SIUC IN TURMOIL

Police guard the doors of Woody Hall as a crowd gathers outside in protest of the Vietnamese Studies Center on Jan. 30, 1970. Scenes like these were frequent on the SIUC campus during the spring of 1970. Students and faculty protested the studies center, the war in Vietnam and the Kent State killings, all of which led to rioting and demonstrations in early May. On May 12, 1970, President Delyte Morris ordered the closing of SIUC. After 25 years many of those involved still have deep feelings about what happened here in 1970.

Remembering the Days of May

Though the days of May usually represent the nearing of the end of school, and the hope of many warm days to come, 25 years ago this month the SIUC campus was a hotbed of political activity and stood as a sign of the social movement of the late 1960s and the early 1970s.

On May 12, 1970, because of riots and demonstrations which disrupted classes and inflicted damage to buildings on campus and to the city, SIUC President Delyte Morris ordered that the school be closed indefinitely.

The student protest at SIUC was part of the nationwide protest against the country's increasing involvement in Vietnam and the U.S. invasion of Cambodia.

Also riots erupted on May 4 in response to the shooting deaths of four students at Kent State University in Ohio by members of the National Guard during a Vietnam War protest.

But SIUC had a unique point of protest. The Agency for International Development gave SIUC $1 million to set up a Vietnamese Studies Center in Woody Hall to teach Vietnamese culture.

The center was believed then, as well as now, to have had ties with the Central Intelligence Agency.

Some students and faculty believed that through the center, SIUC was becoming involved with the war effort.

With these things at hand, early May brought intense rioting and demonstrating on the campus and in the city, known as the Days of May, which caused Morris to close the school.

Though classes began again in the summer, the University felt the aftershocks of this period long afterward, and some of those who were opposed to each other at the time still feel a tension today.

Effects of this period remain. The presence of Faner Hall, built in 1971 as a riot-proof structure, was in response to the riots of 1970. Many students of the class of 1970 did not have the opportunity to go through graduation because of the closing of the University. The class will be represented in this year's ceremonies.

Spring 1970: A season of protests

Students' opposition to the Vietnam War, Kent State killings and University policies prompted riots.

By Stephanie Molerti
DE Assignments Editor

In spring 1970, many SIUC students actively participated in demonstrations and riots with the most violent occurring in May.

The riots were brought on by the United States invasion of Cambodia and the May 4 killing of four students by National Guardsmen during an anti-war demonstration at Kent State University in Ohio.

These two events led to demonstrations, protests and rallies across the country. But the events in Carbondale became known to many as the "Days of May," and eventually led to the closing of campus.

The SIU Student Senate unanimously voted May 5 to boycott classes beginning at noon on May 6 and lasting indefinitely in protest of the Vietnam War and the students killed at Kent State.

Chancellor Robert W. MacVicar canceled classes for a mourning period for the Kent State killings.

The demonstrations began early in the day May 6 with speeches in front of Morris Library.

Demonstrators marched through Lawson Hall and Wharf disrupting classes.

Streets were blocked by crowds at University and Grand Avenues. Bricks and lumber were taken from the rubble of Old Main, which burned down in June 1969, as ammunition for the demonstrators.

Protesters make demands

Demonstrators attempted to rush the Bursar's office in Woody Hall, then moved back to Wheeler where windows were broken while students ransacked the building.

Students occupied Wheeler Hall and wrote up their demands which included:

- removal of the Vietnamese Studies Center from campus;
- removal of the ROTC from campus;
- amnesty for those arrested throughout the demonstrations;
- a statement from the University condemning the United States' involvement in Vietnam; and
- disarming of the police.

The violence begins

Early evening May 6 students broke into Woody and ransacked offices housing the Vietnamese Studies Center in the south and east wings and broke half the windows out before police cleared the building.

Late in the day, demonstrators moved to South Illinois Avenue and broke windows in several businesses including 710 Book Store.

The University reported more than $13,500 in damages to campus buildings as a result of the May 6 demonstrations. Sixteen arrests were made after the day's disorder. Erwin Atwood, an SIUC journalism professor since 1967, said it was just plain terrorism on campus by the people involved.

A group of National Guardsmen get off a truck in front of the Student Center. The troops were called onto campus in order to help local authorities keep order during the May riots.

"Things were chaotic," he said. "There was a tremendous amount of damage done. All in the interest of getting even for the evils of the Vietnam War."

Atwood said one could say there was no evidence of intelligent behavior on either side.

He said there were a lot of young non-students living on the fringes of campus participating in the demonstrations, as well as some faculty members.

Atwood said college students were some of the last to get involved in the anti-war movement, partially because they lost their draft deferments.

"It was all gut reaction, a lot more than Kent State was involved," he said.

Campus dissatisfaction with SIUC President Delyte Morris also contributed to the unrest, according to Atwood. He said many felt Morris acted too much like a dictator.

"There were also a number of old cronies (in the central administration), good old Southern Illinois boys who made good and had a closed mind set," he said.

The curfew question

Many on campus at the time believed that aside from Kent State and Cambodia, the unrest began with protests of women's hours.

Doug Diggle, manager of Old Town Liquors and 1971 SIUC graduate, said women's hours in residence halls are what really started all the unrest on campus.

Female SIUC students had to be in the residence halls at a certain time each night, while male students did not have hours. There were several demonstrations and sit-ins in protest of the policy.

"It branched out to a mish-mosh of causes," he said.

Allan H. Keith, an SIUC graduate student in 1969 and '70, agreed that women's hours created a tremendous unrest within the student population.

"There were many issues, it was a pretty emotional time," he said. "Of course things obviously got out of hand."

"We were forced to be an adversary"

As a result of the May 6 violence, National Guardsmen supplemented SIU police on three-man patrols across campus.

Between 5,000 and 6,000 guardsmen from across the state were mobilized and stationed in Carbondale.

Atwood said demonstrators seemed to respect the guardsmen more than the police.

Mike Pollock, assistant manager of 710 Book Store and a 1971 SIUC graduate, was a member of the National Guard on duty in Carbondale.

"I was a college student at the time — most of the guys were," Pollock said.

"We were really on the students' side and we were forced to be an adversary."

Pollock said the purpose of the National Guard was to be a show of force and they were not issued ammunition. However, the officers were armed with tear gas canisters.

Clinton commemorates V-E Day

President praises vets for carrying 'the banner of justice' to keep America 'a nation at peace.'

Los Angeles Times

ARLINGTON, Va.—President Clinton, in V-E Day ceremonies at Arlington Cemetery and nearby Fort Myer Monday, praised every Allied World War II veteran as "a hero who carried the banner of justice into the battle for freedom."

As the flags flying under a cloudless, azure sky at Fort Myer snapped, Clinton offered reverent words for those he called "freedom's warriors"—whose blood and lives forced Nazi Germany's military leaders to surrender in the early morning hours of May 7 in a small schoolhouse in France. The armistice took effect May 8, 1945, triggering street celebrations on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean.

"We come today 50 years later to recall their triumph, to remember their sacrifice and to rededicate our-

Clinton, as commander-in-chief of the U.S. armed forces, began the day of memorials with a stop at the Tomb of the Unknowns in the national military cemetery here. To the rumble of a military drum roll and the bursts of a 21-gun salute, Clinton walked stiffly as he placed a large wreath against the white, marble tombs. A bugler played taps and Clinton, who did not serve in the armed forces, saluted by placing his right hand over his heart.

Before speaking at Fort Myer, the president, who has had rocky relations with the military in the past, was greeted with a standing ovation by a respectful group of veterans, military officials and active-duty representatives from every branch of the armed services.

RSOs appeal USG funding allocations

By Dave Katzman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

While some registered student organizations feel the Undergraduate Student Government is having problems allocating money to the RSOs, both USG and the administration said that no problems exist.

The projected amount available for RSOs for fiscal year 1996 is $756,697, an increase of more than $14,000 from the previous year.

Even though more money is available, 17 RSOs formally appealed the amount they were allocated by USG. Some of these groups, including WDB and the Student Programming Council, said they felt they needed more money.

Edwin Sawyer, USG president, said the amount of money available depends on how many students are enrolled at SIUC, since

Bill to end affirmative action drafted

By Michael D. DeFord
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A bill may bring an end to affirmative action programs nationwide.

Clint Bolick, litigation director of the Institute for Justice in Washington, D.C., is drafting a bill which demands the end of all federal affirmative action programs.

The Institute for Justice could not be reached for comment concerning the location of the bill.

Currently, the affirmative action program is under examination across the nation. Many opponents are arguing that affirmative action provides an unfair advantage to those it was intended to serve.

SIUC's equal opportunity officer Marcia Phelps said she does not see the end of affirmative action programs in the near future.

"I cannot see affirmative action being eliminated altogether," she said. "It is time for a review of affirmative action and President Bill Clinton has called for that."

"Affirmative action parallels equal opportunity and affirmative action benefits everyone."

