Budget vote timing upsets USG, GPSC

Student government leaders say plan will require close work with administration

By Signe K. Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A new budget for fiscal year 1997 passed by the SIU Board of Trustees Thursday will require extensive work with administrators, student government leaders say.

The budget, presented to the board by SIU President Ted Sanders, was adopted unanimously at the board's March 14 meeting. The budget is designed to allow monetary flexibility for unexpected incidents during the fiscal year.

Bill Karrow, Graduate and Professional Student Council president, said because the board adopted the budget, he will meet later this week with SIUC Chancellor John Guyon to work on the details of the plan.

"We're (GPSC) just hoping that Guyon will listen to us and help answer the questions we have about the budget," Karrow said. "We want to be an integral part of the budget (implementation)."

Karrow said the council has questions about how the budget will affect students within its constituency. He said some of the questions deal with faculty cuts and the length of time it will take a student to graduate.

GPSC and the Undergraduate Student Government sent resolutions to the board asking for a delay on the budget vote. The organizations were concerned about the meeting being held during spring break when students could not attend the meeting, Karrow said.

A. D. VanMeter, SIU Board of Trustees chairman, said the budget was presented favorably to the board prior to the vote despite the

Professor says GOP race not over for Dole

By Marc Chase
DE Editor-in-Chief

Even if Tuesday's Illinois primary will have little or no impact on the Republican nominee for the presidential race — unlike recent years — it may serve as a sign for how Republicans will do in Illinois for the general election, some SIUC political scientists say.

Focus on local, state primary candidates

The Almanac of American Politics cites the Illinois primary as "arguably determinative" for the nominations of Republicans Gerald Ford in 1976, Ronald Reagan in 1980 and George Bush in 1988.

With a large proportion of primary victories already under Republican nominee hopeful Bob Dole's belt, however, SIUC political science professor David Derge says Dole's nomination is already "in the bag."

"My guess is that it will probably be over by then (Tuesday)," Derge said.

And many political analysts and commentators speaking in several recent media reports agree with Derge, who worked as a pollster for Richard Nixon's campaign.

Dole has won several key victories in primaries across the country, including a sweep of the Super Tuesday primaries in Texas, Florida and five other states.

And Dole's success at the polls led to candidates Lamar Alexander, Steve Forbes and Richard Lugar withdrawing from the Republican primary race.

Dole's leading competitor for the primary, Pat Buchanan, will not offer any formidable challenge in Illinois or any of the other primaries taking place in Ohio, Wisconsin and Michigan Tuesday, Derge said.

"I think it's over right now," Derge said. "Clearly Dole has it all wrapped up in Illinois, and he even has the governor (Jim Edgar) in his corner."

But John Jackson, College of Liberal Arts dean and political science professor, said the overall race for the presidency is far from over.

"The Midwestern primaries have become somewhat anti-climactic this year," Jackson said. "But it is important for Dole that his supporters not become complacent in these primaries because he can't be over the top

Students enjoy spring break on a budget

By Jason E. Coyne
DE Arts/Entertainment Editor

Spring break spending does not always lead to a second half of a semester plagued by mac and cheese dinners. A trip to warm climates often means draining the funds in the bank account to party all night and sunbathe in the day.

For three SIUC students, it was a chance to spend cash and travel to choice locations to enjoy time off from school.

Karen Teaff, a senior in visual communications from Murphysboro, said she spent much more than she originally intended while skiing in Salt Lake City.

"It was real warm the first day, but then it started to get real cold and snowing," she said. "Skiing is always expensive, but I ended up having to buy extra clothes and gloves just to stay warm."

Teaff, who worked at the Recreation Center to save up $150 to go, did not expect to use her Visa to finance the trip.

"I spent my $150 pretty fast and then had to charge up about $200 on the Visa," she said. "That is why I'm working right now."

Jose Olaguez, a senior in radio and television from Evergreen Park, went to Panama City, Fla. with two friends from SIUC to avoid the long-distance trek to Daytona Beach. He said he found it inundated with spring break revelers.

Although many people stretch their financial limits and run up the bill on their plastic, Olaguez said his group did neither. Olaguez said he planned to spend about $200 on the trip and ended up only forking out about $100. He saved for the trip working part-time

RUSSIAN OFFICIALS SUSPECTED IN PRESS ATTACKS — MOSCOW—As the toll of deaths and injuries soars among critics of the Kremlin's botched and bloody campaign against separatist rebels in Chechnya, suspicion of government involvement has coalesced to outright accusation that the iron fist of authority is trying to choke opponents into silence. Four journalists have been slain in Russia already this year, on the heels of 18 fatal assaults against leading writers and interviewers last year and dozens of beatings, bombings, poisonings and arson attacks that have injured courageous colleagues from Moscow to Vladivostok. The incidents have had a chilling effect on much of the Russian media, as fears of retaliation overpower fragile commitments to the defense of free press.

BOSNIAN MULTIETHNICITY STATE QUESTIONED — SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina—For 3 1/2 years, this city suffered a withering siege by the Bosnian Serbs, who killed 10,000 people and destroyed hundreds of buildings in their scheme to create an ethnically pure state. But now, after three months of peace, Sarajevo is coming alive. But in a sad and ominous twist to Bosnia's history, recent moves by the government have called into question its commitment to an ethnically mixed city and country. The maneuvers raise the probability, Western diplomats and aid officials say, that Bosnia will split into three separate, ethnically homogeneous mini-states. That probability bodes ill for the future of the Dayton peace deal, which aims at preserving a multi-ethnic Bosnian state.

UNIVERSITY ADMISSIONS UNDER INVESTIGATION — While state lawmakers called for investigations into charges of favoritism in the University of California, Los Angeles admissions process, Chancellor Charles E. Young on Saturday acknowledged his staff may have "acted improperly" by showing preferences to applicants sponsored by UC regents and other public office holders. Young's admission follows a Los Angeles Times investigation that revealed several state politicians and regents prevailed on his administration to obtain admissions and housing favors for relatives, friends and the children of their business associates, sometimes ahead of better qualified students who were turned away from the highly competitive campus in the Westwood section of Los Angeles. Two state lawmakers and a member of the UC Board of Regents called for separate probes of back-door admission requests made to UCLA and other campuses of the university system.

'MOTOR VOTER' REFORMS REGISTERING INCREASE — In Florida, a recent statewide festival celebrated the registration of more than 1 million new voters, the flesh-and-blood progeny of the United States' controversial "motor voter" reforms. In Georgia, motor voter brought almost half a million new names to the rolls in 1995, far outstripping the paltry 8,500 who registered in 1994. Yet in California and other large states such as Michigan and Illinois that are led by Republican governors, the grousing continues. Motor voter, which took effect Jan. 1, 1995, requires officials at drivers' license bureaus, welfare offices and selected public gathering places to offer voter registration to people who come in for their services. While even some proponents agree that it needs tinkering, motor voter has had one clear beneficial effect—making the government bend to the needs of its citizens, and not the reverse.

Belly dancers spend break perfecting art

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Assistant Features Editor

Bare stomachs and flashy costumes may be a part of the entertainment element of belly dancing, but the actual dance takes more talent than a simple sway of a hip, some dancers say.

