight to be held throughout the state. Previously only one conference was held annually in Chicago.

Program Chairman Myrl E. Alexander, professor in the SIU Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency and Corrections, said the conference is open to all persons who deal with youth, including ministers, teachers and administrators, corrections officers, juvenile program specialists, law enforcement authorities, mental health workers and representatives of public and private agencies which conduct programs for young people.

Speaker at the morning session will be Roy Girard, director of the Robert F. Kennedy Youth Center in Morgantown, W. Va., who will talk on the approach to youth problems utilized at the center. The remainder of the day will be devoted to small group discussions on youth problems.

Speaker at the evening banquet will be Dr. Cotter Herschberg, chief of child psychiatry at the Menninger Foundation, Topeka, Kansas. Dr. Herschberg will review group discussion reports and recap the material presented during the day. A highlight of the banquet will be presentation of the Governor's Award to an outstanding youth worker by Peter B. Bettsinger, director of the Illinois Department of Corrections.

The conference is free, but a charge of $2.75 will be made for the banquet. Alexander said advance reservations are not necessary but are requested as an aid in planning. Reservation forms are available at the SIU Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency and Corrections.

Editors' workshop to present 3 days of guest speakers

A City Editors' Workshop will be conducted at the Gateway Hotel in St. Louis March 19-21 by the Mid-America Press Institute (MPI).

Following the March 19th hospitality hour at the Press Club of Metropolitan St. Louis, the opening session on March 20 at 8 a.m. will be devoted to two panel discussions led by Mat Goree, assistant city editor of the Los Angeles Times in charge of special projects, and Pat Coburn, managing editor of the Illinois State Register, Springfield. At the 10:30 a.m. session, a discussion on ecology will be presented by Bruce Petersen, zoologist at SIU.

George Killenberg, managing editor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, will be the featured speaker at the noon luncheon. Afternoon sessions from 2 to 4:30 p.m. will be devoted to a program on sensitivity training by A. L. Reynolds, III, president of Ebony Management Associates.

The workshop winds up March 21 with a three-hour series of small group discussions on ideas which have proven effective.

Workshop co-chairmen are Jack Turnbullson of the Rock Island (Ill.) Argus and Sid Steen, Tulsa (Okla.) Daily World.

The registration fee of $25 includes the March 19th reception and one meal. Reservations may be made by contacting MPI Executive Secretary W. Marion Rice, School of Journalism, SIU.

Welfare myths must end

The poor are always with us, the Bible says, and so are the smug, apparently.

There is probably no subject that permits so many people so much smugness as the subject of welfare. That is the cue for many middle-class Americans to launch into diatribes about the lazy bums who won't work and to make such comments as, "If it were ME, I'd dig ditches if I had to."

Unfortunately, it's not that simple. Judging from recent figures on just who is on welfare, it appears that many Americans are trapped in poverty cycles with no way of getting out and that welfare is the last ditch effort merely to survive.

With efforts currently being made to revamp the welfare system, more working Americans must realize that the American Dream is a myth for many and those who have achieved some measure of security are going to have to lend support to new ideas that may open a few doors for the poor.

Perhaps the best way to get more support from middle-class America is to dispel some of the myths that surround welfare recipients.

For starters, those who think welfare goes mostly to blacks would do well to know that the "typical" welfare recipient is a white woman with three children. Those who think she will probably have more children, possibly illegitimate ones, to cash in on increasing Aid to Dependent Children (ADC) benefits, should know that ADC funds decrease with each succeeding child, so a woman with 10 children receives far less money to support the tenth child than she did for the first. It's hard to find money for a "Welfare Cadillac" under those circumstances. It's hard to find money for a gallon of milk.

But why don't these people work? The answer is obvious. There are very few jobs for them either because they are not trained or because the jobs simply are not available.

Using figures from Cook County, for example, there were 1,486 applicants a month last year trying to get work through the Welfare Rehabilitation Service. Of those, an average of 810 got jobs. This year, with the tighter job market, there are 2,014 applicants and 760 get jobs.

In a survey of 412,270 receiving aid in Cook County in July 1970, 62.2 per cent were children; 16.7 per cent, blind or disabled; 5.1 per cent, in job training programs or working at low paying jobs and receiving a subsidy, and 7.2 per cent were mothers with no child care available.

It should be noted that not being able to find adequate care for their children is the major reason why most welfare mothers do not work.

Of the remaining 8.8 per cent of those receiving welfare in Cook County, most had recently lost their jobs and could not find new jobs. Studies indicate that nationally numbers of able-bodied adults on welfare are even lower, five per cent of 10 million. Of those, 80 per cent are women who are heads of families.

To dispel another myth, it is not true that many welfare recipients migrate to cities to get higher welfare benefits. Studies show that most migrate to cities to find work and, when they cannot find work, they put off applying for welfare for as long as possible.

Finally, the next time someone is tempted to say, "If it were ME, I'd dig ditches," he should remember that machines, not people, dig most ditches these days.

There are no easy answers to the welfare problem except to stop passing falsehoods and to start supporting President Nixon and others who propose better methods of dealing with the plight of the poor. Americans must realize that what may be necessary are even more far reaching programs than those the President has proposed.

Job training is apparently not enough. What may be necessary are large scale federal job programs. Certainly, day-care facilities must be enormously expanded and improved to provide for the children of working mothers.

ENGELHARDT

Engelhardt, St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Ghetto run-around

In any case, it's about time Americans stop patting themselves on the back for not accepting the "dole." Receiving welfare is no easy road to luxury. Unless the system is improved, it will continue to be a hopeless road that leads to misery.

Letters to the editor

Individuals must speak to keep VTI programs

To the Daily Egyptian

I read with interest the letter from a VTI faculty wife, defending VTI programs. Her comments concerning VTI have great merit and deserve attention.

However, her conclusions concerning the "rewards" and "punishment" of main campus protestors vs. VTI students are in error. Regardless of the destruction of last May—which is to be deplored—it was not the "rabble-rousers" who were failing to provide for new buildings at VTI over the past several years while the main campus was burgeoning with growth. Men in the positions of power were making those decisions and, if they were making them badly, as I believe they were, the "rabble-rousers" were the pitiful last resort in calling attention to that fact throughout the state.

As a result, this year sees the restructuring of the Board of Trustees, the removal of a president whose plans for SIU's physical growth were interfering with progress in other areas, and the promise of other changes in store. I hope that VTI's successful programs are part of that rebirth. This will require that individuals, such as the VTI faculty wife, speak out clearly so that good programs will not be removed by apathy or ignorance or overlooked among the sometimes misguided dreams of those in power.

If feud begins, cyclist should defeat motorist

To the Daily Egyptian

Perhaps I see the beginning of a feud between cyclists and motorists so I must get in my two bits. I will bypass environmental issues and what Keynesian economics are doing to the environment—which must supply ever-growing amounts of oil (even from Vietnam) and highways for the industry.

I live in the country and ride my bike five miles to school every day. Last winter when I went to school at Ann Arbor, the tire ruts in the snow would make me fall. Now at SIU the dust devils and flying gravel get me. At night the headlights and searchlights spot me down like a hunted animal. The sound of the engines roaring by raise my blood pressure. One way to make me angry is to honk your horn when you're right beside me. One fresh, windy day, while cycling in the country, I could smell the car 28 breaths after it passed by. While I wait at the stop signs, the cars fart in my face. I resent having to share the road with them. In the morning the gasoline smell pervades Carbondale through and through. Most people don't know what fresh air is. The town stinks.

