Cook refuted statements made in a Daily Egyptian editorial Tuesday that blamed the USO in part for delays in issuing the directory and for "wasting student money" in its production.

Cook said the $6,535 for the directory came from John Guyon, vice president for academic affairs, and Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs.

"None of the money came from student fees," Cook said. "My last ditch effort was to approach the administration for

Cook said the USO began planning the directory in June, when the USO arranged with Hart Enterprises of San Diego to produce the directory for free exchange for advertising

Cook said he contacted Stephen Daron at SIU-C Pur-chasing, who indicated that no bids would be necessary, since no actual exchange of funds no actual exchange or lunus would take place. Cook said Daron contacted him later and indicated that the USO would have to start over and work within University bidding procedures.

Daron declined to comment on the matter Tuesday night. The USO then arranged for bids to be made and the contract was won by Hart Enterprises, the original contractor for the directory.

Cook said that by the time the first bids were accepted in September, students had already established their buying patterns and the company could not convince enough businesses to purchase advertisements in the directory. The company was forced to pull out of the project because the advertising revenue was not advertising advertising revenue was not great enough to cover printing

The second bidding process began in October, and was won by Informational Publications of Clayton, Mo. This company also pulled out of the project when company officials were when company officials were told they could not have a twoyear contract to produce the

The faculty handbook states that a faculty committee created by the senate should participate in the decision as to whether a condition of financial exigency exists or is imminent, and have input in the sub-sequent allocation and reallocation of funds.

Marvin Kleinau, chairman of the faculty and status welfare committee, said the senate should be involved in the decision and be alerted to the drastic financial shifts the administration sees. Kleinau said the senate also should be concerned about what the University anticipates for fiscal year 1983-84.

Donow said some policy is needed to provide guidelines for what the administration should and shouldn't do in terms of salary increases. He also said employees could see what contingencies should invite a matching offer and which John Guyon, vice president for academic affairs, said the University seldom matches a competitive offer but tries to offer one that might be enough to maintain that person. This procedure is now conducted informally, with no guidlines, Guyon said.

In other business, the senate passed a resolution recom-mending that the Wednesday before summer semester final exams be designated a nonexamination day.

The senate also approved a revised draft of the University's policy on sexual harassment. The policy had been tabled at the last meeting.

Aid hinders U.S. foreign relations

MAKE THE WORLD safe for democracy. That is the Reagan Administration's aims for El Salvador and other places around the globe. Stand up to communists just as we did so disastrously in Vietnam.

Reagan, of course, denied any historical connection between El Salvador and Vietnam at the times he has requested military aid and advisers for the war-torn nation.

Connections are there to be made, nonetheless, and that is just one argument against providing military aid. U.S. intervention in Central America has divided the region and its attitude toward this country. Central Americans admire America's stability and desire its goods, but poverty and bloodshed, which often are blamed on "economic imperialism," have forged distrust of American action in the region.

in the region. Reagan counters these arguments by pointing out that El Salvador has come a long way as far as democratic reform goes. Land reform has spread more land among the poor than in the past and elections are promised for later this year.

Large gaps between the wealthy and impoverienced remain though. Bloodshed is rampant with a reported 42,000 Salvadorans killed over the past three years. And the mere holding of elections doesn't guarantee democratic processes, otherwise Americans could jump for joy over Soviet elections with hursout for according could jump for joy over Soviet elections with turnouts far exceeding those in U.S. elections.

ANOTHER MEASURING stick of democracy is depth of participation, but the Reagan Administration is bent on keeping in-surgents who continue to fight away from the ballot box. Civilians in El Salvador, beleaguered by the boody tug-of-war now going on, call for negotiations between the left and right. The pleas fall on deaf ears, however, despite the thought that polarization between left and right traditionally is responsible for unrest in Central America.

How democratic can a nation be considered when opposition is forced underground? And now popular will natives look upon a power such as the United States that provides aid to suppress the opposition and refuses to support negotiations between the two

If Reagan is bent on supplying aid to support Central America make it economic aid meant to give the region a broader-based economy rather than one now dependent on cash crops such as bananas or sugar.

Reagan also hopes to use El Salvador as a message to Moscow and to other revolutionary forces in Central America that America will not tolerate upstarts in its backyard — all of which sounds vaguely familiar to current events in Afghanistan and Poland.