Affirmative action was implemented to end discrimination and to provide equal opportunity.

Created in 1964, affirmative action is a program that requires employers and colleges to take actions to hire or admit minorities and women.

During her March 30 statement to the Senate floor, Senator Carol Moseley-Braun, D-Illinois, said it would be extremely shortsighted at this time for the Senate to retreat on affirmative action before any action is taken and said all the facts concerning affirmative action must be taken into consideration.

"Affirmative action is about the basic right for all Americans to have access to education," she said. "It provides people the opportunity to get a good job, to be promoted when they work hard and to do better than their parents did."

Braun said affirmative action is about ensuring fundamental

Police say roadblock planned as part of anti-DUI campaign

Spring Fest promoters say patrol was not coincidence

By Dave Mack
Daily Egyptian Reporter

According to police, the roadblock near Spring Fest '95 Saturday night was intended to nab drunk drivers and had been planned since January, but the host of the festival disagreed.

Sergeant Bob Scott of the Carbondale police, the officer who planned the roadblock, said it was a coincidence that it happened the same night as the event.

"We have several (DUI roadblocks) planned throughout the year and that happened to be one of the days," he said.

Larry Brunkin of Stuff Productions, said he thought the roadblock was created to hamper his festival.

"Roadblocks on the only two roads that lead into Makanda from Carbondale? I don't believe that it's a coincidence," he said.

Police stationed at the roadblock, which was one of six that are organized each year, did not prevent partygoers from attending Spring Fest '95, Scott said.

"We did have concentrated patrols in the area, but no one was stopped from going down there," said Sergeant David Nichols of the Jackson County Sheriff's Department.

Brunkin disagrees. "Any partygoers that came here were told (by police) that the party was over," he said. "I had advance ticket holders that told me they couldn't get through."

Carbondale Chief of Police Don Strom said the safety checkpoint did not begin until near the end of the event.

"It didn't start until 9:15 or 9:30 that night," he said. "There was nothing to block people from going to Spring Fest '95. There was nothing to stop his buses from going through."

Brunkin said the roadblock was started early to create problems at his festival.

"(A DUI roadblock) starting at 8 p.m.? I've never seen a roadblock that early," he said. "It's funny that they set it up way before the bars closed. Only the people going into Carbondale after the festival were getting stopped."

Despite Brunkin's claims that there was an excessive police presence near the event, Nichols said there was only one additional officer scheduled to work the roadblock.

Nichols said he did not harass

STUDY EXPLAINS KENYAN ENERGY TECHNIQUE—The Washington Post—Observers marvel at the seeming effortless with which many African women carry loads on their heads. New findings suggest that effortless is more than just apparent. A study comparing the energy expended by Kenyan women and Europeans of both sexes to carry loads found that, while the Europeans burned extra energy for every pound added to their backpacks, the African women could carry up to 20 percent of their body weight on their heads without burning any more energy than they used when merely walking.

HUNT FOR AMERICAN AID WORKER HEATS UP—BERLIN—Frederick C. Cuny, it seems, is one of a kind, which is why everyone from President Clinton to the leaders of such institutions as the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace have been trying to determine his whereabouts since he disappeared April 9 in a battle zone of the breakaway Russian province of Chechnya. Cuny was working under contract with the New York-based Soros Foundation to help refugees and other victims of the fighting in Chechnya. Although friends and family worried at first that he'd been killed by crossfire, some have now talked to enough Chechen leaders to believe he may still be alive in captivity.

YELTSIN TO WARN NATO OF EXPANSION PERILS — MOSCOW—Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin breezed through a busy dress rehearsal for lavish ceremonies Tuesday celebrating 50 years since the Allied victory in World War II. The 64-year-old Siberian took a swipe at NATO's eastward expansion plans when he warned in a Kremlin speech against a return to the "discrimination and bloc isolation" that once pushed the superpowers "to the brink of the nuclear abyss." In a meeting with U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, Yeltsin pushed for U.N. financing of Russian peacekeeping forces in the former Soviet republics of Tajikistan and Georgia.

CLINTON AFFIRMS POLITICAL TIES WITH ISRAEL — WASHINGTON—President Clinton, in a sweeping affirmation of U.S. support for Israel, said Sunday night that peace in the Middle East is possible only because of solidarity between Washington and Jerusalem. With Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin seated at his side, Clinton said Israel was able to move toward peace with its Arab adversaries because "we made it clear that no one could drive a wedge between us." "Our support for the security and wellbeing of the Jewish state is unshakable," Clinton added.

AIDES TO SAY MOSCOW VIOLATED ARMS PLAN—WASHINGTON—President Clinton's top aides plan to complain in Moscow Tuesday that the Russian military is now or may soon be in violation of several arms control agreements reached with the United States during the waning days of the Cold War, senior U.S. officials said Monday. The breaches involve treaties limiting U.S. and Russian strategic or long-range nuclear weapons and a 23-year old global accord barring the development of biological arms. The potential breaches involve recent treaties mandating global reductions in chemical weapons and cuts in conventional forces in Europe.

SENATOR URGES DOLE TO ALLOW FOR VOTE — WASHINGTON—Sen. Judd Gregg, R-N.H., said Monday that although he will oppose surgeon general nominee Henry W. Foster Jr., he has urged Majority Leader Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., to allow a Senate vote on the nomination. "My counsel is that he bring it to a vote," Gregg said in an interview. "As a practical matter, it's not the biggest fish in the pond. We might as well get it behind us."

Glassblower of 30 years to return to SIUC

the years go on. He said it is difficult to learn if a person does not have the required amount of patience and a proper teacher.

"It's better to learn from another person instead of a book, and with-out patience it will take a long time."

Hoffman's designs that he has display range from little dogs with their own personal fire hydrants, to flowers and toy cars.

Hoffman said different objects take longer to make depending on the amount of detail. A Chitti-Chitti-bang-bang car took him nine-and-a-half hours to complete, while a tiny hummingbird took less than a minute.

Hoffman's biggest seller is the pregnant pig. A glass pig approximately two inches long contains the baby pig inside with a clear view.

Hoffman said he will be taking requests in the Student Center everyday this week and people can watch as he works. After Saturday, Hoffman will pack up and move on — but he will be back again.

"I've tried to retire before," he said. "I was on a college campus and told some students. They went out and got a two page petition saying I could not retire."

"It's nice to be appreciated," Hoffman said.

Al Hoffman, a glassblower who travels the country making glass objects, makes an ornament Monday afternoon in the Student Center.

Over the last six years, a recurring fixture at SIUC has been showing up at the Student Center five to six times a year setting up his booth of dainty, miniature figurines and large wedding cake stands.

Al Hoffman has been a glassblower for the past 30 years and has been bringing his expertise to college campuses all over the country. Hoffman said he covers approximately 30,000 miles a year and limits his travels to campuses because students offer more challenging requests.

Four months ago, Hoffman received a request from a girl that wanted earrings of an open casket with flowers on top. The reason—she was dating an undertaker and thought it would be a nice accessory to wear on their dates.

Hoffman chose the art of glassblowing as his career partly by curiosity.

"I've always been interested in creativity," he said. "It started out as a hobby and then things got out of hand and it became a career."

Paralyzing accident gives student new perspectives

An understanding for people in need: Social work major wants to work in rehabilitation, counsel accident victims.

By Carey Jane Atherton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Anthony Logan took a sip of water from his straw, wheeled into his living room, asked to have his cigarette lit, and said "Yes, if I hadn't broken my neck I'd be dead."

The television was on and Logan looked to it for a breather before explaining his statement.

"I was very rebellious, I didn't care about anyone or anything," Logan said.

Logan said he started using drugs at age 11 and did not stop until he was a cocaine addict.

On August 7, 1983, at age 15, Logan shattered his fourth vertebrae when he fell from a tree. He was trying to retrieve a ski rope that he and his friends used to swing into a lake. He spent the next six months of his life at Jewish Hospital in St. Louis recovering from his accident and learning to adapt to life as a quadriplegic.

Logan said that breaking his neck forced him to put his life in perspective.

"It was such a big metamorphosis knowing my life had changed in such an abrupt way. If I never had broken my neck, I never would have realized just how hard life could be. I think I'm a better person now — before I was mean," Logan said.

Logan said the physical adaptation to his wheelchair was harder than the emotional.

"I didn't have a problem facing the world in a wheel chair because I had no choice," Logan said.

He said the physical therapy was extremely painful, but the biggest frustration was accepting that he was not able to do things for himself anymore. Logan said the doctors referred to his type of quadriplegia as a freak case, because he can move his arms.

Logan wears braces on his hands that give him a limited ability to grasp things. He eats by placing a bent fork in his hand brace and writes in the same manner.

Every morning his personal care attendant Debbie Crowell helps him out of bed. She then bathes, clothes, does his limbering exercises, puts him in his chair and makes him breakfast. Crowell returns every night to help him into bed.

"I still get frustrated when I can't do something for myself, and I think the feeling will be with me for the rest of my life," Logan said.