The motorcar warps values. The motorcar inflates the ego. The motorcar gives people the illusory sense of power.

I hate the sight, sound, taste, smell and feel of motorcars. To a primitive faced by a big machine car and driver are the same, like a centaur. While the person is in the car he is part of the car. Cars and the rabbit-killing, noisy, city slickers' dogs in the subdivisions are the only things bad about living in the country.

Parking lot needs line to separate red, blue

To the Daily Egyptian

This is a warning to those of us who have red decals and wish to park in the lot south of the Technology buildings. When parking, be sure to use the south end of the lot designated for red stickers (though this boundary is not easily discernible). If you should find a parking violation notice on your window for parking in what you believe to be the south end, don't attempt to appeal it. As Mr. Sline, who audits traffic violation appeals, declares (even though he admits the boundary is not easily distinguished), "There is nothing I can do about it."

So if you wish to be sure you are parking in the red portion of the lot, take along your compass, surveyor's equipment, and watch out for little arrows on parking signs. Or you can wait until it gets warm and maybe they will paint a white line on the pavement separating the red lot from the blue.

Actions and issues

Bill suggests efficiency in senate

Editor's Note: This roundup of news and comments on actions and issues in the Campus Senate is presented each week by Daily Egyptian staff writers Cathy Speagle and Chuck Hutchcraft as an extra look at what's going on in student government.

By Cathy Speagle and Chuck Hutchcraft
Daily Egyptian Staff Writers

This bill is being considered for a position on Wednesday's Campus Senate agenda. It would be submitted by "interested persons" for a more efficient Senate.

Bill H-00—MANDATE ON THE CAMPUS SENATE AND ITS COMMITTEE SYSTEM

WHEREAS, the Campus Senate has an established committee system created to investigate and weigh legislation submitted to the Senate and make recommendations for Senate appointments, and WHEREAS, this system does not always operate at top efficiency, and

WHEREAS, the Senate at times disregards committee action, not taking such action seriously and clogging the Senate mechanism,

LET these mandates be adopted:

MANDATE I, that the Senate establish a committee to study the workings of the Senate and its committee system in an attempt to alleviate the present situation, and

MANDATE II, that the Committee on Committees make recommendations to the Senate within the next week for appointments to that committee.

Just what student government needs—a watchdog committee to insure that the Senate's passel of committees is doing its job. Luckily, Bill H-00 is fictitious but it won't be long before a conscientious senator makes the same suggestions. The Senate can pass a bill requesting its members to show courtesy to guest speakers, a trait which should be an understood, innate responsibility of a senator. It might as well pass a bill for a super-committee to watch all the other committees.

The Senate's Health and Welfare Committee recently released a study made of the SIU Health Service, with recommendations for improvement of the facility.

The committee's main recommendation was that the Baptist Student Center should be converted into a larger Health Service. The building houses the infirmary and special departments of the Health Service, plus physical therapy and Counseling and Testing, which are not located in the Health Service.

SIU's plan to purchase the building from the Illinois State Baptist Association was squelched when the Illinois Board of Higher Education failed to approve the budget item.

SIU's Board of Trustees offered $1,300,000 for the building. James Smith, executive secretary of the Illinois State Baptist Association, said that the association's board felt that the price offer was too low. "They also voted emphatically not to sell the center," Smith said.

Smith said that since the center is located on University property, eminent domain could be enjoined against the Baptist Association, forcing them to sell the dormitory complex to SIU.

Bob Prince, Eastside nondorm senator and head of the study committee, has suggested the building be leased to turn it into a new Health Service. This appears to be unfeasible, since Smith said the dormitory has been continually filled and there are no plans to close it.

With the tight budgets administrators face, the Health Service will probably have to remain in its present location, inadequate as it may be.

City made for people may yet arrive

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones
Los Angeles Times Syndicate

America's big cities are in deep trouble because they are losing the two ingredients that built cities in the first place—convenience and "the good life."

Look at the statistics. Between 1940 and 1950, all of the 25 largest cities in America gained population and so did 23 of the next 25.

Between 1950 and 1960, 13 of the 25 largest cities lost population and so did five of the next 25.

Between 1960 and 1970, again 13 of the 25 largest cities lost population and so did nine of the next 25.

It is not enough to minimize this trend on the grounds that the suburbs grew and that, therefore, metropolitan areas continued to attract more people. For some of the once-desirable suburbs are getting into trouble, too. Their social problems are increasing, their crime rates rising rapidly.

Suburban sprawl, miles and miles of roofs, driveways and backyard fences, do not contribute to the open life which suburbs once promised.

The convenience of the metropolis is becoming increasingly questioned. Cross-town traffic in mid-Manhattan moves more slowly than it did in the days of hansom cabs. The face-to-face confrontation with business associates or industrial or banking customers is not as necessary as it was in the days of more primitive communications.

The teletype brings the branch manager in Wisconsin or Arizona as close as the vice president's office down the hall. Instantaneous communications of documents and memoranda by facsimile is just getting under way.

We may not be more than a decade away from the general business use of television phones which will obviate the necessity of the thousand-mile air trip and the overnight hotel just to watch a man's expression and to judge the importance of raised eyebrows and pursed lips.

And "The Good Life" is eroding. Brooks Atkinson, the veteran New York drama critic, points to the thinning out of the happy theater parties which drew the out-of-towners in the evening. Moving up curtain times by one hour to escape the muggers may help a little but that it was necessary at all was ominous.

Consider the rising pollution and noise, the deepening irresponsibility, the steepening taxes, the increasing frequency of paralyzing strikes.

Fun City? Ha!

The social bankruptcy of many suburbs is showing up in wall-to-wall houses, brooks hidden in storm sewers and sheared-away forests leaving not a single avenue of trees.

So no wonder people are thinking about new kinds of towns. There is Reston in Virginia and Columbia between Baltimore and Washington and some very important development capital is beginning to wonder if the next great fortunes in real estate won't come from selling the livability of package villages planned for human beings.

Already we are beginning to see new kinds of suburbs built in between the fairways of a golf course and sharing the club, tennis courts and swimming pools.

So far, most of these experiments have been for the rich and put upon the fringes of great cities. But as instantaneous communication improves and the old imperatives for crowding vanish, it is not beyond possibility that within a generation there will be whole new towns springing up in lush vales in Iowa in the foothills of the Grand Tetons and the hazy blue of the Appalachians and the Ozarks.

These would be towns planned to marry Nature rather than do violence to her. These would be towns with paths and bridle trails and fishing holes and open theaters in the glen.

Most middle-sized cities want to grow bigger. This is part of the American tradition of boosterism. It has its uses. Our spirit of competition with our rival cities spurs us to labor for our communities.

But boosterism accomplishes nothing if it creates a mess that causes the boosters themselves to flee to country acreage. Most growing cities still could park the water courses on their perimeters that will provide streaks of greenery and peace for unborn generations. They can, if they have the courage, force the dedication of some public-use land in the great new housing developments. The trick is to do it in time.