Basta ya violencia! Enough violence already! Let's close the book on such mistakes once and for all.

New LRC system unfair

Look's like they've done it again. Arena Promotions has changed the Line Reservation Card system (DE March 7). Now they're going to pass out LRC's randomly. Under this new system a dedicated fan could get crappy seats while a fair weather fan strolling by could get first row seats. This is totally unfair and undemocratic. Anybody who wants to see one of their favorite performers in concert should wait in line at the box office. That is how tickets are sold in most places and is the strength of the strength o unfair and un-

Nation begins to accept women

Staff Writer

With the swareness of women's potential in our society, there has been a corresponding phenomenal rate of growth in women's studies in the universities nationwide. In the last year, the interest in women's studies has intensified. This past year alone (1981 to 1982), the number of women's studies number of women's studies programs have doubled, from

In 1981, only 20 majors in women's studies were offered nationwide. In 1982 there were 145 — an increase of over 700 percent. From 20 M.A. programs listed in the field in the same year, there are now 51. From five Ph.Ds.

there are now 15.

The figures support a changing of attitudes towards the women's movement. Only a decade or less ago, people who favored women's equality or any cause that included the "woman" were considered to be of the radical let's-overturn-allexisting-structures mold Nowadays there is a general acceptance of women's affairs as a legitimate cause. Consider the ERA; even though the bill did not pass, at least it was taken seriously -at least it had a fighting chance. Would that have been thought possible only 10 years

Still the women's movement continues to be plagued by negative imagery and malignant misconand malignant miscon-ceptions. Though nowadays no one is willing to admit that they disagree with feminism in general, people will pick out very subjective reasons as to why they would not support, say, ERA. There is a general trend of thought abroad that many feminists are lesbians who are using are lesbians who are using the women's movement to "vindicate" or "push" their own beliefs. A good example of this is the recen' attack on the women's studies program at California State University (Long Beach) by women who charged that the university was promoting 'lesbianism and feminism.' The and feminism.' The university administration under pressure, cancelled classes and removed employees of the Women's Center there for "restructuring."

It seems strange unsurprising — that the most vociferous opponents of the women's movement are women themselves. Someone somewhere once said, "How closely we embrace the chains that bind us!" That seems to state the case exactly. After all, what cause can triumph when there is a division in the ranks?

While no one can say with any certainty that there are no individuals who are using the women's movement as a vehicle for their own personal image enhancement, this is no reason to condemn the whole thing. This is no reason to sling the word "feminist" around as if it were an insult. Certainly one should not treat such a serious matter as the ERA as a matter o feminists vs. the rest of us. We're talking simple human rights here.

This is not to say that all actions of the women's me. I personally find it silly for women to run around changing the spelling of their sex to "womyn" and making national issues over such things as to whether they are called chairmen, chair called chairmen, chair-women or chairpersons. It would be the same to me if the black players on the Chicago White Sox were to declare that the name be changed to "Black Sox" or "Neutral Sox." If the team was called the "Darkie Sox" was called the Darkle Sox or something similar, it would be a whole new ball game (excuse the pun), but being a woman is not an insult. It is only proper English. As Shakespeare put it so aptly, "What's in a name?"

aptly, "What's in a name:
But that is all digression The main point is, the nation is beginning to accept women in their true right. Even though it has a lot of catching up to do (hence the need for Women's Studies), the most important thing is that it now important thing is that it now has the attention and the interest. With the advent of Women's History Week currently in progress, it should be a facinating process for women not only at SIU-C but everywhere, to witness the unfolding of their own mysterious past; the part they never knew.

'No sequestering during debates'

I am upset with the un-skillfulness with which the March 31 Mayoral Debate is being handled by the Un-dergraduate Student dergraduate Organization.

The program will begin with the mayoral candidates debating questions taken from the audience. After 45 minutes or an hour of this — no one has ut a time limit on it yet city council candidate, having spent the debate closed in a room with his opponents, will get up and speak for two minutes, then go home. This procedure I have learned

Inis procedure I have learned through letters from the Student Programming Council. However, what I read in last week's DE is different. Now it seems there will be an open forum for council candidates, which was mentioned in accuse which was mentioned in a cover letter in the first SPC mailing, but never further discussed in the debate information sheet.