Heather Walker, a sophomore in physiology from Hoyleton, and Tedi Thomas, staff adviser to the Middle Eastern Dance Enthusiasts, a registered student organization, traveled to South Bend, Ind., over spring break to attend a workshop instructed by world-renowned dance trainer Ragia Hassan.

Thomas, who has danced professionally since 1982, said workshops and seminars are one of the only ways people interested in Middle Eastern dance can further their instruction.

"The higher up you are, the less people are around to train you," she said. "The only way to advance my training is to attend workshops."

Thomas said the chance to be taught by a famous instructor like Hassan is rare. She said Hassan is a coach and trainer of oriental dancers in Egypt, and does not come to America often.

"I was really excited because Hassan has been instrumental in the growth of the folk-style dance," she said. "She gives out a lot of information. You need to get as much of it as you can assimilate."

Thomas said Hassan incorporated ballet moves into the dance steps. Thomas said ballet causes more stress on the body than Middle Eastern dance.

"Many ballet movements can hurt and stress the lower back and knees," she said. "It was a perspective different from what I'm used to." Thomas became interested in Middle Eastern dance in the 1980s when a friend asked her to join a class in Carbondale. She said she now teaches an SIUC class.

"I try to teach the class for fun," she said. "There doesn't seem to be a large interest in it in the Carbondale area, but when people see the final product, they are rather amazed at how beautiful an art form it is."

Thomas said there are different terms for the rhythmic oriental dance because its origins have developed through different areas. She said that in Egypt, the dance is called "Raks Sharki," and the Middle East refers to the dance as "danse orientale."

Thomas said the actual dance consists of separate muscle actions layered into one smooth body movement. She said there is a large emphasis on abdominal muscles, as well as hip and chest movements.

"Beginners learn specific sets of muscle isolation," she said. "Every muscle from head to toe is isolated. After you learn each of the sets, you put the movements together in a layered effect."

Walker said the basics of the dance are not difficult to learn, but the movements can get tricky.

Single-family homes may be deleted from city proposal

By Brian T. Sutton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Single-family homes could be eliminated from the proposed Downtown special service area Tuesday night at the Carbondale City Council meeting.

The council also may vote to take steps to improve the condition of the water in northwest Carbondale.

If the ordinance approving the special service area is adopted, it would provide special attention to the downtown area for redevelopment projects and the hiring of a downtown manager who will oversee the projects.

Before it would be adopted, council members said they would consider eliminating single-family homes from the a tax requirement for occupants of buildings in the downtown area.

As it now stands, the ordinance states that property taxes for residents and businesses in the downtown area, including South Illinois Avenue would be increased. It also states the generated revenue from taxes will be added to donations and city funds and will go to redevelopment projects and to the hiring of a downtown manager.

Opponents of the plan say that instead of taxing businesses to pay for the special service area, the plan should rely on volunteer donations.

Jim Myers, owner of Printing Plant, 606 S. Illinois Ave., said he and other opponents do not like the idea of a downtown manager. Myers said he thinks the manager will tell them how to run their businesses.

City Manager Jeff Doherty has said the manager only would oversee projects, not regulate businesses.

Seventy-five people attended the public hearing on the proposed special service area at the March 5 City Council meeting. Seven spoke against the approval of the area. Twelve spoke in favor of it, including Raymond C. Lenzi, SIUC economic and regional development director.

The City Council did not vote on the ordinance after the public hearing on March 5 because council members said they wanted more time for city staff to consider provisions in the ordinance.

In other business, the City Council is expected to adopt an ordinance to allow the city to replace some water lines in the northwest area of Carbondale, alleviating the mineral buildup in the lines.

At the Feb. 30 City Council meeting, residents of Northwest Drive and Striegel Road brought evidence to the City Council of dirty water caused by mineral deposits in the water lines.

The residents said the water line was a dead-end line, with no continuous flow of water, causing mineral deposits to build up. The residents said the city had not informed them of any attempt to fix the problem.

Ed Reeder, director of Carbondale Public Works, said the current water lines are not lined with cement and will continue to erode. Reeder said the city will continue to attain property rights that will allow the city to attach water lines that create a continuous flow of water.

Tuesday's Carbondale City Council meeting is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. at the City Council Chambers, 607 E. College St.

Local public servants honored

For work done in public service and professional achievement, an SIUC employee and a former employee received the 17th annual Sturgis Award from the SIUC Board of Trustees Thursday.

James Fralish, an SIUC associate professor of forestry, received the 1996 Sturgis Public Service Award from the board at its Thursday meeting at SIUC.

Fralish has been active in the Carbondale soccer program as a coach, president, referee and member of the Board of Directors. He also started Carbondale Soccer Inc., a youth soccer program.

Along with various soccer activities, Fralish also has been involved with the Audubon Society and the preservation of Lusk Creek Canyon in Pope County, and he is a former member of the Illinois Nature Preserves Commission.

Fralish said the award goes more to the Carbondale community and those involved in the soccer program than to him. "It takes more than one person," Fralish said. "You need coaches, parents and coordinators."

Fralish said he was happy to receive the award because he plans to retire soon, and the award represents the 20 years of service he provided. "It benchmarks a 20-year

Voting in primary is more important than some realize

MANY PEOPLE MAY VIEW THE SIGNIFICANCE of Tuesday's Illinois primary with a strong dose of skepticism.

It's true that the races will take place within single parties. There will be no Republican versus Democrat contests where the election will determine whether a hard-line conservative or an unabashed liberal holds a political position.

It's also true that tomorrow's winners will still have to be elected in November before they hold office.

Many others may downplay the significance of the primary because it appears that Bob Dole has already secured the Republican presidential nomination.

Despite these facts, we believe the primary is very important and that students have a vested interest in participating in it.

One of the most crucial races will be the Democratic and Republican nominations for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Paul Simon. This race in itself disproves the belief that primary elections are not significant.

The primary will determine if the Republican candidate for the Senate seat on the ballot in November is pro-choice or pro-life. Lt. Gov. Bob Kustra believes abortion should be available (only with parental notification) while his main opponent State Rep. Al Salvi is pro-life.

A FISCALLY CONSERVATIVE PERSON WITH pro-choice sentiments needs to vote tomorrow to support a candidate that is tailored to his or her beliefs.

The same goes for gun control. Kustra supports the Brady Bill, Salvi does not.

'Democrats,' on the other hand, must decide if they want the fiery, anti-Washington-styled Pat Quinn to run for the seat or if the more moderate and experienced Dick Durbin should have the nomination.

The Senate race illustrates why voting in primaries is so important: There are big differences between the candidates within a single party.

The primary also gives students a chance to strike back at social critics who generalize young people as politically ignorant and lazy.

A STRONG TURNOUT OF YOUNG VOTERS would not only prove these critics wrong, it would also gain students more representation in the government that makes decisions that will directly affect their futures.