Logan received his associates degree from Belle Area Junior College and decided it was time for him to kick his drug habits.

KIM RAINES — The Daily Egyptian

Anthony Logan, a juror in social work from Fallon, takes a break from studying to sit outside his apartment on West Mill Street for a minute.

"I came to Carbondale to get away from the drug scene," Logan said.

Five years ago Logan left his hometown of O'Fallon, moved to Carbondale, enrolled at SIUC and quit using drugs.

Logan's major is social work, and he aspires to work in the rehabilitation ward of a hospital counseling people who have had accidents that have completely changed their lives. He said after his accident he received counseling only from able-bodied people.

"It was ludicrous to hear it from a person who couldn't ever understand what it is like to be in my position," Logan said.

Logan is 26 years old, and it has been 11 years since his accident. He said he believes he has had his share of hard times, and now would like to help others who are going through hard times. He said he hopes to graduate in a year and a half, and would like to look for work in the desert where it is warm.

Former music student earns free MIT tuition

Put down the guitar, hit the books, score top grades, go to a big name institution for free to capture a master's and doctoral degree in electrical engineering. Sounds simple in theory, but SIUC student Wade Torres has made a reality out of his dream.

The former student of the Manhattan School of Music left there citing differences with the establishment and the price.

Torres said he wanted to come here to continue studying guitar under a former student, SIUC professor Joseph Breznikar, of his guitar teacher at Manhattan, Carlos Barbosa-Lima. Torres decided later he did not like the whole music industry, and chose to forego a degree in guitar performance.

Since then the double major in electrical engineering and math from Rock Island has compiled a 3.96 grade point average. In addition, he has earned fellowships through the National Science Foundation and Bell Laboratories that will pay for the scheduled six years it usually takes to achieve a master's and doctoral degree in electrical engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The foundation will pay for the first three years at MIT, which will cost approximately $105,000 including the cost of living. Torres is getting his final three years paid for by working for Bell Labs in Murray Hill, New Jersey this summer.

Income gap increasing: Divisions between high school, college grads on the rise, says research center.

By Marco Buscaglia
College Press Service

PHILADELPHIA — Hard work in college will pay off later in life, or at least that's what your parents and academic advisers tell you, right?

Well, a new study out of the Pennsylvania Independent College and University Research Center supports their claim.

The income gap between college and high school graduates is growing, according to the Pennsylvania study, and in today's competitive job market, the more education you have, the better.

The study, which is based on census examination of 500,000 Pennsylvania residents, says employees with college degrees saw their incomes rise 5 percent during the 1980s, while those with advanced degrees enjoyed a 20 percent rise in annual salaries. High school graduates, on the other hand, had their earnings decline by 13 percent while high school dropouts found their incomes dropped by 11 percent.

"The odds of achieving or retaining middle-class status without one or both spouses earning a bachelor's degree are declining," says the PICURC study, which was funded by a group of 80 private colleges and universities. "Education is usually the determining factor in terms of income level."

The study also indicates that:

DE gives USG mixed review for legislation

AT THE END OF EVERY TERM, STUDENTS ARE given grades based on their academic performance. The SIUC Undergraduate Student Government should also be subject to such scrutiny. Over the past academic year, USG has had its high and low points in terms of benefitting the student body. There are several factors which played into the successes and shortcomings of USG within the last two semesters, and the DE gives the body both passing and failing grades for its various efforts.

USG'S FIRST FAILING GRADE IS GIVEN FOR A lack of organization and maturity it displayed early in the year. In opposition to a Carbondale City Council proposal to close town bars at 10 p.m. on Halloween, former USG executive assistant Andrew Ensor wrote a controversial resolution. Had the bill passed the USG Senate in its entirety, it would have invited students from several universities to party in Carbondale on Halloween and also would have invited MTV to film the event.

Though President Edwin Sawyer denounced the resolution and called a press conference to respond to criticism from a DE editorial, he had initially granted Ensor permission to write the resolution and had also approved it at first. This folly of the Sawyer administration should serve as a lesson to incoming USG officers. Student government leaders should not tackle an issue before they have established proper organization and control within their own office.

USG receives another failing grade from the DE for placing a referendum on an April ballot asking if students would support a fee increase to give USG membership in a student government lobbying group. Sawyer said USG already had enough funds to join the lobbying group, without having to raise student fees, and he said knew of this before the referendum was placed on the ballot and passed by the student body.

DESPITE THESE SNAFUS, USG ALSO MANAGED to pass some legislative courses. When a fire swept through the Garden Park Apartments, leaving student tenants temporarily homeless, USG stepped in. Organizing a concert at a local pub, USG raised about $5,000 for students who lost property in the blaze.

USG also took a positive step to making textbooks more affordable for students through a book exchange at the end of the fall semester. Organized by incoming President Duane Sherman, the book exchange was not as successful as Sherman and other members of USG had hoped. However, Sherman has expressed a desire to work out some of the glitches in the exchange and tentatively plans to present a more efficient system at the end of the fall 1995 semester.

Perhaps among the best opportunities USG created for the student body this year were two referendums the body conducted to poll student opinion on raising the city's bar entry age to 21 and increasing the athletic fee. Regardless of the level of impact these referendums have had or will have on the formulation of University or city policy, USG at least offered students an outlet to stand up and be counted. Unfortunately, these referendums also brought out a shortcoming in the system; only a small portion of the student body turned out to vote on the issues.

As long as grades are being given, it is only fair to evaluate the performance of the student body in campus governance as well. Since less than 6 percent of the student population showed up at USG's April polls to vote on the issues, the DE gives the student body a resounding F. To improve our grades in school, we have to study harder. To improve our grades in the political realm, we all have to get involved.

Islamic beliefs distorted by media

Recently, Islam has been the center of attack and innuendo on the local and on the national levels. This is due mostly to a broad lack of understanding about the religion on the part of many Americans. The translation of the word "Islam" is submission to the will of God. And "Muslim" means one who submits to God's will. Therefore, Islam is not a religion in the western sense of the word. It is a complete way of life which governs every aspect of the believer's existence.

There are five basic duties that every Muslim must perform as an obligation to their creator.

First, a Muslim must declare openly that there is but one God who is worthy of worship and that Muhammad Ibn Abdullah (may the peace and blessings of God be upon him) is God's final messenger to mankind. Second, a Muslim must give thanks to God in the form of prayer at least five times every day. This is a physical, mental, and spiritual reminder that God is the central figure in the Muslim's life. Third, a believer who is financially able is to pay 2.5% of the wealth that is in their possession for an entire year for support of the poor. Fourth, every Muslim who is able is to fast during the month of Ramadan. During the hours of the fast, nothing is to be taken into the body. Finally, the Muslim of financial means is to make the pilgrimage to the first house of worship built by Abraham and his son Ismail.

Blaming the religion of Islam for the gruesome and inhumane acts of individuals who claim to be Muslim is irrational and equivalent to blaming Christianity for the hundreds of thousands of murders, suicides, abortions and sexual assaults which take place annually in this country. Let's hope that in the future we will use the tools of scholarship and knowledge at our disposal and not allow Hollywood or the media to form our opinions and define what is fact or fiction.

Carbondale needs bar alternatives

Kudos to the Daily Egyptian for your editorial "Alternatives needed with rise of bar age."

It is time to focus on non-alcoholic recreational activities for students.

We must accept the end of the Halloween era and move on to developing new recreational alternatives to alcohol. To be really effective, alternatives must have a strong appeal to students and be economically feasible to business investors.

The success of these ventures will be based upon the quality of the realistic ideas the student body contributes.

If somebody gets a team together to address the concept of new alternatives, I would be willing to lend a hand.

Southern Illinois University is a world-class institution. We must remove the stigma of Halloween. In the long run it will increase the stature of your degree and mine.

PS: Whomever pelted my Dodge with a potato at Oakland and 13, I hope your suggestions are better than your aim.

Gays undeserving of equal rights

According to Daily Egyptian, April 19, 1995, gays and lesbians want to have equal rights with normal people.

I call them homosexuals, because that is what they are: wicked!

Being homosexual is ordinary as wearing blue jeans is a lie to get normal people to accept ungodly, wicked acts as being normal and okay! But homosexuals have already been judged and found guilty yet while they live for their wickedness! Unless homosexuals repent from their wickedness, they will die and be sent to hell to await their execution in the eternal lake of burning fire, where there is agony that never ceases!

Rom. 2:12-16 (says) only those who obey God's law are righteous! It is against God's law to be homosexual, to murder or even to be adulterers.

Ps. 11:5: The soul of God hates the wicked!

Gen. 19:1-29: In the past God had enough of their wickedness and killed all the homosexuals in Sodom and Gomorrah for their sin.

Heb. 13:8: "Jesus is the same yesterday, today and forever." (God does not change!)