I'm fascinated as to why the council candidates must be sequestered during the debate. SPC and Jerry Cook say it's to prevent us from hearing the issues presented, and (from the SPC letter) they "are looking for extemporaneous statements on pertinent issues" from us

The SPC and USO both know there are two newspapers in town trying to obtain and publish every bit of information they can find on the mayoral candidates, as well as several radio stations spreading in-formation. Any council can-didate worth his salt will have read all of this information. Now, why doesn't the USO want Now, why doesn't the USC want the courcil candidates to hear these "mayoral" issues discussed? We will have been hearing them for a month already. Furthermore, mayoral issues are the same as council issues — we all live in the same town, and each councilpers vote counts the same amount as mayor's vote. date's concerns are a surprise to any other candidate. There's no reason to sequester the council candidates.

says the USC we want an extemporaneous statement from you. First of all, having been locked away for the debate. I'll have nothing to which I can respond exwhich I can respon-temporaneously. Secondly, even if I did, with only two minutes to speak, I would come with a prepared statement. I'm not about to get up and "um" and "er" with such a short amount of time. There is no way temporaneous statement.

And why is the council can didates' presentation, which will take all of 15 minutes, being will take all of 15 minutes, being given after the debate, which will run much longer? If council candidates went first, it would solve the problem or "being affected" by mayoral comments. Plus, after we were done we could sit and listen to the debate, and IISO wouldn't have debate and USO wouldn't have to worry about keeping us in one place. And with no second event to worry about, if the mayoral debate, seemed seemed worthwhile dehate enough, it could be given more

"We've been trying to get more of the retired people in the community," said Alfie Velasco of the Youth Program, but we're sure not turning down younger people."

Velasco said the fours hour required of volunteers can be served on Saturday or Sunday afternoons, for example, or broken up into two sessions of two hours each.

Volunteers begin with training and learn about such subjects as infant development, adolescent behavior nutrition communication and communication and listening skills. Such topics as Lamaze Birth Technique training are also covered. The training is followed by interviews, where more is learned about the advocates.

Adolescent fathers are within the scope of the program, Velasco said, but not the main concern concern.

"We're mainly dealing with the girls." she said. "A lot of times the fathers aren't in the picture — often they don't want to be."

The program is among many offered by the agency. Its funding comes from the Pittway Foundation, a private corporation in Chicago, and the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services.

The first training session for the program will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday at the Assembly of God Church, 801 N. Almend in Carbondale. There will be three guest speakers. Other training sessions are scheduled later in March for unable to attend the Saturday session.

Improvisation made the first Improvisation made the first part of the show delightful. DeLuca has a quick wit which took him to a month-long stint with Second Cit, this summer, and which is intelligent enough to take to a college audience. It's easy to see why he's one of the meet received acts on the most requested acts on the college circuit.

The most creative bit of improvisation come when he sent a few pieces of paper into the audience, requesting those selected to write down whatever came into their heads. One person wrote that he was a lot like Richard Simmons. The sting sent him into a horribly

Of the nine who did get hypnotized, about half were really demonstrative. DeLuca began by giving sensor; suggestions to the participants Imagine taking a group of tired people to the Carribean Sea, watching them lie back and feel as though they're greasing themselves with oil. Or imagine regulating their temperature, making them feel increasingly hot and uncomfortable, having them respond as if they're them respond as if they're frying at 116 degrees. DeLuca's suggestions made these things "happen." The men started pulling off their shirts while the women squirmed and fanned themselves. Everyone was soothed when he brought the temperature back to moderate. But them he made them very cold, and suggested that they had a warm body right next to them. A few people reached for each other. Ore couple went into a cozy emb. ace

The fun heightened when DeLuca suggested to various particpants that when they tried to say their names, they would only stutter the first sound.

Then he told one female she wouldn't even remember her name and told a male that whenever he was asked his name, he would give a different response. It worked. One guy became so frustrated at his persistent stuttering that he took out his drivers license so that DeLuca could see that his namne was John and not 'J... The other confused male insisited his name was first Betty, then Ted, then Ed and finally

The show climaxed with the group leaving the stage and responding to suggestions vivile they were in the audience.

