F-Senate to review department move

By Brian Gross
Staff Writer

Moving the computer science department from the College of Liberal Arts to the College of Science will be the focus of the Faculty Senate meeting today.

Yaakov Varol, computer science chairman, John Jackson, dean of COLA, and Glenn Gilbert, chairman of the COLA council, will provide information and answer questions for the senate at its meeting in the Student Center at 1 p.m. today.

The senate will vote on a resolution drawn up by the Undergraduate Education Policy Committee asking the senate to approve moving computer science from COLA to the College of Science.

Senate President Don Garner said the presence of Varol, Jackson and Gilbert will help the senate in discussing the proposed move and deciding which way to support it.

"This is one of those important issues that we ought to discuss fully and talk to all the principle people involved," Garner said. "Having them there will help us to facilitate a decision."

Varol initiated the proposal in fall 1989 by submitting a request to Ben Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and research. Jackson expressed his opposition to the move last month.

Both the Graduate Council and Undergraduate Student Government senate supported the move at their meetings last week.

Poshard: Miner safety hindered by proposals

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

A proposal to weaken safety regulations may put miner's lives in danger, Congressman Glenn Poshard said.

The Cartersville Democrat testified last week before the House and Labor Subcommittee on Health and Safety that the proposed changes in rules concerning coal mines could endanger the lives of the miners.

The Mine Health and Safety Administration is proposing to relax a number of rules covering mine ventilation because officials within the administration say current technology is available to increase the air velocity within the mines.

"I can't believe we have so many miners faced with the loss of their jobs from an unfair clean air bill, and the MSHA also suggests those who keep

Students call for end of homophobia

Triangles symbolize persecution of gays

"Never again." "Silence equals death."

Just two of the meanings behind the pink triangles that have been popping up on sidewalks all over campus the past two weeks.

Three graduate students in the Department of Cinema and Photography have colored 30 to 40 triangles on University sidewalks in an effort to support Carbondale's gay and lesbian community and to make the SIU-C student body more aware of homophobia toward this community.

Recognized today as a symbol of gay pride, the pink triangle was originally used to mark homosexual men and women in Nazi concentration camps during World War II. Triangles of various colors were assigned to groups that did not fit the Third Reich's image of what human beings should be.

Immigrants were tattooed with blue triangles. Jehovah's Witnesses wore purple. Homosexual men and women were forced to wear pink. Tens of thousands of gays and lesbians were condemned to torture and death as a result of their labels.

"This once-atrocious symbol has now taken on a 'never again' type of meaning," said Jennifer Johns, one of the collaborators on the triangle project.

Chris Maitzen, who first came up with the idea to paint the triangles around campus, said, "The triangle's history is one of extreme persecution. Today there are more subtle forms of persecution, stereotypical notions of how gay people act and think.

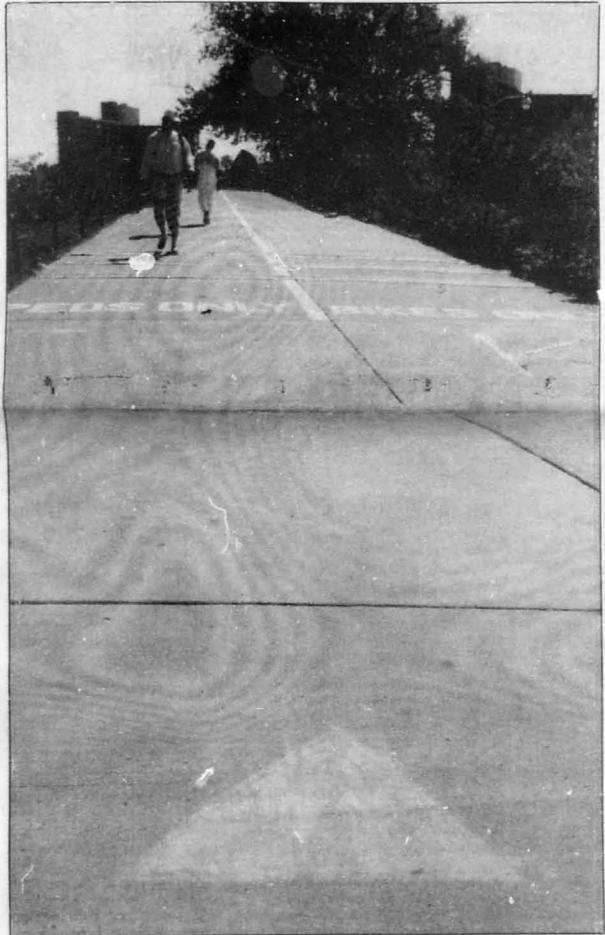

"I think we need to get around this labeling notion," Maitzen said. "People rely on these notions to determine what homosexual men and women are like, without looking at the individual.

"We need to get off this idea of seeing them as gay first," Maitzen continued. "We need to consider them as human beings first.

"For me this project says to the student body that homosexuals have every right to live just as satisfying a life as we do," he said. "They have the same joys, the same problems..."

Johns defined homophobia as "a fear of sexual difference usually based on a myth or untruth that the person has heard or been taught."