You homosexuals do not repent because you love your sin and wickedness. And you want normal people to say they are equal to you? Homosexuals are not normal. They have been deceived by the devil and want to deceive everyone else. Sin and the sinner are inseparable. If you don't repent from your sin, your eternal spirit will pay! There is no difference between homosexuals and murderers. Both receive God's eternal death penalty unless they repent.

Be not deceived! All who sin against God will die. There is no difference between those who murdered hundreds in Oklahoma and homosexuals with AIDS who murder millions.

You homosexuals say you are proud of it? I say bunk! You destroy people's lives! You have nothing to be proud of, but should hang your heads in shame!

Funding

the money comes from the Student Activity Fee.

"One thing that's hurt (the RSOs) is that the money budgeted to RSOs is based on student enrollment," he said.

"If only 18,000 students come to SIU next year, that means we're going to have less money to give out."

Twenty new RSOs were formed in the 1994-95 school year, Harriet Barlow Wilson, associate director of Student Development, said. She said there are approximately 500 RSOs on campus.

While raising the Student Activity Fee seems to be an appropriate solution to the funding problem, Sawyer said it is not easy to do.

"Usually, when you raise the Student Activity Fee, the students are concerned by that," he said.

Sawyer said the SIU Board of Trustees raised the Student Activity Fee by $4 for the 1993-94 school year.

Larry Juhlin, associate vice president for Student Affairs, said there is no need to raise the Student Activity Fee, because $18,803 that was earmarked for the Illinois Student Association is being held. USG will receive 86 percent of the total, with the rest going to GPSC.

Juhlin said it is too late to request an increase in the Student Activity Fee for fiscal year 1996 because the SIU Board of Trustees is meeting May 18.

He said that although the Board will consider a fee increase for fiscal year 1997 at its June and July meetings, he is not aware of anything in process.

Juhlin said the decision to ask for a fee increase lies with USG and GPSC.

"There's no way the administration can make that decision," he said. "We're too far removed."

Carin Musak, USG vice president, said there is plenty of money to go around.

"The $400,000 we've been allocated has been ample," she said. "People have been getting greedier and greedier. An RSO should be able to substantiate itself. If they can't stand on their own two feet, then they really have no business being a registered student organization."

Musak said some RSOs feel they deserve more money, while other groups never ask USG for funding.

"There's certain groups asking for tens of thousands of dollars and then they think that we owe it to them because they pay their Student Activity Fees," she said.

"On the other hand, there's groups that never ask for any money. They self-generate their own income, supporting themselves. That is a strong group."

Brunkin had stated that the $5 charge at the door covered the bands, and that the beer would be free for those who were 21 and older. However, Nichols said such an arrangement would still have been against the law.

"If he would have had the beer

The only possible way Brunkin could have sold alcohol was with a permit, Nichols said.

"There are festivals during the summer time where they obtain a temporary permit to sell alcohol. If they would have given him one, I don't know," he said. "Makanda Township is a dry township."

Nichols said he received three calls from residences about noise but no one would sign a complaint.

"I was fortunate to have been born black," Hayes said. "Affirmative action has not provided me with any privileges whatsoever."

"Affirmative action did, however, provide me with an opportunity, and I was fortunate enough to take advantage of that opportunity."

"He did not have the facilities for it," he said. "He was acting irresponsibly in planning something of that nature."

Nichols said Brunkin needs to check with various local agencies before his next festival if he wants to sell alcohol.

"He needs to contact the health department, the police department, the township and department of transportation officials before having another event," he said. "The tax-paying people would be upset, hampered by clogged roads and noise."

Brunkin was unavailable for comment.

Prosecution uses DNA test results in OJ trial

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES—More than three months after promising jurors that DNA test results would connect O.J. Simpson to a pair of bloody homicides, prosecutors began the task Monday of presenting that crucial evidence, opening the most important phase of their case with a brief seminar on genetics.

Dr. Robin Cotton, director of the nation's largest private DNA laboratory, began her testimony by delivering a basic primer on how DNA works, peppering her lecture with a series of metaphors intended to illuminate the scientifically dense topic. At various points, Cotton compared DNA to an alphabet, a thread, a zipper, a pair of interwoven ribbons, a chapter in the genetic book that is the chromosome and a blueprint for human development similar to the plans for erecting a building.

"If we make the assumption that a blueprint contains all the information for how to build your house," she said, "the analogy is that DNA contains all the information on how to build you."

Though she did not describe any results of DNA tests performed by her laboratory in this case, prosecutors say those results will reveal a trail of blood linking Simpson to the murder scene — showing that blood with some of his genetic characteristics was at the scene and that blood apparently from both victims, Ronald Lyle Goldman and Nicole Brown Simpson, was found inside his car and at his Brentwood estate.

Simpson has pleaded not guilty to the June 12, 1994, killings, and his legal team is prepared to mount an aggressive challenge to the DNA evidence.

Looking directly at jurors and speaking in a soft, clear voice, Cotton illustrated her testimony Monday with neatly drawn charts on sheets of butcher-block paper. She told jurors that degradation of DNA samples never would cause a sample to falsely point to a suspect, a notion that defense attorneys have hinted at for weeks.

Testifying on a day cut short by the funeral of a revered Los Angeles police detective, one that Superior Court Judge Lance A. Ito and other trial participants wanted to attend, Cotton was guided through her testimony by Deputy District Attorney George Clarke, one of the most experienced DNA prosecutors in California.

Although many trial watchers have braced for at least a month of dull, scientific testimony on DNA, Cotton's initial appearance was delivered brightly and illustrated simply.

PTA president charged with school arson

Newsday

NEW YORK—The president of the Parent Teacher Association at a Harlem elementary school was charged with arson Monday for allegedly setting a fire in the school last month to cover up her theft of $800 from a yearbook fund, officials said.

Madeline Vasquez had been dependent over the death of her teenage daughter, and used the money to buy drugs, the officials said.

Vasquez, who has two other children, first tried to cover up the theft by saying that there had been a bomb threat and that the school, Public School 101, should be evacuated, according to Fire Marshall Frank Quiles.

When that didn't work, she set what she thought was a small fire in a teachers' lounge that led to the evacuation of hundreds of students, Quiles said.

The fire grew quickly and three people, including the principal, suffered smoke inhalation. There was moderate damage to the school.

Students disagree with dispersal of activity fees

By Marco Buscaglia
College Press Service

Although they're not always itemized, fees tacked onto the end of college tuition bills are definitely there, adding anywhere from $50 to $200 to students' tuition bills.

Most of the time, student activity fees are glossed over by students and their parents, who tend to concentrate only on the "total due" when writing out their tuition checks.

But a growing number of students is taking note of how their activity money is being spent and is refusing to contribute any money toward organizations or causes that they oppose. Instead, they are subtracting the appropriate fees or demanding their money back.

"Students should have a choice in determining where their money goes," said Ron Witteles, editor of the "Northwestern Chronicle," a conservative campus newspaper that sponsored a "Take Back Your Money" day earlier this spring at Northwestern University. "The last thing we want is the administration or a student government bureaucracy deciding where to spend our money." During "Take Back Your Money" day, Witteles and his staff gave $5 back to the first 100 students who showed up at a campus landmark. The $500 had been allotted by the student government to NU's Conservative Council. But the group chose to hand the money back to students rather than spend it on speakers or other activities.

Not for 'political, religious, or ideological interests'

"No one should be forced to pay for something if they're not going to get any benefits," said Witteles, adding that NU students pay approximately $50 each semester in student activity fees. "It doesn't make any sense. Why should you pay for something you're never going to use?"

Collectively, student activity fees add up to much more than pocket change on many campuses. At the University of Florida, nearly $6 out of every credit hour worth of tuition—$6 million in all—goes toward student activity fees, which are delegated to various groups by the student government.

But even though the student fees budget is in the millions, a recent survey by the "Independent Florida Alligator," the university's student newspaper, revealed that 90 percent of the UF student body did not know how much they paid in student activity fees each year. Forty-four percent of students couldn't name one item that their money went toward.

"I was pretty surprised when I found out how much money the student government had control of," said Tony Miranda, a UF senior. "When I think about that much money, it just seems like there should be a lot more free stuff for me to do."

A few individual students, however, have objected to paying for activities that violate their personal ideological or political beliefs. At California State University—Long Beach, for example, two students were given a 15-cent refund after complaining that funding for a speech by Khalid Abdul Muhammad, a former Louis Farakhan aide, was in violation of a California state law.

Long Beach State's Associated Students Judiciary agreed that Muhammad's speech, in which he referred to white students as "crackers," could not be funded by student fees, which, according to California state law, can not be used to advance "political, religious or ideological interests."

Students Steve Negley and Joseph Thinn argued that while it was Long Beach State's Black Student Union who paid Muhammad $3,700 to speak on campus last November, the student group was funded through the the university student fees. Negley and Thinn demanded a refund for their share of the $3,700, which amounted to 15 cents each.

Negley said he sought the refund because "the university has to follow the law." "The funding of the speech, which was clearly a hate speech, meant to divide the student body and was an illegal action," he said.