We have had industry-oriented cities built upon harbors, falling water and railroad junctions. We have had business-oriented cities, canyons with brick walls from which tens of thousands flee at sunset. In both we taste with dismay the bitter fruit of dehumanization.

The people-oriented city has yet to be born.

Opera by Mozart to begin soon

Mozart's "Don Giovanni" will be performed by the Goldovsky Grand Opera Theater at 8 p.m. Saturday in Shryock Auditorium.

A company of 30, including nine principal singers, full chorus and orchestra will be involved in the local presentation. In the title role of the licentious Spanish nobleman Don Giovanni will be Ronald Holgate. Leporello, his comic henchman who grumblingly assists in a variety of adventures, will be sung by William Powers.

The role of Donna Elvira, whose love for the rakish grandee remains steadfast though he spurns her affection, will be played by Brenda Sinks. Donna Anna, daughter of a nobleman murdered by Don Giovanni who pursues the villain with a passionate desire for vengeance, will be played by soprano Jeanette Daggar.

Tickets are on sale at the University Center Central Ticket Office. Prices are $3, $4 and $5 for the public and $2, $3 and $4 for SIU students.

Orienteering meet planned for spring

By University News Services

A first-week-of-spring orienteering competition has been scheduled for March 27 in the woodlands of SIU's Outdoor Laboratory at Little Grass Lake.

The site is the same one where civilian orienteering—a form of cross-country running—was first introduced in the U. S. last year. The sport involves running and navigation with the aid of a compass and topographical map.

SIU and its Division Services staged an orienteering clinic at the lakeside laboratory last April, then followed it with the first U. S. Civilian Orienteering Championships there last fall. Runners from Canada and the U. S. Army and Marine Corps were the big winners.

The March 27 event will include competition in four individual categories and one team event, designed for classes from novice to expert. Course lengths will range from 1.8 to 5 miles.

A 9 a.m. clinic for persons unfamiliar with orienteering procedures will precede the competition.

The sport is extremely popular in Canada and Scandinavia.

"Give us our rights! Dammit, I'm going to take mine!"

Despite various individual approaches to the Women's Liberation Movement, most women in the movement would agree to this statement by Elizabeth Nail, instructor of sociology, who spoke at the International Women's Day Rally Monday.

A short play entitled "The Independent Female" satirically treated the dilemma of whether or not to work after marriage. "At last we're ready for the female revolution," exclaimed Sarah Bullet, liberated female and villain of the play. "It's only taken 10,000 years."

Mrs. Nail said she was not concerned with overturning the class structure of the United States but with making a "long-lasting impact on the institutions of this country...by undermining the total structure of our society."

Women are minimized by themselves, by men and by each other, she said. Mrs. Nail said she was fed up with women's "endless going on the defensive" concerning themselves and their abilities.

Women have had a big part in bringing on and maintaining their roles as chief bottle washer and floor waxer, she said.

"There is not one person who sees me as a determined professional, including me," declared Mrs. Nail as she examined her own situation including being mistaken as a secretary in the sociology department, as a student in the library and finding herself in the midst of a pile of dishes and endless housework while her husband is in his office working.

"The revolution has got to begin in the kitchen," said Mrs. Nail. "It's got to begin inside yourself while you're doing those bloody dishes."

Other speeches dealt with the history of International Women's Day and drew comparisons between U.S. "imperialism" in Vietnam and the role imposed on women in the U.S. by male domination.

Insurance enrollment begins

By University News Services

An open enrollment period for group life insurance for SIU faculty and staff will be held Wednesday to April 10, the University Joint Benefits Committee has announced.

All full-time faculty and staff who are not presently in the group life insurance plan may take up to $5,000 insurance without proof of insurability. With proof of insurability, those whose salaries are $10,000 per year or less may enroll for the maximum of $20,000 insurance, and those with salaries above $10,000 may take up to $25,000 insurance.

Persons currently insured but for less than the maximum coverage may enroll for the maximum with proof of insurability.

All policies carry a double indemnity clause for accidental death.

This is the first time in three years the insuring company has authorized the University to conduct an open enrollment period. An information packet explaining the insurance plan in detail will be mailed to all eligible persons prior to the beginning of the enrollment period.

Four more students vie for top offices

By Chuck Hutchcraft
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Four more persons have announced their candidacy for the top two student government positions. One pair will run under a non-political organization and the other two under the Action Party.

Dave Zutler, candidate for student body president, and Gene Sinclair, student body vice president candidate, are running under the independent organization.

George Camille, presidential candidate, and Jim Peters, vice presidential candidate, are affiliated with the Action Party.

Camille, Eastside nondorm senator, and Peters, Brush Towers senator, were chosen Saturday at an Action Party convention to represent that party in the upcoming student body elections.

Zutler, an unsuccessful candidate for vice president of student activities last year, said the independent organization is open to persons seeking positions but who do not want to be affiliated with a political party.

The organization, to be named later, is an attempt to remove party politics from student government. Zutler said. To join, he said, a person does not have to have any one political belief.

He said main platform is a committee proposal in which students can work on certain Campus Senate committees, without being a student senator.

Sinclair, Thompson Point senator, added that he and Zutler, if elected, hope to set up a student operated code enforcement which would answer students' housing complaints.

The operation, he said, would include listing such housing information as location, rent prices, conditions, who the landlords are and ratings from former tenants.

Camille said he and Peters will stress more student involvement in operating the University.

He added that there is a need for "positive programs" in which students can become involved, and which will show the students it can serve them.

Peters said, most of the Campus Senate's legislative power will now go to the Provisional University Senate. The Campus Senate, he said, has the opportunity to investigate more matters and increase student assistance.

Camille and Peters both said they were running under Action for its "continuity of programs." The Action Party, they said, was responsible for creating several responsible programs. They pointed out that the party's campaign last year included the University Senate.

All four candidates, as have other candidates, said there is a need to expand the present University Health Service Facilities.

Aid applications for study abroad are due Monday

Applications for Foundation Graduate Fellowships and Undergraduate Scholarships for study abroad for 1972-73 are due by Monday.

Awards are made for study in any field and in any of the nearly 150 countries in which there are Rotary Clubs. The award covers transportation, educational, living and miscellaneous expenses for one academic year.

Graduates, between 20 and 28 years of age with a B.A. or its equivalent and undergraduates, between 18 and 24 with a minimum of two years of university work or its equivalent, are qualified. Candidates may not be a relative or dependent of a Rotarian, and must be single.

Applications must be presented to the secretary of the Rotary Club in the area where the student maintains his residence. Rotary districts are allowed to have one student award each year, and the winners will be announced in September, 1971.

For further information and application forms, particularly for Carbondale area residents, contact Frank L. Klingberg of the Department of Government. Those in Southern Illinois may contact Clarence S. Henderson, Governor of Rotary District 651, 107 W. 2nd St., Sparta.

Calley testimony ends; jury denied site visit

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP)—The government and the defense ended their testimony at Lt. William Calley Jr.'s court-martial Tuesday and the judge turned down a jury request to visit the far-away scene of the alleged My Lai massacre.

The jury's request was made last week in a conference in the chambers of the court-martial judge, Col. Reed Kennedy.

Kennedy told the six-man military panel that My Lai has become heavily overgrown since Calley's infantry platoon stormed through it three years ago, allegedly killing Vietnamese civilians as they advanced.

