Underage drinking busts continue

By Andrew Strang
Staff Writer

Students who are under 21 years old are going to have to either quit drinking or make more friends who have parties as arrests in Carbondale for underage drinking continue on the upswing.

Fourteen arrests for underage drinking were made Tuesday and Wednesday nights in a stepped-up enforcement by the Carbondale police of the Illinois underage drinking law. All of the arrests were made in bars on or near Illinois Avenue, and were made by police officers who asked patrons for identification cards. Police made 38 arrests for underage drinking last Thursday, Friday and Saturday by checking the total to 48 arrests in the past week. In a two-month period, from Sept. 6 to Nov. 5, police made 34 arrests for underage drinking.

Police Chief Ed Hogan said the recent increase in underage drinking arrests is tied to an increase in the number of underage people drinking in the bars. He said that at his request, bar employees have been checking identification cards more closely.

He said the arrests "are not a negative activity on the part of the police," but rather, the underage drinking is negative activity on the part of the underage drinkers. He said police are here to enforce the law, which is what the police department is doing.

Hogan has noticed also an increase in the number of false identification cards being turned in by the police by bar and liquor store owners. When a fake ID card is turned in, the card is held for 10 days according to state law.

The Carbondale police have two officers assigned foot patrol in the Illinois Avenue area, according to Lt. Terry Murphy, who said the police department has made some changes in the way police work and police work has affected the police department's arrests.

Homecoming rolls with the changes

Since its origin in 1921, the celebration of Homecoming has served as an archive of SIU students' attitudes and life styles. As the times and people changed, so did the traditions.

Iran warns of hostage trials

BEIRUT, Lebanon - AP - The president of Iran's Supreme Court and head of Parliament's Islamic hardliners was quoted Thursday as saying the assembly will have to decide whether or not to put the 32 U.S. hostages on trial if the United States fails to meet Iranian terms for their release. Iran's prime minister, meanwhile, conferred with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, possibly on the hostages, and government officials were said to have discussed the U.S. reply to Iran's demands in meetings throughout the day. Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti, leader of the fundamentalist Islamic Republican Party which controls Parliament, was quoted by Tehran's English-language newspaper as saying the government would first have to judge the American response before any trial decision by the Parliament.

LA municipal workers on strike

LOS ANGELES - AP - Members of three unions representing 20,000 garbage collectors, police guards and traffic officers walked off their jobs Thursday in a contract dispute in the second strike by municipal employees in the city in 10 days.

City officials said supervisors took over traffic control and sewage plant maintenance when some workers began the strike at midnight. Other workers either refused to go to work or arrived and then walked off the job.

Begin: Peace accords 'sacred trust'

WASHINGTON - Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin met with President Carter today and, in an apparent message to the incoming Reagan administration, declared the Camp David accords a 'sacred trust' that should be carried out despite any obstacles. In a poignant farewell on the White House south lawn, the two leaders spoke solemnly of the Mideast agreement but made no mention of future negotiations during the Carter administration.

Carter, who personally helped negotiate the Camp David agreement with Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, bowed slightly to the Israeli leader before he got into his limousine and gave him a salute.

Hiring coaches to teach offered as way to save athletics funds

By Randy Rogoski
Staff Writer

Hiring some athletes, coaches as part-time teachers would save money in the athletics budget, but that savings could not replace the temporary $10 athletics fee increase, according to Jerry Lacey, associate vice president for University relations.

Lacey spoke to about 30 students Wednesday at a public hearing sponsored by the Undergraduate Student Organization. The hearing was the last of three designed to inform students about the athletics fee increase.

Lacey said, "I hope to see a trend toward cross-appointments, but it's going to take time. We need the fee increase now to maintain the athletics program at its current level."

The temporary fee, enacted to avoid a deficit in the athletics budget, took effect in June. It will be abolished in June if the Board of Trustees does not extend it at the March board meeting.

George Nace, vice president for University relations, has estimated that cross-appointments would save $50,000. According to Todd Rogers, chairman of a USO task force studying the athletics fee, Rogers said those savings would reduce the athletics fee by $1.

Charlotte West, women's athletics director, said at a hearing Tuesday that $200,000 is a 'gross overestimate' of funds that would be saved through cross-appointments. However, she said all cross-appointments could save about $100,000 if the administration was more willing to make the appointments.

Other attacks on the administration came from Ricardo Caballero, former president of the Graduate Student Council, who spoke against the increase at all three hearings. Caballero said strong opposition to the increase would force the administration to consult students about future course offerings.

Student input to fee increases would improve student morale and would "stop the University from telling students what students want," Caballero said.

"Students are sick and tired of being treated as children," he said. "Students are adult enough to be wrong if they so choose."

Caballero suggested the use of student referendums for determining whether fees should be increased.

"I'm not saying destroy the athletics program," Caballero said. "I'm saying make me feel good about my money to it."

Lacey said administrators are willing to bring the athletics program closer to students if students would let them know how to do it.

Beg your pardon

An article in Thursday's Daily Egyptian misrepresented Harry Browdy's opposition to the proposed fee for a new Jackson County jail.

Browdy, a member of the Murphysboro City Council, said he was opposed to having a new jail built in the business district of Murphysboro, not anywhere in the city as was incorrectly reported.

"Students are sick and tired of being treated as children," he said. "Students are adult enough to be wrong if they so choose."

Caballero suggested the use of student referendums for determining whether fees should be increased.

Kansas has talent, high quality music
Matt Coyle, you may know about cinema and photography, but I'm afraid you don't know about music. I didn't see the Kansas concert and Kansas is not my favorite band, but it was clear from your response to their concert was one of innocence.

You obviously don't realize how hard it is to make a concert sound like the album. The people who mixed that concert are pros and worked on music theory and art and science.

You also don't know anything about talent, which Kansas has.

'Elephant Man' review well written
Scott Standley's review of the film "The Elephant Man" was very clear and methodical. To classify this Lynch masterpiece with that of the mawkish made-for-TV genre is similar to stating that everyone loves Raskin-Robinson fish-flavored ice cream because Buckin put a lot of T.C. in the recipe.

Narrative films dealing with such subjects rarely are easy to classify, even if the audience had a good time. In the movie, it's possible the narrative is more important than the audience's emotional response to the film. In the end, the audience is left with such an impossibly feeling separate organisms. From the moment Treves first encounters Merrick and his "mammoth" nose, they are clearly no longer in the same genre of the past two decades. True agape love is emotional contact between an individual and the social aspects of another, though they be biologically

Catholic students invited to join Knights of Columbus Council

Within the next few weeks, the Catholic students of St. Mary's High School will have the unique opportunity to become involved in an international organization with a reputation for developing leadership, community, and a sense of dedication to God and country.

There is a new Knights of Columbus Council forming that will be located at the Southern Illinois University Board of Education will be operating exclusively through the Newman Center.

An organizational meeting has been planned for Sunday, Nov. 16, at noon at the Newman Center. The purpose of this meeting is to make available an opportunity to those who would find some interest in belonging to this international Catholic organization. Anyone interested in learning about the Knights of Columbus may contact the University. This is a rare opportunity to be one of the groups involved in the organizational body of the Knights of Columbus.

Parking fine fiasco' denial of University's objectives

Dr. Somit speaks of the image of the University and service to the community. The front page of the newspaper is engraved with a page of scholarly efforts; and there's an equally catchy Law or Greek slogan on the University seal. But it might as well be in Mad Magazine until the Law School can do something about theamas such as the behavior of Herbert Donow and his parking fine. He's all for legal ramifications and rights, but he seems to endlessly avoid the issue of illegally paying his illegal activities.