Since the ruling, Negley said the other students have indicted an interest in receiving a refund as well.

In another incident, a Muslim student at the University of Minnesota shorted his tuition payment last year by 26 cents because he did not want to fund a gay and lesbian student organization. The university honored his position and credited his account in full.

Most administrators and students agree that the disbursement of student fees belongs in the hands of the student government. "Decisions on funding for student groups aren't something we need to worry about on a day-to-day basis," said Chuck Loebake, spokesperson for Northwestern University. "Since these are student groups that request funding, it only makes sense that other students decide their importance."

Chris Tompkins, the former University of Florida student body president, said the funding for various organizations is determined by hearings, discussions and votes.

"It's a democratic process," he said. "We try to weigh the importance of something to the students, both individual and as a whole, and then make the fairest allocations we can."

Federal program promotes states' educational reform

By William C. Phillips
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A 57 member Illinois Goals 2000 panel of educators met Friday in the Prairie Capital Convention Center in Springfield to take action on a statewide plan.

Under the Goals 2000 Act, states and communities receive federal dollars to support activities focused on academic excellence.

Donald Beggs, dean of the College of Education and a panel member, said Goals 2000 is a federal program that states can apply for to reform public schools.

Panel supports local control

"The panel is responsible for proposing money from the state to support the current Illinois reform effort," Beggs said.

"We want to continue reform in Illinois," he said. "The panel recommendation is to continue the plan which emphasizes local control of public education," Beggs said.

The aim of Goals 2000 is to identify projects in schools that are intended to improve the achievement of students, he said.

Beggs said the panel considered input from public hearings and panel members before sending the proposal to the Illinois State Board of Education for review and possible submission to the federal government.

The proposal will be approved on June 22 and the federal government will decide if Illinois will receive the funds.

"We are hoping to finish our report by June 22 and then it will be up to the Illinois State Board of Education," Beggs said.

"If Illinois does receive funds the applicants will be open to public schools to apply," he said.

Beggs said this year, Illinois received $4 million for local school improvement activities.

"Next year's amount has not been approved and it is subject to Congress approval," Beggs said.

All public schools are eligible to participate and must apply every year until the year 2000. The funding period begins Oct. 1 and is based on grant competition.

Program allows subjectivity

Beggs said the projects can range from improvement in mathematics and language skills to alternative programs and cooperation skills.

"It will allow schools with special needs to apply and compete for them. The funds will go to whatever project the public school believe they need improvement in," Beggs said.

Beggs said he believes Goals 2000 will boost school improvement efforts and professional activities for educators.

"I believe it will help us to continue our momentum in helping to reform schools."

Native Americans target of cuts

Los Angeles Times

Congressional budget-cutters are poised to eliminate federal aid to Native Americans.

The first round of measures cuts deep.

The House, in earmarking reductions in federal programs from last year, voted to knock off, among other things, $1.5 million from Special Tribal Court programs on the reservations, $6.4 million from the Native American Job Training Program and $1.3 billion—total elimination—from the Low Income Home Energy Assistance initiative.

NASD to improve public trade reporting

Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK—Under intense pressure from federal regulators, the National Association of Securities Dealers has taken two actions that should mean better prices for investors in Nasdaq stocks and more truthful public reporting of trades.

In a decision made late last week but not publicly announced, the NASD reversed its own earlier ruling and agreed to allow a small, maverick firm to greatly increase the number of stocks it deals in. The firm, Domestic Securities of Montvale, N.J., had been a leader in narrowing spreads — essentially, dealers' profit margin — on several big Nasdaq stocks, including Intel, Lotus Development, Biogen and

Domestic, which has incurred the wrath of many big, established brokerage firms for hurting their trading profits, said Monday it had laid off traders in recent months because its original request had been denied. But it said it is moving quickly to expand its staff and plans within the next several months to narrow spreads on many more stocks. "We definitely plan to compete on price and cut spreads" on more stocks, said Harvey Houtkin, principal owner of Domestic.

Under the ruling, the NASD will allow the firm to make markets in 500 Nasdaq stocks, up from 50. The NASD, parent of the Nasdaq stock market, acted after the Securities and Exchange Commission made clear it was unhappy with a February ruling in which the organization rejected Domestic's request to expand its market making activities. Domestic had complained that the NASD had withheld the permission in retaliation for the firm narrowing spreads and cooperating with federal investigations of Nasdaq. The NASD denied the allegation.

In a separate action, the NASD said it will crack down on dealers who are late in publicly reporting trades in Nasdaq stocks. In its April Regulatory & Compliance Alert, just sent to member firms, the NASD warned dealers they could face fines of $100,000 or more, as well as possible suspension, for late reporting of trades. The announcement came amid mounting evidence, first reported in the Los Angeles Times, that dealers have long deliberately flouted rules requiring that each purchase and sale of Nasdaq stock be reported publicly within 90 seconds.

A Times article had noted that the NASD rarely took disciplinary action for violations. It took no action for late trade reporting in 1994. A spokesman said Monday he couldn't immediately find out if any cases had been filed so far this year.

Both the SEC and the Justice Department's antitrust division have been investigating Nasdaq, looking into allegations that dealers colluded to keep spreads wide. Nasdaq and the dealers deny that there has been any collusion. Spreads are the gap between bid price, at which dealers offer to buy a stock, and the higher asked price, at which dealers offer to sell. Spreads of big stocks on Nasdaq have, on average, been much wider than those of similar stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

The SEC also has broadened its investigation to look into late trade reporting, and has obtained through subpoena thousands of pages of records related to late trades. The Times found that on a typical day clusters of big trades were reported late, just after the market closed. Big investors and traders said dealers frequently delayed reporting large trades, fearing that public disclosure could cause the stock price to move unfavorably.

Europeans recall V-E Day as victory 'over itself'

Los Angeles Times

PARIS—On a day for remembering war and celebrating peace, world leaders converged Monday in Europe, gathering on a bright morning at the Arc de Triomphe in Paris, where the World War II victors had danced for joy, and later on a rainy evening in Berlin, where the Nazi regime had surrendered in ruin.

The 50th anniversary of Victory in Europe was celebrated by tens of thousands of people across this Continent in ways big and small but nowhere as poignantly as here and in Berlin, in consecutive ceremonies attended by French President Francois Mitterrand, German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and dozens of international leaders.

In Paris, on a day celebrated as a national holiday, 10,000 leaders, war veterans and other dignitaries watched a military parade, in which the flag of democratic Germany joined the colors of the Allied Powers. A jet fly-over sent a stream of red, white and blue smoke — the French national colors — down the famed Avenue des Champs Elysee.

Although no public holiday was declared in Berlin, where the half-century-old memories still stir controversy, bells of the city's churches tolled for 15 minutes.

At the Schauspielhaus theater, a downtown concert hall constructed from wartime ruins, Vice President Al Gore, Mitterrand and German President Roman Herzog — joined by British Prime Minister John Major and Russian Prime Minister Viktor S. Chernomyrdin — preached unity.

"We gather to celebrate a triumph of good over evil, a victory not of any one nation nor of any one people, but a victory of the human spirit," Gore said. "It is fitting that we commemorate this victory here in Berlin, gathered now as friends and allies."

Herzog said it was healthy for his country to debate whether the end of World War II marked a victory for Germans oppressed by the Nazi dictatorship, as most Germans believe, or a bitter defeat. And, in surprisingly frank remarks, he suggested it was both.

"Germany unleashed the most terrible war there had ever been and it experienced the most terrible defeat that one could imagine," Herzog said.

But the spirit of reconciliation in Berlin was perhaps best exemplified by Mitterrand — the retiring, 78-year-old French president who had seen both sides of the war, belonging to the collaborationist Vichy regime before joining the Resistance.

Recalling his time as a prisoner of the Nazis, Mitterrand said that, even then, he saw many of his guards beginning to resist Nazi ideology.

"The enemy of yesterday is the friend of today," declared Mitterrand, who has in his 14 years as president forged closer ties between France and Germany. V-E

Day, he said, "was a victory of Europe over itself."

Although Europe's calendar has been filled with World War II commemorations, many cities took time again Monday to remember the end of that war.

World Series, playoffs cloud TV ratings wars

Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD—Call it the X factor in the new fall TV season. With the Big Four networks' 1995-96 schedules set for announcement starting late this week or next, it's a factor that remains a mystery.

No, it has nothing to do with the latest adventures of "Roseanne" or whether CBS can fool the skeptics and be revived.

None of that. The factor is baseball. Specifically, the World Series—a perennial TV blockbuster that got shut out last year by the sport's historic strike.

You remember baseball. Nine guys. Hot dogs. Peanuts. People used to love it.

Actually, there are several mysteries about the World Series this season and its impact on the two networks—ABC and NBC—that are partners with baseball in presenting it.

Baseball's big event comes in October—right at the beginning of the TV season, when networks are trying to get off to strong starts in the ratings.