Olney invites students to spend break there

By University News Services

International students at SIU have been invited to spend spring break with families in Olney.

The annual Olney hospitality program is planned for March 25 through 28 this year. The program features visits to local farms, strip mines and other places of interest. International students services at SIU will provide a chartered bus if enough students sign up at the Hospitality Office at ISS. Students will be brought back from Olney by their hosts and hostesses.

International Student Services requests interested students to sign up as soon as possible.

Meeting set to discuss voting rules

By Chuck Hutchcraft
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A meeting between various attorneys to establish a precedent concerning student voter registration has been proposed by Ron Briggs, Carbondale city attorney.

The precedent would clarify the terminology in the 1925 Illinois Supreme Court decision, Pifer vs. Anderson, which determines voter registration rights.

Briggs said that he would meet with States Attorney Richard E. Richman and attorneys representing the county's Democratic and Republican parties, the SIU student government, the University administration and the American Civil Liberties Union.

Briggs' proposal came at a meeting Friday with City Manager William Schmidt, John McCaffrey, student body vice president, and Robert B. Harrell, assistant professor of English.

Schmidt said Friday's meeting was called so Harrell and McCaffrey could ask Briggs "what he really had in mind when he interpreted the elections law concerning student voter registration."

McCaffrey, at last week's city council meeting, attacked Briggs' interpretation of permanent residency as being vague and denying all citizens of legal age the basic rights they should have.

He was referring to a memorandum from the city attorney to clarify the students' right to vote in the Feb. 23 Carbondale primary.

Briggs' proposed meeting would have as its purpose the clarification of terms in the election law such as "permanent abode" and "bona fide resident."

The Pifer vs. Anderson case in 1925 was a test of the Illinois voter registration law.

Briggs' memorandum interprets the law as saying that a student, to legally register to vote must be a bona fide resident of the town in which the college is located, with no intention on his part of returning to his parental home; he must be entirely free from parental control, and he must regard the college town as his home and have no other permanent abode to return to.

McCaffrey said Monday the question of student voting is interpreted in the Pifer vs. Anderson case, which, he said, is the precedent in Illinois.

He added that a law is interpreted "for the purpose of setting policy." Whoever interprets the law, he said, "has the choice of a strict or liberal interpretation."

The interest of the students is for a liberal interpretation," he said.

Briggs said Tuesday he has no position on student voter registration. His interpretation, he said, was not meant to set policy, that is the job of the state's attorney, he said.

Briggs said what is involved is the students' right to register and vote and the procedures to challenge that right.

He added that he hopes the meeting will provide a "comprehensive analysis" of the law.

Schmidt said Monday that, based upon previous elections, the Feb. 23 Carbondale primary had fewer problems. But, he said, "until there is a clear understanding of the law concerning student registration there will continue to be problems."

Harrell, committeeman for precinct 11, said Tuesday that these problems have to be solved. He said he had heard rumors that these problems, in some cases, may have approached the point of "intimidation."

Special issue published

Viet Center subject of CCAS bulletin

By Paula Musto

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Committee of Concerned Asian Scholars (CCAS) a group of anti-war graduate students and professors from U.S. colleges who are involved with Southeast Asian Studies, has published a special issue of their bulletin which deals with the Center for Vietnamese Studies.

The CCAS, which sponsored an anti-center conference at SIU last October, has on several occasions condemned the center for its involvement with the Agency for International Development (AID). The center is funded through a one million dollar grant from AID.

The bulletin consists primarily of copies of the speeches CCAS members delivered at their October conference at SIU which was entitled

"Scholarly Integrity and the University."

However, the bulletin also includes copies of letters written by Asian scholars who have requested to be disassociated with the center and correspondence between Douglas M. Allen, instructor of philosophy at SIU, and CCAS members at other Universities.

Mark Selden, professor of history at Washington University in St. Louis who edited the bulletin, said the purpose for the special issue on the center is to draw both national and local attention to information about the center.

Selden said the bulletin will be used to document a resolution renouncing the center that the CCAS will present to the Association of Asian Scholars (AAS), which is a rather conservative group of graduate students and professors in the field of Asian Studies. He said the resolution would be presented to AAS at their convention later this month.

Selden said the position of the CCAS is that as long as the center is funded by AID it cannot be academically acceptable. He said he did not think that the recent restatement of purpose of the AID-SIU grant which emphasizes the academic nature of the center would change the character of the center.

To change the center into a viable academic institute, Selden said, would require SIU to rewrite the grant in a way that would be absolutely unacceptable to AID.

Selden said 5,000 copies of the bulletin will be distributed, of which half will be sent to CCAS subscribers.

Faculty Council supports VTI retention

By Larry Haley

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Carbondale Faculty Council passed a resolution Tuesday supporting the continuation of V.T.I. The council will present its statement on V.T.I. at the open hearings for the Illinois Board of Higher Education's (IBHE) Master Plan Phase III on March 16, James N. BeMiller, chairman of the council, said.

William Simeone, who initially proposed that V.T.I. be retained, said the institution is necessary as an "integral part of the University because of a special commitment with SIU and because of the leadership that V.T.I. has given for vocational education."

According to the IBHE's Master Plan Phase III, the vocational school would be transferred to John A. Logan Junior College at Carterville sometime in the future.

The council's statement came after the group was asked to present a Faculty Council spokesman at the hearings or present a written statement, BeMiller said.

In other action, BeMiller announced the names of 14 faculty representatives to the provisional University Senate. The representatives include: John Baker, Ralph Bedewell, Peter Cole, Ross J. Fligor, David T. Tenney, Paul Loughey, Howard Miller, Sidney P. Moss, William E. Nickell, Herbert Snyder, Nicholas Vergette, Gola Waters and J.W. Yates.

Howard Olson, vice-chairman of the council, announced the names of members to be added to the Ad Hoc Committee on Faculty Participation in University Governance. The new members include: John Mowse, guidance and educational psychology; Joanne Thorp, physical education; Bryce Ruckler, journalism; Marvin Johnson, technology; Peter Cole, CESL; and Maurice H. Dallman, technical and adult education.

Chancellor Robert G. Lauer recommended that the Faculty Council expand University 200, a course in independent studies in student governance to include graduate students. The council did not take action on the chancellor's recommendation, however.

The council did approve a proposal to expand the University 300 course to include all students in the University Senate who would be interested in taking the course, BeMiller said.

Douglas M. Allen, SIU philosophy lecturer, spoke to the council on the Review Panel set up to investigate SIU's Center for Vietnamese Studies.

"When I read through the panel's report," he said, "it seemed as though the panel members are incapable of taking their task seriously."

Allen said he had thought the panel would make scholarly reports which would show some serious criticism of the center. "This was not done," he added.

Allen suggested that the council when appointing people to a committee make an effort to emphasize with serious criticism of a controversial issue.

In other action, Chancellor Lauer reported on the inauguration of the Provisional University Senate. Lauer also explained the timing for March 15 to notify those in lower ranks who would not be re-employed did not mean that cuts were being made exclusively from these ranks.

A meeting of persons concerned over a proposed transfer of Vocational Technical Institute to the campus of John A. Logan Junior College will be at 6 p.m. Wednesday night in the Student Cafeteria at VTI, according to Joe Kaada, an instructor in the department of automotive technology.