Three people were told to believe they were nightclub dancers with really great bodies. One girl took it to the iimit. The others, outshined, sat down as she played up to DeLuca first, and then the audience. She gyrated her hips and swooped her hair over her head. When brought out of the head. When brought out of the trance, she and DeLuca were standing on stage, receiving a standing ovation and howis.

Ex-nutrition counselor says vegetarianism is worth a try

College, says Chris Ellis, is a good time to make changes — changes like becoming a changes vegetarian.

"This is the perfect time for a person to ask himself about his person to ask nimself about his health habits and to try something new like vegetarianism," said Ellis, graduate student in food and nutrition and a former nutrition counselor at the Wellness health counselor Center

Becoming a vegetarian can make a person feel better about himself because of the physical and psychological effects. Ellis believes

"A vegetarian is usually leaner than most people sice he tends to eat less food that contains fat," she said. "Also, he will feel good about knowing that he is surving on vegetables alone

Frank Konishi, professor in human development, said many people claim a vegetarian is probably deficient in protein, vitamin B-12 or calcium. But he said a person who makes the proper food choices does not have to worry.

Joyce Combes, nutritional counselor at the Wellness Center and a vegetarian for 13 ears, said many ideas about deficiencies are myths

"It is not really a problem for a vegetarian to get protein because it is in every living thing. As a matter of fact, most Americans get too much protein," she said.

Combes said some examples Combes said some examples of foods that complement each other to provide complete protien are rice with beans, noodles with cashews and peanuts with wheat germ.
Fulfilling the vitamit B-12 requirement is a little more difficult than fulfilling protein needs, according to Konishi.

Proper care, technique keep runners in stride

By Mary Pries Staff Writer

You can't keep a dedicated runner off the road even if he's injured, but that's all right as long as you treat his injury

Every runner gets hurt sometime, if not many times, from all of the pounding his from all of the pounding his body gets. The real problem is that often the cause of the original injury is not diagnosed. The symptoms go away but nothing is done to find the cause, said former athletics trainer Robert "Doc" Spack-man at a workshop on runner's injuries.

"If diagnosed properly, 90 to 95 percent of injuries caused by running could be cured," said

The typical doctor doesn't diagnose the injury, but instead he tells the runner to lay off running for a while, said Spack-man, Then, when the pain goes away or starts to go away, the runner gets back out on the track without changing track without changing anything and sooner or later he hurts again.

"One marathon runner came to me because she was having trouble with her feet, and I told her she would have to go to an M.D. to get special supports," said Spackman. "Well, two doctors told her just to quit running for good. Here was a girl who could run 26 miles and who couldn't run doctor across the street told her to stop

"I think what runners really need is more doctors who are also runners," he said decisively.

There is a long list of questions that a doctor should know to ask the runner when he has an injury. Spackman said an injury usually is the result of some change that the runner has made, so the doctor has to help him figure out what he's oing different. If it's not an old injury and the runner hasn't made any changes, maybe it's something that has been there all along and was just waiting for the right time to hurt. Spackman explained that a runner may have a structural problem.

"One good thing to do is watch "One good thing to do is watch the way a person walks because it affects the way he runs. Lots od people don't know how they walk until someone tells them," he said. "I like to do this.
Sometimes I'll watch someone walk out at the mail or somewhere, and I just want to walk up to them and say 'bey, you are doing this all wrong."
Even if a person walks wrong, has flat feet or has an extra vertebrate in his back, he can still run. He just has to find the doctor who will help him, explained Spackman.
Some injuries can be easily prevented if a runner takes certain precautions.

certain precautions.
Spackman said warming up and stretching before running is vital because "running is only one part of physical fitness.
Flexibility and strength are important too. Also, the runner whose muscles are warmed up before he gets out on the road is less likely to sprain an anale if he trips or pulls muscles."

Other steps toward injury prevention are running on different sides of the road, running in the grass wilen it is possible, increasing distance slowly and wearing good running shoes, he said.
"Everyone wants to know what is the best pair of running shoes," said Spackman "Well.

shoes," said Spackman "Well, it's the pair that fits. There is no best name.