The World Series invariably helps, even though it pre-empts regular weekly shows. It's also a great showcase for promoting the series on the network that carries it.

But this is 1995.

The season has already started late. There's a bitter aftertaste by many fans over the strike. Will the viewers care as much about the World Series as they did before?

Oh yes, even though the season has begun—with major leaguers instead of replacement players—there's still no new basic agreement in the strike.

Asked if he expects a World Series this October, Donald Fehr, head of the players union, says: "Yes."

But then there's the little matter of how the postseason baseball competition—the new divisional playoffs followed by the league championships and finally the World Series—will be presented on TV.

And how it will impact on the fierce competition for first place in the ratings between top-ranked ABC and onusning NBC.

Strike or not, the World Series is still regarded as a hot property—so long as it doesn't wind up with second-string replacement players.

In fact, before the strike began last year, ABC was regarded as a shoo-in for first place in the 1994-95 ratings not only because of its strong schedule but also for its good fortune in having three huge special events—the Academy Awards, the Super Bowl and the World Series.

Which means both ABC and NBC would like the big baseball event this fall as they go for the brass ring.

But here's the rub: The strike wiped out ABC's crack at the World Series last October; now it's NBC's turn this fall, but sources say ABC thinks it's entitled to the upcoming event because it got acced out in 1994.

Both networks say the presidents of their sports divisions, Dennis Swanson of ABC and Dick Ebersol of NBC, will work out just how the playoffs will be presented to viewers.

There has even been talk that the World Series—and other postseason baseball playoffs—might be divided up so that both networks get a more equal crack at the competition.

Under a partnership that was set up in 1993 among NBC, ABC and major league baseball, a rotation was planned.

This fall, NBC has been scheduled to present the divisional playoffs and the World Series, with ABC getting the league championships.

But viewers of regular prime-time network programs could welcome their patience tested in October if all the tiers of the expanded playoffs go the limit.

One baseball source notes that the combined divisional, league and World Series rounds could go as many as 19 days, which may not be likely but could make TV programmers wonder just how much they want to break up the start of future seasons.

NBC, for instance, might like the idea of airing the World Series, but would it savor the chance of having to pre-empt such hits as "ER" or "Frasier" as it sets its sight on unseating ABC?

The same goes for ABC with "Home Improvement," "Grace Under Fire," "NYPD Blue" and its other hits as it tries to ward off NBC.

are feeling a simultaneous pinch as they go up against the mushrooming resources and swelling popularity of hockey franchises south of the border. The Winnipeg Jets said Wednesday they were calling it quits in Manitoba, and the Quebec Nordiques could beat the Expos across the border.

Montreal Exponents don't like the small-market label. Its 3 million people make this cosmopolitan city no less a market than Boston. "There's no such thing as a small market," observed Terry Haig, a sports journalist at the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., "there are just small-market philosophies, and we've got one here."

The reference is to the tight-fisted ownership of Claude Brochu and his partners, who bought the team from Charles Bronfman in 1991 for $80 million. In an effort to cut his salary outlays for the 1995 season (and his losses for the abbreviated 1994 season), Brochu recently traded away three of the club's top performers—center fielder Marquis Grissom, starting pitcher Ken Hill and closer John Wetteland. Meanwhile, their Canadian star, Larry Walker, went to Colorado as a free agent.

With them, many believe, Brochu kissed away whatever slender hope the Expos had of picking up where they were so rudely interrupted—by Brochu and the other owners, in one popular view—last summer.

This has left fans to ask, as one did: "If he's not willing to invest in the team, why should anyone invest in a ticket?" One of the heartbreaks of the 1994 season was that it ended just as the Expos were lifting off and beginning to fill Olympic Stadium's ocean of empty seats.

"I know there's work to do to convince people to come back to baseball," he told the Canadian Press. "It may never be like it was."

graphic artist, in addition to training herself and others.

"I used to be very serious into the sport, but I semi-retired when I got married and had kids," Rester said. "I was just kind of playing around and went to the thing in St. Louis because it was so close, and had no idea I'd win."

"Now, I guess I'll go to the Worlds and then retire."

Meyer, who is scheduled to graduate Saturday and begin student teaching in the fall, said Rester deserves a lot of the credit for helping get her into the sport.

"Barb just kept pushing me in the right direction and it worked out for the best," Meyer said. "All I do is set goals for myself and try to meet them."

However, Meyer's desire to be the best is the thing that Rester said sets her apart from the other athletes she's coached.

"If she said she was going to do something, then she did it and followed it through," she said. "Up until last fall, I don't think Natalie realized how good she was."

"Now, after last weekend, I think she's getting a clue."

Myers and Rester will now begin a fund-raising drive so their trip to the World Championships in England can become a reality.

the Derby. The Canadian colt, Talkin Man, came into the Derby with credentials to suggest that he might prove a genuine star. But none of them rose to the occasion. Only Thunder Gulch did.

However, there was nothing at all fluky about the victory of the 24-to-1 shot. In many recent runnings of the Derby, the oversized field has caused congestion and traffic problems, making top horses the victims of bad luck. But even with 19 horses in this year's field, the race was cleanly run. The jockeys—with one notable exception—delivered excellent performances.

Jerry Bailey, who had been voted into the Racing Hall of Fame earlier in the week, delivered a superb ride aboard Tejano Run, saving ground along the rail on the turn and rallying to finish second. Mike Smith, who had been criticized for his performance aboard losing favorites the past two years, got Talkin Man to the rail, sitting just behind the pacesetter, Serena's Song.

It wasn't his fault that the colt fell apart in the stretch. And, of course, Stevens was flawless aboard the winner, getting into perfect position throughout the race after breaking from post position 16.

(The exception to these excellent efforts was Krone, whose exhibition on Suave Prospect was a professional disgrace. After finding herself in perfect position near the rail on the backstretch, she needlessly bailed out and steered her mount nine-wide—well out of harm's way. Having suffered several injuries in spills, she has become cautious and tentative in her day-to-day riding, but it was a shock to see her ride so pitifully in a race of this magnitude.)

While most of the horses behind him were having clean trips, Thunder Gulch had been chasing the fast early pace and was the only member of the first flight who didn't collapse.

He had been sitting fifth after the first half mile was run in 45 4/5 seconds; the horses who were 1-2-3-4 at the half-mile mark wound up finishing 16-19-12-18. Yet even when the fresh horses made their moves in the stretch, they couldn't cut into Thunder Gulch's commanding lead. In fact, the winner seemed to be pulling away from Tejano Run in the final yards.

Thunder Gulch was so clearly superior that he has a chance to win the Triple Crown if he can duplicate the quality of Saturday's performance in the Preakness and Belmont stakes.

But that's a big if. Few horses in the 3-year-old classics of recent years have been good enough to perform with consistent excellence as champions are supposed to. In-and-outers regularly win the Derby, and Thunder Gulch's form coming into the race was typical.

Experts who watched him train at Churchill before the Derby saw no persuasive evidence that he had recaptured top form.

Lukas was so confident about his other two Derby entrants, Serena's Song and Timber Country, that he sometimes seemed to forget Thunder Gulch was in the race.

Baseball: Chances small '95 Salukis can get tourney slot

By Doug Durso
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Slim is better than none. For the SIUC baseball team, the chances of making the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament are improbable, but the possibility still remains.

The Salukis are 6-19 in the Missouri Valley Conference and in last place in the league. For the Dawgs to get into the tournament they need to climb over Northern Iowa, Illinois State and Bradley.

Help needed from other conference teams

To do that the Dawgs must sweep Northern Iowa in a four-game home series set for Abe Martin Field this weekend, and Southwest Missouri State has to be beat Bradley four games in a row, while Illinois State can only win two of the four games it has scheduled against Indiana State. If all that happens, then SIUC will qualify for the last tournament berth.

SIUC baseball coach Dan Callahan said even though it is a small chance any opportunity is exciting.

"This will give our guys some extra incentive, but we had incentive last weekend against Wichita State, when we controlled our own destiny and couldn't get it done," Callahan said.

Callahan says lineup may have been juggled

Callahan said if the Salukis were not going into the weekend with a slim shot remaining at the tourney slot, then he might have made some lineup changes against Northern Iowa, but winning would have still been the goal.

"We kicked around the possibility of moving some people around the infield and we still might do that, but our goal is always to put the best team out there.

"It would be nice for our seniors and everybody else to go out on a winning note."

Even though the season has been a struggle, Callahan said making the tournament would be a nice ending to the year.

Admits it's been a 'difficult year' for Dawgs

"Emotionally, this has been a difficult year for the players and the coaching staff," he said. "It's been frustrating losing games the way we have, but we still have a chance for the MVC tournament and possibly NCAA tournament action.

"I'm not saying that is likely, but anybody in the conference tournament has a chance for the NCAA regional tournament."

For the Salukis to have any chance at post-season play they will have to take care of a Panthers team that sits at 10-18 in the league.