According to the Nov. 6 DE, he's been stonewalling the University as far back as 1974. In the Law School, he accused me of something, and I'm not sure if that's a stunt like this. Mr. Donow is a smugness on SIU-C's image, a unique opportunity to develop skills and abilities in leadership, develop qualities of flexibility and to be more tolerant of change with the ever-changing world.

Experience in the Knights of Columbus has very well in all of those categories. The Knights offer a diversified program of social activities, athletics, informational sessions and an opportunity to meet and work with not only SIU-C students but able-minded men from all over Southern Illinois.

You will be glad, and your future will be better because of the Knights of Columbus open house Sunday at noon. You will be glad you did it, and your future will be better because of the Knights of Columbus open house Sunday at noon.
Tie-down code still up in the air

By Tony Gordon
Staff Writer

Mobile home park owners who objected to some provisions of the proposed mobile home tie-down code for Carbondale have yet to see final language. Councilman Charles Stewart has said he will bring the code to the council on Oct. 27.

A public hearing on the code before the council on Oct. 27, the owner of a mobile home park objected to the deadline set for tie-down of homes already set up and the number of ties required to meet the code.

As originally presented to the council by John Yow, city director of Code Enforcement, all mobile homes inside city limits would have been required to be tied down by June 1, 1981. Single-width mobile homes 50 feet or less in length would have needed two vertical ties and two diagonal ties to comply with the code. Single-width homes 51 to 75-feet-long were scheduled for a minimum of two vertical ties and three diagonal ties in the original proposal.

The first code Yow presented to the council had the same number of required ties called for in the code approved by the Illinois State Legislature for mobile homes. Effective July 1, Yow said the only difference in the code he first proposed for Carbondale and the state law was that all mobile homes here will eventually be required to be tied-down, while the state code only applies to homes moved or set up after Jan. 1, 1980.

Yow said the ordinance he drafted after the public hearing deleted the diagonal requirement for existing mobile homes and was prepared with the effective date blank, so that the council could determine when owners of existing homes should be forced to comply.

At the council's Oct. 10 meeting, the date settled on for existing home compliance was Sept. 1, 1982. Yow said the park owners said they needed the extra time because of the labor required to tie down a mobile home and expense involved.

An additional vertical tie for mobile homes more than 50 feet long is required in the new code, which Yow said was to make up for the diagonal ties not mandated. A mobile home vertical tie is designed to resist the uplifting and overturning forces of high winds, while diagonal ties work to counteract horizontal or shear forces.

Mobile homes set up inside city limits after the code is adopted will have 50 days to be tied down unless the ground under the set up area is frozen. Yow said. Mobile homes in areas annexed to the city after the ordinance is approved will be required to be tied down within 18 months. Yow said.

Although he said he would have preferred to have the code require all mobile homes be tied down before the 1981-82 season next summer, Yow called the ordinance the City Council will consider Monday night "a good code, and a necessary one." He emphasized that no tie-down ordinance will make any mobile home 100 percent secure against the forces of high winds, but that said a mobile home that is tied down is much more secure than one that is not.

Thompson endorses catch-up plan

By Michael Monson

Gov. James R. Thompson has endorsed a catch-up plan for university administration and maintenance. Thompson endorses catch-up plan for university administration and funding for capital development projects, citing the state's weak fiscal condition and high interest rates for the purchase of bonds needed to finance construction.

But Shaw said he thought Thompson would not substantially weaken operations and maintenance funding to support the catch-up plan. "He said that Thompson would not substantially weaken operations and maintenance funding to support the catch-up plan in order to keep the state's economy on track," Shaw said.

Citizen's steering committee meets to decide grant request

By Melody Lack
Staff Writer

The Citizen's Community Development Steering Committee held its first of its final two meetings Wednesday night to prepare to give the City Council nonbinding approval of the Community Development Black Grant application.

The committee, forced to meet informally with only eight of the 18 members who attended, read and discussed the almost 1,000-page application. A formal approval is not required by the City Council, but the council looks to the steering committee for a recommendation, said Donald Montgomery, assistant city manager.

Street surfacing to close road

The one-way intersection at Small Group Housing-Todd Avenue and Douglas Drive will be closed Monday for street surfacing. It will reopen Tuesday morning.

Alternating rows into the area are W. MacAfee Road from the north and Douglas Drive on the south. In case of rain, the work will be done on Tuesday.

for community development

The committee will hold its final meeting on Nov. 20. The council will hold a hearing for public comment on the application on Nov. 24.

The application will be given final approval by the council on Dec. 1, after which it will be submitted to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The application will be reviewed competitively on a point basis with others from cities about the same size as Carbondale. If it receives a high enough rating, Carbondale will be invited by HUD to submit a full application this spring. The city is eligible to receive up to $3.5 million in grant funds over a three-year period.

We are reasonably confident it will get enough points to be funded, provided there are enough funds to be handed out, Montgomery said.

Among requests included on the application is $575,000 for street repairs to East Chestnut and North Marion streets, $786,000 for housing demolition, rehabilitation and code enforcement to meet standards for other HUD standards. Standard for health and child care programs, a $27,000 contingency fund and $45,000 for administrative costs to run the program.

Not included on the application is the Farina C. Hayes Community Center’s youth program, suggested for inclusion by the steering committee. The council decided earlier this month that inclusion of the program would upset the traditional 33.33 percent grant money split that Carbondale usually maintains between social and capital improvement projects. According to Montgomery, devoting more than the current 15 percent to social service programs in the youth program could jeopardize the approval of the entire grant.

The 33.33 split is considered safe by the council and staff because Carbondale has been successful in receiving grant funding with previous applications with the same percentages.

The committee is confident it will get the necessary 15 points on the application. The application is the furnace which fuel for a quorum in the city council looks to discuss and decide.

The committee has provided Carbondale an opportunity to decide whether the grant application is acceptable. The committee also included a recommendation of the council to ensure funding for the city’s future needs to be considered.

The committee has been working to develop a comprehensive plan that could guide the city in the future. The committee has worked closely with the city council to ensure the city’s needs are being met.

Compare costs: SIU-C rates may go up

By Scott Coane
Staff Writer

If the Board of Trustees approves increases submitted to it by the SIU-C administration Thursday, SIU-C will have the second highest tuition and fees rate and the fourth highest housing rate of state-supported universities in Illinois.

Although most of the six state universities anticipate increases in housing, tuition and fees, only the University of Illinois will have more expensive housing and tuition rates.

If the board approves increases in the bond retirement fee, the recreation fee and the student attorney fee, enrollment costs for a full-time student would rise to $844.40 per semester.

The U of I would be the only more expensive state school at $824.64 for freshmen and sophomores. Dr. Charles West, vice president for student affairs, said although the tuition and fees rate for students there will probably rise over its present rate of $452.65, it will still rank below SIU-C.

The least expensive state school appears to be Illinois State University. Tuition and fees there will probably be about $304 per semester next fall. Judy Boyer, SIU associate vice president for student affairs, said.

Although most of the state universities offer the same basic services like comprehensive health insurance and intramural and intercollegiate athletic programs, some schools offer services that are not present at SIU-C.

Williams said EIU students do not have to buy textbooks, because a textbook rental fee covers that cost.

NIU students benefit from a city-wide bus system that provides transportation throughout DeKalb. The cost of the bus system is included in a $475.25 tuition and fees rate that may rise $10 or $20 next year, said NIU Executive Director of Auxiliary Services Bill Herman.

SIU-C ranks more favorably when it comes to University Housing. Although housing rate for double-occupancy rooms for single undergraduates will rise from $1,792 to $1,992 per academic year if the board approves the administration’s proposal, the University will have still have the third least expensive housing rates.