This fear usually leads to negative atti-

West Germany to stay in NATO after unification

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said Monday the western part of Germany will remain in NATO after the country is unified, even if Soviet troops remain in the eastern section.

In a radio interview with the government-run Deutschlandfunk, Genscher said the six-power conference in Bonn last Saturday on German unity had produced a "historic change" by placing in German hands the decision on when unification will take place.

He did not answer directly the interviewer's remark that the conference had produced no practical solution to the problem posed by Soviet opposition to NATO membership for unified Germany.

But he said the series of six-power meetings to be held on security issues and other talks on East-West relations will not block the reunification process.

Officials say bar overcrowding not a problem

By Jackie Spinner and Nora Bentley
Staff Writers

Bar overcrowding along the Strip is under control, Carbondale officials said Monday.

"We are experiencing a different attitude down there regarding crowds on the premises," Carbondale Police Chief Ed Hogan said.

The Daily Egyptian reported a wave of bar overcrowding violations in February, after a team of reporters conducted patron counts in seven bars on South Illinois Avenue and West College Street in late January.

Of those bars counted, Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois Ave., Frankie's, 204 W. College St., Sidetracks, West College Street and American Tap, 518 S. Illinois Ave. exceeded their legal capacity limits.

Carbondale police cited Frankie's and American Tap with overoccupancy violations in February.

"I think it's under control at least for the semester," Hogan said.

Police and fire officials and City Manager Steve Hoffner met with several bar owners to find a compromise between enforcement of the city ordinance concerning bar capacity and compliance with the law, Hoffner said.

Dawgs to play Bradley in first game

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

The Saluki baseball team will play Bradley at 3 p.m. May 16 in the Missouri Valley Conference tournament in Wichita, Kan.

The Salukis are the No. 2 seed in the tournament. They won three of four from the Braves in a four-game series April 7-8 here.

Bradley finished fifth in the Missouri Valley Conference with a 6-13 record. It finished 27-29 overall. Bradley lost two of three games this weekend at Illinois State.

The final standings in the Missouri Valley Conference: Wichita State (14-6, 41-11), SIU-C (14-6, 42-10), Creighton (13-7, 40-17), Indiana State (8-12, 40-19), Bradley (6-13, 27-29) and Illinois State (4-15, 23-28).

SIU-C finished with the best overall record and tied Wichita State for first in the Valley but the Salukis did not win the right to host the tournament.

SIU-C split with top seed Wichita State and both teams won three games against No. 3

Creighton. But Wichita State defeated No. 4 Indiana State four times, while SIU-C managed only a split against the Sycamores.

Although the Salukis lost a chance to host the conference tournament, Saluki coach Richard "Itchy" Jones doesn't think his team is in a bad position.

"I don't think it will bother us," Jones said. "Practically our whole season has been on the road. We just didn't want the long bus ride."

If the Salukis defeat Bradley, they will play at 11 a.m.

Thursday, May 17. The complete brackets for the MVC tournament will be released today.

The winner of the conference tournament receives an automatic bid into the NCAA tournament. With three nationally ranked teams in the Valley (SIU-C, Wichita State and Creighton), there is a chance of the conference receiving two at-large bids.

Jones said the Salukis' fate will be determined next week.

"It all depends on how we do in the tournament," Jones said. "That's why they have a selection committee. Someone has to make these tough decisions. We just need to keep playing good baseball."

The Salukis still are 10th in Baseball America's Top 25 poll. They dropped to 21th in the Collegiate Baseball/ESPN poll.

Wichita State is fifth in Baseball America and ninth in Collegiate Baseball/ESPN. Creighton is ranked 24th in Baseball America.

The Stanford Cardinal (46-9) replaced Miami (46-8) as the number one team in both polls.

Grad student moves to Tae Kwon Do nationals

Heavyweight wants to make Olympics in Barcelona in '92

By Jeff Grieser
Staff Writer

Henry Waller will try to kick and punch his way to the title at the 16th National United States Tae Kwon Do Championships May 24-26 in Madison, Wis.

Waller, a graduate student in telecommunications from Peoria, placed second in a field of six in the heavyweight division at the 13th Illinois State Tae Kwon Do Championships last month at Triton College.

The victory launched Waller to a berth in the national tournament.

The top three finishers from each division go on to the national meet, which will include representatives from all 50 states, Waller said.

Waller is competing on the Illinois team for the third time, but this is his first time in the heavyweight class, which includes competitors 182.6 pounds and heavier.

"I want to be at 185 pounds for nationals to be quicker," he said. Waller is at 196 pounds now, he said.

Waller, a second-degree black-belt in Tae Kwon Do, said he's been involved in the martial arts for 10 years.

"It's something that carried over from high school football," he said. "It's a good way to stay physically active."

SIU-C does not have an official Tae Kwon Do team so Waller trains by himself at the Recreation Center. He went to the Olympic Trials in Miami in 1988 and would like to continue in the sport.

"One goal of mine is to go to the 1992 Olympics in Barcelona," he said.