"They're (Northern Iowa) much improved, and to see that you only have to look at them splitting with Wichita State, which would have been unheard of a couple of years ago," Callahan said. "They were picked at the bottom of the league, but have done a good job this year, so we will have our hands full."

The first pitch of the four-game series at Abe Martin Field is set for Friday at 3 p.m.

Derby not great performance

By Andrew Bayer
The Washington Post

When is America's greatest horse race going to produce a great performance or great drama?

The Kentucky Derby victory by Thunder Gulch is one that will ultimately be as forgettable as those by Go for Gin, Sea Hero and Lil E. Tee the past three years. Trainer Wayne Lukas's colt was largely ignored before the race, and his effort at Churchill Downs Saturday was hardly brilliant. The colt benefited from a well-judged ride by Gary Stevens and his time—considering the souped-up condition of the Churchill Downs racing strip—was not particularly impressive.

The 121st Derby was anticlimactic because there were several horses in the field who could have made it memorable. A triumph by the filly Serena's Song, the English colt Eltish or the Japanese invader Ski Captain would have given the race a historic dimension. Suave Prospect could have made Julie Krone the first woman in history to win

SIUC senior takes top powerlifting
97-pound honors

By Grant Deady
DE Sports Editor

The SIUC Recreation Center might be giving Gold's Gym a run for its money as a training site champion if weightlifters continue to use it as a springboard to success.

Natalie Meyer, a senior at SIUC in early childhood, won the women's powerlifting national championship held Saturday at St. Louis' Stouffer Hotel. Her feat comes on the heels of a guest appearance at the Mr. and Ms. SIUC Bodybuilding Championship by 1994 Ms. International champion Kim Chizevsky, an alumna of SIUC and former rec-center guru.

Meyer captured the title in the 97-pound junior division (21-24 year olds) after setting two SIUC records in the squat (192 lbs.) and dead lift (242 lbs.) in her weight class.

With the victory, Meyer earned the right to compete at the World Championships in England, which begin Oct. 28.

"I just competed in the collegiate nationals and did real well, so that kind of set the tone for what I did in St. Louis," Meyer said. "I didn't know I'd ever go this far. I really thought this was going to be my last meet."

A product of Resurrection High School on Chicago's Northwest side, Meyer began powerlifting as a freshman at SIUC to remain a part of a competitive sport since her game of choice, gymnastics, was not offered at the University.

Meyer hooked up with another aspiring powerlifter in SIUC, graduate Barb Rester, during her early days of training, and Rester offered to train her in the sport.

Rester also made a contribution to SIUC's growing list of weightlifting champs by winning Saturday's national title in the 111-pound open competition, and will join Meyer in traveling to England this fall.

These days Rester is married and has two children, and works for a local development company as a computer

Money may force Montreal, Expos to part ways

The Washington Post

MONTREAL—The city that turned out last week to cheer its Expos into a new season had to swallow a big emotional lump—and feelings of dejection and hopelessness besides.

Ever since the cataclysm of last August, when the baseball strike aborted one of the Expos' most promising shots at a World Series, ball club and fan have developed a bruised and wary distance. Opening night in Montreal was like a couple's last brave try at reconciliation.

The reality that escaped few of the 46,515 patrons who thronged to see the New York Mets dispatched what that 1995 could be Montreal's last season in the majors. No franchise in baseball is more imperiled, or more ripe for the plucking, in the moneyed aggression to attract teams to places such as Northern Virginia. And whatever its mixed feelings about baseball, Montreal would feel the sting of losing, for want of enthusiasm and good luck. Canada's first major league baseball franchise.

The rush of opening night at Olympic Stadium may have dispelled momentarily the bad yibes of recent months. It was hard not to take heart from the outpouring of affection for Felipe Alou, last year's National League manager of the year, and his son Moises, probably the Expos' most prized and popular player. What sounded like boos in the Big O were really "Aloooooos" of pride.

Despite the bitter aftertaste of the strike, despite the coulda-beens and we-wuz-robbeds, Montrealers forgave, forgot, and behaved impeccably toward their Expos. Canadian sportswriters took satisfied note of the contrasting scene on the team's first road game in Pittsburgh, where a grandstand banner, called the Pirates "crybabies."

The clock has been a few minutes short of midnight for the Expos many times during their 27 years in the NL. But the buzz of the moment assumes an imminent faithful tick. "It's not a fait accompli that the team is leaving," said broadcaster, Rick Moffat, "but more than ever before in Expos history, they are on the ropes."

Moffat, whose Mix 96 radio station gathered 20,000 signatures on a petition to declare the Expos last year's "season champions" on the strength of their 74-40 record, said "it will be a miracle if the team jells and matches what it did last year."

That's not the only miracle the Expos are seeking. At the top of the list of strikes against their future in Montreal are the new pressures being brought to bear on so-called "small-market" teams, a category that includes Milwaukee, Pittsburgh and Montreal.

Vietnam studies center: Focus of protest

By Dustin Coleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

In the fall of 1969, a federal agency called the Agency for International Development gave SIUC a $1 million contract to set up a Vietnamese Studies Center in Woody Hall. The intent of the center was to offer the opportunity to study Vietnamese culture.

The center taught Vietnamese language, poetry, art and other cultural features. But from its beginning, it was a point of controversy.

Throughout the spring of 1970, clashes between police and students at Woody Hall resulted in injuries and at least 25 arrests.

Windows were broken, and students took the building on two occasions.

Jerome Handler, the former faculty adviser of the Students for a Democratic Society, an active group during the late 1960s and early 1970s, said many suspicious elements surrounded the center which caused it to be a point of demonstration.

Handler said it was unusual for AID to set up a cultural center because they were more involved with technical assistance projects such as agriculture, construction and other applied projects.

"We did not at the time at SIUC have any specialists on Vietnam or Indochina," Handler said. "AID was not an intellectual think tank just establishing places where intellectuals get together and ponder features of foreign culture."

It was known at the time, through Senate investigatory committees, that CIA agents used the Agency for International Development as a cover to gather information so they would not give away their identities, Handler said.

"It was beyond everyone why SIUC, of all places, would have the center," he said.

Doug Allen, a professor at SIUC in 1970, said the University, through the Vietnamese Studies Center, was becoming increasingly involved with the war effort in Vietnam.

Allen said he was receiving documents from anonymous sources within the center, which described the center's intent to become involved with the war.

"What was clearly being discussed, clearly by the people at the center, was how we could become integrated with the Army, Navy and the CIA," he said.

Allen said he and others involved with the protest believed that SIUC was going to follow in the footsteps of Marquette State University, which through a similar center was rumored to be associated with the training of the South Vietnamese Police Force.

"It seemed SIUC was becoming complicit in the war effort," he said.

Jerome Handler said another suspicious element of the center was Dinh-Kien Nguyen, an Asian scholar brought to the center who had been stationed at the South Vietnamese Embassy in Washington, D.C.

"Many of us suspected that you would not be satisfied with the most important strategy that the South Vietnamese government had unless you were politically and absolutely correct, which meant for many people who opposed the war, including myself, that this guy was a defender of U.S. policy in Vietnam, and we assumed he was a right-winger."

Handler said Nguyen was not recruited in the conventional way, rather that he was appointed by President Morris. After the collapse of the center, he received a tenured position in linguistics.

Students were outraged by the fact that SIUC would have any involvement with the Vietnam War, Shelley Rosenzweig said.

Rosenzweig, a student at the time, was arrested for disorderly conduct in January 1970, for participating in a mock trial against Wesley Fishel, a member of the advisory committee for the Vietnamese Studies Center.

Rosenzweig, together with five others arrested for demonstrations against the center, were known as the "Carbondale 6."

A lot of factors played into the students' protest on campus, Rosenzweig said, but the focus was the Vietnamese Studies Center.

"The center was a mistake, and we didn't feel that the University was being marketed very well," he said. "It tarnished its academic standing."

Rosenzweig said the whole national movement was very moral and righteous.

"It was very American," he said. "It dealt with right and wrong and justice."

Ester and Joel Maring, professors in SIUC's anthropology department, were both associated with the center and said there was no factual support for the claims that the center was becoming involved in the war.

Ester Maring, a former professor in the Vietnamese Studies Center, said the center never intended to help with the U.S. involvement in Vietnam but was there to teach Vietnamese culture.

"The center was only to develop scholarly expertise," she said. "It was not involved with the war effort, or those involved with it."

Another intent of the center was to find out exactly why we were in the war in Vietnam, Joel Maring said.

Joel Maring, who helped in the formation of the center, said Vietnam had been in civil war since the ninth century, a fact that most Americans did not know.

"They had been fighting for centuries," he said. "The intention of the center was not to defend our position in Vietnam, but to find out just exactly why we were there."

Ester Maring said they were trying to teach at the Vietnamese Studies Center in a very enlightened way.

"I guess that was what was so threatening for a lot of people," she said. "And they just didn't care."