The initial draft of Master Plan III, a development plan for higher education proposed by the State Board of Higher Education, included a suggestion that programs of VTI be taken over by the junior college at Carterville.

The development plan will be the subject of a public hearing by the state board in Carbondale on March 16.

Enrollment limit bill withdrawn

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — A state legislator Tuesday withdrew his resolution, seeking to limit state campus enrollments, until receipt of a pending Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) recommendation on campus populations.

Rep. James Londrigan, D-Springfield, withdrew the resolution as it appeared to be approaching a tie vote in the Illinois House Higher Education Committee. A tie would have kept the resolution in the committee also.

Some Committee members reacted with resentment before the vote began when Londrigan, who was a member of the committee in 1969, asked: "Have you come up with anything else?"

He said the committee two years ago had held hearings "to do something about rioting at the large campuses. Witnesses all said the campuses were getting too big."

Londrigan's resolution stated appropriations should be in accord with a House policy that state universities of less than 20,000 should be limited to this maximum on any one campus, and that present state universities of less than 20,000 on any campus should be limited to present enrollment.

It was at this point that Londrigan criticized the committee as a "wait and do nothing" body. "You are not supposed to do anything in this committee except pull your switch on appropriations for higher education and vote yes," Londrigan said.

Opponents, including spokesmen for the University of Illinois and the Board of Regents, suggested waiting until the board takes action on campus enrollment limits as proposed in Phase III of the Master plan for higher education.

Generally the purpose of the master plan is to integrate all public and private higher education in the state to prevent unnecessary duplication of curricula and to maximize use of available resources. Public hearings are being held by the University of Illinois and are being registered in the public hearings.

Some of the plan's suggested limits on growth are enrollment maximums projected for 1976. The University of Illinois at Urbana now at 31,877 would be no more than 33,550 in 1976. The new Sangamon State University at Springfield now at 600 fulltime enrollments would be limited to 6,040 in 1976.

Baptists plan coffeehouse, films

A film depicting college life, crisis and a solution will highlight "Share-Inn," a coffeehouse sponsored March 13, 8 p.m. by the Baptist Student Union, 701 W. Mill.

Cathy Rowland, ministries chairman of the Baptist Student Union in Carbondale, said the film, "3" will be shown in conjunction with finals week.

Additionally a band, "Equinox" and singer Ron White will perform. Miss Rowland said.

Miss Rowland, who described the event as "a time of fellowship and a time to share," said the coffeehouse is free and open to the public.

U-Senate begins setting up shop

Simeone said the executive committee will assist him in appointing members to several committees before the end of this quarter.

Committees that will be filled immediately Simeone said, include an ad hoc committee to write the U-Senate's by laws, a temporary agenda committee and an ad hoc committee to advise the Chancellor on proposed governance amendments to the Statutes of the SIU Board of Trustees.

Someone said the executive committee would function until the U-Senate became fully operative and the committee would advise him on other matters besides committee appointments.

Urban migration is problem

Percy talks on rural areas

By Vera Foktor
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Like many other rural areas, Southern Illinois has serious problems, said U. S. Senator Charles Percy, R-Ill., in Marion, Monday evening.

Percy, speaking at the annual meeting of the Shawnee Resource Conservation and Development Project (SRCDP), told his audience that the problems facing Southern Illinois must and can be solved.

The Senator outlined the trouble areas and pointed out the possible solutions which would enable Southern Illinois to meet its potential as a strong area in the state.

He attributed part of the problem of the rural community to the large migration from rural areas to the cities and to the meager employment opportunities now available in farming areas.

"Today, 73 1/2 per cent of the American people live on two per cent of the land," he said. "Yet, a recent poll showed that 83 per cent of the people living in urban areas would prefer living outside the central city, and 36 per cent of these would choose a small town or a rural area."

He added that it seems that most people who live in the urban areas do so out of necessity and not by choice.

"In 15 years between 1950 and 1965 farm employment has decreased by 45 per cent," Percy pointed out. In addition to that, Percy said, "about 30 per cent of the remaining farmers also work off the farms at least 100 days a year to make ends meet."

Percy said that the large migration from the rural areas can be attributed to a lack of industries.

Sen. Charles Percy

"It is estimated that another 550,000 jobs are needed in the rural areas," he added. If these jobs were available, he said, it would add $10 billion to the income of rural America.

Because job opportunities are not available in the rural areas, the young people are leaving, Percy said. This is depriving these areas of young leadership.

Percy said that before the problems of the rural areas can be solved we must "stem the flow of migration to the urban areas from the rural areas."

Percy maintains that a great part of the problem can be solved by attracting industry to rural areas and providing jobs for the rural residents.

"We must make rural areas attractive enough so that residents will wish to remain there," he said.

String Quartet to play at Chicago convention

Opening concert for the annual convention of the Music Teachers National Association (MTA) March 22-25 in Chicago, will be presented by the Illinois String Quartet, in residence at SIU, according to Robert Mueller, SIU music professor and president of the Illinois MTA.

The national organization, the oldest professional association in the United States, includes both private and collegiate music teachers.

The string quartet is composed of four faculty members from SIU's School of Music—Richard Strawn, first violin; Helen Poulos, second violin; Clyn Barrus, viola, and James Stroud, cello. Their program includes Hindemith's "Quartet No. 6" and Brahms' "Piano Quintet in F Minor," the latter featuring Kent Werner as guest pianist. Werner, a native of Belleville, is also a member of the SIU music faculty.

In addition to Mueller, two other SIU faculty members hold active positions in the Illinois MTA. Werner as vice president for publicity and Mrs. Mary Jane Grizzell as supervisor of the Baldwin Achievement Award.

Area needs more attorneys

Layer supports law school

By University News Services

The proposed law school for SIU at Carbondale received support from Chancellor Robert G. Layer recently through a directive to the Law School Planning Committee.

Acting on the renewed recommendation announced late last month by the Illinois Board of Higher Education, Layer said, "I am very gratified that the provisional Master Plan Phase III study gives a law school on the Carbondale Campus the high priority we believe it deserves. Therefore, to implement the findings of the Phase III Committee, the October, 1970, resolutions of the Board of Trustees of this University, and the recommendations of the State Board's Committee 'U' on Legal Education, I am formally authorizing and directing the Law School Planning Committee to present without delay a completed proposal with a view to beginning instruction in law on this campus hopefully during the fall of 1972."

The Law School Planning Committee is headed by Max W. Turner, professor of government, and includes Robert H. Dreher, professor in the Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency and Corrections, Daniel T. Fishco, associate professor in the College of Education, Jack F. Isakoff, professor of government, Ralph T. McCoy, director of University Libraries, and John McCaffrey, vice president of Student Government.

Layer's action climaxes several years of intensive preparation by the planning committee in laying groundwork to provide legal training for approximately 300 students. The chancellor said the many months of work by the committee indicates it has drawn upon the best characteristics of the most innovative law schools to place emphasis on Southern and Central Illinois.

In recommendations made by Committee 'U' to the Board of Higher Education, attention was focused on the necessity of a law school in Southern Illinois which would be responsive to the population there. Layer said this need has been voiced repeatedly by area attorneys, judges and elected representatives and that the need to begin now is urgent. He said all studies underline a serious and growing shortage of attorneys in Southern Illinois.