Earning a spot on the Olympic Team is far from an easy accomplishment, though, because those who are victorious at nationals must battle current Olympic Team members to make the squad, Waller said.

Waller said the literal meaning of Tae Kwon Do is "to smash with the hand or foot." He said the sport is similar to kickboxing, but that there is a distinct difference.

"There is a lot more kicking in Tae Kwon Do than in kickboxing. Tae Kwon Do is 90 percent kicking," he said.

Waller, who is studying for his master's, said: "You get out (of Tae Kwon Do) what you put in. The more you work, the more you benefit."

Stewart: Even honest people sometimes make mistakes:

COLUMBIA, MO. (UPI) — University of Missouri officials, including Coach Norm Stewart, Monday promised a response to a series of NCAA allegations in front of the Committee on Infractions meeting in August.

Missouri released a letter — with names of individuals blacked out — from the NCAA that outlined 15 allegations, ranging from the use of a third party to help in recruiting to unauthorized transportation.

"I take any violation of NCAA rules seriously," Stewart said, reading from a statement, "no matter how minor it may seem."

Stewart said his staff is comprised of "honest" people, but "even honest people sometimes make mistakes."

He said, "It is not the number of allegations ... the important point is the nature of those violations found by the Committee on Infractions, whose job it is to give us a fair hearing."

"I feel that when the evidence is heard, the committee will not find that we have the type of program that deliberately goes out and breaks the rules."

Neither Stewart, Chancellor Haskell Monroe nor Athletic Director Dick Tamburo would comment on specific allegations and would not attempt to guess at what kind of penalty the NCAA could hand down on the Big Eight Conference basketball champions.

Monroe admitted that the school's own investigation recently uncovered two additional possible violations. Because of the investigation, the team's assistant coaches — Bob Sundvold and Rich Daly — were on three-month contracts, which expire the end of June. But as to the notice the NCAA sent Missouri on May 2, he said the letter contained no surprises.

"May and June will be time spent for the university to respond to the allegations. We would hope that we make the Aug. 11-14 (infractions) hearing and that by the middle of September we should be in position to know what the results of our responses are," said Monroe.

Women's golf team favored to win Gateway Conference Tournament

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

The Saluki women's golf team may be the favorite to win the Gateway Conference this season, but coach Diane Daugherty won't be satisfied until the final results are tallied.

In a poll of Gateway Conference coaches, SIU-C was tabbed the favorite to capture the 1990 Gateway Championship May 10-11.

The showdown traditionally has been a matchup between the Salukis and Illinois State. Each team has collected three championship trophies in the last seven years. The Dawgs finished runner-up to the Redbirds in last season's championship played on Illinois State's home course.

"I believe that as play has indicated all year long, (the championship) will be between us and Illinois State," Daugherty said.

"We're about as even as two teams can be. I would like to say that we have the advantage with three seniors while they don't have any.

"Our seniors are gonna do anything they can to win," Daugherty said. "I think that Lisa Johnson, Julie Shumaker and Lisa Mcritt will all share in the duties of leading us to the championship."

In tournament play this spring, SIU-C edged Illinois State in two of three tournament matchups. This year's tournament will be played at a neutral site—The Oaks Golf Course in Osage Beach, Mo.

"The course is definitely a neutral site for the first time," Daugherty said. "The host school has historically won with the home course. That's fair to everyone."

"It's one of the prettiest courses I've ever played. It's got to be one of the most demanding that we have played all year because it's extremely tight," Daugherty said of the Par-72, 5,900-yard heavily-wooded course.

"It will really come down to who can hit the ball the straightest."

Though the Salukis boast the league's leading golfer in senior Lisa Johnson, the top to bottom balanced scoring has provided much of the Salukis' success this year.

Johnson leads her teammates and the Gateway with a 81.3 stroke average in spring competition. Shumaker is a close second at 81.7 followed by Merritt at 82.3. Johnson and Shumaker share the team lead with three rounds in the 70s.

Sophomores Anne Childress, Deborah Minter and Gina Giacone own 84.2, 85.9 and 85.9 spring stroke averages respectively.

Daugherty said Johnson's emergence as the Gateway's leading golfer is can be attributed to her control over her driving game. And much of that is attributed to her mental game.

"As for the mental part of her game—she's really dedicated herself. She won't let a bad shot bother her. She's a fighter and knows we're counting on her."

"She's been a great role model this year for the younger players," Daugherty added. "She's worked hard and I hope that they see the hard work has paid off for her and the team."

MOSCOW (UPI) — Latvia's new prime minister said Monday he is still hopeful Moscow will agree to talks on independence for the Baltic republic, but a spokeswoman said the government is making plans to deal with a Soviet blockade. Ivars Godmanis, leader of the nationalist Popular Front bloc in the republic's Parliament, said after his election Monday the republic is still waiting for an official response from Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to Friday's declaration of independence.

Americans reluctant to buy less-polluting cars

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — Though most Americans want clean air, they're reluctant to buy less-polluting cars that may be more expensive, difficult to start in cold weather and provide less miles per gallon, a poll released Monday says. The poll, taken by the Wirthlin Group, surveyed 900 motorists and was conducted last month in six of the country's smoggiest cities. It found 94 percent of those interviewed are concerned about air pollution, and 90 percent think automakers should be required to build less-polluting vehicles.