Maring said the center received little attention and went about its usual routine until its contract ran out, and the center closed in 1971.

SIUC grad takes stage 25 years late

By Stephanie Moletti
DE Assignments Editor

When Arthur R. Scheskie, a 1970 graduate in journalism, watched his son walk across the stage to receive his diploma in 1993, he once again thought of the opportunity of which he was deprived.

When the University closed down due to riots in May 1970, Scheskie thought commencement ceremonies had been canceled.

For the 25th anniversary of the closing, the College of Mass Communication and Media Arts contacted its 193 1970 alumni and gave them the option of participating in ceremonies, according to Jill Belcher, assistant dean of the college.

Scheskie is the only graduate contacted who has accepted the offer.

He said he finished his requirements for graduation in December 1969 and began working in Ohio. However, he was planning to come back to Carbondale in the spring for commencement.

"I was the first in my family to graduate from college," Scheskie said. "It was a big deal."

While in Ohio, he said he received a letter from the University stating that ceremonies had been canceled.

"Instead of walking across that stage to receive my diploma, I got it in the mail," he said. "It was pretty impersonal."

Last fall he received the 25th Anniversary issue of the SIUC Alumni Magazine. This triggered him into action.

He wrote a letter to SIUC President John Guyon asking if the University would consider asking the 1970 graduates back for ceremonies at the end of this week.

Guyon wrote back that SIUC would not, because ceremonies did occur in 1970.

Belcher said the dean's council at the University discussed giving the alumni the option. Mass Communication and Media Arts was the only college to contact its alumni.

Scheskie said a few months ago he received a letter for Dean Joe Foote, giving him the option to go through the ceremonies.

Friday at 4:30 p.m. in Shryock Auditorium, Scheskie will have the opportunity to cross the stage.

Just he and his wife, Linda, are coming down for the ceremony. They are driving from LaCrosse, Wis. They met at SIUC, although they left the area before she received her degree.

"We're really looking forward to it," he said. "It should be a lot of fun. We have a lot of good memories down there."

Scheskie said he has been through Carbondale a few times since his departure and a lot of changes have taken place.

He said he never participated in any of the demonstrations while attending the University, but remembers the first time he smelled tear gas.

Scheskie said he was not a radical at the time and that the rallies and protests were "pretty wild and pretty stupid in retrospect."

Scheskie said he encourages students to go through their graduation ceremonies if they have the opportunity.

"Go through it because there's a lot of satisfaction in knowing that you've accomplished it," he said.

Example of the destruction on campus during the demonstrations and protests in May 1970.

Riots of '70 recalled

'You simply cannot let anarchy rule': Some say closing University unavoidable

Though it has been 25 years since the closing of SIUC's campus, many of those involved at the time still have strong feelings about what happened here in 1970.

Albert B. Mifflin, retired director of the SIUC publishing office, said he believes if the University had not been closed, SIUC could have been a second Kent State.

"There were too many caught up in something they didn't quite understand — too much velocity to allow many more nights of destruction," he said.

Mifflin said the decision made by SIUC President Delyte Morris took a lot of courage and was probably the only option left.

"It was regrettable, but I think it was unavoidable — you simply cannot let anarchy rule," he said.

Doug Diggle, a member of the ACLU at the time, said the closing was a good decision.

"At the time it was probably the only thing they could do," he said. "There was not much participation in classes. They had lost so much time."

David Derge, SIUC president from 1972-74, said there were very few riots and demonstrations after the school closed, and the ones that did occur were promptly stopped.

"When I was here in the spring (1972) there was one attempt to stage a demonstration, and there was a march downtown and some windows were broken," he said. "I met with the campus at Shryock and told them we simply weren't going to have any of that, and that anyone who violated the law would be thrown in jail, and that it made no sense to try and intimidate and destroy property, and the campus was off-limits to that kind of thing. After that we had no trouble," Derge said.

Even though the demonstrations may have stopped, deep feelings remain on both sides of the issues.

Jerome Handler, professor in Black

American Studies, said the incidents from those years have inflicted damage to many relationships among people who are still on campus.

Handler said there are still some people who will not speak to each other because of what happened here in 1970.

"The whole history has left some really bitter scars in some interpersonal relationships around the place among some of the old timers," he said.

Doug Allen, a philosophy professor at SIUC at the time, now at the University of Maine, said he believes he was denied tenure because of his demonstration activities against the Vietnamese Studies Center.

Allen said the University thought that he "was a bad investment. It wasn't an academic choice, but simply a political one."

Allen said everything was done behind closed doors without his knowledge. His department, college and the president of the University, all recommended Allen for tenure, but the Board of Trustees did not.

"No matter how furious I became, I never had self-pity," he said.

Allen said in spite of the denial of his tenure he has fond memories of SIUC.

"We had some very deep friendships at the time because people believed in what we were doing," he said. "I look back fondly at the time and the people I was involved with."

Ester Maring, professor in the Vietnamese Studies Center, said she does not have any hard feelings even though there were some people on campus who attacked her personally because of her involvement with the center.

"Those people have come around, and we have mended those fences," she said. "But that doesn't mean I have changed my ideas."

Maring said she has no regrets about what she did and believes that the center was not associated with anything dealing with the war in Vietnam.

"It was an extremely emotional time, and maybe they have changed what they have thought about me, and they are willing to compromise," she said. "But I still feel the same."

"At the time it (closing) was probably the only thing they could do."

Days of May

outside Morris Library with a rally and student speeches.

Students marched down South Illinois Avenue to the intersection at Mata Street. Some of the sit-down demonstrators passed bottles of wine through the crowd. Observers reported the odor of marijuana in the air and several joints were seen passed among the demonstrators.

More than 2,500 students blocked the intersection for two hours during the night while about 75 people sat in the railroad tracks halting two trains before city and state police could disperse them.

Diggle said this was the most famous of the demonstrations that occurred in Carbondale.

He said local police agreed to let the students occupy the intersection and were rerouting traffic to avoid the area, but things got out of hand when the demonstrators attempted to block the railroad tracks.

Pollock said the students were faced with police lines on three sides while occupying the intersection. He was stationed on University Avenue at the north end of South Illinois Avenue to herd the crowd down University.

"(Security officers) tried to push them back to the dorms," Pollock said. "When (the students) saw us they started to panic, because basically at that time they were surrounded. That's when they became more violent."

There were 68 arrests made on May 7 in connection with the demonstrations and curfew violations.

Carbondale Mayor David Keene called for a 7:30 p.m. curfew in the city May 7 to last indefinitely and MacVicar extended the curfew to campus.

Pollock said state police and guardsmen enclosed Brush Towers to enforce curfew with someone stationed at two-foot intervals.

"They patrolled the streets with jeeps and other trucks," he said. "Our job was basically to just stand there and take the brunt of physical and verbal abuse."

He said students spat on them and threw rocks and bottles. "It was a sad situation. I didn't want to be there and neither did most of the guys with me," Pollock said. "I think there were good people on both sides. It was just a few bad people, I don't think most of the students had a violent intent."

Relative calm returned to the city May 8 with the imposing presence of local and state police and the National Guard. However, sporadic outbreaks of vandalism and tear gassing continued.

The city imposed a ban on gatherings of five or more people, May 8.

Diggle, a bartender at the time at PK's, said a tear gas bomb was thrown in through a back window of the bar.

"Luckily no one got hurt," he said. "We helped everybody out both doors. There was a lot of choking and coughing."

Diggle said, "The city, SIU police and National Guard were pretty cool, but the state police were out to kick ass."

Keith said the police overreaction to the May situation was bad.

"Students were temporarily radicalized due to the state police overreactions," he said. "There were many reports of tear gassing of some classes while in session. It seemed to be an effort to terrorize the whole campus into submission."

On May 12, 5,000 demonstrators marched peacefully down South Illinois Avenue until vandalism erupted and the announcement was made that the University was closed indefinitely.

Albert B. Mifflin, retired director of the SIUC publishing office, said he believes the climax came when students broke into Morris' office to confront him.

"The next day he held a brief and terse press conference," he said. "He said something like, 'Last night some hooligans broke into my office, those identified will be dealt with and some will be expelled. End of conference.'"

Mifflin said the decision was made to close the University not long after the confrontation.

MacVicar announced that the University would be closed May 12. The last day of classes was Friday May 15.

"There were all kinds of prices to pay, but (Morris) saw personally the mood and the temper and he saw the need to pull the plug," Mifflin said. Diggle said not many students were attending classes because many were more interested in what was taking place outside.

Diggle, a member of the American Civil Liberties Union, worked with legal aid to ensure those arrested were treated fairly in jail.

"Jackson County was not bad, but a lot of the surrounding counties had the attitude that 'these hippie students need to be taken care of,'" he said.

By the end of the May demonstrations, windows were broken out of 78 businesses causing more than $75,000 in damages. The University reported $25,525 in damages to the campus as a result of the demonstrations.

Approximately 424 arrests were made before the University was closed.