Layer expressed confidence that progress with the law school will be speedy. Pointing to facilities which will enable the law school to begin, Layer said SIU has an established complex of graduate and professional schools and the staff and library resources which constitute substantial and valuable assets for a beginning law student.

Southern Illinois' only rock music program

Stopwatch, switches, music make 'The Happening'

Nic Cipriani begins another 'Happening'

By Nelson Brooks
Student Writer

Just before 9 p.m., a short, young man with a beard and moustache slides a squeaky chair into the middle of a three-quarter circle console and starts working with 40 dials and switches.

With a stopwatch in one hand and earphones on his head, he starts one of the phonograph turntables near his right elbow. He stops the turntable, starts it again and checks his stopwatch.

As the voice from a speaker on the wall stops, the young man flips a couple of console switches and music replaces the voice in the speaker. Another session of "The Happening" has begun.

The young man is 20-year-old Nic Cipriani. The console is the control center of radio station WCIL, and "The Happening" is the name of Cipriani's radio program.

Cipriani hosts the only rock music program in Southern Illinois. His listeners make up 85 per cent of the FM listeners in the area according to a February survey by the station.

He describes the musical makeup of the program as being about one third soul, one third underground music and one third from the top 40.

The scheduling of the music is done by an arbitrary formula that stipulates no two male vocalists be played in succession and no two instrumental recordings follow one another.

"This makes the overall program more uniform," Cipriani said.

The stopwatch is used to time the instrumental opening found on many popular songs so that Cipriani can have the musical or voice from the next record playing while the first one is finishing.

"It's just one of the things I do to make a tighter show," Cipriani said. "I trim a lot of corners to get the most music on the air."

Sometimes his tight scheduling gets hectic, and a few seconds of overlap occur or the listeners' radio is silent.

"The nice thing about radio is that when you make mistakes, they are never great ones and if you don't make a big deal out of them, the audience won't know or notice," he said.

During most of the time of his three-hour program, Cipriani is busy preparing commercials or selecting records from a pile close to the console or he is making notations on his log sheet. When he does have a few free seconds he knocks his knuckles on the console keeping time with the music he is playing.

In addition to his working at WCIL, Cipriani spends a great deal of time at the radio and television department at SIU where he is a student majoring in broadcasting.

He has been doing "The Happening" for about one year. He began broadcasting on a student radio station in his home town of Cicero about five years ago.

Illinois laws cover teaching of honesty, kindness, justice

By Pete Brown
University News Services

Illinois law as embodied in the state School Code covers some charming pieces of legal territory.

For instance, it says right there in the revised statutes that every public school teacher must teach honesty, kindness, justice and moral courage "for the purpose of lessening crime and raising the standards of good citizenship."

To what extent Kindness 101 is included in the common curricula is anybody's guess, but it shouldn't be a difficult one.

It was something like this that a college-age Sunday school class went looking for when they decided that the nitty-gritty on narcotics ought to be part of elementary education in their Southern Illinois town.

Not having a handy copy of the statutes—or even knowing exactly what they were looking for—they wrote to a source in Springfield. Lo and behold, Section 27-10, "Nature and effects of alcoholic drinks and narcotics."

What the law says, in brief, is that every student from first grade through the freshman year of high school has to be taught—every year—from 30 to 40 lessons covering the subject of booze and dope and their effects on the human system.

It spells out how many pages textbooks should devote to the subject and requires that teacher certification tests include examinations on the subject and the best ways of teaching it.

And the law is not without a tooth or two: "Any school officer who neglects or fails to comply with the provisions of this section shall forfeest and pay for each offense not less than $5 nor more than $25."

Well, now. It seems that teaching youngsters about drugs isn't just advisable (as more and more concerned educators and parents are saying); it is, in Illinois at least, a violation of the law not to.

Of course, there are a few other School Code laws that may get less attention than a "Yield" sign in the middle of a glacier. How many kiddies duly observe American Indian Day on the fourth Friday of September? And what suitable observances are respected each Oct. 9, which is, as every schoolboy knows, Leaf Erickson Day? Do they still go out and plant a tree on whatever spring day the governor designates as Arbor and Bird Day?

But most school people appear to be trying to do something about a problem few of them can or want to ignore. William Holder, superintendent of the Carbondale High School district, has a drug education package ready to present to his board which he says "could be one of the outstanding programs in the U.S." He indicates that it's going to be a "realistic approach" involving not only teachers but psychologists, doctors, and "the whole community." Its overall aims will be both preventive and corrective because, as he says, "the kids really want it and they aren't interested in quick, crash programs. They want something they can really relate to."

Some seven miles away at little Giant City grade school, there are two teachers in charge of drug and sex education courses for the upper grades (5th on up). Superintendent Claude Ross, one of the old timers in elementary education around those parts, says "we're going at this with a fine-toothed comb."

Then there's the matter of honesty, kindness, justice and moral courage. Some things, though, are hard to teach.

Student teaching red tape creates hassle

Blackburn students construct buildings

Physical labor part of education theory

Helps two ways

By Joan Muraro
Copley News Service

CARLINVILLE, Ill.—In a sense, every college or university is a product of its students, as much as they are a product of their school. But at Blackburn College here,

Drug lecture cancelled by marijuana grower

University News Service

A scheduled lecture Wednesday at SIU by drug researcher Norman Doorenbos has been cancelled.

Doorenbos, supervisor of the only government-licensed marijuana farm in the U.S., was to have spoken on "Drug Abuse—Highway to Oblivion" in SIU's Sigma Xi lecture series. Dan McClary, professor of microbiology and Sigma Xi program chairman, said no explanation for the cancellation was given by the speaker's secretary.

Moslem student group starts Arabic course

The SIU chapter of the Moslem Student Association has organized a free non-credit Arabic course.

The class, which is open to any interested student, meets from 10 a. m. to noon each Friday and Saturday at the Student Christian Federation library, 905 S. Illinois.

The Lumpkin Library at Blackburn College is one of five buildings built entirely by students there as part of a unique program. High costs—both for the college and for those enrolled—are offset by the student work force. The students do almost everything on the campus located at Carlinville in southwestern Illinois. (Copley News Service photo)

Carlinville, Ill., it is quite literally true, for the student body—or at least a portion of it—has actually built some of the handsome, modern buildings on the small, scenic campus.

Work—ordinary physical labor in a variety of forms—is an integral part of the Blackburn education philosophy. Each of the 569 students enrolled (except for about 60 who are day students living in and around Carlinville, located in southwestern Illinois, instead of on campus) spends roughly 15 hours a week working at some assigned job. The tasks range from typing in a campus office to working in a bookstore to helping prepare meals under the supervision of two professionals in the dining hall to working with a construction crew building another new classroom structure. Five already have been built so far.

Though most small private schools are experiencing declines in enrollment, all Blackburn dormitory rooms are full, but there has been a slight drop in the number of day students.

Part of Blackburn's success in holding on to its student body despite the lure of the much cheaper, "neighborhood" colleges is its unusually low tuition rate, a direct and intentional result of the school's unusual work program.

Blackburn currently offers the advantages of a small four-year liberal arts college, with all the benefits of being a resident student living away from home, for $1,440 for room and board and tuition. It can set its rates that low because, under the work program, students do any job on campus which would normally be done by paid employees.