Lori J Barks, graduate student in cinema and photography, poses next to one her 15 photographic quilts that can be viewed at the University Museum.

Family images focus of show

By Jeanne Bickler
Entertainment Editor

Lori J. Barks, a master's of fine arts candidate in cinema and photography, based her thesis show on family images, some that are 40 years old.

Her show, "Through Grandfather's Eyes," is a series of 15 photographic quilts. Each quilt has images of Barks' family dinners on them, printed on fabrics.

"I called the show 'Through Grandfather's Eyes' because he's the photographer and not represented in the images," Barks said. "I wanted a way to incorporate him into the show."

Barks collected her grandfather's slides of family dinners from various family members. They span a 30-year period from 1945 to 1975.

She enlarged the negatives and contact printed them onto cloth. She also used fabric paints.

"I painted the faces out so they couldn't be seen," she said. "It could be anyone's family. The faces also are out because of the fading of memory that takes place."

She said many memories we have are recreated and remembered because of photographs.

"The work shows a reverence to the big family dinners of the past," Barks said. "Now the interaction is lost. Families eat on paper plates with plastic silverware so they don't have to talk."

Doing this project brought Barks closer to her own family.

"My mom did the handwork on the outside of the quilts," she said. "It was nice working with her. It was a sharing process I wouldn't have had otherwise." The rest of the quilts are machine sewn.

After the show, Barks plans to pass the quilts down in her family. Each quilt measures about 20 by 26 inches.

"Quilts are passed down female to female," she said. "Just like dinners are female-oriented, with women doing all the preparation."

The show opens today at the University Museum, with a reception from 6 to 8 p.m. It runs through May 15.

Peace effort draws Carbondale support

National effort hopes to mobilize resources for cause

By Stephanie Steirer
Staff Writer

The Independent Music Network of Carbondale is banding together with other businesses around the nation to support an effort for peace.

That effort is "1% For Peace," a non-profit, non-partisan organization, which is dedicated to mobilizing the nation's resources for the cause of peace.

The main objective of "1% For Peace" is to unite businesses, government and all concerned citizens in supporting the redirection of just 1 percent of the money devoted to military spending, which is currently $300 billion each year.

That 1 percent, which equals $3 billion, will go to support increased global communications and understanding, and will also support citizen initiatives, which address world problems of hunger, health, housing and environmental distress.

While the "1% For Peace" works to enact legislation, the "1% For Peace Education Fund" works to support current peace projects.

The Independent Music Network, which promotes independent recording artists, helps promote the effort of "1% For Peace" through advertising in its Independent Music Guide and in the Carbondale Nightlife, a weekly arts and entertainment guide, published in cooperation with the IMN.

"I read about the '1% For Peace' project in a national magazine and I liked everything it stood for," said Michael Beck, spokesperson for IMN. "I personally support '1%' with donations, and I also sell T-shirts and bumper stickers, and distribute fliers to further promote the '1%' cause."

Other businesses, such as Ben and Jerry's ice cream, support the peace effort by promoting "1% For Peace" in its advertisements.

The Logos Emporium, a New York bookstore, promotes "1% For Peace" by printing a message on its cash register receipts — "Our government spends $300 billion on military each year, why not spend 1% for peace?"

This message sums up the goal of all businesses who help support the "1% For Peace" campaign.

Job well done for SIU-C AAF chapter

THE UNIVERSITY'S chapter of the American Advertising Federation has something to be truly proud about as the academic year draws to a close. The more than 100 members of the club all had something to celebrate after the chapter also swept all the categories at their regional competition.

It's only the second time in the history of the University that an AAF chapter has won this prestigious award. The thrill of victory for the club is especially sweetened by the fact that SIU-C came in second last year to a triumphant Ball State University, but this year, the tables were turned as BSU had to take a back seat to SIU-C superior strategies, execution and presentation skills. The chapter's membership showed that advertising at SIU-C was clearly the best, competing against other clubs representing three states: Illinois, Indiana and Michigan. The win also ranks the chapter as one of the top 15 in the country and provides it with a shot at the national title, which will be determined at the national competition June 9 in St. Louis.

NOT BAD, coming from a club that was almost an extinct entity on this campus less than two years ago.

But all this didn't occur overnight. The AAF members have not been resting on their collective laurels. They have been working long hours all year preparing for this competition. The five-member team which represented the club in the competition consisted of Jennifer Banks, Robb Haas, current President Beth Kahl, Jeff Marren and Ron Sone. This dedicated team rehearsed over and over again until they got the performance just right. In addition to putting in long hours for research, creative development, writing, formatting and project presentation, the members had to find a way to pay the bills.

ADVERTISING IS an expensive endeavor. Banks, AAF President for the upcoming school year and present board member, estimates the group spent "thousands" of dollars to put out copy and graphic design for prototypes and plans books of their advertising campaign. Starting with a $250 donation from the School of Journalism and less than $200 left over from last year in their University bank account, the members made a superlative fund-raising effort to meet these high costs. They held the Second Annual Swine and Dine, a pig roast fundraiser and signed up to stuff flyers in the Daily Egyptian to raise money. Members donated materials and time and, on top of all that, paid an additional $10 more than the national dues of $15 to belong to the SIU-C chapter.