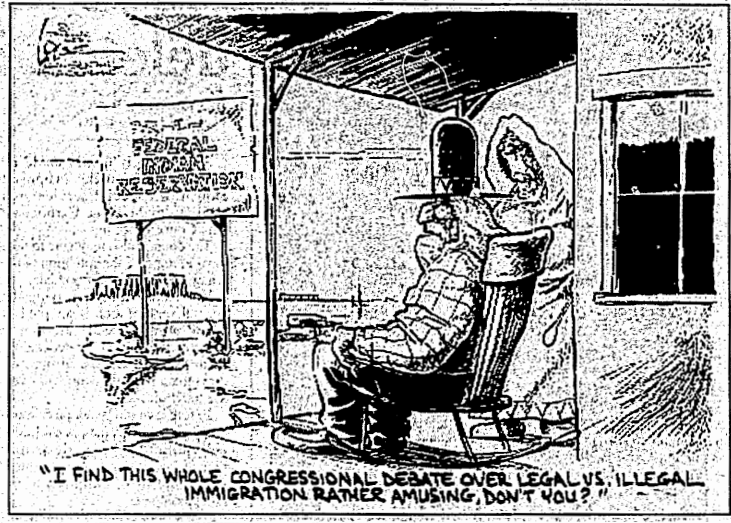

Politicians tend to listen to people who contribute to their campaign funds and people who vote. People who do neither are mostly ignored because they do not really have an effect on the future of politicians. Voting is the option that fits most students' budgets.

Simply voting in the primary sends our leaders a message: "We do care about the decisions you make and we can have an effect on your political future."

Not bothering to cast a vote sends another message: "It doesn't matter what decisions you make because we don't vote anyway." Do whatever the people who vote want you to do — even if it is not in the best interest of young people and college students."

Bill Clinton recognized the power of young voters in 1992 when they helped him become president. He reacted to this by giving adamant support to direct student loans, Americorps and other programs that were created in the interests of young people.

We hope politicians will receive a similar message in Tuesday's primary.

Minorities must put aside differences

In reading Matthew Hale's letter in the Daily Egyptian on February 29, I couldn't help but to admire his courage. A lot of racists hide behind political issues like affirmative action, NAFTA and welfare. Being a male of African descent, I confront many different forms of racism. Some racists hide and show cowardice like politicians. Others are brave and speak their minds, like Nazis. I can respect a person if they speak their mind; not hide behind side-show issues.

I must also agree with Mr. Hale on another issue that mentioned Pat Buchanan will fight against the liberal and minority agenda. Mr. Buchanan has also given the Republican Party a new direction.

He has stood his ground in a pro-business political party and has given credence to pro-labor ideas.

Thanks to Pat Buchanan and the Republican Congress, minorities have been able to do something that they haven't done before, unite.

Latinos and people of African descent realize that they have a lot of things in common. We share the horrible experience of colonial domination. We have both watched the exploitation of our respective countries by European powers. We also share the bond of being hated by the established regime of fearful demagogues who call themselves politicians.

With an African and Latino coalition, we can have a huge voting voice. We should put aside our petty differences and unite for common cause, our future. We can send a message to people like Pat Buchanan and his party, that of allegiance.

I'm not a big fan of President Clinton, but between him and Buchanan we minorities have to choose between the lesser of two evils. With a coalition, we can choose our own candidates and show this country that the years of abuse and racism against our proud cultures shall no longer continue. The Republican revolution has started, now it's our turn.

Reader questions writers authority

Whenever the temptation to read the Daily Egyptian opinion page sets in, it is best to realize the possible consequence of finding a letter there from Richard Whitney. Why? Not because his political viewpoint is necessarily wrong or because his writing style is boring to read. No, essentially the reason for avoiding a letter from our finest spokesman of the local National Lawyers Guild is that he enjoys making insupportable slanders against people he is apparently intimidated by but does not otherwise know.

As an employee of American Standard and a campus representative of Intercollegiate Studies Institute, I have to ask one simple question. How does Mr. Whitney qualify his self-proclaimed status as representative of the whole working class? More likely, he represents that small minority willing to risk everything in vain pursuit of absolute justice via social engineering. I know it takes all kinds and I do respect Whitney's moral sensibility. I wish, however, that in his weak attempts to destroy the character of people like Jeanne Kirkpatrick and more recently, Pat Buchanan, he would not assume authority which he does not possess.

I am tempted to take Whitney's March 6 letter apart sentence by sentence and show its faults. Such an ambition, however goes beyond reason considering the time such a project would consume. His premise that collective "unity" guarantees the best interests of the working class deserves some scrutiny, if nothing else. How high a priority this best interest is Whitney does not concede. What happened to the virtues of diversity by the way? Does that apply only in questions of race and sex and not apply in beliefs systems?

Mr. Buchanan could very well be a racist as Mr. Whitney contends. On the other hand, Elvis could still be alive and UFO's might soon invade our planet making even Mr. Whitney's sloganeering seem novel by comparison. What can we expect next from our future lawyer? Maybe a challenge against generally accepted accounting principles? Or how about slander against Pat Sajak, who could be the sinister force behind societies' imperfection, after all. It's just possible isn't it?

Racial disparity on death row calls for congressional inquiry

By William D. Matthewman
Special to The Washington Post

I recently served as lead defense counsel in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida on behalf of a young black man against whom the United States of America sought the most severe penalty possible: the irrevocable sentence of death.

The case was tried in Miami federal court from September 1995 through February 1996, under the federal "drug kingpin" statute, and the allegations in a nutshell were that a gang of young African American men in Miami engaged in the distribution of crack cocaine and committed two murders to protect their drug business.

The client and his co-defendants were acquitted by the jury of both homicides, and the federal government's attempt to obtain the death penalty was beaten back. This was the first federal death penalty case ever taken to trial in the state of Florida, and it was the first acquittal in any federal death penalty case in the country to date.

My involvement in the case, however, brought to my attention some very disturbing and unsettling facts regarding federal death penalty cases in this country. Since 1988, when the "modern" federal death penalty was enacted in the United States, our government has authorized 61 capital prosecutions under various federal death penalty provisions.

Of the 61 defendants against whom the attorney general has authorized the government to seek the death penalty, 12 have been white, seven Hispanic, two Asian, and 40 African American.

A review of those numbers shows that a full 80 percent of the 61 defendants approved for capital prosecution by the attorney general to date are members of minority groups. Incredibly, 66 percent of the federal death prosecutions have been brought against African Americans.

If you are alarmed and troubled by these statistics, as I am, then I think you will agree that the application of the federal death penalty in this country needs to be investigated, and now.

Why the rush? Because the pace is quickening. There are now at least seven persons in our country on federal death row who await their fate while their cases are being appealed.

Let's get the wrong idea. I am not a flaming liberal or an ivory tower idealist. Before becoming a criminal defense lawyer, I was a sergeant with the Miami Police Department. I worked on the street as a police officer in Miami. But I do believe, perhaps naively, that our government, and especially our federal government, should not be using the awesome power of the federal death penalty almost exclusively against minorities; and certainly not overwhelmingly against African Americans.

Government functionaries, I am sure, would be quick to argue that the federal death penalty laws are being fairly applied without regard to the racial background of the defendants and without any discriminatory intent. They would say that the skewed 80 percent minority rate is merely an unexplained happenstance. That is simply a shallow explanation, which is wholly unacceptable. I do not know why the federal death penalty is being authorized by the attorney general against minority defendants in 80 percent of cases.