Even so, the cost of attending Blackburn was made part of the school's operation in 1913, when Dr. William H. Hudson, past president of Waynesburg College, was invited to move to Blackburn and save what was left of a previously established college. He innovated the work program, modeled on an operation in use at Park College, Parkville, Mo., under which students paid $100 for room, board and tuition and worked 18 hours a week. Rules were strict (substitutions were not allowed, students were expected to work overtime whenever necessary and any student showing up late for work was automatically given a five-hour work fine—for the first offense).

Management of the program was rapidly taken out of the hands of the two adult supervisors and turned over to the students, who have largely operated the program for themselves.

Aside from financial benefits, the work program offers Blackburn students experience in budgeting time, accepting responsibility and the realization that there is dignity in work well done. Since every resident student works, there is no stigma attached to working students, such as is sometimes felt at other schools where some students must hold jobs while their classmates do not.

Though many people, including some Blackburn officials, fear that the era of the small private school is coming to an end because of rising costs and the competition from tax-supported schools, Blackburn currently is following a course of modern expansion, offering three new major fields—in political science, music and theater arts. This last fall two new buildings were dedicated. Both were built as the result of requests to the school with an additional Title I federal grant of $194,000.

About 70 per cent of the student body comes from Illinois. The registrations are broken down rather evenly—there are 267 men and 256 women. Applicants are sought from the upper one-fourth of the high school graduating classes; it takes a good, well-rounded student to handle a schedule of 15 hours of class work and 15 hours on the job each week.

Some rules and regulations have been eased in recent school terms to meet student requests. Formerly, no autos were allowed. Now, sophomores, juniors and seniors can have motor vehicles at their disposal and the school has between 80 and 90 student vehicles registered this year. Closing hours for the dorms also have been changed. Men have no set hours and women's dorms close at midnight, but students have a card key system so they can actually come in whenever they want, even after closing hours.

Doubleheader slated

Prep sectional in Arena tonight

By Fred Weinberg
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

For over 700 high school basketball teams in the state, the season will be all over but the shooting after Friday night.

At that point, 16 winners of this week's sectional tournaments will remain in contention for the coveted Illinois High School Association Championship. The 16 will go against each other next Tuesday in eight super-sectionals across the state and the remainder will converge upon the University of Illinois Assembly Hall in Champaign a week from Friday to pare the field to one.

Sectionals started Tuesday night in most parts of the state (scores may be seen elsewhere in this paper) but the three area teams in the Carbondale sectional will not have a chance to go against each other until Wednesday.

In the other sectionals, one game is played Tuesday and Wednesday and the championship game is Friday but the 10,000 seat SIU Arena allows for a doubleheader Wednesday and the championship game Friday.

Starting Wednesday's card in the Arena will be a 7-30 p.m. game between Mater Dei of Breese and Meridian. The Carbondale-Nashville game will start immediately afterward.

Meridian has the distinction of being the only team in the state that has handled number one-ranked Thornridge of Dolton. The Bobcats planted a 46-40 loss on Thornridge during the Carbondale Holiday Tournament last Christmas in the Arena and now stand at 23-6 for the campaign.

One of these six losses was a 76-58 decision to their opponents Wednesday, Mater Dei, late last February.

Clayton Maborn and Jim Dumas, both 6-3, led the Meridian attack along with 5-10 Calvin Johnson. Dumas has been scoring 17.3 points per game and Maborn checks in with 16.7.

The Bobcats have been averaging close to 70 points a game.

Ron Henkin, 6-4, leads all Mater Dei scorers with a 17 point per game average while 6-6 Paul Kreke adds another 15 per cent.

In the second half of the twin bill, 23-6 Carbondale takes on Nashville which has the best record of the four, 23-3.

"We're not laughing at Nashville," said Carbondale coach Dave Lee. "They've only lost three ballgames and they were here last year so you can be sure they aren't coming to see the Arena."

Lee thinks that defense is going to be the key for his Terriers if they are going to get past the first game of the sectional.

"We're going to have to play good defense and we're going to have to make them respect our outside game," said Lee. "I think we can do this because our kids have been shooting real well in the last four or five ballgames."

Do his players feel any pressure? "Oh, I don't think there's that much pressure on them. They might be nervous and anxious to play but I don't think there's a whole lot of pressure on them," said Lee.

Carbondale has proven itself as a rather good tournament team with a 10-0 record in tournament games this season which includes a championship in its own Carbondale Holiday Tournament. The Terriers are led by 6-6 Charles Hughlett and 6-2 Mike Waller with late season help coming in the form of 6-3 Willie Boradnax. The Terriers' Tony Campbell led all Carbondale scorers in the regional championship game against Herrin with 15 points in the Terriers' 76-48 win at the DuQuoin Regional Friday.

Nashville sets up in a 2-1-2 zone and is led by a 6-3 front line of Rick Keller, Bob Habbe and Doug Michael. The Hornets are on a 12 game winning streak.

"This is a very balanced sectional and I think that any of the four teams can win it," said Lee.

"But," he added, "it's going to be rough for the winner of the Carbondale super-sectional going against the Chicago team at state."

How does Lee stack up this team against the 1987 squad which included L.C. Branfield and Billy Perkins and took second place to Pekin?

"They had a better shooting ballclub and they had Billy Perkins who was 6-9 then (he stands over 6-11 now) and we can't match that but I think this is a pretty good ballclub," he said.

In other parts of the state, Thornridge puts its number one rating (AP poll) on the line Wednesday against Chicago Marist in the Joliet Central sectional.

Seventh ranked Mendota takes on Pottsville in the Normal tourney Wednesday and Springfield Langhorne takes on Lincoln at Decatur.

This will be the last year of a one class tournament in the state of Illinois as the Illinois High School Association has voted to go to a two class format starting next year.

The new formula will call for two separate tournaments with the elimination of district play for the small schools. According to the new plan, the enrollment of the school will determine which class it will fall into and each school must play in its class tournament.

There are no plans for a playoff between the winners of the two tournaments.

Haywood can stay in Seattle uniform

WASHINGTON (AP) - Spencer Haywood was assured Monday of playing the rest of the season with Seattle when the U.S. Supreme Court rejected a move by the National Basketball Association to restrain him from rejoining the Super-Sonics.

The high court voted 7-2, with justices Potter Stewart and Harry A. Blackmun dissenting, to stand by a ruling last week by Justice William O. Douglas to allow Haywood to play. The NBA had asked that Douglas' ruling be vacated.

NBA Commissioner Walter Kennedy had no comment on Monday's decision.

However, two other obstacles still confront the controversial basketball star, who left the Denver team of the American Basketball Association for the Seattle club earlier this season.

Still remaining are Denver's suit against Haywood claiming breach of contract and an antitrust suit filed by Haywood against the NBA.

A jury in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles will begin hearing testimony on the breach of contract suit Wednesday. Denver maintains that Haywood, the ABA's Most Valuable Player as a rookie last season, should be held to the contract he, at age 30, and a guardian signed a year ago.

The anti-trust suit will follow Haywood is claiming $6 million in damages in this suit as he challenges the operating rules of professional basketball.

The NBA has tried to keep him from playing with Seattle under its league rule that a player cannot play in the NBA until his college class has graduated. Haywood was signed out of Detroit University by the ABA as a financial hardship case, although his class won't graduate until June, 1971.