The University needs to be behind the AAF and all the other academic clubs across campus that work so hard to represent SIU-C in the best possible manner, not only emotionally and spiritually, but economically. For organizations such as these to continue to prosper, they need our utmost support.

Mexicans practice perestroika

President Carlos Salinas de Gortari delights in innovation. His latest departure from orthodox practice — his unexpectedly greeting Pope John Paul II at the airport, as the pontiff arrived for a week-long stay in Mexico — carries Salinas' brand of perestroika into church-state relations.

Like the Soviet Union, Mexico is in the throes of a restructuring launched by an energetic president. No one knows how far Salinas will carry his bold program, but gestures like his courtesy to John Paul Sunday have great resonance with his people.

The vast majority of Mexicans are Catholic, yet Mexico alone in Latin America has no ties to the Vatican. This anomaly springs from Mexico's anti-clerical tradition, rooted in a time when the church was the ally of conquistadors and dictators. The 1917 constitution bars the church from owning property and priests from operating schools, speaking about politics or wearing vestments in public.

In February, however, Salinas named a representative to the Vatican. Diplomatic recognition may come during the pontiff's visit. It is far easier, of course, to send an envoy to Rome than it is to convert the old guard of PRI, the government party, to fundamental change.

Salinas has his work cut out for him. Admirably, he is pressing ahead on many fronts.

Tracking measures talented students

Your recent article, "Educators blame 'tracking' as source of math problems," displays unrealistic opinions. The first is that "tracking creates a self-defeating cycle..." and that tracking is short-changing students. We all know that tracking in math does not doom someone to a life of misery and poverty. Each school (at whatever level) have a "famous" alum who was either a poor student or a dropout who subsequently made it big in the real game: life. But beyond this, we already "track" people in all endeavors. In order to define "superior" performance we must also be willing to define "inferior" performance. Why, then, should we discriminate against those who are more motivated and capable of academic excellence? Do we tell basketball coaches that all students must play on the varsity team without regard to ability or performance? Do we tell student-athletes in junior high or high school that they are not allowed to play too well because it makes the other students feel inferior? On the contrary, we exalt in their performance and skill and we extol them. We track athletes according to ability, perseverance and most importantly, overall importance. No. We assume that in sports and all endeavors of life that those who succeed are those who performed best according to talent and capability as well as perseverance. Why, then, is there such hypocrisy in public school academics?

Critics of tracking want to avoid putting the responsibility for performance where it should be: on the individual and his or her family or guardians. Tracking is a direct result of the cumulative pattern of a student's past performance, interest, motivation and a myriad of characteristics relating to attitudes about education and family ideals. Tracking is the result of a student's cumulative behavior. The individual obtains the benefits and bears the costs of his own school efforts. This is a simple fact. At best, schools can only present opportunities for students. One should hardly discriminate against those students who acknowledge and desire the chance to obtain more math or better academic training.

In societal terms, one might ask how many chances should a disinterested or poorer student get before they are tracked so as not to limit those who are performing better? Should society pay forever for an individual's poor performance? At what point does the individual bear the consequences of his own capabilities and performance?

If you do not value education or the role of mathematics in future American society, is that a reason for "untracking" academically talented students?

Those people who want to homogenize curriculum, students rates of progress, etc., in my opinion, are really trying to avoid the fact that some people must be judged as having performed less well in order to identify those that have performed better. They have a great distaste for the labels attached to performance in schools. In the real game of life, "Winners" are identified no matter what schools do. —Stan Lieber, professor, geography.

Employers: Hire qualified people for positions

This letter is in response to the article written by DE staff writer Jerianne Kimmel on math "tracking." More directly I would like to address the statement that "the majority of people joining the work force by the year 2000 will be blacks, Hispanics and women, leaving only 15 percent of the work force to white males." This statement has been presented in publication ranging from The Wall Street Journal to the January 9, 1990 issue of Family Circle.

The statement leads one to believe that by the year 2000, six out of every seven job openings will be filled by women and minorities. In the working world, some companies are already basing their hiring goals and other policies on this nebulous statistic. There are even organizations lobbying politicians to make day care the financial responsibility of the public due to these figures.

The statement is a misquote from the booklet WORKFORCE 2000 published by the Hudson Institute which shows that the 1985 labor force of 115,461,000 is expected to increase to 140,461,000 by the year 2000. Of this 25,000,000 net increase, 15 percent are expected to be white male and 85 percent women and minorities. When one factor in 35 percent retirement over the 1985-2000 period and considers all new work force entrants, the actual percentages are closer to 34 percent white male and 66 percent women and minority. This fact can be confirmed by calling the Hudson Institute at (703) 824-2048 and talking to Arnold H. Packer, author of booklet WORKFORCE 2000.