I do not ascribe an intentional discriminatory motive to the attorney general, Janet Reno. In my many years in Miami, where I have lived my entire life, I have observed Ms. Reno to be a fair, honest and unbiased person. But something is wrong with the system and procedure that is authorizing these death-penalty prosecutions. The adoption of new death-penalty procedures and guidelines by the Department of Justice in January 1995 has not helped the situation.

Application of the laws in this country is supposed to be color-blind. It should be especially so when the federal death penalty is at issue. There is but one way to get to the bottom of what is going on with federal death-penalty prosecutions, and that is for Congress to step forward, hold hearings, and conduct a careful, in-depth review of all federal death-penalty prosecutions in this country since 1988. A congressional inquiry is needed and soon.

BE LESS PRODUCTIVE AT THE OFFICE.

The office has always been a place to get ahead. Unfortunately, it's also a place where natural resources can fall behind. So here are some easy ways to reduce waste at the office. Turn off your lights when you leave. Drink out of a mug instead of throwaway cups. And to cut down on trash, use both sides of a memo. Doing these things today will help save resources for tomorrow. Which is truly a job well done. LEAD-MO-SHARE. IT'S A CONNECTED WORLD. DO YOUR SHARE.

"The dance requires different movements than you're normally used to," she said.

"The movements are a lot looser. We are constantly moving the rib cage muscles, while most people are used to walking with theirs in."

Thomas said the dance requires very strenuous physical activity.

"One hour's worth of dancing can burn up to 400 calories," she said. "But the dance can be low-impact or made more strenuous. It's an art form and exercise available to everyone."

Walker said she thinks many people have preconceived ideas about the purpose of the dance.

"People always think of this erotic girl in a skirt with a diamond on her stomach doing lurid movements," Walker said.

"I wish people would come to our class and see if they still think that," she said.

Even though people think the dancers wear revealing costumes, Walker said the costumes are a necessity.

"The costumes accentuate and exaggerate our movements," she said. "They make our performance more complete. It's not about being risqué."

Walker said the first time she performed she was nervous, but she got over the uneasiness.

"It's really fun," she said. "You express yourself on a different level than everyone else. It can be hard to be uninhibited in the movements and let your body move where it wants."

"But when you let go, it can be very spiritual."

Walker said she appreciated the opportunity to learn different dance techniques from the workshop.

"I want to learn anything I can," she said. "I just want the opportunity to dance with other people and learn some new steps."

at a job on campus.

"We actually came in under budget," he said. "It was nice to come home with some money left over."

Panama City was a hot spot for vacationing collage students, Olaguez said.

"There were people from all over the place: St. Louis, University of Indiana, University of Kentucky and Missouri," he said. "It was a pretty big tourist spot."

Olaguez said the beachfront Sandpiper Beacon Hotel, where his group stayed, turned out to foster others from SIUC.

"Our neighbors on both sides of us at the hotel were both from Southern," he said. "We hung out at the hotel bar with them for a while."

Another SIUC student found his escape from Carbondale a bit more expensive but will not be eating scraps or leftovers due to it.

Joe Miller, a senior in recreation from Red Bud, said his "on a whim" trip to Los Angeles to see SIU graduate friends gave him an opportunity to escape Carbondale for a relatively low cost. He said he planned to spend around $200-$300 during his stay.

"I stayed with friends who put us up at their place, so all I needed was money for meals, the night life and gifts for people back home," he said.

Miller said since he decided only a week before spring break to venture out to Los Angeles, he had not saved for the trip. Though it was not well-planned, Miller said he had an enjoyable stay out West.

"It was nice to go to 80-degree weather coming from 20-degree Carbondale," he said. "It was good to get away from Carbondale and school, and I really enjoyed my six days out there."

Senior in recreation

Miller said his friends, Gregg Sandheinrich and Tim Habrock, both SIUC radio and television alums, now work for Disney Studios in Hollywood.

"They did their post-production work at Disney during the day while we hung out, and then we would go out to the hit the night life afterward," he said. "We went to The Blue Room and saw where they shot scenes from the movie 'Heat.' During the day we hit Venice Beach and saw some of the professional body builders working out there."

Miller said although the trip and finances were not planned in advance, he is going to survive just fine in the second half of the semester.

period of service before I retire," Fratlich said.

Fratlich was nominated for the award by Kathleen Pericak-Spector, an associate professor of mathematics.

Lee O'Brien, former executive director of University Broadcasting Service, received the 1996 Sturgis Professional Achievement Award posthumously. O'Brien's wife, Ila, accepted the award on his behalf.

O'Brien, who died in November, worked in public television for almost 35 years on the national level, Ila said.

Ila said she was thrilled her husband received the award because of the importance of public television to Southern Illinois.

"Public television in this area is important because a lot of people are not hooked up to cable, and it's a way of getting children's learning programs," she said.

O'Brien said her husband's standards for public television were very high. He emphasized the importance of education and educational programming.

"He always had time for everybody. He was never too busy."

Connie Kessler
Broadcasting employee

She said her husband also emphasized the idea of giving radio and television a professional setting to work in.

O'Brien was nominated for the award by broadcasting co-workers Connie Kessler and Robert Gerig.

Kessler said she nominated O'Brien for the award out of admiration for him.

"He was just a wonderful person," Kessler said. "He was a remarkable person. He always had time for everybody. He was never too busy."

Lindell Sturgis, the award's namesake, was a member of the SIU Board of Trustees and the state Teachers College Board for more than 30 years.

concerns expressed by student government leaders.

"I received a call from USG President Kim Clemens, and she was very upset to have the meeting over the student's spring break," VanMeter said at the meeting. "It's very difficult to coordinate our schedule with the University's schedule, and unfortunately, it does happen, and I'm sure it will happen again."

Scott Pfeiffer, USG chief of staff, said USG now will work on the budget's implementation with administrators. He said USG will express its concerns whenever possible.

"It's going to be interesting to see what kind of feedback we're going to receive from the students," Pfeiffer said. "It will also be interesting to see how they (administrators) work some of these budgeting procedures because of the questions on how this will affect the students."

The board also approved two honorary degrees for SIUC faculty members Darwin R. Payne and James R. Fornear, and approved renovations to Mae Smith Hall, located in University Park at SIUC.

presentation."

Some Carbondale businesses did their part by running food and drink specials in honor of the Irish holiday.

Ann Karayiannis, part-owner of Pinch Penny Pub, 700 E. Grand Ave., said she anticipated good crowds Sunday because SIUC students would be coming back to town.

"It's nice to see the kids come back and celebrate St. Patrick's Day in a familiar place," she said.

She said the nice thing about St. Patrick's Day is everybody is Irish on the holiday.

Gwenn Kowalewski, a junior in journalism from Bensenville, said St. Patrick's Day is a day to celebrate Irish traditions with friends, even though she is of Russian descent.

"It's an example of the many cultures that create the diverse country we live in," she said.

Mike Maddox, a junior in elementary education from Wheaton, said the holiday is a way to celebrate with family and friends.

"St. Patrick's Day is a happy day to celebrate the Irish spirit," he said. "It's another excuse to drink and party."