The shoe should bend at the "The Snot should have some arch support and should have a small heal," explained Spackman. "One thing a runner has to learn is not to be concerned about what number the size is because there just isn't any standard size. It is different in standard size. A be every shoe." Spackman said if a clerk in a shoe store asks the runner what size he wears, the runner is in the wrong store. Taking all of these precautions is important, said Spackman. A runner has to think about what he is doing to his body and give it some kind of

The three riders have earned qualifying points by competing in sanctioned shows during the fall and spring semesters, according to Coach Myke

Ramsey.
Other riders in the petition will be those who have placed first in their regional competitions or were high point riders in the region. In regional competition, the SIUC hunt seat team placed fourth and stock seat piaced third. Stock seat coach Gina Shiplett placed third in the coaches class, a combination of hunt and stock seat competition scores.

Big Ten teams fight for bids

"We just quit coaching," aughed Coach Jud Heathcote asked what turned things round for his Michigan State pround for his Michigan State Spartans, who hope to run their current winning streak to six games before the Big Ten basketball race comes to a conclusion this weekend.

The Spartans, who have won their last four games, including victories over Indiana and Ohio victories over indiana and Unio State, close the regular season with a pair of home games they could conceivably win. They take on Northwestern Wednesday night and Iowa Saturday night.

Currently, the Spartans are in Currently, the Spartans are in seventh place in the Big Ten with an 8-8 rcord but only one game out of third place where lowa, Minnesota, Illinois and Purdue are locked in a four-way tie with 9-7 records. Indiana is on top with a 12-5 mark with Ohio State second at 11-6. Indiana and Ohio State have necessary left and they play.

one game left and they play Saturday afternoon in Bloomington where the

Regardless of the outcome of the Ohio State-Indiana game, both teams will land in the NCAA tournament while several other clubs will be jockeying for other possible tournament bids.

The Big Ten has sent four teams to the NCAA tournament in each of the last two seaso but with the field boosted to 52 teams, some of the coaches think the conference should land as many as five or six herths

"If you're talking about the best 52 teams in the country," said Heathcote, "the Big Ten could send six teams. What kills could send six teams. What kills us is the tremendous balance in our league where we chop each other up. But if you take away our conference games, we'd have some of the best records in the country."

If Michigan State closes with victories over Northwestern and Iowa, the Spartans would close at 10-8 in the conference and a possible tie for third place.

And, as the saying goes, you don't mess with success.

"We're going to do a couple of things differently on defense. That's about it," Scott noted. "When you've won 20 games, you've had a good year, so you you've had a good year, so you don't change a lot."

Some statistics, however, some statistics, however, don't appear on paper. Like the fact that D.D. Plab may be the best all-around guard in the country. Or that the front line of Price, Warring and Sue Faber is perhaps the most defensively intimidating around. Or that the Salukis' 1-3-1 defense has been unpenetrable as of late.

Come Wednesday night, however, only one statistic will mean anything. And that's the one that'll appear on the scoreboard

"I think this team is tired of being almost there," Scott said in a warning-like demeanor. "They're almost a national team. I just hope they're hungry enough that they can go out and do something about that."

Saluki notes — WSIU radio will broadcast the game between SIU-C and Drake Wednesday night at 6 p.m.

pared to a stroll through a land mine field. There's only two ways out; one way you win, and the other...

Coach Cindy Scott and her hardwood gang will be trying to avoid the most volatile of land mines Wednesday night in Normal in the form of the Drake Bulldogs. Drake, 20-7 and seeded second, has not been kind to SIU-C this season, claiming two of its wins at the Salukis' expense. In Carbondale six weeks ago, Kay Rick calmly sank two free throws in the waning seconds of the game to insure an 82-79 win for the Bulldogs, breaking the Salukis' 11-game winning streak.

Three weeks later, with Connie Price seeing her first action, limited as it was, since the previous Drake encounter, the lowans upended SIU-C 82-68 in Des Moines.

Drake, like SIU-C, has made it this far on the strength of diversified talent. The Bulldogs are led by a triumvirate. Lorri Bauman, posting at the pivot position, is the leading scorer in the conference and fifth in the nation, averaging 26.5 points per game. She also ranks as the GCAC's leading free throw shooter (14th nationally), hitting the mark at an 83.5 percent clip.