In the area of professional and technical employment, available statistics show that the total Engineering entrants to the workforce will be 74 percent white male and 26 percent women and minority. The December 1989 issue of ASME news (American Society of Mechanical Engineering) shows 15 percent of all Bachelor of Science degrees in engineering go to minorities. Last year, at SIU-C, 29.1 percent of the engineering degrees and 43.6 percent of the mathematics degrees went to women and minorities.

This letter is not meant to question or be critical of EEO or other minority programs. It is only to inform students applying for jobs and employers recruiting students that the most quoted statement applies to the net increase. If and when the shortfall in mathematically skilled workers is filled, each job should be filled by the person best suited for the position regardless of race, gender or statistic. —Paul Newman, senior, mechanical engineering.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board, whose members are the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, the associate editorial page editor, a news staff member, the faculty managing editor and a School of Journalism faculty member.

Letters to the editor must be submitted directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which affiliation of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

tudes or behaviors such as violence, harmful jokes and condemnations, Johns said, noting the damage that homophobia causes in the lives of gay men and women.

"If homosexuality is invisible, homophobia is rampant," she added.

Johns said the triangle project mirrors a coming-out process because the general public is being let in on the meaning of the symbol.

Once their meanings are known, general reaction to the triangles will be different than before, Johns said, in much the same way that gays and lesbians face daily repercussions for their sexuality.

"Because of homophobia, coming out is such a negative experience," Johns said. "When you're labeled, you're also faced with prejudices and negative stereotypes."

"There was some concern that letting the public in on its meaning would alter the internal power behind the symbol (long recognized as a symbol of unification within the gay and lesbian community)," Johns said.

"But it was then determined that letting people know would eventually be empowering because it gets rid of the silence. It also dispels the lies and myths which cause homophobia."

Maitzen agreed that there was concern about publicizing something so personal, but said, "If we just kept it quiet, we'd be preaching to the choir. It's the people who misunderstand homosexuals who need to know about this symbol and its history."

Johns said the most uncertain part of the project is the reactionary phase, over which the collaborators have no control.

"The hardest part will be getting people to look at the symbol and understand how negative homophobia is," she said, noting that the project's ultimate goal is to make people question their own misconceptions and homophobia.

Maitzen added, "I don't think every student's going to give up their fear. It's not going to work for everybody. There will be people who will want to remain safe and comfortable."

Greg Massey, the third collaborator, said the triangle project is being done for a graduate-level Theory of Photography class taught by Jan Roddy.

"The project had to be something that interacted with the public," Massey said, noting that the class has turned out to be more of a contemporary art theory class, with readings in sociology, art, politics and psychology.

"The contemporary artist has to be aware of these things," Massey said. "It's a socially conscious aspect to art making."

Massey said the group had jokingly considered spray-painting the triangles on the sidewalks, but instead has used pink chalk to color them.

Maitzen said the collaborators are taking a photographic approach to the project and eventually will make a slide presentation, documenting their efforts.

"The slide presentation has its own photographic language," Maitzen said. "There are some things you can't do with a regular set of prints."

Maitzen said he got the idea for the project while jogging on campus one day.

"I was familiar with the history of the pink triangle," he said. "I noticed all the triangles in the bike lanes and thought what a great idea: it would be to paint all these pink and maybe write 'silence equals death' out beside them."

Participating in the so-called two-plus-four talks were East and West Germany and the four World War II Allies — the United States, Soviet Union, Britain and France.

He conceded Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze had not spelled out in detail his views on the security aspects of German unification.

The interviewer asked if Shevardnadze's reference Saturday to the continuation of security measures for a number of years after unification meant that the Eastern part of Germany would continue to belong to the Warsaw Pact.

Genscher replied that Shevardnadze had not outlined in detail his concept, but it appeared from a talk he had with Shevardnadze that the Soviet Union wanted to wait the situation in Europe to improve before tackling the complicated NATO issue.

"Let me remind you that the federal government in the last few weeks said again and again that it can imagine for a certain stage the presence of Soviet armed forces in the territory of what is now the German Democratic Republic," Genscher said.

"In any case, it is not disputed that when we are unified the Federal Republic of Germany, the part of Germany that is in NATO, also will remain in NATO."

He added that this would require a lot of discussion.

Genscher called disarmament the key to both German and European unity.

He indicated his belief that unity and Soviet security interests would be served by East-West disarmament as well as expansion of the functions of the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

their jobs should work under less-safe conditions," Poshard said.

According to a report from the United Mine Workers of America, the proposed changes would diminish safety in ventilation areas.

Steve Ball, legislative director for Poshard, said there have been no revisions to the MHSAs policies for the last 13 years, and these revisions are merely proposals.

"The MHSAs is doing some re-evaluating, and relaxing some of the rules are only in the proposal stages now," Ball said.

He said since relaxed proposals have received criticism from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health and other legislators, they probably won't be adopted.

"Any retreat from safety is unacceptable," Poshard said. "Miners are operating at higher levels of productivity in recent years without giving up their demands for as safe as workplace as they can get. I hope the MHSAs will come to see that as the hearings continue."

Poshard said a decision about the new regulations should be made sometime in the summer, but in the meantime the hearings will continue, spearheaded by the Education and Labor Subcommittee.