Dick Pearson, owner/manager of

"Everyone gets together and cooks Irish stew. We selected some townspeople to judge the stew based on its taste and presentation."

Jody Volner, Manager of the Molly-O

Mugsy McGuire's, 1620 W. Main St., said he served a traditional Irish-American dinner including corned beef and cabbage, carrots, new potatoes, Irish soda bread rolls and Irish beer.

Andrea Becker, a bartender from Six Bar and Billiards Inc., 517 S. Illinois Ave., said the bar added an Irish twist to the beer.

"We dyed Miller Lite with green food coloring in respect of the Irish holiday," she said.

Volner said she is also surprised by the large number of true-blooded Irish who come out every year to show off their heritage.

"There seems to be a lot of Irish people who come out of the woodwork," she said.

Dole visits Midwest, using budget dispute in campaign

DE PERE, Wis.—Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole brought his budget dispute with President Clinton to the vital Midwest political battlefield Saturday telling Wisconsin audiences that Clinton's demand for billions of dollars in additional spending dramatizes the difference in their view of government.

"He wants more money, more money all the time," Dole told several hundred people at a GOP luncheon in this Green Bay suburb, the first stop on a swing through two of the four Midwest states holding primaries on Tuesday.

Confident of winning the delegates in Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio, Dole extended an olive branch to his lone remaining challenger, conservative commentator Patrick J. Buchanan.

"I'm just going to say to the president, 'When are you going to stop spending somebody else's money?'" Dole declared here. "You've spent our money. You've spent our children's money. And now you're after our grandchildren's money."

As he closes in on the contests here and in California the following week that will give him the list of the 996 delegates needed for nomination at the Republican National Convention in San Diego, Dole is trying to defuse the bitter infighting of the earlier primaries.

"I'm trying to bring the party together," he said. "We're down to two candidates.... And I've never been one to dismiss what others were saying in the Republican Party.... Whether it was Steve Forbes or Pete Wilson or Lamar Alexander or Pat Buchanan, I've tried to listen, because each one had a message."

"We're going to carry Wisconsin." The Kansas senator sounded a note of defiance when it came to the fight over money for domestic programs in the interim appropriations bill that would finance government for the next six months. The White House and congressional Republicans have narrowed their differences, but Clinton spokesmen have said he will veto the measure unless Congress boosts spending for education and the environment another $8 billion.

State Representative Candidates

115th District

Electio 1996

Karl Maple DEMOCRAT

Karl Maple, Democratic candidate in the 115th State Representative District primary race, says he has the experience to be a legislator and would fight for Southern Illinois if he wins the general election in November. Maple will face incumbent State Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, in the general election in November if Maple wins the March 19 primary.

Maple said he gained education reform experience while serving in 1988 on Sen. Paul Simon's, D-Ill., staff. He said he worked on the staff of U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Ill., as an issues director and knows what it will take to legislate for Southern Illinois.

"I will be someone who goes into the ring for Southern Illinois when it comes to legislation," he said.

Maple said he would look into legislation that will focus on new ways to use coal so that coal mines in Southern Illinois can be reopened.

He said he would like people in Southern Illinois to take advantage of new opportunities to create new jobs for the area.

"We have a great diversity that has yet to be tapped into," he said. "I will try to bring financial help to SIUC to move into new areas, such as anything from catfish farming, buffalo raising to specialty fruits."

Maple said wineries should be given assistance to cultivate the area's wine making, therefore creating jobs.

Maple said he wants education funding to come from state income taxes instead of from property taxes.

"This system denies opportunity to Southern Illinois youth to exceed when their education does not match up with the rest of the state," he said.

He said he wants to reform education bureaucracy by focusing on the classroom and not the process of state intervention.

He said the state makes education funding too difficult and does not focus on the students.

"Far too many resources are expended on paper shuffling, and not enough resources are placed in the classroom," he said.

Maple has been teaching political science at John A. Logan College for 27 years. He has been a teacher's union representative and helped adopt the first union contract for the teachers at Logan.

Maple said he wants the opportunity to take what he has been teaching in the classroom and apply it to Southern Illinois. He said he does not want to be a career politician but wants to create reforms for Southern Illinois and then leave office.

Maple, an Elkhartville resident, has served on the Elkhartville City Council for 20 years and served five years on the Jackson County Housing Authority.

He said when he was the chairman of the Jackson County Housing Authority, he worked to hire back 12 maintenance workers who were fired for organizing a union. He said he recognized their union and negotiated a contract for them.

The 115th State Representative District is comprised of Union, Perry and Jackson counties.

Maple said he has been endorsed by six local chapters of the Illinois Education Association, which are teachers' unions at public schools.

Maple attended SIUC where he received a doctorate in higher education in 1980, a master's of science degree in political science in 1968 and a bachelor of science degree in political science and economics in 1967. He lives in Elkhartville with his son Mark, 18, an SIUC sophomore in engineering.

John Rendleman DEMOCRAT

John S. Rendleman III, a Democratic candidate in the 115th State Representative primary, says he will apply his knowledge of law to creating new laws that will benefit Southern Illinois if he wins the general election in November.

Rendleman will run against incumbent State Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, in the general election, if he wins the March 19 primary.

Rendleman, an attorney in Carbondale, said he has a plan, "Operation Home Front," to bring $300 million to Southern Illinois. He said the plan calls for reforms in education, infrastructure and employment in the 115th State Representative District. He said these areas are lagging behind Chicago and Chicago suburbs.

The 115th State Representative District is comprised of Perry, Union and Jackson counties.

Rendleman said if elected, he would create legislation to collect the $1.9 billion in debts owed to the state and then funnel $300 million to Southern Illinois.

Rendleman said he would use a portion of the collected debt money for Southern Illinois to buy computers for Southern Illinois classrooms.

"Every classroom should have at least one computer," he said.

Rendleman said current education funding is based on property taxes, and he said funding is not equal throughout the state. He said each school district receives different amounts of money for education in the current system. He said he would propose legislation that would draw money for education from state sales tax instead of property taxes to bring equality to education spending.

"In Chicago, they spend $13,000 per student, and in our district some schools spend $4,500 per student," he said. "We need the same opportunity in Southern Illinois to make sure our children can step into the job market prepared."

Another goal Rendleman said he would like to accomplish is creating jobs in the Southern Illinois districts.

"Our children move away from Southern Illinois because of the lack of job opportunities," he said. "We need to bring in industry, not only for our economy, but to have jobs here for our children."

Rendleman said he will take a portion of the $300 million he plans to channel to the region to improve Southern Illinois infrastructure, laying the groundwork for future economic growth. He said he will evaluate later what should be improved in the infrastructure.

"Improved infrastructure will bring in more jobs opportunities to the district," he said. "Improving these things in Southern Illinois is vital to our economic health."

Rendleman received a bachelor of arts degree in history in 1984 from SIUE and a law degree from the SIU School of Law in 1987. He was editor of The Alestle, SIUE's newspaper, and was the SIUE student body president.

Rendleman lives in Carbondale with his wife Andrea and his three children; Margaret, 5; Eleanor, 3; and Alison, who will be 1-month-old on March 19.

Rendleman has been endorsed by the AFL-CIO and the Illinois Federation of Teachers for the primary election.