U of I will probably have the most expensive housing rate at $2,233 an academic year and Western Illinois University will have the cheapest rates at about $1,399 per academic year.

Lesar presented new award for good judgment, guidance

By John Ambroia
Staff Writer

The title of Distinguished Service Professor, never before given at SIU, was awarded Thursday to Hiram Lesar, two-time former acting University president and former dean of the law school, by the Board of Trustees.

The resolution, passed by the board at its regular monthly meeting, cited Lesar's "good judgment in guiding the University through two crucial periods of transition. His performance during these periods earned the respect, affection and confidence of the entire University community."

Lesar, 68, served as acting president from June 1979 until August of this year. Lesar is currently teaching in the law school and was called upon to take over as interim president, a position he held until Warren Brandt was appointed president in December 1979.

That same year, President David Derge resigned and David Brandt in 1979, Lesar served the University admirably during his term as president and law school dean.

"The first recipient of the title of Distinguished Service Professor has served the University well," Somit said. "Your exceptional career at SIU-C and Washington University has led to this award."

Following a standing ovation from the board and the audience, Lesar made a short speech in which he thanked the board for their show of appreciation for his work.

Lesar was called upon to take over as interim president, a position he held until Warren Brandt was appointed president in December 1979. Lesar continued his work as dean of the law school, during which time he fought for, and won, state funding to construct a building for the school.

Following the resignation of Brandt in 1979, Lesar served another term as interim president until Somit was appointed president last June.

Hiram Lesar, two-time former acting president and former dean of the School of Law at SIU, is the first recipient of the title of Distinguished Service Professor.

Students were taking classes, and in 1974 the American Bar Association granted the school provisional accreditation.

That same year, President Warren Brandt was appointed president in December 1979.
Senate raps plan

Acting dean named to Grad School
By Carol Krountes
Staff Writer
John Jackson, associate dean of the Graduate School has been named as acting dean to the school.

John Guyon, acting vice president for academic affairs, made the appointment effective Nov. 1. Guyon, dean of the Graduate School since August 1976, was splitting his time between both jobs until Jackson's appointment was made.

Jackson cited Guyon's appointment as co-chair to a task force studying the University's program priorities by SUC President Albert Somit as a reason for appointing an acting graduate dean. Somit appointed Guyon to the task force at the all-University faculty meeting Oct. 28.

Jackson said he would continue his duties as associate dean as well as taking on the extra responsibilities of dean.

Jackson had been handling all graduate student problems except those involving money.

Jackson said, include program review, additions to the graduate faculty, representation on the Council of Deans and tackling the budget.

Jackson, 36, said he is looking forward to the challenge and responsibilities of his new duties.

"I hope to continue if a good working relationship between the Graduate Council and graduate students," Jackson said. "I also hope to continue dealing with student problems in a rapid and humane way, avoiding major headaches wherever possible."

Jackson has been an associate dean for two years. He came to SUC in 1966 as an instructor in the political science department and completed his doctorate in 1971 from Vanderbilt University.

Protesters march against city plan for desegregation

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ten antibusing protesters marched outside the federal courthouse Thursday as attorneys fought over a court-ordered city school desegregation plan.

The plan has resulted in the continuation and reinstatement of separate and unequal schools on the north side, William Caldwell told the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

"Equality of treatment has eluded these students and stigmatizes St. Louis schools as undesirable," said Caldwell, who represents a black north side parents group.

The school board set a "rigid, arbitrary racial limit" on blacks in south side schools which caused most schools on the predominantly-black north side to remain segregated, Caldwell said.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and two parents groups, one on the north side and one on the south side, appealed the desegregation order of U.S. District Judge James H. Meredith.

Missouri also appealed Meredith’s order which required the state to contribute $1 million to the $2 million plan.

The plan requires about 7,800 of the district’s 63,000 students. Integration was complicated because the district’s enrollment is 78 percent black.

Black students bear an unfair burden of the plan, said J.eph McDuffie, representing the black parents who originally filed suit against the school board. The burden was not eased by new "enrichment" programs, he said.

"They put in place some developmental programs for the purpose of equaling schools," McDuffie said. "What that does is create a separate, dual school system within the boundaries of St. Louis."

The school board said the programs were aimed at north side schools "with the acknowledgment that these schools cannot be integrated."
Radiothon begged for money and residents dug deep to help

By Liz Griffin
Staff Writer

A radiothon conducted from 6 a.m. Wednesday until 12:20 a.m. Thursday by WCIL and Pi Sigma Epsilon, a professional marketing fraternity, raised about $8,117 for St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

The fund's success placed it in the top 7 percent of fund-raising radio broadcast drives in the United States, according to Bill Massolia, co-chairman of the project for Pi Sigma Epsilon.

Massolia said St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital, located in Memphis, Tenn., is the largest of its kind in the world and provides free treatment to its patients. Donations fund the institute.

Treatment costs about $7,000 per patient per day.

Last year, about $3,300 was raised by WCIL and University Housing for cancer research and treatment at the hospital.

Paul Yer, assistant director of programming at University Housing, said workers at the office didn't participate in this year's drive as they had in past years because of changes in personnel and the lack of time to mobilize manpower needed. He said the office was notified by Pi Sigma Epsilon of the drive in early October.

WCIL has been broadcasting the drive for the past six years, according to Mike Chylewsky, program manager of WCIL.

Massolia said about 2,300 people called in donations. The average donation was $5. The members of the fraternity donated $600, according to Massolia.

The largest total amount of money, about $3,300, came from Carbondale callers. Pinckneyville residents were the second biggest contributors.

According to Chylewsky, calls came from as far away as Perryville, Mo., Paducah, Ky., and Willissville and Mt. Vernon, both in Illinois.

WCIL donated over 18 hours of its air time, making pleas for money about every 25 minutes. Chylewsky said:

"We were only about $400 off at midnight, but Southern Illinois came through." He said about eight announcers from WCIL and 80 members of the fraternity donated their time.

Fraternity members answered four phones throughout the day at the Newman Center, 715 S. Washington. They also solicited donations from local bar patrons.

Pi Sigma Epsilon began planning the drive and soliciting donations from local churchgoers, businesses and banks about a month ago as a charitable and a learning project.

Singer John Denver, actor Danny Thomas, and SIU-C director of men's athletics Gale Sayers promoted the drive through radio commercials about a week and a half prior to the charitable event.

The goal was to raise $10,000 by midnight.

"For the last hour and a half we went all live from Aid to Leukemia Stricken Children (the fund-raising branch of the hospital) headquarters at the Newman Center, and that is unheard of at a rock station," Chylewsky said.

The drive for St. Jude's is one of the largest in the United States and is held throughout Illinois. Chylewsky said:

"It is unheard of at a rock station..."
Jobless rate drops as schools open

With increased hiring by SIU-C and other area schools for the fall semester, the September jobless rate in Jackson County fell to 7.9 percent from 8 percent in August, according to the Illinois Department of Labor.

David H. Koch, a labor market economist with the department, said that the increased hiring in the county occurs every year when the colleges begin filling positions not fall semester.

The 7.9 percent figure means that 2.1 percent countywide are out of work. Despite the decrease in unemployment from August, September's figure is still 1.1 percent more than the rate at the same time last year.

Organizers out for blood next week

Organizers of a blood drive slated for next week have set a goal of 800 pints of blood. The drive will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday in the Card Room D of the Student Center.

Apologies to give blood are preferred, but walk-in donors will be turned away, Mark Magruder, a coordinator of the drive, said. Donating blood takes about an hour, he said.