Poshard also said the hearings should be moved from suburban Washington D.C. to places where men and women working in the mines would have a voice in the safety regulations.

Hogan said it is important for the bar owners and city to work together to keep crowds within legal capacities and not for the city to act against the bar owners.

Hoffner agreed. "Sending the police in like stormtroopers creates negative feelings toward the city — one that doesn't have to be there," Hoffner said. "Bar owners appreciate this approach."

"There are ways we can accomplish our goals without alienating the business community, too," he said.

Hoffner said the city can continue good relations with the bars without sending police in like "stormtroopers" to issue tickets.

"Our goal is not to issue tickets," Hoffner said. "But we will issue tickets and prosecute those people who dodge the law."

Anthropology prof discusses Illinois settlers

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff writer

Although early Southern Illinois settlers faced uncertain dangers and many hardships, they came in droves to settle the cheap untamed wilderness of Illinois.

Jane Adams, assistant professor of anthropology, said in her lecture Sunday on downstate settlement between 1800 and 1850 that the benefits of moving into a new territory seemed appealing to many people.

Most of the people who settled in Southern Illinois were from North and South Carolina and Virginia, Adams said.

"Despite the high malaria and separation from family and friends, people came to claim the free land or to free their slaves," she said.

Adams said families of people claimed a large plot of land to farm that ensured the families their offspring would have something to inherit when the time came. "Log cabins were not only cheap to build because of the surrounding woodland, they served to help clear the land for farming," she said.

Adams said people ventured out overland by the Cumberland and other lesser known trails. They also traveled by America's waterways but mainly up and down the Mississippi and Ohio rivers.

"There were various modes of transportation," Adams said. "Flat boats, steam boats, canoe-type boats and barges."

Adams said only the very rich traveled on steam boats and most people traveled by flat boats in which they could place all their possessions. The lumber used to build the boats was often sold after the travelers destination was reached.

Adams told stories of the "lawless" boatmen who traveled the Ohio River in barges and caucos, a panic whenever they stopped in town ports. Adams said shortly after the industrial revolution "Yankees" from the north began to settle farther south than they had previously done so before.

She said there was a great rift between the people. The Yankees saw the Hill People as "lazy" and not industrious. The Hill People stuck by the old ways and couldn't relate to Yankee ways.

"The Yankees settled in towns and built frame houses with glass windows," Adams said. "They spoke with a different dialect than the Hill People."

"Neither had a high regard for the other," Adams said. She also quoted from a traveler's account of what Southerners thought of as any worthless or gaudy, inselled or varnished thing is said to have been "Yankeed over" and if someone felt cheated, they had been "Yankeed."

Adams' lecture was part of a traveling display "The Great Migration: Transportation and Settlement in Illinois 1800-1850," sponsored by the Illinois State Historical Society and the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency. The exhibit will be on display at the University Museum until June 29.

Teachers return from Latvia

Music instructors experienced Lithuania troubles while on trip

By Dale Walker
Staff Writer

Two SIU-C music instructors have returned from a month-long trip to Latvia in which they experienced some effects of the Soviet blockade on Lithuania.

Harold Miller, associate professor in the School of Music specializing jazz studies, and Robert Allison, associate professor also specializing jazz studies returned from Riga, Latvia on April 29.

MILLER AND ALLISON were in Latvia as part of an ongoing exchange SIU-C has with the Latvian State Conservatory. Latvian professors will come to SIU-C this fall as part of the exchange.

During their stay, Miller and Allison gave master's classes in using a computer equipment that can notate performed music onto paper and a sequencing program that recalls music digitally among other technologies. Miller, a jazz bassist, taught jazz theory and improvisation and Allison taught trumpet playing techniques, Miller said.

THE LATVIAN STATE Conservatory is the top conservatory of music in Latvia, Miller said.

"The teachers were good, the music was superb and the music theory was very advanced," Miller said of the conservatory.

Allison agreed, saying the students of the conservatory were serious, studious and interested and the musicians were good.

Allison added that the Latvians see themselves as an occupied country.

"THEY BELIEVE THAT the way to improve their country economically and spiritually is through independence, and I agree with them," Allison said.

The economy is in a shambles, Allison said. That's what 50 years of Marxism has done to it.

"We were given money to spend, but there was nothing really to buy," Miller said. "Their best department store had the goods of about one eighth of one of our Walmarts or K-Marts," Allison added that "what there is to buy is junk."

MILLER ADDED THAT gasoline was cut off in Latvia as a result of the Soviet Union's blockade on Lithuania. Paper was also very hard to come by, he said. All water had to be boiled before use.

Because of the blockade, Miller added, nobody could get gas. It still takes 10 years to get a car, he said.

ALL LONG DISTANCE phone calls went through Moscow, and it was very hard to place a call, Miller said.

"Probably because they don't have enough KGB agents to listen

in," Miller said half in jest, half serious.

He said he did notice the Soviet Union still remains paranoid about communications to outside countries.

Everything in the country is badly in need of repair, he said.