As a team, the Bulldogs have been deadly from the charity stripe, hitting three of every four freebies. Only Stanford ranks above Drake in that category. And they're not too bad when they're being guarded either, ranking seventh in the nation in shooting.

Great expectations set by swimmers for finale

Tim Hill and his Saluki swimming team have given themselves only one assignment to complete over spring break — to place among the top five or six teams at the NCAA Division I championship in Lincoln, Neb.

Hill's team will have to battle for that spot with 55 to 70 other teams, including national powerhouses Stanford, Texas, Florida, Auburn, Alabama, Southern California and North Carolina

Carotina.

"Of course it won't be easy to get to the number five or six spot." Hill said. "It's going to be really tough. But I think it's a realistic goal, and I think we have a team capable of being competitive.

"The key for us will be to really go after our races, like we have in our regular meets all year," he said. "We have to swim the prelims like they're the finals. We did that at NICs.

and that's why we won.
"It's really important that we have fun." he said. "I'm looking forward to going out there, and I really don't have any fears about the meet. I'm more excited than anything else."

Stanford, expected to battle Florida for the national title, blew the Salukis away in a dual meet over Christmas break, 124-55. Hill said SIU-C can't realistically expect to compete with teams of Stanford and Florida's caliber, because the Salukis lack the depth and quality of the country's top two teams.

SIU-C also dropped a decision to Alabama in early season, 96-53, and was set back by Auburn 82-67. The Salukis dumped several other of the top teams in the country, including Cal-Berkeley, Kansas and South Carolina

Free throws upend Salukis

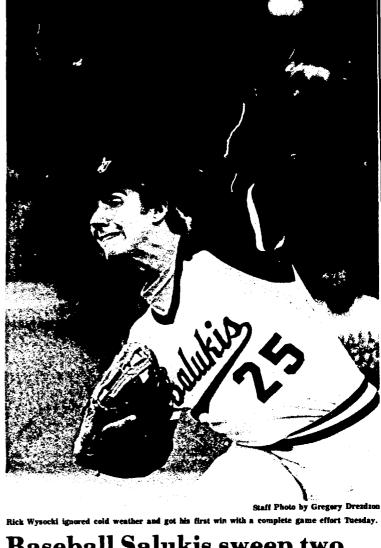

For 36 minutes SIU-C played

Illinois State evenly.

Then in the last four minutes the Salukis were submerged by 18 Redbird free throws. They lost 64-54 and bowed out of the Missouri Valley Conference tournament.

SIU Cled by as many as six in the first half, and was up 24-23 at intermission. The second half was anybody's game, until the Redbirds took charge. Raynard Malaine scored and they had a lead, 44-43, that they expanded with free throws.

Michael McKenney was ten of ten from the line in the last four minutes. He led Illinois State with 18. James Copeland had 17

Baseball Salukis sweep two despite dipping temperatures

By Dan Devine Associate Sports Editor

Usually baseball is the harbinger of spring. This year, warm weather arrived before SIU-C baseball, but it didn't stick around for the Salukis' Tuesday opener at Abe Martin

"This is the first time we've ever played at home this early," said SIU-C Coach Itchy Jones. "It's cold."

But Jones said the weather didn't bother his Salukis, who moved their record to 4-2.
"It has no effect," said Jones. "Most of these kids are from Chicago anyway They'd play in Chicago anyway They'd nay in Chicago anyway. They'd play in shirtsleeves. It was no different for us than it was for them." Second baseman Jim Reboulet agreed.

"From playing juco ball in Chicago you get used to it," he said. "You just have to put it out of your mind."

Reboulet got warmed up in a Reponer you wanted the first game by belting a 3-2 pitch over the fence in dead center field. He followed with another solo blast in the third inning, this one to left field, that started a four-run rally that gave the Salukis and starter Rick Wysocki a 5-1

That was enough for Wysocki, who went the distance, but the Riverman scrapped back and had the winning runner on base at the end.

Wysocki evened his record at 1-1 with the win. He allowed six hits and four runs while striking out seven and walking only two.
Mark Demien went the distance for the Rivermen in the opener, but in the nightcap Coach Jim Dix had to give his bullpen a workout.