Soviets accused of 'brutal repression'

MADRID, Spain (AP) - The United States accused the Soviet Union today of "brutal repression" of human rights after the Soviet Union intervened in Afghanistan last December.

The American delegate called the Soviet explanation of its military incursion into Afghanistan last December "a dark shadow over East-West relations." C.S. delegate Griffin Bell, the former attorney general, told the Soviet Union that the Soviet Union had a "lamentable record" in living up to the Helsinki agreements.

Continuing Western disapproval of the conference, the Polish delegate at home and abroad, Bell cited names and cases of dissent and said Soviet reaction to their actions was "an indication of a subject these brave people to brutal repression.

Senate raps plan for base awards on financial need

(Continued from Page 9) be approved this year. Quane said the money is necessary because some students who need financial aid have not received grants.

Because of unexpectedly high enrollments, the ISSC ran out of money after making awards to eligible students who applied before Aug. 28. Applications received after that date are being held by the ISSC until the Illinois Legislature decides the request for additional funds.

Quane said: "Students are betting on that money. If the money should not come through, a lot of students will have to make quick decisions about what they will do for financial aid next semester."

In other action, the senate approved a plan to allow sophomores to live off-campus.

Bruce Swinstead, vice president for student affairs, will review the plan and present it to President Albert Sons.

The plan will go into effect fall semester of school year.

New housing rules would exempt students with at least 24 credit hours and a grade point average of 2.4 from living in on-campus or approved off-campus dorms.

The drive is sponsored and coordinated by the Arnold Air Force Society of the NU-C Air Force ROTC program, along with Mobilization of Volunteer Effort.

About 80 student volunteers per day are needed to handle registration. Help set up the dormitory and assist students at Red Cross, nurses. Patricia Lundquist of MOVE said people who do not donate blood will be able to get free blood from the Red Cross for themselves or family if they need it whereas those who do not donate blood have to pay for it.

Students who want to volunteer to help with the drive should contact the MOVE office located on the third floor of the Student Center.

Last year's blood drive raised about 1,800 pints of blood, Magruder said.

New billing system criticized

A $10 temporary increase in the athletic fee was approved by the board of trustees for one year. A final decision on the fee increase is expected at the board's meeting in March.

Women's intercollegiate athletics received $78,026 this year as opposed to $129,242 received by men's intercollegiate athletics.

West cited the use of one set of warm-up suits for nine teams as part of the funding problem. "If we get this increase, we won't be coming back knocking on your door soon," West said.

Council members said they were behind women's athletics but were opposed to the fee increase because it would also mean an increase in funding for men's athletics--an increase members said was unnecessary.

The council struck a proposal concerning the increase in rent for Evergreen Terrace, housing for married students, until the council meeting Dec. 3.

Soviet’s accrue’d of ‘brutal repression’

The American delegate called Soviet explanations of its military incursion into Afghanistan last December transparent and told delegates: "I say only that the Soviet invasion cast a dark shadow over East-West relations which no meeting, no pronouncement, nothing in fact but the total withdrawal of Soviet troops, can displace."

Continuing Western disapproval of the conference, the Polish delegate at home and abroad, Bell cited names and cases of dissent and said Soviet reaction to their actions was "an indication of a subject these brave people to brutal repression.

Participants sought for ‘road runs’

Saturday at 8 a.m. over 100 early-risers, clad in fall-weather running garb, will line up in the north parking lot of the Recreation Building, and then surely break into a run.

Two competitive road runs will be sponsored by the SIU Roadrunners Club. One course is 5,000 meters, just over three miles long, and the other stretches 10 miles, said Betsy Hill, coordinator of intramural recreation.

The deadline for registration is 5 p.m. Friday. Registration fees are $8, and can be paid at Recreational Sports in the Recreation Building. Proceeds from the run will provide a spring-semester scholarship for some person who “has made an outstanding contribution to running,” Hill said.

Applicants for the scholarship do not have to participate Saturday, but can apply at the race or until 5 p.m. Friday at Recreational Sports.

‘Voice of the Salukis’ to leave

William Criswell, veteran sports director for Broadcasting Service, has been named station manager for SIUC’s WUSJ-TV in Olney.

Criswell’s appointment wraps up Broadcasting Service administrative changes made to comply with requirements set by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting. CPB requires each PBS television station that gets money from CPB to have a station manager to oversee the station’s programming and budget.

WUSJ-TV (Channel 16) and WSIU-TV (Channel 8) both used to report directly to the dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts, who oversees the Broadcasting Service.

A native of McMechen, W.Va., Criswell has been a reporter, news director, sports director and anchor for radio and television stations in Maryland, West Virginia and Ohio.

Bill Criswell has been named station manager at WUSJ-TV in Olney, which is part of the SIUC Broadcasting Service.

Mayors say urban programs won’t be hurt in Reagan era

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayors of 18 cities met Thursday to pledge cooperation with President Ronald Reagan and draw up plans for urban economic programs to be presented to the new administration.

At a news conference, the mayors dismissed speculation that the conservative tide in last week’s elections might jeopardize urban programs.

“We recognize the fact that the campaign is over and there is now a new president-elect, and we wish to work with him,” said Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago.

A delegation of mayors led by Detroit Mayor young and other mayors is legislation now before Congress to renew federal revenue sharing. Mayor Jane Byrne of Chicago, chairman of the conference’s Legislative Action Committee, said the continuation of revenue sharing is “very crucial” to the city’s financial stability.

Several Democratic mayors expressed confidence the Reagan administration would not discriminate against cities whose mayors supported President Carter’s election effort.

After the news conference, the mayors adjourned to a closed meeting to discuss their proposals. A delegation of mayors led by Mayor Daley and Mayor Dan Farole of San Francisco will go to Washington to meet with congressional leaders and members of the Carter and Reagan transition teams.

Among items on the mayors’ agenda were the renewal of federal revenue sharing and the continuation of other urban programs such as community block development and federal grants to revitalize city neighborhoods and creating jobs for the hard-core unemployed.

Voyager reveals many surprises

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — As Voyager 1 sailed away from a “flawless” rendezvous with Saturn, its instruments revealed Thursday in a shower of data that the giant moon Titan may be a frozen, murky swamp of liquid nitrogen.

Mission scientists also heard Voyager confirmed long-held suspicions of a sixth ring around Saturn and Voyager may have discovered a seventh.

Pictures transmitted over nearly 4 billion miles of space also provided a wealth of new information about space, scientists said Wednesday’s close pass by the planet.

“I cannot recall being in such a state of euphoria from any previous encounter with a planet,” said Voyager camera team leader Bradford Smith.

“We have learned more about Saturn in the past week than in the entire span of human history before Voyager,” Voyager, the three-year exploration mission concluded, said already more than 1 million miles past Saturn on Thursday and sailing toward the stars at 33,000 miles per hour.

The big surprise at Thursday’s science briefing was the finding that methane or natural gas, long considered the primary component of Titan’s atmostphere, “can only be a minor constituent,” less than 1 percent, said Ronald Hanel of the infrared radiometry team.

He and other scientists said a series of measurements taken in invisible infrared and ultraviolet wavelengths strongly suggested that red dark clouds form the only atmosphere around Saturn’s moon. Titan is also the only moon in the solar system known to have any atmosphere at all.

Tom Evans, of the radio science experiment, said the evidence points to an atmosphere pressure on Titan’s as yet unseen surface that is almost three times as great as on Earth.

He also said temperatures may be as cold as the degrees Fahrenheit below zero. “If you go that far south, you get the picture of a murky swamp. This is a rather bizarre murky swamp, if that’s what it is. The mark is liquid nitrogen and the swamp is liquid nitrogen,” Evans said.