He signed a six-year contract for a reported $1.9 million after leading the ABA in scoring and rebounding in 1969-70, but Haywood later claimed most of the money was in delayed payments and refused to play for the Rockets this season. On Dec. 28, he signed with Seattle for $1.6 million for six years.

Since then, the 6-6 center has been in and out of the Seattle lineup because of various court rulings allowing him to play and then not allowing him to play.

Northwestern to ask Big 10 to reconsider

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) - Northwestern officials announced today that they intend to ask the Big Ten to reconsider rejection of the university's request to lease Dyche Stadium to the Chicago Bears for five years.

The conference voted down the request at a meeting in Chicago Monday.

A Northwestern spokesman said the university feels "that the economic plight of the university had not been explored in sufficient depth" by Big Ten faculty representatives and athletic directors at the time of the vote.

Northwestern will ask the Big Ten to have a special meeting within a week or 10 days to reconsider the request.

Northwestern, the only private endowed school in the conference, reportedly has a projected overall deficit of $1.6 million this year.

A five-year lease with the Bears to play all their home games in Dyche Stadium would bring revenue of about $2.2 million to the university.

Hayes declines pay from Rockets

SAN DIEGO (AP) - The owner of the San Diego Rockets disclosed Monday that Elvin Hayes, 6-9 1/2 star center of the National Basketball Association team, refused to take his pay until the Rockets got out of a two-month slump.

When the Rockets lost 16 of 17 games last month and in January, Hayes went to owner Bob Breitbard.

"We are losing and attendance is down," said the one-time University of Houston star. "I don't want to be paid."

Breitbard said that Hayes wouldn't accept the $9,000 in that pay period until the Rockets started winning again this month. He tried in vain to make him take the money, the owner said.

Said Breitbard: "But there was no way we could not pay him. It was a nice thing for Elvin to do and, of course, he received his salary. We could not think of such a thing."

Cubs' Kessinger hurt

MESA, Ariz. (AP) - Star shortstop Don Kessinger will miss the Chicago Cubs' next five exhibition games because of a slight bone chip on the middle finger of his right hand.

The injury came last Wednesday in the Cubs' last intra-squad game, and Dr. Jacob Saker, club physician, Tuesday put a splint on Kessinger's finger and advised a rest until next Sunday.

Paul Popovich and Hector Torres will alternate as Kessinger's replacement.

Joe nearly blew it

Joe Frazier nearly blew the script Monday night when he retained his "world championship" by dethroning "world champion" Muhammad Ali, also known as Cassius Clay, for boxing's heavyweight crown.

Frazier, 13th of a sharecropper's 13 children, hit old Muhammad so hard, so often, he nearly busted the ol' boy's jaw.

Ali's mouth, world's largest, was so efficiently restructured by Frazier's brutal left hooks that it wouldn't open after 15 rounds of blood-letting, witnessed by 19,500 decidedly poorer spectators in Madison Square Garden, New York. And millions of theatre viewers worldwide.

Frazier used his sharecropper-given body and manager Yancey Durham-developed skills to the utmost. Men have been convicted of assault and battery for less brutal deeds.

So well did the silent man punish Ali that Frazier almost wrecked boxing's future which figures to survive at least another 12 months.

Retirement a joke

The Associated Press reported Monday night that Ali and Frazier would retire following boxing's "Match of the Century," regardless of the outcome. That means they are planning a rematch in about six months.

Boxers retire often. Floyd Patterson does it annually but always comes back to have his head bounced off the canvas another night.

Ali will win the second bout something like Frazier won the first, either by a technical knockout or judges' decision. A legitimate knockout with either man lying on the canvas, spurring blood out of his face and staring glassy-eyed into the lights would be too conclusive. What would boxing do for an encore?

This way, we could put up with about six months of Ali's much richer mouth before the second return bout. That'll settle everything. By then, we'll know for sure who has the thicker head.

Ali and Frazier could get $2.5 million apiece from each of the next two fights if their gross would be equal to Monday night's take. Each fighter can potentially gross $7 million for 135 minutes of boxing, working on the assumption all three bouts would last the maximum 15 rounds.

The money Ali and Frazier can earn by betting on each other every six months is minimal compared to profits reaped by the real winners.

Bad business sense

Those are the people who controlled outrageously priced theatre viewing of Monday night's fight and hope to ravage $20 million.

Add similar profits from two more fights and they'd have a nifty $60 million from a gullible public that thinks professional wrestling and boxing are sports.

The "lovers of sport" who control the theatre viewing are no more interested in the event as a sport than they are in the competitors as people. They'd put two cows in the ring if the public would pay.

But everybody along the line came close to losing the whole package Monday night. Frazier began enjoying his work in the 15th round and almost plastered Ali had enough to end The Mouth's career and kill boxing in the process.

Even though Frazier beat him badly Ali is the only worthy challenger on the scene. George Foreman, 1968 Olympic champion, isn't ready yet.

Frazier could have lost a potential $5 million by pummeling Ali's face into pulp. That doesn't show good business sense.

National qualifier

SIU women's gymnastics team barred from national tourney

By Fred Weinberg

Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The SIU women's gymnastics team has been ruled ineligible for the National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics meet, April 7-8, by the Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics for Women. It was disclosed Tuesday.

SIU is the defending national champion and has won the meet six of the seven times it has been run.

The ruling was based on a new regulation which states that "Any student who receives an athletic scholarship, financial awards or financial assistance specifically designated for athletes is not eligible to compete."

The new regulation was instituted September 1, 1970 and is retroactive to cover all gymnasts now competing.

SIU takes its awards from an athletic block of activity awards which, in the opinion of the committee, is illegal. The SIU women's department of Physical Education brought the case to the attention of the national commission when people in the department wished to find out if the SIU program was approved.

When the new regulation was originally instituted the women's physical education department submitted its entire award program (the ruling covers all women's sports) and it was disapproved. The department submitted a new program which gave awards for participation in two or more activities and it was approved.

The gymnastics program was then submitted and turned down as being the same program which had already been disapproved.

"Technically," said coach Herb Vogel, "we could become eligible next year by forming an intramural basketball team and participating in the women's intramural basketball tournament."

"But we work our girls four hours a day, seven days a week and expect them to maintain a grade point now, so I just can't see having them participate in another sport."

"Besides, are we teaching them the right thing by showing them how to beat a rule?"

Vogel contends that the intent of the rule was not to impose hardship on those already receiving aid and that the rule as it has been applied discriminates against a woman gymnast simply because she has athletic ability.

In order for a woman gymnast to receive an activity award in the past, she had to meet the requirements which are set down by the student work and financial assistance office and qualify for the award which was being sought.

Vogel said that several gymnasts have been on aid for as long as three years and if the aid was dropped now, several of them would probably have to drop out of school.

The SIU coach said that he is going to resubmit the program in the near future on the basis of individual cases but that it is unlikely that the women would be declared eligible for the meet because the qualifier meet was held two weeks ago.

If the team was to be declared eligible, the only way they would be able to participate in the national meet would be a ruling from the commission that the defending national champion would not have to qualify through a qualifier meet.

"The way it stands now," said Vogel, "The team that will win that meet will win it because we're not there."

"That's not right."