"You feel sorry for the people there," Allison said. "Latvia was a prosperous country before 1940. The Soviet system they didn't want has really screwed things up for them."

THERE IS FREEDOM of speech, however, Miller said, adding that some newspapers were critical of the government. Latvia also has a lot less crime than the United States.

There were many positive points, Miller said.

"The food was very similar to American food, but high in cholesterol," Miller said.

They have no government health agencies like ours that make sure certain health standards are met, he said.

ALMOST ALL STORES and restaurants, however, were devoid of technology, Miller said. They use an abacus instead of cash registers, he said.

"They're proud people," Miller said. "They don't look poor. I don't know where they get their stuff (clothes) but somehow they find them," Miller said, adding that he could not find items of quality worth purchasing.

Although he said he bought some Amber, a jewel common to the area formed from a resin found in lakes.

BESIDES TEACHING classes, Allison and Miller went to about 12 concert performances and sight seeing trips to Latvian attractions like castles and palaces, Miller said.

"The musicians were top-notch," Miller said. "The concerts were really good, some of the best stuff I've ever heard. The whole culture is really into music."

Miller and Allison lived in an apartment in Riga and commuted every day with the public transportation system. The public transportation in Riga was extremely cheap, Miller said. It was much cheaper to travel across town than it was to send out a postcard.

THE TRIP WAS funded mostly from a United States Information Agency Grant for about $50,000, Miller said. The grant was written by Alfreds Straumanis, a professor in the theater department.

Besides the information agency grant, SIU-C provided more than $37,000 in indirect help and the Latvian State Conservatory has given more than $5,000 toward the exchange, Miller said.

Softball team seeking first-ever Gateway title

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

Never in the history of SIU-C softball have the Salukis won the Gateway Conference Tournament.

This year the team will have to get by some tough competition to gain the conference crown this weekend in Carbondale.

The ten-team double elimination tournament begins Thursday at 10 a.m. and concludes Saturday afternoon.

The Salukis finished the regular season with a 10-2 Gateway record, 29-8 overall. They finished second in the conference to Illinois State (12-2, 29-24), after losing a doubleheader to the Redbirds last weekend in Normal.

Western Illinois, the Gateway preseason favorite, finished third with an 11-3 conference mark.

Illinois State received the No. 1 seed in the tournament and will play the winner of Wichita State (5-12, 23-40) and Northern Iowa (3-13, 24-28) at 2 p.m. Thursday.

The Salukis, the No. 2 seed, will match up with the winner of Indiana State (4-8, 21-9) and Bradley (2-12, 11-28) Thursday at 2 p.m.

A first-round victory would put the Salukis in the quarterfinals Friday at noon against the winner of Western Illinois and Southwest Missouri State (7-9, 14-21). A loss would put the Salukis in a 10 a.m. game Friday.

The Salukis have a dismal 10-14 record in Gateway tournament action the last seven years, while tying for seventh the last two years with 1-2 records.

As one of the tournament favorites, SIU-C joins Illinois State in the hot seat. Three of the last four years, longshots have come out on top.

Last spring, fourth-seeded Wichita State surprised the field. In 1987, seventh-seeded Western Illinois won and in 1986 Indiana State was the Cinderella despite an 11-6 record in the regular season.

Agassi hopes 'selfish' attitude will carry him all the way to top

ROSSELL, Ga. (UPI) — Andre Agassi cares very little about other people's expectations, which is one reason he won't play Wimbledon this year.

"If they told me I could go there and win Wimbledon this year, I still don't think that would influence my decision," said Agassi, who actually played Wimbledon in 1987, losing in straight sets to Henri Leconte of France. "My decision is to take that time and get stronger. I'm in this for the long term. I'm not in this for the short term."

Theories abound as to why America's best tennis player shuns the hallowed grass courts of the All-England Tennis Club.

But for the first time, tennis observers are giving serious consideration to the recently turned 20-year-old's claim that it's more important for him to skip the grandest of the Grand Slam tournaments in order to hone his game and strengthen his body.

"I don't think there's any question that Andre will be the No. 1 player in the world someday," said Frank Hammond, who has refereed some of the most prestigious tournaments in the world, including the U.S. Open. "He has all the tools. It's just a matter of time."

Agassi, who is ranked No. 4 in the world with a 16-2 match record on the IBM ATP Tour this year, has won tournaments in San Francisco and Key Biscayne, Fla., beating Boris Becker and Stefan Edberg along the way. He began his French Open preparations with a triumph Sunday in the AT&T Challenge exhibition tournament in Roswell, topping a stubborn Jaime Yzaga, 6-2, 6-4, despite suffering an apparently minor injury to his right calf.

The injury — a slight strain to the soleus muscle — was not expected to keep Agassi from playing in the German Open.

"I'm not really into people's expectations anymore," said Agassi. "I'm more into what I want to do. On the surface, it might sound selfish, but I think that's better for all of us."

"I'm working toward being the best Andre I can be," Agassi added. "My goal is to play the best tennis I can. If I do that, then everything will fall where it should."

Everything to Agassi is a U.S. Open title or a French Open and possibly the No. 1 world ranking now held by Ivan Lendl.