Of Saturn’s rings, Smith said Voyager’s cameras confirmed the existence of the long-disputed D ring stretching from one to the edge of the three broad bright rings visible through even small Earth-based telescopes.

House talks revenue sharing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House wrangled over extending the non-subsidized municipal revenue-sharing program Thursday, with members saying the real issue was the power, efficiency and coordination of the federal government.

There is congressional opposition to the program “because it carries no central power with it,” said system known to have any atmosphere at all.

Police continue busts of underage drinkers at bars

Underage drinking is a misdemeanor in Illinois. Most of the arrests made in Carbondale were violations of city ordinances, which carry a fine of $10-$50, Betsy Burns, a city official.

The smaller fine is rarely assessed, she said, and an underage drinking arrest is not a criminal offense, so there is no criminal record.

One clerk said there were doubts about the liquor establishments are held responsible for underage drinking on the premises only if employees are caught serving alcohol to an underage person who does not have identification. The bars are not held responsible when they serve a person with a false ID.

Brett selected AL's top player

By The Associated Press

It was early May and George Brett was off to a terrible start, barely hitting .240. "I don't think I'm a 240 hitter," said the Kansas City Royals third baseman, whose lifetime batting average stood at .310. "I still don't think there's any reason I can't close to 300 like last year." As it turned out, Brett finished 61 percentage points above .300.

He wound up at .390, the highest in the majors in 39 years. He also led the American League in slugging percentage, .644, and on-base percentage, .401.

In no surprise, Brett was an overwhelming choice of a nationwide panel of sportscasters and broadcasters as the Associated Press American League Player of the Year.

Brett's storybook season was marred only by sporadic injuries that kept him out of more than 40 games and a hamstring condition that threatened his play in the World Series. Brett amassed 401 hits, points for AL player of the year honors, compared to the 111 for Reggie Jackson.

Gridders 'up' for Hurricane, Homecoming

By Brad Smith
Sports Editor

It's been a down year for the SIU-C football team, but Friday's game against Gold¬ dale will be a game of its own, with the team playing at its best. The Gridders are ex¬ pected to have a solid performance, and the fans will be no less enthusiastic.

The coach said that to beat Tulsa, the Salukis would have to play solid football for 60 minutes. "Other teams have played well and met the challenge of getting off to a good start, but Tulsa has come on the second half," Dempsey said. "They seem to wear people down.

Tulsa has been outscored by its opponents, 111-43, in the first half, but has won the second half, 124-89. Whether the pattern of Tulsa's previous foes, was the first half, then the second half for two periods, 117-60.

According to Dempsey, the key to Tulsa's offense is quarterback Kenny Jackson. "They run a very offense and he keeps the defense running and pass equally well," Dempsey said. "He likes to run the ball with a standup sprint and he really puts pressure on you. People are tired of dealing with record and he feels he's even more dangerous than Prince Mc¬

The coach added that Tulsa doesn't try much trickery. They don't need it. "They're an outstanding, solid football team," Dempsey said. "More times than not, they're predictable. They follow tendencies we won't return to bite us. Most of the time, we'll be pretty good against the run. We'll just make little adjustments. All we can do is go by their tendencies.

One adjustment the SIU-C defense will make is replacing the state tournament despite the Salukis going 9-3, scored four goals in a recent in¬

The Gridders will be facing Hurricane, a team with a record of 1-6. The Gridders have a solid defense, and if they can keep Hurricane off the scoreboard, they will have a good chance of winning.

Saturday's Homecoming game between SIU-C and Golden Hurricane of Tulsa.

A defensive end Rich Seiler with senior Scott Jensen. Seiler is probably lost for the season due to injury.

Offensively, there is good news from the all-conference team. Tailback Walter Poole, who leads the Salukis with eight touchdowns in the first half, has been hampered with a foot injury and his availability is questionable.

As of Thursday, Dempsey said, "Other than Poole, the team is healthy."

Ihler has worked on the initial planning and seeing that people get the jobs done that are supposed to be done," Ihler said. "That, combined with teaching classes has given me a lot of ideas and drills for the team as much as I'd like.

At the outset of the season, it was hoped that the Salukis would have a strong record going into the national tournament. It started out that way, but the second half of the season has seen Ihler working with his team, looking for a tonic for anemic tendencies.

"I think our defense is capable of holding anyone in the tournament. Ihler said, "but they can't hold on forever. I've had to make some moves."

With left back forward and leading scorer Ellen Massey fully recovered from minor surgery, Ihler will have a little less to worry about come noon Wednesday when the Salukis face 15-19 San Jose State. However, Ihler moved sophomore Barb Smith to right inner forward, senior Karen Toobs to center line, freshman Dore Well to left halfback and senior captain Mary Gilbert to defense.

Homecoming

Warm memories of a simpler time
Homecoming changes with times

By Jeffery Smyth
Staff Writer
SIC-C Homecoming, 1960 Its theme, "Nostalgia 50s-60s Rebels Without a Cause." Its purpose, to instill school spirit among students. But Homecoming means more than three days of "yaboonism" and "rah-rah Salukis." It's an ar- chive of attitudes and lifestyles held by SIU students past.

Homecoming weekend has been raised a tradition at this school, but that classification may possibly be a misnomer. Though the base of the event, the crowning of a king and queen, the parade down Illinois Avenue and the Saturday af- ternoon football game, has been present since the first Homecoming in 1921, many changes have evolved. And always, those changes reflected the changes in SIU students through time.

The 1950s. Those crazy happy days. Stick cars, driven by greasy-haired boys, brought life to the night. Records sold 20 cents and a buck would get you into the drive-in to see Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis in "My Friend Irma Goes West." For $5, a person could become an SIU student for one semester. LSD (University Drugs) was the place to talk with friends over a green river soda. "Animal House" style fraternities, drag-racing and "rah-rah Salukis" was the day. The 50s in Carbondale, "American Graffiti." Not really, according to Ann Fuller, 1964 SIU Homecoming Queen.

"My high school fit that image more than Southern did," said Fuller. formerly Ann Travelstead. "Southern was a suicide college. Most people vacated the place on weekend.s." Women who didn't commute to SIU resided at Woody Hall for $10 per year. Under the reign of a dean, they checked-in during the week at 10:30 p.m. and at 1 a.m. on the weekends. Each woman was allowed three late nights a quarter when she didn't have to be in until an hour after check-in time. Men had no restrictions.

"It was a very puritan atmosphere." Fuller said. No one ever forgot the rules, they were accepted without question. If you were late, you got outdoor duty. Unless you attended classes for five nights.

"I can't think of a single place in Carbondale to go to socialize. If we wanted to dance, we had to go to the Chatter Box in Murphyboro. Carbondale wasn't much of a town. We were in our own world and not aware of the outside world that much," she added.

For students like Fuller, social activities evolved around the university. Homecoming was the big event. The tradition was set for the most typical freshman boy and girl. The winners would lead the Phoebe with a pledge to the school. At the bonfire-dance, other activities were the disposal of classes so that the student body could meet the new queen and traditions that still stand today, such as the football game and parade.

Back in the 50s the Homecoming parade was a big event. About 40 floats usually entered and 15 to 20 high school bands participated. Along with the pagentry of the parade, houses throughout the community were decorated in competition for a prize.