Elsie Speck DEMOCRAT

Elsie Speck, a Democratic candidate in the 115th State Representative District primary, says if she wins the primary and wins the general election in November, she will assist in reorganizing Illinois' spending priorities.

If Speck wins the primary March 19 she will run against incumbent State Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, for a seat in the Illinois General Assembly.

The 115th State Representative District is comprised of Union, Perry and Jackson counties.

Speck said as a legislator she would reexamine education funding and reform education spending on the state level. She said federal education spending has declined to 1 percent of the federal budget.

"I want fair funding for education," she said. "I want to see a shift from education funding based on property taxes to state income taxes."

Speck said she would vote for a small increase in state income taxes to pay for education.

Job reform is an issue where Speck departs from her opponents. She said she would examine ways to create jobs that can fit into the new information age because manufacturing jobs are no longer plentiful.

"We need to rebuild our communities," she said. "We need to create jobs for people in their own communities, so they do not drive from their communities for jobs or move to new towns to find jobs."

She said she would involve SIUC to help create new jobs for the information age in the communities. She said the organization of not-for-profit groups that benefit the communities and provide jobs would be beneficial to the district.

"These groups work on a limited budget and would have to be funded through state and federal funding," she said. "These groups could improve the communities while providing jobs."

She said the jobs could be anything from taking care of the environment to teachers' aides.

She said she would help SIUC to research new ways to use existing resources not tapped into, such as coal.

"We need jobs that put bread on the table and help create a new society by rebuilding our communities," she said.

Speck said she has been involved in many activities in the area. She assisted in the organization of Carbondale Soccer Inc. in 1979, which is a not-for-profit group that oversees organized soccer leagues for children. She was involved in starting a local chapter of Habitat for Humanity, and she set up a transitional home for homeless families.

Speck is also in her fourth year as director of the Union-Jackson County Farmworkers Housing. She said the group sets up housing for 250 farm workers during harvesting season.

She said she knows first hand the importance of education spending because of her experience. Speck has a master's degree in education from Temple University. She was an elementary school teacher for 11 years and a full-time homemaker for 11 years.

Speck is the mother of two; David, 24, an SIUC graduate and May, 22, a University of Illinois graduate. She lives in Carbondale with her husband Charles, an SIUC associate professor in foreign languages.

Speck is endorsed by the Illinois National Organization for Women Political Action Committee and the Political Choice Political Action Committee.

State Senator Candidates

58th District

DEMOCRAT

Barb Brown

Improving the economy of Southern Illinois and improving the quality of education are the things Democratic candidate Barb Brown for the 58th Illinois Senate District says she will focus on if she wins the nomination and the November election.

Brown said she is focusing on the need for economic opportunity in Southern Illinois, which she says is a complex issue.

The 58th Illinois Senate District includes Carbondale, SIUC, Jackson County, Washington County and St. Clair County.

Brown said there are three different components in improving economic opportunities in Southern Illinois.

"The first is education," she said. "Southern Illinois and Southern Illinois children are at a significant disadvantage in this state in that our school district is the poorest in the state and that they are competing with children in Chicago-area schools where $14,000 is spent per pupil, per year. Ours is 4,000 per pupil, per year."

"The second is the need for greater investment in infrastructure needs. We will not attract industry unless we offer industry. Infrastructure needs are not things that can be done alone." Brown said the third part of boosting Southern Illinois economy is offering better health care services.

"I think if we don't have adequate health care, we will not be able to attract industry," Brown said. "We have to have health care services that can meet their needs. If not, I don't think industry will locate here. We need to keep our sights on and address rural health care."

Brown said that investing in education today is also very important, especially to the economy of Southern Illinois.

"Higher education is the icing on the cake in terms of economic development in the state," Brown said. "We really need to make an investment in education. We shouldn't be throwing up barriers to people trying to get an education."

"I think it is unfortunate we have a situation where corporate bankers are demanding to get a piece of funding for education and students suffer less benefits."

Brown said if students at SIUC vote for her, they will nominate someone knowledgeable in higher education and politics.

"Students can be assured they have some-

DEMOCRAT

Tony Mayville

Employment in Southern Illinois is the primary issue Democratic candidate Tony Mayville says he will address if he wins the nomination for the 58th Illinois Senate District seat.

Mayville said if elected, he will focus primarily on job creation and job salvaging.

"I think when the company is in trouble, the government should step in and try to help," Mayville said. "If we can come up with $8.5 million to have a prison located in a town, we should be able to come up with different means to help industries in trouble."

The 58th Illinois Senate District includes

Jackson County, St. Clair County and Washington County.

Mayville said another issue is the need to create a strike team which would go in and study an industry that is about to go out of business.

"The governor should have some kind of tactical team that would help employers in need of help, if we can help. In some circumstances, the company is going to go under no matter what we do for them," he said. "We have to start addressing the problems in front instead of in back."

Mayville said another key issue in his campaign is education and its funding.

"I think it's high time we step in and do something to equalize the cost of paying for children's education," Mayville said. "A 10-year-old child in Cairo or Carbondale. They are going to compete against each other in the work force. We're putting them at a disadvantage with other children."

"I think we should get education away from property tax and go with income tax as a way of funding education. It's a large enough issue that it should go before the public in a referendum. I think the public should have a voice in it."

Mayville said if Republicans are serious about balancing the budget they will cut the taxes that need to be cut, like those which benefit the wealthy.

"They try to beat up the students and take money away from the elderly and programs that support our very young," Mayville said. "In my opinion, the way you should judge the government is how they take care of the elderly and all those people."

Mayville said he believes whoever wins the one who knows their issues and is familiar with issues that affect them in this critical point in their lives," she said.

Brown said she believed the primary race against Tony Mayville will be a competitive one. "I think the race could go either way," she said. "There is a lot of aggressive campaigning. I think I have the message and the experience that could bring me out ahead."

Brown said that being a life-long resident of Southern Illinois also gives her an advantage. Brown and her husband, Richard, have three sons, Jay, 15; Matt, 12 and Nate, 10.

She has bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from the SIUC Political Science Department. She has been teaching American government and Illinois government at SIUC for 11 years. Brown was elected in 1990 as the representative to the Congressional District on the Democratic State Central Committee. She was re-elected to the position in 1994. She was chosen to be the deputy chairwoman of the Democratic Party in 1990. She has also attended Democratic National Conventions in 1976, 1980, 1988 and 1992. The winner of the race between Brown and Mayville will face the Republican incumbent Dave Luechtefeld in November.

Mayville

Democratic nomination for the 58th Illinois Senate District seat will make a good candidate for the November election.

"I think whether I win or Barb Brown wins the primary, both of us are capable of beating Senator Luechtefeld," he said. "No matter which Democrat the voters vote for in this primary, they're going to get a good candidate to vote for in the general election."

Mayville and his wife Charollette have two children, Ben and Amanda.

He is a graduate of Cahokia High School and attended Belleville Area College for one year before he took a job in coal mining. Mayville has been in coal mining for 21 years and is a section foreman for a local mine. He entered politics at the age of 18 when he ran for precinct committeeman and was elected vice president of the local 1670 United Mine Workers of America union when he was 25 years old. The election between Mayville and Brown for the 58th Illinois Senate District is March 19.