The crowning of the Homecoming queen was also a big event. The queen candidates and the attendants would meet at Shryock Auditorium for a secret ceremony. There they would meet King Menes and his court, which consisted of four guards, two trainbearers for the queen, the king's royal falcon, two servants that fanned the king, a slave girl and a royal courtier. The king, an unknown faculty member, would present the crown to the new queen. She would be presented to the student body the following day and would preside over the football game, parade, the dance and the concert, which featured bands such as Al Travers and his Rhymstone Schaffie Band and the Glen Miller band.

During the 50s the SIU Marching Salukis marched in parades. To this day, few students know that a Saluki is a descendant of an Egyptian hunting dog.

The atmosphere of the late 50s spilled over into the early 60s, but changes were beginning to take place. Students became more aware of national and international issues and less interested in school activities. Mike Hanes, director of the Marching Salukis, witnessed the change.

"The fifty-fifth Joe College campus life began to diminish in the later 1960s," he said. "People were concerned with world issues, and social issues. Like Homecoming were less interesting.

In 1969, students were very active in the anti-war movement. A few days before Homecoming, students urged others to boycott classes and participate in a Moratorium Day. The slogan, "Do you love war and death? Boycott classes," was scrolled on classroom blackboards.

That same year, the SIU Homecoming Queen candidates were disqualified by the Student Senate for illegal campaign practices. The Student Activity Council overruled the Senate and awarded the crown to a person who campaigned as "The Unqueen." Also in 1969, changes that social elections were raced away from one to the caniddates. When the 1968 queen turned over her crown, she reportedly said, "Here's your crown. Do with it as you wish.

About the same time, the king (Continued on Page 10).

Greeks once dominated campus

Grandmother might have been a "paintined woman" who rogues her hair and painted her tips red. If she cut off her long hair missed her skirt length and danced the traditional values of family, religion, leadership, scholarship and service. But at Southern Illinois Normal University, a small teachers' college.

In 1929 a sorority chapter of Epsilon Beta was formed by Lucy X. Woody and Hilda Senn. Twenty-four "girls" joined the organization and moved into a chapter house on the corner of Mill and University.

According to Mitchell, a female student either lived in a sorority house. Anthony Hall or elsewhere. A problem, she said. was that the sorority or "elsewhere" provided little or no social activities.

"During the 1920s and 30s, when the Greek system should have been growing by leaps and bounds. It stagnated because needed "girls" weren't allowed on campus." Mitchell said.

"Mr. DeJeter Mor., former SIC president, caused Epsilon Sigma Epsilon to adopt a formal uniform to honor him and Mrs. Harris. Mitchell recalled in a May 1973 speech.

"This was in the days when it was a 'must' for each sorority "to have a tea for the faculty, complete with formulas once a year. Many a sorority chapter house, which accommodated 24 members, looked like the kitchen and asked, unbeknownst. 'How many do you feed here?'

As he inspected other chapter houses, apparently came to the conclusion that among other areas of SIC the Greek system needed a tug by the boot strap. So he helped to pull.

According to Mitchell, Harris and John Hornbeak. Former Epsilon found the legal counsel and assistant to the president were responsible for "the bonding that led to Small Group Housing in 1956."

In 1960, sororities were required to move into Small Group Housing. Harris. Epsilon Beta also became mandatory for freshman according to Mitchell those in the Greek system found it difficult to keep their houses, each with a capacity for about 40 students. filled with members. 'In dependents' had to fill the vacancies and this led to a decline in group identity.

According to Nancy Harris. Director for Student Development at SIC, former Chancellor Robert MacVeigh influenced the Board of Trustees to change the policy concerning the Greek system.

"I don't know that this campus has ever gotten over that original policy. That was just about the time the students' attitudes and lifestyles changed," said Harris. a member of Alpha Gamma Delta.

In 1969, the United States was at war in Vietnam and students began to perceive themselves as individuals, rather than as members of a group. Harris said. For this and other reasons. SIC has changed. Later the policy oriented as the University of Illinois.

Things have changed since the first Greek organization was founded at SIC. Today's students—tomorrow's grandfathers and grandmothers—dance to country and western music. jeans are still "in" and skinny is "out." The original Epsilon Beta chapter house has been torn down to make way for a parking lot. taking with it much of the student interest in preserving the Greek system at SIC.

Several groups have been formed and members are active. After the war SIC legal counsel and assistant to the president were responsible for "the bonding that led to Small Group Housing in 1956.

A building’s name is its history

By Dean Allen
Staff Writer

Have you ever walked by the majestic vine-covered Wheeler Hall or through the hallowed halls of Pullium and wondered who these buildings were named after?

The history of SIU and the dedication of the school’s buildings began in 1871 when Robert Allyn was selected principal of Southern Illinois Normal University for a yearly salary of $4,000. The new teachers' college had an enrollment of 396 students by the end of its first year and a staff of nine instructors.

Allyn dedicated Altgeld Hall, named after Gov. John Altgeld. The building originally contained a library, science labs and a gymnasium. Today it's the home of the music department.

The same year Allyn became principal, Daniel B. Parkinson was hired as the chairman of the department of natural philosophy and applied chemistry. In 1897 he was elected SIU's fourth president. During his 16-year presidency, Allyn fought for better student housing.

During this time, Parkinson supervised the construction of Anthony and Wheeler Halls. Anthony, a women's dorm, now houses university administrators. It was dedicated in 1913 for Susan B. Anthony, the first president of the American National Woman Suffrage Association. Wheeler library was dedicated in 1904 for Judge S.P. Wheeler, an SIU Board of Trustees president.

Howard, a former superintendent of the Olney city schools and the only person ever to be named "Dean of the Faculty," served on Parkin- son's administration by chairing the department of education and developing the placement office.

Henry Shryock, a former principal of Olney High School, was named head of the English Department at SIU under Parkinson. Shryock also served as the university's registrar before being elected as president. As president, Shryock refused to stop teaching classes and remained the English chairman. President until 1935, he revised the school's curriculum and increased its staff and scholastic rating.

Shryock also helped create the physical education department under William Donoho. The chemistry department under James Neckers, and named Lucy K. Woody the Dean of Women. Woody Hall was built in 1948 as a women's dormitory and remained one until 1968, when it was transformed into the hub of the university's growing bureaucracy.

Shryock also summoned William "Mac" McAndrew to run the Athletics Department, which he did until 1940. McAndrew became a brigadier general a year before his death in 1943. In addition, McAndrew founded the Illinois Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and in 1930 led his football team to SIU's only undefeated season in history.

McAndrew's assistant coach, Leland "Doe" Lingle, started the school's track team in 1927. One of the 1920s team's star players, who lettered in football and track, was Glenn "Abe" Martin. Martin played professional football for the Chicago Cardinals after his graduation and later coached at Princeton.

After Shryock's death, Roscoe Pulliam was elected as the sixth president. His greatest achievement was to turn the teachers' college into a full-blown university, with a staggering enrollment of 3,000 students.

Pulliam had been superintendent of the Harrisburg city schools and was a controversial break with tradition, was the (Continued on Page 5A)

Peter Morris recalls SIU during father’s presidency

By Steve Metsch
Student Writer

Peter Morris, professor of mathematics and son of former SIU President DeLoye Wesley Morris, has returned to the University this year to teach mathematics.

“I consider Illinois to be my roots, my home,” Morris says. “I wanted to come back and visit my mother and also my father, who is very ill in Union County Hospital.”

Morris has taken a year’s sabbatical from Shepherd College, Shepherdstown, W.Va., to teach here.

Morris’ father is ill with Alzheimer’s disease, which results in deterioration of the brain. While doctors are not sure of its cause, it is believed to be caused by a virus. Peter Morris’ mother, Dorothy, lives in Brush Hill. She is 72 and is an avid golfer who also loves to tend her garden.

DeLoye Morris was president of SIU from 1948 to 1979. During that time, SIU enjoyed its greatest period of growth, changing from a small college (Continued on Page 10a) to a university more democratic by helping to create an advisory student council and improved relations between the administration and faculty.

Morris’ administration also named the East Campus dorms. The Brush family were the founders of Carbondale; Mr. and Mrs. Claude Neely were both English professors; Dennis Trueblood was a former College Student Personnel chairman; William R. Schneider was chairman of the Department of English; John Grinnell was Vice president for Operations; Mae Travillion Smith was an assistant professor of English; and John and Allen Wright were both historians.

first president who had not been elected from the ranks of the faculty. He tried to make the university more democratic by helping to create an advisory student council and improved relations between the administration and faculty. Historians have said that Pellegrini, who named Dorothy Davies chairman of the women’s physical education department, had a driving personality that caused his physical breakdown and subsequent death in 1944. For months, he directed the university’s affairs from his death bed.

The eighth president of SIU, DeLoye Morris, was inaugurated in 1949. He retired in 1979 and has been in a Kentucky nursing home since 1977. By the end of his long presidency, Morris had been responsible for SIU’s tremendous growth. He helped build the faculty to 250 and the student enrollment to 35,000—two times what was expected. Morris, considered by many as SIU’s greatest president, was concerned with the university’s growth as an institution—not only in size, but in stature. He is said to have had powerful influence in the Edwardsville Zoning Commission, the Board of Trustees, and many Carbondale groups.

During Morris’ administration, Claude Neely was named as the university’s “Great Teacher Award” in 1964, died in his campus office in 1967, 37 years after coming to the Carbondale campus.

Other professors during this time were Carl and Gertrude Landegren, who recently had the Life Science building named after them for their research in yeast genetics.

Zappa concert, bonfire slated
By Alen Scudlby
Staff Writer
A student dance and bonfire, the "I-C" versus Tulsa football game, a parade through downtown Carbondale and a Frank Zappa rock concert highlight activities planned for this Homecoming weekend.

The Homecoming theme, "The Best is Yet to be," has been incorporated into the parade, student dances and bonfire, Sister Student Program, Homecoming King and Queen and several SU-C vice presidents, combined with assistant programming coordinator Mark Stullen, according to Joanne Grimmnan, Student Program director.

"The parade will be the Homecoming King and Queen, several SU-C vice presidents, the Student Center Manager, the marching Salukis and area high school bands," Grimmnan said.

After the parade, spectators can watch the football game between SU-C and Tulsa. Kickoff is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. at Memorial Stadium. Halftime activities will include introductions of alumni attending the game, the Homecoming King and Queen and the winning float as well as a performance by the Marching Salukis. Wood said.

Following the game, there will be a free concert by "Weeds" entitled "2 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the Free Forum Area. A food special of Italian beef, potato chips and a two-ounce soft drink will be offered at the concert. If weather is pleasant, the concert will be moved to the Roman Room of the Student Center.

A concert by Frank Zappa will then be held at the Arena Saturday at 4 p.m. Tickets for the show are $6.00 and $6.50 and can be purchased at the Arena Special Events Ticket Office. A ticket and chrysanths will be sold Friday and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Student Center.

"There will also be a performance by the Marching Salukis and presentations from guess speakers. Wood said.

The Homecoming parade began with the traditional Homecoming marchers, which will begin at 9 a.m. and travel south on University Avenue. Grand marshals for this year's parade will be SU-C President Albert Sumt

This year's parade will feature floats and cars, all contributed to by the Homecoming theme. About 14 people also dressed according to the theme, will be performing stunts and novelty acts along the route.

The winner of the float competition will receive $100 and a trophy, and winners of the car and student and novelty act competitions will receive $50 and a trophy. Grimmnan said.

Also participating in the parade will be the Homecoming King and Queen, several SU-C vice presidents, the Carbonel City Manager, the Marching Salukis and area high school bands.

In addition, a "Yell Like Hell" contest where groups will have three to five minute to give cheers that relate to the Homecoming theme, according to Brian Wood, chairman of the NFS Special Events Committee.

There will also be a performance by the Marching Salukis and presentations from guest speakers. Wood said.

The original Comedy Rangers, an improvisational comedy act, will appear at 8 p.m. at the Student Center's Ballroom A and B. Tickets for the show are $1.00.

The Chicago-based comics are known for their improvisational comedy routines, which they have done along the lines of Chicago's Second City. A featured part of their shows allows the audience to make suggestions for sketches, which the troupe builds into an act.

The group, which was formed in 1967, consists of Jeff Michalski, Tony Papaloi, Craig Brown and Slava Tersian.

Among the publications which have praised their act are The Chicago Tribune, The Twin Cities Daily and the Illinois Entertainer.

Wood, chairman of the Student Programing Council's Special Events Committee, said the Rangers will perform mostly take-offs on television shows and music of the 1950's and 1960's, in fit in with the theme of this weekend's Homecoming theme.

Morris says students unchanged

(Continued from Page 2a) to a major university under the guidance of President Morris. Morris Library is named for him in recognition of his years of service to the University. "My father had the energy and dedication to be one of the most respected universities in the state, as it is today," Morris said. "During the years after the Korean War until the mid-1960s, SIU experienced a lot of construction."

Morris recalled that the president's home, where he and his brother lived, and his parents lived when his father was president and where the Faber Museum is now. Morris lived there from the time he was a child, until he graduated from SIU in 1969. Opening day of the museum was scheduled to be one week before the SIU-C. Morris said, "This kind of irks me, because SIU wasn't involved in campus then. It was simply one university with two campuses. It is nice, however, to know that my father is remembered.""Peter Morris has no ambition to follow in his father's footsteps as an administrator. "I really enjoy teaching and would like to keep teaching Morris for the rest of my life," he said.

Morris said his interest in math began in grade school. "While attending SIU, he became impressed by the way math left "no room for confusion," which, he said, is a lot more than can be said for other subjects. After graduating from SIU, Morris attended the University of Iowa and Northern Iowa State College before transferring to Oklahoma State, where he obtained a Ph.D. in mathematics in August 1967. After teaching a few years at Florida State University, Morris has taught for the last 12 years at Shepherd College.

"The climate and countryside of Shepherdstown is similar to that of Carbondale. It is between the Blue Ridge and Allegheny mountains, and it is 20 miles from Washington, D.C. While it is not mountainous, it has more of a hilly landscape than the South of Carbondale," he said.

Comparing students from his years as a student to now, the 43-year-old Morris sees little difference. "The students I've met here are as alert and responsive as ever. I think there is a good mix of excellent, good, and fair students," he said.

This year, Morris, his wife and their sons, Doug, 19, Brett, 17, and Trevor, 13, will be in residence at a rented house on Kent Drive in Carbondale. After his year of teaching here at SIU, Morris will return to Shepherd College to continue teaching, studying and enjoying mathematics. Though he may be in West Virginia, his home will always be in Illinois, he said. "My great-grandfather came here after the Civil War. I think my father thought of Illinois as his home too, and that's why he returned here in the 1940s. To me, Illinois will always be home, and that's why my roots are," Morris said. After hearing that his son has "some nice," Morris said, "I think it's nice to have roots."
it's an uncomfortable, gratifying situation in which each person has gone their own way emotionally since the son's death nearly a year earlier. Hutton, who was with his brother when he drowned in a boating accident, became mentally unbalanced following the tragedy, attempted to commit suicide and was confined to a mental hospital where he underwent electroshock treatments. He has only been home for a month and is making great trouble readjusting to life outside the security of the hospital, "where nobody bad anything." He feels personally responsible for his brother's death and it haunts him relentlessly, in both nightmares and visions of cemeteries and the accident itself. Hutton has trouble relating to and coping with his old classmates and homelife. He feels alienated and disillusioned. Eventually, he agrees with his father to see a psychiatrist (Hirsch) to try and break down the emotional barriers which are plaguing him from returning to a normal life. These scenes, strategically placed throughout the film, are genuinely dramatic, as Hirsch desperately tries to get Hutton to begin to face the loss and to accept his true emotions flow freely.