The winner of the nomination will run against Republican Senate incumbent Dave Luechtefeld.

without them. Dole has created a formidable momentum, but it's not over yet."

Jackson said Illinois is a leading state in the election of presidents.

The Almanac of American Politics states that every successful presidential candidate for the last 100 years — with the exception of Jimmy Carter in 1976 and Woodrow Wilson in 1916 — has won in Illinois.

"Illinois is extremely important in presidential elections, and we see evidence of this as early as (President Bill) Clinton," Jackson said.

Jackson said he thinks Clinton will win Illinois in the general election.

But he also said Illinois has a strong Republican base — its governor is Republican and several other executive offices are filled by Republicans.

Republicans in Congress consider agenda with political gains for GOP

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—As the focus of the presidential race shifts from the Republican primaries to the fall showdown, House and Senate Republican leaders are eyeing an agenda that will minimize contention while maximizing political gain to help Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., in his race against President Clinton.

They want a congressional session that is at once free of drawn-out, bruising battles with Clinton and gets the basic work of funding the government done in a businesslike manner but that also produces legislation that defines who the Republicans are — and vetoes that define who the president is.

The hope is to make Clinton, not the Republican Congress, the issue. "Our goal is to get rid of the veto president, the person standing between America and the agenda that they want — a balanced budget, welfare reform, Medicare reform, Medicaid reform," said Rep. John A. Boehner (Ohio), House Republican Conference chairman.

That is also the message Dole repeatedly emphasizes on the campaign trail, often referring to Clinton as "old veto Bill."

While they know where they want to be politically by the time the presidential and congressional campaigns reach the final days this fall, GOP leaders in both chambers are still struggling with the details of how to get there.

"We're still feeling our way," acknowledged one House Republican leader.

Part of the problem is differences of opinion over whether it is better to get something enacted in order to have an accomplishment

— even though Congress would have to share credit with Clinton — or to get something vetoed to have an issue.

"In some areas, maybe we shouldn't send him anything," Senate Majority Whip Trent Lott, R-Miss., said last week. "But in other areas we may send him a bill and see whether he signs it or vetoes it. For example, is he going to want to veto a product liability bill because plaintiffs lawyers own him?" Clinton said Saturday he would veto the bill.

In any case, the desire to avoid controversy is strong. They know from bitter experience that it is the president who has benefited from extended high-profile fights over the budget between Congress and Clinton. Republican leaders saw Clinton's standing in polls rise during the two government shutdowns while theirs sank.

Tyson captures first piece of heavyweight crown with KO

The Baltimore Sun

LAS VEGAS—Any questions the boxing world may have harbored as to whether Mike Tyson could regain the aura of invincibility he displayed before losing his undisputed heavyweight title to Buster Douglas seven years ago were eradicated Saturday night. Tyson battered World Boxing Council champion Frank Bruno of England into a state of helplessness after only 50 seconds of the third round.

With this devastating display, Tyson, who had spent three years in prison on a rape conviction before launching his ring comeback last August, recaptured the first piece of the fragmented heavyweight crown.

There were rumors that he had appeared flat and vulnerable in training, but this was vintage Tyson, a relentless fighting machine who had little or no respect for Bruno's punching reputation.

In fact, this was a much more thorough job than his five-round mop-up of Bruno in this same gambling capital six years ago. Nor did he show the wild streaks that were in evidence in his two brief tuneup bouts last year against Peter McNecley and Buster Mathis Jr.

"I was going after the knockout in the first round," said Tyson, showing real emotion for the first time in the week culminating with Saturday night's fight. "I threw punches in bunches. I wanted to bring him down. I knew he couldn't stand up to my power."

"Bruno was holding from the opening bell. He knew he was going to get knocked out."

With classic British understatement, the battered Bruno said: "I'm brokenhearted. Mike Tyson is better than I thought."

Perhaps the only salvation was the $6 million purse Bruno earned in his first defense since winning the crown on his fourth attempt by out-pointing former Tyson sparring partner Oliver McCall last September.

Tyson, 29, the biggest attraction in boxing, added $30 million to the $35 million total he earned in pulverizing McNecley and Mathis.

This had the electric atmosphere of a major international sporting event, with more than 4,000 British fans in attendance, many of them draped in the Union Jack. They began cheering and chanting "Bruno" in unison hours before the main event began.

Their unconditional support of England's most popular sports hero had lowered the odds in the betting shops from 10-1 on Friday morning to 5-1 by noon yesterday.

Tyson, in the unfamiliar role of challenger, was the first to enter the ring, decked out in his familiar stark black cutoff shirt, unadorned trunks and shoes, sans socks. He received a big ovation, but nothing to compare to the greeting for Bruno, wearing a saffron red, blue and white robe and looking supremely confident.

Improvements

"It (the season) was a real team effort," Klumper said. "The seniors, I think were a real key to our success. We had a good senior class, and they showed a lot of leadership throughout the season."

"I think a front runner for most improved would be (junior swimmer) Andrelina Rodriguez," Klumper said. "She had a real solid season. Every time she got into the water she improved a little bit. She had a very good meet down at the NIC's to finish out the season."

"(Senior) Melanie Davis really came through for us," he said. "She won two events at the NIC's (100 and 200-yard breaststroke) and won five out of six at the MVC meet."

For SIUC men's swim coach Rick Walker, winning the NIC's was icing on the cake for a year filled with team highlights.

"For the men, it was a bigger meet than the MVC Championships," Walker said.

Although the overall dual meet record of the SIUC men's swimming and diving team was just over the .500 mark at 8-7, one delightful surprise for Walker, as he reflected back on the season, was that a team goal, each individual taking care of their own responsibilities, was realized.

"It (the NIC's) was not a meet that I would have gone in there saying that we were definite odds on favorites," Walker said. "Yet the fact that each individual did take care of their own responsibilities, we as a team did come out as champions."

"I am pleased that we had foresight to be able to see that as the best way to approach our season," he said.

"I guess what I am most proud of is that our swimmers handled everything that came their way without ever backing down," Walker said.

According to Walker, improvement is a continual process which his team has dealt with and will deal with in the future.

"I think individually, we are a much stronger team than we have been in the past," Walker said. "I think we have more people who are bound and determined to do things right than to allow things to go wrong. That's the core of a successful team."

"We still have guys who will go home and somehow feel like they're doing all that they can to be good," he said. "I guess it's a constant battle. It's not one I like, and it's not the athlete I care for, but it's part of the game."

Top talent scouted in tournaments

By Shaun Powell
Newsday

This is March Madness for NBA scouts, too. Because players who are projected as high picks seldom attend the pre-draft camps in Portsmouth, Phoenix and Chicago anymore, the NCAA Tournament serves as a last look for the NBA.

Assuming for the moment that all underclassmen will declare for the draft, here's a list of several lottery-bound players who are top-five material, according to the scouts:

Ray Allen, 6-foot-3, Connecticut: He's considered the best player and athlete in the country. Allen's a true shooting guard, and his only drawback is being 6-3, which is about two inches shy of what NBA teams like in their big guards.

Tim Duncan, 6-10, Wake Forest: Solid citizen with solid fundamentals. Reminds many of Brad Daugherty. Problem is, Duncan's a gentle giant. He could use a mean streak and might be better off at power forward than center.

Marcus Camby, 6-11, UMass: Right now, he's the No. 1 pick because of his combination of height, athleticism and skill. His weak body will take a pounding until he adds weight. One scout said if Camby started playing in the NBA tomorrow, some teams might be tempted to use him at small forward. That's a credit to Camby's talent and a knock on his slight frame.

Keith Van Horn, 6-9, Utah: Nice leaper, good speed, outstanding basketball instincts. Scouts find his mid-range jumper to be dependable and his NBA meal ticket, although his ballhandling elicited a few thumbs down.

Stephen Marbury, 6-2, Georgia Tech: Best pure point guard in the country. That's what scouts are saying, even though he's a freshman. But they add that Marbury is hardly a polished product.

Allen Iverson, 6 feet, Georgetown: Unlike Marbury, he's more of a score-first point guard, and he doesn't have Marbury's pro body. Iverson does have the potential to carry a team.

Salukis' season halts with loss to ISU

NCAA Tournament hopes lost with second-round Missouri Valley Conference defeat

By Michael DeFord
DE Assistant Sports Editor

A trip to this year's NCAA Tournament just was not meant to be for the SIUC women's basketball team.

SIUC's hopes for a trip to the "Big Dance" were dashed March 8, when Southern lost to Illinois State University 64-59, during the second round of the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament in Des Moines, Iowa.

In order to secure a bid to the 64-team tournament, the Salukis needed to win the MVC Tournament outright — a challenge Southern was determined to overcome.

Backed by a strong offensive showing, and a solid defensive stance, Southern's matchup against the Redbirds looked promising in the first half of action.

Paced by junior guard Kasia McClendon, SIUC went on a 9-0 scoring run midway through the first half as ISU's offense sputtered, going nearly 6:00 minutes without a field goal. McClendon tallied a total of 20-points on the evening, ten of which came in the first half.

By the break, the Salukis held a 10-point advantage over the Redbirds, 23-33.

However, SIUC's advantage didn't last for long during the second half of action as the Redbirds' offense gained momentum while the Salukis' offense went cold.

Paced by senior forward Melanie Ward's 23 second half points, the Redbirds outscored the Salukis 41-26, ending any hope for an NCAA Tournament invitation.

"We just didn't get it done," SIUC assistant coach Mary Helen Walker said after the game. "We were ahead 10 at half-time, and ISU came out and played a great second half."

Having split a pair of regular season matches, both teams were eager to settle the score once and for all in the tournament: SIUC demolished the Redbirds 89-54 Jan. 25 at SIU Arena, then lost to ISU 78-61 Feb. 22 at Redbird Arena.

Saluki head coach Cindy Scott said both teams were more than hungry for a tournament championship, but ISU was more mentally prepared for the game.

"We really did not play well in the second half," Scott said. "Certainly we wanted it as bad as they did, but they were just mentally able to go out and get it — we just didn't seem to be able to get that done."

With the loss, SIUC ended the season with an 18-10 mark.

Although the season ended on a rather sour note, Scott said she is very optimistic toward next season, despite losing five seniors to graduation.

Next season Southern will be without guard Nikki Gilmore, forward Christel Jefferson, guard Tracy Holscher, forward LaQuanda Chavours and forward Heather Slater.

"We will be back next year, and we will be very young," Scott said. "We signed four great kids early and we don't think we will skip a beat next season with the outstanding freshman that we've already signed."

Swim teams achieve goals in championship season

With the close of another season for the SIUC men and women's swim teams, a look back on the season brings out a year filled with team accomplishments highlighted by individual feats.

According to SIUC women's swim coach Mark Kluemper, many season bests were recorded at the season finale (National Independent Championship) meet in Little Rock, Ark. on Feb. 21-24.

"We knew there were a lot of season bests, but for several of the swimmers, they (the times) weren't as fast as they wanted them to be," Kluemper said.

"Overall, it (the NIC's) was a real good meet for us," Kluemper added. "We were real pleased with the effort of the team."

Having been beaten by Cincinnati Nov. 12 in a meet which was held in Champaign, Kluemper said he felt his team was the underdog going into the NIC's.

"I think it was a real good team effort for us to go down there (to Little Rock) and win that meet," Kluemper said.

Kluemper also said the main goal for the team was to win both of the "big" meets of the season (Missouri Valley Conference and NIC meets), and the team accomplished that goal with first place finishes in both meets.

"We did very well with both of them," Kluemper said. "So I'm real pleased with the season."

Kluemper expressed his admiration for his athletes' performances and cohesiveness over the stretch of the season.

"This team really bonded well," Kluemper said. "They really performed as a team, they backed each other all the way, they had a lot of spirit, and because of that I think they were very successful."

Kluemper said the biggest victory for his team was accomplishing the goals they had set forth at the beginning of the season.

"I think they (the team) really accomplished the three biggest goals that they had for this year," Kluemper said. "Number one was to win the NIC meet;

"I really felt like this might be the year we get someone through to the NCAA's."

number two was to win the MVC meet; and number three was to continue to be ranked nationally based on their academics."

Although Southern's women's swimming and diving team reached their main goals for the season, Kluemper had one other goal that once reached, he feels will make a huge impact on the team.

"I really felt like this might be the year we get someone through to the NCAA's," Kluemper said.

Kluemper's said the best shot of realizing the goal of going to the NCAA's this year would come from senior swimmer Ila Barlean. One week after the NIC's were over, Barlean competed in a time trial meet at Indianapolis, Ind., where she broke her lifetime best in the 100-yard butterfly with a time of 56.53.

According to Kluemper, Barlean's time is still below the NCAA Championship consideration time standard, but said he is hoping for an invite to the championships.

"Last year it took a 56.3 to get invited to the meet," Kluemper said. "They (NCAA) take about the top-27 swimmers in the country. My gut feeling is that she'll probably fall just a hair short, but you never know."

Kluemper said overall, the 1995-96 season was filled with many individual improvements as well as season top performers.

Southwest Missouri State University's run in the NCAA Tournament came to an end Saturday after suffering a 73-55 first round loss to the University of Texas in the East Regional.

The Missouri Valley Conference champion Lady Bears were outbounded, 19-6 on the offensive boards, while committing 21 turnovers.

Chicago Bears fans will be paying extra for tickets starting next season. The average cost of tickets is now $38.56. The Bears attribute the climb in ticket prices to "increased operating costs."

Former Texas A&M basketball coach Kermit Davis has been named head coach at the University of Idaho. Davis, who has spent the past two seasons as an assistant at Utah State, left Texas A&M in 1991 for NCAA rules violations.

St. Louis Cardinals general manager Walt Jocketty said Saturday the team will not trade veteran shortstop Ozzie Smith to make room for newcomer Royce Clayton.

Jocketty reacted to an article in the USA Today Friday that said the Cardinals might trade Smith to the Philadelphia Phillies.

Smith, who is 41 years old, is battling Clayton, 26, for the starting spot at shortstop this spring.

Cardinals manager Tony La Russa said Clayton will probably start with Smith playing a couple times a week.