Meanwhile, Sutherland (good-sated), but concerned about his son's emotional trauma, feels that his relationship is slowly disintegrating. She wants everyone to continue with life and refuses to face that son's and the whole family's considerable problems. Preferring to busy herself with social functions and the "good life" she led before the accident, Moore's character is more concerned with fixing broken china and planning a Christmas holiday vacation than facing up to the slow but sure destruction of her family. It's a great stereotype-breaking role for Moore that vanquishes her Laura Petrie-Mary Richards "good girl" TV image.

The film's bleak dramatic tone and atmosphere is furthered immensely by Redford's surprisingly adroit direction. Redford effectively uses the lush, affluent scenery and buildings of Lake Forest as a counterpoint to the dark, intense message being presented by Alvin Sargent's superior screenplay. It's a promising, attention-grabbing filmmaking debut from an actor who has always done his best to dispel his pretty boy image. Now Redford's trying to do the same thing behind the scenes and he succeeds unquestionably. "Ordinary People" is an excellent drama because it never asks the audience for sympathy or forgiveness. The characters aren't martyrs or sacred cows, but rather troubled, multi-dimensional human beings who are troubled and don't have all the answers; and maybe never will.

Films such as Woody Allen's "Interiors" and "Ordinary People" have done much to try and quash the arc of serenity and domesticity concerning family life which have permeated the mass media. After seeing "Ordinary People," "(Try Three One"") and "Leave it to Beaver" - and possibly even a Norman Rockwell magazine cover - will never be the same.
Whorehouse's new owners
try to deal with past reputation

By Charles Chamberlain
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Pati and Fred E. Mose said they had rambunctious, rowdy-type people when they moved in, but they didn't expect its reputation to live on. For five years, the area had been known as an area of "artistic" houses. The E.'s, however, say they didn't know what kind of a place it had been and they didn't think it would still be this bad.

said DiNunzio's 28-year-old wife, Pati. "Before we moved in last January, Frank would be knocking on the house all night, and there would be knocks on our door as soon as the light went out. In the first month after we had moved in, we would get an average of 10 cars a day and as many as two dozen on Sundays.

"They still come, paying no attention to the signs we have posted in the front yard, on the garage, on trees down the long driveway and on the fence door," she said. "Never a day passes that we don't get at least one would-be customer. We have to keep the door locked or else we'd be attacked by men with guns staring at the house. They would still be there at sunrise. They couldn't believe the signs my husband put up." Mrs. DiNunzio said she likes the house and plans to stay. "I can put up with the inconvenience of the callers, especially now that not as many come around," she said. "But my husband has a temper and sometimes he lets loose. We've been doing a lot of work here, the rent is low and the house is roomy. We have enough in a couple of years to buy our own home."

"A lot of guys must take awful long hours," she said. "Mostly the older ones — all well-dressed — show up after 1 a.m. Then the younger ones, some in their teens, arrive at night. Some mornings are twice as busy times. The older men make their calls then. They must be dropping their wives off at church first."

She said her husband was walking the family's Doberman pinscher in the morning and the chairman was recently and she was standing in the doorway holding his baby. "A young man came up and rushed to believe. The prostitutes were gone," she said. "He looked past my husband and saw me. 'What about her?' he asked.

"My husband is the dog and hit the guy several times," she said.

DiNunzio has a future court date to face battery charges.

No more peanut farming for Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter, soft-spoken and subdued after struggling so long to maintain his image as the White House man who had to hard to stay there, says he just wants to "live the life of an ex-president" when he moves out later this month.

"As the Gerald R. Ford, the last man to leave the White House, Carter said he will play "a fairly low-profile role." After Republican Ronald Reagan is inaugurated, Carter said he will return to Plains, Ga., and stay there "for a number of months, maybe longer.

He said he will begin planning his presidential library, possibly in Atlanta, to house his papers and mementos of his four years as president of the United States.

"We've had to make plans to write more than one book, and, asked if there would be any surprises in his memoirs, he replied: "I hope so." He might decide to aid some benevolent or non-profit group, Carter said, but he denied a statement once attributed to him that he might do missionary work.

Carter said he will not go back into business as a peanut farmer, which made him a millionaire before the Nixon administration; "because I think it's inappropriate for an ex-president to be in business in this world."

Carter said he knew he'd be judged a bit, however, expressing: "If my family is starving, I'll have to make a deal.

That shouldn't happen. As a farmer, Carter would be allowed to draw a pension of $80,630 a year in addition to a travel allowance and a secret service staff and Secret Service protection for both him and his wife, Rosalyn.

Carter said he has no desire to try wine production again, backed in, and he declined to venture an opinion whether President-elect Walter F.

Mondale should run.

"Fritz and I are probably almost as close as brothers," Carter said, but "as far as trying to see how the future will go, I won't do that." He said he had not necessarily chosen himself as the Democratic Party candidate that he will landslide and refused to make any recommendations about the party's future candidate or who the chairman should be.

Carter said he will not be a "minority party critic" out of office. "I'll like to play a constructive role," he said.

QUESTION—Have I been smoking cigarettes since I was 16. Now at age 21, I am married and thinking about having a baby. Will smoking harm my baby?

ANSWER—There is increasing concern over the effects of cigarette smoking during pregnancy. Women who smoke during the last two trimesters of pregnancy tend to have babies with lower average birth weight than nonsmoking mothers. Their risk of having stillborn children is higher and their infants have higher neonatal death rates. These effects are greater because carbon monoxide passes freely across the placenta and is absorbed by fetal hemoglobin, thereby decreasing the oxygen-carrying capacity of fetal blood.

Children have a higher incidence of respiratory infections than adults and may be more sensitive to smoke. Several researchers have found a relationship between parental smoking and infant respiratory infections.

QUESTION—What does honey as a substitute for sugar?

ANSWER—Like sugar, honey is largely an "empty calorie," because it supplies very few vitamins or minerals. However, it is absorbed more slowly into the blood stream than white sugar. This may slightly reduce the "sugar rush" followed by depression, that high sugar food produces. The best advice is to eat sugar and honey as little as possible, but choose honey over sugar if you have the choice.

QUESTION—Am I 30 years old and have ever had a Papsmear. What is it and should I get one at my age?

ANSWER—The Pap smear, named after Dr. George Papanicolaou, is a method to detect cervical cancer. Cells are collected from three areas of the cervix and vagina and put on a glass slide. The slide is sent to a lab to determine whether there are different types of cells that may indicate cancer. Cells in Class I or Class II. Class I means the cells are normal. Class II means some of the cells appear different. They are absent or almost absent. Possibly the result of a vaginal or cervical infection. Classes III and IV show possible changes that may indicate cancer and Class V shows a high possibility of cancer.

Pap smears are done by a physician or nurse practitioner during a pelvic examination. Pelvic exams are performed for women who are pregnant, you have noticed changes in vaginal discharges or other women's health problems. A breast exam, a test for diabetes and an examination of the reproductive organs are also done as part of the pelvic examination at the Health Service. The Health Service physician recommend that SIU women students have a Pap smear once a year.
